College should be a time of change, of experimentation, and even of radical redefinition of theater. So why would a college theater group playing to a college crowd choose to perform Once Upon a Mattress? Why choose a stale standard? There's a reason the musical is a favorite of middle schools.

Mattress is based on the Hans Christian Andersen fairytale, "The Princess and the Pea." If this seems like a weak tale on which to base a two-hour-plus musical, it is. And instead of reinventing the show in interesting ways, the Theatre Guild let it remain bland and stagnant.

The plot plays to the mentality of a five-year-old: in a non-descript Renaissance castle, there lives a dominating queen, a mute king, and a foppish prince. After finding all the princesses in the land unsuitable princess-like for her son, the queen nearly gives up. That is, until the boisterous Winnifred arrives, claiming that she is a genuine princess. To test her sensitivity (a must-have for royalty), the queen places a pea under 20 mattresses. If Winnifred can feel the pea as she sleeps, she is thereby worthy of the prince.

The musical, written by Mary Rodgers (daughter of Richard Rodgers, of Rodgers and Hammerstein) and Marshall Barer, is as simple as that. The characters are barely fleshed out beyond the original, skeletal tale. Instead, they're allegorical (sometimes ironically so): Queen Aggravain, a paradigm of the dominating matriarch; Prince Dauntless, a fearful mama's boy; King Sextimus, a sweet but lascivious old man; Winnifred, a charming, candid country girl totally out of place in sophisticated circles of royalty.

The script inhibits the actors quite a bit. But, the actors here didn't do much to change that. Rachel Edelman as Winnifred was perfect in "Shy," her first number. The song sets up the main joke of the whole show: the indelicateness of this particular princess, as she sings about how shy she is at the top of her lungs. (The joke is old immediately, even though the musical tries desperately to keep it funny.) Edelman's acting style in "Shy" – pesticulating and talking loudly – couldn't carry her through the rest of the show.

But at least she had energy, which is more than one can say for the rest of the cast. The ensemble for the most part stood around with mouths gaping, either upstaging or underacting. They could have at least pretended to be enjoying themselves, instead of reminding the audience just what a horrible show they were in.

The ensemble isn't entirely to blame, though. Director Sarah B. Murphy should have done something – anything! – with her cast. The show is supposed to be funny, but the comic timing was completely off, if even there at all.

Furthermore, the staging was messy, the choreography absurd, and the music nonexistent. Indeed, the only accompaniment the cast had was a solo piano. And it's not as if the ensemble couldn't have used some help in the vein of music and the barely-there vocal direction.

There were, though, some redeeming moments. Sarah A. Murphy as Queen Aggravain was splendidly shrewish. She made the caricature of a Queen into a person, complete with some Freudian subtext. Cooper Cerulo as the Minstrel (he serves as the narrator) had a good voice and commanding presence. Director Murphy could have put him to better use.

Last semester, the Guild's production of Sondheim's Into the Woods proved that a reworking of

Turn to MATTRESS, page 6

Kissing is a fresh romance

Jennifer Westfeldt and Heather Juergenstern fall in love in Kissing Jessica Stein.

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

KISSING JESSICA STEIN
Directed by Charles Herman-Wurmfeld
Starring Jennifer Westfeldt and Heather Juergenstern
Playing at Pleasant Street Theatre, Northampton

Modern romantic comedies come in two flavors. There are the pallid, vacuous big-star vehicles that features actresses like Julia Roberts and Ashley Judd smiling and fretting prettily as a way to disguise the fact that they have no character to play. (I am of course talking about sourball duds like America's Sweethearts and Someone Like You.) Then there are the spawn of There's Something About Mary gross-out spectaculars that seem to almost totally forget that, hey, there's a love a story among the raunch, too.

The best of these movies, like American Pie, balance their gross-outs with heart and sweetness; the worst, like the evil Tomcats (in pick for the worst movie of 2001), are so off-puntingly single-minded in their quest to push the envelope that the "love" stories at the centers become nothing more than a sop to the audience. Of course, there is the rare gem that makes you fall in love with it. I'm talking about movies as light and creams as Serendipity, a movie so smart, gorgeous, witty and light-fingered that I was literally swooning as I left the theater. Kissing Jessica Stein, an unorthodox romance now playing at art houses everywhere, isn't in that same class but it belongs to a smarter, sharper and funnier breed of romantic comedy.

The structure of Kissing Jessica Stein is pretty formulaic, as far as romantic comedies go: what makes it different is the fact that both its protagonists are female (cue dunderheaded frat boys screaming "dude, lesbians!") The stars and co-writers, Jennifer Westfeldt and Heather Juergenstern, adapted the movie from their successful off-Broadway play Lipshtick, about two straight women who embark on a lesbian affair.

The title character, Jessica Stein (Westfeldt) is a lovelorn copy editor at a hip New York magazine. Her Jewish mother (the fantastic Tovah Feldshuh, breathing life into a stereotypical character) is constantly trying to set her up, but Jessica's too neurotic to settle for every flawed man. (In a funny montage sequence Jessica goes on a series of bad dates, including one with a guy who says "self-defecating" instead of "self-deprecating.") After giving up all hope, she answers a personal ad from a woman seeking another woman. Why? Because that woman quoted Jessica's favorite author in the text.

That woman is Helen (the sparkling Juergenstern), a tunky art gallery manager who loves men – in fact, she has three boyfriends on hand. But she's never had a woman. So Helen places the ad and gets a call from Jessica (after a hilarious string of rejected calls). When they first meet, awkwardly, Jessica is ready to call everything off. Until Helen uses the word "marinate," in a non-food related sense, which intrigues the word-loving Jessica. The women precede through the stages of courtship: Helen more gung-ho than the tentative Jessica (who brings along how-to guides on their first real date). After getting used to the fact that, yes, both characters are lesbians, one begins to realize that the movie is following the same kinds of story beats that the Hollywood romances do. The witty writing and engaging acting is all that keeps the movie from veering totally into standard issue territory.

As funny and smart as it is, Kissing Jessica Stein is nothing more than a feature length sitcom – "Will & Grace" on the big screen (or should I say "Grace & Grace"?). The supporting characters are a collection of stereotypes: the fey, bantering gay buddies; the overbearing Jewish mother; the pregnant friend who lives vicariously through her friend; the handsome ex-boyfriend (Scott Cohen) who happens to remain in Jessica's orbit and still carries the torch for her. Jessica Stein is perhaps even less interesting. As a character, she is nothing but a bundle of ties approved by Diane Keaton and Lisa Kudrow. it's a tribute to Westfeldt's talent that she can keep Jessica Stein from crashing apart in a pile of dithering neuroses.

Helen is a much more interesting character, played by Juergenstern with sexy vivaciousness – but remember that the movie is called Kissing Jessica Stein. However, both ladies have amazing chemistry together, which does the one thing every good romance should do: it makes you root for the two lovers to get together. Hell, they can even sell you on a scene in which they talk lipstick, a scene so pumped full of symbolism they should have just flashed "metaphor" on screen repeatedly.

Some have said the ending is a cop-out, and I tend to agree, but for different reasons. I think the entire last act is a cop-out, because all the charm and humor of the first half dries up. The final third may be designed to give deeper meaning to the project as a whole, but I preferred it when it was more superficial. It was just smarter and funnier that way.

quiz

continued from page 5

Hey, I know you. You are a pretentious bch. Not only should people call you that, but they should call it to your face. Because, let's face it, you're just doing it for attention. You know in your heart that Clueless was one of the worst Wallace Shawn films ever conceived, and fettas are soooooooo five years ago (remember kids, all the cool people drive 1998 Plymouth Voyagers), but yet you persist on making other's lives a living hell. I bet you picked Mo Vaughn in the first round of your fantasy baseball draft, instead of the obvious choice of Randy Johnson. For shame. For shame.

Holla Pi:— I love my girl, but we listen to different kinds of music, and I think it's driving us apart. I love the smooth soul of Al Green and she's a mad metal head! She says if I don't come to a Cannibal Corpse concert with her then it's over. Must I denounce who I am? – Al 4 Life

Al Green? You like Al Green? Well, that's your first mistake. Fellas if there's one thing I've learned is that you catch more honeys with Barry White than Al Green. Your lady's taste in music sucks too. Eternal Suffering is where it's at this year. You both need to "Go the distance" and find a happy medium to "ease [each others] pain." And if you build it, a relationship that is, he will come, your first born that is.

Nick Pizzolato is a Collegian columnist who is advice inept.

If you have questions for Quiz the Pizz, you can just go to hell. Because we are NEVER letting this baseball kwin' crackhead write another advice column. Send your letters of gratitude, or your questions for Ask Elena to askelena@yahoo.com. Don't worry, she'll be back next week.

mattress

continued from page 5

fairytales could be exciting, entertaining and intelligent. However, Mattress, is an absolutely unmemorable show. It's unsuitable for college theater unless the production has a really fresh, exciting take on it. But the Guild had nothing new, and couldn't even do well with convention.

Katie Beasley, Miss Teen All American 2001, says, "If I could give everyone in the world a kitten and a pedicure, there would be no more war and no more frowny faces."

Write for Arts

Study in Siena, Italy in Spring 2003!

Interested? Questions?

COME TO AN INFORMATION MEETING ON WEDNESDAY, APRIL 17 AT 4PM IN HERTER 301.

North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
www.northamherstmotors.com
549-RENT
OOPS!
POTTERS AUTO & TRUCK RENTALS
• Cars • Mini Vans • Trucks • SUVs • Cargo Vans • 15 Passenger Vans • Low Daily/Weekly Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older • Direct Billing To Insurance Co • MHEC Rates
(On bus routes)

A to the RTZ, yo!

UMass
STILL TIME TO ENTER:
Swim Meet (M/W).....A.S.A.P
Weekend Flag Football (M/C).....A.S.A.P
Weekend Lacrosse (W).....A.S.A.P
GET THOSE FORMS IN BY:
Tennis Doubles (M/W/C).....4/23
Diamond Derby (M/W).....4/23
World Cup Soccer (M/W).....4/23
More info:
215 Boyden, 5-2626
On the Web:
http://www.umass.edu/umrm

Munchie Madness 3-6PM TUESDAY-FRIDAY
BACON'N'CHEESE SKINS 4.45 4.18
FRIED SHRIMP TEMPURA 7.25 3.63
SWEET POTATO FRIES 6.75 3.38
1/2 PRICE!
Judies
CLOSED ON MONDAYS
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

Eliminate
FEARS/ALLERGIES
In one session
Fear of flying, public speaking, exams, needles, elevators, heights allergies and other disturbances can be eliminated in one session
Order a free booklet at 413 374 8217

Massachusetts School of Law
AT ANDOVER
CLASSES START IN AUGUST
• LSAT NOT REQUIRED
• DAY AND EVENING PROGRAMS
• ROLLING ADMISSIONS
• AFFORDABLE TUITION PLANS - 1/2 THE MEDIAN LAW SCHOOL TUITION IN NEW ENGLAND
• OUR PRACTICAL/THEORETICAL PROGRAM PREPARES STUDENTS FOR THE PRACTICE OF LAW AS WELL AS NUMEROUS OTHER PROFESSIONS
THE LEADER OF REFORM IN LEGAL EDUCATION
500 FEDERAL STREET, ANDOVER, MA 01810
Phone: (978) 681-0800
email: pcolby@mslaw.edu
www.mslaw.edu
CONTACT US NOW FOR YOUR COPY OF FEDERAL REPORTS 600+ THINGS YOU CAN DO WITH A LAW DEGREE

BOSTON BARTENDERS SCHOOL of AMERICA
Bartenders Have More Spirit!
www.bostonbartender.com
Why not be a bartender?
• Only professional school in Western MA
• Hands-on training in real bar/club setting
• National certification in alcohol awareness
• Lifetime refresher • ID Card • Resume
• Special UMass student discount
• Conveniently located in West Springfield
Call TODAY! (413) 747-9888

UMass Student Legal Services Office
CALL TODAY
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students
545-1995

STUDENT TRAVEL
It's YOUR trip, take it!
London.....$288
Paris.....$377
Brussels.....$458
Rio de Janeiro..$654
San Jose C.R...$523
BUDGET HOTELS for as little as $18 A NIGHT!!!
Fares are round-trip from Hartford. Restrictions may apply. Tax not included.
STA TRAVEL
800.777.0112
www.statravel.com

Minutewomen batter Rams in sweep

Holtz throws two sparklers in Softball's A-10 dismantling

By Andy Vogt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Newton's First Law states that an object in motion will not lose its momentum unless acted on by an outside force. For the Massachusetts softball team, this universal law has held true.

The Minutewomen steamrolled through yet another opponent this past weekend, as Rhode Island was the latest team to fall prey to them. For the past month, there hasn't been a single force strong enough to deter the Maroon and White's momentum, as it has reeled off 18 straight victories and an astonishing 37 consecutive wins in Atlantic 10 play.

UMass swept the three-game set in Kingston, R.I. against the Rams, as it allowed a mere one run to the home squad the entire weekend. Kaila Holtz and Jen Hadley each picked up a victory on Saturday as they won their respective games 8-0 and 6-1. Holtz, however, bested her shutout with her second career no-hitter on Sunday as the Minutewomen completed the weekend throttling with a 6-0 win.

"I thought we were focused, and I thought we were intent on making things go the way we needed them to go," Head Coach Elaine Sortino said about the series. However, she maintained that despite the extended streak of winning that her team has enjoyed, this stretch has by no means been easy.

"We're not in a situation where we have professional players," she said. "These are kids playing the game, where anything can happen."

The Maroon and White furiously jumped out of the gates in the opener, as it banged out five hits in the first inning to take an early 3-0 lead. With two outs and only one runner on base, the Minutewomen strung together four hits and a walk to plate three runs, as Holtz, Anna Perey, and Aisha Franke all had one RBI in the frame.

UMass tacked on two more runs in the fourth, as senior Teri Rooney smashed a triple to left field, her sixth of the year. Rooney drove in Ashley Bakken on the play, and proceeded to come all the way around to score due to a Ram error. Jamie Cahalan later sent a rocket over the right field fence in the fifth to drive in two, bringing the UMass lead to 7-0. Scooter Wheeler capped off the scoring with an RBI single in the sixth, making the UMass lead eight and enabling the mercy rule. Holtz struck out four batters in her two-hit gem, facing only three Ram hitters over the minimum.

Saturday's nightcap did not feature the offensive explosiveness of its predecessor, but the Minutewomen had enough firepower to put away URI. The Rams jumped out to an early 1-0 lead, but UMass tied it up in the fourth on an RBI single by Brandi Cross, and then took the lead later in the inning due to a URI throwing error. The Maroon and White tacked on two more in the seventh with an RBI double by Emily Robustelli and a sacrifice fly by Rooney. Hadley picked up the win with a sparkling four-hitter, striking out four.

Sortino characterized the game as "nip-and-tuck the whole way," and said that the game was tough due to the plate umpire's different strike zone. However, she said that her senior pitcher "kept her poise," and led the Minutewomen to a quality win.

Still, the story of the weekend was Holtz, as she dazzled the Rams for the second time on Sunday, and improved her record to 14-5 overall and a perfect 7-0 in conference play. Aside from two walks in the first inning and two Minutewoman errors later in the game, no other Ram was allowed to reach base.

"Kaila is a very smart pitcher on the mound," said Sortino, also mentioning that her ability to hit her spots the entire year has been incredible.

The long ball was the name of the game in the finale, as UMass belted two dingers in the game, including two from Wheeler, the reigning A-10 Player of the Year. Wheeler and Cross went back-to-back in the first, and Wheeler knocking another one out in the third. Ashley Bakken smacked a two-run double later in the game to plate the fifth and sixth runs of the game for UMass.

Wheeler might have been the story of the game on Sunday, but the Minutewomen received solid contributions from up and down the lineup to solidify the overall team effort.

"All of our kids have the capability to make something happen for us," Sortino said. "It's really a nice blend."

The Minutewomen return to action on Wednesday as they travel to Chestnut Hill to clash with non-conference rival Boston College. Game time with the Eagles begins at 3 p.m.

U. Minn president announces cuts to reduce $21M athletics deficit

By Elizabeth Putnam
MINNESOTA DAILY (U. MINNESOTA)

(U-WIRE) MINNEAPOLIS – University of Minnesota President Mark Yudof and Vice President and Chief of Staff Tonya Moten Brown unveiled their proposal Thursday to reduce the two athletics departments' $21 million deficit.

The three-phase plan will merge the athletics departments and recommends cutting men's gymnastics and men's and women's golf. The proposal will also add $1.25 million in investments to improve financial management and fund-raising efforts.

"Throughout this process we have tried to be sensitive to the concerns raised by student-athletes, coaches, boosters and friends of the University," Yudof said. "We've worked hard to balance those with our institutional values and priorities, including our stewardship responsibility and our primary academic mission of the University of Minnesota."

The recommended cuts of the three teams came a day after nearly 300 athletes and team supporters rallied in front of Morrill Hall and two days after University athletics coaches stood in solidarity at a press conference in opposition to the rumored cuts.

Moten Brown said several factors – including the revenue each team brings in – were researched in the decision to cut. Considerations included fan attendance, Minnesota scholarship recipients and high school participation in each sport.

"Given our financial challenges, however, we believe the University is simply not in the position to sustain all 23 sports programs and remain competitive in all sports," Moten Brown said.

Before the cuts are finalized, the plan will go to the Advisory Committee on Athletics and then to the Board of Regents for review Friday. Although the regents are not required to approve the plan, Yudof said he hopes it receives their support.

The University is falling in line with a national trend of cutting sports programs to make ends meet, Yudof said.

"We are not immune at the University of Minnesota. I wish we were, but we are not," Yudof said.

Other institutions facing similar situations include the University of Wisconsin, Iowa State University and the University of Massachusetts.

The cuts will have no significant effect on current athletes with scholarships. Yudof said the University will honor the scholarships and will allow the athletes ease in transferring schools.

However, Moten Brown said high school senior athletes wishing to compete in the three sports and who have signed a letter of intent are "stuck" until final decisions about the cuts are made. After signing a letter of intent, an athlete is not allowed to even speak with other institutions.

The athletics departments' merger – ending 29 years of separate departments – will be complete by July 1. The University is one of five NCAA Division I schools with separate departments.

"The lack of coordinated financial planning between the men's and women's departments, the absence of consistent management decisions and strategies and the failure to jointly evaluate and consider the long-term impact of financial decisions have played a significant role in contributing to the financial challenges we are facing today," Moten Brown said in her speech.

UMass BRIEFS:

Crew

The University of Massachusetts women's crew team picked up three victories at the 2002 Knecht Cup, held April 13-14, on the Cooper River Course in Camden, N.J.

The Minutewomen's varsity pairs team recorded a time of 8:13.4 to beat Penn State's 8:34.9 clocking. UMass' varsity quad team turned in a time of 7:31.5 to beat second-place Duquesne (7:38.2), while the freshman/novice 8 team of Carrie Champigny (Danvers, Mass.), Liz Fleftherakis (Barnstable, Mass.), Bryce Philbin (Kenwood, Calif.), Faith Harkins (Marion, Mass.), Carrie Hellstedt (Westford, Mass.), Lesley Day (Needham, Mass.), Naomi Rudov (Framingham, Mass.), Stacey Schaedler (Yantic, Conn.) and Jenn Tomich (Ashley Falls, Mass.) cruised to victory in 7:14.8, ahead of second-place Buffalo's 7:20.6.

In addition, UMass boats finished second in the freshman/novice 4 race to Wisconsin with a time of 8:23.9 to the Badgers' 8:22.4, and was runner-up in the second freshman/novice 8 race to Boston College with a 7:42.5 mark.

The Massachusetts varsity 8 clocked a 7:03.8 to finish third behind Boston College (6:54.3) and Kansas (6:57.8). The UMass boat lineup included coxswain Megan Mastropolo (Old Tappan, N.J.), Lea Jakobsen (Copenhagen, Denmark), Sarah Pollmann (Hamm, Germany), Kate Bonner (Nashua, N.H.), Liz Robb (Falmouth, Mass.), Katie O'Brien (Shrewsbury, Mass.), Colleen Banfield (Billerica, Mass.), Hayley McGrath (Florence, Mass.) and Anna Talucci (West Chester, Pa.).

The UMass varsity 4 boat was fourth in 7:46.4.

The Minutewomen return to action Saturday, April 20, against Northeastern, Columbia, and Navy on the Charles River in Boston, Mass.

Men's Track and Field

The University of Massachusetts men's track and field team finished seventh with 35.50 points at the Brown Seven Team Invite, held Saturday at Brown Stadium. The Minutemen finished third in the 3000M steeplechase, and the triple jump and fourth in the 400M dash, 5000M run and long jump.

Freshman Henry Smith (Ellington, Conn.) finished third in the triple jump with a mark of 45'01.50". That snaps a two-meet winning streak Smith had during which he was named the Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Week with a season-best mark of 45'5", April 1. He followed that jump up with another win, clearing 44'03.3", April 6, at New Haven, Conn.

Senior Mike Pieck (Guilderland, N.Y.) cruised to a third-place finished in the 3000M steeplechase, while freshman Joe McCormick (Wrentham, Mass.) finished fourth in the 400M dash with a time of 49.98 seconds. Senior Ryan Corbett (Highland, N.Y.) finished fourth in the 5000M run with a time of 15:31.64.

The Minutemen return to action this Saturday, April 20, at Storrs, Conn., for a quad-meet with Brown, Connecticut and Princeton.

– Courtesy Media Relations

CINEMARK
CINEMARK AT HAMPSHIRE MALL
367 Russell St. 413-587-4233
Schedule for Friday 4/12 - Thursday 4/18
DIGITAL SURROUND SOUND IN ALL AUDITORIUMS
Purchase Tickets Online @ cinemark.com
CHANGING LANES (R) 12:05 4:05 7:25 10:30
THE SWEETEST THING (R) 12:20 4:10 7:20 10:00
HIGH CRIMES (PG13) 12:25 4:20 7:15 10:05
NATIONAL LAMPOONS VAN WILDER (R) 12:45 4:35 7:50 10:15
BIG TROUBLE (PG13) 4:10 10:15
PANIC ROOM (R) 12:40 4:30 7:40 10:35
MONSTERS BALL (R) 12:30 4:40 7:35 10:25
THE ROOKIE (G) 12:25 4:00 7:10 10:10
DEATH TO SMOOCHY (R) 12:50 4:40 7:45 10:20
CLOCKSTOPPERS (PG) 12:55 4:25 7:05 9:30
BLADE 2 (R) 12:15 4:15 7:00 9:45
ICE AGE (PG) 12:10 2:15 4:25 6:45 9:00
LORD OF THE RINGS (PG13) 12:00 6:30*
Senior Movie - 4/18/02
PANIC ROOM doors open at 11:45am
• NO PASSES NO SUPERSAVERS
Tickets & showtimes available at cinemark.com

Peer Health Education
What would tick you off?
Having unprotected sex and...
❒ A. Contracting an STI.
❒ B. Getting Pregnant.
❒ C. Knowing you could have prevented it.
Get Involved
Make a Difference
Earn 6 credits
Take Com HL 213 , Peer Health Education a 6-credit 2-semester course that proactively addresses public health issues at UMass.
Call the Health Education Department during pre-registration at 577-5181 to make an appointment to discuss enrollment with instructor.

Sports Institute Boston University
Learn from the best!
Journalism • Broadcasting • Marketing
Award winning Faculty & National Contributors
Give us four weeks at Boston University this summer and we'll give you what you need to know about the world of Sports Journalism.
it our website: ://www.bu.edu/com/ts_institute/index.html
For more information contact: Mr. Frank Shorr, Director of The SportsInstitute (781) 598-5833 or via email: fshorr@bu.edu.
BOSTON UNIVERSITY COLLEGE of Communication

Win a $5000 scholarship.
(Because eventually you're going to run out of books to sell back.)
monsterTRAK
Post your resume today on www.monstertrak.com for your chance to win.
Stop by your career center for more information.

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Fraternities * Sororities Clubs * Student Groups
Earn $1,000-$2,000 with the easy Campusfundraiser.com three hour fundraising event. Does not involve credit card applications. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact Campusfundraiser.com at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campus-fundraiser.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. - Now Available, 1&2 bedroom apts. Leases begin June, July, Aug or Sept. 1 year lease. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywine-apts.com stop by or call (413) 549-0600.

3 Bedroom Puffton Apartment. Summer with fall option. Furnished. 549-8020.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

CENTER OF TOWN 1,2,3 bedroom apts., hardwood floors. NOW SHOWING for JUNE and SEPTEMBER NO FEES www.amherstlincolnrealty.com 253-7879

Condos 3 bedrooms, hardwood floors, study area in basement, cable, telephone (Internet access), in all bedrooms and study NOW SHOWING for JUNE and SEPTEMBER NO FEES. www.amherstlincolnrealty.com 253-7879

EMPLOYMENT

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individual, full and part time positions available immediately. Only those able to work the upcoming summer should apply. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413)584-4746.

EMPLOYMENT

Models Wanted. Liquid Curves Entertainment is seeking FEMALE talent for nude and/or erotic modeling. No experience necessary. Make money instantly. Apply online at http://www.liquid-curves.com or call our offices at (413) 539-6782.

Nantucket Island Summer Job opportunity beginning mid June office Assistant with good computer & telephone skills, miscellaneous errand running. Salary & housing 508-228-3942 or send resume to Rafael Osona Auctions P.O. box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02584.

Singapore Summer Internships- Work for established company. Includes flight, prime housing. No language experience required. www.manpowercorp.com/goasia

EMPLOYMENT

Fall 2002 Internships with the Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field –work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience necessary-training provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

TEENAGE BICYCLE TOUR LEADERS NEEDED: Be a Teen Tour Leader this summer. Trips in USA, Canada, Europe, We need a 4-week time commitment, salary plus expenses paid. Student Hostling Program, P.O. Box 419, CONWAY, MA 01341. 800-343-6132 www.bicycletrips.com.

Person to sell tickets payment is half of proceeds, call Michael: 546-3050.

EMPLOYMENT

CAMP WAYNE FOR GIRLS- Northeast Pennsylvania (6/19-8/17/02). Children's sleep-away camp. If you love children and want to have a GREAT summer we are still looking for Directors for Swimming, Golf, Tennis, Cheerleading and Ass't Directors for Sports and Gymnastics. Counselors for: Tennis, Gymnastics, Drama, Basketball, Golf, Soccer, Sailing, Sculpture/Lino Cuts, Silkscreen, Batik, Jewelry, Calligraphy, Guitar, Self-Defense, Video, Piano, Ropes, Mother's Helper, Night Watchperson. On Campus Interviews Arranged. Call 800-279-3019 or go to www.campwaynegirls.com.

Work in Korea. Call the Career Center, 545-2224

EMPLOYMENT

Bub's Bar-B-Q Now hiring enthusiastic & energetic persons for full & part-time. Must be 18 yrs or older. Apply in person between 2&4 pm Tues-Fri. 548-9630.

SUMMER INTERNSHIPS Earn $3000 to 7000++ and gain valuable business experience working for the UMASS Official Campus Telephone Directory. Excellent Advertising, Sales, and Marketing opportunity. GREAT RESUME BOOSTER! Call Paul at AroundCampus, Inc. 1-800-466-2221 ext. 288. www.aroundcampus.com

FOR SALE

Used Sharp Stereo in excellent condition! 3 CD disc changer, double-deck cassette and AM/FM radio, large, detachable speakers too. $80 or best offer! Call Jake at 253-0093 for more information.

ROOM FOR RENT

1 Room for rent. One mile from Campus Center of Amherst. On bus line. Share w/2 males, call 253-9701 for details.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Sublet in Sunderland with possible fall option. $375/mo on bus route. One bedroom available. 665-0377.

1/2 females for summer. Optional September lease take over 549-7344 Kristina.

Looking for 1 or 2 females to share a 3 bedroom uptown apartment this summer call 546-3597.

2 Roommates wanted, 3 bedrooms, 1 bath House on the corner of Hobart Lane. Bus Stop in front of house. Remodeled 2 years ago. Looking to fill 2 bedrooms. Rent $450 a month per room. Call Mike for details, 413-896-6886.

SERVICES

Know your rights! Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

SUMMER SUBLET

Summer Sublet 3-4 rooms great location. Cheap price. Call 549-4038

TO SUBLET

Summer sublet 2 bedroom apartment South Amherst free heat, water, weigh room right on bus route, laundry w/option to lease in fall 253-8960

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

3	CBS / 3
4	NBSN
5	Fox Sport NE
6	PBS / 57
7	HSCN Movie Channel
8	WB / 20
9	HSCN Movie Channel
10	TV Guide Channel
11	FOX / 61
12	ABC / 40
13	NBC / 22
14	International Channel
15	UMATV
16	HSCN InfoChannel
17	ESPN
18	ESPN 2
19	UVC-19
20	ESPN Classic
21	Cable-6 (Govt)
22	CNN
23	CNN HL
24	Weather Channel
25	Learning Channel
26	History Channel
27	A & E
28	Discovery Health
29	Food Network
31	NASA
32	Home & Garden TV
33	Travel Channel
34	Lifetime
35	CNN
36	Tech TV
37	BET
38	UPN-30
39	USA
40	TNN
41	MTV
42	CMT
43	VH-1
44	TNT
45	TBS
46	E! Entertainment
47	Sci-Fi Channel
48	Court TV
49	Nick at Nite
50	Comedy Central
51	Cartoon Network
52	Game Show Network
53	TV Land
54	FOX Family
55	Univision
56	Cablevision
57	Telemundo
58	College TV Network
59	C-SPAN
60	C-SPAN2
61	Bloomberg Televison

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement in UMass

Client:_____ Date:_____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run:_____ Headline:_____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____PAYMENT

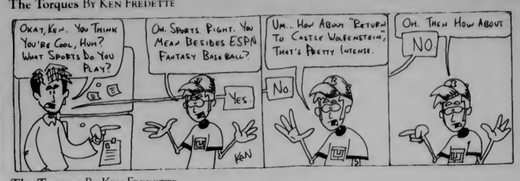
Special Heading ($2.50 extra):_____ Authorized signature:_____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Vending
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment



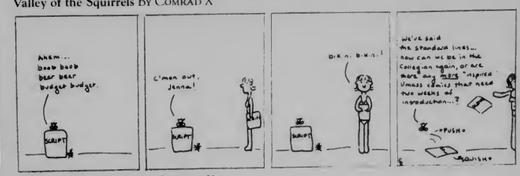
TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — APRIL 16, 2002

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	News hour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "Lost Ring of the Maya"		Shape of Life	"Survival Game"/Climate Animal" (N) (In Stereo)			Connecticut Journal
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Dog Robber"		Guardian	The Funnies"	Judging Amy	Imbrogli"	News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Dog Robber"		Guardian	The Funnies"	Judging Amy	Imbrogli"	News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Dharma-Greg	Spin City	NYPD Blue "Baby Love"		The Court "The Stay" (N)		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	Gilmore Girls (N) (In Stereo)		Smallville "Stray" (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Will & Grace	Watching Ellie	Frasier	Scrubs (N)	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	4	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Gilmore Girls (N) (In Stereo)		Smallville "Stray" (In Stereo)		News	Home Imp.	Blind Date	Blind Date
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Will & Grace	Watching Ellie	Frasier	Scrubs (N)	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	70s Show	Andy Richter	24 "7:00PM - 8:00PM" (N)		News		News	Seinfeld
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Will & Grace	Watching Ellie	Frasier	Scrubs (N)	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	News hour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "Lost Ring of the Maya"		Shape of Life	"Survival Game"/Climate Animal" (N) (In Stereo)			Charlie Rose (N) (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Dharma-Greg	Spin City	NYPD Blue "Baby Love"		The Court "The Stay" (N)		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Frasier	Frasier	Buffy, the Vampire Slayer		Buffy, the Vampire Slayer		News	Ent. Tonight	5th Wheel	Shipmates
WTBS	72	Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Roseanne	NBA Basketball	Detroit Pistons at New Jersey Nets (Live)				Inside NBA	★★ "Hard to Kill" (1990) (PA)
A&E	60	Law & Order "Second Opinion"		The View (In Stereo)		Biography: James Cain-Scene		★★ "Small Voices" (1999, Mystery) Joe Mantegna				Law & Order "Inheritance"
CNN	25	Moneyline		Crossfire (Live)		Live From...	The Point	Larry King Live		News night		Crossfire	Moneyline
COM	35	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Kilborn	★★★ "Rushmore" (1998, Comedy) Jason Schwartzman				Sweet Spot	Battlebots	Daily Show	Sat. Night Live
DISC	32	Deadly Bugs		Queen of the Killers		New Detectives-Forensic		New Detectives-Forensic		FBI Files "A Stranger in Town"		New Detectives-Forensic
ESPN	31	Sportscenter			Chris Webber	Sports and Music Awards		Action Sports and Music Awards (N)				Sportscenter
LIFE	62	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait "Mia Farrow"		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★½ "Wife, Mother, Murderer" (1998, Drama) Judith Light				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	33	Cribs	MTV Special	Direct Effect (In Stereo)		Prime Time Byers (In Stereo)		Real World III	Real World XI	Osbournes (N)		Dismissed	Now What
NICK	29	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb	Told by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers	All in Family	All in Family
SCIFI	59	Star Trek "Cold Saw" (In Stereo)		Star Trek "Assignment: Earth"		Outer Limits "Resurrection"		★★½ "The Hidden" (1987, Science Fiction) Kyle MacLachlan				Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	28	Secret World of Rb		Medical Detect	Medical Detect	Death Defying Stunts		Incredible Medical Mysteries		Incredible Medical Mysteries		Death Defying Stunts
TNT	63	NYPD Blue "Nang a Nang"		Pretender "Stolen" (In Stereo)		Law & Order "DINK" (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Mega" (In Stereo)		Charmed (In Stereo)		Law & Order "DINK" (In Stereo)
USA	23	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "Above and Beyond"		Nash Bridges "Touchdown"		★★ "The Delta Force" (1986, Adventure) Chuck Norris				JAG "Mishap" (In Stereo)
HBO	65	(6:30) ★★½ "Two Bits" (1995)		★★ "Knockout" (2000, Drama) Sophia Adella Hernandez. PG-13				★★ "Kingdom Comer" (2001) LL Cool J. "PG"		Chris Rock (N)		Is Fast Under (In Stereo)
MAX	66	(5:55) "The Tailor of Panama"		Broken Silence (In Stereo)		★★½ "Jagged Edge" (1985, Drama) Glenn Close. (In Stereo) "R"				★★★ "Space Cowboys" (2000, Adventure) Clint Eastwood. "PG-13"		Queer as Folk (ITV) (In Stereo)
SHOW	68	★★½ "Where the Money Is" (2000) Paul Newman. "PG-13"				"Bleacher Bums" (2002, Comedy-Drama) Peter Riegert				Chris Isaak "Wrong Number"

Adam and Eric By Ross Burach

The Torques By Ken Fredette

Ant-Cat By Curtis Killian



The Torques By Ken Fredette

Highbrow By Aaron Eppy

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Ahem... Dear Dear Dear

DAILY COLLEGIAN

SPORTS

COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: ERIC SODERSTROM

After falling for the first time since a season-opening loss to Hofstra, Kevin Leveille and the UMass lacrosse team host Harvard Wednesday.

GERARD J. SCOTT/COLLEGIAN

Winning streak falls flat

Lax offense sputters in loss to Bulldogs

By Matthew F. Sacco
COLLEGIAN STAFF

In the grand scheme of college lacrosse, this game will likely never matter.

Yale	11
UMass	9

Yale's 11-9 win over UMass on Saturday should hold few consequences for the Minutemen's playoff chances. The loss simply compounds the fact that this coming Saturday's game at Georgetown will for the second year in a row, decide whether UMass (8-2, 3-0 LACC) is in or out.

So it's season's end the Yale (5-3) setback should prove trivial, and frankly the Minutemen played as if it meant little. The Yale defense coupled with consistently sloppy play on offense contributed to UMass' second-lowest scoring output of the season. And for only the second time this year (the other in an 8-7 win over Stony Brook) the Maroon and White were surpassed in the shot totals.

Toughness and effort, trademarks of coach Greg Cannella's teams, were present as the Minutemen won the ground balls 39-25. But also evident was frustration as a forced and uncomfortable offense could not get the job done. Only adding to that frustration was goalie Eric Wenzel's 12-save performance.

"He had a big game," said Cannella, whose team next takes the field Wednesday when Harvard visits Garber Field for a 5 p.m. start. "He made some big saves down the stretch for them."

With Wenzel holding down the defense, Yale was free to employ the now infamous slow down offense which severely depleted the Minutemen's time of possession while contributing to ill-advised passes and poor decisions with the ball.

"Yale did a really good job of playing their game," said Cannella following only his second loss all year.

The pace of the contest certainly benefited the Elis as did playing on their own grass field. The Minuteman offense has struggled mightily this year on grass.

Clearly run-and-gun teams such as UMass enjoy playing on turf but the grass should not affect the team's efficiency so drastically.

"We're a turf team," Cannella said. "But we have to get used to playing on grass."

First came the struggle against Stony Brook in the second game of the season, and then there was the 13-12 victory over weaker Penn State – a game in which UMass used a pair of final minute goals to pull out the victory.

The Minutemen have one game left on grass, and it just happens to be against the Hoyas in D.C. for the right to go to the postseason.

UMass will have to play its game and play its game well to take down G-Town in its own backyard – something they certainly didn't do on Saturday against Yale.

While the Bulldogs used adept off-ball movement to feed their top players, including Edward Britt and Mike Scaglione (three goals each), UMass looked uncomfortable while scoring 11 goals without one assist.

Only Chris Fiore and Dan Paccione stood out on the stat sheet with two goals each.

Down 7-5 early in the third quarter Yale went on a 3-0 run to take a three-goal lead and basically seal the game. Ryan Floyd scored his second of the game with 5:04 remaining in the third to give the Elis the lead for good.

Yale started the game with a four-goal run, which made its slow down offense that much more effective.

BC on tap for Beanpot opener

After taking two from Rhody UMass ready

By Jesse Greenspan
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Too often this year, ace pitcher Jesse Santos would win the first of a three-game series, only to watch his teammates fail to capitalize in the next two contests.

And in last weekend's three-game series at Rhode Island, it looked like that would be the case again for the Minutemen.

Santos (5-1, 3.25 ERA) looked sharp again in Saturday's afternoon match-up, pitching his third straight seven-inning complete game. The 5-foot-9 righthander from Chelmsford allowed seven hits and three runs while striking out eight and leading his team to the 4-3 victory.

However, game two started out like it usually does for coach Mike Stone and the rest of his squad, as Scott Ratliff gave up four runs (only one earned) before he could even get out of the first.

From that point on, though, things looked remarkably different, as the Maroon and White staff began to fill in admirably behind Santos.

Eric Chown trotted in from the bullpen with two outs in the first to replace Ratliff, and promptly shut out the Rams for the remainder of the game, picking up his first victory of the year in the process.

"The guys have really been working hard," shortstop Cullan Maumus (5-for-6 on the weekend) said about the UMass staff. "Things were not going right for them, but now their confidence is starting to rise."

Despite Chown's heroics, things remained knotted up at 4-4 until the seventh, when Maroon and White centerfielder Mike Kulak capped off a three-run rally with a two-out homer to make the final 7-4.

On Sunday UMass went for the sweep, but ended up falling 10-1 to the rejuvenated Rams. The game remained close until the eighth, when URI exploded for a seven-run, two-out rally to put the game away.

However, freshman lefty Keith Doherty did pitch admirably for the Minutemen, giving up only one run through the first six innings. Overall, he finished the day after 7.2 innings, giving up eight hits and six runs (five earned).

"We had a big weekend because he had been losing so much," Maumus said. "It was kind of a let-down not to win all three, but it was nice to get two wins. We needed at least two."

In game one, it was a pair of UMass long balls that did the majority of the damage, as Jeff Altieri's fourth inning blast and Chris Morgan's fifth inning shot accounted for three of the four Maroon and White runs.

A few hours later, it was Aaron Senez (two RBIs, two runs scored) and Kulak (3-for-4) going yard for the Minutemen, as Senez's first inning homer and Kulak's ninth-inning long ball helped UMass pick up the victory.

"Right now we are starting to come together," Maumus said, as his team now stands at 12-16 (4-8 Atlantic 10). "We are playing well and getting into our groove a little bit."

Meanwhile, Rhode Island (16-19, 4-8 A-10) fell into a tie for third place in the Eastern Division of the conference with the Minutemen.

This afternoon at Fenway Park in Boston, UMass looks to continue the success it had against the Rams in the first round of the annual Beanpot Classic.

It will not be an easy game for the Maroon and White, as Boston College comes into the contest with a 19-15 (10-4 Big East) record, as it remains in a dogfight for the conference lead.

BC's lineup is especially intimidating, as six regulars have averages above .300. Third baseman Jason Delaney (.388), catcher Jeff Mackor (.345, 6 HR, 22 RBI) and outfielder Neil McCarthy have been especially formidable, and compose the meat of the Eagles' batting order.

They are not alone, however, in providing production, as outfielder Brian Macchi has a team-leading 43 ribbies while teammate Vinny Scavone is tied for the team-lead in home runs with six.

"You're kind of in awe," Maumus said about playing at Fenway. "You see it on TV all the time – it's a historical place. To finally get a chance to play there is a really nice experience."

The first pitch is scheduled for 2:30 p.m., while Harvard will play Northeastern at 11:00 a.m. to start off the day.

Matt Brady's All-Time Team

Greatest player ever adds power to average-filled lineup

This is part three of a 10-part series portraying the 10 members of "Brady's All-Time Team" – a lineup consisting of the best Major League Baseball players ever.

1.	Cobb	LF
2.	Wagner	SS
3.	Ruth	RF
4.	(4/18)	1B
5.	(4/23)	2B
6.	(4/25)	3B
7.	(4/30)	2B
8.	(5/02)	C
9.	(5/07)	P
10.	(5/09)	Man.

Best Of The Rest:
Rightfielders

1. Hank Aaron
2. Stan Musial
3. Roberto Clemente

"Why not? I had a better year than he did." – Babe Ruth, in reference to the fact that his 1930 salary request was larger than the president's.

Credentials (all-time rank): 714 home runs (2); 2215 runs batted in (2); 2062 walks (2); 2174 runs (5); .342 batting average (10); led league in home runs 11 out of 14 years (1918-31); 100-plus RBI 13 out of 15 years (1919-33); 2.28 career ERA; seven World Series titles (three Red Sox, four Yankees)

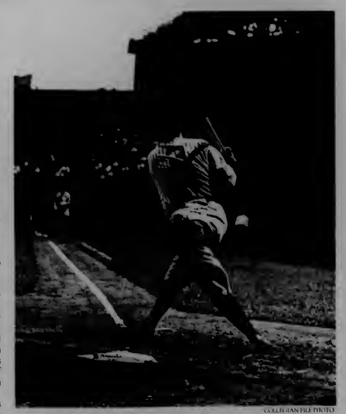
The Argument: There really is no argument here. Ruth is without a doubt the greatest player to ever live. Say for a second that his offensive numbers are not as amazing as they really are. Still, he could have become one of the best southpaws to take the mound, as he would have continued his career on the mound if his offense hadn't been so strong. Not to mention the fact that he was the most drawing presence in American sport outside of Muhammad Ali. Or that he saved baseball in the wake of the 1919 Chicago Black Sox scandal. Now throw in the fact that he was the most feared hitter in the history of the game. And if you weren't aware, when Ruth hit 60 home runs in 1927, the man in second in the majors was teammate Lou Gehrig with 47. Third was Hack Wilson with 30. Yeah, he was THAT good.

That being said, here's a little piece about the rest of the guys here. Hank Aaron was an amazing ballplayer whose consistency is staggering. Though his 733 longballs will likely be broken in our lifetime, he did it through consistency, never hitting more than 47 homers and only leading the majors once. His total numbers are staggering, but the truth is, many were achieved primarily because of longevity. A tough man to leave off the team, but he'll be our second rightly pinch hitter.

Stan Musial is another model of consistency – with the most career home runs out of anyone who never led the majors in deep bombs. Not to mention strong defense, good baserunning, being fifth-place all-time in RBI and a .331 career average.

Roberto Clemente is baseball's tragic hero. Three months after collecting his 3000th hit in the last game of 1972, Clemente was killed on New Year's Eve in a plane crash while trying to bring supplies to earthquake-ravaged Nicaragua. He was one of the game's best defensive outfielders, far and away number one in right field. To get an idea of how good his arm was, take Vladimir Guerrero's and double it...maybe more.

What you didn't know: The polar opposite of the man in front of him in this lineup, Ruth's life was one of the most well-documented in American sports history. A promiscuous, trouble-making, hard-drinker who was said to have eaten in upwards of 15 hot dogs in a single sitting. Ruth was the perfect symbol for the roaring '20s.



But more visible in Ruth was the way that he dealt with his fans. Children from all over the world would flock to Ruth, and he was rarely seen without an entourage when he walked from his room to his car. Yet always, he was more than happy to sign an autograph or have a few words with a child who dreamt of the big leagues.

His love for food was not better exemplified than in April, 1925, when Ruth fainted in Asheville, N.C. after leaving the team's train. After being carted off the train in New York, Ruth's illness was pegged "the bellyache heard round the world," though doctors called it an intestinal abscess.

Ruth's promiscuous behavior was widely known, and until marrying Claire Hodgson in 1929, there was not a woman who could keep him from his ways. One of the most famous stories involves Ruth running stark naked past a group of sportswriters through a train, closely followed by a woman with a knife in her hand.

Pizzazz, charisma, a perfect smile – Ruth was a reporter's dream. And with his numbers, a manager's dream as well...the perfect man for the three hole on this squad.

Matt Brady is a Collegian columnist.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

George Herman "Babe" Ruth watches another ball fly into the seats. His uniform depicts where he hits in the order for Brady's All-Time Team.

MORE ON THE CATHOLIC CHURCH ED/OP PAGE 4.

BASEBALL TRAVEL SPORTS

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THURSDAY ★★★★★ ISSUE ONE HUNDRED AND SEVENTEEN ★★★★★ 4.17.02

Trail sends safety shivers

JAMES SCHAEFER/COLLEGIAN

One of the many call boxes on campus

By Catherine Turner
COLLEGIAN STAFF

This year's budget cuts have resulted in the loss of many parts of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst campus. Faculty positions, the Foreign Language Resource Center and several sports have all been eliminated, causing concern and outrage from students and faculty.

Campus safety has also faced cuts.

The escort service was one more victim of budget cuts, and although the PVTA has extended its service later in the evening, many students are still nervous to travel about campus after dark. In an effort to increase safety on campus, a trio of UMass undergrads have taken on an independent activist project entitled, "Project: Take Back the Trail."

"Take Back the Trail" will be holding a rally and march tonight at 6 p.m., which will include a candle-light walk to the "rape trail," and speakers, including Women's Studies Director Arlene Avakian. It will start from the steps of the Student Union.

Nikki Lawrence, Iya Plavin and Kai Lantz have set their sights on improving the walk between Sylvan and Orchard Hill. The path, which has been notoriously referred to as the "rape trail," is unlit, and although it does have one call box, it is located on the side of the observatory, off the trail itself.

"If it were an emergency, it would be difficult if not impossible to get to," Kai Lantz, a sophomore and one of the organizers, said.

Lantz, Lawrence and Plavin conceived the idea to improve the trail during a discussion in their Women's Studies 201 class last semester. According to Lantz, many people in the class had never heard of the "rape trail" and were shocked to hear of its reputation.

"We were like, 'are you serious?' There's this thing on campus called the Rape Trail and you're okay with it?" Lantz said. It was then that they decided to do something about it.

"A lot of people don't ever realize the power they have. We're just three people. If we can do it, it's not that difficult," Lantz said. "[We hope] that seeing that the Rape Trail is so secluded will make everyone realize it's dangerous."

"Take Back the Trail" hopes to raise money to put more call boxes and possibly lights on the trail. The larger goal, according to Iya Plavin, is "to raise awareness about the urgent need for effective and continuous safety on campus."

The Every Woman's Center, WMUA, the Graduate Employment Organization and the Women's Studies Department are all sponsors of the Project, which also has a benefit concert planned for April 22, which will feature folk singer Dar Williams.

Turn to RAPE TRAIL, page 3

BUDGET CUTS SWEEP FUNDS AWAY

By Jennifer Eastwood
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Morning arrives, and hundreds of college students living on campus prepare for their ritual trek to class. A student walks out of his or her dorm into a freshly vacuumed hallway. He or she proceeds to leave the building and takes notice of the outside trashcan that, as of yesterday, had been tipped on its side, leaving its contents ejected about the ground, is now in its proper position. No garbage is to be found about the site. This student continues on and walks down some recently sculpted concrete stairs, still recalling the days when the stairway was not present. Eventually, he or she strides into a classroom, one in fact refurbished within the past few years. But does this student notice these taken-for-granted transformations?

Perhaps not. Nonetheless, such are the signs imprinted on the University of Massachusetts campus by the maintenance and custodial employees of the Physical Plant. Just what is this Physical Plant, you ask?

"It's a public service," Physical Plant Director Earl Smith explained. "It's not just a job, so you have a feeling beyond just making money and getting through a days work, but we tend to be one of those services people only notice when things don't get done."

With practically 10 million square feet under its responsibility, including the 412 buildings, 113 elevators, 94 parking lots and 16 miles of road around campus, the Physical Plant certainly has its time occupied in providing services such as maintenance and repair, asbestos removal, emergency pest control, utilities upkeep and custodial grounds management.

And this service, like so many other areas on campus, ranging from the Foreign Language Resource Center to faculty positions across various departments, has felt the effects of recent budget constraints.

$2.6 million worth of effects, to be exact.

THE DEEDS ARE DONE

The Physical Plant has dealt with three phases of budget cuts within the past two years, and the repercussions have trickled down to impact the plant's level of service and a total of 40 positions.

Budget reduction at the Physical Plant actually began in March of 2001 due to an internal redistribution of funds on campus prior to the 2001 cuts from the state budget. This reduction amounted to $300,000 and was obtained by lessening contracting service programs, mainly including work on roadways. In addition, the classroom restoration program, which had been spending $600,000 a year revamping rooms on campus, was cut to $350,000 annually.

A few months later in July of 2001, the plant took a $1.4 million cut, this time due to the state's budget. At this point, however, the Physical Plant had prepared, planning for this cut in January of that year. Many of the positions marked for downsizing at this time were eliminated through attrition, meaning that as an employee retired from his or her job, that position remained permanently vacant (at least for now).

The final budget cut hit in mid January of 2002, tallying $885,551. This reduction came as a residual effect from the 2001 state cut. This time, employees with earned security rights were moved about the hierarchy of the plant in aims to keep as much of the staff employed at the

Turn to MAINTENANCE page 2

Smallpox pact signed

The United States and Canada have agreed to collaborate on a smallpox vaccination plan. The vaccine would be used first for service members.

The March 27 agreement is the first step under the June 2000 agreement between the two nations and the United Kingdom to defend each other against biological, chemical and radioactive attacks. The agreement was signed by Col. Stephen V. Reeves, Joint Program Manager for Biological Defense, and Canadian assistant deputy minister for Defence Dr. John Leggat.

The plan will take the existing American vaccine and mass develop it for use in all three countries, as well as stockpiling.

"This agreement is very important to our national security interests and establishes a precedent between our two countries for future collaboration," Reeves said in a released statement.

The agreement, according to the Canadian Defence Ministry, is to "further the goal of greater cooperation in research, development and acquisition of protective materiel against weapons of mass destruction" and to make sure that the allied countries all use the same vaccines. It also aims to reduce the cost of the programs by spreading them out between the three countries.

"Canadian Forces members must be capable of operating in environments where biological agents may be present and this program will enable us to meet the specialized needs for defensive medical countermeasures," Leggat said in a released statement. "Participation in joint programs such as this one additionally enhances interoperability with our allies."

On the Net: The Pentagon: http://www.defenselink.mil; The Canadian Defence Ministry: http://www.dnd.ca

– Ken Campbell

Librarian decries Native American portrayals

By Jake Lilien
COLLEGIAN STAFF

While many people may assume that the role of a librarian is simply to stack and sort books, there are many librarians whose work goes far beyond the checkout counter. Rather than badger library users about late fees or pushing around a creaky cart, Naomi Caldwell, a professor of Library and Information Studies at the University of Rhode Island Graduate School, has devoted much of her academic life to promoting positive images of Native Americans in children's books.

Yesterday, Caldwell spoke in the W.E.B. DuBois Library about the need for such images, and the regularity of inappropriate portrayals of Native Americans. Her lecture was titled, "I' is Not for Indian: The Portrayal of Native Americans in Books for Young People."

Caldwell began the lecture by talking about her own experiences reading books in which Indians were often described as "savages" and "warriors."

"The books I was exposed to as a youngster undercut my self-esteem," Caldwell said. She explained that it was not until she became pregnant with a son that she went back to examining children's books that featured Native Americans.

"When I began to read children's literature again, I remembered why I had stopped," she said. "It was painful."

Much of Caldwell's lecture was devoted to pointing out the images that made her dislike her childhood reading. She said that one common, inappropriate representation of Native American culture is the description of Native American regalia, such as headdresses and moccasins, as Indian "costumes." She added that a particularly egregious example occurs when animal cartoon characters are dressed in these "costumes."

"To say that a rabbit has become an Indian because it's wearing the regalia is extremely disrespectful," she said.

The title of Caldwell's lecture came from a theme, which she regularly finds in children's alphabet books – books in which examples of words that begin with specific letters are used as visual aids.

"I want to talk about [these] books," Caldwell said. "They often mention objects, and then say, 'I is for Indian.' They use examples like, 'A is for apple,' 'F is for frog,' and then, 'I is for Indian.' That sends a message...that Indians are objects."

Caldwell added that the concept of using an illustration of an Indian would not be inappropriate if the other illustrations used in the books were also humans.

"I would love it if they said, 'A is for Afghani,' 'B is for Bosnian,' and so on, and then got to 'I is for

Turn to BOOKS, page 3

maitenance

continued from page 1

University as possible.

Such a program led some employees cut from the grounds and building management divisions, for example, to be moved into a group dealing with alterations. Some of those with the least amount of security rights were indeed let go altogether. However, an added option presented for them was to work for University Housing Services, which is on an independent budget and not affected in the same way as other areas on campus, as maintenance employees.

This process of moving from one division to another is common in business areas such as these, noted plant Director Earl Smith. It leads a person to make two to three jumps on average throughout their entire career. The problem beyond this, Smith noted, is what these cutbacks do to facility operations.

SO WHAT DO BUDGET CUTS DO?

The above facts and figures paint a grim picture, but what do these numbers translate into when looking at real people in their daily activities? Smith reported plenty, ranging from deferred maintenance to lowered spirit.

The custodial department, which went from a base line of 145 employees as of August of 2000 to currently 101 employees, is an area of great concern for Physical Plant executives.

"We reduced the people, but still need to clean the same amount, for our workload is based on the size of the plant, not the number of people [employed at the plant]," Smith noted. "That doesn't change unless you close buildings which is something that other areas of the campus can't afford. That means we have to change our level of cleaning."

His theory translated into reality when according to a recent Custodial Staffing Analysis, UMass staffing levels were recorded below average. This analysis, conducted by Physical Plant employees, was based on statistical standards approved by the Association of Higher Education of Physical Offices.

"We know we can't give the level of service we would prefer," Smith concluded, matter-of-factly.

This sentiment also relates to another area affected by the cutbacks, namely that of building maintenance, which involves making an adjustment of equipment. For indeed, 90 percent of the buildings on campus were built in 1960s and 70s, and are now showing their age.

"When we have less people, we're put in a position which leads to a failure of maintenance equipment. We don't have the people or money to replace it, so heating or air conditioning may be out until we can get around to it, which leads to a deterioration of the environment."

Smith's logic in claiming the deterioration of the environment stated that units that cannot be fixed immediately sometimes cause more destruction as they sit in disrepair overtime.

"We know this problem [budget cuts] is affecting everyone on campus, but it is more expensive to fix these [deferred maintenance projects] up," he added, explaining that everything has a certain life expectancy, and damage worsens as objects are used beyond that time.

Thus, Smith pointed out, cutting back on programs geared towards renovating "leads to a long-term deterioration of the spaces."

For example, the roof of Boyden gymnasium was 34-years-old, way beyond its life expectancy, before it was recently replaced. Because the plant did not restore it at its due time, the roof leaked. This leakage led to water damage of the gym floor, so that once a crew was sent in to make repairs, both the roof and floor had to be replaced.

"It cost two, three, four, times as much [to repair] than if we had done it when it was due, and we had to shut the building down [during construction], so people couldn't do their jobs," Smith noted.

Among all the material evidence, the cuts hit one other area hard, Smith said, and that's the genuine atmosphere of people's attitudes.

"It affects morale, and morale affects how people act, and they get a little depressed," said Smith. "They're not as productive."

However, he did not wish to be misread as saying that he was unhappy with the level of service his now smaller team has put forth. On the contrary, he added, "I'm actually proud of our people" and related a story that touched him:

"I remember one guy [who was told he was being let go] who told his boss he knew it wasn't personal and knew the University was going through hard times," he recalled. "He even said he wanted to come work for the University again when times got better. I thought that was pretty courageous."

JAMES SCHAFFER COLLEGIAN

The remaining custodians are left with more work and less staff to clean up your dorms, classrooms and other facilities.

COULD THINGS GET WORSE?

Ninety eight people were eligible this year for the most recent early retirement program. Without enough money to rehire new people to fill each of the positions left open due to this program, it has the potential to leave the Physical Plant ill staffed more than ever.

"The trouble with the early retirement program is that the moneys are being taken away from campus," said Smith, explaining that plant employees were provided with two dates in which to choose to leave and receive a stipend for their early retirement.

March 15 was the first date, in which nine plant employees out of the eligible 98 left. The next date will be June 15.

"We are still waiting to see," Smith said, adding that 27 custodians and 35 people in the trades and maintenance have signed up this program.

Some employees, although perhaps interested in the early retirement package, opt not to take it based on their economic status, for the package does not always provide enough money to sustain them

Turn to MAITENANCE, page 3

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially and president from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded as 1890's Index. Then it became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Daily Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Sam Wilkinson Editor-in-Chief
Matthew F. Sacco Managing Editor
Amy Garganta Business Manager
Shimauli Dave Production Manager
Jake Lilien Diversity Editor
Mike Kulak Editorial Production Manager
Jason Smith Advertising Manager

Mike Delano Arts & Living Editor
Matthew Despres Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jennifer Eastwood Features Editor
Catherine Turner News Editor
Tibora Girczev-Blum Photography Editor
Eric Soderstrom Sports Editor
Brent Siniawski Finance Manager
Charlie Jacco Distribution Manager

Morgan Taylor Advertising Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Cara Murphy Assistant Finance Manager
Shawn Daugherty Assistant Business Manager
Megan Shannon Assistant Advertising Manager

STUDENT TRAVEL

It's YOUR trip, take it!

London.....$288
Paris.....$377
Brussels.....$458
Rio de Janeiro..$654
San Jose C.R...$523

BUDGET HOTELS for as little as $18 A NIGHT!!!

Fares are round-trip from Hartford. Restrictions may apply. Tax not included.

STA TRAVEL
800.777.0112
www.statravel.com

McMurphy's
featuring...
Live Music
THE GUITAR DUDES
every wednesday
NO COVER
positive ID required

www.dailycollegian.com

Thursday Night is.....
COLLEGE NIGHT
9pm - Midnight
Each Person Receives:
3 hours of Bowling
Shoe Rental
Music & Light Show
COME JOIN THE FUN AT
Northampton Bowl
525 Pleasant St., Northampton, MA
584-4830
www.northamptonbowl.com

Seven O's
Rt. 116, Sunderland / next to Cliffside Apts
+ Every Wednesday Karoake
+ Every Thursday Dee jay
+ Live Music every Friday & Saturday
6 Televisions
4 Pool Tables
Air Hockey
Thursday - Magic Hat #9
All week special - Pitchers $8.00 Pints $2.5
Free Popcorn!
Promo and Prizes
Draft Specials Pitchers $5.00 Pints $1.50
Bud, Bud Light, & Coors Light 22 oz. $1.75
Friday - Gutterboys
Saturday - 4 on The Floor
Come and Party with Us

NONOTUCK COMMUNITY SCHOOL, INC
VA Medical Center • 421 N. Main Street • Leeds, MA 01053 • (413) 586-5996
Creative Learning for Young Children
Teachers Wanted
We are looking for two teachers to join us for an exciting opportunity as we expand our toddler program at our parent cooperative school. The new teaching team will work with our current toddler teachers to design and implement a brand new toddler room. Opening day for the room is late summer/early fall. We hope to hear from graduating seniors in all majors. Creativity, enthusiasm and a love for children are the most important requirements. Start date for teachers is negotiable. We offer excellent benefits, including medical and disability insurance, paid vacations and holidays, and competitive wages. Starting salary dependent on education and OCCS qualifications.
Send resume and cover letter to:
Nonotuck Community School
421 N. Main St., VAMC
Leeds, MA 01053

rape trail

continued from page 1

Lantz explained that the money raised by the concert will go to the installation of call boxes on the trail. The three organizers recognize that it will probably be expensive to put in the boxes, but have yet to receive an estimate of their construction.

In fact, the three have been unable to get any kind of response from the administration.

"We've had a lot of problems talking with the administration. We haven't gotten assurances from anyone," Lantz said. "The University isn't being very cooperative."

Lantz also said that they haven't been able to establish whom to contact about the construction of the boxes.

"They keep sending us somewhere else. We talked to someone who sent us to Housing, but Housing sent us somewhere else," Lantz said

Nevertheless, the three continue to push forward to reach their goal of improving safety on campus. They plan on hosting a rally and a concert every semester to raise money for safety. Lantz pointed out other areas of campus that would benefit the installation of more call boxes or lighting, including areas around the campus pond.

According to GFO Vice President Tom Roberts, the University has no money to pay for security or maintenance of the trail. He said the project is an example of "undergrads and grads taking control of problems they see the University unwilling or unable to resolve."

The Dar Williams concert will take place in the Campus Center Auditorium at 5:30 p.m. Doors open at 5 p.m. Tickets for students are $12, general admission, $20. Williams has agreed to play the concert for free, so all of the proceeds will go directly to the project.

JAMES SCHAFFER COLLEGIAN

The Orchard Hill/Sylvan trail has no lighting, or properly functioning call boxes, making it one of the most dangerous places to be on campus at nighttime.

books

continued from page 1

Indian,'" she said. "But we would have to make sure we portrayed them accurately."

Inaccurate representations of Native Americans were another of Caldwell's complaints. She showed the audience a children's book titled, "The Value of Truth and Trust," which featured comical images of Native Americans in headdresses with broad grins, resembling the often-reviled mascot of the Cleveland Indians.

She also described a popular children's book titled, The Indian in the Cupboard, which was recommended to her by a colleague. The book is the story of a child who finds a miniature Indian and brings him to life. Caldwell said that she personally thought the book to be well-written, and a "real page-turner."

In spite of the quality of the book's writing, however, she added the book to her list of inappropriate representations of Native Americans.

"The author, a Brit, knew nothing about Indian culture," she said. "As soon as the Indian came out of the cupboard, he wanted to build a teepee ... and he spoke in a stereotypical way, saying things like, 'You come-um here, you do-um here, paleface.'"

Caldwell went on to say that many children's books use inappropriate words to describe Native Americans, particularly the word "squaw."

"In my opinion, the word 'squaw' is equivalent to 'spic,' 'nigger,' 'white trash,' 'whore,' or 'pimp,'" she said. "I think that it's very disrespectful."

She explained that while the word "squaw" may have originated from a Native American word, it's use as a slur had altered its meaning.

Caldwell acknowledged that many writers are unsure of which terms are appropriate and which are not.

"If you have a question, ask!" she exclaimed. "There's nothing wrong with asking.

"There is a magic key to everything I have just said," Caldwell added. "That magic key is respect."

maitenance

continued from page 2

and/or their families as much as their steady salary.

"The number will have a big impact on our ability to serve," he stressed. "Since we're not going to be in a position to replace them, it's going to hinder our services."

If one counts only the budget cuts and not possible early retirees, 179 custodians, 142 trades and maintenance employees, 95 grounds employees, 45 people in utilities and 25 the business management group positions remain now at the plant. (Note that not all positions are always filled to the max.) Only time will tell how early retirement will further affect these jobs.

Smith though, sometimes against opinions of others on his staff, reported that when no other options are left but to let people go from their jobs, he does not simply advocate dismissal of those who are students (of which they are currently 10 at the plant) or those working in temporary jobs, regardless of their function, over those in full-time positions.

"We would look at functions," he explained. "It depends on the job."

As head of the plant, Smith has not brought any attention of the budget reductions to the Save UMass campaign, set up earlier this semester in hopes of prohibiting further cutbacks on campus and mainly focused in the academic realm.

"Frankly, we don't participate in these things," Smith said. "We do support what's being done, and it's an appropriate way to lobby." However, he added, he fears that it would be inappropriate for his administration to work with this grassroots campaign.

"I have ways of expressing my concerns, and these are through channels, expressing [my concerns] with letters," said Smith, a University of California graduate, noting his own pride in public higher education.

Smith, however, said he takes the cuts as they come and attempts to steer his division through good times and bad.

"It's just the nature of the business," he said. "You're never going to have everything you want."

More students accepted into U. Arizona freshman class

By Kristina Dunham
ARIZONA DAILY WILDCAT (U ARIZONA)

(U-WIRE) TUCSON, Ariz. – More freshmen were accepted into next year's class than this year's, but officials are projecting that the actual class size will remain about the same.

About 16,000 applicants were accepted this year – 85 percent of the total applicant pool – but Admissions Director Lori Goldman said she expects only about 6,000 will choose to attend University of Arizona. This year's freshman class contained 5,949 students.

Goldman said more new students were accepted this year than last year, but based on the number of housing confirmations and registration commitments, the class size is not likely to increase.

"Our data on housing and commitments has been very reliable in the past, and we have no reason to believe otherwise for this year," Goldman said. "If more students confirm than we are currently projecting, Undergraduate Education will begin the process of working with the colleges to ensure that there are plenty of classes for all new students."

Goldman said fewer out-of-state students may be coming to University of Arizona this year because Americans have become more cautious since Sept. 11.

In past years admissions officials were not strict about enforcing the April 1 application cut-off date. But in order to control the size of next year's class, they adhered to that deadline closely and increased the out-of-state minimum-required GPA from 2.5 to 2.9, officials said.

Historically, a few hundred students have applied after the April 1 deadline, said Randy Richardson, vice president for undergraduate education.

"We do not want to have more students than we can serve," said Lynne Tronsdal, associate dean of the University College. "And in light of the budget cuts, we have to be careful."

Richardson expected the increased out-of-state GPA requirement caused about 200 students who normally would have been accepted to be denied admission. Those out-of-state students are a key revenue source for the university, which this year is making about $80 million from nonresident tuition and $37.2 million from resident tuition.

But Richardson said the need to limit class size outweighed the loss in tuition dollars from those 200 students.

"We've needed to manage our size for a while, but the budget cuts were a real wake-up call to do something now," he said.

The state legislature — which is spending much of its time debating an American Indian gaming initiative — has taken few steps to deal with next year's budget, which leaves officials uncertain about how much money they will have to support the incoming class.

Gov. Jane Dee Hull also has proposed taking away more than $7 million that would have been allocated to deal with enrollment growth.

"We're all working on the unknown," Richardson said. "So serving students will be a little harder."

He especially expressed concern for Tier-One general education courses and foundation classes, including math, English and Spanish.

"These are areas we are trying to work on, and we're especially concentrating on service for the incoming freshmen," he said.

The Writing Center, which works closely with freshmen, is expecting to be able to offer services to everyone who needs them, but only if it isn't hit hard by additional budget cuts, said Ty Bouldin, associate director of the Writing Center.

CAPE COD Potato Chip
KAPLAN 1-800-KAP-TEST kaptest.com
Coca-Cola
GOT REGISTRATION?
ONLY 2 DAYS LEFT...
HEALTHSOUTH®
The new balance Haigis Hoopla
University of Massachusetts Sport Management Program
Inside STUFF
SPALDING
APRIL 27 + 28, 2002
WWW.HAIGISHOOPLA.COM
REGISTRATIONS DUE APRIL 19TH, POSTMARKED BY THE 16TH
NEW BALANCE HAIGIS HOOPLA OFFICE
201 SKINNER HALL
(413) 545-5689
COLLEGIAN
Ultimate
UMASS FOOD SERVICES
mass live.com
new balance
PURE ROCK LAZER 99.7
Burns Y Sons
NANTUCKET NECTARS

Peer Health Education
What would tick you off?
Getting drunk and...
❒ A. Having a friend pee on your floor.
❒ B. Waking up to someone you don't know.
❒ C. Getting the scoop from your friends about what you did last night.
Get Involved
Make a Difference
Earn 6 credits
Take Com HL 213 , Peer Health Education a 6-credit 2-semester course that proactively addresses public health issues at UMass.
Call the Health Education Department during pre-registration at 577-5181 to make an appointment to discuss enrollment with instructor.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM WRITING IS A DOG'S LIFE, BUT THE OTHER DOG WORKS LESS. Faulkner ED/OP EDITOR: MATTHEW DESPRES

Catholic church makes progress

Perhaps the Catholic Church has already experienced the lambasting of a lifetime in the media during the past month. Maybe that removes them as a relevant topic to even continuing to write about, however this is one opinion that does not have a critical slant.

No critical slant? How could that be so? Following the flurry of reports of sexual abuse that was later covered up from all corners of the United States but more specifically from our own capital of Boston how could one say anything positive about the church at this point.

Following the onslaught of allegations the church seemed to spend more of its time defending itself or keeping more or less silent than it did coming up with any way of dealing with the situation. Well that is until now.

In perhaps the first movement towards doing something concrete to prevent the rampant child abuse in the United States, the Vatican has called American cardinals to Rome to discuss ways to restore trust towards the church and to assist the families of those sexually abused.

Although this sounds like an impossible task in the category of what could be referred to, as "too little too late" the attempts by the Pope to establish an open dialogue in regards to sexual abuse can only be a good thing. It seems as though sexuality itself is a topic that the Catholic Church is a little squeamish in speaking about overall so this meeting seems to be a step in the right direction.

While there is little that can be done now about the harmful effects that the consistent abuse had upon the lives of the children that experienced it, there may be something to be said for creating a policy to prevent such abuse from occurring in the future.

If American cardinals can get together at the Vatican and come up with a concrete way to both deal with and to later punish clergy that were involved in the cases of sexual abuse then perhaps they can provide some measure of closure to those that were harmed by these individuals.

Maybe too those meeting at the Vatican can find a way to prevent such crimes from occurring in the future. By encouraging such open dialogue they can make it so that sexual abuse in the church is discussed among priests and an issue that is dealt with.

By refusing to have an open dialogue about the issue of sexuality and sexual abuse within the Catholic Church, the church officials would just be opening themselves up to the same types of problems down the road.

At least by actively addressing the issue there are strides being made towards preventing such behavior in the future.

Information from CNN was used in writing this opinion.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

I don't have the answers. Do you?

SEAN JACQUET

It seems everybody has the solution to the violence in the Middle East. Some back the Israelis. Others support the Palestinians. Whatever the case, everybody has a foolproof plan to bring peace to the Middle East. Except me.

I haven't the foggiest how to get everybody to shake hands and sing, "We Are the World" in the Middle East. I don't have a plan to make Ariel Sharon withdraw from the West Bank. I don't know how to stop suicide bombings. I can't stop Israeli soldiers from gunning down Palestinian children. I don't know what to do, and neither does George Bush.

Virtually everybody can agree the violence needs to end in the Middle East. But for the United States to believe we can end the violence would be pompous and hypocritical.

First of all, who are we to tell other countries to stop the fighting? Our own country is a mess. What makes us think we can fix that problem when we can't take care of our own?

Not only that, what makes us think the Palestinians and Israelis will listen to us? The United States is hardly the proper authority to safeguard against bully tactics or to sympathize with the oppressed. The United States crusading for peace is like Tommy Lee warning against drug use, promiscuous sex and spousal abuse.

Listen: if the violence hasn't ended yet, the United States won't get it done. Think about it. Would you take advice from somebody totally unqualified to give that advice? Why would this listen to the most violent, militaristic bully nation on the globe? If I were Arafat or Sharon, I'd tell Bush to go screw off.

Bush, being the cunning leader he is, would probably apply military force, eradicating violence with, well, more violence. And if the past is any indication (read: Vietnam), violence is always the solution.

Any military reaction by Bush won't be for the pursuit of peace. No, no: George W. Bush is far too intelligent for that. Bush hopes to garner support for his inevitable invasion of Iraq. Whatever side we support (because we never stay the hell out of it) will in turn help Bush conquer Iraq.

Why conquer Iraq, you ask? Well, because they have our oil, Saddam Hussein is crazy (you really can't argue with that), and well, the United States just likes killing people (especially when their skin color is darker than white).

So, are you going to listen to a crazy war hawk that is planning an invasion of one of the neighboring countries, about how to curtail the violence in your homeland?

Sorry, folks. Even if this situation did need an objective third party, the United States isn't the right party for the job. The United States is ultra-violent, hardly objective and superficial in its sympathy toward either the Palestinians or the Israelis.

> "The United States is ultra-violent, hardly objective, and superficial in its sympathy toward either the Palestinians or the Israelis."

So where do I fit in? Well, I'm glad you asked. My only suggestion would be to outlaw religion all together. To me this is the most logical solution. I mean, if there's no religion, the land they're fighting over ceases to be holy, and there won't be anything to fight over, right? Well, religion and logic don't get along well and the more devout people are, the less logic applies, so I'm back to the drawing board. Sorry, but personally, I'm fresh out of ideas.

And another thing, if both the Palestinians and the Israelis are supposed to be the chosen people, why hasn't God granted them the land that's rightfully belongs to them? Instead of fighting, and suicide bombing crowded stores full of children, why not just let God settle it?

As far as who I support in this ongoing war: How about neither? Both sides relinquished their claim to "right" after repeated attacks and counter-attacks. I don't care who started it (I sound like my father). After a certain point, you're both wrong. The Palestinians and Israelis have past that point.

Personally, I'm disgusted with both sides. Each day, it seems I hear a new report about a suicide bombing or soldiers killing civilians in the streets. Neither Yasser Arafat nor Ariel Sharon has shown the slightest willingness to end the violence and hammer out a compromise (remember, God promised ALL of that land, so they can't share).

Listen, this violence will only end when the Palestinians and Israelis agree it has too. The United States won't speed up a peace agreement, especially when we're looking to topple Iraq for our next project.

Until Arafat and Sharon decide enough is enough, the violence will continue. It's up to them to come up with a satisfactory middle ground, because no other nation is in a position to do so. If the two sides really want peace they can do that. If they'd rather continue fighting, which it appears is the case; they'll just keep killing each other.

Only thing is, if people keep dying, there won't be too many left on the winning side to occupy the "Promised Land."

Peace can't be thrust upon two warring nations. Both deserve at least a portion of what they're fighting for. Whether they're willing to give a little to get a little is another story. We all hope the two sides can come to an agreement and make it stick.

They've tried a few things, but they haven't tried hard enough. Maybe I'm over-simplifying, and I know fixing this won't be easy. But, both sides have to work harder if this is truly what THEY want.

And, if after they've exhausted all other options, they still haven't reached an agreement, maybe they can try what I suggested: outlawing all religion.

Sean Jacquet is a UMass student

SUBMIT YOUR COLUMNS AND LETTERS TO COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM

Power to the people:
Venezuela takes its streets back

In a world increasingly ruled by the few over the many, of the many defeats of the people against authority, it is such moments as these took place in Venezuela this past weekend that give pride, hope and inspiration to democrats throughout the world.

For those who may not know, Venezuela (a Latin American nation) underwent an attempted coup d'etat. The situation occurred when the elected government of leftist Hugo Chavez was assailed by a conspiracy junta coup attempt from business interests, corrupt military officers, and media leaders. By claiming that Hugo Chavez had resigned (he had never done so), they attempted to take illegitimate power of Venezuela. Business provided the provisional president which would be friendly to their interests (in the person of Pedro Carmona), corrupt military officers attempted to provide military support (it did not materialize), and media leaders attempted to distort the situation of the nation in the media by maintaining a silence about the constitutionality and legality of the whole procession of events (they failed as well). And ultimately, a besieged president, attacked by powerful unified sectors of the traditional Latin American elites (business, the Church, "old guard" union leaders, and military) was restored to power by the group most ignored by contemporary political pundits, and most hailed by democrats - the masses. It was the people, in raw direct democracy form, that took to the streets, confronted the coup junta cronies at the National Palace and refused to recognize an attempt against their democracy. With perseverance and courage they succeeded against powerful social actors.

Business attempted to provide sector support after the coup attempt, only to see the people destroy their puppet leader. The military once again shamed itself and made giant progressive steps at the same time. Those that aided the coup legitimized that view of Latin American militaries as being authoritarian and undemocratic. Those that stayed on the side of President Chavez demonstrated that there is still hope for militaries in Latin America that know their place...under civilian democratic control. "Old guard" union leaders showed that their loyalty remains to their personal pocketbooks, attempting to orchestrate worker unity against Chavez under the threat of business elites who threatened to harm the interests of the established "old guard" leaders of unions. And the media, that group of people that hold the most important responsibility for the maintenance of a healthy democracy, proved themselves in transparent and unabashed fashion to be nothing more than the free-speech of the wealthy. Pawns of the ruling classes and coconspirators in an attempt against the democratically-elected Hugo Chavez, the legitimate representative of the Venezuelan people. By maintaining a silence about the condition of Chavez, of the illegality and unconstitutionality of Pedro Carmona's coup attempt, of the massive protests and confrontations occurring at the National Palace (at one point stating that the protests were against Chavez, when they were in support of Chavez), they betrayed Venezuela and the world. The United States and its media always interested in destroying any leftist government that expresses aspirations of the majority of the people and not the interests of the elites, initially parroted the accounts made by the Venezuelan media and accused the "change of government" on Chavez's anti-neoliberal capitalist policies. Honest journalists everywhere should make a collective "spit in the face" of Venezuelan news agencies.

They have shamed themselves, the profession of journalism, and the movement for democracy in Latin America by allying themselves with reactionary, undemocratic elites. The hidden hand of the U.S. government must be slapped as well. Their quick recognition of the "legitimacy" of the coup leaders is evidence enough to see that for the United States it wasn't a legitimate democracy that mattered, but who best would play the stooge for their corporate interests. The government's action was reminiscent of the role the United States played against the similarly elected Marxist government of Salvador Allende in Chile. The evidence of U.S involvement is still under investigation, but their irresponsible recognition of the coup leaders is preliminary evidence of U.S. subversion of democracy in Latin America.

With the existence of the Internet and international correspondents, the agenda of the Venezuelan and U.S. media and the transitional Venezuelan and U.S. governments fell apart as quickly as it began. The Venezuelan and U.S. media failed to convince the Venezuelans and the world to accept the undemocratic coup (and I should mention that "communist" Cuba was the most ardent supporter of Chavez, never reneging in its honest reporting when the Venezuelan media betrayed their people). News agencies ranging from BBC in England, Xinhua in China, and others transmitted the truth of the situation and where able to inform the world of the real situation in Venezuela. And a hip-hip-hurra should definitely go to the governments of Peru, Costa Rica, Mexico, Paraguay, Argentina and especially Cuba. They saw through the lies and stayed their course by refusing to recognize the new government.

But the most praise must go to the people of Venezuela. They defended their democracy and gains under the Chavez presidency. While many legitimate criticisms can be launched at the elected president, he was still the president and the Venezuelans recognized this and came to his rescue. In a show of direct democracy, they made their intentions clear. There would be no peace until their president was released from capture and put back in power. Tens of thousands congregated at the National Palace in Caracas, and all throughout Venezuela, people took to the streets. Faced with this unexpected response, the corrupt military officers lost nerve and removed their support from Carmona and his business conspirators. The media, who had anticipated a Venezuelan acquiescence to the new ruler, now finds itself in the sights of an enraged population, aware that they were lied to. One thing is for sure, heads will roll in Venezuela for this attempted treason and collusion with the conspirators, and for once, it's not the people, but the oppressors who are losing. President Chavez is due to be put back in power to lead his people in defending their democracy. Chavez has obviously earned the respect of his people, and more importantly, he has learned respect for them. A closer connection between leader and people cannot exist when the people will be willing to risk their lives for their leader. I hope the best for Venezuela. May it survive this situation and prosper.

And maybe here's the lesson for everyone. Never underestimate the power of the people when they exercise democracy, not through representatives or parliaments or other professional "interpreters." Democracy is lived. It is not to be found on documents, buildings, or in the persons of so-called "leaders." Democracy exists in every person, no matter how poor. Perhaps this undergraduate students at UMass and the RA unionists should heed the lesson of Venezuela in their dealings with the administration. Never stop, never quit, never surrender. You will prevail...as Venezuela did.

Rene L. Gonzalez Berrios is a UMass graduate student.

Letters to the editor:
RAs and Holocaust remembrance

To the editor:

The RAs have a legal right to form a union. They have done so, without appeal by the University. The University's current stance is that they refuse to recognize the ruling by the Massachusetts Labor Commission, a formal legal body, that the RAs have a right to the union, and the subsequent union election. The University's position is that it is above the law.

In response to the editorial by Rob Schulze in the Collegian on April 12, Mr. Schulze is simply missing the larger picture. First and foremost, Schulze's bias is given away by his statement that, "I never liked the idea of the RA union." Ten to one, he will disapprove of the tactics taken to win a contract by the RAs. Further, let's look at this statement of his.

"It would require a complete ignorance of American history to think that an employer hostile to organized labor would just roll over and embrace a new union after one setback...They still had the upper hand in the struggle...UMass could stall all it wanted, but the victory would still eventually go to the RAs."

It would also take complete ignorance of labor history to say that protests and demonstrations have not been vital to the winning of unions and contracts. The RAs are simply pressuring the administration to bargain with them before the summer comes. Additionally, whatever one may think about the demonstration or the unionization of RAs, they still hold the upper hand, both legally and morally. They broke no laws, as Schulze claimed, and acted as any outraged students should: by taking their concerns directly to the administration.

That brings up my next point. The University has spent thousands of dollars fighting the union (it refuses to release the actual figures). In the argument with [Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Javier] Cevallos at the demonstration, Cevallos indicated that the courts could take up to four years to decide the fate of the UMass RAs. That's four years of legal fees, all funded by Massachusetts taxpayers and student tuition to fight a legally sanctioned and fairly won student union. How do students feel about their taxes and tuition going to fighting the RA union when budget cuts have wracked the University? Childcare has come on troubled times, departments are merging to save money, and the potential for a continued spiral downwards, resulting in the loss of great professors and students is very real.

The RAs have a legal right to their union, and the University is currently in violation of the law. They are not appealing; they are stalling. The labor laws the University is currently violating have been fought and won through strikes, demonstrations, as well as legal means. They were bought and paid for in workers blood. As a public institution, the University should be ashamed of itself. The RAs are not making outrageous demands, they simply want the University to recognize their right to collectively bargain, and then to sit down at the table and bargain with them. That the University refuses should be a concern of every student at UMass and every taxpayer in Massachusetts.

How much more of your tax dollars and your tuition money do you want spent fighting the RA union? Is that a worthy cause to sacrifice your academic departments or your academic programs to? Because the Labor Commission has already ruled in favor of the RAs, because there is wide public and media support for the RAs, and because they have legally organized to be represented by the United Auto Workers through Local 2322, the likely result of a court battle will be the in the RA's favor. The University recognizes that, just as Schulze recognizes that. So why does all that money need to go into court battles when it could save childcare, boost academic programs, and help UMass maintain the high educational standards that it advertises?

The University needs to recognize the law and bargain with the RAs.

The community needs to pressure them to do so. In that cause, the RAs are justified in using all the means at their disposal to bring the administration to the table.

John Reinhart

To the editor:

Don't draw a swastika. A swastika is not a political icon used to make a statement. A swastika is a symbol of hate. Since the time of Hitler's regime, the swastika has represented a hatred of American-Americans, Jews, homosexuals, and just about any other minority group that can be seen represented on the UMass campus.

On the eve of Holocaust Memorial Day, I was waiting for the bus to return home when I noticed a swastika drawn in black marker on the side of a news-paper box. The message said: "ISRAEL = (swastika symbol)." This message was undoubtedly meant to incite fear, anger and hatred, because that is what a swastika represents. I understand that the person who inscribed this public message is frustrated by the Palestinian - Israeli conflict, as many UMass students are. I personally wish that I could find a more satisfying way of expressing my frustration at both sides of the issue, and understand that it is difficult to be accurately informed or to know what to make of the information I am presented with. Luckily, we are in a University environment in which we can discuss with our peers, express our feelings and make educated decisions on our opinions and how to express those opinions. Is the Neo-Nazi Association an RSO I missed the opportunity to protest?

I doubt that the misguided person who drew that swastika is a Nazi. This is almost as frightening as the swastika itself, because it means that that the history behind the symbol is being forgotten. We understand certain symbols as representing frightening parts of history that still have the capacity to invoke fear in particular groups of people. If someone wore a white pointed hood covering his or her face to class and burned a cross next to the pond, no one would doubt the message. But if a swastika is being used to represent the actions of Israel – a democratic, Jewish state – then clearly the entire meaning of the Holocaust and the six million people that were executed has been lost.

Lauren Fein
UMass Student

Turn to TALK SHOW, page 8

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 4.17.02 ARTS EDITOR: MIKE DELANO

Is Springer fever over?

Sounding Off with Nick Markantonatos

By Nikolas Markantonatos
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Is the daytime talk show dead?

Both Rosie O'Donnell and Oprah Winfrey have announced their retirement (O'Donnell at the end of this season; Winfrey in 2006) and their competition is plummeting in the Nielsen ratings. Ratings for both the "The Jerry Springer Show" and "Montel" have slid 25 percent since last year, and "The Sally Jesse Raphael Show" (down 20 percent) was recently cancelled.

The drastic dip in popularity may be attributed to tacky and overused formulas. In the mid-to-late 90s talk shows flourished in the ratings due to airings of boot camps for unruly teens as well as makeover, reunion and "Who's Your Daddy?" themed talkfests.

Queen of Talk Winfrey was even surpassed in the ratings when, in 1998, Springer enjoyed phenomenal ratings when his violent and potty-mouthed guests sent fists and chairs flying. But after a few short months the formula already seemed old and tired.

Raphael's show, the longest-running of its genre after nearly two decades on the air, sunk to ninth in the ratings among talk shows this season, after being third only to Winfrey and Springer three-years-ago. The show seemed to suffer from the aforementioned prototype and producers had tried to give the show a makeover of its own in the past year. Building a new set and giving viewers a peek behind the scenes failed to arrest the slide.

Queen of Nice O'Donnell faced slumping ratings after her once riveting antics became predictable. Caroline Rhea is ready to take O'Donnell's throne after she leaves this year.

Over the last few years, few new talk shows have stood the test of time despite high-profile hosts (Ivanla, Queen Latifah, Donny and Marie, Dr. Laura, Roseanne) and plenty of buzz.

Is there hope for this dying genre?

Unoriginal programming isn't the only culprit in the sinking ratings. The genre has been suffering, in part, due to cable and satellite TV which offers more viewing choices than ever before. Even so, thoughtful conversations instead of chair tosses may be preferred over the same old beaten to death subjects. In addition, the post-9/11 world in which we now live doesn't have the same appetite for swinging matches on daytime slots.

So it's not a huge surprise that this fall's slate of talk shows is a lot more upbeat and grown up. Rob Nelson, who founded the Gen X political action group Lead...Or Leave and hosted the Fox News Channel's "Full Nelson," will emphasize social issues and encourage reflective dialogue.

Another chatfest with a similar format will be hosted by crime stopper John Walsh ("America's Most Wanted"). A daytime variety show from Wayne Brady ("Whose Line Is It Anyway," "The Wayne Brady Show") is also in the works.

Comedian Ellen Degeneres has also signed on to host a daytime talk show Degeneres, whose self-titled sitcom "The Ellen Show" is on hiatus in prime time, is developing an hour-long talk-variety program a la "The Rosie O'Donnell Show." The as-yet-untitled program will launch in syndication in the fall of 2003 if her

Ashli Judd and Morgan Freeman in merch media for their latest collaboration, the flick [illegible]

HIGH CRIMES, LOW QUALITY

By Shauna Billings
COLLEGIAN STAFF

HIGH CRIMES
Directed by Carl Franklin
Starring Ashley Judd and Morgan Freeman
Playing at CineMark 12 in Hadley

Watching High Crimes made me ponder two things. First, that maybe you really can't trust anyone, including the person you're in love with. And second, that I really should stop worrying about finding a job after graduation, because if Hollywood is buying poor written material like the High Crimes script, I'm golden.

Editor's note: At this point in the review, overtired assistant arts editor/style file magid Shauna Billings folded her arms, pouted and stomped the ground and loudly proclaimed that she was SO not finishing this stupid review.

By Michael Delano
COLLEGIAN SCAB REVIEWER

HIGH CRIMES
Directed by Carl Franklin
Starring Ashley Judd and Morgan Freeman
Still Playing at CineMark 12 in Hadley

Watching High Crimes made me ponder two things. First, why didn't the producers get more mileage out of the obvious weed reference in the title? These are high crimes, baby. Where are Cheech and Chong? Second, when did America's fascination with half-assed crime dramas reach such a level of demand that crap like this can shove its way into the top box office slots?

The film reeks of that TV crime drama feel, with an extra half-hour and some fancier cinematography tacked on to justify

Turn to CRIMES, page 8

Jamaican Me Crazy, Kosheen significant others

BAHA MEN
Move It Like This
S-Curve Records

Who let the Baha Men out? They may be a one hit wonder, but the Baha Men have been around for 20 years. After the excruciating wait, the three Jamaican pop kings that brought the world "Who Let The Dogs Out," are back with their latest offering Move It Like This.

It's obvious listening to Move It Like This that the group was infected with the pop music bug, as several of the tracks seem to be trying way too hard to be the next dance floor, baseball game, or 12-year-old's birthday party anthem as "Who Let The Dogs Out?" was. The title track "Move It Like This" is the most obvious attempt, and likely won't be as successful. The track asks the pressing question "Can you move it like this?" with the response being "I can shake it like that!"

Listening to the album is a truly weird experience, sort of like reggae meets Aaron Carter. All of the instruments appear to be computer generated. (Who needs real instruments anyway?) Similar to eating a Wendy's Classic Triple, listening to this album is strangely enjoyable - but when you finish you feel sick and wonder what you have done to yourself.

Any sort of guilty pleasure the album offers is shattered by ridiculous songs like "Coconut" which offers up the old-school chorus, "Put the lime in the coconut and drink it all up," then repeat five times. If you listen closely you'll even here a sample of the classic junior high dance anthem "C'mon Ride It (The Train)" on the aforementioned track. Shrek fans might recognize "Best Years Of Our Life," which was a song from off the movie's soundtrack. The rest of the world might recognize absolutely nothing. (Kurt Polesky)

KOSHEEN
Resist
Kinetic

Techno music never really grabbed my attention very much. I always thought that techno and its various sub-forms (house, trance) were rather cold and sterile: it was nothing but jabbing, knife-edged electronic beats without a soul. I never doubted the skill and precision that it took to craft those raging crackles, but the bloodless robotic feel only made a perfect match with those trash-sport action movies that existed to showcase nothing but high-wire feats of destruction (i.e. Swordfish and Mortal Kombat Annihilation.) That is until I heard Resist the debut album from England-based trio

Turn to SIGNIFICANT OTHERS, page 8

The Baha Men - They've got maracas. They've got zany pants. And they're shakin' it straight into your heart.

Inventive dancing

By Melissa Ladd
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The University of Massachusetts' Emerging Choreographer's Series (ECS) concert was held at Hampshire College April 11, 12 and 13 last week. There were some wonderful works of choreography, strong and well cultivated, and others were decent yet lacked something to make them memorable. Of those that were memorable, the students gave a mixture of fun and deep thought provoking material.

Amanda Chapin's "Requiem of a Sperm" was a bold example of one such brilliant piece. Set to music by Herbie Hancock and text spoken by Chapin, the stage was alive! A "school" of eight dancers took to the stage portraying sperm in what Chapin called the "sperm race." Their mission was to get the egg...and they swam, wearing goggles and big huge smiles. It was funny and innovative and very tasteful for such strange subject matter. Who could expect less from a choreographer who has had her creations performed and praised in the harsh art world of New York City? Once the sperm race was over and one happy sperm (danced by Daniel Perez) had succeeded, he danced a beautiful duet with the lovely Julie Weismatel. The movements were precise and their synchronicity was perfect. It was a calmer mood than the exciting and silly sperm race. The duet was soft and slow with calculated movements to mellow music and the sound of a heartbeat.

Another fabulous piece of entertainment was Jennifer A. Rockwell's, "Classes-Mot Que le T'Attrape." The very appropriate title translates into a challenge for a game of chase. Danced by Rockwell and her extremely long legs, Daniel Perez, Ross Swanwick and Justin Ternullo, it was a contest for the spotlight. The pace was fast, and it even included minimal stage combat, (Rockwell portraying an attention-greedy ballerina was quick to punish the men if they dared to steal her glory by stomping on their feet). The one who stole the show though was Justin Ternullo, when he, mirroring the ballerina, came out in a matching tutu. He was wonderful, somewhat resembling the character Billy Elliot in the recent movie of the same name. The audience laughed throughout the entire dance. It was exactly what one wants at the theater; it was fun, allowed the audience laughter, put the audience at ease, and it was more than just your average comedy sketch, it was pure entertainment.

"Contact" was the deep creation of the show. It was a piece about AIDS that was choreographed by Jamie Citron and Romina Rodriguez-Crosta, both from Hampshire College. This piece was added to the show a few weeks ago because the program was feeling light on the number of pieces that were to be performed. Jen Rozenblat and Jamie Citron performed to "Neon" by John Myer. The choreography was refreshing, and deviated from the typical modern/jazz motions that saturate new material these days.

The dance started out with a rhythm of feet stomping and hand slapping, and then Citron took a red scarf that he had been wearing and tied it around Rozenblat's neck. The dancers also used two chairs that were symbolic of the disease that the male character had passed to the unknowing female character. The mood was sad, yet spoke to the viewer as a sort of warning: you are not as invincible as you might think you are. The most beautiful part of the piece was the striking end pose. Rozenblat was sitting in the chair that was down stage and Citron did a backwards roll landing with his legs on either side of her hips, and then his head lifted as the stage darkened and light was focused only on the two dancers. It was a beautiful, breath-catching moment of body suspension and the effect melded the piece together.

"This, That and The Others," was a well-put together dance. Amanda Byars was the choreographer, and she utilized a strong modern influence on her four dancers. The piece contained great suspensions, strength and lifts that were pleasant. The style was familiar yet stimulating.

Kate Sulikowski presented a cultural dance in her vigorous "Unbound African Grounds." Sulikowski has a good grasp on the traditional African style. And although unfortunately Sulikowski did not make an appearance in her piece, she taught her nine dancers very well. The music, by Universal Healing, was "There's a Reason For Today," and the energy on stage was

CLIFF SIDE APARTMENTS

Office Hours
M - F 8:30 - 5:30
Sat. 10:00 - 2:00

- 1, 2 & 3 Bedroom Garden Style Units (Also Townhouse Style for 2 Bedroom)
- All Utilities Included
- Convenient To Amherst, UMass & Interstate 91
- Scenic Hiking Trails on 28 Wooded Acres
- Olympic Size Pool
- Tennis, Volleyball and Basketball
- Free Public Transportation
- 24 Hours Maintenance

(413) 665-3958 248 Amherst Road, Rte 116, Sunderland MA

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
Apartment Guide
2002

Great Northampton Living!

- Recently remodeled 1, 2, 3 and 4 bedroom townhouses with individual entrances
- Rear yard or patio areas
- New kitchens with frost-free refrigerators, gas ranges and dishwashers
- Ceramic tile and wall to wall carpeting
- Custom vertical window blinds throughout
- Washer/Dryer hookups and on-site laundry facilities
- Professional on-site management
- Convenient to historic downtown Northampton and all major routes
- On bus route
- One year leases start at $700

Hampton Gardens
586-1405
For appointment call 10am - 6pm, Tuesday - Saturday hampgns@aol.com

THE BOULDERS
apartment complex

Large 2 Bedroom Apartments
State of the Art Exercise Facility
Stairmaster • Lifecycle • Nautilus

- Free Heat & Hot Water
- Professional Maintenance Staff on Site
- On Site Laundry Facility
- 5 College bus stop on property

256-8534

Office Hours:
Monday - Friday 8:30 - 5:30
Saturday 10:00 - 5:00
Sunday 12:00 - 5:00

156A Brittany Manor Drive, Amherst, MA

Get them while they last!

Monday - Friday
9am - 5pm
Saturday 10am - 3pm

BRANDYWINE AT AMHERST

- Spacious 1 & 2 Bedroom
- Close to UMass
- On-site Laundry Facilities
- Swimming Pool
- Beautiful Grounds
- Central Air Conditioning
- On the Bus Line
- Heat, hot water, Gas inc
- Private Balconies
- Sorry, No Pets

Brandywine Apartments
549-0600
www.brandywine-apts.com
16G Bradywine Dr., Amherst, MA 01002

SUGARLOAF ESTATE
28 River Road, Sunderland
665-3856
sugarloaf_estates@aspensquare.com

- *Deluxe 2 bedroom apartment homes
- *FREE heat & hot water
- *Washers/dryers in selected styles
- *High speed internet access available
- *Plenty of free, on-sight parking
- *Pool, volleyball, basketball, picnic areas
- *On sight storage facilities
- *Minutes from UMass-On Free Busline

Move-in Specials Going on Now!

Aspen Chase & Alpine Commons
APARTMENT HOMES
133 Belchertown Road, Rt. 9, Amherst
256-0741
alpine_commons@aspensquare.com

Aspen Chase
- *Featuring 1 & 2 bedroom apartment homes
- *Spacious floorplans
- *Wall to Wall Carpeting
- *Redesigned kitchens & bathrooms
- *Air Conditioning

Alpine Commons
- *Spacious 4 bedroom apartment homes
- *Two full baths
- *New fully applianced kitchens
- *Wall to Wall Carpeting
- *All utilities included: heat, hot water, electric, & central AC
- *All extras included: High Speed Internet Access, basic phone, & cable

One easy payment per month!

Now Leasing for Summer & Fall

Present this coupon at Sugarloaf, Aspen Chase, or Alpine Commons by June 1st for a chance to win a Dell computer or DVD player.

Premier off campus apartment living!

Mill Valley ESTATES

Now...The lifestyle you've been waiting for...
Luxury two and three bedroom apartment in Amherst

Amentities Include:
- •Central Location
- •Mountain Views
- •Private Entries! Select Apartments
- •On PVTA Bus Route
- •On Site day care center
- •Play areas
- •Victory Gardens
- •Tennis & Basketball Courts
- •Laundry Room

We Offer:
- •Heat & Hot Water Included in your rent
- •Wall to Wall Carpet
- •Washer/Dryer Hookups
- •Air Conditioning
- •Fully Applianced Kitchens, dishwashers, disposals
- •Intercom (Entry) System
- •Professional On Site Management
- •24 Hour Maintenance

420 Riverglade Drive, Amherst
Just off Rt. 9, Take West St. (Rt. 116s) to East Hadley Rd.
Take First Left onto Riverglade Drive.

NEW PUFFTON VILLAGE
Serving All of Your Rental Needs

1040 N. Pleasant St. #410
(413)549-0145

Drive It!
Walk It!
Bike It!
Bus It!

UMass Amherst

"Only Minutes From Campus"

VNV en-trances

By Kevin Monahan
COLLEGIAN STAFF

VNV NATION
Futureperfect
Metropolis

When I first picked up Praise the Fallen back in 1998, I probably was the last person to expect VNV Nation to be one of the most hyped bands of the electronic dance genre. Now, with a lot of this speed music starting to suck, VNV Nation appears to be the lone beacon of light appearing through a thick cloud of mediocrity. This Irish-bred, London-formed, German-based duo seems to be just what I BM needed, and they deliver it at precisely the correct time. With their latest release, Futureperfect, Ronan Harris and Mark Jackson (who, by the way will be coming to Boston today) one up their previous releases and act as the yardstick of how this type of music should progress.

Like label-mates Apoptygma Berzerk, VNV Nation want to eventually reach a wider audience, the difference here is that VNV clings to a semi-related musical concept rather than making their sound more mainstream, as Apop has on their last album. Apop may have had a better grasp of writing a catchy pop song, but exploiting that ended up transforming their music from IBM to bubble. VNV Nation manages to avoid that by expanding their already strong synth-pop roots into trance and break beats. When the pretentious forward is over, the album picks up a lot of momentum almost instantaneously. "Epicentre" spills off excellent beats, pop hooks and Harris' signature dark, moody lyrics. "Electromart" gives the album's first burst of heavy techno.

But if you're getting a bit tired of the repetitive "thump-thump-thump" beats, then Futureperfect is more than willing to give you a break. The swirling orchestral arrangements of "Leibestod" and somber, introspective "Holding On" give the album a chance to stop and catch its breath. "Carbon" is also a noteworthy track, focusing on mankind's moral dilemma in regard to nature. Harris' lyrics are easily one of VNV Nation's strongest elements, and he uses them here to a very powerful effect.

Just in time, Futureperfect increases the energy again. "Genesis," the album's first single, seems like a jolt of adrenaline following the previous songs. The album lapses into heavy electronica again with "Structure," and "Fearless." "Beloved," has the pop elements that could make it a dance floor favorite, much like "Epicentre," and "Genesis." "Airships" gives the album a fitting conclusion, combining hope and despair as the perfect future is contemplated.

Futureperfect's success as an album lies in the fact that there is a concept here that remains consistent throughout. I wasn't expecting all that much of it, despite all the hype. But, there is not a bad song on the album (sure, there's a couple that aren't very good, but none that are bad). Harris' voice seems a bit more smoothed over here than in previous releases, which contributes to Futureperfect's increased accessibility. VNV Nation has produced an album that, while maybe not perfect, definitely is looking toward the future.

VNV Nation will be performing with Haujobb and Gsar tonight at ManRay in Cambridge. Doors open at 8 p.m. Tickets are available by calling the venue at (617) 864-0400.

Bjork says: all is full of love

Mavi Jeans
at Zanna

ZANNA
Northampton Williamstown
www.zanna.com

dance

continued from page 5

wonderful. The style native to Africa was fast, with high jumps and extensive use of the arms. The big smiling faces of the dancers was great to see and the brightest smile was definitely worn by Jaclyn Capozzi.

The UGS was a great show, with some real entertainment. What is emerging at the UMass dance department (and Hampshire College) is worth investing time and effort (and money) to see these artists grow and continue to expand their creative talents. More UMass talent can be seen soon at the Alive With Dance concert at Bowker Auditorium the last weekend of April.

talk show

continued from page 5

struggling sitcom is not renewed.

Rhea, a "Sabrina the Teenage Witch" star, may face an uphill climb. In fact, Rhea's first bid at a daytime talk show fizzled in the pilot stage last year. Even though Rhea, who lacks the charm of O'Donnell, is inheriting an established show, the same doesn't hold true for Rosie's timeslots. Although schedules aren't set yet, in some locations she will probably be running in a late night slot instead of Rosie's late morning period. Moreover, Rhea must deal with huge expectations, which her predecessor never faced: "The Rosie O'Donnell Show" replaced Carnie Wilson's flop talker in 1996, so expectations were very low.

The leader of this pack is psychologist Dr. Phil McGraw, who has the biggest chance of giving this dying genre a shot in the arm. Best known for dispensing advice on love on "Oprah" every Tuesday (spiking the ratings roughly 20 percent), McGraw is ready to make his tough-talk a five day a week deal. But will two hooks on the top of the New York Times bestseller list and Oprah's stamp of approval guarantee success when McGraw stands on his own? If none of the eight talk shows premiering succeed, daytime talk may go blank.

Crimes

continued from page 5

High Crimes is bad.

charging eight bucks for a ticket. Thing is, this isn't even one of the better episodes of "Law & Order" or "Homicide" that tackle criminal life in a compelling way.

For starters, ordinary street crime just won't do for the big screen anymore, so High Crimes jumps straight into a military trial for its drama. Unfortunately, the courtroom scenes are painfully trite and void of any intrigue. No fiery interrogations, no principled declarations, basically just that I didn't kill those guys, you did. If you're like me, you'll spend entire courtroom scenes waiting for Sam Waterston to head butt through the wall and show these losers how it's done.

Outside the courtroom, things aren't much more exciting. Sparse flashbacks to the actual crime the film revolves around are reminiscent of "Rescue 911" dramatizations, and Ashley Judd's interactions with her accused husband are cold and forced, like most of the performances. Morgan Freeman is on complete and complacent autopilot as a lazy attorney who, wouldn't you know it, is a whiz when he puts his mind to it.

High Crimes is underdeveloped and underwhelming. The film rests on a thin and embarrassingly bland murder mystery, and no aspect of the production, from the acting to the style to the writing, makes any attempt to better the material.

CINEMARK
The Best Seat in Town
CINEMARK AT HAMPSHIRE MALL
367 Russell St 413-587-4233
Schedule for Friday 4/12 - Thursday 4/18
DIGITAL SURROUND SOUND IN ALL AUDITORIUMS
Purchase Tickets Online @ cinemark.com

CHANGING LANES (R) 12:05 4:45 7:35 10:30*
THE SWEETEST THING (R) 12:20 2:40 5:10 7:20 9:40*
HIGH CRIMES (PG13) 12:05 4:20 7:15 10:05*
NATIONAL LAMPOONS VANWILDER (R) 12:45 4:35 7:50 10:15*
BIG TROUBLE (PG13) 4:50 10:00*
PANIC ROOM (R) 12:40 4:30 7:40 10:35
MONSTERS BALL (R) 12:30 4:40 7:35 10:25
THE ROOKIE (G) 12:25 4:00 7:10 10:10
DEATH TO SMOOCHY (R) 12:50 4:45 7:45 10:20
CLOCKSTOPPERS (PG) 12:55 4:25 7:05 9:30
BLADE 2 (R) 12:15 4:15 7:00 9:45
ICE AGE (PG) 12:10 2:15 4:25 6:45 9:00
LORD OF THE RINGS (PG13) 12:00 6:30*
Senior Movies 4:30
PANIC ROOM doors open at 11:45am
• NO PASSES-NO SUPERSAVERS
Tickets & showtimes available at Cinemark.com

cds

continued from page 5

COURTESY LARUTTA MOTT

Kasey Chambers

Kosheen, who work in the field of techno known as drum 'n' bass.

Kosheen is one of those dance club groups that employ a vocalist, and Sian Evans's sexy, rich, powerful voice is one of the album's greatest assets. It usually doesn't help to employ a vocalist, as the vocals almost always get overwhelmed by the electronics. The DJs are far too enamored of their technology to let a voice get in the way; they layer on the buzzing overkill until the voice gets reduced to a whisper behind a wall of noise. But Evans sings with far too much voluptuous force to let that happen to her. She keeps tabs with band mates Darren Beale and Mark Morrison, and adds the kind of warmth that stringing together beats would lack.

The throbbing "Hide U" is already an international hit that should cross over into the American mainstream if the heavens align correctly. Evans' soulful vocals are twirled in with the stabbing electro-groove into the kind of creamy dance song that is a pure and sweet delight. Kosheen follow up with the strikingly beautiful "Catch" —which may be an even better song than "Hide U" – and the sultry "Cover." Some of the songs do sputter out, especially "Pride" and "Cruelty," two lethargic stabs at trip-hop. But most of the songs (other highlights include "Hungry," "Resist," and "Empty Skies") are so achingly wonderful that the flaws just seem to vanish.

Resist is alternately eerie, dramatic, lush, beautiful, stunning, heads and dizzying. Kosheen should and could usher in a new movement of dance-techno. (Johnny Donaldson)

KASEY CHAMBERS
Barricades & Brickwalls
Warner Brothers

Australian singer-songwriter Kasey Chambers makes her U.S. debut with Barricades & Brickwalls, a country folk/rock album that already serves as a great soundtrack for a rainy day. Chambers' voice is straight from the soul, and it does things to you. If her voice doesn't impress you, her lyrics will. The sweet "On A Bad Day" and "Nullarbor Song" (named after the area of Australia where she grew up) are soft and perfect. "If I'm not here in the morning/I'll cry a river of tears/I'll learn to live in a new town/But my heart is staying here" the song says, and you can almost just see the endless plain and the peace and quiet.

Chambers isn't what you'd really throw on the stereo if you want something upbeat and happy. Barricades & Brickwalls is best enjoyed with a double scotch and a broken heart. This isn't your average radio country. Kasey Chambers is more like Hank Williams, Emmylou Harris and Gram Parsons (who she covers with "Still Feeling Blue").

What she performs could be classified as roots country. She's dead-on stylistically and irreverent at the same time. "A Little Bit Lonesome" is Hank Williams with a Johnny Cash twist.

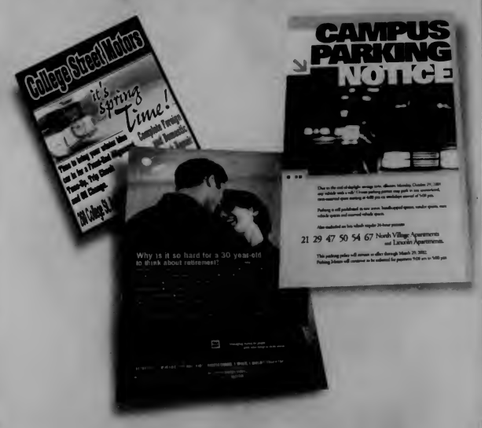
Listening to that track, with the lines "When I got home I got a honkytonk song/I played it till my eyes went red/I grabbed a glass and said "kiss my ass"/I'm gonna drink you out of my head" you have to wonder where that Aussie girl gets that twang. It matches father/accompanist Bill Chambers' steel guitar perfectly. The single "Not Pretty Enough" is moving and poignant, but so are "A Million Tears" and "Falling Into You."

There aren't any dead spots on the album, which goes from acoustic folk to electric country rock and back to roots country. Overall, it's a great album for anyone who loves sad songs. (Ken Campbell)

Pregnant? Confused?

Making the best choice for your baby—and yourself

When you're pregnant, there are many decisions that need to be made. It can be a very confusing time. In order for you to make the best decision for you and your baby, it is important to learn about all the choices that are available.



Brightside for Families and Children's Adoption Resource Center can help. A resource for pregnant women for more than 100 years, we'll answer your questions and help you understand your options. You'll have the information, counseling and time you need to make your own decision.

We've helped thousands of women through difficult times and decisions. Call us if we can help you.

Brightside FOR FAMILIES & CHILDREN
Adoption Resource Center
2112 Riverdale Street, West Springfield, MA 01089 • 413-827-4258

Brightside for Families and Children is a member of the Sisters of Providence Health System and Catholic Health East, sponsored by the Sisters of Providence

GRAPHICS
the Collegian is hiring for next semester

come talk to Shimauli, Mike or Morgan
or call 545-1864
105 Campus Center Basement

Women's lax takes a pair from Philly rivals LaSalle and St. Joe's

By Justin Pearson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Balance.

All season long Massachusetts women's lacrosse Head Coach Phil Barnes has talked about this word. On a team without any true superstars, the Minutewomen have had to get by this season with a balanced attack.

That approach worked again this weekend as UMass swept a weekend series from a pair of Philadelphia-based Atlantic 10 foes. The Minutewomen waltzed past

UMass	10
LaSalle	7
UMass	11
St. Joe's	3

St. Joseph's 11-3 on Friday before knocking off LaSalle 10-7 two days later.

"We have a lot of good individual talent on this team, so when we all play together everybody gets in position to score," junior Jada Emery said. "If one person has a bad game it doesn't screw up the entire system. We have a really well-rounded team."

Each of the Minutewomen's top seven scorers tallied at least one goal over the weekend as UMass (8-4, 5-1 A-10) clinched a spot in next month's A-10 Tournament for the fourth consecutive season. But Emery, the UMass co-captain, believes that the Minutewomen are not satisfied with simply qualifying for the postseason.

"Just being in the tournament isn't enough for us," she said. "We know we can compete with all of these teams and that we can win. Just going to A-10's is a stepping-stone for our program. We haven't qualified for the NCAA's since the 80's so we want to win the tournament and get there."

In order to secure that postseason berth the Maroon and White had to make sure that it made it a perfect 4-for-4 against LaSalle. In the four years of A-10 lacrosse, the Explorers have never beaten the Minutewomen and despite a seven-point outing by Jami Wilus (four goals and three assists), they were unable to do so on Sunday, falling 10-7 at the hands of UMass.

Juniors Lydia Robinson and Lori Kain each notched a hat trick while Emery and Hope Zelinger each added a pair of goals and an assist in the win.

After trailing 5-2 at the half the Explorers came out strong after the break to tie the game at 5-5 inside the first seven minutes of the second half. But Robinson put the Minutewomen back on top, this time for good, with a tally at the 22:49 mark. The junior from Summit, N.J. now leads the team in goals with 24 and is tied with Zelinger and Emery for the team lead in scoring with 28 points, a career-high for all three.

"It was frustrating to get a lead and then settle and not continue pushing forward," said Emery, who took a few knocks to the head during the match. "We need to play a whole game and not settle once we get a lead. We've been very inconsistent and we can't just settle once we get a lead."

On Friday, the Minutewomen struggled in the opening 30 minutes against a weak St. Joe's squad before coming on strong in the second half. UMass led just 4-2 at the break, but outscored the Hawks 7-1 in the final period to seal the victory.

Junior Kelli Kurtz scored a career-high four goals on the afternoon while Emery added a pair of goals and an assist in the rout, as UMass dominated every facet of the game.

The Minutewomen will look to make it three straight this afternoon when they travel to Storrs, Conn. to take on regional rival Connecticut. The Huskies have won two straight Big East contests, knocking off Boston College and Rutgers, but they have never beaten the Minutewomen, losing each of the past four seasons including a 12-9 loss in Amherst last year and a 7-6 defeat the last time both squads met in the Nutmeg State.

"Of course we're out to get them but I just found out that they've never beaten us so I know they'll be out to get us," Emery said. "We just have to play consistent."

Series preview for NHL postseason

It's spring, it's hot, so what should you do? Get inside! The NHL playoffs are on baby and The Collegian has employed a quintet of experts who don't agree on anything except that hockey rules and we know more than you do. So strap in and listen good to the brain trust of experts we collected to find out if your team has what it takes to lift the most storied hunk of metal in sports.

MATTHEW F. SACCO

(1)Detroit vs. (8) Vancouver

We know what you are thinking, the Red Wings are old, on a downslide and have some major health concerns entering the playoffs, so they'll have mucho trouble going game for game with the young and explosive Canucks. Well forget it. The Wings clinched the President's Trophy a month ago and their roster reads like a Hall of Fame ballot. Todd Bertuzzi, Markus Naslund and co. are good, but they aren't proven playoff performers, but. So what do you think now? Yeah, that's what we thought.

Wings: Sacco, Brady, Vogt, Rose, Merritt

(2)Colorado vs. (7) Los Angeles

Lately it seems like the cool thing to do is to pick the Kings in this series. And with players like Allison, Palffy and Potvin at the top of their games right now, there is good reason to like L.A. But Sakic is a playoff superstar and getting Forsberg back for the playoffs will be a huge emotional lift. And they have that Roy guy in net – that'll help.

Avs: Sacco, Brady, Vogt; Kings: Merritt, Rose

(3)San Jose vs. (6) Phoenix

These two teams have been battling for playoff position all season long, but this time they'll be playing for their playoff lives. This is probably the most even match-up in the Western Conference. But the Yotes have potential Hart winner Sean Burke in net.

Coyotes: Sacco, Rose, Merritt, Vogt; Sharks: Brady

(4)St. Louis vs. (5) Chicago

The Blues have just about everything going for them heading into this series. St. Louis has played well recently while Chicago has not, and the Hawks have little playoff experience on their roster while the Blues have it in excess. St. Louis is always a tough match-up in the opening round because they can have Al MacInnis or Chris Pronger on the ice for the whole game.

Blues: Sacco, Rose, Brady; Hawks: Merritt, Vogt

(1)Boston vs. (8) Montreal

Montreal is clearly a sentimental favorite with the return of Saku Koivu from cancer, but Boston is simply too talented. Montreal doesn't have the guns to exploit Boston's blueline and with the snipers (Guerin, Thornton, Samsonov, Murray) Boston has, they'll have no trouble putting the puck in the net – unless Jose Theodore decides to steal a game or two or four.

Bruins: Sacco, Rose, Brady, Vogt, Merritt

(2)Philadelphia vs. (7) Ottawa

Philly has toughness (McGillis), speed (Recchi), talent (Primeau), gritty forwards (LeClair and Tocchet), depth (roster) and Jeremy Roenick who offers a little bit of everything. Ottawa is one of the most exciting teams in hockey, but they are soft. And as questionable as Roman Cechmanek is, he should still outplay Patrick Lalime.

Flyers: Sacco, Rose, Vogt; Senators: Merritt, Brady

(3) Carolina vs. (6) New Jersey

O.K. who screwed with the seedings? Just remember folks, if the Devils take this one, it's not an upset. And another thing, if the Canes win it, it's not an upset either. Carolina can spread the wealth with the best of them. They may be the hardest team to defend against in hockey because they have three 20-goal scorers who nobody's ever heard of. But the Devils are in a zone right now. Unlike their buddies in Philly, they are gelling at the right time and Martin Brodeur is as solid as ever.

Devils: Sacco, Brady Rose, Merritt; Hurricanes: Vogt (Go Whalers!)

(4) Toronto vs. (5) New York

Mike Milbury took a team of young talent and added a sniper (Yashin), leadership (Peca) and a goalie for now instead of five years from now in Chris Osgood. But the Leafs aren't bad themselves. They have experience and goaltending in Curtis Joseph. And Mats Sundin could be the best player in hockey left in the playoffs.

Leafs: Sacco, Rose, Brady, Merritt; Isles: Vogt

Matthew Sacco is a Collegian Columnist

Tired of the Dorms?

•IT'S NEVER TOO EARLY TO LOOK FOR AN APARTMENT IN THE CENTER OF TOWN•

Lincoln Real Estate

25 N. Pleasant St.
253-7879
www.ar[illegible].com
Office [illegible] for June 2002

Changing Jobs or Retiring?

Michelle Spaziani

Call A.G. Edwards for alternatives on how you can receive and manage your distribution from your company's retirement plan.

91 Main St.
Greenfield, MA
800-445-3685

A.G. Edwards
INVESTMENTS SINCE 1887
Member SIPC • 2001 A.G. Edwards & Sons, Inc.

Career Days:
Working with Children & Theater

Love theater?
Like kids?

Come to the Department of Theater's Career Days Panel to hear from people who've combined these two interests.

Featuring: Alumni and students who have worked as performers touring in educational programs, teachers, drama coaches, and as performers & technicians in children's theater groups. They will answer questions about their work, pros and cons of the job, how they prepared, and advice for those thinking about heading up the same career path.

Scheduled to participate: David Zucker, Zach Salvin, Cindy Ridder, Tim Matos

Thursday, April 18, 4-6pm
Rand Lobby
Free, open to Five College students
Food: Sandwich buffet

This event is sponsored by the UMass Department of Theater, The Humanities and Fine Arts Careers Office and the Alumni Association

UMASS

UMass BRIEFS:

Hockey

University of Massachusetts Athletic Director Bob Marcum announced today that men's ice hockey coach Don Cahoon has received a two-year contract extension, extending his original pact through the 2005-06 season.

"Coach Cahoon is establishing a solid foundation for a successful program, and we believe the program is on the right track and being built the right way," Marcum said.

Cahoon's team went 8-24-2 overall in 2001-02, while his first team posted an 8-22-4 mark.

Women's Tennis

The University of Massachusetts women's tennis team downed Quinnipiac College, 4-3, yesterday in the final dual match of the season at the Upper Boyden Courts. The Minutewomen conclude the regular season with a 6-14 overall record.

Quinnipiac started the match off taking the doubles point, despite the win at No. 2 by sophomore Iafra Depontes and freshman Stephanie Price.

In singles, Depontes, Price, senior Helena Horak and sophomore Susan Hyams all won their matches at first through fourth singles to secure the close victory for the Maroon and White.

Massachusetts will compete in the Verizon Atlantic 10 Championship, April 19-21, in College Park, Md. The conference will announce the seedings at its annual meeting on April 18.

Men's Lacrosse

Massachusetts enters its game with Harvard at 8-2 overall and 3-0 in the ECAC Lacrosse League, while the Crimson enter the game with a 4-5 overall record and are 0-4 in the Ivy League. This is the 33rd all-time meeting between the two intrastate rivals. Massachusetts holds a 23-9 record in the series and has won the last three meetings between the two schools. The Minutemen defeated Harvard, 11-5, last season in Boston. Current senior Dan Paccione and current junior Chris Fiore both scored two goals in the victory.

After opening the season with four consecutive victories, Harvard has lost its last five games to fall below the .500 mark. The Crimson are coming off an 18-4 defeat to Princeton this past Saturday. The Harvard offense is led by junior Matt Primm (12g, 13a), who needs just three points to have 100 in his Crimson career. Other players to watch are junior Jay Wich (12g, 6a), senior Derek Nowak (8g, 5a), freshman Mike McBride (8g, 5a) and sophomore Jeff Gottschall (8g, 2a). The defense is anchored by goaltender Jake McKenna who has started all nine games. He has a 9.28 goals against average and a .610 save percentage. Sophomore Alex Vap takes the majority of the faceoffs and has won 63 of 127 (.496) attempts. Harvard has scored on eight of 42 extra-man opportunities this season.

The game will take place at Richard F. Garber Field and will begin at 3 p.m.

-Courtesy Media Relations

Chance Perspective
Entertainment, LLC
Let's DJ
413.883.1144
Private Parties
Graduation Parties
gemini

Munchie Madness 3-6PM TUESDAY-FRIDAY
VEGGIE POTATO SKINS 8.25 4.48
NACHOS ESPECIAL 8.25 4.48
SWEET POTATO FRIES 6.75 3.38
1/2 PRICE!
COMP WELCOME HERE
CLOSED ON MONDAYS
Judies
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
Now Hiring Advertising Account Executives for Fall 2002

Call 545-3500 or stop by our office, room 113 in the Campus Center Basement, with your resume for more information

All Majors & Classes Welcome to Apply

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Fraternities * Sororities Clubs * Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 with the easy Campusfundraiser.com three hour fundraising event. Does not involve credit card applications. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact Campusfundraiser.com at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. - Now Available. 1&2 bedroom apts. Leases begin June, July, Aug or Sept. 1 year lease. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywine-apts.com stop by or call (413) 549-0600.

Condos 3 bedrooms, hardwood floors, study area in basement, cable, telephone (Internet access), in all bedrooms and study NOW SHOWING for JUNE and SEPTEMBER NO FEES. www.amherstlincolnrealty.com 253-7879

3 Bedroom Puffton Apartment. Summer with fall option. Furnished. 549-8020.

CENTER OF TOWN 1,2,3 bedroom apts., hardwood floors. NOW SHOWING for JUNE and SEPTEMBER NO FEES www.amherstlincolnrealty.com 253-7879

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a new or used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

EMPLOYMENT

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individual, full and part time positions available immediately. Only those able to work the upcoming summer should apply. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413)584-4746.

Person to sell tickets payment is half of proceeds, call Michael: 546-3050.

Bub's Bar-B-Q Now hiring enthusiastic & energetic persons for full & part-time. Must be 18 yrs or older. Apply in person between 2&4 pm Tues-Fri. 548-9630.

EMPLOYMENT

Nantucket Island Summer Job opportunity beginning mid June office Assistant with good computer & telephone skills, miscellaneous errand running. Salary & housing 508-228-3942 or send resume to Rafael Osona Auctions P.O. box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02584.

SUMMER INTERNSHIPS Earn $3000 to 7000++ and gain valuable business experience working for the UMASS Official Campus Telephone Directory. Excellent Advertising, Sales, and Marketing opportunity. GREAT RESUME BOOSTER! Call Paul at AroundCampus, Inc. 1-800-466-2221 ext. 288. www.aroundcampus.com

EMPLOYMENT

Models Wanted. Liquid Curves Entertainment is seeking FEMALE talent for nude and/or erotic modeling. No experience necessary. Make money instantly. Apply online at http://www.liquidcurves.com or call our offices at (413) 539-6782.

Last Chance: Legal Assistants wanted. April 23 is the last day to apply to the Student Legal Services Office about Fall 2002 internships! Get hands-on experience in the legal field .Work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience necessary in the legal profession required –training is provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

EMPLOYMENT

Work in Korea. Call the Career Center, 545-2224.

FOR SALE

Color Laptop $99. Pentum Tower/ CD Rom $99 with color monitor $139 HURRY! 413-584-8857.

Used Sharp Stereo in excellent condition! 3 CD disc changer, double-deck cassette and AM/FM radio, large, detachable speakers too. $80 or best offer! Call Jake at 253-0093 for more information.

INSTRUCTIONS

Become an EMT! Sign up for summer and fall classes now call 545-1885 or go to www.umass.edu/ems.

ROOM FOR RENT

Roommate needed in June 2 bedroom apt. $418/month. Heat& hot water included on bus route. Lauren 253-2103.

1 Room for rent. One mile from Campus Center of Amherst. On bus line. Share w/2 males, call 253-9701 for details.

ROOMMATE NEEDED

Sublet in Sunderland with possible fall option. $375/mo on bus route. One bedroom available. 665-0377.

1/2 females for summer. Optional September lease take over 549-7344 Kristina.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

SUMMER SUBLET

Summer Sublet 3-4 rooms great location. Cheap price. Call 549-4038

TO SUBLET

Summer sublet 2 bedroom apartment South Amherst free heat, water, weigh room right on bus route, laundry w/option to lease in fall 253-8960

TRAVEL

Mexico/ Caribbean or Central America $300 round trip plus tax. Europe $169 one way plus tax. Other world wide destinations cheap. Book tickets on line www.airtech.com or (212) 219-7000.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

1	CBS / 3
4	NBSN
5	Fox Sport NE
6	PBS / 57
7	HSCN Movie Channel
8	WB / 20
9	HSCN Movie Channel
10	TV Guide Channel
11	FOX / 61
12	ABC / 40
13	NBC / 22
14	International Channel
15	UMATV
16	HSCN Info Channel
17	ESPN
18	ESPN 2
19	TVG / 19
20	ESPN Classic
21	Gravel to Gravel
22	CNN
23	CNN HE
24	Weather Channel
25	Learning Channel
26	History Channel
27	A&E
28	Discovery Health
30	Food Network
31	NASA
32	Home & Garden TV
33	Travel Channel
34	Lifetime
35	NIK
36	Tech TV
37	BET
38	UPN-38
39	USA
40	TNN
41	MTV
42	CMT
43	VH-1
44	TNT
45	TBS
46	E! Entertainment
47	Sci-Fi Channel
48	Court TV
49	Nick at Nite
50	Comedy Central
51	Cartoon Network
52	Game Show Network
53	TV Land
54	FOX Family
55	Univision
56	Galavision
57	Telemundo
58	College TV Network
59	C-SPAN
60	C-SPAN2
61	Bloomberg Televison

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass.

Client: _____ Date: _____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Student rate: [illegible]

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — APRIL 17, 2002

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (N)		American Family (N)		Commanding Heights: The Battle for the World Economy (N)				Empires of Steam (In Stereo)
WFSB	3	News (N)	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 (In Stereo) (N)		48 Hours (In Stereo) (N)		News (N)	Late Show (N)
WBZ	4	News (N)	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo) (N)		Amazing Race 2 (In Stereo) (N)		48 Hours (In Stereo) (N)		News (N)	Late Show (N)
WCVB	5	News (N)	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle (N)	My Wife-Kids	George Lopez	The Job (N) (In Stereo)	The Job (N) (N)	Downtown (N)		News (N)	Nightline (N)
WLVI	56	Nanny (N)	Just Shoot Me	Friends (N)	Raymond	Dawson's Creek (In Stereo) (N)		Felicity "Ben Don't Leave" (N)		News (N)		Friends (N)	Raymond
WHDH	7	News (N)	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N) (N)	Inside the Center Stennis		West Wing (In Stereo) (N)		Law & Order "Armed Forces" (N)		News (N)	Tonight Show (N)
WTIC	61	News (N)	Simpsons (N)	Friends (N)	Seinfeld (N)	Raymond		Inside the Center Stennis		West Wing (In Stereo) (N)		Law & Order "Armed Forces" (N)	News (N)
WTXX	20	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends (N)	Just Shoot Me	Dawson's Creek (In Stereo) (N)		Felicity "Ben Don't Leave" (N)		News (N)	Home Imp.	Blind Date (N)	Blind Date (N)
WVIT	30	News (N)	NBC News	Extra (N) (N)	Hollywood	Inside the Center Stennis		West Wing (In Stereo) (N)		Law & Order "Armed Forces" (N)		News (N)	Tonight Show (N)
WTIC	61	News (N)	Simpsons (N)	Friends (N)	Seinfeld (N)	Raymond		That '80s	Grounded-Life	Bernie Mac (N)	King-Bunny	News (N)	Raymond	Seinfeld (N)
WWLP	22	News (N)	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (N)	Inside the Center Stennis		West Wing (In Stereo) (N)		Law & Order "Armed Forces" (N)		News (N)	Tonight Show (N)
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (N)		American Family (N)		Commanding Heights: The Battle for the World Economy (N)				Charlie Rose (N) (In Stereo) (N)
WGGB	40	News (N)	ABC News	Seinfeld (N)	Frasier (N)	My Wife-Kids	George Lopez	The Job (N) (N)	The Job (N) (N)	Downtown (N)		News (N)	Nightline (N)
WSBK	38	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (N)	Frasier (N)		Enterprise "Sleeping Dogs" (N)		Wolf Lake "Leader of the Pack" (N)		News	Ent. Tonight	5th Wheel	Shipmates
WTBS	72	Cosby Show	Roseanne (N)	Friends (N)	Roseanne (N)	Ripley's Believe It or Not!		★★★ "Home Alone" (1990, Comedy) (CA) Macaulay Culkin. (N)				Ripley's Believe It or Not!
A&E	43	Law & Order (In Stereo)		The View (In Stereo) (N)		Biography Jason Lee Curtis.		American Justice		City Confidential (N)		Law & Order "Jurisdiction" (N)
CNN	22	Moneyline (N)		Crossfire (Live) (N)		Live From...	The Point (N)	Larry King Live (N)		Newsnight		Crossfire (N)	Moneyline (N)
COM	35	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show (N)	Geeks	★★½ "Back to School" (1986, Comedy) Rodney Dangerfield.				South Park (N)	Insomniac (N)	Daily Show (N)	Sat. Night Live
DISC	52	Nature's Babies		Cousins: Apes		Scorpion King Unveiled (N)						Scorpion King Unveiled
ESPN	21	Sportscenter (N)		Stanley Cup Playoffs Conference Quarterfinal Game 1 - Teams to Be Announced. (Live) (N)						Major League Baseball Teams to Be Announced. (Live) (N)
LIFE	62	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait "Patty Duke"		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo) (N)		★★ "Murder in New Hampshire: The Pamela Smart Story" (1991)				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	53	Cribs	Rock	Making-Video	Osbournes	Osbournes	Osbournes	mtvICON Aerosmith. (N) (In Stereo)		Osbournes		Jackass	Kidnapped
NICK	59	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats (N)	Spongeb	Fold by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cos by Show	Cheers (N)		All in Family	All in Family
SCIFI	66	Star Trek "I, Mudd" (In Stereo)		Star Trek (In Stereo) (N)		Outer Limits "Vaporia" (N)		★★½ "Vampires" (1998, Horror) James Woods. (In Stereo) (N)		Super Structures of America		Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	63	King of the Strip		Medical Detect	Medical Detect	Building the Biggest		Junkyard Wars "Setup"				Building the Biggest
TNT	55	NYPD Blue "Love Hurts" (N)		Pretender "Bank" (In Stereo) (N)		NBA Basketball Philadelphia 76ers at Indiana Pacers. (Live) (N)						NBA Basketball Kings at Lakers.
USA	29	(5:00) Weber, Texas Ranger (N)		JAG "Impact" (In Stereo) (N)		Ultimate Fights (N)		Combat Missions (Season Finale) (N) (In Stereo) (N)				JAG "Into the Breach" (N)
HBO	65	(5:00) ★★★ "Silverado" (1985)		★★ "Someone Like You" (2001, Comedy) Ashley Judd. PG-13 (N)		Sex-and-City		Sex-and-City		Sit Feet Under (In Stereo) (N)		"Southern Comfort" (2001) NR
MAX	64	(5:00) ★★★ "To Die For" (1995)		Broken Silence (In Stereo) (N)		★★ "The Art of War" (2000, Action) Wesley Snipes. R (N)				★★ "Cast Away" (2000, Drama) Tom Hanks. PG-13 (N)
SHOW	45	★★½ "My Father, the Hero" (1994) Gerard Depardieu. PG (N)				★★½ "Angels in the Outfield" (1994, Fantasy) Danny Glover. PG				Soul Food (DTV) (In Stereo) (N)		Resurrection	"Crimson Tide"

Adam and Eric By Ross Burach

The Torques By Ken Fredette

Highbrow By Aaron Eppy

The Torques By Ken Fredette

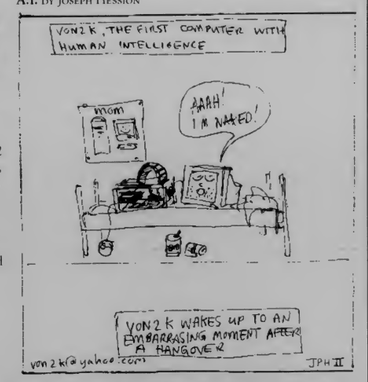
The Torques By Ken Fredette

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Quote of the Day

"Half our life is spent trying to find something to do with the time we have rushed through life trying to save."

-Will Rogers



Amherst Weather

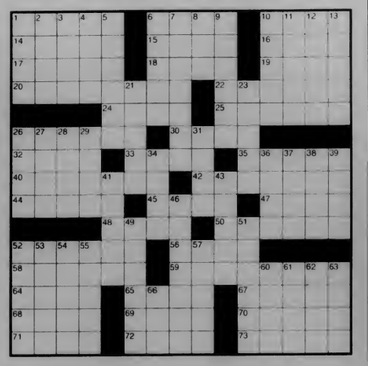
Wednesday	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 62 LOW: 58	HIGH: 82 LOW: 48	HIGH: 75 LOW: 48

Horoscopes

ARIES (March 21–April 19) – The cosmos have two words for you: "open bar."
TAURUS (April 20 – May 20) – There is only so much you can do today, so don't feel bad about not turning that bar of lead into gold.
GEMINI (May 21 – June 21) – Get a move on today, because time is wasting. You must find the jade monkey before the next full moon.
CANCER (June 22 – July 22) – Sometimes it's ok to just kick back and take a nap. Just not in a crosswalk, please.
LEO (July 23 – Aug. 22) – Today's the day you finally meet that special someone. Or don't. Those stars can be tricky.
VIRGO (Aug. 23 – Sept. 22) – Remember when the horoscopes used to be funny? Yeah, we miss those days too.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22) – I'll always remember my brother's dying words: "Errrrrrrggg."
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 – Nov. 21) – Going with the flow is not the thing to do today.
SAGITARIUS (Nov. 22 – Dec. 21) – Fortunately, they won't press charges.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 – Jan. 19) – Locusts!!!
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 – Feb. 18) – The stars are predicting only a few bad things today.
PISCES (Feb. 19 – March 20) – Keeping your cool today is key. Especially since it's freaking hot out.

A.I. By Joseph Hession

THE HARP IRISH PUB
TONIGHT
COME PARTY at THE HARP
in North Amherst
"START YOUR OWN TRADITION"
163 Sunderland Rd.
Amherst, MA 01002
548-6900



ACROSS
1 Referee, slangily
6 Flood controls
10 Glance over
14 Improvise
15 Melville work
16 Cottontail
17 Hardware buys
18 Winter forecast
19 Coating of frost
20 Secretary or clerk
22 Hardened to 24 Many wines
25 Not a soul
26 One-celled animal
30 "Othello" plotter
32 Were rivals
33 Not phony
35 Kids' toys
40 Distinguished
42 Eyelash enhancer
44 Take a break
45 Seafood choice
47 They give a hoot
48 Cannon phenomenon
50 Optical prescriptions
52 Short jacket
56 Novelist Jean
58 Grownups
59 Plan
64 "Cheers" regular
65 Non-AAC dog
67 Blender setting
68 Forest part
69 "Got it!"
70 Grow
71 Former superpower
72 Singer Vikki
73 Painter's prop

DOWN
1 Western author Grey
2 Goods alternative
3 Object on radar
4 Stream
5 Sponge up
6 Game medicine
7 Concussion result
8 Pasture sound
9 Planting
10 Bush
11 Egypt's capital
12 Win weapons
13 Strapped for cash
21 Hunger for
23 Secluded corners
26 Say for sure
27 Play charades
28 Eye, to Pierre
29 "Giant" author Ferber
31 Soprano Gluck
34 Write with acid

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

A	C	H	E		S	N	O	B		S	L	A	M
M	O	U	N	D		P	E	R	U		N	U	D	E
B	A	R	G	E		R	O	O	F		A	R	A	T
O	T	T		M	A	I	N		F	O	R	A	G	E
		M	I	S	T		P	O	P	E	Y	E
A	T	T	A	C	H	E		L	O	T
M	A	I	N	E		S	U	N	S	H	A	D	E
A	R	N	O		A	M	I	S	S		A	B	E	L
H	A	Y	R	I	D	E	S			A	V	O	W	S
		R	O	E		C	A	R	O	U	S	E
	S	C	R	I	P	T		E	P	I	C
C	O	V	E	S	T		M	A	T	S		W	O	N
A	N	N	A		I	C	E	S		E	R	A	S	E
S	A	I	D		N	O	M	E		N	I	G	H	T
A	R	C	S		G	O	O	D		P	E	A	S

10-13-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH
Farmer Market Soup
Sausage Cacciatore
Ravioli Alfredo (vegetarian)
Beans & Rice (vegan)

DINNER
Farmer Market Soup
Mandarin Chicken
Roast Beef
Mandarin Tofu (vegan)
Garden Burger (vegetarian) (W Basics)

Today's Staff

Melissa Hammel
James Schaffer
Jim Pignatiello, Ken Campbell
Mike Kulak
Lizzy Nielsen, Cara Horowitz

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: ERIC SODERSTROM

Fenway proves hostile to Minutemen

Aaron Scenz' 0-for-3 performance at Fenway Park yesterday was not enough, as the baseball team fell to Boston College 7-5.

Baseball team can't take advantage of many opportunities; loses to BC Eagles

By Jim Pignatiello
COLLEGIAN STAFF

BOSTON – A lack of timely hitting plagued the Massachusetts baseball team in round one of the Beanpot Classic at Fenway Park yesterday afternoon.

The Minutemen (12-17, 4-8 Atlantic 10) left eight runners on base after falling behind early to Boston College, and eventually lost, 7-5.

BC	7
UMass	5

"[Today was] really no different than it's been all year long," UMass Head Coach Mike Stone said. "We don't execute when we have great situations."

Chris Morgan (1-for-5) struck out with two runners on in the top of the ninth to end the game, ending a last-ditch rally by the Maroon and White.

"He has struck out too many times with guys in scoring position," Stone said of his big catcher's struggles at the plate. "He's trying to do too much."

Morgan, who leads the team in home runs with six, struck out three times against the Eagles.

After UMass leadoff man Derrick Durepo scored the game's first run in the top of the first inning, BC answered with a pair of runs in its turn to bat when first baseman Vinny Scavone drilled a line drive over the Green Monster in left.

The Minutemen tied the game up in the top of the third when senior Aaron Senez drilled an 0-2 pitch down the rightfield line for a double. Durepo, who was running on the pitch, scored from first.

Boston College answered with a run of its own in the bottom of the third with back-to-back doubles by Josh DiScipio and Ryan Morgan. A single by Drew Locke put runners on the corners with zero outs, but UMass starter Brandon White fought out of the inning, and got a little lucky. He got Brian Macchi to line out to third and Scavone to fly out to left. Morgan ran home on the fly out, presumably to score BC's fourth run, but was called out on the appeal for leaving the bag before Mike Kulak made the catch in left – ending the inning.

BC extended a 4-3 lead in the bottom of the sixth after a Durepo error in centerfield. Fighting a setting sun that was right in his eyes, the freshman mis-played a line drive that would have otherwise been an easy out.

Durepo refused to blame the miscue on the sun, however, saying, "It was just a lack of concentration." The Eagles scored two runs in the inning to make the score 6-3 and held onto the lead the rest of the way.

White had a solid outing on the mound and looked better than his line (six innings, nine hits, seven runs (four earned)). The Foster, R.I. native had good command of his pitches and kept most of the Eagle batters off-balance for the majority of his time on the mound.

The Minutemen committed three errors yesterday, too many if they wish to beat a team that was named No. 1 in New England this week by the New England Division I College Baseball Coaches Poll.

"We are letting teams get too many outs and you can't do that in baseball," Durepo said.

The centerfielder made up for his lone mistake in the field with his bat and was the highlight of the UMass offense yesterday. Durepo went 3-for-5 at the plate and scored two of his team's five runs.

After the game, Coach Stone didn't feel that the historic surroundings had any effect on his team's play. When asked if he felt that his team had the jitters from playing at Fenway, he replied, "I didn't see much of that with our ballclub."

Stone, obviously less than happy with the outcome, felt that the majority of his players haven't made the improvements one should see 29 games into the season.

"Guys have not solidified [starting positions]," he said. "We are still holding tryouts."

"The only thing we have established is being mediocre at best," the 20-year coaching veteran said after the loss.

Stone's squad won't have much time to think about the loss, however, as it will host the University of Connecticut this afternoon at 3 p.m. The Huskies edged UMass 1-0 in the teams' last match-up on April 10 in Storrs, Conn.

Cheers and jeers compiled for 2002 season

GLEN STRAUB

Tonight the NBA puts a capper on the regular season and looks forward to the "win or go home" situation of the postseason. The 2001-02 campaign was quite unique in many ways, and as an avid NBA watcher I have many thoughts on the past season. Here is my list of cheers and jeers of the 2001-02 NBA regular season.

Cheer #1: The return of Michael Jordan

When the first Jordan comeback rumors began last summer, the idea seemed implausible. However, Jordan proved to everyone that it doesn't take muscles, speed and youth to perform at a high level in basketball. The most important attribute is experience.

With a new and renovated style of play, the 39-year-old Jordan turned around an organization that had not seen light shed upon it in quite some time. Last season, the Wizards only won 19 games. With a win over the New York Knicks last night, Washington ends the year with 37 wins – an 18 game improvement. Only a man like Jordan can fuel a turnaround like that.

Jeer #1: Jordan's season-ending injury

As you just read above, Jordan's influence on the Wizards has been monumental. However, his aging knees caught up with him at the most inopportune time. He was forced to miss most of the second half of the season and was pronounced out for the season two weeks ago – giving the Wizards very little chance to make the postseason.

Wouldn't it have been nice to see if Jordan had enough ammo in him to lead the Wizards to an extended playoff run?

Cheer #2: The rise of the Nets, Celtics & Pistons

In the eighties and early nineties, the Celtics and Pistons were the juggernauts of the Eastern Conference. However, recently the two clubs have fallen out of the NBA supremacy. The Nets, on the other hand, have never been part of the basketball elite.

Trials with college coaches and superstar players have failed miserably for these three clubs, but getting down to the basic thought that defense wins championships has put these teams in a position that many predicted wouldn't occur.

When the season ends tonight, the closing standings in the Eastern Conference will look like this: 1) New Jersey 2) Detroit 3) Boston.

Jeer #2: The possible movement of the Hornets

I remember a time when the Charlotte Coliseum, better known as "The Hive," held the record for the most consecutive sellouts for NBA games. Monzo Mourning, Larry Johnson, Mugsey Bogues and, later on, Glen Rice entertained over 20,000 basketball fans each and every night. In fact, the first game the Hornets organization retired in its brief history was a No. 6 for the fans, being the sixth man of the team.

These days the Hornets still have the same success in the winning column as they did six years ago. However, the success in the stands is lacking. The Hornets will most likely become the New Orleans Hornets in the 2002-03 season thanks in part to a lack of attendance. This year's squad has great players in Baron Davis and P.J. Brown, but hey, they lack a big name, and the fans of Charlotte are not filling the seats. Hopefully, the crowds on Bourbon Street will pour into wherever the Hornets play next year.

Cheer #3: Nick Van Excel as a Maverick

Nick Van Excel started his NBA career with high regards from the NBA community. As a second-round pick out of the University of Cincinnati, he was able to earn a starting position for the Los Angeles Lakers in his rookie year. Many second-round picks don't even get a chance to sign a contract. However, things changed quickly when he forearmed a referee in a mad rampage, quarreled with then-Lakers coach Del Harris and demanded a trade from the Denver Nuggets this past season.

Van Excel got his wish and was shipped off to the over-talented Dallas Mavericks just before the trade deadline in Feb. Now he has retrieved his unselfish ways and accepted a sixth-man role, fitting in perfectly with the chemistry of the Mavericks.

Jeer #3: The Lakers

The Lakers have the most dominating center in the league, probably the most talented two-guard in the league and the most successful head coach of the past 15 years. Why do they never show up to play?

The whole "oh just wait 'til the playoffs" theory on the Lakers is a joke. Jordan and the Bulls never took a day off and that is why they hold the record for most wins in a season, and completed two three-peats in the nineties. If the Lakers want to be respected as a dynasty, they should learn to understand that every game counts.

Glen Straub is a Collegian Columnist.

Tennis finishes its last ever game

By Elena Pamess
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Every season a coach strives to improve the quality of the team's play by recruiting top prospects and fine tuning the skills of the veterans. Yet for coach Judi Dixon and crew of the Massachusetts men's tennis team, that task was virtually impossible due to a series of catastrophic blows to the program such as transfers, numerous injuries and a budget cut that will eliminate the program indefinitely.

Last year the UMass men placed second in the Atlantic 10 conference championship, losing in the finals 4-2 to a gritty St. Bonaventure team. The Maroon and White held high expectations at the conclusion of the 2001 season for 2002, as conference foes like Xavier and Dayton penciled a trip to Amherst into their schedules, which has been unprecedented in years past.

The Minutemen failed to deliver due to a string of bad luck, which began with the transfer of sophomore stars Brent Davis and Aron Gortman, and the crippling back injury to Rory Theis, who would have started at No. 3 doubles. The team was already at 0-9 on the spring season March 11th when the athletic department announced the budget cuts to seven teams including tennis. Basically, a physically weakened team grew far weaker mentally, contributing to eight more losses on the season before finally picking up a win, 4-3, in an emotional contest against Fordham on senior day.

"We had a lot of alumni there," said Todd Champeau. "Bill Greener was there and a lot of other guys since this was the last match ever for our program. For Steve and I, it was a good day. My parents flew out from Wisconsin and saw me play for the first time and Steve's parents were there. We [Prisco/Champeau] won our doubles match so it was an encouraging day for us right before the conference tournament."

In the first round of the Verizon A-10 tournament, the tenth seeded Minutemen again challenged Fordham at the Oxford Athletic Club in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. However, this time the Rams came prepared, toppling the Maroon and White 4-3 in a hard-fought match where the UMass men captured the doubles point, but then lost four of the six singles matches.

"I think the Fordham match came down to Steve and I," Champeau said. "We lost to the same Fordham guys that we beat on Sunday. It was extremely close but they came out fired up and just raised their level that much."

However, the squad bounced back against LaSalle in the ninth place bracket of the tournament's semifinals, winning 4-1 with strong showings in singles and doubles play. In singles, freshman sensation Scott Sans-Leeb crushed his opponent Bruce Sibley in two sets 6-0, 6-0, as did Jed Greenberg and Reid Stubbs, 6-1, 6-2 and 6-4, 6-4 respectively.

"LaSalle is probably the worst team in the A-10 so it's hard to get up for a match like that, especially at eight in the morning," Champeau said. "It wasn't a match to get revved up for but we got the job done."

Later that day the team went head-to-head with a bitter rival, the Owls of Temple, in what would prove to be the last match ever for UMass men's tennis. Unfortunately the Maroon and White just came up short, losing 4-3 in a scrappy battle that got heated.

"This is the best match that we played all season because everyone came out fired up," Champeau said. "I was proud of all the guys and everyone played well and fought hard. It got pretty emotional. Scott Sans-Leeb and his opponent were talking trash at one point. It's fitting that we ended with Temple since they're a big rival for us. It's hard to see the program end but I feel we finished on a high note."

Senior Todd Champeau and the men's tennis team competed for the final time this past weekend, winning one match while dropping a pair. Due to budget cuts, the squad will not be back for the 2002-03 season.

INTRAMURAL INSURGENCE
ED/OP PAGE 4.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THURSDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTEEN ☆☆☆☆☆ 4.18.02

The Stonewall Center announces new funds

By Denise Nuñez and Catherine Turner
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The University of Massachusetts Stonewall Center, which is a resource center for lesbian, bisexual, gay and transgender (LGBT) students, has two new funds. The Center recently announced the Stonewall Center Student Support and the Leadership Funds.

"The Stonewall Center got these two new funds through a donation by an alumni," Felice Yeskel, director of the Center said.

The LGBT Student Support Fund is accessible to help support their participation in extra curricular activities. The types of activities that the fund will support include attending a conference or workshop, or purchasing supplies for projects and events, etc.

"LGBT Student Leadership Award is a one a year award and reference is needed and exceptional leadership," Yeskel said. "To get nominated for this fund nominate yourself, go on the website fund application."

The award carries with it $150 cash. Any current UMass, graduate or undergraduate student is eligible to be nominated. The nomination forms are available at the Stonewall Center, located in Crampton House /SW or on their website.

The awards are to be given out to UMass students in good standing and will be given to projects that can demonstrate value to the UMass LGBT community, according to the Stonewall website. The awards will be made on May 13th.

"The benefits of these funds are for financial benefits to buy supplies or help for transportation and help for expenses," Yeskel said. "We appreciate our donor for making these funds possible and at this time of cutbacks they did something positive."

The Stonewall Center was created in 1985 and was one of only three centers of its kind in the country at the time. Since its founding, it has grown to serve the University and the surrounding community in several capacities. It provides cultural and educational programs, as well as a reference center for videos, library books and magazines. It also regularly brings speakers to campus to talk about LGBT concerns.

The new funds come in addition to the Stonewall Scholarship Fund that was created in 1995. So far this fund has approximately $40,000, but seeks more to fulfill its goals. The goal of the Scholarship Fund, according to the Stonewall Center website, is twofold.

The first goal is to use the money as an emergency fund for lesbian, gay, bisexual or transgender students that have been "cut off" by their families upon discovery of their sexual orientation and need money to stay in school.

The second goal for the Scholarship Fund is to promote scholarship in LGBT studies within the University. The center hopes to give out monetary awards for outstanding papers written by one undergraduate and one graduate in the field of LGBT studies. The prizes will be awarded after an interdisciplinary committee of faculty members has evaluated the work.

For more information about the Support Fund, the Leadership Award, the Scholarship Fund or making a donation, please contact Felice Yeskel at the Stonewall Center, phone: 413-545-4824, fax, 413-545-0667.

SCOTT GORMAN/COLLEGIAN

Trail tour coming soon...

"Take back the trail" postponed their walk of the Sylvan-Orchard Hill trail to a later date that will be announced at a benefit concert on Monday.

Sociology prof gives distinguished faculty lecture

Demerath reads open letter to Bush about faith-based initiatives, Muslims and Catholicism

By Catherine Turner
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The University of Massachusetts has a long tradition of hosting distinguished faculty lectures that reflect the hard work and diversity of study that ensues on the Amherst campus. However, few lecturers have delivered talks about subjects that directly relate to current events.

Last night's lecture, entitled "Cross and Double-Crossed: Religion and Politics at Home and Abroad," was delivered by UMass Sociology Professor Jay Demerath, and covered a wide range of controversial topics from faith-based initiatives, to the Arab-Israeli conflict.

The lecture was introduced by UMass Provost Charlena Seymour, who explained that the Distinguished Faculty lecturers are chosen by a selection committee who review nominations in the spring. She then introduced former Distinguished Faculty lecturers in the audience that served on this year's committee.

The podium was then turned over to Chairman of the Sociology Department Dr. Randall Stokes, who said a few words to introduce Demerath. According to Stokes, Demerath arrived at UMass in 1972 after being a professor at the University of Wisconsin. During his time in Amherst, Demerath served in two five-year terms as chairman of the Sociology department. He has also written several books and has been published in many periodicals.

Stokes complimented Demerath for his analysis of the "intersection between religion and social policy," before inviting him to begin his talk.

"Almost exactly 50 years ago, I called from a windswept beach in North Carolina up to UMass to accept the chair of the Sociology Department," Demerath said to open his lecture. "Little did I know then how I would be sealing my fate."

Before he dove into his topic, Demerath took the time to give his regards to members of the Sociology department. He complimented the department for its excellent faculty and determination to keep up the high quality of work during the budget cuts.

"Our Sociology department as a whole demonstrates how difficult it is to reward good teaching when it is the rule, not the exception," Demerath said.

He then confessed that he planned to use his time and the opportunity to address some correspondences he had been putting off. He read a humorous letter he wrote to his plastic surgeon in Boston, and then one he wrote to Dean Gordon, the Dean of the College of Behavioral and Social Sciences.

His third letter, addressed to President Bush, was the body of his actual lecture. He structured the talk as if he was writing back to Bush to answer questions Bush asked about current issues in the religious and political sphere.

The first issue Demerath tackled was the President's faith-based initiatives. He expressed his disagreement and criticism of the program because of its lack of reality. According to Demerath, Bush is unrealistic about the willingness of churches to become bigger vehicles for welfare.

"Very few [churches] have the resources or the motivation to become big players in the welfare game," he said.

He then made clear his passion for the separation of church and state, citing the anti-establishment clause of the US Constitution. As he talked about the disastrous effects of religion influencing politics, he segued into a talk about "what is going on in Catholic Massachusetts."

"Sex and religion have always found a way to mingle," Demerath said introducing the issue of the current scandal within the Church. "It is hard to know the consequences of a celibate clergy."

He discussed the double crisis that the Catholic Church now faces. The external crisis is obviously the charges of pedophilia that have recently come out. The internal crisis is the tension surrounding the need for change within the Church as a whole.

SCOTT GORMAN/COLLEGIAN

Jay Demerath

"The same substantial majority of priests and parishioners have been calling for institutional changes about contraception, abortion and female ordination," Demerath said.

Switching the religious focus, Demerath confronted the issue of 9/11 and attempted to answer a question Bush had posed, "why do Muslims hate us so much?"

He then discussed his studies of Muslim communities around the world, not only in the Middle East. He has traveled and studied in countries as diverse as Guatemala, Ethiopia, Indonesia, India, Israel, Turkey, China and Pakistan.

"Muslims have no monopoly on antipathy against the US," Demerath said. "They oppose us for preventing them from realizing those values [democracy and freedom] in their own fashion. Superpowers eventually make enemies as well as friends."

He explained some of the reasons why the US is seen by some Muslims as negative, including the perception that US officials are driven only by self-interest. He also commented that every religion has its own version of terrorists, and the actions that the US has taken to eradicate terrorism have probably pleased Osama bin Laden more than it scared him.

"Any war to eradicate all evildoers will indeed be a very long war," he commented, pointing out the political benefits of the war for Bush. He then cautioned the administration, "Even as we implore his jihad, we seem to have embarked on a jihad of our own."

Finally Demerath discussed four ways that Islam has a tendency toward violence that other religions don't have. Reasons he gave included the lack of a strong authority structure for control of the community and the faith, lack of a liberal tradition within the faith, no tradition between mosque and state, and that the Qur'an inhibits change and adaptation.

He also mentioned the Arab-Palestinian conflict in terms of structural power versus cultural power. He said that cultural power is "the weapon of the underdog," and that there is a similarity between the two sides and in its conflict that has not allowed it space to change. He called for negotiations between the two sides and international monitoring in order to make lasting peace.

"Both Sharon and Arafat are hopping on the hot coals of this diversity," Demerath said. "The original and ultimate causes of the conflict are lost in the carnage."

Demerath closed his letter to Bush and thus his lecture. There was a brief question and answer session before Interim Chancellor Marcellette Williams presented him with the Chancellor's Medal, the highest honor that can be bestowed by the University.

"I'm fascinated by his study of religion. He articulates how religion can help and how it can get in the way. He said some challenging things about the complexities of the Middle Eastern situation," Fr. Sean P. McDonagh, director of the Newman Center, who was in attendance for the lecture, said during the post-lecture reception. "I liked his evaluation of the Catholic scandal. It's time for the Church to take a look at a multitude of issues. [Hopefully] there is going to be some fresh air [in the Church]."

SCOTT GORMAN/COLLEGIAN

And the band played on

With the temperature reaching 94 degrees, the drum corps played on, practicing in the heat

DIVERSITY CALENDAR

FILMS

SMITH – The Academy Award nominated documentary Long Night's Journey Into Day will be screened in the Nielson Library Browsing Room on Wednesday, April 24 at 7:30 p.m. This screening is being held in preparation for a lecture the following day on South Africa's Truth and Reconciliation Commission, the subject of the film. See LECTURES/DISCUSSIONS for details on the lecture.

PERFORMANCES

MOUNT HOLYOKE – The Annual Five College Latino Day will be held at Mount Holyoke College on Friday, April 19, in Chapin Auditorium, beginning at 9:00 p.m. The highlight will be a performance by The Women of Ill Repute. REPUTE, a Texas-based group of Latina performance poets. The event will also include art exhibitions, poetry readings, dance performances by members of the Five College community and traditional Latino cuisine.

UMASS – Strange Fruit, a one-man show exploring identity politics in the African-American community, will be performed on Friday, April 19, at 7:00 p.m. in room 61 of Bartlett Hall. The show incorporates personal narrative, poetry, dance, music and visual media. This event is free and open to the public.

UMASS – Ex Post Papa: My Life as a Freelance Lesbian Dad, a solo production by local writer, performer and activist, Bear [Sharon Bergman], will be performed on Friday, April 19, and Saturday, April 20, at 7:00 p.m. in room 227 of Herter Hall. Tickets are $5 for the general public, $3 for Five College students. Call 545-4824 for reservations.

SMITH – Pamazuko: The Awakening, a cultural show featuring Africana culture in dance, song, poetry, and drama, will be performed on Saturday, April 20, at 7:30 p.m. in Smith College's John M. Greene Hall. Tickets are $4 for general admission.

UMASS – An Evening of Wisdom, Music and Deep Meditation with His Holiness Sri Sri Ravi Shankar will be held on Wednesday, April 23, at the Mullins Center from 6:30 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. Tickets are $5 for UMass students with identification, $15 for the general public. Call 545-0505 for tickets.

UMASS – Jesusa's Laugh from Luisa to Langa with Terry Tenoure, a performance collage of music, dance, and text, exploring the relationship between autobiography and ethnography, will be held in the Augusta Savage Gallery on Wednesday, April 23, at 7:00 p.m. This event is free and open to the public. The Gallery is located at 101 New Africa House.

MARCHES

Turn to DIVERSITY, page 3

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts operating solely on revenue from its advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life. It became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Sam Wilkinson Editor-in-Chief
Matthew F. Sacco Managing Editor
Amy Garganta Business Manager
Shimauli Dave Production Manager
Jake Lilien Diversity Editor
Mike Kulak Editorial Production Manager
Jason Smith Advertising Manager

Mike Delano Arts & Living Editor
Matthew Despres Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jennifer Eastwood Features Editor
Catherine Turner News Editor
Tibora Girczyc-Blum Photography Editor
Eric Saderstrom Sports Editor
Brent Siniawski Finance Manager
Charlie Iacco Distribution Manager

Morgan Taylor Advertising Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Cara Murphy Assistant Finance Manager
Shawn Daugherty Assistant Business Manager
Megan Shannon Assistant Advertising Manager

THURSDAY: KEEP THE GLASS PROMOTION NIGHT !
MURPHY'S IRISH STOUT
Voted Best new Bar/Club in the Valley 2002
THE HARP
Next Week: One Year Anniversary Party...
LIVE
SummitHouse
Original Groove
Jam Band
$2.50 pint
$3.25 20 oz
Tee Shirts
Free Giveaways
Lots of stuff!
163 Sunderland Rd.
Amherst, MA
(413) 548-6900
Just off the bus route next to Cowl's Lumber
NO COVER
"Start Your Own Tradition"

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
"Here's Looking At You Kid" ON THE GIANT SCREEN
Humphrey BOGART
Ingrid BERGMAN
Casablanca
AND FOR LOVERS OF ALL AGES!
BALCONY $6.00
SOME THINGS JUST GET BETTER AS TIME GOES BY
PAUL HENREID CLAUDE RAINS CONRAD VEIDT SYDNEY GREENSTREET PETER LORRE
LATE SHOW FRI. APR. 19 @ 11:45 P.M.
MATINEE SAT. APR. 20 AT 5:00 P.M.
MAIN FLOOR SEATS $5.00
Downtown Northampton's Academy of Music support by the Valley Advocate • www.valleyadvocate.com
Movie-Line 413-584-8435
academyofmusictheatre.com

RESEARCH PROVES WATCHING SOAPS ON A REALLY BIG FREE TV IS BETTER.
No Purchase Necessary. Void in Illinois, Hawaii and where prohibited. Open to legal residents of the 48 contiguous U.S. states and D.C. 18 years or older. Sweepstakes ends on May 31, 2002. For Official Rules access www.soapcity.com or send a self-addressed stamped envelope to: The SoapCity.com Study Break Sweepstakes, P.O. Box 1447, Hollywood, CA 90078.
ENTER THE SOAPCITY.COM™ STUDY BREAK SWEEPSTAKES!
We know you need a study break. And we know you want to win all this stuff. So log onto www.soapcity.com in between your study sessions and answer the easiest questions you've had all year. That's it! You're entered into our sweepstakes, which has over 100 winners, including the Grand Prize of a Sony® Big Screen Projection TV, Sony® DVD Home Entertainment Center, Sony® Cyber-shot® Digital Camera and prizes from all your favorite soap operas! ENTER NOW - YOU COULD BE A WINNER!
SOAP CITY®
The Soap Opera Capital of the World.™
www.soapcity.com America Online Keyword: SoapCity
Presented in part by Tropicana Frusion Smoothie
The Great Tasting, On-The-Go Smoothie!

diversity

continued from page 1

SMITH – Take Back the Night, a candlelight vigil and march in solidarity with survivors of domestic violence and/or rape, will begin on the steps of Smith College's John M. Greene Hall on Thursday, April 18, at 9:15 p.m. At the march's conclusion, a reception will be held in the Gamut.

RELIGIOUS

AMHERST – Paula Fredricksen, Professor of Scripture at Boston University, will speak on "Jesus, Paul, and the Origins of Christianity," on Thursday, April 18, in Converse Hall's Cole Assembly Room, at 4:30 p.m.

CELEBRATIONS

UMASS – Breaking the Waves, a cultural, educational, political, and social event that celebrates diversity and cultural awareness, will be held on Friday, April 19, from 7:00 p.m. to 1:00 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. The event will include performances, speeches, singing, and traditional dances.

MOUNT HOLYOKE – A Latin DJ Dance Party will be held at Mount Holyoke's Blanchard Campus Center on Friday, April 19, starting at 11:00 p.m. This event is free and open to the public.

UMASS – The UMass African Students Association will present Cultural Night 2002: Contemporary Africa: A New Beginning, on Saturday, April 20, at 7:00 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

EVENT OF THE WEEK

UMASS – The Annual W.E.B. DuBois Lecture will be held on Tuesday, April 23, at 4:00 p.m. on the Main Floor of the W.E.B. DuBois Library. This year's topic is, "Recollections of W.E.B. DuBois in the McCarthy Era by his Friends and Colleagues." Speakers will include Esther Cooper Jackson, co-founder of Freedomways, James Jackson, editor of the Daily Worker; Abbott Simon, Executive Director of the Peace Information Center.

LECTURES/DISCUSSIONS

UMASS – The International Day of Truth will be celebrated on Thursday, April 18, in room 163 of the Campus Center at 7:00 p.m., with off-campus speakers, information, and food. This event is sponsored by INCITE! Women of Color Against Violence.

MOUNT HOLYOKE – Moises Villafana Izquierda, a member of the Ika tribe of Colombia, will deliver a lecture on Thursday, April 18, at 7:00 p.m. in Clapp Hall's Hooker Auditorium. He will speak about the fate of his people and their struggle for self-determination during the U.S.'s Plan Colombia anti drug campaign. This lecture will be conducted in Spanish, with English translation.

MOUNT HOLYOKE – Eva Sartori will deliver a lecture, "An Anthology of French Jewish Women Writers in Translation," on Thursday, April 18, at 7:30 p.m. in the Five College Women's Studies Research Center. The Center is located at 85 College Street, South Hadley.

UMASS – Srilatha Batliwala, a feminist activist-researcher from India, will deliver a lecture, "Claiming Global Space," on Friday, April 19, in room 106 of Thompson Hall. A reception will follow. This event is part of the Center for International Education/Kinsey Dialogue Series.

AMHERST – Amherst College Professor Jeffrey Brown Ferguson will deliver a lecture, "Satire in the Bedroom: George Schuyler's Racial Transgressions," on Tuesday, April 23, at 4:30 p.m. in the Alumni House. This event is the 17th Annual Max and Etta Lazerowitz Lecture. A reception will follow.

MOUNT HOLYOKE – Professor Yoav Peled of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem and Professor Issam Nassar of Jerusalem's Al-Quds University will deliver a lecture, "War in the Middle East: The Case for a Just and Realistic Peace Between Israelis and Palestinians," on Tuesday, April 23, at 7:00 p.m. in Clapp Hall's Hooker Auditorium.

HAMPSHIRE – Leigh Gilmore of Ohio State University will deliver a lecture, "Postcolonial Feminist Autobiography," on Wednesday, April 24, at 4:00 p.m. in Franklin Patterson Hall's West Lecture Hall. This event is part of the Autobiography in the Americas series.

AMHERST – Robert F. Drinan, Professor of Law at Georgetown University Law Center, will deliver a lecture, "The Mobilization of Shame: A World View of Human Rights," in Amherst College's Cole Assembly Room on Wednesday, April 24, at 4:30 p.m. Cole Assembly Room is located in Converse Hall.

Career Days:
Working with Children & Theater
Love theater?
Like kids?
Come to the Department of Theater's Career Days Panel to hear from people who've combined these two interests.
Featuring: Alumni and students who have worked as performers touring in educational programs, teachers, drama coaches, and as performers & technicians in children's theater groups. They will answer questions about their work, pros and cons of the job, how they prepared, and advice for those thinking about heading up the same career path.
Scheduled to participate: David Zucker, Zach Falcon, Cindy Kohler, Tim Matos
Thursday, April 18, 4-6pm
Rand Lobby
Free, open to Five College students
Food: Sandwich buffet
This event is sponsored by the UMass Department of Theater, The Humanities and Fine Arts Careers Office and the Alumni Association
UMASS

www.dailycollegian.commoc.noipelloolyliob.www
College Self-Storage
Monthly/Annual Rentals
College Payment Plans
Minutes From Campus
Electronic Card Access
Security Fenced Perimeter
Multi-Size Units
Route 9, Belchertown
323-9792

CINEMARK
The Best Seat in Town
CINEMARK AT HAMPSHIRE MALL
367 Russell St. 413-587-4233
Schedule for Friday 4/12 - Thursday 4/18
DIGITAL SURROUND SOUND IN ALL AUDITORIUMS
Purchase Tickets Online @ cinemark.com
CHANGING LANES (R) 12:05 4:05 7:25 10:30
THE SWEETEST THING (R) 12:20 4:10 7:20 10:00
HIGH CRIMES (PG13) 12:25 4:20 7:15 10:05
NATIONAL LAMPOONS VANVUILDER (R) 12:45 4:35 7:50 10:15
BIG TROUBLE (PG13) 4:10 10:15
PANIC ROOM (R) 12:40 4:30 7:40 10:35
MONSTERS BALL (R) 12:30 4:40 7:35 10:25
THE ROOKIE (G) 12:25 4:00 7:10 10:10
DEATH TO SMOOCHY (R) 12:50 4:45 7:45 10:20
GHOSTBUSTERS (PG) 12:55 4:25 7:05 9:30
BLADE 2 (R) 12:15 4:15 7:00 9:45
ICE AGE (PG) 12:10 2:15 4:25 6:45 9:00
LORD OF THE RINGS (PG13) 12:00 6:30*
*Sensor Movie 4/18/02
PANIC ROOM doors open at 11:45am
• NO PASSES, NO SUPERPLAYERS.
Tickets & Showtimes available at cinemark.com

LIQUORS 44
½ KEG COORS LIGHT $48.99 + DEP
½ KEG BUD, BUD LIGHT, MICHELOB, MICH. LIGHT $50.99 + DEP
½ KEG NATURAL LIGHT & ICE $41.99 + DEP
½ KEG BERKSHIRE BREWING $88.99 + DEP
COORS LIGHT & COORS 30 12OZ CANS $18.49 12 PACK
BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT 30 12OZ CANS $12.99 12 PACK
PABST BLUE RIBBON 30 12OZ CANS $11.99 12 PACK
BUD & BUD LIGHT 24 12OZ BOTTLES $18.99 + DEP CASE
Corona & CORONA LIGHT 12PK BOTTLES $9.99 12 PACK
MAGIC HAT 6PK BOTTLES $5.99 1 PACK
BECK'S & BECK'S DARK 12PK BOTTLES $10.99 12 PACK
SMIRNOFF ICE 12PK BOTTLES $10.99 12 PACK
WOODBRIDGE WINES $10.99
GEORGES DUBOEUF $7.99
GLASS MOUNTAIN $6.99
KENDALL JACKSON $9.99
DUNNEWOOD WINES $10.99
HOGUE FUME BLANC $5.99
CORBETT CANYON WHITE ZINFANDEL $4.49
FRANZIA WINES $6.99
SKYY VODKA $21.99
BACARDI LIMON & 'O' RUM $10.49
GORDON'S GIN $14.99
TGIF BLENDERS $11.99
GLENLIVET SINGLE MALT SCOTCH $26.99
FLEISCHMANN'S PREFERRED WHISKEY $11.99
JACK DANIELS $16.99
POLAND SPRINGS VODKA $9.49
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
FULL REDEMPTION AT ALL LOCATIONS
DON'T DRINK & DRIVE

Rental Office
1040 N.Pleasant St. #410
Amherst, MA 01002
413.549.0145
NEW PUFFTON VILLAGE
Serving All Of Your Rental Needs

CAPE COD POTATO CHIP
KAPLAN 1-800-KAP-TEST kaptest.com
Coca-Cola
DROP OFF REGISTRATION BY FRI. 19TH, SKINNER 201
HEALTHSOUTH®
The new balance Haigis Hoopla
University of Massachusetts Sport Management Program
APRIL 27 + 28, 2002
WWW.HAIGISHOOPLA.COM
DON'T MISS OUT! TRAVELLING MATT PERFORMING SUNDAY
NEW BALANCE HAIGIS HOOPLA OFFICE
201 SKINNER HALL
(413) 545-5689
Inside STUFF
SPALDING
COLLEGIAN
Ultimate
UMASS FOOD SERVICES
mass live.com
new balance
PURE ROCK LAZER 99.7
Burns Y Sons
NANTUCKET NECTARS

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM "WRITING IS A WORLD UNTO ITSELF, BUT THE ONLY TRUE MEETING-PLACE IS FELLOWSHIP" ED/OP EDITOR: MATTHEW DESPRES

Middle East is coming

Time for us to host

(This story from Colorado State University is particularly relevant in keeping with current world events and situations here at the University of Massachusetts. We offer it as an outside opinion.)

(U-WIRE) FORT COLLINS, Colo. – "If you don't visit the Middle East, it will visit you," Meirav Eilon Shahar, the Israeli consul for communications and public affairs for the Western U.S., said to me in an interview earlier this year.

True.

With the Israeli-Palestinian conflict in a bloodstained stalemate, suicide terrorists training worldwide to battle the United States and too little resources being dedicated by the U.S. government in the field of alternative fuel, the Middle East is suffocating us in 2002, and America won't be breathing easier any time soon.

Now we know how they must feel.

Regardless of political affiliation, religious beliefs or social ideology, education on Middle Eastern culture, history and politics might be the only weapons Colorado State University students will find effective in this conflict of cultures that promises to stay with us like an unshakable shadow for a long time to come.

The obvious first step to educating ourselves on the Middle East is not only to read the papers and watch the news, but also to enroll in classes that might be helpful in explaining some of the conflicts. But unfortunately, this is not as easy as it sounds.

The CSU Fall 2002 class schedule, I was disappointed with the amount of opportunities the University has made available to achieve this goal.

Combining all courses offered in ethnic studies, history, international studies, foreign language, journalism, philosophy, political science and literature, only two classes – Islamic World to the 1500s and Modern Middle East – dedicate the entire curriculum to this most important area of the world.

Immediately following Sept. 11, several Ivy League schools created courses focusing on the Middle East, terrorism and several related issues. These classes became some of the most popular on campus, with non-enrolled students often attending just to gain some knowledge.

Although professors and textbooks have prejudice on any topic, it's usually relatively easy to disseminate the information provided in a class atmosphere where discussion is the vertebrate of learning. Communication, or lack thereof, is the Grand Canyon that must be crossed to improve relations between the West and the Middle East. This communication can be initiated in the classroom, using class discussions to spark debate, to weigh opposing views and to learn to respect other's opinions.

The Middle East has hosted America for decades; now's the time where we must learn to greet the Middle East.

U-Wire Editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

UMass Intramural Office:

Judge, jury, and executioner

SAM WILKINSON

If you asked your friends, I bet they don't know anybody suspended from intramural sports for life. I certainly didn't, at least until I got my suspension.

I threw my jersey at a referee. My team had been forced to play in the playoffs with only four players (we had a fifth but he didn't have the proper identification) and even though the other team said they didn't care if we played even up, the referee did.

"Wasn't fair," he blustered. "Can't do it. Impossible."

So we played four against five, and, this shouldn't be a huge surprise, got totally annihilated. The other team was trying to dunk there at the end, and shooting the three until the very end of the game. Nothing like sportsmanlike play when winning by more than thirty.

The referee had no problem with any of this – as far as he was concerned, there was nothing wrong with a four-against-five (plus the team's reserves) basketball game that turned into a circus sideshow. He also didn't understand why anyone on our team might be miffed that we could have played fairly and he wouldn't allow it.

When I asked him afterward if he thought everything was fair, he played stupid and said he was "only following the rules."

So I followed the rules about giving my jersey back to him, except I threw it over my shoulder as I was walking away and it hit him in the face.

What I did was stupid. There is no denying that.

But the Intramural Office couldn't settle for frustration. This was a heinous attack against one of its more inept officials. So I got my letter asking me to please appear for a hearing.

Gladly.

I called as soon as possible and set up a meeting time. I was excited, as I have had frequent problems with intramural officials. When I arrived Friday, others sinners joined me. They had mouthed off to officials, although, near as I could tell, nobody had done anything as stupid as throw a jersey.

We talked about what we'd say and joked about what we'd done.

My hearing was first.

An intramural hearing works like this – ten people you might recognize from playing come into a room with you and with big round innocent eyes, they stare at you until you want to apologize. Zulma Garcia runs the proceeding, and all intramural sports. She did most of the talking.

Here is what is supposed I was supposed to say.

"At that basketball game, I was unnecessarily competitive. The desire to win overtook me and I let myself get out of control. Getting whipped on a basketball court playing a man down wouldn't make anybody else angry and I was wrong to get on our team might be miffed that we could have played fairly and he wouldn't allow it.

When I asked him afterward if he thought everything was fair, he played stupid and said he was "only following the rules."

So I followed the rules about giving my jersey back to him, except I threw it over my shoulder as I was walking away and it hit him in the face.

What I did was stupid, but no, I didn't lose sleep over what I did. There are far more important things in the world to worry about.

And if I was forced to play another team four on five even though that team wanted to play straight up and we had a fifth, I'd probably get that angry again, especially if that team chose to run up the score again in the last five minutes. I'm not going to sit here and pretend that it wouldn't make me angry."

I remain confident that this is not the answer those people in that room expected. I remain confident that every single intramural athlete who has gone in that room knew what the right answer was and they gave it. I also remain confident that nobody who went in that room has ever genuinely meant what they said.

When I gave my answer, I was asked if I was particularly interested in playing intramurals again. So I told them I was graduating in eight weeks, so I wouldn't exactly be sobbing if I didn't. Which they didn't want to hear.

Deciding that I'd be a danger to any softball umpires I might be near, and because I refused to lie about what I did, I have been suspended from all Intramural sporting activity, from now until forever.

When I left the room, I ran into the same guys from before and shook my head at them. I told them that all they needed to do was lie and things would be fine for them.

"Just prostrate yourself and you'll be ok."

So they did. And they are playing.

Sam Wilkinson is a Collegian Columnist.

Piping hot ed/op's.
Served daily at www.dailycollegian.com.

Introducing John Lombardi, Chancellor

Give Lombardi a chance

JAMIE LOO

Before you think this school is going to hell in a crate of Florida oranges, hold that thought. Things might not be as bleak as they seem.

Last week President Bulger announced that he was supporting John V. Lombardi to become the next chancellor of the Amherst campus. Lombardi, who is the former president of the University of Florida, came to campus a few weeks ago amidst some controversy over his "record." I spoke to many people after the chancellor search meeting who were not very impressed by the way he answered the questions, including the controversial question about RAs unionizing. Lombardi dodged the question five separate times during the meeting.

I emailed professors of journalism and The Independent Florida Alligator (www.alligator.org), the student-run daily newspaper on the UF campus to see if I could find out more about Lombardi. Professors William McKeen and Jean Chance provided me with some insight and though reporters at The Independent Florida Alligator were not comfortable commenting on Lombardi's record, they sent me links to various articles in their archives. So is this former Florida Gator going to chomp up and spit out the Massachusetts Minutemen?

OK. I'll stop the Florida puns for a moment and give you the nitty-gritty.

I didn't find this shady record that supposedly existed. Lombardi's time at UF seems to be littered with accomplishments. During his 10 years at UF he helped in nearly doubling UF's budget and created an ambitious capital campaign. There were huge gains in SAT scores and in female and minority enrollment. He also helped to establish the McKnight Brain Institute at the University of Florida, which is a leading international research and education center regarding brain and spine related diseases. It seems as though most of the concern lies in the judgments that Lombardi made for the University of Florida that people at UMass think may not be good for this campus.

Privatization on campus has been a hot issue for quite some time. The UC campus student union houses Wendy's, which has the highest volume of sales in the state, according to McKeen. McKeen said "students line up butt-to-bellybutton to dine at the trough, though, and the former dining-hall-of-the dead is now packed with students eating Wendy's, Subway, Chinese food and health food.

Professor Chance put the issue into a bigger perspective, saying that privatization at public universities isn't a unique phenomenon. "Not at most underfunded state universities that feel they have had to pay this price to balance their budgets," she said. I've never been a supporter of privatization at UMass, but Chance makes it sound really tempting.

Another concern is Lombardi's sensitivity to diversity. Lombardi made a comment at a Christmas party in 1997, where he called the incoming state university chancellor an "Oreo," a derogatory term for a black person who tries to act like a white person.

Lombardi publicly apologized for this comment and was pressured by the Board of Regents to resign. It was an incident that certainly has not been forgotten, and will definitely follow him onto this campus. But it seems that many at UF forgave him. McKeen said that a few days after the story broke 2,000 students were outside of the president's house rallying to keep him.

I was completely shocked by this idea. I think the Red Sox will win the World Series before UMass students actually show up to rally in support of a campus administrator. The Independent Florida Alligator reported a few comments from black student leaders who were not supportive, one who even said it showed Lombardi's "true colors." This is a tough issue, and UMass students will need to deal with it maturely.

Over his entire career at UF, it seems that Lombardi was well liked by the students. According to The Independent Florida Alligator, Lombardi was known to drive around campus in his red 1985 GMC truck. Last week the newspaper actually ran a front-page story on Bulger's decision and the possibility of Lombardi coming to UMass. The outgoing student body president at UF, Marc Adler said, "His leadership is unparalleled. I hope the students at Amherst know just how great a person they are going to have."

McKeen said Lombardi is "astoundingly student friendly," and would walk through campus carrying his stuff in a backpack. "It amazed me how many students he knew by name. Students loved him – probably more so than faculty," said McKeen. Chance said that Lombardi was a very visible president who enthusiastically participated in student activities. The most participation I ever saw out of Chancellor Scott at a student activity was showing protesting students out of his office.

Lombardi's administration was not definitely not be ignored. He was criticized for being very political and often openly challenged legislators and the Board of Regents at UF. "Diplomacy was not his strongest suit. Staff cronyism became an issue that divided the faculty. Efforts to increase low faculty salaries never materialized in the same fashion that increases for administrators mushroomed," said Chance. Hmmm…I wonder what Lombardi would say about the SGA's Fair Share Act. Whoever actually becomes chancellor will be in for a rough ride because Massachusetts politics is a very different battlefield.

Something that stood out in my research was a comment Lombardi made concerning UF's tradition of naming buildings after their former presidents. The Independent Florida Alligator reported that the most recent buildings on the UF campus being named for people who have given monetary gifts to the campus. Because of this earning potential Lombardi said if anything he would prefer the campus map kiosk near the corner of 13th Street and University Avenue named after him. He is quoted in The Florida Independent Alligator saying, "My enthusiasm for my name on a building is pretty low. That little kiosk out there would be fine. It's very useful."

I think it is safe to say that we should put away the orange peelers and juicers for the time being. The flagship University of Florida at Gainesville has over 40,000 students, while we have approximately 18,000.

UF is near the Equator, we're closer to the North Pole. The Campus Pond has ducks, fish, and swans; UF has Lake Alice, home to alligators and bats.

UMass-Amherst and the University of Florida are both very different campuses with very different needs.

Lombardi is well educated and has a ton of experience running a large university. If he is everything his colleagues in Florida say he is – competent, ambitious, student friendly, a true leader – he will make the correct decisions for this campus. For UMass and not for UF. When it comes to running a university. The Independent Florida Alligator quoted him saying, "Change now, change today, always change for the better." I'm sure he'll carry this philosophy with him to UMass. We just need to give him a chance.

Jamie Loo is a Collegian Columnist.

Tough leader is what's needed

DAN LAMOTHE

So UMass finally has a chancellor. Now that the Board of Trustees has gone through the formalities, we've got ourselves a boss man. A fearless leader, if you will.

Coming soon to a UMass campus nearest you, Mr. John Lombardi – fund-raising extraordinaire, Latin American historian, and without a doubt, a future royal pain in the ass for many here on campus.

Make no bones about it. Lombardi's got a reputation for being "tough." High-ranking members of the UMass community are behind closed doors right now fretting their new boss's reputation as a "my-way-or-the-highway" kind of guy.

This is somewhat understandable. People nearly always are afraid of change.

But in all seriousness, isn't that why we brought this guy in?

President Bulger hired Lombardi, according to the press release, because he is "equal parts visionary and skillful, exacting manager." Let's break down the exacting manager part. Exacting, according to my good buddies Merriam and Webster, means "severe in making demands."

And this is why Lombardi was hired. He wasn't hired to be anyone's friend – he was hired to call the shots. Hiring a pushover would be pointless and harmful to the University. It doesn't really matter if the others in UMass administration like Lombardi. It matters if they respect them. We need a dynamic person in charge, and we've suffered in the past when we've been without one.

Memo to UMass administration: John's the boss and you're not. Deal with it.

Decisions have to be made, and Bulger has brought in someone who has made similar decisions in the past with remarkably successful results. If administration doesn't fight him too much, maybe Lombardi can help to dig us out of the massive pile of crap that we're buried under.

All that we can really say right now is that it's going to be damn interesting. By all accounts positive and negative, Lombardi is a dynamic personality, a leader. Most dynamic personalities have a love 'em or hate 'em relationships with the people they deal with. As in, we're either going to love this guy, or we're going to hate him.

People that disliked Lombardi as president of the University of Florida didn't like the fact that he called things as he saw them and because he wasn't afraid to do things that were unorthodox. His Oreo crack (he called the incoming state university chancellor an Oreo for being black on the outside and white on the inside) is politically incorrect, to say the least. Lombardi also angered members on the University of Florida Board of Regents for directly lobbying legislators for increases in funding rather than going through the "appropriate" channels.

But look at the positives. We've got ourselves a real live person doing this job. And while it's going to be easy to make fun of Lombardi if he continues to drive around his 1985 piece-of-shinola pick-up truck, it shows that the man is probably a little bit more like the rest of us and a little bit less like the pretty faces running the show at UMass right now. Lombardi hasn't just been about kissing babies and shaking hands in the past, so there are no reasons to believe that he will be here. He takes stands on things he believes in, opinions be damned, and sticks with them.

What's wrong with that?

As a big-time fundraiser, Lombardi helped to push annual giving at the University of Florida from $55 million in 1990 to $155 million in his last year on campus there, 1999. Isn't that something we could use on our financially strapped campus?

Buildings went up left and right at Florida with Lombardi running the show there. New dorms, a student recreation center and softball complex, a dining hall, a chemistry building, a physics building, and several parking garages – all were built under Lombardi. This isn't to say he's single-handedly responsible for their construction or anything ridiculous like that. But it was his school. He had a hand in it on some level. Couldn't UMass use some repairs, at the very least? I mean, LOOK at the place.

Lombardi doesn't have the answer to all of our problems. He's not going to pull up in that red GMC of his and pull a magic fix-UMass-eliver out of his pocket. More than likely, we're going to think he's an idiot here and there on some of the decisions that he makes or some of the things that he says.

But look at the man's record. It's filled with all sorts of accomplishments, healthy trends, and positive statistics and tangible things that he's had a hand in creating elsewhere.

So what, Lombardi is going to change some things and lock some horns. Couldn't that be for the better?

Dan Lamothe is a Collegian Columnist.

You want your name in print? Write something, silly. @comments, letters, and column submissions are welcomed. Send yours to collegianeditorial@yahoo.com.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS & LIVING

Strong, independent and kick boo-tay

WOMEN

"SO, YOU'RE A SLAYER, HUH? I LIKE THAT IN A WOMAN."

By Melissa the Hammel Slayer and Mike the Kulak Demon
COLLEGIAN STAFF

"Come on, we fight monsters, this is what we do. They show up, they scare us, I beat them up, and they go away." – Buffy

Since she hit the small screen with a kick and a stake, Buffy Summers of "Buffy the Vampire Slayer" fame has secured her place in television history as a heroine that kicks butt.

So she may be a 5'2" blond ex-cheerleader, but she can take care of business when it comes to fighting the demon world. The show, which is now in its sixth season, features Sarah Michelle Gellar as the 21-year-old Buffy, a slayer called to dust vampires while she goes to school and holds down a job. Xena the Warrior Princess she is not, but she does manage to take down Dracula and join a military initiative once she hits college.

To recap Buffy's journey to demon-fighting stardom, after being kicked out of her high school, Buffy moves to Sunnydale where she meets a slew of unlikely allies who will later be dubbed the 'scoobies.' We see the insecure high school girl come out as she tries (and fails) to be popular, but this does not hinder her ability to kick demon butt. She vanquishes invisible girls, praying mantis demons, the ghosts of Hansel and Gretel, the evil mayor and even her own boyfriend. She withstands all the forces of evil surrounding her, and manages to pass chemistry.

Why does she kick butt?

Well, that's easy. Not only has she dated a 200-year-old vampire with a pretty bad mean streak but she can do a nice karate kick and oust a couple of computer-generated monsters. Beyond that, she has died twice during her stint as vampire slayer and still manages to come back alive and kicking. That is worth points, isn't it?

Alright, call the show cheesy if you like, but where else do you get to see a character who kills a bunch of bad guys in a dress and a pair of knee-high boots? She also manages to take care of her friends and family as well as making the world safer for strangers.

What possibly makes the show even more unique is the fact that Buffy is backed up by a series of strong female characters. The men in this show are basically useless; they are shown doing all the research and a little bit of hand-to-hand combat.

Buffy's magic-yielding buddies Tara and Willow manage to do spells that change people into rats and restore lost souls. Even better, part of her gang includes Anya, a vengeance demon turned monster killer who spent the better part of a century making men around the world completely miserable in every way possible.

The bottom line is that the show never sells the female characters short. It trusts them with central roles and allows their characters to change and grow throughout the series. Rather than relying on men to do all of the fighting scenes, it features female characters that can take care of themselves in every way. It pushes the envelope in the way that women are portrayed in action shows on television.

After all, the slayer is always a female. Coincidence? We think not.

Are you talkin' to me?

Artists who kick booty

(Names you should know, but probably don't)

By Julie Burrell
COLLEGIAN STAFF

You've heard of Monet, but have you heard of Morisot? Unless you've taken an art history class, it's likely that you haven't. Women have made major contributions in art. That fact shouldn't surprise anyone, and yet the most famous artists, all the big names in movements and the makers of masterpieces are almost all men.

So, here's a meager list of the big names in art history that you might not know (but should):

Artemisia Gentileschi (c. 1593-1653) was an Italian Baroque painter. She is considered the first woman to have lived as a professional artist. She worked alongside her father, Orazio, in his studio. They were followers of Caravaggio, perhaps the most well known of the Baroque artists.

Monet. Renoir. Degas. They're the big names of Impressionism. During this time of revolutionary change in art, women were right there, changing and shaping art. Mary Cassatt and Berthe Morisot were extraordinary in that they defied tradition and chose art as a profession.

Berthe Morisot (1841 - 1895) exhibited in all but one of the Impressionists shows; she influenced Edouard Manet - one of the most important artists in the development of Impressionism and notable influences on her work - in his color palette.

Mary Cassatt (1844-1926) also showed her work at the famous Impressionist exhibits. She was the only American artist invited to do so. She moved within the Impressionist circle with her friend, Edgar Degas. She is renowned for

Turn to ART page 6

ALL NEON LIKE

By Michael Delano
COLLEGIAN STAFF

People sometimes, annoyingly, say: hey, his or her voice is so good, they could recite the phonebook and I'd listen! Hey, I wouldn't, unless it was Björk. Although she hasn't recited the phonebook (for domestic release, anyways), she has sung a song written entirely in numbers and performed a song entirely about looking for her keys. In terms of finding bliss in the banal, those are close enough for me, and both are a lot cooler than the phonebook.

Björk sounds like she has the sun in her mouth, which is appropriate since she has a song titled "Sun In My Mouth." Her voice can shoot forth and stretch outward in long, cartoony beams of light. Those bursts can be frozen and left to shimmer in the electronic fuzz that often surrounds them. Her voice can be warm and inviting, and just as often it can be so abrasive as to leave you with a nasty burn. It's always radiating with life and energy. In fact, on "Heirloom," Björk sings that she has a recurrent dream where she swallows "warm glowing lights." Her voice is like a flashlight, illuminating the soundscapes she has laid down, peering into every little crevice.

If it was B's sunny side that dominated her first two solo albums, Debut and Post, her moony, tranquil side is the one on display for most of her last two. The cover of Homogenic finds her dressed in a cold, icy kimono, while last year's Vespertine is a black and white close-up, obscured by an intricate overlaying pattern. The images mirror the sounds; the jittery, escalating beats of "Hunter" making way for the intimate "Cocoon" and the anthemic feel of "All Is Full of Love" morphing into the more focused and personal "Unison." Björk's voice on these two albums is also much more comfortable and commanding at softer levels. "Unravel" is the calmest, most hopeful and beautiful ode to separation anxiety imaginable, while the refrain of "I love him" in "Pagan Poetry" is unnerving in its blatant honesty and emotion.

While Björk's voice is praised to no end, and her music nearly always revered as creative and progressive, her lyrics are oftentimes shrugged off

Turn to BJORK, page 7

Shauna Billings is a Collegian staff member

■ art

continued from page 5

capturing the everyday life of women and children — mainly, because she was restricted to these subjects and could not easily frequent the cafes of her male contemporaries.

Augustin Savage (1892-1962) is known mostly for her sculpture, but also portrait painting, poetry and teaching. She a major figure in African American art. UMass named a gallery after her, located in the New Africa House. From a young age her father discouraged her from creating art. But she then moved to Harlem, sculpted, and created a school for young artists. But because she couldn't afford to cast her work in bronze, only 19 of her sculptures are still in existence.

Frida Kahlo (1907-1954), the Mexican painter, is known for her largely autobiographical work unflinching self-portraits depicting pain –and is often connected to or grouped in with Surrealism. She was in a bus accident that left her in incessant pain. She was married to the artist Diego Rivera, who got plenty of recognition in his lifetime, while she was renowned mainly after her death. She and Rivera moved in radical circles, and she was a Communist all of her life.

Cindy Sherman (b. 1954) is a contemporary American photographer. In her most famous series, she casts herself as the subject of her photographs, posing as characters from B movies, exploring depictions of women in the 1950s and 1960s.

Frida Kahlo's "The Two Fridas," 1939

TAPESTRY Health
Affordable and Confidential
• Gyn Exams
• Birth Control
• Pregnancy Testing
• Emergency Contraception
• HIV/STD Testing
• Quit Smoking
Bangs Center, 70 Boltwood Walk, Amherst
16 Center Street, Northampton
(413) 586-2539 or
www.tapestryhealth.org

413.883.1144
Chance Perspective
Entertainment Co.
Graduation Parties
Private Parties
UMass Discount
Hip-Hop
Reggae
R&B

Thursday Night is.....
COLLEGE NIGHT
9pm - Midnight
Each Person Receives:
3 hours of Bowling
Shoe Rental
Music & Light Show
COME JOIN THE FUN AT
Northampton Bowl
525 Pleasant St., Northampton, MA
584-4830
www.northamptonbowl.com

Four Seasons Wine & Liquor
Home of the 50 lb bag of ICE
Largest selection of Cigars in Hadley and Amherst.
Special Orders Welcome
BEER WINE LIQUOR ICE
KEGS CIGARS CLOVES
CIGARETTES TOBACCO
Amex, Disc, MC, Visa, Debit Accepted
333 Russell Street (Route 9)
Hadley, MA
Hours Mon-Sat, 9am-11pm
(413)584-5774

THRILL SEEKERS
We have anumber of exotic cars that need to be test-driven by individuals who are willing to take risks. Great career opportunity for individuals 18+ with valid medical insurance. For more information go to www.testdriveinfo.com

Happy Birthday to the...
Man Of My Dreams
XOXO Erica
I Love You Adam

North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
www.northamherstmotors.com
549-RENT
OOPS!
POTTERS
AUTO & TRUCK RENTALS
• Cars • Mini Vans
• Trucks • SUV's
• Cargo Vans
• 15 Passenger Vans
• Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older
• Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
• MHEC Rates
(On bus route)

WE'RE STILL ON!
WWW.HAIGISHOOPLA.COM
TEAM REGISTRATION DEADLINE
THIS FRIDAY, APRIL 19TH.
FEATURING LIVE MUSIC ON SUNDAY INCLUDING UMASS NATIVES TRAVELING MATT
new balance Haigis Hoopla
NEW BALANCE HAIGIS
HOOPLA OFFICE
201 SKINNER HALL
(413) 545-5689
Special Thanks to the division of Applied Management & CPNE for their donation of time and many additional support to the new Balance Haigis Hoopla.
Coca-Cola
UMASS FOOD SERVICES
KAPLAN
new balance
PURE ROCK LIVE
inside STUFF
The Massachusetts Daily COLLEGIAN

Topley's lame blues

By Dan Catalinatto
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

WILLIAM TOPLEY
Feasting With Panthers
Lost Highway Records

Blues music, at its best, is raw and fierce. The sliding guitars and jumpy pianos, the gruff voices, the bleak stories of death and sex and violence, they all get to the real core of human existence. The best blues music, despite its apparent simplicity of form, speaks with wisdom and clarity not found anywhere else. For blues musicians, songwriting gets right down to business: tell a story, beautiful or disastrous, and pour everything you can into making it mean something.

For so long, blues was the deep root of American music, inspiring the creation of rock and roll and soul, which took standard blues ideas, smoothed them out and turned up the volume. As these forms of music grew more decadent, blues was poised to continue to stand as the dark conscience of the nation. But, sadly, in the years since its appropriation by rock and rollers, most blues music has been whittled down from something powerful and dangerous into a bland and sterile genre.

The new record by William Topley, Feasting With Panthers, is a fine example of everything that's wrong with modern blues music. Let's catalogue the mistakes: the ambient guitar picking, the light string arrangements in the background, the dead harmonica solos, the misguided horn arrangements. Topley sings with an overemotional voice, trying too hard to sound like Van Morrison or Leonard Cohen. The experimentations in rap and reggae and the attempts to add something to the standard blues arrangements all fall flat and suck the life out of the record. It's really not worth saying too much about this album, because it leaves as deep an impression as anything you'd hear in an elevator or on the other end of the phone when you're put on hold.

When did blues go so wrong? What happened to the music that sparked the creation of some of most powerful rock 'n' roll? What happened to the violent breakdowns and the sweet melodies? Turn on a blues radio station now, and every new song sounds the same: puppy and bland. We can trace this de-evolution back to the 1970s, when the L.A. sound of blues took over. Los Angeles blues, performed mostly by white musicians, was always the pop-

Turn to TOPLEY, page 7

Survivor's legacy

Eco-crap

Get ready "Survivor" fans; another clone of your favorite show is on the way. "Eco-Challenge," from "Survivor" creator Mark Burnett, begins April 21 at 8 p.m. on the USA Network.

But what is the "Eco-Challenge" you dare ask? According to zap2it.com, "67 teams from 23 countries will race across the South Island of New Zealand. The teams will be racing 24 hours a day for 12 straight days and will be required to cross 220 miles by mountaineering, using fixed ropes, rafting, mountain biking and horseback riding — in short, they are allowed to only use non-motorized forms of transportation to reach their goal."

The entire series is a "four night event," broadcast through April 24, mostly because the USA Network has nothing better to put on those nights. The entire Eco-Challenge will also be broadcast straight through on Sunday, April 28 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., so there is still time to clear your schedule to allow for six hours of eco-viewing fun. Actress Holly Hunter is the show's narrator.

Crazy Train

Last week's "Tube Notes" isn't the only place where MTV's latest reality endeavor "The Osbournes" has received praise. After being featured on the cover of last week's "Entertainment Weekly" and last week's episode garnering nearly six million viewers (among the highest in MTV history), "The Osbournes" is the talk of the television world. Just this past week "The Prince of Darkness" Ozzy had his star placed on the "Hollywood Walk of Fame."

Due to its success, talk of a second season has begun. However, it isn't the shoe-in that many expect. Reportedly, the Osbourne family has grown weary of the tourist attention that their Los Angeles house (where the show is set) has received since the show's debut. It is possible that a possible second season could be filmed at the family's home in England, to reduce the tourist frenzy around their home in Southern California.

Also, it is believed that Sharon Osbourne, the show's "star" mother and Executive Producer, is requesting payment in the high seven figures per episode (for the entire cast, not individually). Currently, MTV pays the family $20,000 dollars per episode. The seventh episode of thirteen this season aired this past Tuesday night.

It certainly makes sense for both MTV and The Osbourne Family to produce a second season. MTV has a hit on their hands. Meanwhile, Ozzy's popularity is rising every week, and the show has undoubtedly exposed him to millions that normally wouldn't be inclined to buy his albums or attend his raucous concerts. Plus, the show is helping to repair Ozzy's "psycho" image in the mainstream. Well, maybe a little bit.

That concludes this week's abridged addition of "Tube Notes." But hey, size doesn't matter, remember that!

Kurt Polesky is a Collegian staff member.

■ Bjork

continued from page 5

as the weakest link in her arsenal. While her writing is, sometimes, rather silly, it's always endearing, all the more so in her most head-scratching lines. And most of the time it's just brilliant. Ceaselessly economical, Björk scales down her words to the bare minimum, giving every surviving word royal emphasis. Her delivery is never predictable, and even lyrics you may have shrugged off upon reading can resonate totally differently after hearing how she interprets them.

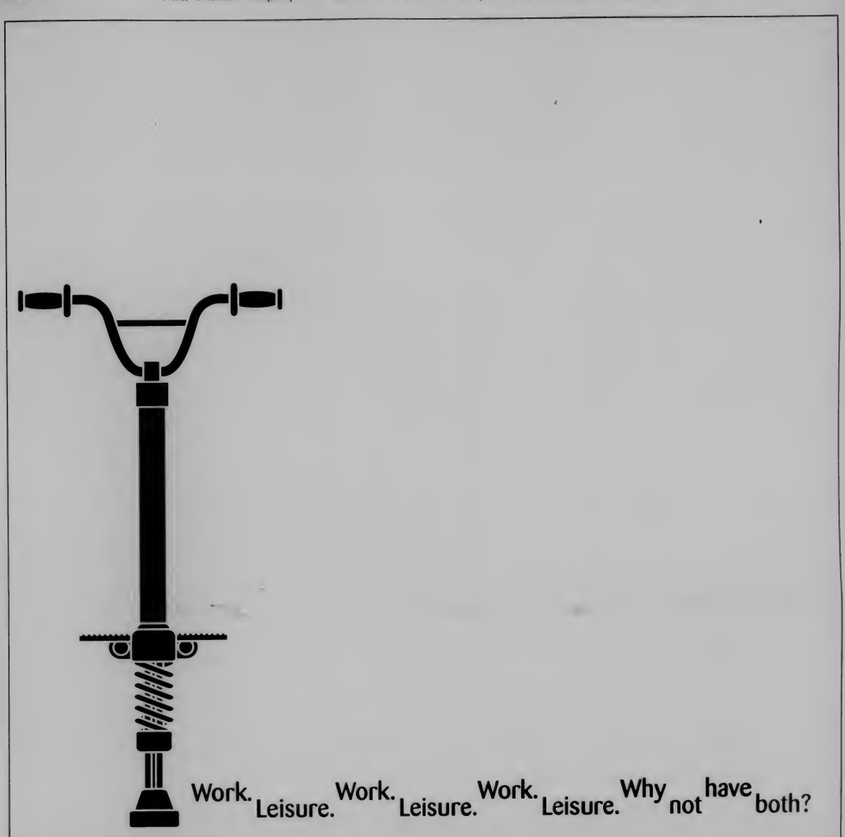
No, her lyrics don't reach much further than love, but all you need is love, right? And love pops up in Björk's writing in every possible form. Love of friends, family, the world, humanity, another person (quite often), confused love, angry love, unrequited love, mutual love, and love of love. "All is full of love," says Björk, so if "you just ain't receiving," all you need to do is open yourself up, 'cause "it's all around you."

There are many strong female artists that try their best to be like successful male artists, and there are just as many strong female artists that like to sing endlessly about being strong female artists. Björk goes the 'show don't tell' route. She's never tried to be anything but brutally honest with her audience, and she's always been herself, no matter where it takes her. Male or female, the best thing anyone can ever be is genuine.

"And remember that depth is the greatest of heights..." –Fiona Apple

Björk

■ Topley



continued from page 6

piest, the most willing to sacrifice the hard edge for the folksy melodies of the West Coast scene. Yet, at the same time, L.A. blues worshipped the heavy guitar solo, and songwriting suffered. The song itself wasn't important; it was the ripping solo at the end that proved a blues man's worth. If you kept the beat going until the end, it was good enough.

When punk and rock and roll (and eventually rap) became the hard-edged music of America's youth, too many blues musicians felt they had to change their music to adapt to the musical climate of the nation. Enter the synthesizer and the fake drums and the horn sections and the breathy vocals. Exit any credibility popular blues ever had. Needless to say, the results were pretty gruesome, and blues has taken a creative back seat to most other music for a couple of decades now.

So what's the solution? There IS good blues being made out there, lurking in the shadows, or hiding in rock and roll costumes. For deeper stuff, get a hold of some R.L. Burnside, some T. Model Ford or anything on Fat Possum Records. They're two old-timers who turn the age-old blues beats and grooves into something that can speak to this day and age. Taj Mahal does the blues-folk mix pretty well, and keeps it real.

Don't get me wrong; experimentation is not a bad thing. The John Spencer Blues Explosion and The White Stripes have both proven themselves capable of bringing the force and power of old blues into the future by rocking it damn hard, and twisting it in interesting directions. Whatever you do, just don't go around thinking William Topley is all that's left of an incredible American musical invention.

FORTUNE 100 BEST COMPANIES TO WORK FOR 2002

What does a job at Ernst & Young give you? The best of both worlds. After all, the focus of our business has always been its people, and we are devoted to helping them realize their career goals while encouraging their personal aspirations. The result is you'll be challenged, but you'll also be rewarded. Maybe that's why we've been named one of the "100 Best Companies to Work For," four years in a row. So why not bounce on over and see for yourself?

ERNST YOUNG
FROM THOUGHT TO FINISH.™

©2002 Ernst & Young LLP

Robinson

continued from page 12

Jeremy Robinson

and unlike most safeties, doesn't really lose a step when going back and turning on a play.

Alas, many scouts also see him as inconsistent and sometimes lazy. Not to mention slow against the run and inexperienced in man-to-man coverage. Those negative attributes could be enough to cost Robinson the dream of hearing his name voiced over the ESPN airwaves.

But Robinson trusts it won't be enough to erase his name from a team's roster come late July. Knowing well the rigors that go along with the jump from Division I-AA to the NFL gridiron, Robinson now deals with a powerful reality.

"Some guys are playing for their families, because they have to eat," said Robinson of the urgency that many players in training camps face. "So I have to be able to get ready to play with them."

Draft, or no draft, Robinson still won't be guaranteed a contract. So while a phone call would be nice, it doesn't pledge NFL ascendancy. That comes from busting heads in the month prior to Week 1.

UMass better than BC

Softball tops Eagles

By Andrew Merritt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

When thinking about this year's edition of the Massachusetts softball team, words like unstoppable come to mind.

UMass	5
B.C.	2

Especially after the Minutewomen notched their 19th consecutive win in a 5-2 stomping of Boston College yesterday.

Senior Jennifer Hadley took care of business on the mound, striking out six, walking two, and allowing only five hits. Meanwhile, junior Emily Robustelli starred at the plate, going 3-for-3 with two runs batted in.

UMass exploded in the second inning for four runs, and never looked back.

Junior Kaitla Holtz, working out of the Designated Hitter spot, started off the second inning UMass rally with a single to right center-field. Sophomore Jamie Cahalan followed up with another single. After reaching on a fielder's choice, which also scored Cahalan, sophomore Aisha Franke stole second. Robustelli then lined a shot off of BC pitcher Kim Ryan to reach safely. Senior Teri Rooney capped off the rally with a two-out, two-run single to centerfield.

After that, Hadley kept the Eagles at bay, pitching an almost flawless game, save for the fourth inning, when BC led off with a home run, and scored one more on four total hits for the inning, as well as leaving two more on base.

"Jen did a great job," said Head Coach Elaine Sortino, "she had a rough inning, but it was a good step for her to come back after it." Robustelli's day at the plate was a big part of the victory. After yesterday's performance, the junior is now batting .252 with seven doubles, a triple, a home run and 20 RBI's.

"[Robustelli] has had the roughest last few games," Sortino said. "But she's been smashing the ball. She's just been hitting a lot of balls right at people. Her performance today was phenomenal."

The win brings the Maroon and White's record to 34-10, with that 19-game win streak to boast about. Of course, you'll hear no such thing from Sortino or her troops. When asked whether talk about the streak affects the team, Sortino said, "my job is just to keep them free of all of that."

Sortino also expressed some concern about the team's offense, specifically its "short game." Outside of the second inning, the Minutewomen put up a crooked number only once more, adding a run in the fourth, and only one hit for the rest of the game.

Sortino attributed that to some eagerness at the plate that hurt UMass batters when they came up against BC's reliever, Tekae Malandris, who relieved Ryan after one and two-thirds innings.

"Our execution could be better," Sortino said, "but it's just because we were getting ahead of ourselves. The second pitcher was a little slower, and so our hitters were out in front, and that was causing problems."

However, Sortino was pleased overall with the result.

"Anytime you can ride the bus out of Chestnut Hill with a win," she said. "It's a good thing. It's a tremendous rivalry, it always is with schools like BC, BU, Harvard, all those eastern schools."

However, there will be no rest for the Minutewomen, who face off against Central Connecticut in a doubleheader this afternoon. UMass won't be enjoying the comforts of its home field until Saturday, when it takes on St. Bonaventure.

"It's tough, we're just on the road again," said Sortino, "it's a mental challenge. You don't have time to regroup."

Meanwhile, the Minutewomen bring an impressive record and win streak to New Britain, and they show no signs of slowing down.

lax

continued from page 12

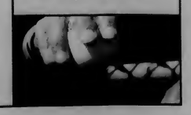
we got a lead early, and I thought that helped us out a lot, because they couldn't slow it down on us."

Fiore and junior Kevin Leveille each finished with hat tricks, with Leveille also adding two assists. Senior Dan Paccione added two goals and a wonderful quickstick assist to freshman Gene Tundo to give UMass an 11-6 lead with 7:22 to go in the third quarter.

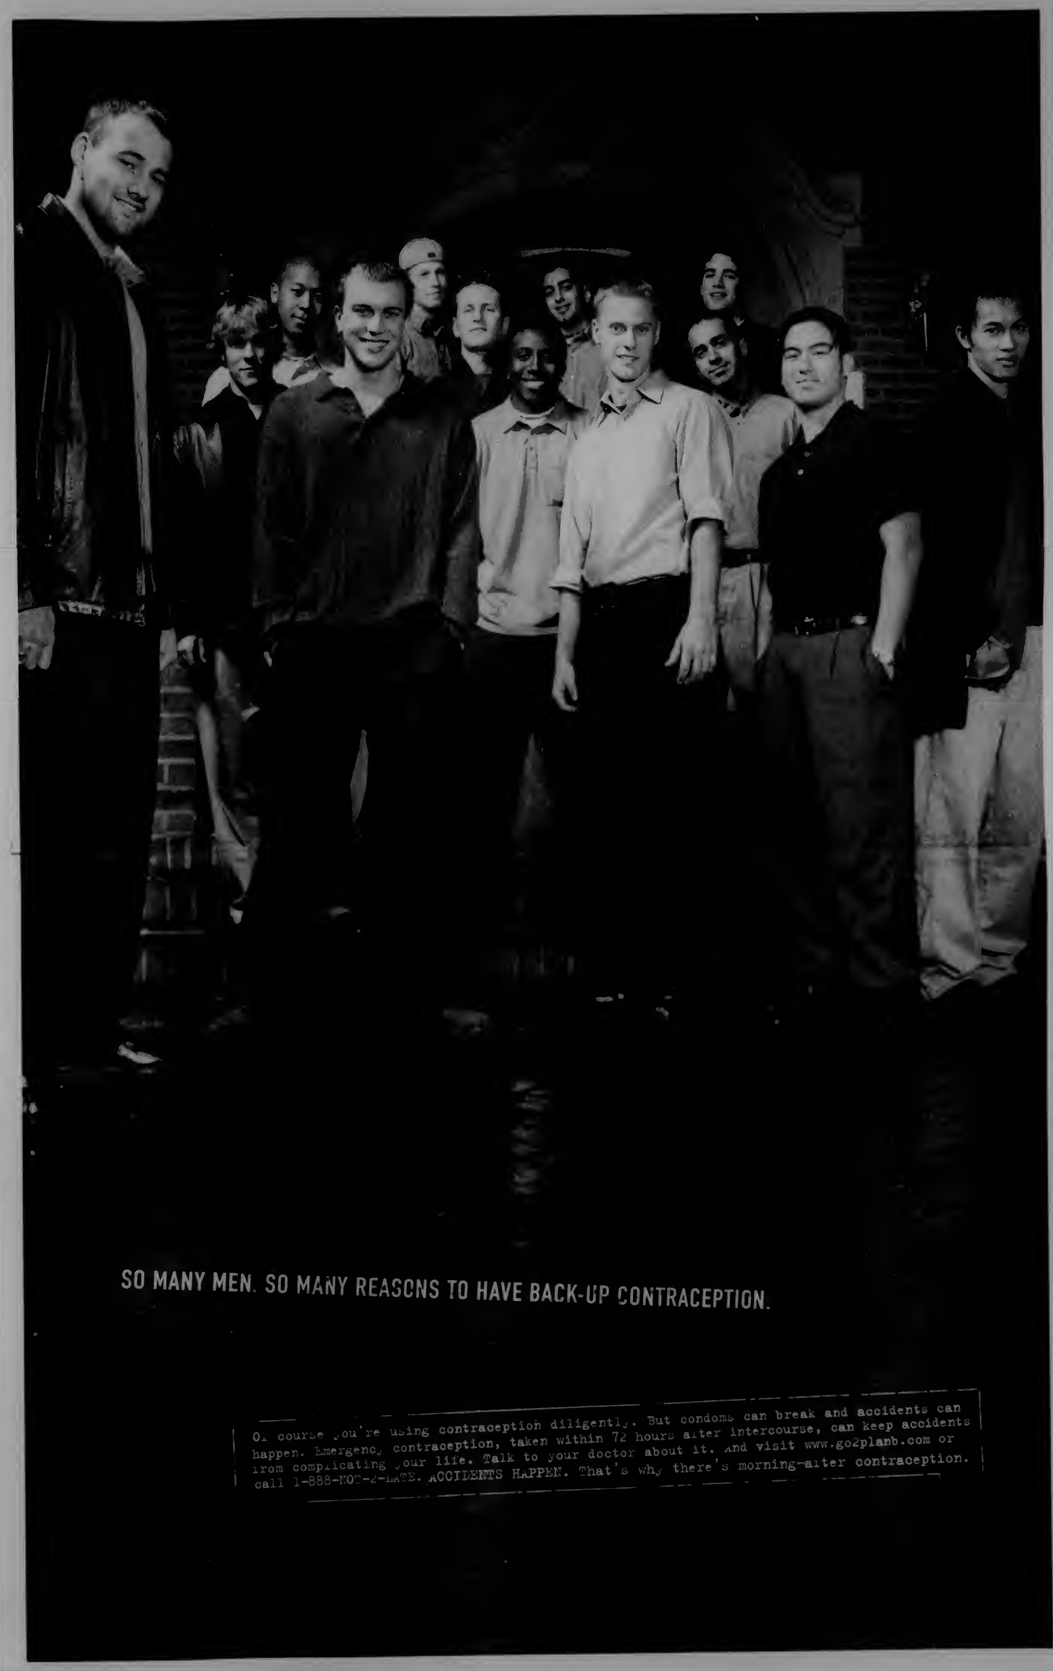
Senior Don Little also netted a pair of goals, while freshman attackman Ryan Connolly notched his first collegiate goal in the victory. In net, freshman Bill Schell recorded a career-high 13 saves.

Harvard was led by freshman Mike McBride's three goals, but got only one score from junior Matt Primm. Primm, the Crimson's best player, suffered under the tough All-American defense of McFarland, who Cannella might throw when necessary Saturday on Georgetown's Steve Dusseau, the nation's top attackman.

STUDENT TRAVEL
It's YOUR trip, take it!
London.....$288
Paris.....$377
Brussels.....$458
Rio de Janeiro..$654
San Jose C.R...$523
BUDGET HOTELS for as little as $18 A NIGHT!!!
Fares are round-trip from Hartford. Restrictions may apply. Tax not included
STA TRAVEL
800.777.0112
www.statravel.com



Castaway Lounge
Will proudly present another successful
Amateur Night
Monday May 6th starting at 7 pm
PENTHOUSE PET DOMINIQUE ST.CROIX
◆ Cash prizes awarded
◆ All ladies over 18 must apply in person
◆ Open on Mondays at 3pm with 10 Beautiful Exotic Entertainers; Food and Prizes given away
Open Tuesdays Saturday 11am 1am
VIP Room available for private engagement parties
Phone# 413. 665. 8733



SKILLED DRIVERS NEEDED
Seeking experienced drivers 18 years+ for confidential project in high-speed environment. Must hold valid driver's licence and be willing to take risks. Please send blood type and employment history to www.testdriveinfo.com

MATTRESSES FUTONS BEDS ETC... 253-2337
SLEEPY HOLLOW BED CO.

AS CFO OF A PRO BASEBALL TEAM YOU COULD:
PAY YOUR #1 STARTER $23,162.33 (PER OUT)
GIVE AWAY 15,000 BOBBLE HEAD DOLLS (3 TIMES/SEASON)
RAKE IN $13.9 MILLION IN NATIONAL TV REVENUE (PER YEAR)
HOW DO YOU GET A JOB LIKE THIS?
WWW.STARTHEREGOPLACES.COM/BIZ15
Go here and take the first step toward the career you want.
START HERE. GO PLACES.
If you know business and accounting, you can get a job anywhere. Because the skills you learn in business – strategic and analytical thinking, communication, and leadership – are always in demand. In some of the coolest industries in the world. Even in pro sports.
American Institute of Certified Public Accountants

DAILY COLLEGIAN

CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Cheerleading try-outs!!! UMASS Coed. All-girl cheerleading Mascot try-outs! Totman- Mon. April 22nd 5-7:30 pm, Tue. 23rd, 6-7:30 pm. Curry Hicks Cage Wed. 24th 6 to 9 pm, Sat 27th 11 am to 3 pm. For Info call Kevin Thompson @ 6634056.

Fraternities * Sororities Clubs * Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 with the easy CampusFundraiser.com three hour fundraising event. Does not involve credit card applications. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact CampusFundraiser.com at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. - Now Available, 1&2 bedroom apts. Leases begin June, July, Aug or Sept. 1 year lease. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywine-apts.com stop by or call (413) 549-0600.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over lease. Puffton 3-bedroom. June 1st. 549-5249.

Condos 3 bedrooms, hardwood floors, study area in basement, cable, telephone (Internet access), in all bedrooms and study NOW SHOWING for JUNE and SEPTEMBER NO FEES. www.amherstlincolnrealty.com 253-7879

CENTER OF TOWN 1,2,3 bedroom apts., hardwood floors. NOW SHOWING for JUNE and SEPTEMBER NO FEES www.amherstlincolnrealty.com 253-7879

EMPLOYMENT

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individual, full and part time positions available immediately. Only those able to work the upcoming summer should apply. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413)584-4746.

Painters P/F time 1- 3 yrs experience. Michael 367-9810.

EMPLOYMENT

TOP BOYS SPORTS CAMP IN MAIN! Play and coach sports-have fun-make $$ Camp Cobbossee positions in: all team and individual sports, all water sports plus; camp, hike, rock climbing, ropes, ice hockey, roller hockey, art & crafts, secretaries, top salaries, excellent facilities, free room, board, laundry, travel allowance. Online application www.campcobbossee.com or call 800-473-6104.

SUMMER IN MAINE Jewish, Co-ed overnight camp in the southern Maine seeks staff: Boys Unit Head (25+), Camping/Tripping Director (25+), Judaics Director (23+); swim, water ski, and boating/ sailing instructors (lifeguard certification req'd.) ; archery (training avail.), ceramics, general athletics, gymnastics, photography, radio, low ropes, theater; general counselors, office personnel. For information, contact: Ava Goldman, Director, JCC Camp Kingswood, 333 Nahanton street, Newton, MA 02459, 617-244-5124, or e-mail: director@campkingswood.org .

EMPLOYMENT

Live in Positions at residential summer camp in Charlton, MA. Available to anyone who honestly likes being with children. Call 800-433-8375, nature-classroom.org.

Person to sell tickets payment is half of proceeds, call Michael: 546-3050.

CAMP WAYNE FOR GIRLS- Northeast Pennsylvania (6/19-8/17/02). Children's sleep-away camp. If you love children and want to have a GREAT summer we are still looking for Directors for Swimming, Golf, Tennis, Cheerleading and Ass't Directors for Sports and Gymnastics. Counselors for: Tennis, Gymnastics, Drama, Basketball, Golf, Soccer, Sailing, Sculpture/Lino Cuts, Silkscreen, Batik, Jewelry, Calligraphy, Guitar, Self-Defense, Video, Piano, Ropes, Mother's Helper, Night Watchperson. On Campus Interviews Arranged. Call 800-279-5019 or go to www.campwayne-girls.com.

EMPLOYMENT

Models Wanted. Liquid Curves Entertainment is seeking FEMALE talent for nude and/or erotic modeling. No experience necessary. Make money instantly. Apply online at http://www.liquidcurves.com or call our offices at (413) 539-6782.

TEENAGE BICYCLE TOUR LEADERS NEEDED: Be a Teen Tour Leader this summer. Trips in USA, Canada, Europe. We need a 4-week time commitment, salary plus expenses paid. Student Hostling Program, P.O. Box 419, CONWAY, MA 01341. 800-343-6132 www.bicycletrips.com.

Nantucket Island Summer Job opportunity beginning mid June office Assistant with good computer & telephone skills, miscellaneous errand running. Salary & housing 508-228-3942 or send resume to Rafael Osona Auctions P.O. box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02584.

EMPLOYMENT

Bub's Bar-B-Q Now hiring enthusiastic & energetic persons for full & part-time. Must be 18 yrs or older. Apply in person between 2&4 pm Tues-Fri. 548-9630.

SUMMER INTERNSHIPS Earn $3000 to 7000++ and gain valuable business experience working for the UMASS Official Campus Telephone Directory. Excellent Advertising, Sales, and Marketing opportunity. GREAT RESUME BOOSTER! Call Paul at AroundCampus, Inc. 1-800-466-2221 ext. 288. www.aroundcampus.com

Work in Korea. Call the Career Center, 545-2224.

HOUSE FOR RENT

House for rent. Sunnyside bedroom house. Amherst Center. On bus route. 1 1/2 baths, dishwasher, washer/dryer hookups. Available June 1st. Sublet, lease option Sept. 1st. 587-9574 leave phone number, do not page.

INSTRUCTIONS

Become an EMT! Sign up for summer and fall classes now call 545-1885 or go to www.umass.edu/ems.

RENTAL PROBLEMS

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning lease? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

ROOM FOR RENT

Roommate needed in June 2 bedroom apt. $418/month. Heat& hot water included on bus route. Lauren 253-2105.

1 Room for rent. One mile from Campus Center of Amherst. On bus line. Share w/2 males, call 253-9701 for details.

ROOMMATE NEEDED

Sublet in Sunderland with possible fall option. $575/mo on bus route. One bedroom available. 665-0377.

ROOMMATE NEEDED

1/2 females for summer. Optional September lease take over 549-7344 Kristina.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

SUMMER SUBLET

Summer Sublet 3-4 rooms great location. Cheap price. Call 549-4038

TO SUBLET

2 Bedroom apartment partially furnished available June 1st to sublet w/option to lease on bus route. 413-549-9612.

Summer sublet 2 bedroom apartment South Amherst free heat, water, weigh room right on bus route; laundry w/option to lease in fall 253-8960

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

2	CBS/A
3	NBC/I
4	Fox Sport NE
5	PBS - 57
6	HSCN Movie Channel
7	WB-20
8	HSCN Movie Channel
9	TV Guide Channel
10	FOX/61
11	ABC/40
12	NBC/22
14	International Channel
15	UMATV
16	HSCN Info Channel
17	ESPN
18	ESPN-2
19	UVC-19
20	ESPN Classic
21	Good vs Evil
22	CNN
23	CNN HL
24	Weather Channel
25	Learning Channel
26	History Channel
27	A&E
28	Discovery Health
29	Food Network
30	NASA
31	Home & Garden TV
32	Travel Channel
33	Lifetime
34	CNBC
35	Tech TV
36	BET
37	UPN-38
39	USA
40	TNN
41	MTV
42	VH-1
43	TNT
45	TBS
46	E! Entertainment
47	Sci-Fi Channel
48	C-span TV
49	Nick at Nite
50	Comedy Central
51	Cartoon Network
52	Game Show Network
53	TV Land
54	FOX Family
55	Discovery
56	Galaxy
57	Telemundo
58	College TV Network
59	C-SPAN
60	C-SPAN2
61	Bloomberg Television

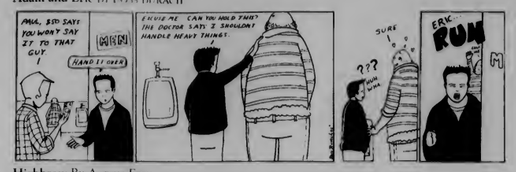
CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass.

Client: Date: Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash
Date(s) to run: Headline:
Total days x Words = x rate = PAYMENT
Special Heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.



Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply
Open: 8:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m. 413-545-3500
Student rate: 20 cents/word per day Non-student rate: 50 cents/word per day

Headings
•Activities •Announcements •Apartment for Rent •Auto for Sale •For Sale •Lost & Found •Happy Birthday •Room for Rent •Instruction •Room Wanted •Services •Summer Sublet •To Sublet •Travel •Wanted •Wanted to Rent •Employment •Entertainment

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — APRIL 18, 2002

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Globe Trekker (In Stereo)		Frontline "Modern Medi" (N)		Tak for Alt: Survival		This Old Hse.	Hometime
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	Survivor: Marquesas (N)		CSI: Crime Scene Invstgtn.		Agency "Peacemakers" (N)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Survivor: Marquesas (N)		CSI: Crime Scene Invstgtn.		Agency "Peacemakers" (N)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		Primetime Thursday		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	Gilmore Girls (In Stereo)		Charmed Efe Me (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Friends	Friends	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	ER Start All Over Again		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	25	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Gilmore Girls (In Stereo)		Charmed Efe Me (In Stereo)		News	Home Imp.	Blind Date	Blind Date
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Friends	Friends	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	ER Start All Over Again		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	Family Guy	Greg Bunny	King of the Hill	Andy Richter	News		Raymond	Seinfeld
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Friends	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	ER Start All Over Again		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Great New England Auction						Great New England Auction Continues
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Who Wants to Be a Millionaire		Primetime Thursday		News	Nightline
WSBK	38		Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Frasier	WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo)				News	Ent. Tonight	5th Wheel	Shipmates
WYBS	68	Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Roseanne	★★ "Dumb & Dumber" (1994, Comedy) (PA) Jim Carrey,				Primetime Thursday		News	Nightline
A&E	17	Law & Order (In Stereo)		The View (In Stereo)		Biography J.F.K. Friendly		Shackleton (2002, Drama) (Part 1 of 2) Kenneth Branagh				Crossfire	Moneyline
CNN	23	Moneyline		Crossfire (Live)		Live From...	The Point	Larry King Live		Newsnight		Crossfire	Moneyline
COM	26	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Geeks	★½ "Very Bad Things" (1998, Comedy) Christian Slater				South Park	Men Show	Daily Show	Sat. Night Live
DISC	24	Cheetahs: The Winning Streak		Secret Life of the Tiger		Would You Believe It?		Would You Believe It?		Would You Believe It?		Would You Believe It?
ESPN	21	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs	Conference Quarterfinal Game 1 - Teams to be Announced (Live)					Baseball Tonight (N)		Sportscenter
LIFE	29	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Calender Girl, Cop Killer? The Rambi Bambeanik Story" (1992)				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	39	Cribs	mtvICON "Aerosmith" (In Stereo)			True Life (In Stereo)		Dismissed	WWF Tough	WWF Tough	Celebrity	Jackass	Andy Dick
NICK	28	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Sponge b	Fold by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers	All In Family	All In Family
SCIFI	31	Star Trek (In Stereo)		Star Trek "All Our Yesterdays"		Outer Limits "Second Soul"		★★ "Halloween 8" (1998, Horror) Jamie Lee Curtis. (In Stereo)				Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	27	Secret World of Gambling		Medical Detect	Medical Detect	Medical Detectives		Ultimate Ten Biggest		Super Structures of America		Medical Detectives
TNT	31	NYPD Blue (In Stereo)		Pretender "Bloodlines"		★★★ "The Mummy" (1999, Horror) Brendan Fraser, Rachel Weisz				★★½ "Black Mask" (1996, Action) Jet Li, Lau Ching Wan		★★★ "The Mummy" (1999) Brendan Fraser
USA	33	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "People vs. Faith"		Nash Bridges "Scavengers"		★★½ "Black Mask" (1996, Action) Jet Li, Lau Ching Wan				JAG "Life or Death" (In Stereo)
HBO	45	(5:30) ★★½ "If Lucas Could Fly"		★½ "Ready to Rumble" (2000, Comedy) David Arquette. PG-13		"Lone Hero" (2002) Lou Diamond Phillips. R				On the Record Shock Video 2001: A Sex
MAX	46	(4:45) ★★★ "Black Rain" (1989)		Broken Silence (In Stereo)		★★ "Congo" (1995, Adventure) Dylan Walsh. PG-13				★★½ "Fight Club" (1999, Drama) Brad Pitt. (In Stereo) R
SHOW	44	(4:30)		★★ "8 Runs in the Family" (1994) Charles Grodin		★★½ "Jumanji" (1995, Fantasy) Robin Williams. PG				★½ "Urban Legends: Final Cut" (2000, Horror) R		"Chalkhoo"

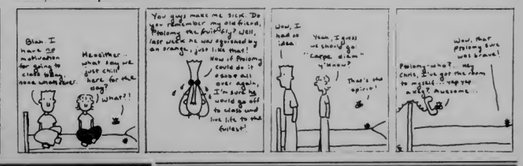
Adam and Eric By Ross Burach

Highbrow By Aaron Eppy

Shut the Duck Up By Seany McSean

Shut the Duck Up By Seany McSean

The Torques By Ken Fredette



The Torques By Ken Fredette

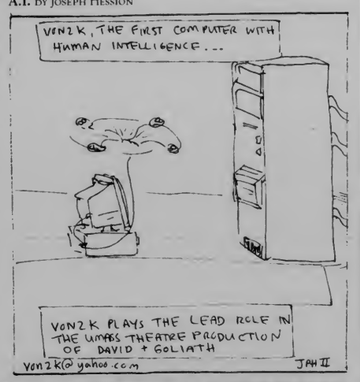
The Torques By Ken Fredette

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Quote of the Day

"But I'm something, yeah I'm something, you think you know me but you don't know nothing."

-The Hippos



Amherst Weather

Thursday	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 86 LOW: 48	HIGH: 82 LOW: 47	HIGH: 74 LOW: 36

Horoscopes

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – The stars are saying some pretty strange things today. Maybe you should just stay in bed. Oh wait, too late. Crap.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Just because your name is Matt doesn't mean people have to walk all over you.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Nobody wants to smell like a pony in the hot sun, so take a freaking shower!
CANCER (June 21-July 22) – You will meet your father upon a bridge, kill him, and marry your mother, spawning a new psychological disorder: the Steve Complex.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Saturn is in the house of Jupiter. Jupiter's gonna be pissed.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Just a little F.Y.I.: Southwest is not South Beach.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – UMassacre will remain undefeated.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – There's nothing like the smell of patchouli in Central on a warm spring day. It makes the stars puke.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Just because you're lonely, and you have no friends, and you lost all your money gambling, and nobody loves you at all, is no reason to kill yourself. Forgetting to file an extension with the IRS, well, that's another story.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – When in doubt, pick C.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – "I wait for them to get their beer goggles, then I approach them," – best advice for picking someone up.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Find Andy Vogt, and give him a hug.

A.I. By Joseph Hession

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Tomato Rice Soup

Chicken Pesto Pasta

Sloppy Joe Oney Ga

Native American Stew (vegan) (W Basics)

Vegan Sloppy Joe

DINNER

TASTE OF UMASS AT MULLINS CENTER 4:30 P.M. TO 7:00 P.M.
All dining commons are closed for dinner.

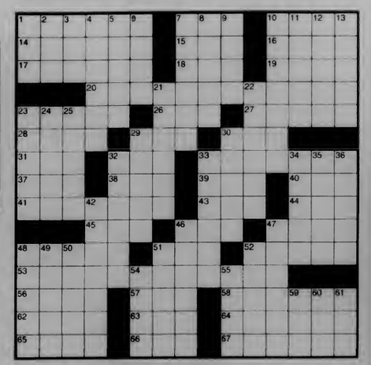
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY

Great Beer. Great Food. Great Service.

Amherst's original brewpub serving up fine handcrafted brews and lagers.
★
Featuring fabulous food and great live music!!

Thursday John Sheldon Groove Music $2 cover
Saturday Love Bomb 70's Dance Music $4 cover
Sunday John Fisher Band Jazz

36 N. Pleasant Street * Amherst
413-253-4400
WWW.AMHERSTBREWING.COM



ACROSS
1 Lodger
7 Thug's weapon
10 Messes up
14 At a discount
15 Period of time
16 Nuisance
17 Nerve cell
18 Zilch
19 Not away from 20 Football commentator
23 Hide
26 Before, to poets
27 Frontier band
28 Pans airport
29 Alan — Lerner
30 Tyke
31 Turkish title
32 Buddy
33 Laughed nastily
37 Mongrel
38 Bar drink
39 Snow boot
40 Eggs
41 Skiers
43 Kind of cube
44 Guys
45 Salamander
46 Pen's contents
47 Not bananas
48 Met offering
51 Literary collection
52 Cousins' moms
53 Emotionally overwhelming
56 Sicily volcano
57 Female sandpiper
58 Vitamin B component
62 It could be proper
63 USCG officer
64 Caress
65 Huff
66 Hall-of-Famer Mel
67 Took a sip

DOWN
1 Ely of "Tarzan"
2 Single
3 Big Ten sch.
4 Boggy
5 Wed secretly
6 Nevada city
7 Upper class
8 Dovelop
9 Nursery powder
10 Sitcom unit
11 Talks wildly
12 Ceremonies
13 Night noise
21 Domains
22 Each
23 Private tutor
24 Debate
25 Santa — CA
29 Short trip
30 Talent
32 Manufactured in advance
33 Pertaining to the backbone
34 Type of candle
35 Occasion
36 Swedes' neighbors
42 Like lush lawns
46 Eat
47 Dextrose and fructose
48 Black cats, maybe
49 Climber's aid
50 Boredom
51 Real estate — 52 Ekberg of films
54 Black-and-white snack
55 Pt. of MIT
59 Portable bed
60 Marmet guy
61 Composer Rorem

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

P	L	U	S		W	A	D	E	D		A	V	O	W
R	I	C	K		R	H	I	N	O		C	E	D	E
O	L	L	A		E	A	T	E	N		M	A	I	L
S	T	A	T	I	C		M	O	D	E	L	E	D
			E	L		E	Y	R
B	O	R	S	L	E	D	S		G	L	I	D	E
A	V	E		R	U	E		A	I	L	E	D
R	E	L	A	P	S	E		F	A	S	T	I	N	G
B	R	I	B	E		P	U	T		A	S	A
S	T	E	E	P		I	N	T	R	U	D	E	R
			U	R	G	E		A	I	M
J	U	N	I	P	E	R		C	O	P	I	E	R
A	R	I	D		F	A	I	T	H		T	I	S	L	E
V	A	L	E		E	D	D	I	E		R	A	I	D
A	L	E	S		R	E	A	M	S		E	K	E	D

11-6-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate

Today's Staff

Night Editor: Sam Wilkinson
Photo Editor: Scott Eldridge II
Copy Editor: Jess May
Production Assistant: Mike Kulak
Production Staff: Melissa Hammel, Andrea Mangini

DAILY COLLEGIAN

SPORTS

COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: ERIC SODERSTROM

Minutemen crush Harvard

Men's lax prepares for biggest game of year

By Eric Soderstrom
COLLEGIAN STAFF

AMHERST – There was no reason to talk about anything else. After dismantling Harvard, 18-8, yesterday at Garber Field, the members of the Massachusetts men's lacrosse team spoke on just one topic.

UMass	18
Harvard	8

Georgetown.

"This is it," senior Matt McFarland said. "We're going to do it this year. It's the biggest game of my career."

In just about 72 hours, the Minutemen (9-2, 3-0 Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference) will know its future. A win in Saturday's game at Georgetown (9-0, 3-0 ECAC) awards UMass the conference's automatic qualifier to the NCAA Tournament while a loss pretty much eliminates it from all at-large hopes.

"This is a championship game for us," said Coach Greg Cannella, whose team flies to Washington, D.C. tomorrow night. "And our guys know that."

The Minutemen also know that topping the undefeated Hoyas will be their toughest task of the 2002 campaign and nothing like yesterday's Crimson rollover. But that's what makes yesterday's win mean more than it should have.

Knowing well the worth of Saturday's clash, UMass refused to totally overlook Harvard (4-6) and disposed of the Crimson early enough to allow less work from its main guns in the sweltering heat.

"I'm sure the G-town game was in the back of their minds, as much as it was in my mine," Cannella said.

Still, the Minutemen worked their way to a 6-0 lead after the first quarter, thanks in part to an early pair of blasts from junior Chris Fiore.

"That was important," Cannella said. "I thought at 6-0, we could have potentially put the game away."

But Harvard answered in the second stanza, and trailed only 7-5 after a blast from junior Jas Wich with 2:31 left in the half. Fiore, however, rifled his third goal to the left side of the cage with 3.5 seconds left to give UMass an 8-5 advantage midway.

"I was mad at the half," Cannella said. "If you're going to be streaky like that, you're not going to beat Georgetown."

There was nothing to worry about in the final half though, as the Minutemen outscored Harvard, 10-3, to earn the 49-year-old Massachusetts program its 400th victory.

Senior Marc Morley led the Minutemen with four goals. His best and final tally came late in the fourth quarter when, after a shot by junior Paul Hanchen, he got the rebound, faked high and slipped it passed Harvard's Jake McKenna (19 saves).

"I was kind of just in the right spots today," Morley said. "We were great in the first quarter.

Turn to LAX, page 5

Chris Fiore (No. 11) has scored 12 goals in the Minutemen's last four games.

Robinson awaits NFL opportunity

Former UMass safety mentally ready for Draft

By Eric Soderstrom
COLLEGIAN STAFF

If you're not affiliated with the National Football League, do not call Jeremy Robinson at home this weekend. He needs the lines to be kept open.

"I'll just be sitting in front of the television back home waiting," said Robinson, who could be one of 261 players to be picked in this weekend's NFL Draft. "Hopefully someone gives me a call."

The Massachusetts football team's starting free safety the last four years, Robinson has made sure that NFL team's have no problem reaching his Syracuse, N.Y. residence.

"We're going to have like five phones ready, all with different numbers," said Robinson, laughing. "So hopefully they'll be ringing off the hook."

Just one call will suit him fine, though. Be it the one that transfers to the podium in New York and declares Robinson a professional athlete. But as for that actually happening, Robinson isn't too certain.

"You really don't know until draft day comes around," he said, just over a week ago. "Teams can have you on the draft board, and then take you off, and put you back on. You really just don't know."

But it's that uncertainty which defines every draft. For the last three months, the affiliates of the NFL wannabe community have done all they can to enhance their pigskin resumes. Many went to the leagues' Combine Timing and Testing period that took place Feb. 28-March 4 at the RCA Dome in Indianapolis, Ind. But others, like Robinson, worked out individually for those teams interested.

"Scouts just came up to Amherst," said Robinson, who finished his UMass career with 15 Interceptions, 433 tackles (244 unassisted) and five sacks. "So many came that I can't even remember from which teams."

Imagine then, how difficult it must be for NFL teams to narrow things down in the war rooms. Except for Fresno State's David Carr, who will be picked No. 1 by the Houston Texans, no one really knows what's going to happen.

There's a chance that Robinson could go in the final couple of rounds, but there's also a good chance he won't be picked at all.

"No teams have really contacted me as of late," Robinson said. "But you really don't know. Anything can happen."

There is only one thing Robinson is sure about.

"The thing I do know is that I'm going to be in somebody's camp," he said, referring to the road taken by former teammates Kole Ayi and Marcel Shipp to make the show. "I'm very confident in that. Right now, I'm just trying to get in the best shape of my life. I'm in good shape, but I know I can get better."

Built in a 6-foot-2-inch, 200-pound frame, Robinson really caught the attention of scouts in the Blue-Grey All-Star Game on Christmas Day. He is a tremendous athlete who can cover a ton of ground when playing the middle

Turn to ROBINSON, page 8

Matt Brady's All-Time Team

Mays' offensive prowess secondary to his unreal defense

This is part four of a 10-part series portraying the 10 members of "Brady's All-Time Team" – a lineup consisting of the best Major League Baseball players ever.

1.	Cobb	LF
2.	Wagner	SS
3.	Ruth	RF
4.	Mays	CF
5.	(4/23)	1B
6.	(4/25)	3B
7.	(4/30)	2B
8.	(5/02)	C
9.	(5/07)	P
10.	(5/09)	Mgr.

Best Of The Rest:
Centerfielders

1. Mickey Mantle
2. Joe Dimaggio
3. Tris Speaker

Credentials (all-time rank): 660 home runs (3); 1903 runs batted in (9); 2062 runs (6); .302 career average; two-time MVP; NL Rookie of the Year, 1951; 12 consecutive gold gloves, 1957-68; best defensive outfielder ever

The Argument: If you want strong defense up the middle, Mays is the place to start. The best defensive centerfielder ever (and some argue the best defensive player, period) is the perfect man to hit cleanup with his 660 home runs. Plus, he gives good speed on the basepaths for the fifth hitter to move him around. With he and Ty Cobb in the outfield, Babe Ruth could eat hot dogs all game and not worry about playing defense.

Mickey Mantle was one of the most underrated defensive players of all-time, and on the basepaths he could move incredibly well, especially for a guy who was bothered by chronic knee problems from early on in his career. Mantle played in nearly constant pain, but still managed to hit 536 home runs, tops for a switch hitter on the all-time list. Still, as good as he was, he can't top Mays' overall ability.

Joe Dimaggio was one of the winningest players in the history of the game, and one of the best pure hitters to grace a Major League diamond. In just 13 seasons, Joltin' Joe totaled 361 longballs to go along with a .325 career batting average. Not to mention the fact that he put together what is considered baseball's most unbreakable record – a 56 game hitting streak – in 1941. Also, next to Ruth he is probably the next best symbol in American society, with his marriage to Marilyn Monroe and his being Mr. Coffee known world-over.

Tris Speaker was yet another of the deadball players who gets discounted in his all-time status because of a lack of homeruns. He only hit 117 in his career, but that number would likely be close to 300 if he had played in an era like today. Speaker is the closest person to Mays defensively (excluding a couple of guys who have yet to play enough) and his .345 career average is sixth. He also holds the all-time record for doubles with 792.

What you didn't know: The "Say Hey Kid" was a very private guy who had little to nothing to hide. His love for playing the game of baseball was a joy to watch and he was the symbol of the New York baseball world of the 1950s, where the Giants, Dodgers and Yankees were likely the three strongest teams in the majors.

The one thing that almost everybody does know about Mays is "the catch." First off, there is only one other single play in baseball history referred to in the same manner as Mays' famous grab, and even that ("the called shot") is far more specific. When Vic Wertz strode to the plate to face the Giants' Don Liddle with a pair of runners on, he had no idea that he would become a crucial part of one of baseball's most talked about moments.

Mays was playing Wertz a little to the left of center, about 360 feet from the plate. When the ball left Wertz's bat, everyone in the park was thinking it was a sure triple if not an inside-the-park homer. When Mays caught the ball over his shoulder, he was approximately 470 feet from the plate (the Polo Grounds measured 480 to dead center). He then had the presence of mind to hold the runners on by whipping the ball back to the infield. The ultimate capper to this piece of lore is certainly Liddle's line to his replacement when he was taken out after the play – "Well, I got my guy."

Mays is a perfect complement to Ruth both in the lineup and in the field and his joy and enthusiasm make him a coach's dream. Why batting fourth? To maintain the lefty-righty sequence. Besides, with Ruth ahead of him, there will be plenty of open basepaths ahead of him.

Matt Brady is a Collegian columnist.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Willie Mays' smile was only overshadowed by his stellar play, and he always made time to acknowledge his numerous fans.

CELINE DION'S BACK
ARTS PAGE 5

PEOPLE COMPLAIN A LOT
ED/OP PAGE 4.

MEN'S LAX HEADS TO G-TOWN
SPORTS PAGE 8.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN WEEKEND EDITION

FRIDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE ONE HUNDRED AND NINETEEN ☆☆☆☆☆ 4.19.02

Meeropol discusses death of Rosenbergs

Speaks out against the death penalty in light of September 11 attacks

By Jake Lilien
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Robert Meeropol was 6-years-old in 1953, when his parents, Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, were executed for plotting to sell atomic secrets to the Soviet Union. Meeropol has spent his life trying to clear the name of his parents, whom he feels were falsely accused.

On Wednesday night, Meeropol delivered a lecture, titled, "Capital Conspiracy: The New Face of the Death Penalty After 9/11." In his speech, he compared the treatment of suspected communists in the 1950s to the treatment of suspected terrorists today.

"We can feel the cold breath of the McCarthy era on the backs of our necks," he said.

Meeropol began his lecture by discussing the case of his parents, and its effect on his activism.

"So far as I know, my brother and I are the only people in U.S. history to have both of their parents executed by the U.S. government," Meeropol said. "I've fought against the death penalty, and I've done so as possibly the only attorney in the world with that kind of heritage."

Meeropol asserted that the debate around the death penalty generally centers around murder cases, despite the fact that citizens can be executed for other types of crimes.

"My parents' case was not a murder case," he said. "People think that they were convicted of espionage or treason, but that isn't the case either. They were executed for 'conspiracy to commit espionage.' People in the press usually can't believe that the death penalty would be applied for such a sentence, but it was."

For 20 minutes, Meeropol outlined the case against the Rosenbergs, and asserted that the crucial evidence against them – the testimony of David and Ruth Greenglass – was obtained by unethical means. He also argued that, despite the government's claims, neither of the Rosenbergs was a member of an atomic spy ring.

Meeropol also criticized proponents of the death penalty, saying that capital punishment is regularly used against in inappropriate cases. He excoriated Massachusetts Governor Jane Swift for suggesting that the death penalty should be used in cases of "crimes worse than murder."

COURTESY EARLHAMCOLLEGE.EDU

Robert Meeropol

"The radio these days is filled with people who say, 'I oppose the death penalty, but not in the case of these terrorists'," Meeropol said. "It may seem like a real simple thing to say, but it's true – you are not opposed to the death penalty unless you're opposed to the death penalty!"

Meeropol argued that a connection exists between the case of his parents and the cases of accused terrorists.

"There are chilling parallels between what happened then and what is happening now," he said. "What the government tried to do [in the Rosenberg case] was link the thing the public feared most, which was the atomic bomb, with the people that the public feared most, which were communists. So you had this recipe of combining wartime, communities and the A-bomb."

"Currently," he continued, "what they're doing is linking international terrorism, which is the thing the public fears most, with Islamic fundamentalists, who are the people the public fear most. And, of course, this is wartime. It is the time charged atmosphere that made it such a difficult task to save my parents' lives."

Meeropol said that specific connections could be drawn between the Rosenberg case and the case of Zacharias Moussaoui, the only man to be indicted for conspiracy in the Sept. 11 attacks. Moussaoui was in a detention center on Sept. 11, and the government has argued that he would have been on board one of the targeted planes if given the opportunity.

"What the government is seeking to do is punish someone not for what they did, but for what they would have liked to do," Meeropol said. He went on to predict that the number of "conspiracy" charges would soon increase.

"I think that my parents' case will become the kind of case that is vitally important today," he said.

At the conclusion of the lecture, the floor was opened to the audience for questions and comments. Meeropol's brother, the Rosenbergs' only other child, was in the audience, and asked about the difficulty of fighting for the rights of those that one disagrees with.

"It seems to me that people who fight for Mumia [referring to death row inmate Mumia Abu-Jamal] and Leonard Peltier [a Native American

Turn to MEEROPOL page 3

TOM WEAGER/THE UMASS COLLEGIAN

Hoop Dreams

Students worked their basketball skills on the Student Union walkway to get ready for Hoops Hoopla next weekend.

Friendly fire claims four Canadian troops

By Ken Campbell
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Four Canadian troops were killed and eight others wounded after a U.S. Air National Guard F-16 fighter dropped one or two laser-guided 500-pound bombs on them near Kandahar, Afghanistan on Wednesday.

Two men sustained life-threatening injuries, one suffered very serious injuries and five were seriously wounded, according to Canadian Defense officials. Names of the injured have not been released pending notification of relatives. The troops were part of the 3rd Battalion of the Princess Patricia Canadian Light Infantry Battle Group, conducting a live-fire training exercise eight miles south of Kandahar airfield when the accident occurred. U.S. Central Command is investigating the incident.

Gen. Tommy Franks, commander in chief of Central Command, extended his sympathies to the families of the victims.

"I offer my most sincere condolences to the families of those Canadian soldiers killed and injured in yesterday's tragic bombing – accident in Afghanistan," Franks said in a released statement. "We have already started a thorough investigation, working closely with Canadian authorities, to determine how this incident occurred."

Canadian officials expressed their sympathies, but appreciated U.S. promises to investigate the incident.

"At this time, on behalf of all Canadian Forces members, I would like to offer my sincere condolences to the families and friends of the victims of this tragedy," said Gen. Raymond Henault, chief of the Defence Staff. "Their loss is shared by all of us."

President George W. Bush spoke with Canadian Prime Minister Jean Chrétien on Wednesday night.

"President Bush called me ... to offer the sincerest condolences of the American people to the Canadian families," Chrétien said in a released statement. "He also pledged complete American cooperation with Canadian authorities who will carry out a thorough and complete investigation.

"As to the circumstances of what appears to have been a terrible accident, clearly there are many questions that the families, and all Canadians, expect to be answered," Chrétien added. "Mere words are of small solace at times like these. Yet it is my hope that some comfort may be found in the knowledge that those who have been taken were serving their country with valor and gallantry in a great struggle for justice and freedom. And that each and every Canadian is proud of the exemplary manner in which they did their duty."

Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld commented on the accident. "On behalf of the department of Defense, I want to express my deep regret and sadness over the tragic accident in Afghanistan that killed and wounded a number of Canadian troops," Rumsfeld said. "Our thoughts and prayers go out to them, their comrades, and their families."

On the Net: The Pentagon: http://www.defenselink.mil. The Canadian Defense Ministry: http://www.dnd.ca

USC ranked low in foreign student totals

By Veronica Torrej
DAILY TROJAN (U. SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA)

(U-WIRE) LOS ANGELES – A recent ranking released by the American Universities Admission Program, which did not include University of Southern California in its list of top American undergraduate universities for international students, does not appear to be credible, USC's vice provost for international affairs said.

"I've never heard of the AUAP; my first guess is they are not very important," said Richard Drobnick, vice provost for international affairs and director of the Center for International Business.

The organization, whose Web site claims it is "the world (sic) largest organization which helps foreign students in selecting and gaining admission to American institutions of higher education," named New York University as the top university for international students.

Among top 10 schools listed by the AUAP were Cornell, Stanford, Pennsylvania State and Yale universities; Massachusetts Institute of Technology; University of Pennsylvania; and Middlebury and Wellesley colleges.

"If they were doing a good job, we would be listed there," Drobnick said.

The Washington Square News, NYU's school newspaper, reported the AUAP's study ranked schools by average test scores, acceptance rates and the international image of the school.

According to the AUAP's Web site, the organization is "45+ Higher education specialists, mostly Directors of Admissions, Professors, Ph.D. Holders, Psychologists, Recognized Grades evaluators, Notaries and certified translators etc (sic)."

The site was riddled with similar typos. AUAP representatives could not be reached for comment.

But the rankings seemed illogical based on the criteria mentioned, since USC has one of the highest numbers of international students in the country, Drobnick said. Test scores for Middlebury and Pennsylvania were obviously lower than USC's, he added.

"From the methodology described, (the study) doesn't sound credible – it sounds like just an image survey," said Drobnick, who also pointed out all of the listed schools, with the exception of Stanford, are East Coast schools.

"All they've done is named highly rated universities," Drobnick said.

Santiago Hsiao-Yu Kow, student adviser and former president of the International Students' Assembly, said he disagreed with the rankings released by the AUAP and like Drobnick never had heard of the organization.

Weekend Events

Friday

AMHERST- Painter Ellen Phelan will give the annual Rapaport Lecture in Contemporary Art at 4:30 p.m. in Pruyne Lecture Hall in the Fayerweather Hall. The talk is entitled "Drawing into Painting" and is free and open to the public.

Saturday

UMASS- MassPirg will be hosting a UMass Pond Clean up between the hours of 12:30 and 2 p.m. on Saturday. The Physical Plant will lower the water in the pond so that students can access it and clean out debris. State Representative Ellen Story will also present a short speech on the importance of keeping waterways of Massachusetts safe and clean.

SMITH- Smith College will showcase work done during "Student Research Week." The completed projects include presentations in science and technology, instrumental, vocal and dance performances and talks on a number of issues.

Monday

AMHERST- Novelist Peter Carey the author of The True History of the Kelly Gang will be speaking about his novel on Monday at 8 p.m. in room 115 of the Fayerweather Hall. The Amherst College Creative Writing Center and the department of English are two main sponsors of the event, which will be free and open to the public.

Camzpus Perspectives

Are you going to the Save UMass Rally on Thursday, April 25 at the State House in Boston? Do you think that the rally is going to make a difference?

By Tibora Girczyc-Blum

Erika Arthur
2004 STPEC

"Yes, I am definitely going. I think it's really good to have our voices heard and show that we aren't going to stand by and let the Legislature get taken away from us."

Anne Tummino
2002 STPEC and Women's Studies

"I am going to the rally and am encouraging everyone to go it as well. The Legislators told us that they wanted to hear our voices, so we are making ourselves visible."

George Thomas
Grad student

"No, no I don't think it's going to help at all. Protesting rarely helps. I mean, where is the money going to magically come from?"

Andrew Bail
2002 Mechanical Engineering

"No, I'm not going to the rally. But I do think that it will make a difference. The people in the state house will hear the students."

Deanna Levanti
2004 Environmental Studies

"No, I'm not going to the rally. I think that people, in Boston and Eastern Mass., need to see how we are being affected by this and that we aren't going to stand for it."

Javed Memon
2004 Psychology and Middle Eastern Studies

"No, I'm not going, although I do think it is important. I think that they do make a difference, but rallies and protests over the years have lost their effectiveness."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian [illegible] of the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian [illegible] operating solely on revenue generated from sales and display advertising. It was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life. It became the Collegian in 1906. The Collegian [illegible] the Index in 1916. The Collegian [illegible] and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1968. The Collegian is published [illegible] fall 413-545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m.

Sam Wilkinson Editor-in-Chief
Matthew F. Sacco Managing Editor
Amy Garganta Business Manager
Shimauli Dave Production Manager
Jake Lilien Diversity Editor
Mike Kulak Editorial Production Manager
Jason Smith Advertising Manager

Mike Delano Arts & Living Editor
Matthew Despres Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jennifer Eastwood Features Editor
Catherine Turner News Editor
Tibora Girczyc-Blum Photography Editor
Eric Soderstrom Sports Editor
Brent Siniawski Finance Manager
Charlie Iacco Distribution Manager

Morgan Taylor Advertising Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Cara Murphy Assistant Finance Manager
Shawn Daugherty Assistant Business Manager
Megan Shannon Assistant Advertising Manager

CAPE COD Potato Chips

KAPLAN 1 800 KAP TEST kaptest.com

Coca-Cola

HEALTHSOUTH®

The new balance Haigis Hoopla

SPALDING

Ultimate Fitness

NEW BALANCE HAIGIS HOOPLA OFFICE
201 SKINNER HALL
(413) 545-5689

UMASS FOOD SERVICES

new balance

mass live.com

PURE ROCK LAZER 99.9

Bueno Y Sano

NANTUCKET NECTARS

NONOTUCK COMMUNITY SCHOOL, INC
VA Medical Center • 421 N. Main Street • Leeds, MA 01053 • (413) 586-5996
Creative Learning for Young Children

Teachers Wanted

We are looking for two teachers to join us for an exciting opportunity as we expand our toddler program at our parent cooperative school. The new teaching team will work with our current toddler teachers to design and implement a brand new toddler room. Opening day for the room is late summer/early fall. We hope to hear from graduating seniors in all majors. Creativity, enthusiasm and a love for children are the most important requirements. Start date for teachers is negotiable. We offer excellent benefits, including medical and disability insurance, paid vacations and holidays, and competitive wages. Starting salary dependent on education and OCCS qualifications.
Send resume and cover letter to:

Nonotuck Community School
421 N. Main St., VAMC
Leeds, MA 01053

Rental Office
1040 N.Pleasant St. #410
Amherst, MA 01002
413.549.0145

NEW PUFFTON VILLAGE

Serving All Of Your Rental Needs

TIBORA GIRCZYC-BLUM/COLLEGIAN

Row, row, row your boat

The local chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers tests their hand-crafted boat in the campus pond, in preparation for next weekend's competition.

Meeropol

continued from page 1

activist in prison for murder] generally agree with their views," he said. "How do we bring ourselves to fight for people who do not share our ideals – the people who rejoiced after the Sept. 11 attacks?"

Meeropol responded by saying that many activists find themselves incapable of supporting such people, but ought to put aside their distaste for an individual's politics in the name of justice.

"If rights can be abrogated in just one instance, then they can be abrogated in all instances," he said.

Following the question-and-answer period, Mary Wentworth, a local resident, spoke about her own experiences during the McCarthy era.

"I'm probably the only person in the room who was a teenager in World War II," Wentworth said. "What I remember best about the McCarthy era was how scary it was!" Wentworth described how she nearly lost her job as a schoolteacher after giving her students an assignment in comparative politics, which included studies of the Soviet Union.

"I see a lot of the same things going on today," she said. "The government is trying to build support for getting these terrorists...and we have to be very careful that we're not being pushed into this hysterical period when people are going to be hurt."

Police Log

April 14

Annoying Behavior
A caller reported that students had climbed a fence and were playing baseball on the baseball field.

There was a report of five to six skateboarders at the loading dock riding rails and jumping stairs.

Disturbance
There was a report of a disturbance on Fearing Street that resulted in the arrest of five students for assault and battery with a dangerous weaponon against a police officer, disturbing the peace, destruction of property valued at over $250 and resisting arrest. Joseph Roddy White, 19, Raymond Tulley, 18, David Alfred George, 19, Stephen George Skeirik, 19 and Daniel Griffen, also 19, were all arrested.

There was a report of a group of five to10 men pushing and shoving each other outside of Wheeler Dormitory.

Traffic Stop
Lai Tran, 24, was arrested for driving with a suspended license in an uninsured motor vehicle and for the failure to wear a seatbelt.

April 15

Annoying Behavior
The police received a call about skateboarders outside of Pierpont and Moore Dormitories making a lot of noise and disturbing the residents.

The police responded to a call regarding students roasting marshmallows over a burning box outside of MacKimmie.

Burglary
The caller stated that her roommate had left the door of their dormitory room closed but unlocked and that her laptop had been stolen.

An individual from Butterfield dormitory reported that his Playstation 2 and cell phone were stolen from his room.

April 16

Domestic Disturbance
Terrance Fountain, 22 was arrested for assault and battery.

Traffic Stop
Twenty-seven-year-old David Wait was arrested for unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle without the proper stickers and for driving without a license plate.

April 17

Annoying Behavior
Potatoes and apples were thrown through a spud launcher off of the 20th floor of Coolidge Tower.

Traffic Stop
Matthew Paine, 29, was arrested for operation of a motor vehicle with a suspended license.

Old Amherst Ale House
Live Music
NO COVER
Must be 21 with a valid ID
Rt.116 South Amherst
1/2 miles South of Amherst Center on the Mt.Holyoke Bus rt.
APRIL 19 - THE COWARDS
APRIL 20 - This Side Up
10pm - 12:30am

SKILLED DRIVERS NEEDED
Seeking experienced drivers 18 years+ for confidential project in high-speed environment. Must hold valid driver's licence and be willing to take risks. Please send blood type and employment history to www.testdriveinfo.com

413.883.1144
Graduation Parties
Private Parties
UMass Discount
Chance Perspective
Hip Hop Reggae R&B
Entertainment Co. gemini

Now More Than Ever, Appearance Counts...
INTERVIEW SUITS
Priced to fit any budget.
We specialize in suits for graduate school and job placement interviews.
Jonathan Reid
The men's store in the Hampshire Mall.

THRILL SEEKERS
We have a number of exotic cars that need to be test-driven by individuals who are willing to take risks. Great career opportunity for individuals 18+ with valid medical insurance. For more information go to www.testdriveinfo.com

Eliminate
FEARS/ALLERGIES
In one session
Fear of flying, public speaking, exams, needles, elevators, heights, allergies and other disturbances can be eliminated in one session.
Order a free booklet at 413 374 8217

Castaway Lounge
Will proudly present another successful
Amateur Night
Monday May 6th starting at 7 pm
PENTHOUSE PET DOMINIQUE ST.CROIX
◆ Cash prizes awarded
◆ All ladies over 18 must apply in person
◆ Open on Mondays at 3pm with 10 Beautiful Exotic Entertainers. Food and Prizes given away
Open Tuesdays Saturday 11am 1am
VIP Room available for private engagement parties
Phone# 413. 665. 8733

Medical MD & Veterinary Degree Programs
Making World-Class Physicians & Veterinarians Today, For Tomorrow's World

- Programs to meet the needs of high school and college graduates.
- More than a half century old well-recognized and established European medical and veterinary universities.
- Programs recognized by the National Committee on Medical Education, Accreditation, and the U.S. Department of Education.
- 100% financial aid is available. The U.S. government provides subsidized loans to qualified students in our programs.
- Approved by New York Medical Education Board for clinical training in the state of New York. (A state with a high number of residency positions.)
- Medical and veterinary clinical clerkships/training in the USA.
- Smaller class size with traditional European tutorial style education.
- Programs offer opportunity to earn dual degrees – MD PhD, MD MBA, MD MSHA, MD MPHA, etc.
- Much safer campus environment, compared to many campuses in the USA, allowing retaining and strengthening of cultural identities.
- English language curriculum matches to major American medical and veterinary schools.
- An excellent opportunity for hands-on participation for extensive training and experience.
- Alumni holding very good positions all over the USA.

When it comes to medical & veterinary education, our programs set standards for excellence. With cooperation from European universities, Hope Medical Institute brings you a unique, unmatched opportunity at your doorstep.

APPLY NOW!
For the October 2002 Term
For more detailed information, please contact us at:
HOPE MEDICAL INSTITUTE
753 Thimble Shoals Blvd., Bldg 2B, Newport News, VA 23606-3575
PHONE: (757) 873-3333 * FAX: (757) 873-6661

...denim. ZANNA
Women's Clothing, Shoes & Accessories
Amherst Northampton Williamstown
www.zanna.com

...capris. ZANNA
Women's Clothing, Shoes & Accessories
Amherst Northampton Williamstown
www.zanna.com

...sandals. ZANNA
Women's Clothing, Shoes & Accessories
Amherst Northampton Williamstown
www.zanna.com

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE!
"Here's Looking At You Kid" ON THE GIANT SCREEN
Humphrey BOGART
Ingrid BERGMAN
Casablanca
AND FOR LOVERS OF ALL AGES! BALCONY $6.00
SOME THINGS JUST GET BETTER AS TIME GOES BY
HENREID RAINS VEIDT GREENSTREET LORRE
LATE SHOW FRI. APR. 19 @ 11:45 P.M.
MATINEE SAT. APR. 20 AT 5:00 P.M.
MAIN FLOOR SEATS $5.00
Downtown Northampton's
Academy of Music
Movie-Line 413-584-8435
academyofmusictheatre.com

CINEMARK
CINEMARK AT HAMPSHIRE MALL
Schedule for Friday 4/12 – Thursday 4/18
Purchase Tickets Online @ cinemark.com
CRADDOCK LANES (R) 12:05 4:05 7:25 10:30*
THE SWEETEST THING (R) 12:20 4:10 7:20 10:00*
HIGH CRIMES (PG13) 12:25 4:20 7:15 10:05*
NATIONAL LAMPOON'S VAN WILDER (R) 12:45 4:35 7:50 10:15*
BIG TROUBLE (PG13) 4:10 10:15*
PANIC ROOM (R) 12:40 4:30 7:40 10:35
MONSTERS BALL (R) 12:30 4:40 7:35 10:25
THE ROOKIE (G) 12:25 4:00 7:10 10:10
DEATH TO SMOOCHY (PG) 12:50 4:45 7:45 10:20
CLOCKSTOPPERS (PG) 12:55 4:25 7:05 9:30
BLADE 2 (R) 12:15 4:15 7:00 9:45
ICE AGE (PG) 12:10 2:15 4:25 6:45 9:00
LORD OF THE RINGS (PG13) 12:00 6:30*
Senior Movie - 4/18/02
PANIC ROOM doors open at 11:45am
* NO PASSES NO SUPERPASSES
Times & showtimes available at cinemark.com

College Self-Storage
Monthly/Annual Rentals
College Payment Plans
Minutes From Campus
Electronic Card Access
Security Fenced Perimeter
Multi-Size Units
Route 9, Belchertown
323-9792

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED OP EDITOR: MATTHEW DESPRES

Assisted suicide:

who decides when a life is over?

Proponents of civil liberties should applaud the news that a federal judge upheld Oregon's assisted-suicide law on Wednesday. U.S. District Judge Robert Jones ruled that Attorney General John Ashcroft lacked the authority to block the initiative.

"The citizens of Oregon, through their democratic initiative process, have chosen to resolve the moral, legal and ethical debate on physician-assisted suicide for themselves by voting — not once, but twice — in favor of the Oregon act," Judge Jones wrote in his decision.

Ashcroft's attempt to ban all lethal prescriptions late last year was wrong not only because it violated the wishes of the majority of Oregon voters who supported the law in two statewide elections, but also because the government – be it on the federal, state, or local level – has no right to tell the terminally ill that they must cling to life for as long as possible.

Judge Jones' decision dealt entirely with the implications of a federal official rejecting the choice made by voters, rather than the issue of assisted suicide itself. He even wrote about the positive intentions of those opposed to such laws.

"Many of our citizens, including the highest respected leaders of this country, oppose assisted suicide," he wrote in his ruling. "But the fact that opposition to assisted suicide may be fully justified, morally, ethically, religiously or otherwise, does not permit a federal statute to be manipulated from its true meaning to satisfy even a worthy goal."

Judge Jones is correct that many opponents of assisted suicide laws have noble intentions. But even in cases unlike this one, in which federal officials have not contravened state decisions, no one has the right to tell a terminally ill patient whether or not to prolong their life.

Many feel, for religious or ethical reasons, that no one has the right to take their own lives. While these individuals are free to make that choice for themselves, no one in a free society has the right to make such a decision for another. For governmental officials to tell a cancer patient, whose every waking moment is filled with agony, that they know best in such a situation seems the ultimate act of government paternalism.

There are many who assert that the terminally ill are capable of taking their own lives without the government's help, and that legalizing assisted suicide would be an unnecessary legal minefield. While the legal implications of assisted suicide are indeed messy, those who would cite such an argument are ignoring that many terminally ill people are too feeble to take their own lives without assistance. They also ignore the fact that even those who with the requisite strength could not take their lives as painlessly as they could with the help of a medical professional.

When John Ashcroft was a U.S. Senator from Missouri, he regularly campaigned on the theme of "less government," saying that the federal government was overly present in the lives of citizens. Why, then, has he decided that the federal government should not only overturn the will of a state's voters, but also interfere in one of the most personal decisions one can make?

Information from CNN.com was used in writing this editorial.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

Acts of terror:

United States more familiar than you may think

JESSE GREENSPAN

"[An] act of terrorism, means any activity that [A] involves a violent act or an act dangerous to human life that is a violation of the criminal laws of the United States or any State, or that would be a criminal violation if committed within the jurisdiction of the United States or of any State, and [B] appears to be intended (i) to intimidate or coerce a civilian population; (ii) to influence the policy of a government by intimidation or coercion; or (iii) to affect the conduct of a government by assassination or kidnapping."

The above sentence defines an act of terrorism in the eyes of the U.S. government, and by all accounts, what happened on Sept. 11 fits into this category.

However, our own U.S. government has been just as guilty as Osama bin Laden when it comes to violating this law, particularly in Latin America. In Nicaragua, an oppressive dictator named Anastasio Somoza Garcia made a habit of killing political opponents, banning labor movements and generally torturing the poverty-stricken population throughout his rule (1937-1957).

Unfortunately for the people of Nicaragua, though, Somoza and his son (who ruled the dictatorship after 1957) were very beneficial to American companies, who worked the population for much less than they would have to pay U.S. workers. As a result of this, many companies moved to Nicaragua (and other Latin American nations), leaving workers in the United States unemployed and forcing foreign workers to work for what amounted to little more than slave labor.

When a group known as the Sandanistas finally overthrew the oppressive regime in 1979, some worried this group would make it difficult for American companies to continue exploiting the general population. Of course, President Reagan vowed that he would return Somoza to the Nicaraguan presidency and branded the as Sandanistas "communists," which was the most surefire way of taking away their credibility in the eyes of most Americans.

In order to fund contra army intent on overthrowing the new Sandanista government, Reagan and Oliver North (who spearheaded the entire operation) sold high-powered weapons to Iran, one of the countries recently touted as being an axis of evil by George W. Bush. There is even a large amount of evidence to suggest that North brought cocaine back into the United States in order to fund his project. By the time the scandal broke, the contra armies had killed or wounded nearly 10 percent of the Nicaraguan population, burning homes and hospitals in the process and killing countless unarmed innocents in a brutal act of terrorism. All of this was clearly against a Congressional law that banned exactly such behavior, but all of the key players still escaped major punishment, as President George Bush (the first one) pardoned the six members that had been indicted for the crime in 1992.

This incident is not an isolated occurrence. Virtually every Latin American nation (Guatemala, Chile, Cuba and Grenada just to name a few) has been attacked and branded "communist" when an anti-American regime comes into power. But these countries only become anti-American after U.S. companies exploit the population for their own benefit.

Latin America is not the only place that has suffered under U.S. terrorism. During the Vietnam War, President Nixon ordered a mass bombing of Cambodia, which killed over a million people. This killing of countless innocent Cambodians was justified according to Nixon, because some North Vietnamese were fleeing their own war-torn nation. However, these were not soldiers running from combat; they were civilians trying to avoid being killed. Still, it was not the fact that two million Asians and 54,000 Americans died in an unjust war that hurts the conscious of people like Reagan. Instead, the "shame" of Vietnam was only brought on by the fact that the United States lost the war in the first place.

In 1998, Al Qaeda ruthlessly bombed two American embassies in Africa. It was another brutal act of terrorism in what seems to be a never-ending cycle, but no evidence could be found against any specific perpetrators. President Clinton could not stomach this, however, and was also looking for something to divert attention away from the Monica Lewinsky scandal. He ordered a bombing of Africa, which did nothing to hit any Al Qaeda operatives, but instead decimated a pharmaceutical plant in Sudan that many Africans depended on for cheap medicine. In the absence of this plant, it is estimated that thousands of Sudanese have already died from such diseases as malaria and tuberculosis.

When the World Trade Center came crashing down on Sept. 11, it was a horrible act, committed by horrible people. However, it was something that the United States has done on countless occasions. Bombing Afghanistan has only escalated the cycle of violence and has caused a lot more harm than good.

Osama bin Laden still remains a free man while innocent Afghan citizens continue to suffer from his actions. Already, more innocent Afghans have died as a result of the U.S. bombings than all the innocent American citizens killed on Sept. 11 put together. Millions and millions of dollars continue to get poured into the military while people in our own country go to sleep hungry every night. How many more people must die before the United States satisfies its lust for revenge? As Mohandas Ghandi said, "An eye for an eye will make the world blind." It is time to end the "war on terror" in Afghanistan.

Jesse Greenspan is a Collegian Columnist.

Information from Noam Chomsky's "9-11" and Arthur Serota's "Ending Apartheid in America" was used in this article.

© Arizona Republic. Dist. by UFS Inc.

"And if someday I find my peace of mind. I will share my wealth with all of human kind."

Distance learning, lighting nature and pond swimming

To the editor:

The latest ad-ops for UMass Online – see UMass without seeing UMass – may sound like an unfortunate joke, but it nonetheless describes the fastest, and perhaps only, growing sector of education within the UMass system. As whole departments close their doors or reduce their course offerings, distance learning on the Amherst campus has expanded from one course offering in fall of 1999 to 78 in 2002. In just three years, the five-campus UMass Online system now offers 27 degree- and certificates and hundreds of classes each year.

Over $10 million have been put away by the Board of Trustees to fund this project, nearly two-thirds of the entire University budget gap. When asked in the December Chancellor's forum to explain how the administration could justify spending this kind of money in hard times, the response was not a denial, but an indignant defense: this is an investment.

Though it may not make intuitive logic to offer courses on students' home PC's when they live on campus, the University is not lying when they suggest there is a financial logic behind the decision: online courses are offered by the private wing of the University – the Division of Continuing Education – a program funded solely by student fees.

The students pay in this scenario, coughing up Continuing Education tuition over and above their regular (recently raised) tuition and fees. The instructor also pays; the wages, as many already know, are typically half in Continuing Education what they are in "regular session" courses. The hidden cost to the instructor, however, is far beyond what wage they are making while they teach. Unlike ordinary classroom instruction in which the instructor produces knowledge and edification for their students, the instructor in an online course actually creates a sellable commodity – a course immortalized in cyberspace that can be used and re-used and sold by the creator or anyone else.

There is a larger problem with online education that goes beyond the rights of the individual instructor and the pocketbook of the individual student. As the University's funding source erodes, as it is slowly pushed from being a state-funded institution to a state-subsidized institution, the institution is under pressure to replace that support with private, market sources. While opportunistic companies such as I College and Microsoft market their products as a way to solve this crisis, this short-term solution to our funding problems may make the situation even worse. Even at ivy-league institutions like Columbia, their "name-brand" recognition has not landed them a cent – their online program is in serious financial trouble. And even if UMass Online could net millions, it would teach a complacent legislature that we should fund education on the open market, with the technological equivalent of bake-sale instead of state funds. But with a added million, even an added two or three million, we wouldn't come close to filling our budget gap and risk the quality and integrity of the academic profession. It's a sell-out in the purest sense.

As UMass goes into negotiations with the Graduate Employee Organization and the Massachusetts Society of Professors separately over online education, we hope to use this opportunity to challenge what the University refers to on their website as a "one-stop marketplace" for education – ensuring protection for teachers, creators and students while this new technology comes into its own and, for better and worse, comes to stay.

Benjamin Balthaser
GEO

To the editor:

I am writing this letter regarding the article on April 17, 2002 about the walk to "Take Back the Trail." As a woman on the UMass Campus and a resident of Orchard Hill, I am very concerned about safety. I always watch where I walk and try to have someone with me whenever possible. However, I oppose lighting the "rape trail." I enjoy using the Protected Natural Area to cross-country ski, jog and walk. There are some beautiful things there. There is wonderful wildlife. I feel completely comfortable walking there in the daytime. The "rape trail" is not intended for use after dark. There are many signs warning people that they should keep out. This is not an ordinary campus pathway. It is an unimproved natural area that needs protection. I agree that the University is responsible for our safety and that the Escort Service is (or was) a vital part of that. I also believe that there should be more call boxes around campus, including some in the Natural Area. But lighting this area should not be an option. It would damage the area and make it just another heavily traveled campus pathway. If you need to get to Sylvan, take someone with you or walk down the Worcester Trail and through Northeast.

We also need to change our words. Why is it called the "rape trail" – because it is rural and removed? As far as I know, in my four years at UMass and in the Upper Central and Orchard Hill living areas, no one has been raped there. Rape is a terrible, powerful thing. It is definitely something to be afraid about. Calling it the Natural Area takes away the stigma and the power of fear. Please, leave the Natural area just that: beautiful and natural.

Emily Tisei
UMass

To the editor:

Hmm, another budget cut at UMass? The Physical Plant has been decreasing its budget for the last four years, and you ask who is this Physical Plant? I don't ever see them around campus? Well, the Physical Plant is indeed very important and is put in charge of the stuff nobody wants to deal with, like the sewage and water flows of UMass. The Physical Plant is also getting hit pretty hard with budget cuts this spring, along with every other department, which is making it that much more difficult to upkeep the University's water ways.

For example, the campus pond. Yeah, you know that brown pond in the center of UMass with millions of geese and ducks afloat? When I walk by the pond on a nice sunny day, I look down to find garbage outlining the pond. I see lots of beer cans, water bottles and plastic bags. And it makes me sick! I want to see a nice garbage-free pond, a pond that I can actually swim in…

Wait. This is possible. Swimming in the pond, I mean. I've been speaking with Physical Plant, and they have agreed to lower the campus pond half way on April 20 (Saturday) at 12:30 p.m., so students like myself can wade into the pond (with waders and gloves of course) and pull out all of the unwanted garbage to make the UMass community a safer place to be. Ellen Story will make a guest appearance, as she has been asked to speak about water quality and community involvement. The Massachusetts Community Water Watch (an Americorps run program) did this two years ago, at which time UMass and Amherst College students filled two dump trucks of garbage. Students found a lot of beer bottles and a couple of tires in the campus pond, and after a day of hard work, they then enjoyed a nice swim.

With Massachusetts being the second state to have the worst water quality in the United States, students need to be educated on the straight facts and show that they care by getting out there and participating in events like river, beach and pond clean ups. The water quality issues has been going on for more than four years with the Department of Health issuing a health advisory on the dangers of pregnant women consuming fish caught in Massachusetts waters due its high mercury levels.

With Earth Day coming up, the Massachusetts Community Water Watch will be planning smaller clean ups and needing the help of interested students. Water quality is a real issue, and students need to act now and make a difference. Participating locally will effect the environment on a wider scale with clean rivers flowing into the ocean, making fish safer for consumption. For more information about this Earth Day event, please call Wilhelmina at 545-0199 and help bring attention to important issues like the water quality in the state of Massachusetts.

Michelle Johnson
UMass

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS & LIVING Weekend Edition

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 4.19.02 ARTS EDITOR: MIKE DELANO

"Backlash" preview

After my perfect record predicting the results of Wrestlemania (six for six, baby), time to break out the crystal ball and discuss the WWF's next Pay Per View event, "Backlash," which is this Sunday. So here it is, your "Tube Notes" preview of "Backlash."

Triple H vs. Hulk Hogan- WWF Title Match

The Background: It's hard to believe that it's the year 2002, and Hulk Hogan is in a main event of a WWF Pay Per View. But alas, hell has not frozen over, "The Hulkster" is back in the title mix in the WWF.

The Match: Triple H has stated in the past that he would take great pride in getting a good match out of old man Hogan, and this is his chance. He will have to be on top of his game to get a better match out of "The Hulkster," than The Rock did at Wrestlemania. Of course, technically it won't be any good, but it could succeed with massive amounts of crowd heat and the nostalgia factor.

The Result: I'd be shocked to see Hogan come away with the belt. On the other hand, is Hogan really going to job two Pay Per Views in row? Still, I doubt the WWF would cut off Triple H's reign this quickly. Pick- Triple H

Stone Cold Steve Austin vs. The Undertaker- #1 Contenders Match, Special Ref: Ric Flair

The Background: If Hogan being in the main event wasn't enough to prove that the WWF is in a time warp, Austin and The Undertaker are fighting… again! The winner of this one is the new Number One Contender for the WWF Title.

The Match: These two usually manage to put on solid but unspectacular matches. If they both are motivated, it could be excellent. Flair as the special referee ads an interesting element, and he will obviously be involved in the finish.

The Result: It's a toss up between these two, as the winner depends on what direction the WWF wants to go with their May Pay Per View. I'll pick Taker when Flair somehow causes Austin to lose. Likely, the WWF will save Austin vs. Triple H for "Summerslam." Plus, having Austin fight Triple H this soon would force the WWF to pick one of them over the other, a decision that could be volatile, given the reported backstage tension between the two. Pick: Undertaker

Bradshaw vs. Scott Hall

The Background: This one has had some solid buildup, with Bradshaw receiving an increased push since the split. The question is: should Bradshaw even be getting a push given his average ability? It's hard to imagine that a feud with Bradshaw was what the WWF envisioned when they signed the NWO last winter.

The Match: Average all the way around.

The Result: Hall wins, for the NWO needs to win something to be taken seriously.

Edge vs. Kurt Angle

The Background: It's good to see Edge taking a step up and being programmed against Angle. That is precisely what the WWF has to do create new stars.

The Match: This might be the best match on the show if they are given enough time. It's Edge's chance to prove he can deliver a great singles match and is worthy of a main event push. Then again, he'll need more than 10 minutes to pull it off.

The Result: Angle wins here, for the WWF wants to keep him at main event level. I'm not sure they are serious about pushing Edge.

Rob Van Dam vs. Eddy Guerrero- Intercontinental Title Match

The Background: Apparently the storyline here has something to do with Guerrero being mad at Van Dam for stealing "his" move: the frog splash. This match has actually received a great deal of buildup, and deservedly so.

The Match: It could be absolutely awesome if they get enough time and both are on top of their games. Hopefully, Eddy will return to his mid 90's self and produce a match of the year contender here.

The Result: It's a tossup, but I'll go with Van Dam. He is seriously over and should just continue to win to stay over.

Billy and Chuck vs. Al Snow and Maven- Tag Title Match

The Background: Maven and Al Snow challenging for the Tag Title makes it seem like the WWF is short on quality tag teams, and they are, mostly because they split most of their teams up recently.

The Match: Blah, it will be okay.

The Result: Billy and Chuck win, and they need the belts to stay over.

In Other Matches: Kidman and Tajiri should put on an excellent Cruiserweight Title Match. I'll pick Kidman when Tori (shockingly) costs Kidman the match. Brock Lesner will have a good match with Matt Hardy, who will be able to bump like mad for him; Lesner wins. Trish wins the Women's Title from Jazz.

Send feedback to Collegianwrestling@yahoo.com

Kurt Polesky is a Collegian Staff Member

Celine: her art will go on

COURTESY SONY

Celine's back, and that's the way it is.

By Nikolas Markantonatos
COLLEGIAN STAFF

CELINE DION
A New Day Has Come
Epic

After a two-year hiatus, Celine Dion is ready for her much-awaited comeback to the spotlight. After a string of successful hits in the 1990s and the titanic Titanic hit, "My Heart Will Go On," Dion bowed out for a sabbatical to enjoy a "normal" life. Dion was this close to suffering from the hyper-exposure Britney Spears is currently experiencing, and the break was needed for her just as much as it was needed for the public. Within a short time, Dion went from an unknown artist to a multi-platinum superstar, and her vocal prowess quickly shaped her as the Barbra Streisand of our time.

Now in her first studio album since 1997, Dion's A New Day Has Come is a sputtering collection of tunes similar to her previous efforts. Indeed, a new day has come for Dion, whose life has changed in several ways. She and husband and manager Rene Angelil, 26 years her senior, had a son 20 months ago after resorting to in vitro fertilization. Angelil has also made a full recovery from throat cancer. Miracles, life and death, are the subject matter that Dion sings about on this album. So she gets touched by an angel, wants the rain to wash away her tears, makes it through the darkness and finds a new and greater life.

Certain areas of the album show that Dion fell into the pop ditch using computerized digital equipment to pepper the songs. Dion gets the Cher-treatment—an electronic spin cycle—on "Sorry for Love," an unexpected change of pace that surprisingly works. The song is destined for club airplay, much as it has for other aging divas. "Rain, Tax (It's Inevitable)" is grown up teen pop with goofy lyrics: "Like rain, tax/ weeds grow up through the pavement cracks/ (it's inevitable)/ You see what I want/ What I want is you."

"I Surrender" is a powerful ballad only a singer with a voice like Dion's can pull off. Remakes of Etta James' "At Last" and Nat King Coles' "Nature Boy" are delivered soulfully. The guitar driven "Ten Days" is reminiscent of Sheryl Crow, an undeniably catchy pop-rocker with a surprisingly edgy vocal. "Have You Ever Been In Love" is Dion's best impression of Streisand. "Goodbye's (The Saddest Word)," written and produced by R.J. "Mutt" Lange and featuring wife Shania Twain on backing vocals, will either leave you nauseous or in tears.

The album's standout tracks are the mid-tempo "I'm Alive" and the stirring title track (the radio remix and studio cut are both included). "When the Wrong One Loves You Right" is another sweeping track characterized by sharp arrangement, tight hooks and strong emotional delivery.

The worst thing about Dion is that one can't expect much from her work. The adult contemporary audience loves her, and well, that's a mold from which she will never be able to break free. She's one of the best vocalists, but little else makes her an interesting artist/entertainer. It's reassuring that she knows she's not hip or cool, and she's comfortable with that unlike others who try desperately (and unsuccessfully) to gain street credibility. That is why we're never likely to see Dion hook up with the hottest rappers/producers. The subtle move to a fresher sound (one devoid of cheesy arrangements or overly edgy production) on A New Day Has Come was a smart move for Dion.

NY Times 'Ethicist' goes way of book

By Rachel Metz
DAILY CALIFORNIAN (U. CALIFORNIA-BERKELEY)

(U-WIRE) BERKELEY, Calif. - Seminally ethical moments in one's life are often few and far between. When moral dilemmas strike, however, they often promise to be both memorable and instructive. Maintaining a high and consistent moral standard of thought and action is the name of the game for Randy Cohen, writer of "The Ethicist" column, syndicated from The New York Times Magazine.

Cohen has collected and organized the most memorable of his queries and responses into the first anthology of his columns, "The Good, The Bad & The Difference." To a simple reprint of his initial judgments, Cohen has added a slew of additional viewpoints, disputes and features that greatly add to the flavor and diversity of what could otherwise essentially be a moral handbook. What is funniest about the letters Cohen receives is their revelation of America's lowest common ethical denominator, which, summed up, is close to "what you don't know can't hurt you."

Relishing the chance to delve into a humor narrative that the column does not, Cohen uses an diverse set of modes from sarcastic hyperbole to examples from his favorite moralist of the 18th century, Samuel Johnson, to make his points.

In a vaguely arrogant move, Cohen compares his book to Middle America's best-selling ethics bible, William Bennett's The Book of Virtue in the course of his explanatory introduction. "[B]oth reflect the different values of their authors. In Bennett's case, the values are Victorian, and the tone is cranky nostalgia," he writes.

He does have a purpose in disparaging the Boy Scout mores of America's past — the heart of ethics isn't just "keeping to the straight and narrow," but mediating baser instincts when two precepts coincide in a conflict. Many of the letters fall into just that rut, centering on a single rhetorical question in which the writer seeks to justify his or her "bad" behavior (as Cohen recognizes well).

Some of these range from the petty "I am considering sneaking into movies, but only into bad movies" to the inexplicable, "I sometimes pay another child $5-10 to ride with us, so I can use the car-pool lane."

The most problematic question was, "I'm about to buy a cool SUV, but my friends act like I'm some kind of criminal. Am I?"

In many peoples' opinions, he should be considered one, although law currently protects these high center of gravity, gas-guzzling behemoths as "light trucks." This case crosses the fine line from personal scruples into gross consumerism and thus creates an ethical dilemma of a political scale, one that is harder to condemn in this singleton's correspondence, though he does it with vehemence.

Even with his occasionally inflexibility, Cohen realizes that nobody has the final say with ethics. To that effect, he has invited guest ethicists from Jewish theologians to Dan Savage, author of the syndicated sex-advice column, "Savage Love."

At the very end, in a kind of "unsolved mysteries" section, the most contested questions are resurrected and offered for reexamination. Most of them are the lasting lose-lose situations we will continue to find ourselves in. One is almost identical to the check dilemma but hits closer to home for students: Would you point out a mistakenly higher grade in return for a cozy, righteous feeling, or would you chalk it up to administrative incompetence and never tell?

The Five College Area's Source for Discovering the Weekly Happenings of New England and Beyond

The Source

Compiled by Nick Pizzolato Send all submissions to collegiansource@yahoo.com

COURTESY UMASS ARTS CENTER

The University Chamber Choir will perform in "Concert for the Earth II" today at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall.

COURTESY KEN KUSHNER

The UMass Wind Ensemble will perform "Winds in Collaboration" on Sunday, April 21 at 3 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall.

GALLERY EXHIBITIONS

UMASS – The University Gallery will exhibit The Culture of Violence. It is available for viewing between the hours of 11 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and from 2 to 5 p.m. on Sundays. Free and open to the public.

UMASS – The Augusta Savage Gallery presents Young Artists: Images from South Africa. The artwork is inspired by the culture and years of oppression that South Africans have endured. The show, currently running, will be available until April 24. The gallery is located in the New Africa House and is open from 1 to 7 p.m. Monday and Tuesday and from Wednesday through Friday from 1 to 5 p.m.

UMASS – The Central Gallery is bringing to UMass the exhibit Mother Tongue, which will be open until April 25. The gallery is open from 3 to 6 p.m. Monday through Thursday and from 2 to 5 p.m. on Sundays.

MUSIC

UMASS – On Friday, April 19 at 8 p.m. the University Chamber Choir will perform "Concert for the Earth II" in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. The music revolves around conservation of the earth and will feature a variety of musical styles and artists. The show is free and open to all ages.

THEATER

UMASS – Egyptian Playwright Nora Amin will be performing the North American Premiere of Message to my Father. Her visit will also be connected with a student performance of The Box of our Lives and a panel discussion entitled, "The Challenges of Staging Theatrical Works in Transition." Box will be performed at the Curtain Theater on April 22 at 5 p.m. The panel discussion will take place in Herter Hall at 5 p.m. on April 23. The premiere of Message to my Father will be performed in the Curtain Theater at 7 p.m. on April 25. All the events are free and open to the public.

UMASS – Woyzeck, the unfinished last play of deceased German playwright Georg Buchner, will be performed at the Curtain Theater on April 16-20 at 8 p.m. and will have matinees on April 20 at 2 p.m. Tickets are $7 for general admission and $4 for students and seniors.

SMITH – The Smith theater department will present the feminist masterpiece, The House of Bernarda Alba by Federico Garcia Lopez. It centers on daughters of Alba, struggling for love and freedom in a time and place where neither is allowed for women and will be shown April 17-20 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $4 for students. Reservations may be made by calling 585-ARTS.

FILM

The Radical Student Union presents the film Year in the Streets, a documentary showing the street level determination of protesters struggling for social and political justice. Viewings will be held in the Campus Center at 7 p.m.; on April 22 in rooms 805-809 and on April 23 and 24 in room 911.

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Cheerleading try-outs!!! UMASS Coed, All-girl cheerleading Mascot tryouts! Totman- Mon. April 22nd 5-7:30 pm, Tue. 23rd, 6-7:30 pm. Curry Hicks Cage Wed. 24th 6 to 9 pm, Sat 27th 11 am to 3 pm. For Info call Kevin Thompson @ 665-0056.

Fraternities * Sororities Clubs * Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 with the easy Campusfundraiser.com three hour fundraising event. Does not involve credit card applications. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact Campusfundraiser.com at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over lease. Puffton 3-bedroom. June 1st. 549-5249.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. - Now Available, 1&2 bedroom apts. Leases begin June, July, Aug or Sept. 1 year lease. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywine-apts.com stop by or call (413) 549-0600.

Summer Sublet with lease option in Fall. Boulders. Available 7/1. 256-2373.

Condos 3 bedrooms, hardwood floors, study area in basement, cable, telephone (Internet access), in all bedrooms and study NOW SHOWING for JUNE and SEPTEMBER NO FEES. www.amherstlincolnrealty.com 253-7879

CENTER OF TOWN 1,2,3 bedroom apts., hardwood floors. NOW SHOWING for JUNE and SEPTEMBER NO FEES www.amherstlincolnrealty.com 253-7879

EMPLOYMENT

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individual, full and part time positions available immediately. Only those able to work the upcoming summer should apply. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413)584-4746.

Painters P/F time 1-3 yrs experience. Michael 367-9810.

Live in Positions at residential summer camp in Charlton, MA. Available to anyone who honestly likes being with children. Call 800-433-8575. natureclassroom.org

Person to sell tickets payment is half of proceeds, call Michael: 546-3050.

EMPLOYMENT

CAMP WAYNE FOR GIRLS-Northeast Pennsylvania (6/19-8/17/02). Children's sleep-away camp. If you love children and want to have a GREAT summer we are still looking for Directors for Swimming, Golf, Tennis, Cheerleading and Ass't Directors for Sports and Gymnastics. Counselors for: Tennis, Gymnastics, Drama, Basketball, Golf, Soccer, Sailing, Sculpture/Lino Cuts, Silkscreen, Batik, Jewelry, Calligraphy, Guitar, Self-Defense, Video, Piano, Ropes, Mother's Helper, Night Watchperson. On Campus Interviews Arranged. Call 800-279-3019 or go to www.campwaynegirls.com.

EMPLOYMENT

Nantucket Island Summer Job opportunity beginning mid June office Assistant with good computer & telephone skills, miscellaneous errand running. Salary & housing 508-228-3942 or send resume to Rafael Osona Auctions P.O. box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02584.

SUMMER INTERNSHIPS Earn $3000 to 7000++ and gain valuable business experience working for the UMASS Official Campus Telephone Directory. Excellent Advertising, Sales, and Marketing opportunity. GREAT RESUME BOOSTER! Call Paul at AroundCampus, Inc. 1-800-466-2221 ext. 288. www.aroundcampus.com

Work in Korea. Call the Career Center, 545-2224.

EMPLOYMENT

Bub's Bar-B-Q Now hiring enthusiastic & energetic persons for full & part-time. Must be 18 yrs or older. Apply in person between 2&4 pm Tues-Fri. 548-9630.

ENTERTAINMENT

Rock Band available for end of year parties free of charge check out our website, oversightrocks.com + contact Charlie @ (508) 243-6091.

FOR SALE

P.S. 2 w/6 games, 2 controllers, DVD remote, mem. Card $400.00 O/B/O. 256-2373.

INSTRUCTIONS

Become an EMT! Sign up for summer and fall classes now call 545-1885 or go to www.umass.edu/ems.

ROOM FOR RENT

Roommate needed in June 2 bedroom apt. $418 /month. Heat& hot water included on bus route. Lauren 253-2103.

1 Room for rent. One mile from Campus Center of Amherst. On bus line. Share w/2 males, call 253-9701 for details.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Sublet in Sunderland with possible fall option. $375/mo on bus route. One bedroom available.665-0377

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

SERVICES

Feeling ripped off? Your new car is a lemon? The warranty on your stereo just expired and it needs major repairs; you loaned a friend money and you can't get it back or the dry cleaners ruined your favorite suit! Is ELSI giving you grief about your student loan? Are debt collectors knocking at your door? Contact the Student Legal Services Office at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

TO SUBLET

2 Bedroom apartment partially furnished available June 1st to sublet w/option to lease on bus route. 413-549-9612.

Summer sublet 2 bedroom apartment South Amherst free heat, water, weigh room right on bus route, laundry w/option to lease in fall 253-8960

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

3	CBS/3
4	NESN
5	Fox Sport NE
6	PBS/57
7	HSCN Movie Channel
8	WB/20
9	HSCN Movie Channel
10	TV Guide Channel
11	FOX/61
12	ABC/40
13	NBC/22
14	International Channel
15	UMATV
16	HSCN Info Channel
17	ESPN
18	ESPN 2
19	UVC-19
20	ESPN Classic
21	Comedy Central
22	CNN
23	CNN HL
24	Weather Channel
25	Learning Channel
26	History Channel
27	A & E
28	Discovery Health
30	Food Network
31	NASA
32	Home & Garden TV
33	Travel Channel
34	Lifetime
35	CNBC
36	Tech TV
37	BET
38	UPN-38
39	USA
40	TNN
41	MTV
42	CMT
43	VH-1
44	TNT
45	TBS
46	E! Entertainment
47	Sci-Fi Channel
48	Court TV
49	Nick at Nite
50	Comedy Central
51	Cartoon Network
52	Game Show Network
53	TV Land
54	POX Family
55	Univision
56	Galavision
57	Telemundo
58	College TV Network
59	C-SPAN
60	C-SPAN2
61	Bloomberg Television

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass

Client:_____ Date:_____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run:_____ Headline:_____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra):_____ Authorized signature:_____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — APRIL 19, 2002

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Connecticut Journal		Now With Bill Moyers (N)		Nova Lost King of the Maya
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Major League Baseball Toronto Blue Jays at New York Yankees. (Live)						48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	AFP: American Fighter Pilot		Fire! Monday "Stop, Search"		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WVIT	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Funniest Home Videos		More Bloopers (In Stereo)		20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	Sabrina-Witch	Raising Dad	Reba (N)	Maybe It's Me	News		Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Providence (N) (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)		Law & Order: Special Victims		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Sabrina-Witch	Raising Dad	Reba (N)	Maybe It's Me	News	Home Imp.	Blind Date	Blind Date
WVIT	5	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Providence (N) (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)		Law & Order: Special Victims		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	'70s Show	Malcolm Mid.	Dark Angel "She Ain't Heavy"		News		Raymond	Seinfeld
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel Fortune	Jeopardy!	Providence (N) (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)		Law & Order: Special Victims		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Great New England Auction						Great New England Auction Continues
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Funniest Home Videos		More Bloopers (In Stereo)		20/20		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Frasier	Frasier	★★½ "Outbreak" (1995, Suspense) Dustin Hoffman, Rene Russo. (In Stereo)						5th Wheel	Shipmates
WTBS	30	Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Major League Baseball	Florida Marlins at Atlanta Braves. (Live)						★★★ "Interview With the Vampire" (1994, Horror)
A&E	49	Law & Order	Confession	The View (In Stereo)		Biography: Buddy Holly		One-on-One With David Frost		Elton John: My Gift Is My Song		Law & Order "Star Struck"
CNN	23	Moneyline		Crossfire (Live)		Amer. Stories	The Point	Larry King Live		Newsnight		Crossfire	Moneyline
COM	29	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Kasbah	Lounge Lizards	Com-Presents	Com-Presents	Com-Presents	Com-Presents	Com-Presents	Sinbad Son of a Preacher Man
DISC	69	Ultimate Guide "Boats"		Perfect Mothers, Predators		Lifeline "Miami"		Mutter Museum		Curators of Crime (N)		Lifeline "Miami"
ESPN	43	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs Conference Quarterfinal Game 2 -- Teams to Be Announced. (Live)						Baseball Tonight (N)		Sportscenter
LIFE	70	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Oprah! The Aileen Wuornos Story. (1992, Drama) Jean Smart.				Once and Again (In Stereo)
MTV	53	Real World	WWF Tough	WWF Tough	Osbournes	mtvICON Aerosmith (In Stereo)			Real World XI	Unplugged (N) (In Stereo)		Fear (In Stereo)
NICK	68	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Rugrats	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Hey Arnold!	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers
SCIFI	63	Star Trek "Metamorphosis"		Star Trek (In Stereo)		Strange World "Eliza" (N)		Farscape "Into the Lion's Den"		Lexx "Lyekka vs. Japan" (N)		Strange World "Eliza"
TLC	72	Vegas Rat Pack (N)		Medical Detect	Medical Detect	Medical Detect		Troopers "Brief" (N)		Protect and Serve (N)		City Cops: San Francisco Blue	Troopers "Brief"
TNT	44	NYPD Blue "Lying to Testify"		Pretender "Bloodlines"		★★½ "Money Talks" (1997, Comedy) Chris Tucker				NBA Playoff Preview (Live)		★★★ "Cliffhanger" (1993)
USA	62	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "Defenseless" (In Stereo)		★★★ "The Rock" (1996, Adventure) Sean Connery, Nicolas Cage.						Ultimate Fights
HBO	60	★★★ "Titan A.E." (2000) Voices of Matt Damon. (In Stereo) PG				★★★ "Gladiator" (2000, Action) Russell Crowe, Joaquin Phoenix. (In Stereo) R						Chris Rock (In Stereo)	Dennis Miller
MAX	59	(5:15) ★½ "Get Carter" (2000)		Broken Silence (In Stereo)		★★½ "Pay It Forward" (2000, Drama) Kevin Spacey. PG-13				★★★ "Charlie's Angels" (2000) Cameron Diaz		Erotic
SHOW	65	★★½ "My Blue Heaven" (1990, Comedy) Steve Martin. PG-13				★★½ "Traffic" (2000, Drama) Michael Douglas. TV (In Stereo) R						Jeremiah "Firewall" (TV) (N)	Red Shoe

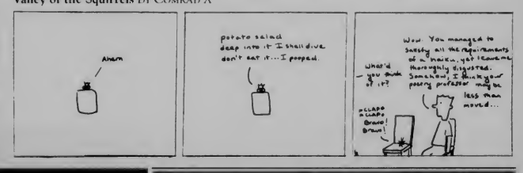
Antcat By Curtis Killian

Antcat By Curtis Killian

Highbrow By Aaron Eppy

Shut the Duck Up By Seany McSean

Shut the Duck Up By Seany McSean



The Torques By Ken Fredette

The Torques By Ken Fredette

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Quote of the Day

> "...Why am I so thirsty this morning when I drank so much last night."
>
> -A Danvers Native
>
> a.k.a. "The Boy", "Bruhma", "Ray's Boy-Toy", "There's Something about Guam",etc...

Amherst Weather

Friday	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 68 LOW: 54	HIGH: 73 LOW: 40	HIGH: 67 LOW: 37

Horoscopes

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – In New Jersey, it is against the law for a man to knit during the fishing season.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – In New Jersey, you may not slurp your soup.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – In New Jersey, if you have been convicted of driving while intoxicated, you may never again apply for personalized license plates.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – In New Jersey, it is against the law to "frown" at a police officer.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – In New Jersey, on a highway you cannot park under a bridge.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – In New Jersey, car dealerships are forbidden from opening on Sunday.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 21) – In New Jersey, you cannot pump your own gas. All gas stations are full service and full service only.

SCORPIO (Oct. 22-Nov. 21) – In New Jersey, automobiles are not to pass horse drawn carriages on the street.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – In New Jersey, it is illegal to delay or detain a homing pigeon.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – In Ocean City, New Jersey, raw hamburger may not be sold.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – In Trenton, New Jersey, pickles are not to be consumed on Sundays and you may not throw a bad pickle in the street.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – In Newark, New Jersey, it is illegal to sell ice cream after 6pm, unless the customer has a note from his doctor.

A.I. By Joseph Hession

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

New England Clam Chowder

Roast Turkey

Onion Quiche

Greek Style Tofu (vegan)

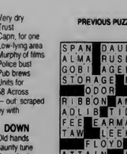
DINNER

New England Clam Chowder

BBQ Salmon

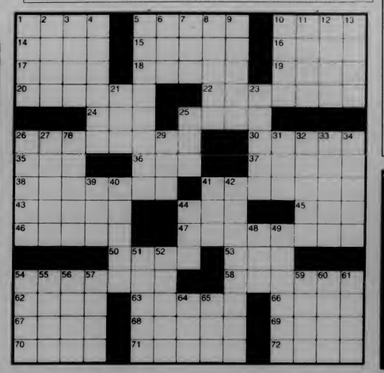
Veal Madeline

Brazilian Black Beans (vegan)



Garden Chili (vegan) (W Basics)

NEW at DB Mart...
HOT STUFF PIZZA
Buy a Personal Pan Pizza
Get a FREE order of BREADSTICKS
Redeem this coupon at:
298 TRIANGLE ST
AMHERST, MA
413 549 5606
Limit one coupon per customer
Expires 3/1/02
Amherst's Only True Hot Stuff



ACROSS
1 Extra
5 Walked in the ocean
10 Confess
14 "Ranger —" magazine
15 Zoo attraction
16 Grant, as land
17 Earthenware pot
18 Consumed
19 Use the post office
20 Radio noise
22 Pranced on the runway
24 Lodge member
25 Bronte heroine
26 Snow vehicles
30 Move smoothly
35 NYC's Madison, e.g.
36 Street in Pana
37 Was unwell
38 Setback
41 Observing Yom Kippur
43 Payola
44 Placed
45 Red — rose
46 Expensive
47 Unwelcome visitor
50 Encourage
53 Purpose
54 Gin-flavoring berry
58 Office machine
62 Very dry
63 Trust
66 Capri, for one
67 Low-lying area
68 Murphy of films
69 Police bust
70 Pub brews
71 Units for
58 Across
72 — out: scraped by with

DOWN
1 Old hands
2 Jaunty tune
3 Bruins' sch.
4 Uses the rink
5 They raze buildings
6 "Sir"
7 Morse signal
8 Foe
9 Benefactor
10 Highest point
11 Wiener schnitzel base
12 Garfield's pal
13 Fuse together
21 Sick
23 Painter of ballerinas
26 Pointed remarks
27 Plain as day
28 Contradict
29 Expected
31 Burning
32 Homeric epic
33 Tightly packed
34 Poe's first name
39 Actor Vigoda
40 Enliven
41 Pleasure
42 Embassy staffers
44 Mom's dessert?
48 — Grande
49 Ballpark official
51 Consult one's notes
52 Mark
54 Coffee slangily
55 — River of Asia
56 Cairo's river
57 Dangerous March date
59 Meryl, in "Out of Africa"
60 Writer Wiesel
61 "Sanford and Son" name
64 Boise's st
65 Scrooge and Tiny —

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

11-5-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Jess May
Photo Technician	Jen Eastwood
Copy Editor	Tiboru Grecyze-Blum
Production Assistant	Pete Done-Blackedout
Production Assistant	Mike "What" McCormick Adam DeYoung

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS WEEKEND EDITION
COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: ERIC SODERSTROM

NCAA bid on the line against Georgetown

A win over #6 Georgetown this weekend would give seniors like Marc Morley a chance to play in the NCAA Tournament before graduating.

By Matthew F. Sacco
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Georgetown and UMass have faced each other but three times in collegiate lacrosse action, and already a rivalry is prevalent. Flat out, when these two teams get together it is a treat to watch. In each of the last two seasons, the Hoyas and Minutemen have played arguably the most exciting game of the year.

Last April, Georgetown used a last minute goal by Steve Dusseau to capture the ECAC title and hand UMass its first loss of the season, 13-12 in Amherst. While two years ago, with the Minutemen well out of the playoff hunt, the two squads combined for 37 goals in a 19-18 Hoya victory in D.C.

This year the intensity should be at an all-time high.

"We've sort of changed places since last year," said senior attack Dan Paccione. "Last year we were undefeated and ranked like fourth in the nation, and they came in here and beat us. Now they are undefeated, and we want to go down and beat them."

As Paccione alluded to, this contest does come down to a sort of us vs. them ordeal. UMass is the public university to the north that scraps and claws for everything they get. G-Town, on the other hand, is a private school right smack in the middle of a lax hotbed. They can almost pick and choose from the top talent in high school lacrosse teams. In the words of UMass defenseman Tom Fallon, "they think they're better than everybody else."

But when Paccione lines up for the opening draw on Saturday afternoon, none of the aforementioned dissimilarities will be on his mind, because there are more important matters to attend to.

"This is our first playoff game," senior attack Marc Morley said after potting four goals against Harvard. "It's a must win for us, and we know that."

UMass enters the game with a 9-2 record and a 3-0 mark in the ECAC. It is highly unlikely, even with a win over Syracuse a week from today, that the Minutemen will garner an at-large bid to the NCAA tournament. That fact alone makes this weekend's contest the biggest game of the season and career for all the UMass seniors.

"This is a championship game for us," Coach Greg Cannella said after his squad dismantled the Crimson 18-10.

In a game of this magnitude with two teams that are so evenly matched, it is difficult to mark certain aspects as keys to the game. But this Saturday, a pair of match ups can turn the tide of the contest.

On UMass' defensive end, the key will be limiting Georgetown's Steve Dusseau. Dusseau is a first team All-American midfielder who has carried his team all year long. He's the man who scored the winning goal that kept the Minutemen out of the tournament last year, and they remember that.

To defend against a midfielder, usually a coach will mark him with another midfielder, preferably a long stick. In that strategy, Cannella has three choices. He can match up long stick middies Chris Gervat or Matt Garcia, who have a combined three years of experience, against a senior who's scored nine points in a game twice this year.

Or Cannella can ignore the disadvantage of a short stick and go with the experience of senior d-middie Paul Hutchen. A not-so-thought-about-but-increasingly-likely option is to mark Dusseau with senior All-American Matt McFarland. McFarland is a down low defender who has guarded attackmen his whole career. But he most certainly has the athletic ability to take Dusseau, and as a senior, he'll likely be in Cannella's ear begging for the match up. This is after all, his last shot at the tourney.

On the offensive end, the Kevin Leveille, Kyle Sweeney clash could be one for the ages. Sweeney, a long stick midfielder, was the defender who stripped Leveille of the ball in the final minutes of last year's battle, leading to Dusseau's game winner.

Leveille was enjoying a two-goal, one assist effort to that point, but he won't remember his stats; he'll surely remember Sweeney. Leveille, who like Sweeney is regarded as one of the best at his position, has yet to show the aggressive flair that led to a 43-point sophomore year. Although he has scored hat tricks on five occasions and five-points a pair of times, Leveille could learn some from watching Dusseau, a midfielder who carries his team offensively.

Nonetheless, if Leveille doesn't bring his aggressive game and lead the Minutemen on Saturday, then it will be tough for UMass to keep up offensively.

Midfielders Chris Fiore and Don Little and attackmen Paccione and Morley are capable scorers and could easily keep the Minutemen in the game. But Leveille is the catalyst, and if he steps out on the field with that I'm going to score six goals and there's nothing you can do about it look in his eyes, the Minutemen should be all right.

Senez squeezes past UConn

Drives in extra inning winner

By Jim Pignatiello
COLLEGIAN STAFF

AMHERST – The word "thriller" is thrown around quite a bit in sports writing. Any close game is considered a thriller these days.

UMass	19
UConn	18

Wednesday's match up between the Massachusetts baseball team (15-17) and Connecticut (16-15) truly was a thriller.

Find it hard to believe? Try these numbers on for size: 10 innings, 37 runs scored, 41 hits, seven errors.

All this after the two teams had played a 1-0 pitchers' duel just one week earlier in Storrs, Conn.

"I was surprised [that it was so high scoring]," junior left fielder Matt Klett said. "It was a totally opposite game but everyone came through in the clutch."

With one out in the bottom of the tenth, UMass head coach Mike Stone called for his top hitter, captain Aaron Senez (3-for-7) to bunt while Connell Clark (3-for-5) ran from third base on the pitch.

"I was thinking that once we tied it, [a suicide squeeze] might be an appropriate way to end it," Stone said. "The strategy was to get a fastball because it is much easier to bunt a fastball than a curveball."

The suicide squeeze worked when Senez was able to bunt the high fastball onto the ground and a hook slide by Clark at the plate beat the UConn catcher's tag.

The Maroon and White, had, in fact, been down to there last out in the bottom of the ninth. Down 18-17 with two outs and runners on first and second, sophomore Adam Stojanowski (3-for-6, four runs, four RBI) singled home junior Tim Klett (1-for-3, three runs scored) to send the game into extra innings.

Klett's run was the game's first score since the sixth inning when the two teams combined to score 13 times.

The Minutemen had cut an eight-run deficit to one with seven runs in the bottom of the sixth. Altieri brought Klett and Cullan Maimais home with a triple to deep left, and then scored on a Stojanowski single to right. Tom Flerbrook (2-for-4, four runs scored) and Clark added back to back singles. Stojanowski and Flerbrook scored on a Derrick Durepo (2-for-4, four RBI) double. A bad throw on the play scored Clark and moved Durepo – who scored on a sacrifice fly by outfielder Mike Kulak – to third.

"We got a lot of hits and we never died," Stone said. "This was one of those times when it was a real good come-from-behind effort. You never know what's going to happen – that's why baseball is so unique."

The UMass rally came after UConn broke a 10-10 tie in the top of the inning with an eight-run outburst, highlighted by a towering grand slam by shortstop Brett Burnham (who had hit a three-run shot in the second inning) and a two-run dinger by catcher Mike Leonard.

Stone finally found a hurler to silent the Huskies' bats when he called on freshman Neil Scheller, who finally got his team out of the inning when he got Mike McDonough, the first batter he faced, to fly out.

"I was just trying to get out of the inning," Scheller said. "We had been scoring runs all day, so I knew we could do it again."

Scheller, who was the game's winning pitcher, held what was a potent Husky offense in the first six innings to just one hit and no runs in the final four innings.

"I guess I just pitched well," Scheller said. "It feels good, but I didn't do anything different – just threw strikes and got people out. I haven't pitched much, just an inning here and there, but I am starting to get more confidence now."

"Neil did a great job," Stone said. "We need people to pitch like that."

Stone's crew returns to action with three games at home against Temple this weekend. The series will start with a doubleheader on Saturday and a single game on Sunday.

Senior Connell Clark had three bunt singles and a sacrifice bunt against UConn Wednesday.

Women's lax suffers worst defeat of '02

By Glen Straub
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Lacrosse is a game of runs. One team takes control of the momentum and tries to hold on to it as long as possible, but many times the momentum shifted to the other team.

In the 2002 season, the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team has been on the upside and downside of many scoring spurts.

On Wednesday, in their last road affair of the season before the postseason, the Minutemen succumbed to a Connecticut seven-goal scoring streak in the first half and loss to their hated rival, 15-7.

UConn	15
UMass	7

"I don't think we came to play," goaltender Cyndi Doyle said. "We normally do not lose to UConn, and we are pretty confident that we are the better team."

The defeat drops UMass' record to 8-5 on the season, while the Huskies improve to 6-5 overall.

"We had a slow warm-up and some people said the heat was getting to them, but we should have been more prepared to play," co-captain Jada Emery said.

UMass looked to start the first run of the game when junior co-captain, Jada Emery, scored her first of three goals nearly two minutes in to the game.

However, the Huskies would not let one goal rattle them as UConn attacker Kelly Feely fired one past UMass goaltender Cyndi Doyle nearly a minute after Emery's goal.

For the next eight minutes the game stood still at 1-1 as both teams could not find the back of the net.

Feely broke the scoreless period by netting her second goal of the match. However, in the blink of an eye, UMass returned the favor.

Nearly 16 second later, UMass leading goal scorer, sophomore Hope Zelinger played helper as she assisted on junior Leslie Pollack 12th goal of the season – knotting the score up at 2-2 with 11 minutes to go in the first half.

The back-and-forth play ended on that goal, though, for UMass as UConn threw a knockout-caliber punch – scoring seven straight goals in the middle of the first half.

"The ball was on the defensive side all game long," Doyle said. "They were running the same play over and over, and I was not reading it."

"When we started to break down we did not communicate," Emery added. "You can work hard, but if you do not communicate, it is hard to react to situations."

The Minutewomen were never able to recover in the second half and suffered through their worst performance of the season.

"We could have competed, and we didn't," Emery said.

UMass will attempt to bounce back on Sunday when they duel with Atlantic 10 conference foe, Temple, in Amherst. The contest has major implications for the post-season A-10 tournament.

"This could be the biggest game of the season, so we need to come out more ready than we have been all season long," Emery said.

UMass extends unbeaten streak to 21

Sortino's crew sweeps Central Connecticut

By Andy Vogt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Don't look now, but the Massachusetts softball team could be experiencing deja vu all over again after this weekend.

The Minutewomen knocked off Central Connecticut State University twice yesterday afternoon in New Britain, Conn., improving their record to 36-10 on the season and prolonging their 21-game winning streak. The rock solid pitching that has allowed UMass to be so dominant during the past month again was picture perfect, as the Blue Devils managed only three hits total and were unable to plate a single run in the twin bill. Kaila Holtz and Jen Hadley tossed the back-to-back blankings as they won their respective games, 3-0 and 1-0.

UMass	3	1
CCSU	0	0

Holtz almost threw her second no-hitter in less than a week, as she held CCSU to a lone hit in the game while striking out nine Blue Devil batters. However, despite the home team's offensive woes, the Minutewomen could not string together any scoreboard tallies, and the two teams were deadlocked going into the seventh inning.

Anna Percy started the UMass rally with a leadoff walk and a stolen base. Aisha Franke and Ashley Bakken then packed the sacks with back-to-back bunts, and Emily Robustelli followed with a sacrifice fly to plate the only run the Maroon and White would need. Franke, however, came home on a CCSU miscue on the play, and senior captain Teri Rooney followed later in the inning with a sac fly of her own to plate the third UMass run.

In the nightcap of the doubleheader, UMass again was unable to sustain significant production against the CCSU pitching, but Hadley was equally dominant, hurling a two-hitter and mowing down eight batters. The visitors plated their only run when sophomore pinch-hitter Nicole Wilson knocked in Brandi Cross, who had reached on a walk earlier in the inning. Hadley, the reigning Atlantic 10 Pitcher of the Year, improved her record to 16-3, while Holtz has almost equaled her teammate's total with a 15-5 mark this season.

Should the Minutewomen sweep this weekend's home three-game set against 7-14 St. Bonaventure, they will have tied a school-record with 24 straight wins, which was also reached last season. UMass also has a current 32-game home winning streak and a streak of 37 consecutive Atlantic 10 victories as well). However, last year's streak was halted before the record could be broken, as UMass lost a heart-breaking 1-0 game to UConn in Storrs, Conn. Who is the Maroon and White's next opponent following the Bonnies, when they potentially look to break the record? You guessed it; those same UConn Huskies (in Storrs again, no less).

However, the Minutewomen can't get too ahead of themselves, and they will undoubtedly be focused on the task at hand. Head Coach Elaine Sortino and her team have continuously stated that opponents' records and winning streaks are inconsequential and that the only game that matters to them is the next one. The Bonnies are a potentially dangerous team as well, as they have several members of the lineup with plenty of pop in the bat.

Kim Dodson leads the Olean, N.Y. squad with a .389 average, and Tricia Hildebrand is close behind with a .371 average and five home runs on the year. Despite the Bonnies' losing record and the dominance of the Minutewomen as of late, it very well could be a dogfight at the Softball Complex this weekend. As Sortino said earlier this week, "these are kids playing the game, where anything can happen."

THE INDIG... GIRLS ... AN UPSWI... CHECK ..., PAGE 5. GRADUATION SPEAKER? BIG DEAL ED/OP PAGE 4. LAX GETS ... RESPECT ... PAGE 10.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
MONDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE ONE-HUNDRED TWENTY ☆☆☆☆☆ 4.22.02

MassPIRG and volunteers clean up the campus pond

Story speaks on clean water

Volunteers removed over a ton of debris from the campus pond.

By Jennifer Eastwood
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The grass was bright green, the flowers were in bloom and a cool breeze swirled about as light pellets of April rain sporadically dribbled down from an overcast sky while over 80 people sifted through brush, mud and water in Saturday's environmental cleanup.

The event, for which the Physical Plant temporarily lowered the water level of the campus pond allowing students to gather a ton and a half of debris, was held over the span of an hour and a half.

The day's activities were sponsored by a variety of organizations ranging from the Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MassPIRG) to the Massachusetts Community Water Watch, and were held in honor of Earth Day.

The day began at 12:40 p.m. with Paul Lyons, Chicopee River Watershed team leader, and State Representative Ellen Story (D-Amherst) expressing their admiration for the day's volunteers and the importance of environmental preservation.

Bodies of water in Massachusetts largely being designated un-fishable or un-swimmable is a thing of the past, Lyons explained, for recent ecological protection laws have ensured that half of the state's waterways meet the regulations for both fishing and swimming.

"That's the good news," he reported. "The bad news is the other half. Now we're dealing with non-poisonous pollution."

When it rains, Lyons said, water runs along the surface of the Earth, picking up debris of sorts along the way and depositing it in lowland bodies of water, and the campus pond is a prime example of this.

"Why do we care about this?" he questioned. "For two reasons: as residents of this planet, we have an obligation to preserve the environment... [And] the quality of our life, our physical, our spiritual and our economic life, is closely tied to our environment."

Each day, 44 acres of ecological land in Massachusetts are lost to development, Lyons noted, and for the most part, local-run committees make those decisions. Thus, "the best impact you can have is on the local level," he concluded.

Story briefly thanked participants for giving their time for the event and further related the cleanup to the politics of the campus. The pond, she said, will now "look good" for legislators and other public officials who will be coming to campus for Commencement, judging the presentation of the school. These same officials, she stressed, are the ones who can aid in seeing that no further state budget cuts occur in the near future.

The cleanup took place at two sites, including the campus pond itself and the pond's drainage stream, which runs through a ravine next to the parking lot by the Mullins Center and flows into the Mill River.

"The campus pond was definitely a visible site, but we figured if the crowd was really big, we'd

Turn to CLEAN UP, page 3

African Student Association holds annual cultural celebration

By Rahwa Asmerom
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Many facets of the African continent were showcased to a congregation of students, parents and guests at Cultural Night 2002 at the University of Massachusetts on April 20.

The annual event, entitled "Contemporary Africa: A New Beginning," was presented by the UMass African Student Association.

This year the event focused on the variety of changes facing the continent in the new millennium. Pierette Neh Ntsang, a Cameroonian sophomore Political Science major, commented on the long process of organizing the night's activities. "It's been a very long journey and we're finally here. I hope everyone who comes renews their acquaintance with Africa and join us in celebrating this new era in African history," Neh Ntsang said.

The event's emcee, Yaphet Tilahun, started off the night by welcoming the audience and introducing Enobong Etteh, the president of the African Student Association.

Etteh himself addressed the problem of frequent misconceptions that people have about Africa. He alluded to Things Fall Apart, the famous book by Chinua Achebe, and compared that to the current situation in Africa where, as in the story, the continent has had to deal with many foreign factors that has caused change.

He shared a personal experience with stereotypes he faced when he first came to UMass.

"When I told people I was from Nigeria, they asked me questions like 'So do you guys have roads and stuff?'" he explained. "I also had to endure a lot of jokes. As an Ethiopian, people used to make wise cracks at me referring to starving children and such."

Complimenting the night's theme, Neh Ntsang then shared an original poem entitled "Africa: A New Era" which addressed the evolving continent. This was followed by a comedic act by two ASA members who entertained the crowd, playing on some common stereotypes by satirically impersonating newscasters.

Tilahun was also comedic in his own right, switching accents, wardrobes and in one instance, upon request of audience members, going on a tangent in Amharic, a dialect of the Ethiopian language.

Dinner was also served at the event and consisted of a variety of African dishes prepared by ASA members. The dishes ranged from jolof rice to fried plantains, and the dinner was set to the background of traditional music played by DJ Salia KaiKai.

After the meal, four UMass students treated guests to a dance routine.

Every year, the cultural night organizers show off their playwriting skills by putting up the production of a short play which "is a representation of life as an African in one way or another," according to Ijeoma Azounye, public relations officer for ASA.

The night's comedic skit was about a corrupt, money-hungry witch-doctor who takes advantage of the insecurities of four men and succeeds in swindling them out of their fortunes. Directed and performed by ASA members, the play was warmly received by the audience.

At this time ASA president Etteh took the opportunity to introduce the nine executive board members of the association who made the night possible and thanked other organizations that helped out, including the Black Student Union, Iloricuas Unidos and Wazobia Group.

This was followed by a performance by UMass student Ibsen Alexandre. He recited a guitar piece and shared both a French and English version to a poem he wrote for the event.

Arguably the most anticipated part of the program was the fashion show show-

Turn to ASA, page 3

Dog day afternoon
Kicking back on Amherst Common.

Websites promoting anorexia have dangerous consequences for society

CHRISTOPHER THERIAULT

Anorexia nervosa is a complex eating disorder that is characterized by a poor self-image, which ultimately leads to self-starvation and extreme weight-loss.

About one percent of all adolescent females have anorexia, while only 10 percent of total anorexia cases are men. The reason why females are more susceptible to anorexia probably stems from the demands that society places on young women to be thin. A new trend among young adults has been sweeping the nation: pro-anorexia websites. Also known as pro-ana, these sites glorify anorexia nervosa and offer "thinspiration" on maintaining a starvation lifestyle. All pro-anorexia websites have one thing in common – they promote anorexia nervosa.

Pro-ana websites suggest that one follow the "Ana" way of life. Ana promotes thinness and considers overweight people as ugly and inferior. They suggest that one obsess about calories and avoidance of food. Food is considered the ultimate enemy.

A signature item that most pro-Ana sites seem to have is a list of rules of commandments. An excerpt from a site I visited: [Being thin is the most important thing in life; Thin is beautiful and good / obese is ugly and bad; You must feel very guilty every time you eat]. Sites also offer a variety of tips and excuses that will help anorexics to hide their problem or aid the starvation process. A few tips and excuses I found: Take diet pills; No thanks, I ate a huge breakfast (or lunch); If your family suspects you have an eating problem, leave plates and half full glasses around the house so it looks like you ate. Safe food lists are also available on these sites. According to pro-ana, safe foods consist of mostly leafy greens and vegetables with a lot of water content, particularly lettuce and cucumbers. Water is promoted as a weight-loss enhancer and satiety agent. Individuals are encouraged to keep a journal to track their calorie intake, weight-loss and feelings. An array of pictures are used as motivators, usually supermodels and thin celebrities such as Calista Flockhart ("Ally McBeal").

Although web-hosting companies have attempted to eliminate these websites, they are still readily accessible. An increase in the "underground network" has allowed individuals to gain access to these sites.

The underground network is the same thing that pedophiles use to access child pornography. Users just e-mail one another and once they reach an agreement, they are given the URL for the site that is privately hosted. This has resulted in an ever-increasing challenge for Internet surveillance agencies to monitor content on the web.

Treating anorexia nervosa requires a team of professionals consisting of physicians, psychologists, nutritionists and family and friends. Most individuals resist treatment at first because they feel that weight-loss will improve their self-image and once they achieve that "ideal," they will stop. The problem with this is that the "ideal" may never be achieved, and hence, the anorexia will continue. Only about half of all treated patients report successful therapy.

Some common signs of anorexia are finding excuses for not eating, becoming obsessed with the mirror, excessive and compulsive exercising, loss of menstrual cycle in women, fear of gaining weight and deliberate self-starvation.

Anorexia may lead to malnutri-

Turn to ANOREXIA, page 3

INTERNATIONAL BRIEFS

United Nations

By Lauren Beck
THE OBSERVER (U. NOTRE DAME)

(U-WIRE) SOUTH BEND, Ind. — University of Notre Dame will host the first conference in the United States dedicated to the United Nations Global Compact next week.

The conference, "Meeting Expectations in the World Economy: The United Nations' Global Compact," addresses the U.N.'S new initiative to diffuse the benefits of global economic development through voluntary corporate policies and actions.

Father Oliver Williams, director of Notre Dame's Center for Ethics and Religious Values in Business and the conference director, said he hopes the conference will encourage American involvement in the Global Compact. While more than 200 European companies have joined the compact, the initiative has not caught on as well in the United States, where only one or two companies have signed up.

"This conference is a good launching pad to get the idea started in the United States. ... We want to familiarize multi-national corporations with the Global Compact and to encourage them to sign up," said Williams.

U.N. Secretary-general Kofi Annan formulated the Global Compact in 1999 as nine principles that focused on human rights, labor rights and concern for the environment. Annan argued at the Davos World Economic Forum that shared values and an ethical culture provided a more stable environment for a world market and extended the prosperity of globalization to developing nations.

"The Global Compact attempts to level the playing field and to set some base lines to make world trade more fair," Williams said.

After Annan spoke at Commencement and received an honorary Notre Dame degree in 2000, he contacted Williams for help in promoting the Global Compact.

"He was impressed with the number of business leaders who were graduating from Notre Dame," said Williams.

Williams said the conference fit in well with the University's mission.

"Notre Dame is a world-class university, and it's our mission to make the world a better place for our graduates having been there," he said.

The conference, which is sponsored by Notre Dame's Center for Ethics and Religious Values in Business and the United Nations, will begin Sunday at 7 p.m. Georg Kell, senior officer of the Executive Office of the Secretary General and director of the U.N. Global Compact Office, will deliver the keynote address.

On Monday and Tuesday, several companies already practicing some of the Compact's principles, including Hewlett-Packard Co., Mattell, Motorola, Inc., Nike, Inc. and Shell Oil Company, will present case studies dealing with their experiences.

On the Net: www.nd.edu/~ethics.

Venezuela

By Danielle Scott
THE MIAMI HURRICANE (U. MIAMI)

(U-WIRE) CORAL GABLES, Fla. — By Sunday, the people of Venezuela had been though four political upheavals – the overthrow of President Hugo Chavez from power, the instatement of Pedro Carmona, head of the country's largest business association as president, Carmona's resignation and Chavez' reinstatement into power.

Back to square one, and all in the space of three days.

With all of the realized and potential unrest going on in their home country, the sizeable Venezuelan student population at the University of Miami is on tenterhooks, waiting in anticipation to see what's going to happen next.

Cristina Vanessa Vila is a freshman who has lived in Anzoategui, Venezuela for most of her life. Her parents and little sister still reside there. They say the situation is just getting worse.

"People are locked up in their houses and they're afraid. There are riots and civil war and they're just killing people. It's affecting the people in every possible way," Vila said.

"All my family is there. It's not good," said freshman engineering student Silvana Mateo, who is from Caracas.

"There is no safe place right now," said freshman engineering student and Valencia resident Irene Rojas.

Chavez, a vowed proponent of the poor, managed to incite his non-supporters to strikes, protests and demonstrations ending with his removal from office by military leaders last Friday, because of what they called his authoritarian regime, according to a CNN.com article posted on April 14, and his replacement of top officials at the state oil company in February.

"There is not a soul in the streets. My brother said that CNN shows only about 20 percent of what is going on," Rojas said. "Nobody knows. There are no channels [of information]; only the government channel and they are not allowing expression of any kind.

"He pretended to be anti-corruption, anti-poverty. Then he started to show his communist ways, passing laws that made no sense. Things began to deteriorate slowly," she added.

"From the day he was elected, everyone knew that this was going to happen. The poor population in Venezuela is very large and he promises them the world for their support," Vila said. "Meanwhile he is deteriorating the country."

Chavez regained power with the help of 5,000 members of the National Honor Guard – which protects the presidential palace and has remained loyal to Chavez, according to CNN.com.

"There are a lot of urgent things to take care of now," Chavez said. "We must fix that light that has been broken. I call for peace. I call for strength within all Venezuelans."

But UM Venezuelan students are not expecting peace anytime soon.

"My mother says that it doesn't seem to be getting any better, just worse," Vila said. "Now that he's back in power, he's bitter. He's going to be doing things directly to those who put him out of power."

"Everything is just going to be worse. It's like living through the whole Cuba situation," Vila said.

"Everyone I've talked to is down, sad. It is so ironic after thinking that he was off the presidency that he just bounces back," Rojas said. "He killed who knows how many hundreds of people when he allowed the military to open fire on our citizens. It's scary."

The biggest concern, of course, is for the students' families still in Venezuela.

Vila had already bought her airline ticket to return home at the end of the semester but now, it is unsure what her summer plans will be.

"Get my parents out of there. They're getting everything in order to get back here. I am happy to be in Miami but my parents and my little sister are in Venezuela and I am worried constantly," Vila said. "I mean, I don't care what the situation is, I want to be there right now."

"My concern is for my family's well-being. Economically, my parents are both doctors and no one knows what's happening. I don't know if I'm going to be able to continue my studies," Rojas said. "It is affecting me directly."

Vietnam

By Eric Cullen
BADGER HERALD (U. WISCONSIN)

(U-WIRE) MADISON, Wis. – A group of Hmong-Americans gathered outside of the Humanities building Thursday afternoon to protest statements made by University of Wisconsin-Madison history professor Alfred McCoy.

Demonstrators representing the Lao Human Rights Council bore signs and placards at the corner of Park and University Avenues, calling for McCoy to appear and apologize for his statements regarding Gen. Vang Pao, a Hmong leader during the Vietnam war.

McCoy told the Capital Times the findings of the research he performed in the region.

McCoy detailed Vang Pao's role in the war and the drug trade in his 1991 book, The Politics of Heroin: CIA Complicity in the Global Drug Trade.

The protestors contend McCoy's assertions regarding Pao's involvement in drug trafficking are unfounded.

"We are here because Professor McCoy has accused Gen. Vang Pao of being involved in the opium trade," said Dr. Vang Pobzeb, executive director of the Lao Human Rights Council. "The qualifications of Professor McCoy need to be reviewed."

Ronald Lee, a Hmong Vietnam veteran, said he feels Americans must show greater respect for the sacrifices of Hmong soldiers during the conflict.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was launched in 1890 as Aggie Life. It became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Daily Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1936 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Sam Wilkinson Editor-in-Chief
Matthew F. Sacco Managing Editor
Amy Gargunta Business Manager
Shimauli Dave Production Manager
Jake Lilien Diversity Editor
Mike Kulak Editorial Production Manager
Jason Smith Advertising Manager

Mike Delano Arts & Living Editor
Matthew Despres Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jennifer Eastwood Features Editor
Catherine Turner News Editor
Tibora Circzyc-Blum Photography Editor
Eric Soderquist Sports Editor
Brent Sirwatka Finance Manager
Charlie Iacco Distribution Manager

Morgan Taylor Advertising Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Cara Murphy Assistant Finance Manager
Shawn Daugherty Assistant Business Manager
Megan Shannon Assistant Advertising Manager

Fully paid tuition and stipend
for high academic achievers
in science and engineering admitted to the inaugural class of the Master of Science
program in the Management of Technology
at the
University of New Hampshire
Whittemore School of Business and Economics
- 2-year trimester format
- Focused on managing technological change and the development and commercialization of new technologies
- Emphasis on team projects and problem solving
- Industry sponsored projects and internships
- Classes scheduled to begin September 2002 upon review by the University System of New Hampshire

Expand your potential and put your career on the fast track by joining the inaugural class.
For more details call 603-862-3370
or email warren.lackstrom@unh.edu at the Hamel Center for the Management of Technology and Innovation
www.mba.unh.edu

JUMP ON THE COLLEGIAN BUS
We are now hiring for the position of Business Manager
- Hands on Business Experience
- Excellent Resume Builder
Call now to set up an interview 545-3500

I AGREE WITH ELAINE!
www.knowmercy.org

Now More Than Ever, Appearance Counts...
INTERVIEW SUITS
Priced to fit any budget.
We specialize in suits for graduate school and job placement interviews.
Jonathan Reid
The men's store in the Hampshire Mall.

RIDE PVTA IT

CINEMARK
CINEMARK AT HAMPSHIRE MALL
367 Russell St. 413-587-4233
Schedule for Friday 4/19 - Thursday 4/25
DIGITAL SURROUND SOUND IN ALL AUDITORIUMS
Purchase Tickets Online @ cinemark.com
RUNDER BY MURDER (R) 12:00 4:10 7:30 10:20*
THE SCORPION KING (PG13) 12:35 4:50 7:45 10:25*
CHASING LARES (R) 12:05 4:05 7:25 10:30*
NATIONAL LAMPOONS VAMPIRES (R) 12:45 4:35 7:50 10:15
HIGH CRIMES (PG13) 12:30 4:20 7:15 10:05
PANIC ROOM (R) 12:40 4:30 7:40 10:35
MONSTERS BALL (R) 12:25 7:35
THE ROOKIE (G) 12:25 4:00 7:10 10:10
DEATH TO SMOOCHY (R) 12:50 4:45 7:45 10:20
CLOCKSTOPPERS (PG) 12:55 4:25 7:05 9:30
BLADE 2 (R) 4:15 10:05
ICE AGE (PG) 12:10 2:15 4:25 6:45 9:00
Senior Movie - 4/25/02
HIGH CRIMES doors open at 11:45am
*NO PASSES NO SUPERSAVERS
cinemark.com

Munchie Madness 3-6PM
TUESDAY-FRIDAY
Veggie Potato Skins $4.49
Nachos Especial $4.49
Sweet Potato Fries $3.99
1/2 PRICE!
DCMP Welcome Here
CLOSED ON MONDAYS
Judie's
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

clean up

continued from page 1

Some of the items found at the bottom of the pond.

have a second site," said Willeminia Ewing, project coordinator and local Water Watch advisor. "We picked [the stream by yellow lot] because the campus pond drains out at this spot."

Plastic gloves and garbage bags were handed out to those who did not wish to wade through the pond itself, such as senior nursing major Yolanda DaCosta. While the majority of volunteers circled the pond and picked up trash, a group of just over 20 people trekked to the drainage stream.

"I definitely wanted to help the campus look neat and clean and preserve the water we have left, [but] I don't want to get wet," said DaCosta, relating her feelings on why she opted to work at the stream.

It was curiosity that drew others to the second site.

"I hadn't realized there was drainage over there, so I want[ed] to see," said Shaun Filiault, a sophomore history major at Amherst College.

Twelve of those who remained at the campus pond strapped on plastic waders and journeyed into the pond, but they weren't the only ones.

"I saw two kids that just went in the pond knee deep with no gloves on or anything," said Michelle Johnson, a senior on national exchange and a MassPIRG media coordinator.

One such person was Jamie Quist, the regional coordinator Hope Worldwide, a non-profit charity organization that locally brought 30 participants from western Massachusetts to the cleanup.

"It needed to get done," Quist explained, reasoning that the fact there were no waders remaining for him was no excuse to stop him.

Overall, more debris was found on the library side of the pond, Johnson reported. Garbage collected included a bike, a tire, five rusted metal trash cans, a metal chair, metal signs, three shovels, plastic bags, a dead duck and an abundance of cigarette butts and aluminum cans.

Helpful tips for job interviews

By By Amy Suh
WASHINGTON SQUARE NEWS (NEW YORK U.)

(U-WIRE) NEW YORK – He sits nervously on the chair while his body tenses up. He can feel his heart pounding as he anticipates the next question. As the interviewer questions him, his attention strays to the stain on his pants and he tries to cover it with his hand. When he opens his mouth to speak, he manages to stutter out an answer. Disappointed with his own response, he arrives at the harsh realization that he is not representing himself in the most impressive light.

The young man is experiencing one of the most vital, but also the most nerve-racking, part of the job and internship process: the interview. Undoubtedly, the interview can make or break an offer. However, it is arguably the most anxiety-driven element of any career search.

"I am horrible at answering interview questions," admits Brian Christu, a freshman at the Stern School of Business who is searching for a summer internship. "Sometimes I come off as being a certain way that doesn't necessarily portray who I really am."

Sara Rosa, a graduating senior in the College of Arts and Science, says that this is why it is important to review helpful tips on how to score a successful interview. "Although I've already learned how to handle interviews, it's good to review points and practice so that you're confident throughout the process."

Narisa Svetvilas, a career counselor at the Office of Career Services at New York University, agrees and offers tips vital to an excellent interview. "Although being interviewed may make some nervous, you should view the interview as a conversation and a way to exchange information rather than as an interrogation," Svetvilas says.

Research is the key aspect for any interview, Svetvilas says. She advocates first researching yourself, as self-assessment allows the candidate to feel more comfortable talking about him or herself.

"The more you know yourself, the better you'll explain why you want the position," she says.

Next, the interviewee should research the employer.

"The more you know about the company you're seeking to work in, the more interested you'll seem to the person interviewing you," Svetvilas explains. "It's also important to know what the corporation's culture is."

Presentation is also important. When dressing for the interview, applicants should present themselves in a professional manner, wearing a suit with a conservative color, such as navy blue or charcoal gray. Svetvilas also advises against wearing something low-cut or too tight. For "business casual" clothes, khakis and sweaters will work but shorts, jeans, T-shirts, athletic shoes, flannel shirts and team logo shirts should be shunned.

Interviewees should also make sure they know how to get to the place where the interview is being conducted prior to the actual interview date. Candidates should arrive 10 to 15 minutes early.

"You should use this time to catch your breath, or go to the restroom to freshen up. More importantly, you demonstrate that you are punctual," Svetvilas says.

First impressions are critical.

"Employers can make a decision of whether or not they are going to hire a person within the first six seconds of meeting them," Svetvilas explains. A firm handshake, eye contact and an eager smile can go a long way.

Interviewees should have on hand several copies of an updated resume and a list of current references.

Svetvilas also warns interviewees to avoid asking about pay until an offer is made. "You should research and try to find out the average salary of the position you're seeking. If the employer asks what number you're thinking about, throw the questions back and try to get them to say a number first," Svetvilas says. "Remember to look at the whole package, such as the benefits."

Commonly, a job candidate will be asked what his or her strengths and weaknesses are. The candidate should answer thoughtfully, and then back up his or her strengths with specific examples that demonstrate the positive traits and connect them with the position. Candidates are also advised not to cite a weakness that is directly related to the position or its field.

Interviewers also typically ask candidates where they see themselves in 10 to 15 years. It is imperative to remember that this question is designed to allow the employer to test the commitment level and dedication of the candidate in relation to the field and position.

ASA

continued from page 1

casing the original pieces of Boston fashion designer Babatunde, featuring a Hindu-influenced show.

Tilahun later commented, "Our [African] embracing of other cultures was evident in the choice to use the Asian flavor. We have always had a tradition of welcoming new ideas with open arms."

The event at the Student Union Ballroom came to a close following a dance party until 1 a.m., after which guests were invited to a free after-party held at Southwest's Malcolm X Center.

"I hope people can realize the vast diversity within ASA and consequently show the diversity of Africa as a whole," Tilahun said. "The event was aimed at sharing the culture and although we made a lot of jokes, we also wanted to expose the serious issues facing the continent in this era."

anorexia

continued from page 1

tion, dehydration, serious damage to the heart, liver and kidneys and ultimately death. A poor self-image, perfectionism, "all or nothing" attitude, and altered social relationships are also related to those suffering from anorexia.

If you suspect that someone may have anorexia or any other eating disorder, call the National Alliance for the Mentally Ill (NAMI) Helpline at: 1-800-950-NAMI. Don't wait until it's too late. Be Healthy!

Christopher Theberge is a Collegian Columnist.

I AGREE WITH ELAINE!
www.knowmercy.org

Attention
May 2002 Graduates
If you are a member of the May 2002 graduating class who received Federal Perkins Loans while enrolled at UMass you should have recently received a certified letter about those loans.
We know this is a very busy time for you so we've mailed this information rather than having you attend a meeting.
However there are serious consequences if you fail to return these documents by 5/3/02 as instructed in our letter.
If you haven't received our letter but think that you should have or if you have any question about what you did receive,
CALL 545-2377

HONDA'S GRADUATE PROGRAM
Want a new car for graduation? Lorenz Honda has the answer!
IT'S SIMPLE!
- Call Alan Behan, Our Business Manager and former UMass Graduate for details.
- A minimum amount down and proof of employee commitment is all you need!
We'll get you in a shiny new Honda or one of our Pre-Owned Certified Hondas.
HONDA
Call now to take delivery before the end of school!
BUY AFFORDABLE BUY LORENZ HONDA IN GREENFIELD
ROUTES 5 & 10 NORTH GREENFIELD
LORENZ HONDA 774-3200

Grand Openings!
celebrate with us
IN CELEBRATION OF OUR NEW LOCATION WE EXTEND AN INVITATION TO SAVE!

Monday, 4/22	20% off clothing
Tuesday, 4/23	20% off school & art supplies
Wednesday, 4/24	20% off trade books*
Thursday, 4/25	20% off UMASS gifts
FRIDAY, 4/26	FRUGAL FRIDAY BUY 1 CLOTHING ITEM, GET 50% OFF A CLOTHING ITEM OF EQUAL OR LESSER VALUE

WIN GREAT PRIZES!
SEE STORE FOR DETAILS
University of Massachusetts UMASS UNIVERSITY STORE
Campus Center • Phone: (413) 545-2619
www.umass.bkstr.com
*does not include textbooks.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED/OP EDITOR: MATTHEW DESPRES

Take pride in Massachusetts' best

Most of the students on this campus could learn a thing or two about pride from the University of Massachusetts lacrosse team. On Saturday afternoon, the Minutemen pulled of a mammoth upset in defeating an undefeated and third-ranked Georgetown team.

The victory spurred a massive celebration among the players, coaches and the overwhelming entourage of fans, friends, family and former players that made the trek from their respective corners of the Northeast to watch Coach Greg Cannella's squad represent Massachusetts with the utmost character.

The post-game festivities were filled with hugs and high fives, but most striking of all was the unity of this team and its following. Imagine that, a group of people uniting under the UMass colors and achieving a common goal. That seems to be a rarity on this campus and not just at sporting events – although the empty seats of the cavernous Mullins Center are a bit more prevalent than some freshman's musings about how UMass is a safety school and they'd rather be somewhere else.

Yes, unity is rare indeed among UMass students but this week things look to take a turn for the better. Some people might think less of a school that needs its livelihood to be threatened to finally band together, but we look at it as a positive.

You know the saying: When times are rough, you really find out who your friends are. Well things are rocky in UMass-nation at the moment, but the flagship University of Massachusetts should have plenty of allies on Thursday when a Save UMass rally is scheduled to take place at the State House in Boston.

Last word was that it has become a struggle to get people to go, so we at The Collegian would like to encourage any student, employee or friend of UMass to attend and bring a caravan with you.

This is a chance for UMass to show just how much clout it can hold in its own state. For too long it has been a forgotten commodity in a commonwealth dominated by private institutions. A school with a population of 20,000 cannot allow itself to go quietly into that good night.

UMass has allowed itself to be forgotten and belittled next to the Boston schools. How can a Boston College or a Harvard dwarf a University with twice the population of those other schools? The answer is simple, because it has allowed itself this reputation.

Students have largely done nothing to further the reputation of this school and in many cases they have done much to diminish. There is no honor in going to UMass and wishing for something more or something supposedly better.

But this is the chance to erase all the memories of a divided campus, empty stands and meaningless riots. UMass is a sleeping giant to the west and this Thursday's rally is a chance to announce its presence with authority. But that can only happen with a unified and dedicated campus.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

What's the frequency, Kenneth?

Commencement speaker raises concerns

BRIAN DOWNEY

Well, after my impassioned pleas to the university to reveal who our graduation speaker will be last week, they did. Kenneth R. Feinberg, otherwise known as "Who?" will be speaking at our graduation ceremony. I think I'd prefer to gnaw on my own arm than to listen to a guy who seems as though he got this gig by donating heavily to the University.

I should start off by saying that Feinberg does not seem to be an inherently evil guy. He is the man in charge of the government's fund to aid families victimized by the Sept. 11 attacks. That's not to say that he has been without his critics. Many of the families that are getting money from the fund are balking at the fact that they are getting $250,000 for the pain and suffering that comes with the loss of their loved one. They expect more. Families are complaining that the fund will not provide them with enough to allow them to adequately support themselves. Feinberg was the person who figured the sums of compensation that are allotted. Back in January, there was a meeting between the families and Feinberg about their dissatisfaction with the monetary awards for the plan.

This could be an example of how great an orator Feinberg is but he warmly told those at the meeting, "I will try to fairly maximize the dollar award to you." That makes you feel all warm inside, doesn't it? Compassion seems to be lacking here. To be fair, he did agree to listen to individual arguments with families and try to work with them to have the best possible plan.

All of this leads back to the question: Why the hell is he speaking at our graduation? The answer to that can be found at our own UMass homepage. Here's why I think he's is speaking. "At UMass, Feinberg donated funds to establish the first endowed professorship in the College of Humanities and Fine Arts, the Kenneth R. Feinberg Professor of History. He also created the Feinberg Fund for Excellence in History, to provide support for faculty salaries, lectures, and research in history." Maybe I'm just a cynical guy who thinks that as a reward for sending UMass a check, Ken Feinberg is going to blab at graduation. Either that or all of the other old athletes and sit-com stars were already booked.

> "It seems fitting that UMass would bring a guy that has been accused of being stingy with money for Sept 11. victims to a university that had barely has enough money to afford toilet paper for its students."

The press release on the UMass homepage, in a roundabout way, gives two or maybe three reasons about why we should give a flying rat's patoot about Feinberg. One, is that he is a UMass graduate...from 1967, with a History degree. Secondly, they tell us that he is a leading national expert on alternative conflict resolution and that he has mediated settlements for people who were sickened by Agent Orange and the disastrous Dalkon Sheild birth-control device. Thirdly, they go into the spiel about how he has given "funds" to UMass for helping the History department. Again, all of this leads to the question. What the hell is he speaking at our graduation for? After four years of witnessing how this place works, the only reason that Feinberg is coming is because he threw some green into the money sucking black hole known as UMass. It seems fitting that UMass would bring a guy that has been accused of being stingy with money for Sept 11. victims to a university that had barely has enough money to afford toilet paper for its students.

I don't really know what I expected in a graduation speaker, probably someone with a worthwhile story to tell us. I guess what I didn't expect was Kenneth Feinberg.

Brian Lohnes is a Collegian Columnist.

Ed / Op

Johnny D gone wild...again

JOHNNY DONALDSON

I'm not a bad guy. In fact, most people know me for my more quiet, sensitive lad who doesn't like trouble. But you know. I am only human. Like every person on our planet Earth, there is waste floating around that I absolutely abhor. There don't just irk me, they anger me. For my second stab at my very own editorial, I think I'll list those idiotic, headache-inducing things that irritate and incense me. And I think twell, I suppose people will agree with me.

Beauty Pageants – Why do beauty pageants exist? Why do we have to encourage the "women" who compete in them ruin our lives? I have heard these things are such as "scholarship" money. These girls don't need scholarships! They need to go to institutions of higher learning. Women with brains and charity to legitimately get into college. Pageant contestants just parade around in bathing suits smiling while the lights flash and the audience on their teeth. Should we really award scholarships based on beauty and poise? They say all the right things: I want to promote world peace and love support and hug everyone a puppy... I am not sure what their Mr. Toner snaps. But there's no real thought or idea – just the pre-canned answer that their obsessive mothers drill into their head since the tender years of age. The only thing I like about beauty things like Miss America on TV? The stunning ball gowns. Headlights look that crosses their visage when they are question that they weren't trained to answer correctly or that it is often the most trivial, easy-to-answer question ever.

Cheerleading (especially the contests) – Cheerleading is just a beauty pageant crossed with gymnastics. Okay, this is what cheerleading really is: nubile women in short skirts and tight tops bouncing around and flipping upside down to promote team spirit. It does not give candy or sponsor contests? Nope. There is no athletic appeal and have skimpily dressed girls cheering in the air. It is designed solely to let middle-aged men stare with lust and try to recall the days when they could (or thought they could) pick up girls with such flexible bodies. The movie American Beauty just goes to show the truth about cheerleading. The contests are even worse. Those girls go nuts trying to perfect something as a trivial as a dance routine that will never, ever, ever help them accomplish anything in life – except the ability to win that oh-so-hunky quarterback.

> "Why should I have to spend an entire semester listening to a teacher drone on about something I do not care about and has no value to my future?"

Athletic scholarships – I am not dissing athletes. I am not saying athletes don't deserve scholarships. I'm just saying that the scholarships should be given out according to their academic record, not their athletic record. I don't care if they are pursuing a career in the sport of their choice. They should prove themselves in the classroom, too. It's just not fair if the athletes get a free ride doing something they love, non-athletes do just as well in their free time. Hey, I'm a Theater major. Us Theater majors should get a free ride if we can prove ourselves awesome actors on stage. But we don't, because we don't play football and cost the University $2.5 million a year.

Figure skating – I'm not really offended by figure skating – I applaud the grace and skill in takes to perform triple lutzes – but I do get incredibly bored to tears by it, which is why I hate it.

Gen-Ed Requirements – I'm an aspiring actor/writer/director. Have been since I was 4 years old. Yep, 4. I knew what I wanted to be early in life and pursued it doggedly. Of course, when I was 4, I didn't know what I was getting – I just wanted on the television. So I don't need the University telling me what classes I have to take to shape me and guide me. I am not interested in astronomy, or biology, or any other science class. I am not interested in science; I do not care how things work. Why should I have to spend an entire semester listening to a teacher drone on about something I do not care about and has no value to my future? I pay to go here and learn. I do not pay to be told to study what I don't care about. This isn't a high school where we are still learning to be ourselves; this is college, where most of us are starting to get a handle on who we are. I agree with required classes for a particular major, and I agree that one should take classes beyond that major to broaden their horizons. I don't agree with being forced to take a science course I'll never develop an interest in.

Organized religion – I'm Catholic, but I haven't been to church since my 11th grade confirmation into the church. Why? Because I disagree with the practice of organized religion. And not just Catholicism, but all of Christianity, as well as Judaism, Islam, Buddhism, Taoism, et al. I believe in God and heaven and hell, but I don't need an old man in Rome telling me how to live my life. Religion is about faith and spirituality, not rules and religious laws. That's why I always despised Christian Conservatives who get offended by the slightest thing, or those annoying guys who stand in the middle of the Campus Center concourse bleating about "praise Jesus" while handing out Bibles. This is why we have war and conflict, people!!! People just take their religion too literally. And here's an interesting point for you crazy fanatics out there: almost all religions preach about peace and the end of violence, and if you kill you go to hell. So why do you kill so-called "heretics"? Even if they are not of your beliefs, you are killing. Thus, you go to hell. Must really like the warm weather.

"Dismissed" – Ewwww... This dating reality show infecting MTV is one of the worst dating shows ever, lacking the goofy wit of "Rendezview" where they at least have to sense to mock the daters. Here we just get to see two slutty girls making out with a guy they met just 15 minutes earlier. Or we get two guys – one without a personality, one who is just really hyper trying to impress a reasonably mortified girl. But let me just reiterate about those dirty, dirty girls who want to have sex with the guy they just met. This just really depresses me, just as Girls Gone Wild depresses me. I would never date a girl so willing to let herself be exploited. My love life sucks, but it doesn't suck enough to lower myself to this level.

Well, that's just about all I have to rant about today. So, I'll close out on an upbeat note and wish everyone a happy, sunshiny day. Peace.

Johnny Donaldson is a Collegian staff member.

Sin, vice & other perks

The benefits of being 21

KEN CAMPBELL

It is time, once again, to return to my roots and speak of the everyday foibles of life. In this edition, I shall regale you with tales of why turning 21 years of age is the single greatest moment of your twenty-one years, and offer some advice to the newly initiated. Those who have already turned 21 should view this as a sign post on memory lane, or depending on the experience, a billboard on the Too Wasted to Remember highway. The gentle reader who has yet to achieve such an age may look on with envy or disgust, as the mood strikes you. The more enterprising of those among you might think of this as a checklist. If this is the case, God speed.

The reason most people look forward to turning 21 is that one can legally purchase and consume alcoholic beverages. While this Collegian Columnist heartily endorses that, he realizes that there are many people who do not drink. This does not mean, however, that the teetotaler population must completely abstain from the joys that are the Amherst bars. One does not have to drink shots with names like "Dirty Girl Scout," "Kamikaze," or "Red Death" to have a good time. Simply watching your friends get blitzed off of the aforementioned libations is enjoyable enough.

Drunk-watching is simply the side show; the main attraction is the alcohol. The Amherst bars are all different, and each has signature drinks that are guaranteed to put the wobble in your step. And there's a bar for everyone. There is no one bar scene in Amherst. Each caters to different crowds. Half the fun in going uptown is not the drinking but finding your favorite watering hole.

> "Being 21 in a college town is quite possibly the most sinful experience known to man."

The added benefit of the bars, and this can be enjoyed by anyone awake at 1 a.m., is Club Sidewalk. Here is the true spirit of uptown, as the bars empty and everyone gathers in front of Antonio's for a slice or perhaps a sandwich from one of the pushcart guys. There is no better topper to an evening out than a trip through the crush of bodies in front of Antonio's. Here you will see someone you know, more than likely severely intoxicated and so happy to see you. Or, if you happen to have offended several segments of the population, you will get to hear all sorts of interesting things about how while it sucks that you got threatened, your opinion is wrong, and you suck.

The Graduate Lounge is a way station for the 21-year-old parched on his or her way back from class. This haven is perfect for those lazy afternoons where you don't have class, the weather is gorgeous, and nothing would taste better than a cold one.

The Sodom and Gomorrah of alcohol is the pub-crawl. This is the ultimate test in endurance and appetite for vice. The rules are simple: you and some other upstanding 21-year-olds proceed to inhibe at every public house in Amherst center. Sounds simple, yes? Easy, even. It is, in reality, the decathlon of liquor.

Ah, memories. Another fabulous alcohol related activity is going to liquor stores. Liquor stores are the adult's candy store. It's so much fun to roam the aisles, looking for something new, something different, something 180 proof.

One other bloody brilliant thing about turning 21, and a close second on the Vice and Sin Hit Parade, is gambling. (Cue "Viva Las Vegas" ala Snatch here.) Yes, gentle reader, Connecticut does have some redeeming value – specifically its huge gaming resorts. Due to circumstances beyond my control, the only casino I've been able to visit is Foxwoods. It's enough for me. Now, aside for the fact that while gambling, there are free drinks, the tables are always exciting. The sheer variety of games available is stunning, and you can try all sorts of games in a short time. Much of my first time there was spent going a private eye who devoted his life to protecting the innocent from other worldly evil. He was joined by Cordelia Chase (the wonderfully-named Charisma Carpenter), a bitchy cheerleader from Sunnydale High who left to make it as an actress. And then there was half-human, half-demon Doyle, a brooding Irishman who experienced crippling visions that enabled the trio to fight evil. "Angel" was mostly an episodic cop show, but with a monster-of-the-week instead of a perp-of-the-week. The individual episodes were sealed off from each other, with no arc developed for the characters and plot to grow. That resulted in some terrific episodes and some really bad ones, without anything giving anything for a viewer to cling on to; there was no reason to catch the show week after week.

By the second season, the show began to get into a groove. Doyle was gone, sacrificing himself to save his friends (all well and good, since the show couldn't support two brooding hunks). In his place was Wesley (Alexis Denisof), one of Buffy's Watchers (a kind of guide, for the "Buffy" uninitiated), who became a comically inept "rogue demon hunter." Angel gained a permanent enemy in the high-powered law firm Wolfram and Hart, which has secret to some very powerful dark forces. "Angel" has dealt with some of the most powerful mystical forces time-to-time. (I have by now lost anyone who isn't a "Buffy" fanatic. I apollogize profusely if I have confused anybody.) And now, a few seasons on, "Angel" has blossomed into one of the best shows on TV.

The current storyline, with Angel mysteriously becoming a father – well, no other continued storyline on TV comes close to matching it. Not "Sopranos." Not "West Wing." Not even the great "Buffy." Nothing comes close to matching the sheer tragic force of it. No storyline on TV is this dark, this serious, this complex, this epic. Angel's human son Connor is at the middle of a clash between mystical forces both dark and light, and "Angel" doesn't shy awas from going into ever more midnight terrain to tell the story. A prophecy about "the father killing the son," the kidnapping of Connor, Wesley's "betrayal" – it brings to mind the Greek tragedies. Every other storyline seems content to sketch in the relationships of the various players; here, the characters seem to be pieces on a cosmic chessboard, with everyone taking a role – as a pawn, or a knight – that could mean the difference between life and death. That's life and death of the world, as in the Apocalypse, not just individual life and death.

But "Angel" would be nothing more than an overly ambitious flop if there weren't something behind the scenes to give it weight. And this show more than admirably proves its worth in all credits assigned – acting, writing, direction, etc, etc. Since this is on the WB, people want to dismiss this as a teenybopper show and that is far from the truth. "Dawson's Creek" and "Felicity" are shamed to be on the same network.

Boreanaz is terrific as Angel, wry-witted and haunted simultaneously. The joy and fear and protectiveness he felt for Connor was palpable, and so was his love for his "family": Cordelia, Wesley, the demon-hunting ex-gangbanger Gunn (J. August Richards), the sweet-souled science nerd Fred (Amy Acker) and good-guy demon Loren (Andy Hallett.) Boreanaz is the best actor on the entire network, easily shifting between emotions without overplaying his hand (Valentine was hardly the best movie showcase for him). And his explosion of grief-induced rage in a recent episode was scarier than anything he has done as Angel. Carpenter has given Cordelia much nuance and complexity, and turned her into a sympathetic human being. Denisol completely nails his role as the group's leading brain, while Richards helps one forget that Gunn is the least shaded in character. Hallett convincingly took Loren from a lounge-singer smooth psychic karaoke bar owner to the Angel team's conscience. And I must reserve props for the beguiling Acker, who brings heart and warmth to the show as the innocent, but never naive or childish Fred, to the show.

But it is not just the acting. The special effects are terrific for this kind of budget, and the last episode had a terrifically jittery fight scene reminiscent of Blade 2. I especially love the look of the show. Everything is bathed in a rich, luxurient blend of shadows and subdued light; even brightly lit scenes seem like color film noir. And unlike a show like "The X-Files," where the clotted pileup of conspiracies gets confusing for even a diehard X-Phile (such as, yes, me), "Angel" retains a clear-eyed focus that will only confuse the least loyal of viewers.

Why hasn't "Angel" been nominated for an Emmy? Why doesn't it get more respect, more buzz? I don't know. All I know is that it is one of the best shows on TV. My grade: A

Johnny Donaldson is a Collegian staff member.

Anyone interested in writing for Ed/Op, contact us at collegianeditorial@yahoo.com or come down to the Collegian and speak to Matthew Despres

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 4.22.02 ARTS EDITOR: MIKE DELANO

Noir "Angel" continues to impress

DAVID BOREANAZ WB

Angel himself, David Boreanaz

CHARISMA WB

Charisma Carpenter plays Cordelia Chase.

As I watched the WB series "Angel" Monday – one of the TV series I regularly watch – I began to reflect on just how good the show is. Actually, it's not just good, but great, one of the best shows on TV. Returning to the schedule after an inexplicable five-week hiatus, "Angel" continues with one of the greatest storylines on any current TV show and shows just why it is as good as the critically hailed series like "The Sopranos" and its progenitor "Buffy: The Vampire Slayer."

For those who are unfamiliar with the show, let me explain to you what "Angel" exactly is. "Angel" began a few years ago as a spin-off of the popular teen horror/action/comedy/drama "Buffy." Angel, played by David Boreanaz, is a vampire, but with a twist that sets him apart from the bloodsucking fiends that the petite southern Californian vampire hunter Buffy Sommers annihilates with a stake and a wisecrack. Angel began life as a feckless Irishman named Angelus, who was turned into a vampire by the blond vampiress Darla. Angelus soon became legendary amongst the undead community as a ruthless killer who hunted not for the food, but for the sheer thrill of taking life. Then he targeted a gypsy girl. The girl's clan cursed Angelus with the one thing no vampire wants: the return of his soul. Angelus was doomed to spend eternity – remember he is still a vampire – with a conscience, reflecting on the horrible atrocities he committed as an evil being.

Angel's function on the "Buffy" series was to be Buffy's protector and one great love. (A vampire and vampire slayer? How "Romeo and Juliet.") Their relationship sparked one of the most soulful and satisfying tragic romances ever on TV. After a series of epic plot corkscrews too complicated to be appreciated by anyone but the most ardent of "Buffy" fans (such as me), Angel left Buffy's fictional hometown of Sunnydale, California for greener pastures – Los Angeles and his own TV show.

"Angel" (the series, not the character) began cleverly. It was designed as a supernatural film noir, Angel becoming a private eye who devoted his life to protecting the innocent from otherworldly evil. He was joined by Cordelia Chase (the wonderfully-named Charisma Carpenter), a bitchy cheerleader from Sunnydale High who left to make it as an actress. And then there was half-human, half-demon Doyle, a brooding Irishman who experienced crippling visions that enabled the trio to fight evil. "Angel" was mostly an episodic cop show, but with a monster-of-the-week instead of a perp-of-the-week. The individual episodes were sealed off from each other, with no arc developed for the characters and plot to grow. That resulted in some terrific episodes and some really bad ones, without anything giving anything for a viewer to cling on to; there was no reason to catch the show week after week.

By the second season, the show began to get into a groove. Doyle was gone, sacrificing himself to save his friends (all well and good, since the show couldn't support two brooding hunks). In his place was Wesley (Alexis Denisof), one of Buffy's Watchers (a kind of guide, for the "Buffy" uninitiated), who became a comically inept "rogue demon hunter." Angel gained a permanent enemy in the high-powered law firm Wolfram and Hart, which has secret to some very powerful dark forces. "Angel" has dealt with some of the most powerful mystical forces time-to-time. (I have by now lost anyone who isn't a "Buffy" fanatic. I apollogize profusely if I have confused anybody.) And now, a few seasons on, "Angel" has blossomed into one of the best shows on TV.

The current storyline, with Angel mysteriously becoming a father – well, no other continued storyline on TV comes close to matching it. Not "Sopranos." Not "West Wing." Not even the great "Buffy." Nothing comes close to matching the sheer tragic force of it. No storyline on TV is this dark, this serious, this complex, this epic. Angel's human son Connor is at the middle of a clash between mystical forces both dark and light, and "Angel" doesn't shy awas from going into ever more midnight terrain to tell the story. A prophecy about "the father killing the son," the kidnapping of Connor, Wesley's "betrayal" – it brings to mind the Greek tragedies. Every other storyline seems content to sketch in the relationships of the various players; here, the characters seem to be pieces on a cosmic chessboard, with everyone taking a role – as a pawn, or a knight – that could mean the difference between life and death. That's life and death of the world, as in the Apocalypse, not just individual life and death.

But "Angel" would be nothing more than an overly ambitious flop if there weren't something behind the scenes to give it weight. And this show more than admirably proves its worth in all credits assigned – acting, writing, direction, etc, etc. Since this is on the WB, people want to dismiss this as a teenybopper show and that is far from the truth. "Dawson's Creek" and "Felicity" are shamed to be on the same network.

Boreanaz is terrific as Angel, wry-witted and haunted simultaneously. The joy and fear and protectiveness he felt for Connor was palpable, and so was his love for his "family": Cordelia, Wesley, the demon-hunting ex-gangbanger Gunn (J. August Richards), the sweet-souled science nerd Fred (Amy Acker) and good-guy demon Loren (Andy Hallett.) Boreanaz is the best actor on the entire network, easily shifting between emotions without overplaying his hand (Valentine was hardly the best movie showcase for him). And his explosion of grief-induced rage in a recent episode was scarier than anything he has done as Angel. Carpenter has given Cordelia much nuance and complexity, and turned her into a sympathetic human being. Denisol completely nails his role as the group's leading brain, while Richards helps one forget that Gunn is the least shaded in character. Hallett convincingly took Loren from a lounge-singer smooth psychic karaoke bar owner to the Angel team's conscience. And I must reserve props for the beguiling Acker, who brings heart and warmth to the show as the innocent, but never naive or childish Fred, to the show.

But it is not just the acting. The special effects are terrific for this kind of budget, and the last episode had a terrifically jittery fight scene reminiscent of Blade 2. I especially love the look of the show. Everything is bathed in a rich, luxurient blend of shadows and subdued light; even brightly lit scenes seem like color film noir. And unlike a show like "The X-Files," where the clotted pileup of conspiracies gets confusing for even a diehard X-Phile (such as, yes, me), "Angel" retains a clear-eyed focus that will only confuse the least loyal of viewers.

Why hasn't "Angel" been nominated for an Emmy? Why doesn't it get more respect, more buzz? I don't know. All I know is that it is one of the best shows on TV. My grade: A

Johnny Donaldson is a Collegian staff member.

VNV comes into their own in United States

By Kevin Monahan
COLLEGIAN STAFF

VNV NATION
With HAUJOBB
ManRay Nightclub
April 17

CAMBRIDGE – Ronan Harris is clearly a man who cares about the world he lives in and the music he creates, as evidenced in VNV Nation's stop into Boston last week. Granting a few minutes to speak with us, the singer/songwriter of the band offered his take on touring, club culture and the need for writing music that matters.

"We've only had five shows so far in the States," said Harris, who would be on his way to D.C. in less than twelve hours. "So it's nice that only five months after our last tour, the response is that we're getting even more people coming to the shows than last time, which is impressive because we could rule out a lot of people who went once and wouldn't need to go a second time." The increased attendance can be contributed to the release of their almost flawless fourth LP, Futureperfect. "It was really to reinforce the album, because the release dates in Europe and America were out of synch."

What is even more impressive is that in an age of Britneys and boy bands, an underground electronic act can gain such a loyal following. "Record companies are realizing that you can't appeal to a homogenous audience anymore. In Europe it's all about niche markets. That's why the diversity of music has been greater in the last few years than it ever was. Rather than being a totally underground band, you will have your following in any scene and any variety."

This particular scene was lined up around the block before doors opened, waiting in its punk/goth/rave/glam attire. Taking a few drags from his cigarette, Ronan was more than willing to comment on this subculture. "It's a byproduct of homogenous society. Everyone must look the same, think the same. Everyone who reads the news and watches a television show is presented this clean-cut, typical illusion character. They don't look real. They look like cartoon cutouts. You know, 'Everyone must be saving for retirement...' the suburban lifestyle is the ideal. This scene is a disenfranchisement. The people in this scene do not feel they belong to that. They try to be more extreme than anything. But also that creates its own elitism... I went to a club in London where I was told that I was not properly attired. When I was in school and I wasn't properly attired it was because the guys who played football, the jocks believed that was being a man and what have you. They disliked me because I was different. So I strove for diversity, to be myself and to be accepted. So when I see a group of people who were ostracized go and create an elite of their own it's the greatest hypocrisy... But all that kind of stuff is going to exist in any scene."

Elitism did not seem to be an issue at ManRay Wednesday night. The capacity crowd displayed a collective cohesion as Harris and band-mate Mark Jackson took the stage. Mr. Harris is a man who is not afraid to emote. And his range went from excitable to somber through the course of the show. "Epicentre," "Darkangel," and "PTF 2012" were among the songs performed. The audience was encouraged to dance and sing along as music and images on rear-screen projection screens matched sound and vision seamlessly. Harris, obviously truly flattered by the crowd's enthusiasm, provided one of the most powerful moments of the evening with "Solitary." The song's aggressive beat and dramatic lyrics contrast each other to fabulous effect.

"Carbon," a none too subtle ballad about how we are destroying our planet, was also an affecting moment. Harris said earlier, "I got very tired of, whether it be transportation or energy or anything, the general attitudes towards our world that are completely out of synch with the future... We're sowing the seeds of our own destruction." Harris went on to explain the obstacles that come with embracing such an issue, "Anything having to do with the environment or any social cause is considered sort of a hippie thing. [It seems that] people would be more worried about what their peers think about them giving a damn about the future of the planet than they actually give a damn about the future of the planet. I think that has got to be the greatest demonstration of stupidity.

"Some would say, 'you're dictating to these people.' No, I'm asking myself and asking other people to think about things. I don't tell anybody anything. There are people who want to know, 'What's your message?' Well, our message is to contemplate things, to feel. You do question things, right? You're not happy with everything, are you?"

VNV finished off their set with two encores, which included "Beloved" and "Electronaut." The opening act, Haujobb also presented a noteworthy set. Dark and energetic, their ominous synths and pulsing beats provided the perfect predecessor for VNV's set, courtesy of vocalist Daniel Meier and Guido Le Frick on decks and guitars. The only weak point of the show was supporting act Gasr. Their cookie cutter EBM was not complemented by their poor stage presence (although, to their credit, they didn't have a lot of space to move around with the other two band's equipment on the stage).

EBM tends to be a term that is thrown around as synonymous with industrial dance. Ronan, however, believes the term is outdated. "EBM doesn't mean the same thing as it did when Front 242 came up with the term. Now it means bands with a rougher, more industrial and dark sound. We were once called 'electro.' Nobody could classify us. But 'electro' describes about 40 bands that could all sound completely different from one another.

"EBM—the term has had its day. We call ourselves 'future-pop' for a reason. There's a wide variety of accessible styles to our music, but by no means is it commercial music," said Harris. "I think the term I have the biggest problem with, and this is just in North America, everyone was describing this entire music scene as industrial. Then there are all these arguments about 'what is industrial?' The term still means what is always has in Europe, and that's experimental electronic music—all the noise stuff. I do not make industrial music. I don't call what we do 'industrial' at all."

However, Ronan seems more reluctant to label another musical genre. "I'm happier to have an argument about what industrial or EBM means than about what 'goth' means. There are those who appropriate it. This is goth. That is not goth.' I was into a lot of music that could be classified as goth, but that along with a lot of other things. There was no word 'goth' when I was into it. I just love darker edge music."

When compared with Praise the Fallen (VNV's second album, and the one that broke them into the States), Futureperfect sounds as if it had several coats of polish slapped onto it. Some fans that were introduced to the rougher, more aggressive sound of VNV's past have not responded to the new album with overwhelming approval. "[Praise the Fallen] had a very gritty, underground, sort of bad production quality, which makes them feel like they're still in a small scene. There are people who will want to hear Praise the Fallen again for the first time, which is not possible. There's not much I can really do about that."

As VNV Nation's music has grown, so have their ideals. The band's name carries more resonance in today's world than it did when it was coined over a decade ago—Victory Not Vengeance. As the mastermind behind the group, Harris has an interest in expanding the bound of alternative electronic music and a genuine desire to make everyone's future perfect.

Closer to finding an Indigo niche

The Indigo Girls: Amy Ray and Emily Saliers.

By Jake D. Lewis
COLLEGIAN STAFF

INDIGO GIRLS
Become You
Epic Records

To put it lightly, I was more than disappointed with The Indigo Girls last album, Come On Now Social released in 1999. Their rock songs became slightly too country-ish for my tastes, while the few ballads were hardly anything worth remembering. Having just come off of one of their best-received albums, 1997's This Shaming of the Sun (which, let's not forget, was what put them into the mainstream for perhaps the first time), it was plain bad luck to have a clunker like that one follow it.

Their latest CD, though, Become You, is a small step forward from their last, loaded with great ballads but largely lacking any tunes to really get the blood pumping. The first song is "Moment of Forgiveness," a song that is catchy yet subdued, the Girls preferring to be laid-back and jazzy with it instead. It doesn't quite swing, but it doesn't drag either, which is good enough for the first track.

The momentum takes its time to gather steam, building itself up, and then paying off with the title track, which appropriately picks up the pace. Even so looking for a rocking and rolling sound will probably only result with two goodies in total: the title track and "Yield." "Become You," which is also the first single from the album, is a shiny and happy song, given its kick by Amy Ray's sultry vocals and the presence of a flute adding a Celtic quality. You don't want it to end, but "Yield" soon follows, and it doubles the intensity of the other song, even though its brief length contributing to the fact that it is harder to remember. Ray and Saliers can't seem to rock out with the energetic beat of a fast-paced song. They stay instead, as the title suggests, yielding, taking it slower which makes the song feel slightly sluggish but does not truly hinder its likeability. Further down the road is the song "Bitterroot," another upbeat contribution, but is the least pleasant of the three. Consisting of only drums, a harmonica and a bass guitar, it sounds like a hillbilly blues tune, and makes for distasteful jelly sandwiched between two wholesome ballads ("Hope Alone" and "Our Deliverance").

In fact, what makes Become You worth giving a chance are the slower numbers that are included. There are some exceptional ones here, heartening back to arguably their best album, Rites of Passage (which, in retrospect, looks more like a greatest hits compilation, rather than a studio album like it is). The aforementioned "Hope Alone" has Saliers accompanied by an acoustic guitar and a hushed violin in the background. As is usual of their ballads, the two women form beautiful harmonies together here as they each sing different vocal lines in combination with each other. Also as is customary, the song builds in passion to become a fine, emotionally charged work. "Our Deliverance" feels a lot like an old folk song banjo and all, with only a few chords repeated over and over. The syncopated drums that only come in during the refrain feel vaguely intrusive of the simplistic song that is being crafted, but stays minimal enough to cause a problem. In fact, the syncopation of the drums casts a patriotic flavor to the song, which is unexpected when you hear it, yet a welcome variation.

There is a flashback to their earlier hit "Power of Two," with "I'm Collecting You" when the instruments halt in order to emphasize the song's title. Yet unlike the former, "I'm Collecting You" has gusto and vigor in it. Saliers and Ray doing an excellent job capturing the meanings in the lyrics that they're singing. They don't drop the ball at any time, being more forceful here than reserved as one might expect. They're another different approach on "Deconstruction," the best song from this CD. Both Saliers and Ray practice a singsong type of approach to the vocals, emphasizing certain words and trailing off on others. One may think that they know what the song will sound like once it hits the hook, but Saliers and Ray travel all across their vocal ranges to produce a surprisingly lasting effect on the listener.

It could be argued that the Indigo Girls' Become You is a softer, gentler side of The Indigos: a different theme and sound for each of their albums. While it is more than the mainstream (myself included) hoped for, it is still accessible on many levels to the fans who seek it out.

RIDE IT NOW

MTV MUSIC TELEVISION®

Campus invasion 2k2

PERFORMANCES BY:

NICKELBACK

DEFAULT

injected

Friday April 26, 2002
Mullins Center
7 pm show 6 pm doors
$20 tix on sale now at Mullins Center Box Office

And .... don't miss .....

Free MTV | 2 stage with starsailor at 5:30 pm
performing live at Mullins Plaza

and check out the MTV "Interactive Music Expo"
happening on Mullins Ice Rink Parking Lot 12-5pm
Hear new music, get free stuff and more !!!!!!!

Sponsored by SMG

CHECK OUT MTV.COM FOR MORE INFO

© MTV NETWORKS. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. Jeep is a registered trademark of DaimlerChrysler

HERBAL ESSENCES

Jeep
THERE'S ONLY ONE

GAMECUBE

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Cheerleading try-outs!!! UMASS Coed. All-girl cheerleading Mascot tryouts! Totman- Mon. April 22nd 5-7:30 pm, Tue. 23rd 6-7:30 pm. Curry Hicks Cage Wed. 24th 6 to 9 pm. Sat 27th 11 am to 3 pm. For Info call Kevin Thompson @ 665-0056.

Fraternities * Sororities Clubs * Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 with the easy Campusfundraiser.com three hour fundraising event. Does not involve credit card applications. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact Campusfundraiser.com at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over lease. Available June 1 fall option 3 BR upgrade in Puffton call 549-1474.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. - Now Available, 1&2 bedroom apts. Leases begin June, July, Aug or Sept. 1 year lease. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywine-apts.com stop by or call (413) 549-0600.

Puffton Village Apt. Newly renovated great location. Partially furnished three bedrooms includes gas/ grill available June 1st 549-8320.

Summer Sublet with lease option in fall. Boulders. Available 7/1. 256-2373.

Take over lease. Puffton 3-bedroom. June 1st. 549-5249.

Condos 3 bedrooms, hardwood floors, study area in basement, cable, telephone (Internet access), in all bedrooms and study NOW SHOWING for JUNE and SEPTEMBER NO FEES. www.amherstlincolnrealty.com 253-7879

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over a lease. 971 N. Pleasant St. Apt. for rent for June, fits 3 folks. Call now! 549-0069.

CENTER OF TOWN 1,2,3 bedroom apts., hardwood floors. NOW SHOWING for JUNE and SEPTEMBER NO FEES www.amherstlincolnrealty.com 253-7879

EMPLOYMENT

Promoters wanted!! Student Travel Services is looking for individuals to promote spring break. Enjoy unlimited earning potential and free travel while building a sold resume! Call 800-648-4849. Or visit www.ststravel.com

Bub's Bar-B-Q Now hiring enthusiastic & energetic persons for full & part-time. Must be 18 yrs or older. Apply in person between 2&4 pm Tues-Fri. 548-9630.

EMPLOYMENT

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individual, full and part time positions available immediately. Only those able to work the upcoming summer should apply. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413)584-4746.

Painters P/F time 1-3 yrs experience. Michael 367-9810.

Live in Positions at residential summer camp in Charlton, MA. Available to anyone who honestly likes being with children. Call 800-433-8575. natureclassroom.org

SUMMER HELP Cape Cod Ice seeks drivers and P/T 2nd Shift Supervisor in our Sandwich location. Interested candidates call 508-888-8390 for more info.

EMPLOYMENT

TOP BOYS SPORTS CAMP IN MAIN! Play and coach sports-have fun-make $$ Camp Cobbossee positions in: all team and individual sports, all water sports plus: camp, hike, rock climbing, ropes, ice hockey, roller hockey, art & crafts, secretaries, top salaries, excellent facilities, free room, board, laundry, travel allowance. Online application www.camp-cobbessee.com or call 800-473-6104.

Be the Campus Red Bull connection. Join our team and help build one of the world's leading brands, you'll have a blast while gaining invaluable marketing experience. You'll even earn a little extra spending cash. Think about it. It's a lot less dangerous than selling term papers! Apply at redbullcollege.com

EMPLOYMNET

Nantucket Island Summer Job opportunity beginning mid June office Assistant with good computer & telephone skills, miscellaneous errand running. Salary & housing 508-228-3942 or send resume to Rafael Osona Auctions P.O. box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02584.

SUMMER INTERNSHIPS Earn $3000 to 7000++ and gain valuable business experience working for the UMASS Official Campus Telephone Directory. Excellent Advertising, Sales, and Marketing opportunity. GREAT RESUME BOOSTER! Call Paul at AroundCampus, Inc. 1-800-466-2221 ext. 288. www.aroundcampus.com

ENTERTAINMENT

Rock Band available for end of year parties free of charge check out our website, oversightrocks.com + contact Charlie @ (508) 243-6091.

FOR RENT

2 bedroom apt. on bus route avail. June 1 w/fall option $905/mo heat hot water included 549-1883.

FOR SALE

P.S. 2 w/6 games, 2 controllers, DVD remote, mem. Card $400.00 O/B/O. 256-2373.

NEW! CD burner HP internal 8x4x32 Speed BO 259-9382

INSTRUCTIONS

Become an EMT! Sign up for summer and fall classes now call 545-1885 or go to www.umass.edu/ems

ROOM FOR RENT

Looking for 1/2 roommates to share apartment for summer. Call 549-2676.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Sublet in Sunderland with possible fall option. $375/mo on bus route. One bedroom available. 665-0377.

SERVICES

Know your rights! Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

TO SUBLET

2 Bedroom apartment partially furnished available June 1st to sublet w/option to lease on bus route. 413-549-9612.

WANTED

Good Condition bedroom set & desk needed call 546-2609.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian 113 Campus Center Basement in UMass

Client: _____ Date: _____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. _____ 1.
2. _____ 2.
3. _____ 3.
4. _____ 4.
5. _____ 5.
6. _____ 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Student rate: $2.50 per day for 10 words or less. Non-student rate: $5.00 per day for 10 words or less.

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

3	CBS/3
4	NBC/4
	Fox Sport NE
	PBS/57
	HSCN Movie Channel
	WB/27
	HSCN Movie Channel
	TV Guide Channel
	FOX/61
	ABC/40
	NBC/22
	International Channel
	UMATV
	HSCN Info Channel
	ESPN
	ESPN 2
	UVC/19
	ESPN Classic
	Cartoon Network
	CNN
	CNN HL
	Weather Channel
	Learning Channel
	Hist-ory Channel
	A & E
	Discovery Health
	Food Network
	NASA
	Home & Garden TV
	Travel Channel
	Lifetime
	CNBC
	Tech TV
	BET
	UPN-38
	USA
	TNN
	MTV
	CMT
	VH-1
	TNT
	TBS
	E! Entertainment
	Sci-Fi Channel
	Court TV
	Nick at Nite
	Comedy Central
	Cartoon Network
	Game Show Network
	TV Land
	FOX Family
	Univision
	Galavision
	Telemundo
	College TV Network
	C-SPAN
	C-SPAN2
	Bloomberg Television

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — APRIL 22, 2002

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		CPTV Auction
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	Yes, Dear	Baby Bob	Raymond	Becker (N)	First Monday (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Yes, Dear	Baby Bob	Raymond	Becker (N)	First Monday (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Funniest Home Videos		Bachelor (N) (In Stereo)		Contact: Telling to the Dead		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Nanny		Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	7th Heaven "The Ring" (N)			Angel "Double or Nothing"		News	Tonight Show
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Fear Factor (In Stereo)		Third Watch (N) (In Stereo)		Crossing Jordan (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTKK	9	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	7th Heaven "The Ring" (N)		Angel "Double or Nothing"		News	Home Imp.	Blind Date	Blind Date
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Fear Factor (In Stereo)		Third Watch (N) (In Stereo)		Crossing Jordan (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	Boston Public "Chapter Forty"		Ally McBeal "Tom Dooley"		News		Raymond	Seinfeld
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Fear Factor (In Stereo)		Third Watch (N) (In Stereo)		Crossing Jordan (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Antiques Roadshow (N)		Masterpiece Theatre		Empty Oceans, Empty Nets		Charlie Rose (N) (In Stereo)
WGGB	22	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Funniest Home Videos		Bachelor (N) (In Stereo)		Contact: Telling to the Dead		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Frasier	Frasier	Hughleys	One on One	Parkers (N)	Girlfriends	News	Ent. Tonight	5th Wheel	Shipmates
WYBS	23	Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Friends	Major League Baseball Florida Marlins at Atlanta Braves (Live)						★★½ The Goonies (1985) Sean Astin
A&E	45	Law & Order "Duffer"		The View (In Stereo)		Biography Bio "75" (N)				Biography Close-Up: Saturday Night Live (N)		Law & Order "Grief" (In Stereo)
CNN	20	Moneyline		Crossfire (Live)		Live From...	The Point	Larry King Live		News night		Crossfire	Moneyline
COM	46	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Geeks	Let's Bowl	Whose Line?	Jim Breuer: Nerdcore		Com. Presents	Com. Presents	Daily Show	Sat. Night Live
DISC	53	Spirits of the Forest		Jungle Nights		Kesll and Ivy: Chimps Like Us		Dwarf: Standing Tall		Story of the Elephant Man		Kesll and Ivy: Chimps Like Us
ESPN	21	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs Conference Quarterfinal Game 3 -- Teams To Be Announced (Live)						Baseball Tonight (N)		Sportscenter
LIFE	29	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		My Son Is Innocent (1996, Drama) Marita Henner, Nick Stahl				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	35	Fear	Becoming	MTV Special	Viva (In Stereo)	First National Sex Quiz		Reel World	Real World	Real World	Viva (In Stereo)	Jackass	Dogtown
NICK	25	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb	Told by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers	All in Family	All in Family
SCIFI	51	Star Trek "A Private Little War"		Star Trek "The Menagerie"		Outer Limits "Voices of Reason"		★★ Dead Weekend (1995, Science Fiction) Stephen Baldwin				Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	24	Extreme Weather		Secrets of Forensic Science		Code Blue: One Day at a Time		Labor & Delivery		Maternity Ward		Code Blue: One Day at a Time
TNT	54	NYPD Blue "Lost Time"		NBA Basketball Playoffs: Conference Quarterfinal Game 2 -- Teams TBA						NBA Basketball Playoffs: Conference Quarterfinal Game 2 -- Teams TBA
USA	52	Walker, Texas Ranger "Patient"		JAG (In Stereo)		Eco-Challenge: New Zealand		★★½ Event Horizon (1997, Science Fiction) Laurence Fishburne				Real Sex: Let It All Hang Out
HBO	26	(5:00) ★★½ Paradise (1991)		★★½ Multiplicity (1996, Comedy) Michael Keaton PG-13		★ Freddy Got Fingered (2001) Tom Green R		Shanklink		★★ Assassins (1995, Drama) Sylvester Stallone R
MAX	27	(5:30) ★★ Space Cowboys (2000) PG-13		★★★ Space Cowboys (2000) PG-13		Final Spin				Queer as Folk ★★½ The Stray (2000) Michael Mattes R
SHOW	40	(4:30)		★★½ Where the Money Is (2000) PG-13		★★★½ You Can Count on Me (2000, Drama) Laura Linney R

Highbrow By Aaron Eppy

Highbrow By Aaron Eppy

The Torques Ken Fredette

The Torques Ken Fredette

Scarecrow By W. Bird

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Scarecrow By W. Bird

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Quote of the Day

"Look, first rule of love: never get rejected by the same girl twice, I mean that's useless. If you want to make a fool out of yourself, always do it with someone new."

-Friday the 13th Part IV: The Final Chapter

Amherst Weather

Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday
High: 45 Low: 32	High: 51 Low: 32	High: 60 Low: 33

Horoscopes

A.I. Joseph Hession

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Someone in your inner circle may object to your methods or motives quite suddenly today. Does this promise that a major rift is on its way? Just throw him off the island. Survivor style.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) The closer you are to home today the stronger and more confident you will feel. If you find yourself far away, it's a good day for a phone call. Remember to call 1-800-Collect!!!

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – You will discover today that your interests are similar to the interests of someone you've been avoiding. The fact is, you may get along well! But you probably won't because you have hangover paranoia and won't get along with anyone today.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Your warm and sensitive side is likely to be revealed today through a chain of unusual and unsuspected circumstances. It's because you obligated to be nice to the kid whose eyebrows you shaved off this weekend when he passed out drunk.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 21) – Despite what you have been saying all week long, luck is indeed a factor today. You'll have a brush with destiny before the day is out. Don't fear the reaper.

LIBRA (Sept. 22-Oct. 22) – Someone is likely to surprise you today by being right there for you, supplying your wants and needs in abundance. Take advantage of this!!!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – You'll find yourself in a new if not unexpected situation today which requires you to solve routine problems in highly imaginative, creative way. That dream you had about forgetting to put pants on and going to class is really a way of telling you not to forget to wear pants to class.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You're being a little too possessive today. Is it because you cannot admit that your emotions are getting the better of you? Yes it is. You really need to leave that stuffed animal at home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Someone may be trying to keep you emotionally off-center today in order to further his or her own personal agenda. Keeps your wits about you and don't listen to that crazy guy in your biology class.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Both people and situations are likely to prove far more forgiving than you may expect. You won't have to be as defensive as you have been recently. But beware of that sketchy guy on your floor.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Don't look too far back today, or you'll find yourself getting lost in a fog of memories that do not directly relate to your present life. Remember when that boy who sat behind you in your third grade class pulled your hair? Let it go!

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Love is in the air – but very likely not in your heart! Someone may have a hard time getting you to respond in an amorous fashion today. But that's alright, because you have someone else in mind.

NEW at DB Mart...
HOT STUFF PIZZA
Buy a Breakfast Sandwich
Get 2 FREE HASH BROWNS and a 12 oz COFFEE
Redeem this coupon at:
250 TRIANGLE ST. AMHERST, MA
413-549-5600
Limit one coupon per visit

ACROSS
1 Chef's attire
6 Mo. for Libras
9 Cluster
14 Peter Nero's instrument
15 Caviar
16 Luau welcome
17 Place for valuables
19 Say
20 Lock closely
21 Knife handle
22 Rye or white
23 Pal dry
25 Play (a radio) loudly
26 Repeats
29 Fit to —
31 Mountain in Turkey
32 Astronomer's study
36 Learn by — memorize
37 Barbecue tidbit
38 Quark's home
40 Cycled
43 Hun leader
45 Prong
46 Acted like a CEO
47 Caterwauls
50 A lot
51 Warming drink
52 Inlets
54 Haul
57 Washington's follower
58 Exactly
61 1902 eruption
62 Ultimate (degree)
63 OPEC vessel
64 Schemes
65 "Of course!"
66 Garden tool

DOWN
1 Arched recess
2 Feel sorry for
3 Not easy to find
4 Lennon's wife
5 Aries refusal
6 Planet's course
7 Not friendly
8 Schoolbook
9 Trinkets
10 The U of UHF
11 Reminders
12 Swindle
13 Unyielding
18 Halloween figure
23 World-weary
24 Meadow
25 Painter Shahn
26 Attention
27 Harvest
28 Despise
29 Curtain stage remark
30 Shower alternative
33 Fall guy
34 Elevator guy
35 Decorated forearm
37 Stimpy's pal
39 Piled up
41 Map books
42 Fleur-de- —
43 Disconcert
44 Huge weight
47 Alpine refrain
48 Florida city
49 Females
50 Ancient tales
51 Daisy Mae's creator
52 Like some fish
53 Gambling stake
54 Dancer Montez
55 Pre-owned
56 Actor Richard
59 Dawn goddess
60 Snap

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

R	O	O	M	E	R	G	A	T	E	R	R	S
O	N	S	A	L	E	E	R	A	P	A	I	N
N	E	U	R	O	N	N	I	L	I	N	T	O
				S	P	O	R	T	S	C	A	S	T	E	R
C	A	C	H	E		E	R	E	P	O	S	S	E
O	R	L	Y		J	A	Y		K	I	D
A	G	A		P	A	L		S	N	E	E	R	E	D
C	U	R		R	U	M		P	A	C		O	V	A
H	E	A	V	E	N	S		I	C	E		M	E	N
		E	F	T		I	N	K		S	A	N	E
O	P	E	R	A		A	N	A		A	U	N	T	S
M	I	N	D	B	O	G	G	L	I	N	G
E	T	N	A		R	E	E		N	I	A	C	I	N
N	O	U	N		E	N	S		S	T	R	O	K	E
S	N	I	T		O	T	T		T	A	S	T	E	D

11-7-01 © 2001, United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Italian Minestrone Soup

Chicken Nuggets

Sweet Potato Quesadilla (some vegetarian, some vegan)

Roasted Vegetable Wrap (vegan) (W Basics)

DINNER

Italian Minestrone Soup

Moroccan Lamb Stew

Chicken Margarita

Southern 6-Bean Stew (vegan)

Roasted Vegetable Wrap (vegan) (W Basics)

Today's Staff

Ken Campbell
Richard Blake
Andy Vogt
Alicia Upano
Shannon Farrington
Mike Kulak

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: ERIC SODERSTROM

'We did it.'

PHOTO/IMAGE COURTESY

Paul Hutchens senior Minuteman, will not see his career end in the regular season

Men's lacrosse clinches spot in NCAA Tournament

ERIC SODERSTROM

WASHINGTON, D.C. – Buried under a collage of sweat, tears and war paint, Paul Hutchen made his demands clear.

"I've got your headline," he screamed. "Put 'we did it' as your headline."

Assured that wouldn't be a problem, Hutchen took a second to catch his breath. His Massachusetts men's lacrosse team had just topped No. 3 Georgetown, 16-13, to secure the ECAC Lacrosse League's automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament.

"We did this," he soon gasped. "No one else can take this away from us. Not the committee, not Syracuse. Nobody. We did this. Nobody else did this. The only guys who believed were us."

After being snubbed last year by the NCAA Men's Lacrosse Committee, the Minutemen have now left nothing to chance. And for the first time in five years, UMass will have the opportunity to compete for a National Championship.

"I've got nothing left," said Dan Paccione, fighting back tears just minutes after the final buzzer sounded Saturday at Harbin Field. "We knew we had to leave everything out there."

Had the Minutemen not given their all and fallen to the undefeated Hoyas, the postseason would have eluded them yet again. A season opening loss in overtime to Hofstra and an 11-9 loss to Yale last week were all the breakdowns the committee needed to excuse UMass from the Tournament.

"Everyone wants to say we're crybabies because we didn't get in last year," said Paccione, whose Minutemen missed the 2001 postseason despite a 12-2 record tarnished only by single-goal losses to Georgetown and Syracuse. "And maybe it did sound like we were crying when we didn't get in. But we know we deserved to get in. All the alumni knew we deserved to get in. That's why we came down here today, to see what we could do. And we showed [Georgetown] up."

It wasn't something lacrosse pundits expected. UMass began the season ranked No. 14 and was never touted to make a real commotion. Last week, all seven staff members of Insidelacrosse.com, college lacrosse's premiere website, predicted Georgetown over the Minutemen.

But those self-proclaimed experts base their forecasts regularly on rank, the one category UMass wasn't too worried about. It didn't matter who the Hoyas had beaten or who the Minutemen had lost to. This was about payback.

"We had it," said Tom Fallon, just after dousing his coach, Greg Cannella, with one of team's water jugs. "I knew we had it from the beginning. Everybody felt it in the locker room. We believed in each other and came out with the victory."

This was about pride. Dressed in a yellow polo shirt, khaki shorts and sandals, Rich Kunkel – a former UMass All-American and attackman on last year's Minuteman squad – leaped out of the bleachers at game's end and joined the UMass celebration immediately. He wasn't wearing a uniform, but Kunkel, joined by fellow grads Chris Gabrielli and John Madigan, looked as if he had never graduated. For him, something had been righted.

"They were the first ones to jump on the field and congratulate us," Paccione said of his former teammates. "They were just as fired up as we were. They know how hard we worked."

It may be a new year, but for some it's still 2001.

"It's great because [the seniors] brought us to such great heights last year, they did everything for us," Fallon said. "They brought us to where we are, so they're enjoying it with us. Those seniors were some of the most inspiring people I ever met. And we're playing for them. They deserve this too."

Eric Soderstrom is a Collegian Columnist.

Committee will not decide future

UMass captures ECAC crown

By Matthew F. Sacco
COLLEGIAN STAFF

WASHINGTON, D.C. – If Saturday was the first time you'd ever seen the UMass lacrosse team, you might be a little confused.

UMass	16
Georgetown	13

You might not understand why the final buzzer of the Minutemen's 16-13 victory over Georgetown triggered an equipment throwing, Powerade dousing pile-up or why former Minutemen Rich Kunkel, John Madigan and Chris Gabrielli proceeded to hurdle the three-foot fence in front of the raised-silver bleachers just to join the fray.

That's because one game doesn't tell the story of this team. It doesn't even scratch the surface of this team's history. A history that includes the sudden death of teammate Eric Sopracasa, the first consecutive losing seasons in school history and last year's relative snubbing at the hands of the NCAA tournament committee.

But after Saturday's road victory over third-ranked and undefeated Georgetown (9-1, 3-1 ECAC), UMass (10-2, 4-0) assured itself a spot in the postseason, taking its destiny into its own hands and out of someone else's.

That's why senior Paul Hutchen was jabbing headlines at the nearest reporter and Justin Walker was relaying the news via cell phone and Donna Fallon, mother of defenseman Tim, was hugging every maroon-clad human being in site and A.J. Cappelli was squeezing coach Greg Cannella until he was red in the face and midfielder Chris Fiore was pointing to the crowd and Andy Shea was avoiding a celebratory bath and Dan Paccione had nothing left to give.

"It's emotionally draining," said Fallon, head shaking. Considering Saturday's contest was the most important lacrosse game anyone on the UMass roster has ever played, it had better be emotional. "Every player had something to play for."

To start the game, it looked like every Minuteman was playing for the early lead. UMass busted out to 8-2 lead in the first quarter. Five different players tallied goals in that span including a pair from midfielder Kevin Leveille.

Steve Dusseau had a hat trick in the second quarter as the Hoyas went on a 4-1 run to end the half and bring the deficit to three. But as the second half commenced and Georgetown continued its uphill climb with time ticking away, it became clear that UMass was in complete control of the game.

The Minutemen had four different goal scorers in the third frame as they went score for score with the home team to preserve a three-goal lead entering the final stanza. Marc Morley scored his first of two on the day just minutes into the quarter to give the Minutemen a four-goal cushion.

The lightweight Morley beat two 200-pound defensemen to a ground ball he had no business winning before lacing a shot past Scott Schroeder (11 saves).

The Hoyas followed Morley's effort with a pair of their own to bring the contest to within two. But just moments later freshman Gene Tundo (4 assists) found Leveille cutting to the net for his fourth of the game to take a 15-12 advantage.

Leveille, playing primarily against long stick midfielder Kyle Sweeney, effectively exorcised the demons of last year's G-Town match-up in which he lost to ball to Sweeney in the waning moments of a tie game.

This year Leveille got the best of his nemesis scoring four goals on five shots and canceling out the effort of Player of the Year candidate Dusseau.

He tallied four for the Hoyas while being marked by senior All-American Matt McFarland. Dusseau wasn't nearly as efficient as Leveille and became increasingly reckless with his shots as Georgetown pressed to bring the game even.

"There was no way anyone but Matt McFarland was going to guard Dusseau," Cannella said. "He's their best player, we knew they were going to look to feed him and Matty did a great job."

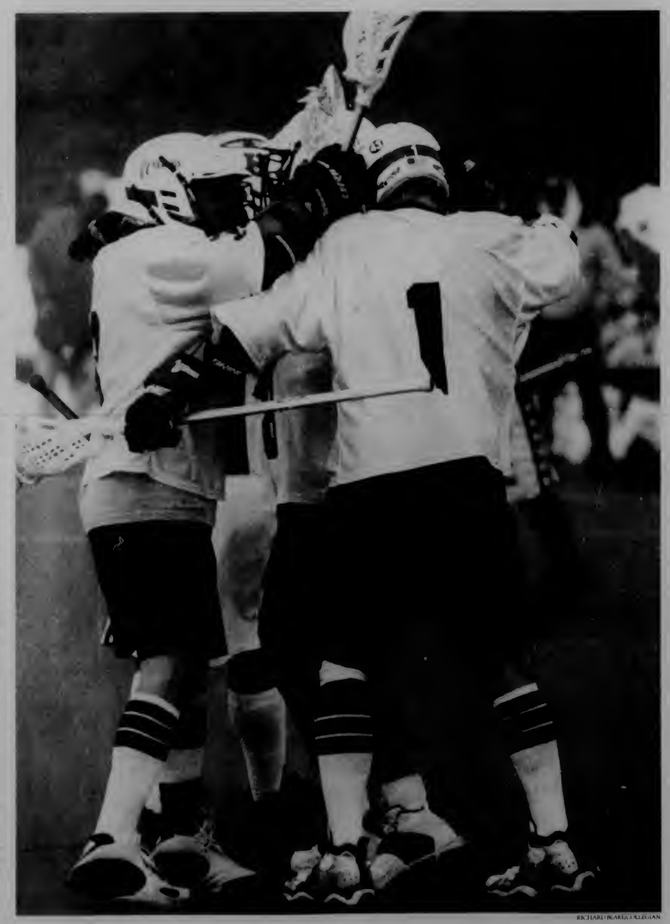
Although Dusseau managed four scores, mostly on power moves with his back to the cage, McFarland was there to stifle him when it mattered including an adept stick check late in the fourth quarter.

Following a Phil Vinceni goal that closed the gap to 15-13, Dusseau used a split dodge from the top of the restraining box to beat McFarland and head for the crease. But the senior recovered quickly to rake Dusseau's stick as he cocked to shoot. Don Little (two goals) picked up the ground ball and cleared it to tie the game.

The Minutemen used a complete effort and a superior game plan to dismantle the Hoyas and knock them completely off stride. On the defensive end McFarland held Dusseau in check while Tom Fallon held top G-Town attack Mike Hammer goal-less.

Midfielders Trevor Walker and Doug Staab tried to pick up the slack, combining for six goals, but it was not enough as the Hoyas never got within two scores after the second half.

Ire-hman Bill Schell had a career day in net with 19 saves including a pair of robberies on Dusseau in the final quarter.



"Billy was great for us," Cannella remarked with a grin. "His grandfather passed away this week so he didn't even practice with us until Friday. But we knew he was capable of this."

The UMass attack spread the Hoya defense thin with eight different goal scorers and nine team assists on the afternoon. Leveille led the way with four tallies, while Tundo was the consummate feeder with four. Fiore also had four points on two goals and two helpers.

The Minutemen had their rival on the ropes from the opening face-off to the final buzzer. The UMass players made it blatantly clear through their play that this game was what they've been working toward. They played hurt, they played tired and they played hard, all for that elusive automatic bid.

And now that UMass is officially tournament bound, the journey has reached its conclusion, right?

Said Cannella: "No, we've got bigger goals than that."

RICHARD BLAKE/COLLEGIAN

The UMass men's lacrosse team, now guaranteed an NCAA Tournament berth, travels to Syracuse Friday for a battle inside the Carrier Dome.

SUPER SOLO ARTS PAGE 5.

DON'T WATCH T.V. ED/OP PAGE 4.

SOFTBALL STREAKING SPORTS PAGE 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
TUESDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE ONE HUNDRED TWENTY ONE ☆☆☆☆☆ 4.23.02

JAMES SCHEPIS/COLLEGIAN

Warming up for this weekend's Haigis Hoopla, the courts in the Southwest and Central residential areas have been bustling with players getting ready for the three-on-three tournaments.

High expectations for Haigis Hoopla finale

By Matthew F. Sacco
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Mother Nature has been in one of her moods lately. She's been drawing out members of the UMass balling community with 90-degree sunshine and just as quickly dispatching them with the occasional chilled rainstorm. But as much as she can stop ballers from running the heated pavement of the Horseshoe and criss-crossing the faded midcourt line of the Orchard Hill court, Mother Nature cannot stop the arrival of every street legend's annual dream weekend – Haigis Hoopla.

The contents of the Haigis Mall are still littered with cars and parking meters and remnants from last Saturday night. The rent-a-rims haven't arrived yet, nor have the advertising stands, the Velcro wall or the home run derby, but clearly the atmosphere is present and accounted for.

Because while the Mall itself remains devoid of the droves of Haigis paraphernalia that will undoubtedly inhabit it come this Friday, anticipation is in the air as the UMass Sport Management Department and its volunteers prepare for Haigis' swan song and what could be the most successful year in the program's history.

"We're expecting things to go well," said Dr. Carol Barr, head of the Event Management class that runs Haigis Hoopla. "It should be just as big as if not bigger than past years. We've started marketing to area leagues, basketball teams and area high schools. We are expecting a good turnout, some teams who have been playing for 12 years."

This year's event will mark the 12th and final year of Haigis Hoopla. Since the program's inception in 1990, the size and popularity has grown exponentially. The first Haigis Hoopla drew about 1,000 spectators to watch only about 100 teams compete. But this year Barr expects almost four times the amount of competitors and over 10,000 fans.

"Our goal is 400 teams, we're shooting for that," Barr said. "I'm expecting in 380 range. We estimate about 13,000 spectators – that's a huge estimate. The spectators have been great. Last year we had a climbing wall, we had the Velcro wall, we had the food vendors, university food sponsors, we have a great family atmosphere, we have a kids zone area – everyone participates."

As Barr alluded, Haigis Hoopla isn't just about the game. Although it started out as strictly a basketball tournament and it is now the largest event of its kind in New England, Haigis has become more of a festival than anything else. It is a campus-wide event even for those who don't like basketball.

There are games for kids, students and adults such as the wiffle ball home run derby and the Coca-Cola foul shooting contest. There are advertising giveaways and contests run out of stands for each of Haigis' many sponsors. There are also scheduled spectator events such as the slam-dunk contests sponsored by NBA Inside Stuff.

But even with the success and growth that Haigis has enjoyed in its 12 years of existence, its future is basically nil, as plans for a Haigis version 13 have already been abandoned.

It has not yet been made clear why Haigis has no future at UMass. Some members of the Event Management class have surmised that the cancellation could have something to do with the recent budget cuts. But considering that Haigis is a volunteer coordinated event and that the sponsorship is at an all-time high, that scenario seems unlikely.

"We don't rely financially on the university at all," Barr said. "Students generate the revenue needed through entry fees and sponsorship, the university helps us in other ways."

Unfortunately the benefits that Haigis has brought not only to the volunteers involved but the whole campus will not continue past this year's event.

Haigis Hoopla has become one of the most popular events on campus in the last few years. It can easily compete with such other events as the Spring Concert, Bowl Weekend and Southwest Week. But as far as organization, Haigis is in a league of its own.

It has a comprehensive official web site and organizers begin marketing the event in late March and early April.

The elimination of Haigis will remove an irreplaceable experience for many Sport Management students eager to get their hands dirty before graduation. Department officials, however, are confident that even with the loss of its most publicized activity, students will still be provided with ample opportunity to gain experience in the field.

SCOTT HUDSON/COLLEGIAN

Washed away

Last week's sunny days saw an outdoor rally to support peace in the middle east and Afghanistan. Part of the rally was a flag washing ceremony, where a Persian Gulf veteran washed the flag of the United States.

Faculty Senate, MSP encourage campus to take a stand in Boston

By S.J. Port
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Members of the University of Massachusetts community, from all of the campuses, will appear on the doorsteps of the Massachusetts State House this Thursday to unite in protest against this year's state budget cuts for higher public education.

Students and faculty are expected to join forces in this effort. Many departments have urged professors to excuse absences from classes on Thursday in order to provide extra incentive for students to attend the rally.

The Faculty Senate has canceled its regular meeting on Thursday to allow faculty members to participate in the rally. An additional Faculty Senate meeting will be held toward the end of the year so that the Senate is able to complete its agenda for the year.

UMass-Amherst's Provost, Charlena Seymour, sent an email to all students with OIT accounts saying it was important that all students planning to attend the rally speak beforehand with their professors concerning the effects of their absence on that particular date.

In addition Seymour forwarded the message that all faculty received regarding absenteeism on the 25th. The statement sent to faculty encouraged them to "have a sense of leniency" but gave faculty permission to "differ in their opinions about handling absences for April 25."

English majors received an email from Associate Professor Randall Knoper urging them to participate in the rally.

"The aim is to have thousands of people, from all UMass campuses, at the rally, thousand of people lobbying for UMass…Many faculty members have canceled classes for the day. It makes sense to take advantage of this, and to support higher education in Massachusetts," Knoper said in his email.

Faculty Senate member, President of the Massachusetts Society of Professors, long time history professor, and one of the 400 faculty members who participated in the Save UMass Teach-In, Ron Story sees the rally as a means to prove to legislators at the State House that UMass matters and hopes that many faculty and all students attend.

"I do definitely plan to attend the rally. Even though it's going to take all day, it seems a good use of time for people who care about the future of the campus. I hope other faculty and all students will join us," Story said.

Story went on to say that the rally is just one of many moves members of the UMass community are making to show legislators how important the University is to the state and its people. He believes the budget cuts have put the campus in serious danger of having its accomplishments jeopardized, and that the effects of the rally will put us on our way to recovery.

"We want to show legislators that the University community will support them in any steps they take to restore UMass funding, whether that be by increasing revenues or moving UMass higher up on the state's priority list or, hopefully, both. We think that we have a reasonable chance to achieve a reasonable appropriation after the budget dust settles this spring. At that point, we can move ahead with new faculty and staff hires and more reasonable student fee increases than we've had this year," Story said. "Longer term, I'd like to see us institutionalize the Teach-In and Rally efforts of this spring, so that they happen every year as a matter of course rather than just during a crisis like today. That way, we could avoid such deep crises!"

Story is just one of many faculty members and administrators who plan on attending the rally to support the University and continue to oppose state budget cuts for higher education.

Those still interested in attending the rally should use the Save UMass Web site (www.saveumass.org) to contact the organization. Buses have been hired to take faculty and students to the State House, where UMass community members will convene in the Great Hall to meet with legislators in teams.

National Briefs

Washington, D.C.

By Mira Katz
U-WIRE DC BUREAU

(U-WIRE) WASHINGTON – Thirty-three protestors were arrested Monday morning for staging sit-ins that blocked entrances to congressional parking lots in Washington, D.C., while protesting U.S. foreign policy in Colombia.

The National Mobilization on Colombia, a pro-Colombian organization, gathered at 14th Street and Madison Drive at 7 a.m. Monday morning to engage in a direct action of what protest organizer Jeff Winder called a "forceful and nonviolent march from the Washington Monument to the capitol building. Once we reach the capitol, large and small groups will engage in nonviolent direct action to carry the message to Congress and change U.S. policy which causes suffering and death to the people of Colombia."

Approximately 800 protestors, flanked by more than seven different divisions of D.C. Metro police, guided the marchers along Constitution Avenue, finally culminating in Upper Senate Park.

At approximately 8:15 a.m. the demonstrators split up and took different routes through the city. Protestors who did not want to be arrested continued on Constitution Avenue, while others turned toward the parking lot entrances to stage sit-ins. Eighteen protesters were taken into custody at the Capitol entrance at 1st and Delaware Streets in the Northeast section of the city, and approximately 15 additional demonstrators were arrested at 1st and East Capitol Streets.

Members of the groups formed human chains, blocking an entrance to a congressional parking lot. Those arrested are being charged with obstructing traffic, a crime which carries a penalty of a $300 fine and up to 90 days in jail if convicted.

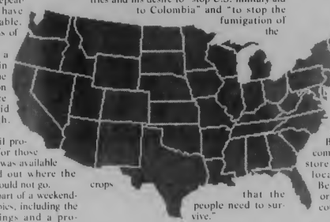
"I am here to voice my dissent with the U.S. government's policy on the expansion on the war on terrorism," said Julia Bend, a demonstrator who traveled from San Francisco. "I don't feel that what the government is doing is doing any good, but only harming the people and the environment."

Bend also noted U.S. tax dollars are being given to Colombia, of which she said a majority goes to the military to defend the 490-mile pipeline connected to an Occidental-operated oil field. That money would be better spent on drug treatment programs that are much needed here in the United States, Bend said.

That pipeline, called the Cano Limon, has been a target of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia. The repeated bombings frequently have left the pipeline inoperable, costing Occidental millions of dollars.

"Civil disobedience is a long-standing tradition in the United States, and the ability to take direct action where one sees an injustice is to have power," said Patrick Rainshouraough, demonstration organizer.

There was legal council provided by the organizers for those who were arrested, and it was available to talk to police to find out where the demonstrators could and could not go.



Monday's events were part of a weekend-long protest of various topics, including the World Bank/IMF meetings and a pro-Palestinian march. Hundreds of protestors gathered at the Sylvan Theatre on the southwest side of the Washington Monument Sunday to listen to speakers, hear musicians and watch a puppet show to protest U.S. involvement in Colombia.

At first there was little police presence at the peaceful rally Sunday, but as the approximately 1,000 demonstrators descended upon the Sylvan Theatre area, marching from the Edward R. Murrow Park in front of the World Bank at 18th and H streets Northwest, they were surrounded by police from more than a half dozen departments. The march was sponsored by Mobilization for Global Justice.

Participants of the rally put on a show carrying large puppets mounted on sticks, depicting the effects of U.S.-sponsored oil drilling and the drug war on the people of Colombia.

Among the many speakers was Eleiza Braun from Student Peace Action Network, who discussed her experience in Columbia and has "seen the human face of those in Colombia, and it was shameful," she said. "We want the U.S. foreign policy towards Colombia to change."

Winder spoke about ending the School of the Americas, a U.S.-sponsored military training program in Latin American countries and his desire to "stop U.S. military aid to Colombia" and "to stop the fumigation of the crops that the people need to survive."

In an interview with Winder he expressed his hope to inform U.S. Congress there are people who do not support its action in Colombia, and they want to close the school of the Americas, which is located at Fort Benning in Columbus, Ga.

This facility is the U.S. Army's Spanish-language training facility for Latin American military personnel. Established in 1946, the school, along with the U.S. Air Force's Inter-American Air Forces Academy, attracts the largest number of Latin American military students.

Winder said he hopes to "end the fumigation of the subsistence crops, which detrimentally effects the environment as well as the people of Colombia."

He was very happy with the turnout and said more people were arriving slowly from the interfaith service that was being held at the First Congregational Church. He expressed his excitement at the diverse crowd the protest had drawn.

North Carolina

By Matt Bradley
THE CHRONICLE (DUKE U.)

(U-WIRE) DURHAM, N.C. – Popular clothing retailer Abercrombie & Fitch attracted national media controversy and boycotts on college campuses nationwide last week after unveiling a line of T-shirts that portray what many have called stereotypical and racist depictions of people of Asian descent.

The retailer, which primarily targets college-age people, pulled the T-shirts on Thursday after Asian student associations at the University of California at Berkeley and Stanford University complained, calling for a boycott of the store's products and picketed outside local branches. The Stanford and Berkeley clubs encouraged student organizations on campuses across the country to follow their lead.

"They're shrugging their shoulders and saying 'We're sorry, we didn't know,'" said Duke Asian Student Association President Jin Park. "A company like that should know about the effects of their advertising and commercializing their products. I would tell them what I tell everybody – to be better informed."

The T-shirts feature caricatures of Asians with slanted eyes and cone-shaped hats, as well as depictions of Asian-Americans in stereotypical jobs, like laundry service and Chinese restaurants.

"People don't really understand the history of Asians and Asian-Americans, and therefore [that's] why these images hurt," said Park, a senior. "Everyone knows and they learn in school about the legacies of slavery, but Asian-American history is something that very few people are aware of, and thus can't be sensitive to."

The slogans on the shirts included, "Wong Brothers Laundry Service – Two Wongs Can Make it White," "Abercrombie & Fitch Buddha Bash – Get Your Buddha on the Floor," and "Wok-N-Bowl, Let the Good Times Roll – Chinese Food and Bowling." Some of the pulled T-shirts are being sold on the online auction house Ebay.com, commanding bids as high as $510.

"It has not been our intention to offend anyone," Abercrombie & Fitch spokesperson Hampton Carney said in a statement. "These graphic T-shirts were designed with the sole purpose of adding humor and levity to our fashion line."

Carney said the company thought the new line would appeal to Asian-American shoppers.

"The thought was that everyone would love them, especially the Asian community," Carney said. "We thought they were cheeky, irreverent and funny."

Although Abercrombie & Fitch removed the shirts from its shelves Thursday, Park said she and the ASA executive board are calling on students to continue boycotting the store.

"For now, the boycott stands," Park said. "We're waiting for Abercrombie & Fitch to say something more than they're sorry." Park said ASA will continue the boycott until it sees an internal change at the corporation, although she said she was not sure what form such a change would take.

Carney said the company has made fun of groups such as taxi drivers, foreign waitresses and Britons in the past, but has never been the object of boycotts for such portrayals.

But the company has come under fire for portraying stereotypical and potentially offensive items in other cases. It has received criticism for using sexually provocative marketing images to sell its products to teen-agers and college-age consumers. The company's catalogue, A&F Quarterly, features partial nudity and became the object of a consumer campaign against pornography last year.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Friday during the University of Massachusetts academic semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded 1890 as Aleph-Lamed, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then The Massachusetts Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a semiweekly publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Sam Wilkinson Editor-in-Chief
Matthew F. Sacco Managing Editor
Amy Garganta Business Manager
Shimauli Dave Production Manager
Jake Lilien Diversity Editor
Mike Kulak Editorial Production Manager
Jason Smith Advertising Manager

Mike Delano Arts & Living Editor
Matthew Despres Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jennifer Eastwood Features Editor
Catherine Turner News Editor
Tibora Ginzo-Blum Photography Editor
Eric Soderstrom Sports Editor
Brent Siniawski Finance Manager
Charlie Iacco Distribution Manager

Morgan Taylor Advertising Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Cara Murphy Assistant Finance Manager
Shawn Daugherty Assistant Business Manager
Megan Shannon Assistant Advertising Manager

ONLY YOU CAN SAVE UMASS

RALLY in Boston this Thursday

sign up for buses NOW!

Sign up in Student Union lobby 9:30-2:30 or email saveumass@yahoo.com

Buses are subsidized. We are asking for $5 donations, but are happy to waive that for anyone for whom it's a problem.

Driving? Please sign up anyway.
(We need crowd estimates for press, and to know what legislator districts we represent.

WHO ELSE IS COMING?

The Press (in numbers). Students, faculty, and staff from every campus in the UMass system (Boston, Dartmouth, Lowell). The state and community colleges. UMass Dartmouth is bringing over 700 people, more than 1 out of every 10 students enrolled there.

RALLY DAY SCHEDULE

Buses will load at 9:00 am.and leave at 9:30 am sharp. The rally is on the steps of the State House in Boston from 12 noon to 1:30 pm. Some buses and people will return right after the rally. Many (we hope most) of us will be going inside the State House, where we've reserved the Great Hall. We'll be visiting legislators in teams. They've all been told we are coming, and we have appointments with many. In a big 1989 rally students were accused of "trampling the flowers." This time we'll be bringing flowers to the legislators (along with a strong message). Please sign up so we can identify your legislator's district.

Top 10 Reasons to Rally in Boston this Thursday April 25:

10. President Bulger "applauded the faculty and student lobbying effort that will culminate on April 25 with UMass Rally Day at the Statehouse... His advice to the students and faculty going to Beacon Hill: 'Be Purposeful. Be respectful. Be persuasive.'"
9. Fees for nest fall are up $1270. If we don't stop the cuts, they won't stop the fee increases. Rally now or pay later.
8. Remember how hard it was geeing into classes last fall? Unless we do something, next fall there will be the same number of students, but 1 out of 10 classes will disappear. it's like musical chairs where each new round they take away a chair. Take a day now or risk taking an extra year to graduate.
7. The House Ways and Means committee will release its budget soon. It will be horrible, calling for another big cut for next year. But legislators have made it clear they will back off the cuts, and raise revenue instead--if (and only if) there is a popular outcry.
6. Provost Seymour has encouraged faculty to excuse absences. Lots of faculty will be calling off class and going to Boston for the rally.
5. Tax cuts, most of them for business and the wealthy, put us in this hole. The legislature can solve the state's budget crisis by having the wealthy pay their share or by cutting UMass. Let them know which we choose. Our rally can help win the revenue increases that will also fund social programs.
4. The library has bad to cancel hundreds of journal subscriptions and has pretty much stopped buying books. This puts it at the bottom of the Associated Research libraries (105th out of 112).
3. Because being 47th out of 50 states in public investment in higher education isn't good enough.
2. The press keep calling, and they'll be there. The whole world is watching.
1. We can win this fight. Legislators tell us the teach-in letters have had an impact. But legislators need to hear our voices at the rally. If we are there -- in numbers-- they will cave.

WHERE'S MASS WITHOUT U?

Eliot Chang featured at 19th Asian Night

By Jesse Greenspan
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Comedian Eliot Chang highlighted a large group of performers at the 19th annual Asian Night, last Friday in the Campus Center Auditorium.

The program, which was presented by the Asian American Students Association, was entitled "Breaking the Waves," and began with a Chinese lion dance.

Models from many different Asian nations walked down the aisle in a fashion show, which displayed the traditional attire of Cambodia, Japan, Korea, China, Laos, Thailand, India, Vietnam and Pakistan.

A Vietnamese Candle Dance continued the traditional theme, before the Sigma Psi Zeta sorority took the stage for a hip-hop dance performance.

Problems with the Campus Center Auditorium sound system hindered the subsequent performance of Juli S. Kim (singing) and Dan Wu (violin), whose "Wu tiao jian wei ni" was interrupted a number of times by the high-pitched screech of the amplifier.

Production problems would become a common theme of the night, as lighting and sound troubles forced a 25-minute delay to start the show, and also forced the audience to watch a film by The Students for a Free Tibet without sound.

At the end of the show, which lasted over five hours, the production crew got the sound to work on the film, but by that time, very few people were left in the audience to view it.

After a traditional Indian dance by Nita Trivedi and another hip-hop dance performance by Vybe, Chang took the stage for a 30-minute comedy act. Before long, the Harlem, N.Y. native had the crowd roaring in laughter by dealing mainly with Asian-American stereotypes and hip-hop culture.

"You cannot be a thug if you are from Iowa," Chang said.

After Chang left the stage, the Folk Dance Group presented a rendition of "Xin Jiang," which was the first of their two performances on the night.

Following a 30-minute intermission, the second half of the show was generally more hip-hop oriented, with KSA and IKON doing pop/hip-hop renditions of "K-Pop Power Mix" and "The IKON (Shinwha Mix)," respectively.

After Jane Park and Andrew Choi performed a beautiful duet rendition of "Say Goodbye," Eliot Chang once again took the stage to deliver his workshop presentation. This time around, Chang spoke seriously on a number of issues, particularly the role of Asian Americans in the media.

Chang also expressed problems with the word "oriental," as he feels it is a racial insult used to stereotype people of Asian decent.

"You never hear the word occidental to describe anyone from the West," he noted.

As the show neared its conclusion, Sumyung Bang sang a solo version of "Forgive Me For Being So Blind," while a Modern Fashion Show supplemented the traditional fashion show at the beginning of the night.

Ella Dupree and Judy Sayarath were the last performers to go, as they ended Asian night with an upbeat dance to a variety of hip-hop music.

SCOTT ELLIOTT/ COLLEGIAN

Buried treasure?

Construction has taken over the area in front of the Fine Arts Center, redirecting pedestrian and bus traffic, as well as creating several large holes in front of the FAC.

News Meeting Tonight @ 5:30

I AGREE WITH ELAINE!
www.knowmercy.org

BOSTON BARTENDERS SCHOOL of AMERICA
Bartenders Have More Spirit!
www.bostonbartender.com
Why not be a bartender?
• Only professional school in Western MA
• Hands-on training in real bar/club setting
• National certification in alcohol awareness
• Lifetime refresher • ID Card • Resume
• Special UMass student discount
• Conveniently located in West Springfield
Call TODAY! (413) 747-9888

Now More Than Ever, Appearance Counts...
INTERVIEW SUITS
Priced to fit any budget.
We specialize in suits for graduate school and job placement interviews.
Jonathan Reid™
The men's store in the Hampshire Mall.

STUDENT TRAVEL
It's YOUR trip, take it!
London.....$288
Paris.....$377
Brussels.....$458
Rio de Janeiro..$654
San Jose C.R...$523
Fares are round-trip from Hartford. Restrictions may apply. Tax not included.
BUDGET HOTELS for as little as $18 A NIGHT!!!
STA TRAVEL
800.777.0112
www.statravel.com

Grand Opening!
celebrate with us
IN CELEBRATION OF OUR NEW LOCATION WE EXTEND AN INVITATION TO SAVE!

Tuesday, 4/23	20% off school & art supplies
Wednesday, 4/24	20% off trade books*
Thursday, 4/25	20% off UMASS gifts
FRIDAY, 4/26	FRUGAL FRIDAY BUY 1 CLOTHING ITEM, GET 50% OFF A CLOTHING ITEM OF EQUAL OR LESSER VALUE

WIN GREAT PRIZES!
SEE STORE FOR DETAILS

University of Massachusetts UMASS UNIVERSITY STORE
Campus Center • Phone: (413) 545-2619
www.umass.bkstr.com
*does not include textbooks.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED/OP EDITOR: MATTHEW DESPRES

Save UMass
But do it right

With buses leaving Thursday morning for the Save UMass group, it's important to keep several things in mind.

Of course it's true that our voices need to be heard. State legislators need to hear loud and clear that there is a pulse on this campus, and that we care about what happens to our state budget. They need to know that the University of Massachusetts will not go down without fighting, and that we care deeply about the future of our own educations and lives.

For all of us on campus, there is perhaps no bigger fear than how the Massachusetts state budget gets divided this year. At this point, we've all heard the doomsday predictions and we've all heard the daily complaints from our faculty, friends, and selves. The fears are real.

This is why the Save UMass trip is planned. "Academic noise" or not, the more of us that go to Boston on Thursday, the clearer it will be on Beacon Hill what the opinion on campus is.

We at The Collegian are encouraging as many of you to go as possible, and to band together with your fellow students and UMass community members to show our leaders that we care deeply how much our budget gets cut. But we also would like to remind everyone planning to go on Thursday of something else.

To each and every one of you attending on Thursday: don't screw it up for the rest of us. Go, protest. Act from the heart and show your legislature how important you think the University of Massachusetts is to the Commonwealth and to its citizens.

But keep it peaceful. Please.

While there is a huge necessity for the Save UMass trip, it is equally important that the trip is carried out right. There are a lot of pent up emotions in most of us right now regarding our budget cuts. UMass students in general feel raw, bitter, and angry about the University's current financial situation and how it affects each and every one of us personally. These feelings have to be controlled, though.

The last thing that the Save UMass cause needs is any kind of ugly incident. Not that anyone expects a riot (that only happens in Southwest, right?), but arrests, vandalism, or any other kind of angry expression will do nothing to further the University's cause. It will only hurt it.

To all planning to attend: thank you. But make your University proud. Act with dignity. That's the only way the University will benefit from the Save UMass odyssey.

Be angry, but be angry right. When the emotions are running on high Thursday and the adrenaline is pumping, think clearly before you act. We want to be heard, but we also want to be respected. What are the odds Beacon Hill will even remember us favorably if it doesn't?

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

TV abusers beware

MATTHEW DESPRES

It's National Turn-Off-Your-Television week. A week when we're asked, as an entire nation, to disengage our digital cable and do something else. These things include hiking, spending time with family, reading, planting tulip bulbs, etc.

Now, I'm not sure if you can still play video games or go to the movies. All I know is that the latest installment of Friday the Thirteenth arrives on Friday (Jason Vorhees is back, only this time he's in space).

I'll be checking Fandango and finding myself a seat at the CineMark. No, no I won't, that last statement is an absolute lie. The fact is that the failing state of entertainment known as Hollywood is churning out crap (i.e. Jason X, The Scorpion King) at such a tremendous rate that we must rely on our televisions.

Now, a lot of television is bad, no doubt, but at least you have selections. True, you do have to suffer through movie trailers and Carrot Top long distance commercials, but compared to what's showing at the local Cineplex, television might be our only hope.

The last good movie I saw in the theater was The Royal Tenenbaums. That was last semester. HBO runs critically acclaimed series every night. I would rather sit home and watch "The Real World" or "The Osbournes" (MTV runs 200 episodes a week of each) than venture to the movies where I will possibly waste 10 dollars and two hours of my life that I will never get back. Granted, television isn't all good and daytime television is horrid.

Consider NBC's "The Other Hall" – the male counterpart of "The View" – just as annoying but with deeper voices. News channels are often untrustworthy. Even SNL was good this past weekend, and while Fox is losing "Ally McBeal", it's gained "Andy Richter" and "Greg the Bunny". Shows like these stray from your everyday sitcoms and are far more entertaining.

I've loved television ever since I was a chickadee. I am an only child therefore TV is my sibling. We didn't fight. I didn't have to share my toys with it. It never fought for the front seat on car trips. It's always been there when I needed it, its soft, warm, welcoming glow. And now that it's delivering quality infomercials and networks that cater to your every need, I suggest you throw out your VCR.

Back to my original point (did I have one?) – oh yeah, National Turn-Off Week.

This isn't a bad idea, for while television entertains us, it also makes us fat and dumb. Of course, television is like anything else. What you put into it is what you get out of it. If you're going to watch soaps and eat Cheetos, then chances are television isn't actually doing much for you. But, if you watch the Discovery Channel, History Channel, or any other forms of infotainment then at least you're picking up some "Jeopardy"-friendly knowledge. And kid's programming. Whoa what a goldmine! I'd do anything to be a child now.

Nickelodeon, The Disney Channel, Cartoon Network and PBS all have excellent children's programming. These networks go above and beyond the call of duty and deliver creative, quality programming every day.

Everything in moderation. Turn-Off week is necessary because apparently, children spend more time watching television than they do in school (them and me both). But seriously, that's disgusting. Let us not blame television. Let's blame neglectful and intellectually abusive parents. There, I feel better.

If you watch television correctly then you don't have to worry about turning it off this week. However, if you're an abuser, if you watch "Jerry Springer", "Ricki Lake", or The Home Shopping Network every day then you should take a break. If you are an occasional prime-time viewer I see nothing wrong with relaxing in front of a quality show for a few hours a week. Of course you could spend that time reading, walking your goldfish or defrosting your microfridge. But isn't that what Sunday is for?

"Turn-Off week is necessary because apparently, children spend more time watching television than they do in school."

Next time you entertain the thought of going to the movies, check your local listings first. The stars you go to the movies to see are most likely in better movies on video or DVD. This whole article was inspired by my attempt to watch Joe Dirt.

You see, when this what looked to be hysterical David Spade vehicle was in the theater I was dying to see it. David Spade as white trash, wrestling with an alligator – how could it NOT be funny.

Well, after twenty painful minutes last night I had done all I could do to keep my dinner down. My god, I almost wasted two hours (figuring in driving, getting provisions, and ticket-taking time) and eight dollars on a really bad movie. The healthy alternative would've been for me to watch Tommy Boy for the 520th time or, even better, "Just Shoot Me" which would consume less time and include that hysterical, washed-out fashion diva Nina Van-Horn.

So as a re-cap: National-Turn-Off-Your-Television-Week – only a good idea if you are an abuser. So if you watch more than say, three hours of TV a day, take a break, ok. You're ruining your eyes. Don't, I repeat, do not go to the movies. If we stop going, they stop making them. Wait until the summer. There's bound to be something good by then, and if there's not, there'll be plenty of reruns to enjoy. If you're the parent of a middle-school student, please make sure they go to school and store the television and remote in a place they never frequent. Like near their school bag.

Melody Zagami is a Collegian columnist.

3 Boston Herald. Distributed by NEA, Inc.

Get on the Bus!

Get on the bus. We're going to Boston. On Thursday, we are going to make sure that UMass can't be ignored. We're going to demonstrate our power on the State House steps.

One month ago, thousands of students and faculty participated in the teach-in, wrote letters, and participated in a truly stupendous rally outside the Student Union. After all that activity, some of you probably thought: "Why did I waste my time? Nothing changed. Fees are going up. The cuts are inevitable. We accomplished nothing."

But you would be wrong.

Your state legislators heard you. Save UMass delivered many thousands of hand-written letters to legislators' offices. And we know that the letters had a strong impact on our elected leaders. Reports from the state house say that all those personal letters were the main topic of conversation for weeks. Legislators sat up and took notice of UMass' interest. Many of your representatives wrote to you and to us, making a commitment to protect UMass' quality in the upcoming budget fight.

Your chancellor heard you. When almost 5000 students rallied on campus, Chancellor William launched an effort to have UMass alumni contact their legislators on behalf of the university. Last week, she agreed to keep open the University Child Care Center for at least another year – after saying repeatedly that the budget situation made that impossible. These actions would never have been taken without the pressure we all brought to bear.

President Bulger heard you. He ended his deafening silence about the massive budget cuts afflicting our university just days after our rally, his eloquently calling for a ten percent increase in the UMass budget next year. He told the state legislature that "that solid, stable financial support from the Commonwealth" is crucial for the university system. "A strategic investment in the University of Massachusetts today will pay large human and economic dividends for generations of Massachusetts citizens."

This is what we have been saying for months, and it was no coincidence that he brought that message to the Senate Ways and Means Committee.

This was a great start.

But our work is not done. We have to take the advocacy to the state house in Boston. That is where the action is, and that is where the decisions are being made that will decide our future and the future of our university. It's time to get on the bus.

The budget debate is about to begin. The governor will be making her formal recommendations to the legislature in the coming week or two. Our state is facing a budget crisis and some hard decisions have to be made.

We will all share the pain, as vital services and programs are under attack. But we will not stand for Massachusetts to be at the bottom of the heap. This year, our state ranked 50th out of 50 states in its support for higher education. Citizens of our Commonwealth value higher education that is both excellent and accessible for all. We must not continue to place dead last in the race for an educated citizenry.

As legislators decide what to cut and what to keep, they are going to wonder if the efforts of last month were a flash in the pan. They are looking to see if only a few passionate students and faculty are fighting for UMass, or if support is strong and deep, a movement they cannot ignore. They will decide how seriously they need to take the university, based on how many people take the time and effort to get their bodies to Boston. It's time again to stand up for yourself.

MAX PAGE AND EVE WEINBAUM

On the steps of the State House and in their offices on Thursday, our elected officials will hear that the issues facing this campus are not just about a few people, but things that matter to everyone. They need to hear from you that you and future generations of UMass students deserve an outstanding university.

And we can't wait for the new chancellor to arrive. John Lombardi is supposed to be a great fundraiser. But he has said very clearly, that the legislature needs to do its fair share to keep this a great university. He needs your help lobbying and making our presence heard in Boston right now.

It's near the end of the semester. Research papers and projects are due, and sunshine is beckoning. We all have a million things to do and places to be. But on Thursday, the most important place to be is in Boston, standing up for UMass. The Provost agrees and has told all faculty and students that missing class that day should be excused. This is our opportunity to make a difference.

Come to the Student Union or send an email to saveumass@yahoo.com to sign up. There is still space on the bus, or you can carpool with your friends. Just be sure your voice is heard.

Max Page and and Eve Weinbaum are Assistant Professors at the University of Massachusetts.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR
A University farewell

To the editor:

Finally, on May 26, like over 4700 others, I am graduating from the University. The only difference is that it took me 35 years. Believe it or not, I don't think this is a record. There are many people on this campus who are both alumni and employees. I happen to be one of those people. My original graduation date of 1971 was "extended" due to lack of interest (for lack of a better excuse). Too much substance abuse, I guess. The 70's were extremely weird times. By the time I got my act together, I actually received a diploma in the mail sometime around October of '73. (For those of you expecting to see a diploma on May 26, forget it – they mail them out.) I never went to Commencement – I couldn't see much sense in it – I didn't know anyone who was commencing at the same time and, at that point in my life, I saw the ceremony as just another corporate sponsored rite of passage. The most ironic part of my career at the University is that for the past four years I've been in charge of running Commencement – at least from the set-up and coordination of Physical Plant's part in the "big event." What my parents couldn't do, my boss accomplished in one fell swoop. Life has a way of working itself out. What goes around, comes around.

After graduating with a BA in English, I put my degree to work – I became a janitor in Morrill Science Center. Yes, we were called janitors back then, not custodians. Seriously folks, this was an education. I learned more about Geography and the Physical Sciences working the night shift than I did in six years of being an undergrad.

Also learned more about people and life than any formal education could ever teach me. Then I moved to the day shift in Baker Dorm and got back in touch with the students. I cleaned bathrooms and hallways for most of the day and got high with the students the rest of the time. You gotta keep in touch you know.

I gave myself four years (four more years) before I'd move on. Sure enough, about four years later I earned my Masters degree in Custodial Sciences (MCS). Made the big move to painting. Again I gave myself four years. Catching a theme here? Painting all sorts of places around campus was sufficient to keep me (and my wife and son) together in an Archie Bunker world. You want to do something to really make you step back and take stock? Paint your old dorm room after about eight years out of college. What a trip that day was.

About four years later I was on my way for sure – Assistant Foreman of the Paint Shop, Physical Plant, University of Massachusetts, Amherst. Now things were going according to plan. I had a BA, a MCS, I was a journeyman Painter, and working my way up the ladder (pun intended). A few years later I was in to Projects – big time renovations. I made my mark by overseeing the renovation of Kappa Sig (Animal House – honestly and truly) into the Campus Admissions Building.

There is so much irony in this world it's incredible. An honest to goodness animal house complete with couches thrown through windows, beer covered floors, totally destroyed, became the University's Admissions Center. Now you tell me, where did the phrase ZooMass come from? The administration certainly didn't have anything to do with it, now did they?

Then, I was asked if I wanted to oversee the implementation of a new computerized maintenance management system for the Physical Plant. What the hell, I was a UMass graduate, I could handle anything. From there the sky was the limit. I got totally sucked in. CMMS guru, work management implementations, and through it all, I was becoming the Man. I never thought I'd be "the Man." Next thing I knew, I was management – Assistant Director for Customer Service & Work Management. Fancy title – lowest paid. But I "was the Man."

Actually, one of the worst days of my life on campus was the day a student called me "Sir" (yes, with a capital S). I was no longer another Umie. I was the Man (NOT as in "You d'man"). It totally sucked. On top of that, the person who was in charge of getting the Stadium ready for Commencement was retiring and they asked me, a UMass Grad, to take his place. Remember, I never went to my own Commencement but they wanted me to get the stadium ready for the biggest event of the year – what an honor. Being the good UMie I am [was], I did it. And did it with pride.

Well, I've decided that enough is enough. The Republican Party and Billy Bulger (never, ever thought I'd associate those 2 together in a sentence) have basically bankrupted the University. The Stadium, like the rest of campus, is falling down, section by section. The State has offered me five extra years towards retirement and I'm taking it.

I'm finally going to my Commencement. That's right. This year's Commencement exercises will be my last. Through it all, my BA in English from UMass has served me well. So for those graduating seniors who are wondering what's next – don't worry too much – you're a UMass grad. You, and this institution, will make it through the tough times ahead.

Bruce Parkin
UMass alumni
Class of 1973

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 4.23.02 ARTS EDITOR: MIKE DELANO

Gala ideas from Elena

Ask Elena

By Elena Panesis
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Elena, since moving into my off-campus apartment I have been all about throwing theme parties! Yet, lately I have been a little stuck for ideas. Can you think of something really unique that probably hasn't been done yet? I'd love to wow my friends with something more original. – K. Cosgrove

K.C., I totally know what you mean about a lot of parties lacking originality! Sure, a 70s or 80s dress up party sounds appealing but not when you've worn your hair in a side ponytail so frequently that your friends start referring you to Style File columnist Shauna Billings for advice on how to spruce up your outdated wardrobe. Luau, toga, "pimp-and-ho" – it's all been done and recycled in weird combinations (the funniest one that I once heard about was a porn star party combining the raunchiness of the pimp-and-ho with the style of the seventies).

However, there are still trendsetters out that are too daring and bold to define their party by the number of kegs or scantily clad individuals involved. For example, while visiting a friend at Providence College, I saw a stampede of partygoers decked out in sailor, police and chef hats. My friends and I were rather astonished by the originality of their outfits but couldn't quite figure out how the three costumes fit to form one theme.

Suddenly, one of us had a flash of brilliance and hypothesized that these crazy characters were all invited to a cereal theme party! In fact, it made perfect sense to me as I tried to picture the "Rice Krispies" cereal box in my head with the "Snap, Crackle, Pop" trio. Snap wears a white chef hat; Pop is a hot man in uniform with that sailor/military hat (he must be in the navy) while Crackle shows no signs of an occupation and could be unemployed with that striped stocking cap.

We also figured that the police officer must have been dressing up as the "Cookie Crisp" cop and that even "Captain Crunch" could be considered a sailor. Imagine all the possible characters of a cereal theme party like the "Lucky Charms" leprechaun, the "Honey Nut Cheerios" bumble bee and even that "Count Chocula" guy. Our minds were swirling with ideas and one person brought up the idea of possibly bringing a box of your characters' cereal to the party as long as the host supplied the milk and bowls! Of course, the P.C. partiers were probably just having a post-Halloween party but at least they gave us inspiration for a hip, fresh fiesta where the guests will walk the planks for two captains, Morgan and Crunch!

Now that I got a little carried away with that theme since I am totally dying to throw that party as soon as I get my own apartment, I have a few more crazy ideas for your next big bash. Are you the

Turn to ELENA, page 7

COURTESY JAMES CHANG

Scott Eldridge II
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Trey Anastasio
Trey Anastasio
Elektra Entertainment Group

Phish shocked many of their fans and others in the jam band community when they wrapped up their Fall 2000 tour with the announcement that they were taking a break. That hiatus has resulted in the pursuance of a multitude of side projects taken on, or intensified, by the members of the crowd-drawing jam band. Lead singer and guitarist Trey Anastasio has put his musical talents into the star-studded collaboration Oysterhead with Les Claypool and Stewart Copeland while Page McConnell has been on tour with Vida Blue. While Oysterhead has been selling out their shows at almost every venue booked, Anastasio has also found the time to compile a new and unique band and release his solo debut, Trey Anastasio.

The solo work of Anastasio on this album is anything but solo. He has been working with a new band, preserving the classic sound that has proved strong in the past and making it intensely more creative and musically rich. The addition of four horns is a pleasant strength of the Vermont-heavy band. The sound of Anastasio is not a brand new one - instead it is the obvious indulgence of an artist entirely in control. As Anastasio remarks, "I was always writing charts for Phish, but a lot of them, I think, would have sounded even better with acoustic instruments...now I've got a chance to write that way." The reminiscent sounds and harmonics of Phish are found throughout the album, notably in the eleven-minute "Last Tube," where expansion of sounds serves to augment the electric intensity of Anastasio's guitar.

With Phish, Trey Anastasio was carrying his weight with both guitar and his ability to intrigue with vocals. This solo effort finds that, while his vocal and musical harmony still exists, it is added to by the support of a more present band. In no way was Phish a band of absent members or their sounds, but the new sounds of musicians brought in for this effort works as concrete support to what Anastasio already brings to the table. The addition of horns, the strength of the percussion, and the use of strings on many of the tracks show Anastasio's musical ability in arranging and utilizing the entire spectrum of sounds available to him. He goes beyond the genius of his guitar work seen in the past, and pulls together an entire album of new sounds.

"Night Speaks to a Woman" is one of the strongest early tracks off this album. Anastasio's guitar is heard throughout playing off the stronger sound of the horns in support. The female backup vocals that come through in the chorus are essential in their own way of propelling the sound of the horns and guitar into the forefront. In the following track of "Flock of Words," Anastasio's vocals form a sweet melody with the keyboard work of Ray Paczkowski, resulting in one of the slower songs on the album. "Flock..." is by no

Turn to SOLO, page 7

Changing Lanes merges lives

COURTESY DREAMWORKS

Ben Affleck and Samuel L. Jackson experience severe road rage in Changing Lanes.

By Michael Delano
COLLEGIAN STAFF

CHANGING LANES
Directed by Roger Michell
Starring Ben Affleck and Samuel L. Jackson
Playing at CineMark 12 in Hadley

Yeah, it rains a lot in Changing Lanes. Rain is the preferred meteorological setup in the movies for the display of raw emotions. And the entire maddening day of rage, revenge and (semi-) redemption takes place on Good Friday, but very little good happens at all. Such overbearing metaphors and irony are the hallmarks of many lesser films, but this one takes the audience well beyond the obvious and leaves them with a fulfilling drought of easy answers. It sends loyalties swinging back and forth between the main characters so often that, by the end, the viewer isn't questioning who is right, but instead is wondering just how far away their own character is from the very human behavior of these two men.

By human behavior we mean alternately predictable and wholly unexplainable, of course. Changing Lanes, like the best films, gives us complex characters we can't possibly love or hate, but always relate to because we see our friends, our family, and some of ourselves inside them.

Gavin Banek (Ben Affleck) is a successful lawyer whose Mercedes crashes into Doyle Gibson's (Samuel L. Jackson) very un-Mercedes vehicle on a New York expressway. Banek was on his way to court for an important case and Gibson was en route to a hearing that would potentially give him partial custody of his sons. No one is hurt in the crash, but the exchange of information immediately following the accident is where the two stubborn personalities collide.

The opportunity for some sort of compromise instead plants the seed for a day's worth of war games. Banek tries to buy his way out of the accident with a blank check, while Gibson wants to 'do it right' and make them both late by exchanging insurance info. Neither budges, but Banek leaves a bad impression by refusing Gibson a ride to his hearing and telling him "better luck next time."

Rushing into the courtroom sopping wet and apologetic, Banek realizes he's accidentally left a vital file with Gibson. Thus begins the sparring match. Banek drains

Turn to LANES, page 7

Layne Staley R.I.P.

Layne Staley, lead singer of the grunge band Alice In Chains, was found dead in his Seattle home on Friday, April 19. Although the cause of death is still unofficial at time of press, speculation and a previous understanding of Layne's addiction points to heroin.

The drug has been the downfall of numerous rock stars, including Kurt Cobain (addicted in the months up to his suicide) and Hole bassist Kristen Pfaff, both from Seattle.

Staley and lead-guitarist Jerry Cantrell formed Alice In Chains in 1987. After adding Cantrell's friends, bassist Mike Starr and drummer Sean Kinney, they began recording and playing on the thriving local scene.

Their unique style of a post-eighties metal band purged in an early-grunge sound brought them to the forefront. Cantrell wanted a more mainstream sound, but Staley's style was influenced by his love for more of a bleak, nihilistic, underground sound. The two combined for an original sound and style.

DAVID CONWELL

The band released Facelift in 1990, and it was ignited with the single "We Die Young" (not "Man in the Box"). It did so well, in fact, that they opened for Van Halen, Poison and Iggy Pop. During the tours, the band wrote a handful of songs, and four were released on the acoustic EP Sap in 1992 (titled Sap because the songs were "sappy"). Chris Cornell of Soundgarden makes an appearance in "Right Turn" while "Got Me Wrong" can also be found on the independent Clerks soundtrack.

The band achieved super status later in 1992, with the eventual multi-platinum release of Dirt. Many of their most well known songs were written for this album. Drugs were all over that disk as well (as I write this, "Junkhead" is wailing behind me... "What's my drug of choice? Well what I have you got? I don't go broke and I do it a lot...").

1993 was met with an EP release titled Jar of Flies – a beautifully written EP with incredible lyrics, harmonies and a style more similar to that of Sap. A self-titled full length was released in 1995, and would prove to be the band's last original release. You may remember their Unplugged with MTV in 1996, and the live CD, Nothing Safe in 1999.

Staley went his own way in 1995 with his presence within the supergroup Mad Season in 1995, featuring Staley, guitarist Mike McCready of Pearl Jam, bassist John Baker Saunders, and drummer Barrett Martin, both of Mudhoney. Staley wrote all the lyrics for the album titled Above. Tracks "River of Deceit" and "I Don't Know Anything" fared very well.

Staley will always be remembered for his incredibly original style, with tortured vocals that send shivers through the entire body. Cantrell and Staley could harmonize so well together that there might not be another band out there that could match it (check out "Down in a Hole") – or at least there hasn't been another band yet within the rock, metal, alternative or grunge genres.

Staley and Alice In Chains have been recognized for influencing bands like the Deftones, Monster Magnet, Clutch and Boy Hits Car to name a few. This influence over current bands is proof enough of the mark left on the music world both by the band and Staley himself.

Drugs take rock stars, rock stars take drugs. I suppose its part of it all. Layne Staley was a rock star, and he will be missed.

David Conwell is a Collegian Correspondent.

Isaak's Always Got Tonight a necessary pick

That T-shirt. That high hair. That come hither stare. How could you NOT run right out and buy Chris Isaak's latest ... if only for the cover art.

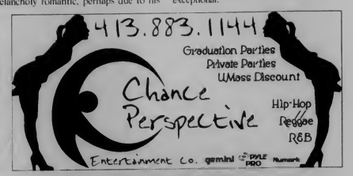
By Jake D. Lewis
COLLEGIAN STAFF

CHRIS ISAAK
Always Got Tonight
Warner Bros.

In Always Got Tonight, Chris Isaak's appealing persona shows up in aces on the album, from the infectious bop of the witty "Notice the Ring," to the more passionate moments displayed on "Worked It Out Wrong" and "Life Will Go On." No matter what the style of the song is, it's easy for the listener to associate with Isaak and the music; the melodies are simple yet refreshing to audiences saturated in the pop suckiness of commercial radio, and the lyrics are full of allure and naturalness. The tunes are infectious, as is his singing voice with its southern-hospitality twang that makes him sound like he is Elvis Presley's long-lost son (the square jaw and moussed hairstyle also help the resemblance too).

Isaak wisely alternates between rock tunes and more reserved numbers, aware that too many of one type will overshadow the others, and possibly cast the album to one extreme. The overall feel of this CD is that he's having a lot of fun with it – especially on "American Boy," the coolest rockabilly song I've possibly ever heard, compelling to me to start a line dance right away.

It could be dangerous, especially among the college crowd, to label Isaak's sound as country. But like The Eagles, Isaak balances the bluegrass with a modern-rock texture at the forefront. "Worked It Out Wrong," for instance, has a mixture of slide and acoustic guitars, as well as violins backing up Isaak during the doo-wop refrain. What also catches the ear especially in this track is the immense vocal range that Isaak is capable of; he reaches into his high voice when he sings in a falsetto at times, his voice has an attractive twang at other times, while moments later he comes across with the angst-driven fervor of a rock star. The song showcases the talents which Isaak can achieve, with the musically hybrid melody and the variety of vocal expressions of its performer.



If radio airplay is the beacon of success nowadays, all of the songs from this CD are worthy of being broadcast. "Let Me Down Easy," a breezy pop tune that's not a retread of any familiar themes is only one of the several upbeat and shiny tracks that will hopefully win people over. The album title is appropriate because it points you towards the title track that is a cut above the rest. Prowling the depths of his lower register, Isaak delivers on "Always Got Tonight," with its bluesy swagger mixing in with electric funk.

When it comes to the ballads, Isaak crafts delicate songs that nearly match the faster-paced tunes, but with energy of a different sort. In "Nothing to Say" Isaak croons about his breaking heart after the end of a relationship, something he seems to be able to sing with plenty of passion. He has, in reality, had plenty of luck in the dating area, often seen with celebrities on his arm, so it's hard to imagine him as a relationship reject, especially with his dashing appearance. Nonetheless, Isaak convincingly takes on the role of the melancholy romantic, perhaps due to his newfound acting ability. He adds charisma by not letting any song get too downtrodden or lethargic, like the brisk syncopation in "I See You Everywhere," instead keeping it light and lively despite the trite topic of relationship woes. Isaak keeps the whining and pouting to a minimum too, making it easier for them to grow on you.

It'd be hard to find one awful song on this entire album. Indeed, it is a wonder that Isaak has created such a diverse and exciting album for his eighth studio recording, but he has done it with great composure. It's safe to say that whether you are a long-time fan of Isaak or new to the scene, you will certainly not be disappointed.

There are but three directions a musician can move in with each new CD; the less-than-desirable backwards motion, the frequent position of staying put, or moving up a notch as a singer or songwriter. With Always Got Tonight, Isaak has raised the bar for his future CDs, making quite clear that he won't settle for anything less than exceptional.

I AGREE WITH ELAINE!
www.knowmercy.org

North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
www.northamherstmotors.com
549-RENT
POTTERS
AUTO & TRUCK RENTALS
• Cars • Mini Vans • Trucks • SUV's • Cargo Vans • 15 Passenger Vans • Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older • Direct Billing To Insurance Co. • MHEC Rates
(On bus route)

Eliminate
FEARS/ALLERGIES
In one session
Fear of flying, public speaking, exams, needles, elevators, heights, allergies and other disturbances can be eliminated in one session
Order a free booklet at 413 374 8217

Attention
May 2002 Graduates
If you are a member of the May 2002 graduating class who received Federal Perkins Loans while enrolled at UMass you should have recently received a certified letter about those loans.
We know this is a very busy time for you so we've mailed this information rather than having you attend a meeting.
However there are serious consequences if you fail to return these documents by 5/3/02 as instructed in our letter.
If you haven't received our letter but think that you should have or if you have any question about what you did receive,
CALL 545-2377

We're not like every other high-tech company. We're hiring.
No one told you the hardest part of being an engineer would be finding your first job. Of course, it's still possible to get the high-tech work you want by joining the U.S. Air Force. You can leverage your degree immediately and get hands-on experience with some of the most sophisticated technology on earth. To find out how to get your career off the ground, call 1-800-423-USAF or visit our Web site at airforce.com.
U.S. AIR FORCE

HONDA'S GRADUATE PROGRAM
Want a new car for graduation? Lorenz Honda has the answer!
IT'S SIMPLE!
• Call Alan Behan, Our Business Manager and former UMass Graduate for details.
• A minimum amount down and proof of employee commitment is all you need!
We'll get you in a shiny new Honda or one of our Pre-Owned Certified Hondas.
HONDA
Call now to take delivery before the end of school!
BUY AFFORDABLE BUY LORENZ HONDA IN GREENFIELD ROUTES 5 & 10 NORTH GREENFIELD
LORENZ HONDA 774-3200

■ Elena

continued from page 5

ambitious type that has worked a countless number of jobs and in doing so has acquired a drawer full of nametags? Have all your guests wear the name tags at the party and either watch Eminem's video "Slim Shady" or at least play the song aptly changing the lyrics to "I'm _____ yes I'm the real _____, all you other _____ are just imitating _____ etc." This one will work really well if you are new to the neighborhood because then you can invite the crew from next door over and totally confuse them on who is the rightful owner of the apartment. Maybe you can even offer a prize to whoever guesses correctly!

If you're in the mood for something a little mean but definitely fun, read Cameron Tuttle's The Bad Girl's Guide to Getting What You Want. She has this hilarious section entitled "Things to do with photos of your evil ex" which I think could be a great party theme. Have everyone bring in photos of an ex-significant other and pin a few up to the dartboard all taking turns at the loser. Flip some of them over, jot down a few embarrassing sexual stats, laminate them and you've got yourself some trading cards. Whoever collects the loser ex dream team wins!

For you conservative readers that found the previous ideas too wacky, why not try a pop star party where everyone dresses up as their favorite artist. Just make sure to limit the number of Britney wannabees that you invite.

Basically, use your imagination because anything goes and the wilder, the better – especially for you seniors out there that have only one month of school to live it up!

All you ladies, please stop sending me marriage proposals for Quiz the Pizz! My email askelena@yahoo.com is reserved for questions and comments on dating, work, school, friends, etc.

■ solo

continued from page 5

means weak, and is a standout example of Anastasio's vocal ability.

"Drifting" comes out later on the album with a middle of the road intensity that snowballs to a greater sound as the song pinnacles with the musical combination of all the band's sounds. With keyboards, horns, guitars and vocals, "Drifting" is a strong show of Anastasio's overall control in arranging this album. "At the Gazebo" is perhaps the truest sign of Anastasio the composing artist. As a solely instrumental performance, "At the Gazebo" parades the horns and strings especially, and brings out images of a gazebo band, long since forgotten by the popular music of the present. "Mr. Completely" evokes the truest Phish and jam band sound of all those displayed on the album. Anastasio takes the lead with his enticing and dominating guitar sound. But Anastasio does not leave the rest of the band by the wayside – instead he offers them a winding guitar path to follow.

This album comes through showing the strength and versatility of Anastasio. He branches beyond his guitar and extends beyond the already open and diverse sound that he helped to create with Phish. As a solo artist, he puts his interests in a combined effort of excellence. This album comes out as a successful venture into all of the open doors that stand in front of Trey Anastasio.

■ Lanes

continued from page 5

Gibson's bank account as a vice to retrieve the file, Gibson loosens a tire on Banek's car, and other sorts of character assassination and threats, idle and real.

Far more interesting than the acts of malice themselves is the depth the movie gives to both characters. The actual incidents are only blips on the timeline; the real meat of the film is reserved for the intense personal interactions both men have with the people close to them. It makes sense that the two don't come face to face until nearly the final scene; it accentuates the fact that their day and their lives are really the culmination of their own choices.

Banek's most powerful self-realization comes during lunch with his wife, played with eerily convincing coldness by Amanda Peet. She urges him to go ahead with the forging of a document that will get him out of his mess, since, basically, that's how things are done in her family (her dad is Banek's boss) and she married him not knowing she'd have to deal with crises of conscience. The scene mirrors others involving Banek, like him trying to buy his way out of problems and the icy intimacy he has with his mistress (played by Toni Collette). It's also the hollow he realizes he doesn't want to fall victim to, so it's fitting that a similarly cold dinner with his wife and parents-in-law late in the film is where he chooses to stand up for himself.

Similarly, Gibson's character is brought into focus by those around him. A fellow Alcoholics Anonymous member, after bailing Gibson out of jail, throws up his hands in futility after realizing that it's not the alcohol that causes Gibson's misery, it's that he's "addicted to chaos." And even though it was his blind love for his sons that landed him in jail, we know what he means. Gibson instigates a fight outside of a bar and throws a computer screen at a bank in rage. It's these avoidable messes that Gibson gets himself into that his wife knows all too well and is trying to pull their children away from, but it's Gibson's love for his family – like Banek's will to change himself into something better – that wins out in the end.

Many have expressed disappointment with the ending of the film, but much more than neat and tidy closure, it provides a little light at the end of the tunnel after a day of darkness. The rain has stopped falling, but there's no sun yet; it's snow now. It falls a little slower and more unpredictably than the rain, so even though the worst is over it's still a long ways from spring for these two.

Write for Arts!

All Staff Meeting
E.I.C. Candidate Debate
Wednesday, 7 p.m.
Room 174
Campus Center

jostens
PURCHASE YOUR OFFICIAL UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS CLASS RING
A Jostens representative will be on campus
April 24-26
10am - 3pm On the Campus center Concourse
Save up to $200.00
$50 DEPOSIT REQUIRED *MAJOR CREDIT CARDS ACCEPTED

AS SENIOR VP OF FINANCIAL PLANNING AT A MAJOR MOVIE STUDIO YOU COULD:
O.K. A $93 MILLION BUDGET
HIRE 7,500 EXTRAS
RENT 273 PALM TREES
(AND 1 BIG FAN TO MAKE THEM SWAY)
HOW DO YOU GET A JOB LIKE THIS?
WWW.STARTHEREGOPLACES.COM/BIZ15
Go here and take the first step toward the career you want.
American Institute of Certified Public Accountants
START HERE. GO PLACES.
If you know business and accounting, you can get a job anywhere. Because the skills you learn in business – strategic and analytical thinking, communication, and leadership – are always in demand. In some of the coolest industries in the world. Even in the movies.

Shutouts abundant within Lorden

By Jesse Greenspan
COLLEGIAN STAFF

AMHERST – Shutouts were the order of the day at Earl Lorden Field this past weekend.

In the first game of Saturday's doubleheader between the Massachusetts baseball team and Temple, ace righthander Jesse Santos lowered his ERA to 2.87 by blanking the Owls on two hits.

Temple	0	6	7
UMass	3	0	0

However, the rest of the weekend would belong to Temple, as Brandon Bruno and Mike Caron both pitched complete-game shutouts, giving up a mere five hits between them in 16 innings of work.

By taking two of three from the Minutemen (0-5, 6-0, 7-0), the Owls improved to 14-19 (7-8 Atlantic 10), while the Maroon and White now also stands at 14-19 (5-10 A-10) on the year.

"This was a big game and we didn't respond," said UMass coach Mike Stone after Sunday's loss. "We didn't do anything offensively."

Despite the Minutemen's offensive woes, the weekend started out well for them behind a stellar performance from Santos. The senior from Chelmsford, Mass. went the distance, throwing a mere 82 pitches while striking out six to improve his record to 6-1.

In fact, Santos came very close to no-hitting the Owls, as Sam Sobolchick's second-inning single fell just in front of UMass centerfielder Derrick Durepo, while the only other Temple hit was a bunt single by Joseph Lydall.

"[Santos] did a great job," Stone said. "We need people to set a standard on the mound...and he made them look like they didn't have any hitters."

Offensively, the Maroon and White got going early, as Tim Klett's sacrifice fly to center brought home Durepo, who had led off the game with a single.

The game remained 1-0 until the fifth, when the UMass bats came alive for four runs on four hits and an error. Catcher Tom Ellerbrook, filling in for the injured Chris Morgan, began the inning with a single and eventually came around to score on a Durepo ground out. Later in the inning, Mike Kulak delivered an RBI double down the right field line and came around to score two batters later when shortstop Cullan Maumus singled him home.

Unfortunately for the Minutemen, those would be the last runs they would score all weekend.

In the second game of Saturday's twinbill, UMass freshman lefty Keith Doherty kept the Owls in check until the fifth inning, when John Quigley dropped in a bloop single to right with the bases loaded and two outs to score two.

When the Maroon and White failed to score in the bottom of the fifth, Temple busted it wide open the next inning by scoring four runs on three hits, two walks and three wild pitches.

Meanwhile, Bruno was virtually untouchable on the mound, striking out eight while only giving up a double to John Seed and a single to Adam Stojanowski.

On Sunday, things remained scoreless until the third when the Owls used four hits and a walk to score four runs with two outs. Nine hitter Jerome Lopez began the inning by drawing a free pass from Eric Chown, and he later came around to score on Fred Hilliard's triple off the glove of Kulak in right-center. The final blow of the inning came on Quigley's two-RBI double, which was just one of four hits he would record on the day.

"I have only seen improvement with Santos," Stone said. "From week-to-week he keeps getting better. But with our other pitchers I have seen no improvement. Chown was aiming the ball for a while out there. When they scored four runs, he walked their nine hitter who can't hit a lick, and that cost us the game."

With the loss, Chown dropped to 1-6 on the year, while Caron's complete-game shutdown improved his record to 2-2.

***

Today at 11:00 a.m., UMass competes in the consolation round of the Beanpot Tournament against Harvard at Fenway Park.

Last Tuesday in the first round of the tourney, the Minutemen fell to Boston College 7-5, while the Crimson lost to Northeastern 8-4.

Harvard comes into the contest with a disappointing 12-18 record, despite the fact it recently took four straight games from Yale, and has struggled to find itself at the plate and on the mound. Only two Crimson hitters have averages over .300 (Marc Hordren and Trey Hendricks), while the pitching staff has compiled a 5.24 ERA.

However, the Minuteman bats have not fared much better of late, as they have not registered a single run in the last 17 innings of play. In addition, outside of Jesse Santos, who is 6-1, UMass starters Chown and Doherty are a combined 2-10.

"We need to play well and hit the ball," Stone said. "It has been a struggle – in big games we don't respond."

COLLEGIAN

Tim Klett and the UMass baseball team have struggled as of late.

Road blocked

Do not try to stop Sacco

WASHINGTON, D.C. – "Hello this is your 10:45 wake up call," the way-too-cheery-for-this-early-in-the-morning voice says over our Residence Inn telephone.

A 10:45 wake-up call for a 2 o'clock game – What? Are we nuts? I'm going back to sleep, we've got plenty of time – or so I thought.

It's noon when my partner and I actually leave our hotel in Pentagon City, bound for what we like to call the most important game we might ever see as Collegian reporters.

We figure two hours is plenty of time to find out where Georgetown's Harbin Field is and then locate the nearest Dunkin Donuts for our pregame ritual of egg and cheese consumption. But it soon became clear we figured wrong.

MATTHEW F. SACCO

Route 395 to M street to a War Protest. This isn't right. Everything looked sunny, the directions were coming together and we still had a good 90 minutes to burn. That is until we turned past the Washington Monument right smack into a gauntlet of war pickeers.

Now I'm all for freedom of assembly, but how about freedom of going places. I don't think that's how it is worded in the Bill of Rights, but we're trying to get to a game here and my partner and I are squared in by a parade of Palestinian flag waving demonstrators.

Do they know what they are doing? They are disrupting our destiny-fueled quest to view and report on the most exciting UMass sporting event in recent memory. Well we know what we're going to do – get the heck out of here.

After asking a trio of police officers the best way to get to Georgetown and receiving three consecutive belly laughs in response, I decided to take matters into my own hands.

So two ran red lights, a near-death experience for a pair of bus departing protesters, a crossed border, a do not enter dismissal and one scaled curb later, I was pulled up next to a Virginian statie who no doubt was trying to figure out how many violations he should cite me for.

"Georgetown, fastest way, no protests," I muttered to him as my partner gathered life.

He fired something about that way and the Key Bridge through his thick Virginian accent, my partner yelled a frustration releasing comment and we were on our way.

Ten very safe minutes later we were scaling the long, winding ascension to Harbin Field with a good third of an hour to spare before face-off. No Dunkin Donuts was in sight, clearly a curse upon the Georgetown-UMass lacrosse game we were about to enter. A game we almost didn't get to, thanks to droves of protesters who clearly had no idea just how serious we were about getting to this game.

Thanks to them we almost missed it. We almost missed Paul Hutchen collapse from exhaustion on the sideline midway through the fourth quarter, about 30 seconds before he slid his helmet back on for his next shift at defensive midfield. We almost missed 180-pound Marc Morley out scrap a pair of much larger defensemen for a ground ball he had no business winning. We almost missed rookie Bill Schell show up to make 25 saves just three days after he showed up to cry at his grandfather's funeral. We almost missed our team go on the road and take a 16-13 win on their turf, in front of their fans and what looked a lot like their refs. We almost missed assistant coach Andy Shay bear-hug glassy eyed defenseman Matt McFarland. We almost missed Greg Cannella's Powerade bath following the victory. We almost missed former Minutemen Rich Kunkel, John Madigan and Chris Gabrielli leap over the bleacher railing and right into the celebration. We almost missed parents hugging everyone in sight and fans delivering a standing ovation. We almost missed a team honor the memory of a fallen teammate. We almost missed them make right a crude injustice. We almost missed senior Dan Paccione fight back tears.

We almost missed what we like to call the most important game we'll ever see.

Matthew F. Sacco is a Collegian Columnist.

An Evening of Wisdom, Music and Deep Meditation with
His Holiness Sri Sri Ravi Shankar

Mullins Center, Amherst,
April 24th, 6:30pm

Sri Sri is the founder of the international Art of Living Foundation, a nonprofit educational organization dedicated to serving society by strengthening the individual. He is also the inspiration behind numerous other humanitarian organizations focused on service and promotion of human values around the world.

In 1982 Sri Sri began to teach the Sudarshan Kriya, a powerful breathing technique that eliminates stress and brings the mind completely into the present moment, leading to increased awareness, energy and creativity. The Sudarshan Kriya has been taught to millions of people in over 140 countries as a part of the Art of Living course. At the University of Massachusetts, hundreds of students have also benefited from this program which is conducted regularly on campus.

Today Sri Sri speaks in thirty to forty countries in a year encouraging people from all religious and cultural traditions to come together and celebrate. He gives a whole new dimension to spirituality infusing it with a youthful sense of celebration and joy.

Joy, love, playfulness, deep wisdom and a twinkle of mischief have all come together in the person of Sri Sri Ravi Shankar.

Students $5 (with valid ID)
General admission $15Ticket Locations: Mullins Center, ticketmaster.com, UMass Yoga & Meditation Club table in the Campus Center Concourse.

"The only true security that can be found in this world is in the very process of giving love."

For more information: 413-253-4183, www.artofliving.org/amherst, Email: umass_yoga@yahoo.com

Women's lax stumbles before conference tournament

By Glen Straub
COLLEGIAN STAFF

As the crowd at Ruth J. Totman Field dwindled out of the complex on Sunday, head coach Phil Barnes found a spot on the visitor's bench to sit alone and ponder.

With an expression that displayed confusion and frustration, he thought over how his team had just failed miserably at a golden opportunity.

Temple	14
UMass	2

That golden opportunity was the chance to be in first place in the Atlantic 10 conference standings right before the post-season tournament.

On an overcast day in Amherst, the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team failed to grasp that all-important No. 1 seed in the A-10 as it was trounced upon by the high-flying Temple Owls, 14-2.

"We are disappointed," were Barnes's first words after wallowing in his own thoughts. "At this point, it is no longer a physical thing, it's all mental."

The loss dropped UMass to third place in the conference, behind the Richmond Spiders, with a 5-2 record in conference play and an 8-6 overall record. Temple improved to 9-4 overall and continued its perfection in the conference with a 5-0 mark – placing it in first place.

Following a crushing 15-7 defeat to the Connecticut Huskies on Wednesday, co-captain Jada Emery called it "their worst game of the year" and said that they needed to come out on Sunday with a new aggressive attitude.

At the start of the contest, it looked as if the Minutewomen were ready for the battle with the Owls as their loud and boisterous pre-game cheering could be heard across campus.

Their pumped-up attitude carried out on to the field as the ladies who sport the maroon and white took control of the ball for the majority of the first ten minutes of the game despite going scoreless.

"In the first ten minutes of the game we dominated," Barnes said. "But once Temple scored the first two goals we couldn't sustain our good play."

With just about 18 minutes left in the first half, the Owls took a 2-0 lead thanks in part to Temple's Tiffany Pulaski's two quick goals.

Massachusetts responded to the early two-goal punch by Temple when junior Kelli Kurtz scored on a pass from sophomore Hope Zelinger – making the score 2-1.

However, the Owls made a small incision in the hearts of the Minutewomen by scoring four straight goals.

"After Temple scored the four goals, we stopped competing," said the frustrated Barnes.

Emery tried to give her team a spark as she fired a shot past the Temple goaltender – making the score 6-2 with nine minutes left in the first half. It was the Princeton, N.J. native's 23rd goal of the season – tying her with Zelinger as the leading goal scorer for the Minutewomen. However, it was the last goal the Minutewomen would score all game.

"Our offense really needs to score," Barnes said. "We have had many chances in the past couple of games, we just cannot seem to put the ball in the cage."

The Owls started to put the dagger through UMass' heart when they tallied two goals right before the end of the half – resulting in a commanding 8-2 lead at the break.

In the second half, TU continued its domination as they scored six unanswered goals – penetrating the dagger fully through their opponents' hearts.

Of all the members of the UMass squad, the skipper, Barnes, felt the pain of the dagger the most. Unable to compose his comments after the game, he simply said, "this kind of game has happened to us over and over again."

UMass Briefs

Men's Lacrosse

The Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference named Massachusetts junior midfielder Kevin Leveille the ECAC Lacrosse Offensive Player of the Week, and freshman attackman Gene Tundo ECAC Rookie of the Week honors following a pair of Minuteman victories this past week.

Leveille netted a season-high four goals in the 16-13 upset victory over No. 5 and previously undefeated Georgetown this past Saturday. The victory clinched a share of the ECAC title and an automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament for the Minutemen. Leveille netted two of the first three goals in the opening quarter in which the Minutemen jumped out to an 8-2 lead on the Hoyas. He also netted critical goals late in the third and fourth quarters to secure the victory and a bid to the NCAA Tournament. Earlier in the week, Leveille had a season-high five points on three goals and two assists in the 18-10 victory over Harvard. He is currently third on the team in scoring with 36 points on 26 goals and 10 assists.

Tundo had a career-high four assists in the 16-13 victory over Georgetown. He assisted on the first goal of the game and then had three assists in the second half to help Massachusetts secure the victory and its first NCAA Tournament appearance since 1997. Tundo also had a goal in the victory over Harvard on Wednesday. He is currently first on the team in assists with 18 and fifth in points with 24.

Massachusetts is 10-2 overall and 4-0 in the ECAC this season. The Minutemen are currently ranked No. 8 in the latest national poll. Massachusetts returns to action with a road game against No. 2 Syracuse (10-2) on Friday at 7 p.m. at the Carrier Dome.

Women's water polo

The Massachusetts women's water polo team went 2-2 at the CWPA Northern Division Championship this past weekend and qualified for the Eastern Championship, held April 27-28, in Princeton, N.J. with their fourth-place finish.

The Minutewomen downed St. Francis, 9-8, in double-overtime, and Connecticut College, 15-3, to move into the winner's bracket and a chance to earn the conference's automatic bid into the NCAA Tournament. May 11-12, in Los Angeles, Calif. The Minutewomen then fell to Hartwick, 13-7, in the semifinal and Harvard, 10-9, in the third-place game.

– Courtesy UMass Media Relations

CINEMARK
The Best Seat in Town
CINEMARK AT HAMPSHIRE MALL
367 Russell St. 413-587-4233
Schedule for Friday 4/19 - Thursday 4/25
DIGITAL SURROUND SOUND IN ALL AUDITORIUMS
Purchase Tickets Online @ cinemark.com

MURDER BY NUMBER (R) 12:00 4:10 7:30 10:20*
THE SCORPION KING (PG13) 12:35 4:50 7:45 10:25*
CHANGING LANES (R) 12:05 4:05 7:25 10:30*
NATIONAL LAMPOON'S VANWILDER (R) 12:45 4:35 7:50 10:15
HIGH CRUISES (PG13) 12:30 4:20 7:15 10:05
PANIC ROOM (R) 12:40 4:30 7:40 10:35
THE SWEETEST THING(R) 12:20 4:10 7:20 10:00
MONSTERS BALL (R) 12:25 7:35
THE RUDDE (G) 12:25 4:00 7:10 10:10
DEATH TO SMOOCHY (R) 12:50 4:45 7:45 10:20
CLOCKSTOPPERS (PG) 12:55 4:25 7:05 9:30
BLADE 2 (R) 4:15 10:05
ICE AGE (PG) 12:10 2:15 4:25 6:45 9:00
THE SWEETEST THING 12:20 4:10 7:20 10:00

Service Movie! 4/25/02
HIGH CRUISES doors open at 11:45am

• NO PASSES NO SUPERSAVERS
cinemark.com

One of our job requirements includes "being yourself."

How can you grow as an individual if you're being forced into a mold? At Ernst & Young, we empower you to push the boundaries. We offer the chance to generate creative ideas that really count. On our teams everyone has a role to play and something to contribute, so not only do you have a voice but you can make a difference with clients and co-workers alike. Break the mold.

FORTUNE 100 BEST COMPANIES TO WORK FOR 2002

ERNST & YOUNG
FROM THOUGHT TO FINISH.™

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3693

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Fraternities * Sororities Clubs * Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 with the easy Campusfundraiser.com three hour fundraising event. Does not involve credit card applications. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact Campusfundraiser.com at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campus-fundraiser.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. - Now Available, 1&2 bedroom apts. Leases begin June, July, Aug or Sept. 1 year lease. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywine-apts.com stop by or call (413) 549-0600.

Puffton Village Apt. Newly renovated great location. Partially furnished three bedrooms includes gas/ grill available June 1ST 549-8320.

Summer Sublet with lease option in fall. Boulders. Available 7/1. 256-2373.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over our lease. Available June 1 fall option 3 BR upgrade in Puffton call 549-1474.

Take over lease. Puffton 3-bedroom. June 1ST. 549-5249.

Take over a lease. 971 N. Pleasant St. Apt. for rent for June, fits 3 folks. Call now!549-0069.

Condos 3 bedrooms, hardwood floors, study area in basement, cable, telephone (Internet access), in all bedrooms and study NOW SHOWING for JUNE and SEPTEMBER NO FEES. www.amherstlincolnrealty.com 253-7879

CENTER OF TOWN 1,2,3 bedroom apts., hardwood floors. NOW SHOWING for JUNE and SEPTEMBER NO FEES www.amherstlincolnrealty.com 253-7879

COMPUTERS

Color Laptop $99 Pentum tower/ CD Rom $99 with color monitor $139. HURRY! 413-584-8857.

EMPLOYMENT

Last Chance: Legal Assistants wanted. April 23 is the last day to apply to the Student Legal Services Office about Fall 2002 internships! Get hands-on experience in the legal field .Work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience necessary in the legal profession required -training is provided. Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individual, full and part time positions available immediately. Only those able to work the upcoming summer should apply. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413)584-4746.

Models Wanted. Liquid Curves Entertainment is seeking FEMALE talent for nude and/or erotic modeling. No experience necessary. Make money instantly. Apply online at http://www.liquidcurves.com or call our offices at (413) 539-6782.

EMPLOYMENT

TEENAGE BICYCLE TOUR LEADERS NEEDED: Be a Teen Tour Leader this summer. Trips in USA, Canada, Europe. We need a 4-week time commitment, salary plus expenses paid. Student Hostling Program, P.O. Box 419, CONWAY, MA 01341. 800-343-6152 www.bicycletrips.com.

Be the Campus Red Bull connection. Join our team and help build one of the world's leading brands, you'll have a blast while gaining invaluable marketing experience. You'll even earn a little extra spending cash. Think about it. It's a lot less dangerous than selling term papers! Apply at redbullcollege.com.

Nantucket Island Summer Job opportunity beginning mid June office Assistant with good computer & telephone skills, miscellaneous errand running. Salary & housing 508-228-3942 or send resume to Rafael Osona Auctions P.O. box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02584.

EMPLOYMENT

CAMP WAYNE FOR GIRLS-Northeast Pennsylvania (6/19-8/17/02). Children's sleep-away camp. If you love children and want to have a GREAT summer we are still looking for Directors for Swimming, Golf, Tennis, Cheerleading and Ass't Directors for Sports and Gymnastics. Counselors for: Tennis, Gymnastics, Drama, Basketball, Golf, Soccer, Sailing, Sculpture/ Lino Cuts, Silkscreen, Batik, Jewelry, Calligraphy, Guitar, Self-Defense, Video, Piano, Ropes, Mother's Helper, Night Watchperson. On Campus Interviews Arranged. Call 800-279-3019 or go to www.campwaynegirls.com.

SUMMER HELP Cape Cod Ice seeks drivers and P/T 2ND Shift Supervisor in our Sandwich location. Interested candidates call 508-888-8390 for more info.

Painters P/F time 1-3 yrs experience. Michael 367-9810.

EMPLOYMENT

SUMMER INTERNSHIPS Earn $3000 to 7000++ and gain valuable business experience working for the UMASS Official Campus Telephone Directory. Excellent Advertising, Sales, and Marketing opportunity. GREAT RESUME BOOSTER! Call Paul at AroundCampus, Inc. 1-800-466-2221 ext. 288. www.aroundcampus.com

ENTERTAINMENT

Rock Band available for end of year parties free of charge check out our website, oversightrocks.com + contact Charlie @ (508) 243-6091.

FOR RENT

2 bedroom apt. on bus route avail. June 1 w/fall option $905/mo heat hot water included 549-1883.

FOR SALE

P.S. 2 w/6 games, 2 controllers, DVD remote, mem. Card $400.00 O/B/O. 256-2373.

FOR SALE

NEW! CD burner HP internal 8x4x32 Speed BO 259-9382

HOUSE FOR RENT

Hadley 5 bedroom plus. 1 newer home five minutes from UMASS. June occupancy $2600.00 month. 549-4270.

INSTRUCTIONS

Become an EMT! Sign up for summer and fall classes now call 545-1885 or go to www.umass.edu/ems

RENTAL PROBLEMS

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning lease? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

ROOM FOR RENT

Looking for 1/2 roommates to share apartment for summer. Call 549-2676.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female(s) to share 2 bedroom Brandywine Apt. starting June 1 . 549-1988.

Sublet in Sunderland with possible fall option. $375/mo on bus route. One bedroom available. 665-0377.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

SUMMER SUBLET

Brandywine. 2 bdrm. Available June 1. Call 549-1988.

TO SUBLET

2 Bedroom apartment partially furnished available June 1ST to sublet w/option to lease on bus route. 413-549-9612.

WANTED

Good Condition bedroom set & desk needed call 546-2609.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass

Client: Date: Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total days x Words = x rate = PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m. 413-545-3500

Student rate: 25¢ per word per day Non-student rate: 50¢ per word per day

Headings

- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

1 ... GRS / A
4 ... NESN
5 ... Fox Sport NE
6 ... PBS / 57
7 ... HSCN Movie Channel
8 ... WB / 20
9 ... HSCN Movie Channel
10 ... TV Guide Channel
11 ... FOX / 61
12 ... ABC / 40
13 ... NBC / 22
14 ... International Channel
15 ... UMATV
16 ... HSCN Info Channel
17 ... ESPN
18 ... ESPN 2
19 ... UVC / 19
22 ... ESPN Classic
23 ... Cavalcade of Sports
24 ... CNN
25 ... CNN HL
26 ... Weather Channel
27 ... Learning Channel
28 ... Hallmark Channel
29 ... A & E
30 ... Discovery Health
31 ... Food Network
32 ... NASA
33 ... Home & Garden TV
34 ... Travel Channel
35 ... Lifetime
36 ... CNBC
37 ... Tech TV
38 ... BET
39 ... UPN / 38
40 ... USA
41 ... TNN
42 ... MTV
43 ... CMT
44 ... VH-1
45 ... TNT
46 ... TBS
47 ... E! Entertainment
48 ... Sci-Fi Channel
49 ... Court TV
50 ... Nick at Nite
51 ... Comedy Central
52 ... Cartoon Network
53 ... Game Show Network
54 ... TV Land
55 ... FOX Family
56 ... Univision
57 ... Galavision
58 ... Telemundo
59 ... College TV Network
60 ... C-SPAN
61 ... C-SPAN2
64 ... Annenberg Television

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — APRIL 23, 2002

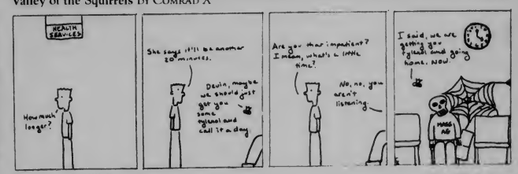
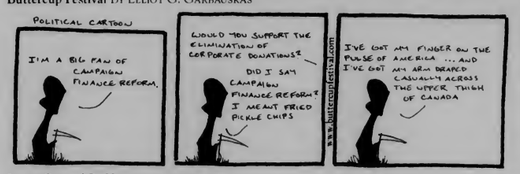
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	¼	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer	CPTV Auction
WFSB	3	1	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Dog Robber"		Guardian "Loyalties" (In Stereo)	Judging Amy "Total Waste"		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Dog Robber"		Guardian "Loyalties" (In Stereo)	Judging Amy "Total Waste"		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Dharma-Greg	Spin City	Philly "Tall Tales" (In Stereo)	Philly (N) (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WLVI	6		Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	Gilmore Girls (N) (In Stereo)		Smallville "Reaper" (In Stereo)	News		Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Frasier	Watching Ellie	Frasier	Scrubs		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	20		Sabrina Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Gilmore Girls (N) (In Stereo)		Smallville "Reaper" (In Stereo)	News	Home Imp.	Blind Date	Blind Date
WVIT	30		News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Frasier	Watching Ellie	Frasier	Scrubs		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	11	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	70s Show	Andy Richter	24 "8:00PM - 9:00PM" (N) (In			News	Seinfeld
WWLP	22	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Frasier	Watching Ellie	Frasier	Scrubs		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	6	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova (In Stereo)		America's First River: Voyers			Charlie Rose (N) (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Dharma-Greg	Spin City	Philly "Tall Tales" (In Stereo)	Philly (N) (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WSBK	38		Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Frasier	Frasier	Buffy, the Vampire Slayer		Roswell (N) (In Stereo)	News	Ent. Tonight	5th Wheel	Shipmates
WTBS	23		Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	NBA Pregame	NBA Basketball Teams To Be Announced. (Live)					NBA Basketball Teams To Be Announced. (Live)
A&E	44		Law & Order "Identity"		The View (In Stereo)		Biography: Dustin Hoffman		"Thin Air: A Sparrow Mystery" (2000) Mystery Joe Mantegna (N)			Law & Order "Misconception"
CNN	20	24	Moneyline		Crossfire (Live)		Live From...	The Point	Larry King Live		News night	Moneyline
COM	43	28	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Kreeks	★★½ "Rugrats" (1998, Comedy) Voices of Cheryl Hines, Randy Quaid				Sweet Spot	Battlebots	Daily Show
DISC	29		Rivers of Life, Rivers of Death		Violent Earth	Wild Waters	New Detectives-Forensic		New Detectives-Forensic		FBI Files (N)
ESPN	33		Sportscenter		Joshin Daily		Stanley Cup Playoffs Conference Quarterfinal Game 4 - Teams To Be Announced. (Live)					Sportscenter
LIFE	39		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait "Sela Ward"		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Our Boys: Outrage in Glen Ridge" (1999, Drama) Ally Sheedy			Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	35		(6:00) Fear	Becoming	MTV Movie Awards (In Stereo)				Real World	Real World	Real World	Osbournes (N)	Jackass
NICK	33		15th Annual Kids Choice Awards (In Stereo)			Rugrats	Spongeb	Told by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers	All in Family
SCIFI	31		Star Trek "Friday's Child"		Star Trek The Menagerie"		Outer Limits "Parasite"		★½ "Lifeforce" (1986, Science Fiction) Colin Smith (In Stereo)			Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	42	45	Volcano		Secrets of Forensic Science		High Speed Pursuit: Justice		Mysterious World		Mysteries of Noah's Flood (N)	Charmed	High Speed Pursuit: Justice
TNT	30		NYPD Blue "Outer Cover"		Pretender "Hope & Prey"		Law & Order "Gunshow"		Law & Order "Harm" (In Stereo)		Charmed "Bite Me" (In Stereo)	Law & Order "Gunshow"
USA	32		Walker, Texas Ranger "Lurp"		JAG "With Intent to Die"		Eco-Challenge: New Zealand		★★½ "Dogs Zone" (1994, Adventure) Wesley Snipes.			JAG "Empire's Ginny"
HBO	45		★★ "Blank Check" (1994, Comedy) Brian Bonsall. "PG"				★★ "Cats & Dogs" (2001) Jeff Goldblum. PG		★★ "Gossip" (2000, Drama) James Marsden. R			55 Feet Under (In Stereo)
MAX	46		(5:00) "Wishful Thinking" (1997)		★★½ "The Cable Guy" (1996) Jim Carrey.		★★★ "Charlie's Angels" (2000, Action) Cameron Diaz. "PG-13"		★★½ "Romeo Must Die" (2000, Action) Jet Li. (In Stereo) "R"
SHOW	49		★★★ "Steel Magnolias" (1989, Comedy Drama) Sally Field. "PG"				The Queens of Comedy" (2001, Comedy) R				Extras: Traffic	Chris Isak "Family Ties" (TV)	Queer as Folk (TV) (In Stereo)

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X



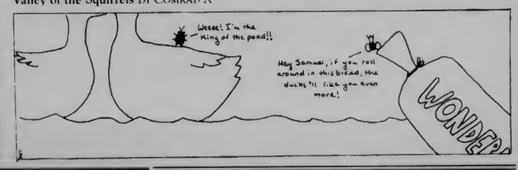
Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas



Loose Control By Homestarrocker

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas



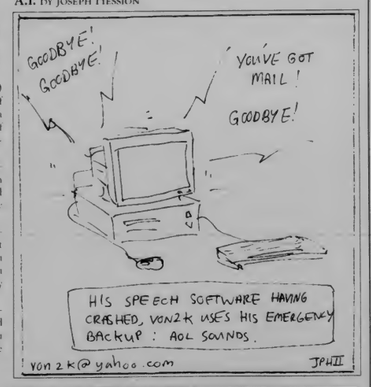
Scarecrow By W. Bird

Loose Control By Homestarrocker

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Quote of the Day

"It's amazing that the amount of news that happens in the world everyday always just exactly fits in the newspaper."



-Jerry Seinfeld

Amherst Weather

Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 52 LOW: 32	HIGH: 60 LOW: 33	HIGH: 62 LOW: 40

Horoscopes

A.I. By Joseph Hession

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Contact from someone far from home will inspire you to do something that, to others, may seem to be quite out of character.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – If you find that you're talking to yourself today, you'll surely want to listen because you're trying to tell yourself something important.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Someone may be taking you seriously today while you are doing things purely in fun. Eventually, you're going to have to "face the music."

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Stay on track today despite any attempts the competition may mount to pull you away from your desired course. Concentration is the key at this time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Take care that you don't try to say one thing directly while your body is sending signals that are contradictory in the extreme.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – What usually would have been a clear-cut situation may prove rather mysterious to you and others today. It may be that you are "out of sync."

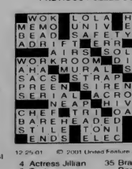
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – You can prove yourself an excellent listener today. You may have more in common with a Cancer native than you originally thought.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Take care that you don't blow your own horn today, particularly before all the votes are in. Be sure victory is yours.

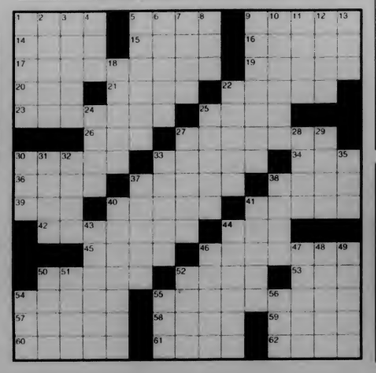
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – You can score a number of points today if you simply cater a little more directly to the needs of a loved one. Be a little more generous today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You can surround yourself with people who give you continual affirmation – whether they know it or not.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – You may have to wait throughout the day for the information you need, but once you have it, you can pick up the pace and really get things done.



ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Your ideas may be challenged today, and it's important for you to hold your ground. Confidence will be on the rise – just in time.



THE HARP IRISH PUB
Crossword not challenging enough?
TUESDAY NIGHT!!
Team Pub Trivia
win money and prizes
9-10:30pm
call for details
163 Sunderland Rd.
Amherst, MA
549-6900
Start Your Own Tradition

ACROSS
1 Mexican pot
5 Here's spouse
9 Japanese port
14 "Misery" costar
15 Kind of road
16 Air traffic gear
17 Stereo component
19 Rattle
20 — too yung
21 Nights before
22 Embarrass
23 Lunchbox partner
25 Tenured meal
26 Calendar abbr
27 Tortilla snack
30 Steamy dance
33 Blaue
34 Ipanema's city
36 Tommie of the diamond
37 No rocket scientist
38 Tiny stream
39 Task
40 Stale
41 Temporary failure
42 Very
44 Round Table knight
45 After-tax amounts
46 Heavenly
50 Woodsy
52 Light sword
53 Kimono closer
54 Broken
55 Highest
57 Join up
58 Window ledge
59 Crystal-ball words
60 Fresco base
61 Snake eyes
62 Look after

DOWN
1 Four duos
2 Guffaw
3 Sweater size
4 Actress Jillian
5 Taste
6 Chenille items
7 Has a cold
8 Once, for Pierre
9 Grove
10 Cold cut
11 First organ donor?
12 Batman creator
13 Mo. neighbor
18 Pace
22 Wild time
24 Storm about
25 Frothy
27 Toss about as words
28 Excursion
29 Lubricates
30 — Mahal
31 Psyched up
32 Midwest st
33 Hardens
35 Bravo, in Barcelona
37 Eccentric
38 Zany Martha
40 Symphony bigwig
41 Tavern brew
43 Follows
44 Plays homage
46 Pie ingredient
47 Relaxed
48 "A Doll's House" playwright
49 Summoned to court
50 Rider's handhold
51 Casts a vote
52 Action Tale
54 Beer barrel
55 Neighbor of Can
56 Engineering sch

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 549-2626 for more information.

LUNCH
Yankee Corn Chowder
Beef Ragout
Hungarian Noodle Bake (vegetarian)
Ginger Black Beans (vegan)

DINNER
Yankee Corn Chowder
Chicken Pot Pie
Boston Scrod
California Quiche (vegetarian)
Vegetable Stir Fry with Tofu (W Basics) (vegan)

Today's Staff

Eric Soderstrom
Scott Eldridge II
Andy Vogt
Jess May
Frank DiMeglio
Erika Earl

DAILY COLLEGIAN

SPORTS

COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: ERIC SODERSTROM

Minutewomen win 24th straight

Softball ties old record, looks to break it Wednesday at UConn

By Andrew Merritt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

AMHERST – The Massachusetts softball team rolled on this weekend, beating St. Bonaventure in a three game series by scores of 9-1, 6-0, and 10-0. In so doing, it captured its 24th straight victory, which ties the team for the school record set in 1979 and 2001.

UMass	9	6	10
St. Bonaventure	1	0	0

The Minutewomen used an improved offensive attack as well as stellar pitching to sweep the Bonnies. UMass capped off the weekend with a 10-0 drubbing on Sunday, using only four hits to plate the 10 runs.

Sophomore Jaimie Cahalan brought in three of these runs on a two-out, three-run homer in the first inning. From there, St. Bonaventure's pitching let the game slip away, hitting six batters. And the Maroon and White ended the game early, notching at least eight runs after five innings.

UMass will need to continue its powerful offensive ways when it travels to Storrs, Conn. on Wednesday to face off with Connecticut.

On Saturday, UMass took both ends of a doubleheader with the Bonnies. St. Bonaventure's pitching was again erratic, with four hit batsmen in the first game, and five more in the nightcap.

Senior Teri Rooney was once again the star at the plate in the second game on Sunday. She had three RBIs on three hits, including a double to left field in the sixth inning. Junior Emily Robustelli also continued to shine with a hit and two runs.

The Minutewomen took care of business early, plating three runs in the first and two more in the second. They capped off the second game with one more run in the sixth on an error.

"I think we hit a lot," Rooney said. "But that's the standard we hold for ourselves. We should hit a lot, and we should score a lot of runs, and I think we could have done that better in the first game."

In the first game of the series, Rooney went 3-for-4 at the plate, and senior Brandy Cross made a little noise of her own, bringing in four runs.

"We did a good job in terms of focusing," Head Coach Elaine Sortino said. "And we were pretty heads up. We played well within ourselves."

As the afternoon wore on, the weather worsened, bringing heavy rain midway through the second game. While St. Bonaventure coach Mike Threehouse was anxious to continue play, Sortino argued for the end of the game when the rain increased.

"It made it ridiculous," Sortino said. "You can't play softball in the cold and rain. I didn't want to go back out on the field, or put a tarp down on a wet field. If the situation were reversed, I'd call it a day."

Then again, the players' perspective was different, as illustrated by Rooney.

"It wasn't a huge factor," Rooney said. "It was more of an inconvenience than a determining variable. I think we would have come out ready to play no matter what."

However, the rain didn't stop the Minutewomen from finishing out the doubleheader, and following up the next day with the record-tying victory, under some more pleasant climates.

"It was nice to be back at home," Rooney said. "We were really pumped to play them. It didn't matter who was coming in this weekend, it was just great to be back at home."

And while the team doesn't pay much attention to winning streaks, Sortino would admit that it has been a good indicator of the team's success.

"Ultimately it means that we continue to take our game seriously, every time we go out on the field."

On the injury front, freshman Hilary Puglia dislocated a finger on a slide back to first base, but further tests revealed no fractures. Puglia should be able to throw, according to Sortino.

UMass will need all the guns it has when takes on UConn Wednesday. The Huskies bring a 10-29 record with them, but when these two teams met earlier in the season, it was a doglight.

The Minutewomen were held to one run, but took the victors on stellar pitching from senior Jennifer Hadley, who struck out four in a two-hit shutout.

If the Minutewomen can combine their near-perfect pitching with an offense that's been getting hotter every game, the record 25th win could be waiting for them a short distance down Route 91.

Senior Jen Bonner slides into third base during the UMass softball team, helping the Minutewomen to their 24th straight victory.

BY JOHN GRAMLICH/COLLEGIAN

Matt Brady's

All-Time Team

Tragic hero Gehrig was bigger than just a streak

This is part five of a 10-part series portraying the 10 members of "Brady's All Time Team" – a lineup consisting of the best Major League Baseball players ever.

"For the past two weeks you've been reading about a bad break I got. Today, I consider myself the luckiest man on the face of the earth." – Lou Gehrig

Credentials (all-time rank): 493 home runs (18); 1995 RBI (4); 1888 runs (8); .340 average (17); two-time American League MVP (1927, 1936); American League Triple Crown (1936); 2130 consecutive games, topped only by Cal Ripken

The Argument: This was tough. Jimmie Foxx is probably the best right-handed power hitter of all-time, and if not him, then Mark McGwire is. But first on the subject of Foxx. Double X was one of the fiercest sights to set foot in a batter's box in the first half of the century. A grand total of 534 longballs and a .325 average leave him very close to Gehrig. But with the consecutive games streak, the "Iron Horse" gets the nod. Plus, a lefty hit better into the lineup and defensively, Gehrig was superior. So far, picking Gehrig over Foxx was the toughest choice at any position.

McGwire could hit the ball a mile as everyone knows. But he was also a strong defensive player early in his career and one of the game's best ambassadors. His duel with Sammy Sosa re-established baseball as a national interest in 1998, and his presence of a few years ago is equaled today only by Barry Bonds. His average is not high enough to put him on the same level as the top two, but he's a solid bronze-winner.

George Sisler was a .340 career hitter who was almost as slick with a glove as he was at the plate. His .257 hits in 1920 still stands as a major league record even though he did it in a 154-game schedule. His .420 average in 1922 is the third-highest since the turn of the century, second-best since the advent of the American League. His lack of power places him well behind McGwire, but his glove and ability to deliver a timely hit make him a valuable commodity on the bench.

What you didn't know: Everyone knows about Gehrig's famous farewell speech and the disease that now bears his name. But the details of his illness, amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, are often not told. It takes over its victim's nervous system, taking away its quickness and abilities to perform everyday functions. Needless to say, this was why Gehrig's deterioration in 1939 was so obvious.

But it is the Gehrig before his illness that prevails in the minds of those who put him as one of the best ever. We live in a hitter's era today, and last year Sammy Sosa led the majors with 160 RBI. Todd Helton was second with 146. Gehrig averaged 147 per season over his 14 complete years when he played nearly without rest. He was a run-producing machine as he averaged 134 runs-scored per year. Sosa was first last year with 146. Alex Rodriguez was second with 135.

Gehrig only got greater in the World Series, hitting .361 in his 34 games played with 10 longballs and 33 runs batted in. Gehrig and his Yankee teams earned six World Championship rings, more than any other team aside from the Cardinals or Athletics.

On June 3, 1932 Gehrig accomplished a feat that not even the great Babe Ruth did – he hit four home runs in a single game, and had it not been for a stellar defensive play by Al Simmons in left, he likely would have added a fifth. But as always, Gehrig was overshadowed on that day by the retirement of John McGraw, much as he was overshadowed by Babe Ruth for the entirety of his career.

So it is not surprising that the thing about Gehrig that stands out the most is his tragic illness and demise. He is the epitome of the tragic hero in baseball and it is that which immortalized him. But his amazing play on the field was best at his position, and as a lefthanded power hitter, he's the perfect guy to hit fifth on this team.

Matt Brady is a Collegian Columnist.

One of the many times that Lou Gehrig (left) and Babe Ruth discuss hitting strategies. They will provide the majority of lefthanded power for Brady's All-Time Team

1.	Cobb	LF
2.	Wagner	SS
3.	Ruth	RF
4.	Mays	CF
5.	Gehrig	1B
6.	(4/25)	3B
7.	(4/30)	2B
8.	(5/02)	C
9.	(5/07)	P
10.	(5/09)	Man.

Best Of The Rest:
First Basemen

1. Jimmie Foxx
2. Mark McGwire
3. George Sisler

IMPROVE RELATIONS WITH CUBA
ED/OP PAGE 4.

BASEBALL BESTS HARVARD
SPORTS PAGE 12.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

WEDNESDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE ONE HUNDRED TWENTY TWO ☆☆☆☆☆ 4.24.02

Lawyer speaker for graduation

COURTESY UMASS NEWS OFFICE

Kenneth R. Feinberg will speak at Commencement

By Janet Jock
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

Kenneth Feinberg, accomplished lawyer and University of Massachusetts alum (class of '67), has been selected to give the main address at the University's commencement, scheduled for May 26.

Feinberg has been a financial supporter of the University. He funded the first endowed professorship in the College of Humanities and Fine Arts, known as the Feinberg Professor of History, which includes contributions of over a million dollars to the department.

He also created the Feinberg Fund for Excellence in History.

"He has been one of the most loyal and generous donors," David Glassberg, chairman of the History department, said. "He has an intelligent way of tying history into law and seeing its importance in everyday events, thinking very humanistically."

Milton Cantor, a professor of History, remembers having Feinberg in class years ago, and still remains close friends with him today.

"He has a very commanding presence and is extremely combative, especially when it involves fighting for what he believes in," Cantor said.

Being a graduate of NYU, Feinberg remains influential in the admissions department, and has helped UMass students in their applications to NYU law school.

"He will go to the mat for a UMass student," Cantor said.

Feinberg was the student speaker at his own commencement. After receiving his bachelor's degree in History, Feinberg proceeded to law school at New York University in 1970. Upon graduating from law school, he held several different positions, such as district attorney and held position on the judiciary branch. Feinberg aided Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D- Mass.) from 1977-79, and in 1984 was appointed to be a mediator in the Agent Orange product liability case, which he settled for $180 million in favor of the Vietnam veterans.

In 1993, he founded the Feinberg Group, LLP of Washington D.C. with five other lawyers, including his younger brother. They specialize in alternative dispute resolution practice.

Feinberg is presently mediating a case to compensate the families of victims in the Sept. 11 attacks.

"Here he's talking to individual claimants, and that's a very commendable act because they're not lawyers and there's a risk he will be misinterpreted," Francis McGovern, a law professor at Duke University who specializes in accidents involving many victims, said.

The University's 132nd Commencement will be held at 10 a.m. on Sunday May 26, in Warren P. McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

Students set for Save UMass rally in Boston

By Melissa Hammel
COLLEGIAN STAFF

"Amherst to Boston 100 miles: give or take. Boston to Amherst a million miles: all take."

Messages such as this have been found written in chalk on building and sidewalks across the University of Massachusetts in support of the impending budget cut rally at the statehouse in Boston.

The rally and subsequent lobbying in a conjunctive effort between the Save UMass Coalition, the Massachusetts Society of Professors, the Faculty Senate and others will be held beginning Thursday at noon. The rally is also supported by UMass President William Bulger and by Provost Charlena Seymour.

"Remember how hard it was getting into classes last fall? Unless we do something, next fall there will be the same number of students, but 1 out of 10 classes will disappear," the Save UMass website explained, encouraging students to attend the rally. "It's like musical chairs where each new round they take away a chair. Take a day now or risk taking an extra year to graduate."

Rebecca Sablo, a member of the Save UMass Coalition explained that the rally was chosen as a way of allowing legislators to attach names on letters to students.

"The rally is the next step following the 2,000 person rally on campus," Sablo said. "This allows the legislators to see the bodies connected to the letters."

She explained that both UMass Dartmouth and UMass Boston had 1,000 people per campus already committed to attending the rally and that Amherst has had a sign-up of 500 people as of now.

"We have really been trying to mobilize the undergraduates," she explained. "This rally is a chance for students and faculty to give the state a wakeup call."

Sablo also explained that this would give students the opportunity to really feel that they are doing something to actively resist the cuts.

"The Save UMass efforts are going to be a success," she said. "This is a chance for students to be empowered. This is democracy in action."

The rally is about more than just a monetary increase according to Salbo, but instead the necessity for the state to provide a good public education.

"Hopefully by the end of this, Save UMass will be less about the bill that students will pay next semester and more about the quality of education at UMass," she said.

The coalition is encouraging more students to attend by providing a bus ride to Boston for only a $5 donation. Interested students can sign up in the Student Union from the hours of 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

The bus for Boston leaves at 9 a.m. on Thursday from Stockbridge Road near the Franklin Dining Commons.

"We can win this fight. Legislators tell us the teach-in letters have had an impact," the Save UMass website explained. "But legislators need to hear our voices at the rally. If we are there – in numbers – they will cave.

"It will be horrible, calling for another big cut for next year. But legislators have made it clear they will back off the cuts, and raise revenue instead – if (and only if) there is a popular outcry," the website adds.

On the Net: Save UMass: http://www.saveumass.org facing consequences after sex

By S.J. Port
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Tara lott begins the day at 5:30 a.m., drives an hour to and from school and works two nights a week. Bill Jeffrey drives 40 minutes from her home to attend classes on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Iris Evernow works each morning as a housekeeper and then attends classes until 5:15 in the evening. Each of these women is a full-time student, as well as a mother. Their days are full without the added task of raising their children, but they do it somehow, while many of us can't find the time to do our laundry.

Tara lott

Tara, a petite 23-year-old English major and a junior, rushes between back-to-back classes from 9 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays and then studies an hour before picking her 3-year-old son, Tavin, up from the University Childcare center at 2:30 p.m. From there, she drives an hour to the home she shares with her mother and son in Worcester.

Although she has no classes on Tuesdays and Thursdays, she drives the hour in and hour home so that her son can go to day care, since he has to use a certain number of allotted hours a week if he wants to stay in the program. During the time that Tavin is playing with his tiny peers, Tara uses her time as if it were a structured study hall. At home in the afternoons, she tries make the little time she has with her son quality time. They play together and have dinner, and she bathes and puts him to bed. After his bedtime of 8 p.m., Tara either tries to do some of her own work or, on Wednesdays and Thursdays, works until 10 p.m. while a babysitter stays with Tavin. One weekend a month Tara spends on duty with the National Guard; the other three she spends at home with her son.

One year into her service for the army, Tara and

Turn to MOTHERHOOD page 2

motherhood

continued from page 1

her boyfriend of a year and a half learned that they were going to be parents. Tavin's father had come home halfway through a 15-month tour of Korea, and she'd become pregnant. Iara never considered abortion.

"It never crossed my mind. I was dealing with my own consequences. I put myself in the situation. My family pushed marriage, but I didn't want to make a second mistake on top of the first," she said, adding that she does not consider her son a mistake, but admits he was certainly unexpected.

Tara didn't want children to begin with ("He was my first and my last," she said) but adores the son she has. Motivation to continue her schooling has come through him.

"I don't want him to look at me one day and feel as though he's the reason I didn't finish school," she explained. "Also, if I can do it, then he can."

Although Tara and Tavin's father are no longer together as a couple, they remain best friends. Tavin visits his father on holidays and stays with him in Virginia for two week intervals whenever possible.

As a student, Tara has managed to stay on top of things. Because she only takes four courses during the year she takes four summer courses. She will graduate in five years on time and wants to eventually go on to get her Ph.D.

"I enjoy school," she added. "I just have to plan my schedule better...It's a self-sacrificing lifestyle."

Due to her time in the army, Tara receives veteran status, which allows the University to waive her tuition fees. In addition, she receives Pell grants, which cover the majority of her academic costs.

"I get almost 100 percent scholarship; it'd be stupid if I didn't use it," she said.

Following graduation Tara would like to teach in an inner city high school, and eventually, once she receives her Ph.D., teach at the college level.

Iris Evernow

"Freyja told me the other day that she wants our family to have three dads, three moms and three kids. And she wants my friend Sarah Jane to be the second and third mom!"

Iris Evernow sits curled into the couch of the art history department's lounge. At 24-years-old, she has a young face and childlike exuberance for school and learning, and two daughters who call her "Mom." An English major, Iris thinks she is technically a junior, but having taken time off from school and having semesters with fewer classes at times, she isn't sure and doesn't seem to care.

"I'm crazy about school. I keep coming back to it! It's like a habit," Iris exclaims, as she explains why she's put forth the effort to stay in school. "You have to have something you can do."

Iris became pregnant with her first daughter, Freyja, when she was 20 and knew immediately that she wanted to have the child.

"Freyja was not a planned pregnancy, but she was wanted," she said. "I wanted her once I knew I was pregnant."

Being on campus at the time was a lifesaver for Iris, who began craving healthy foods during her first tri-mester.

"Earth Foods totally saved my life the first tri-mester," she noted. "I was craving everything in there."

Two years later, Iris and her then boyfriend became parents again, with their second daughter Nyad.

This past August, Iris left the stability of her relationship with her daughters' father and found herself overwhelmed. Out of work for six weeks and on her own, she didn't have enough to eat and found hers ill fusting after the snacks her peers brought to class. Until then, she had been in a committed relationship and hadn't felt the stigma that society casts upon young single mothers. In addition, she became increasingly aware of the singular difference between herself and most of her peers.

"It gets really intense, the contrast between me and my peers, because I have this other job that makes me not their peer," she said of being a mother.

Occasionally she will bring one of her daughters to class with her, and she watches as people realize that she's a mother.

"In some way, I think it's good," Iris said. "It's a reality check for younger students."

Although Freyja attends Amherst Montessori five days a week, and Nyad is in day-care three days a week, Iris still struggles to find time for homework.

"I don't do homework; I do my reading, but papers are harder to get done," Iris said. "I do what I can, when I can."

Though she is no longer with her daughter's father, they continue to share custody of the girls. However, Iris is financially independent. She manages to cover her tuition costs with Pell Grants and even once used part of a student loan to pay for extra childcare. The childcare for Nyad isn't covered by the Community Partnership childcare grant, which is only available for children ages two years and nine months and older. This has forced Iris and Nyad's father to pay for the extra childcare on their own.

During the day, Iris works as a housekeeper to cover housing and food for herself and her daughters.

"It's ironic that as we go through history housekeeping is one of the only jobs always open to women," she said. "Catherine Beecher wanted the country to be raised by women."

Iris and her daughters use MassHealth. Although, Iris admits she hasn't seen a doctor since she was forced to present proof of vaccinations upon entering UMass.

As her daughters, especially Freyja, begin to get older, Iris said she has felt more time conscious and worries more about maintaining financial stability for her daughter's sake.

"As Freyja's begun to grow up, I see her wanting things for herself and realizing what she doesn't have."

Iris says she's stopped taking the minimum class load so that she can finish school and move on.

"I've begun to feel such a difference between myself and other people [at school]," she noted. However, Iris's godfather has told her not to worry and just to focus on school. He understands that she can only do so much, even if she doesn't.

When Iris does graduate, she guesses that she'll enter into teaching, preferably early childhood.

Jill Jeffrey

You might never know that Jill Jeffries was a mother of a toddler. She's a Dean's List student with stellar grades with an even more stellar energy level. Yet, the 24-year-old senior goes home each day to her 3-year-old son, Drew, and his father Chris.

Jill doesn't mind the 40-minute drive from her home in Gardner since it's all back roads and very little traffic. She makes the trip on Tuesdays and Thursdays while her boyfriend's mother watches their son, so that she can attend her four classes. A legal studies major with a minor in psychology, Jill has just six classes left to go before graduation and has never taken a semester off from school.

"If you ever get pregnant, do so in the fall. It was good timing; I had Drew June 1," said Jill of how she managed to stay in school during her pregnancy and afterwards.

Jill and Chris began dating in March, and Jill became pregnant in late September. At the time they were each attending Holyoke Community College, and Jill was living on Sunset Ave. in an apartment with nine other single, college aged girls. The pregnancy was a shock and scared her at first, yet she did not consider abortion.

"If you're gonna have sex, accept the consequences," Jill said.

Upon accepting the reality of her situation and her new responsibility, Jill made it clear to Chris that she was going to stay in school and she would not be sending her child to childcare. She wanted to raise him herself and within the family and set an example for him to work towards the highest degree for himself when it came time. Pregnancy became yet another motivation to stay in school and finish.

"I learned in one of my psychology classes that the level of education of the mother is most important to how far the child will go in school later," said Jill.

After receiving her associates degree from Holyoke Community College, Jill decided to use the free tuition she would receive at any state school (her mother is a professor at Mt. Wachusetts Community College) and attend UMass in order to get her Bachelor's. Chris finished with his associates and began his own company, becoming successful enough to support the three of them from his earnings. In addition, Jill receives a check each semester from financial aid services for $1,400 and works one night a week bartending for extra money.

As a full time student, Jill continues to be able to receive full health insurance through her parents. Drew, like Iris and her family, uses MassHealth.

Jill and Chris have yet to need a babysitter for Drew since their families have both been supportive enough to eagerly offer childcare whenever the couple needs it. Chris's mother takes Drew during the day so that Jill can attend classes, and Jill's mother takes Drew every Friday night so that they have time alone or to go out with friends.

"My social life hasn't really suffered," Jill said. "I don't miss a lot."

Several of Jill's friends also have children and have become extra sources of support, and none of her friends without children have left Jill due to her new position as a mother.

Professors have been pretty understanding of Jill's situation. They see that she does the work and is dedicated to her academics. However, Jill maintains that if "my child is sick, they'll just have to accept me missing class."

Drew will enter part-time pre-school in the fall, allowing Jill extra time to focus on her remaining classes and to think about what she wants to do after college. When he begins to attend school full time, Jill will be ready to enter the work-force full time. Her ideal job would be working in the juvenile court system helping children and families, but if a job as a legal assistant were available and would pay more, she would consider it. Until then, she is enjoying being a mom and a student.

"I love being a mom," Jill expressed. "I love the schedule and the balance; I need something more than just being a mom."

****

The next time you have sex, consider what you could be creating. The next time you procrastinate instead of doing your work, think about tose who don't have time to procrastinate.

"[My daughter] was not a planned pregnancy, but she was wanted."
-Iris Evernow

JAMES SCHAFFER/COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The [illegible] Daily Collegian during the University [illegible] independent from the University of [illegible] advertising sales. The paper was founded [illegible] Collegian in 1973 and then [illegible] for being published daily since 1967, and being [illegible] Pressing Award. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m.

Sam Wilkinson Editor-in-Chief
Matthew F. Sacco Managing Editor
Amy Gargiulo Business Manager
Shimauli Dave Production Manager
Jake Lilien Diversity Editor
Mike Kulak Editorial Production Manager
Jason Smith Advertising Manager

Mike Delano Arts & Living Editor
Matthew Despres Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jennifer Eastwood Features Editor
Catherine Turner News Editor
Tibora Ginzyc-Blum Photography Editor
Eric Soderstrom Sports Editor
Brent Siniawski Finance Manager
Charlie Iacco Distribution Manager

Morgan Taylor Advertising Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Cara Murphy Assistant Finance Manager
Shawn Daugherty Assistant Business Manager
Megan Shannon Assistant Advertising Manager

ONLY YOU CAN SAVE UMASS

RALLY to Save UMass!

Tomorrow at the State House, Boston

Sign up for buses NOW!
Sign up in the Student Union lobby 9:30-2:30 or email saveumass@yahoo.com
Buses load at 9:00 am Thursday, leave at 9:30 am sharp.
Buses leave from Stockbridge Road, near Franklin Dining Hall.

Rally begins at 12:00 noon and ends by 1:30 pm. Some people (and buses) will return right afterwards; many of us will stay and lobby legislators. We've reserved the Great Hall inside the State House.

SOME of the many reasons to go:
- Fees for next fall are up $1270.
- Being 47th out of 50 states in public investment in higher education isn't good enough.
- The press keep calling, and they'll be there. The whole world is watching.
- We can win this fight. Legislators tell us the teach-in letters have had an impact. But legislators need to hear our voices at the rally. If we are there—in numbers—they will cave.

President Bulger "applauded the faculty and student lobbying effort that will culminate on April 25 with UMass Rally Day at the Statehouse...His advice to the students and faculty going to Beacon Hill: 'Be purposeful. Be respectful. Be persistent.'"

WHERE'S THE MASS WITHOUT YOU?

Providence
School Of Continuing Education

Need to build credit?

Stick Around and Study

When: Summer School Session 1
May 28th-June 14th
Summer School Session 2
June 24th-August 2nd

Time: 6:00 - 9:00pm

For Further Information call (401) 865-2487 or email ssilva@providence.edu
check out our website: www.providence.edu/sce

Spiritual leader to speak tonight

By Jake Lilien
COLLEGIAN STAFF

An Evening of Wisdom, Music and Deep Meditation with His Holiness Sri Sri Ravi Shankar will be held tonight at the Mullins Center from 6 to 9 at the University of Massachusetts.

Shankar, not to be confused with the Ravi Shankar who introduced Indian music to the Beatles, is a world-renowned speaker, musician, spiritual leader and humanitarian. He began teaching the Sudarshan Kriya, a breathing technique intended to eliminate stress and bring one completely into the present moment, in 1982.

The Art of Living Foundation, which he founded, now teaches a course on the Sudarshan Kriya in over 100 countries. The UMass Yoga and Meditation Club regularly offers the course.

Recently, the Art of Living Foundation sent its instructors to New York City to conduct stress elimination workshops with those affected by the Sept. 11 attacks. The Foundation also offers courses free of charge to AIDS patients, prisoners and depression sufferers.

Shankar was a keynote speaker at the United Nations Millennium Peace Summit in 2000, and the 2002 World Economic Forum in New York City. He has been an advocate for the preservation of sacred sites, and recently spoke at the opening of the Museum of World Religions in Taipei, Taiwan.

"Governments are doing very little to protect [sacred spaces]," Shankar said in his address. "In some parts of the world, the sacred sites which are supposed to emanate peace and harmony have been the cause of bloodshed...but one must eventually regard all sacred sites as their own. Eventually, the whole globe needs to be considered a sacred place."

Shankar regularly delivers lectures around the world about the importance of emotional and spiritual growth. Shankar's appearance tonight will include a lecture, a musical performance and meditation exercises involving the entire assembled crowd.

"One of the qualities of enlightenment is to tolerate ignorance," Shankar said in a recent interview with Awareness magazine. "Otherwise an enlightened person could not live in this world, because he knows everybody has this substance inside and yet they are keeping a long face. This is intolerable ignorance for an enlightened person. But still he is patient, he smiles, and waits for every body to bloom on their own."

Tonight's event is sponsored by the UMass Yoga and Meditation Club, in conjunction with the Art of Living Foundation. Tickets are $15 for general admission, and $5 for students with a valid ID. Those interested in attending can call 545-0505 for tickets, or 545-3001 for more information.

Friends commemorate life of Du Bois by sharing personal stories

By Jake Lilien
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Friends and co-workers of W.E.B. DuBois gathered yesterday in the University of Massachusetts library which bears his name. Their mission was to honor the late author, teacher, and civil rights leader by sharing stories about their experiences with him.

Speakers at the event included Esther Cooper Jackson, co-founder of Freedomways magazine, James Jackson, her husband, a former editor of The Daily Worker, and Abbott Simon, the former Executive Director of the Peace Information Center. All three of the lecturers acted alongside DuBois in the civil rights movement.

Interim Chancellor Marcellette Williams gave an introduction to the event, in which she praised DuBois, and his contributions to the University.

"The towering intellect of W.E.B. DuBois is not only present in this edifice, the tower of this library," Williams said. "It is active in this campus...it is present in the pulse of the University. I have felt it ever since I came here, and it continues to throb with great power and great strength."

The first speaker was Esther Cooper Jackson, who recalled knowing of DuBois's achievements even as a young girl. She described the excitement in her family that accompanied the arrival of Crisis Magazine, an NAACP publication edited by DuBois.

"Me and my sisters fought over who would be the first one to look at the pictures, and when we were old enough, to read the articles," Johnson said. "I learned very early about the history and struggle of our people."

Jackson described her relationship with DuBois while working with him on the movement, saying that he had a positive effect on those around him.

"I think first and foremost, he led by the power of the attraction of his example," she said. "When he talked, we listened."

Simon shared his experiences standing trial with DuBois during the McCarthy era, in which they were both accused of "un-American" activities. A judge eventually ruled that there was insufficient evidence against them to result in a guilty verdict. Simon praised DuBois's conduct throughout the arraignment and trial.

"The point is that Dr. DuBois realized that with every struggle, there must be the possibility of paying the price," Simon said. "He knew that we must be willing to pay the price and to struggle."

At the conclusion of the speeches, the floor was opened to the audience for questions. One attendee asked the speakers whether they were aware of DuBois's support for Marxism.

All of the speakers responded by saying that DuBois had never hidden his beliefs.

"Around 1911, [DuBois] wrote about socialism," James Jackson said. "He defined it as a major reform concept that he held in high esteem."

Esther Cooper Jackson added that DuBois had joined the Communist Party late in his life, and agreed to let the public know of his membership.

"Originally, he said that he wanted [a document revealing his affiliation with the party] to be revealed only after his death," said Jackson. "But he changed his mind, and sent me a letter from Africa, saying, 'Write it to the world'."

WWW.DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM

I AGREE WITH ELAINE!
www.knowmercy.org

DRIVE AN EXOTIC CAR Looking for a high-speed career? Tired of your boring day job? Test-drive exotic cars for private organization. Must have valid driver's license and a passion for speed. Log on to www.testdriveinfo.com for more info and bodily harm waiver.

Changing Jobs or Retiring?
Call A.G. Edwards for alternatives on how you can receive and manage your distribution from your company's retirement plan.

Michelle Spazian
91 Main St.
Greenfield, MA
800-445-3685
A.G. Edwards
INVESTMENTS SINCE 1887
Member SIPC

STUDENT TRAVEL
It's YOUR trip, take it!
London.....$288
Paris.....$377
Brussels.....$458
Rio de Janeiro..$654
San Jose C.R...$523
Fares are round-trip from Hartford. Restrictions may apply. Tax not included
BUDGET HOTELS for as little as $18 A NIGHT!!!

STA TRAVEL
800.777.0112
www.statravel.com

McMurphy's
featuring...

Live Music
THE GUITAR DUDES
every wednesday
NO COVER
positive ID required

Grand Opening!
celebrate with us

IN CELEBRATION OF OUR NEW LOCATION WE EXTEND AN INVITATION TO SAVE!

Wednesday, 4/24	20% off trade books*
Thursday, 4/25	20% off UMASS gifts
FRIDAY, 4/26	FRUGAL FRIDAY

BUY 1 CLOTHING ITEM, GET 50% OFF A CLOTHING ITEM OF EQUAL OR LESSER VALUE

WIN GREAT PRIZES!
SEE STORE FOR DETAILS

University of Massachusetts
UMASS UNIVERSITY STORE
Campus Center • Phone: (413) 545-2619
www.umass.bkstr.com
*does not include textbooks.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED/OP EDITOR: MATTHEW DESPRES

Faculty should tell students to protest cuts

With the impending budget ax looming over the University of Massachusetts campus, it often feels as though there is nothing that students can do to prevent or handle the damage.

That is the beauty of the rally that is being held in Boston this Thursday. Through the united effort of students and faculty and staff campus-wide we can try to illustrate our fears and concerns regarding the financial stability of UMass. Well, that is if students show up. While for many the intent is there, some face concerns that by skipping classes that day their academics could be affected.

Provost Charlena Seymour circulated an email encouraging students to attend the rally and asking staff to be lenient academically towards students that don't attend classes because they are in Boston for the rally. While this is a good step, all instructors should take this advice to heart and encourage their students to travel to Boston for the rally. The only way that student voices can be heard together with that of faculty and with staff is if the campus unites to lobby for their interests together. No class should prevent a student from making his or her voice heard in Boston.

Faculty will be represented in Boston and will speak for groups like the Faculty Senate, members of the student government will be in attendance to speak for their organization and students from the University should also make their opinions known.

Sending letters is a good step towards trying to make legislators aware of the financial crisis at the University but for the sake of all undergraduates and future attendees of the school, students have a responsibility to make their voices heard as well.

If we do not protest these cuts, then more may follow. They will certainly diminish the quality of our programs and of the school as a whole, not to mention the programs already depleted due to a lack of funding and resources.

In the end it doesn't really matter if students skip classes during this semester if they have no chance of getting into any others in the Fall due to severe budget cuts and a loss of faculty.

This plea to Boston is sponsored by a wide variety of groups on campus and needs student support.

In order for this to be successful everyone on campus has to be behind it.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

Cold Rain in April

SAM WILKINSON

This is what I feel: cold rain on my white legs at the end of April. It is unreal. It is April after all, a time when the cold's cruel grip should have finally been broken. Yet Monday, I hardly blinked when rumors circulated that snow had been forecast.

Snow.

I stood at Health Services feeling the cold, and then, as I probably haven't done since my first year at UMass, I walked to the Collegian from lower Central. I passed the same brownshirt security guard we always said hello to each other when I passed, but she never remembered me the next day and walked into Durfee. Under the big trees, I tried to smell the smokes that hang around, but it was too cold. I walked up those same stone steps, hopped over a wooden bench, and headed between two of the many Morrills. I crossed by the same bus stop I passed everyday on my way to classes my first year here.

I walked by the arrogant kid from Louisiana who was forever trying to kiss up to Professor Moscardelli in American Politics. We looked at each other and then away, and then back at each other because we didn't think the other would be looking and then we kept on going. I went into the Campus Center and I saw Dan, who I struggled through English 200 with – nothing kills a disinterested English major faster than English 200 – and we barely paid each other mind.

There's the Barber Shop where I've had my hair cut so many times, and the GEO office that I've fired dirty stares at again and again, hoping, I think, for some sort of confrontation so I can finally ask them why they do the things they do, I buy the same granola bars with chocolate chips in the Student Union Store and I walk to class.

I have done this a hundred times, or perhaps a thousand, and only recently did I start to note that this will not be me forever. I am graduating soon – I signed the document the other day that changes my graduation date, and after three years, I will no longer be a Minuteman. I will be a graduate.

If there are stages of collegiate development, I'd argue that they are the following: Freshmen come here ready to experience the whole world.

"I must think about the future, regardless of my disinterest in it."

Sophomores realize that they aren't interested in the whole world. Juniors have found their niche. Seniors realize that niche is temporary.

I don't even flinch at the notion of snow. "Oh snow, yeah, well it's only late April, so it could be here at any moment." That's what I now think. My first year, I assumed that any snow after April 1 was a sure sign of the impending apocalypse. Slowly, I learned that, to live here in Massachusetts is expect a snowstorm tomorrow, even if it is mid-April.

My niche was the Collegian, and maybe Political Science, although as I prepare to graduate with a degree, I realize that I will never work in a political office. I have no interest in being a lawyer. Returning to Political Science as a career also disinterests me, as I cannot make a life out of writing papers. My social niche is my friends, those who I keep very close to me and who know of my life's starker realities. They also know my jokes, and my darker feelings.

Soon, that will be gone and I will be forced to start again. Although I will not be totally severed from UMass – I will read the Collegian online, I will vote and read about various political issues with interest, I will communicate with Mike and Mitch and Kurt – things will never be the way that they were. They will still be good, but I won't be able to have the same interaction with all three that I have come to treasure and enjoy.

One part of me says that this is a good thing; I can't do the same thing forever. But another longs for just one more year, or, far more unlikely, a chance to do it all again. I feel as though I genuinely missed out on a great number of experiences that I cannot actually define. I decided long ago that

I wouldn't become my friends who have graduated, forever hoping for more chances at these past few years, yet I find myself feeling the same way. I want to find rewarding work and make something of myself, yet I fear a future that might see me never realizing what small dreams I have. I am determined to avoid such a fate, but pragmatism demands at least thought on the issue. It is that which I continue to realize, day after day. I must think about the future, regardless of my disinterest in it.

It is just past midnight and the predicted snow turned to slush and a friend staying with me for a few days said that the weather was inexplicable, even for New England. "First it was what? 98, record highs. Now it's 34 and slushing." We shake our heads and talk about other things, because like so many other things, we cannot change the weather.

Sam Wilkinson is a Collegian columnist.

ed-op do-pe

Interested in writing for Ed/Op? Come down to 113 Campus Center basement and talk to Matt or Dan.

Cuba and America

Nurturing the Community

NATALYA WENSTEIN-ROBERTS

"Americana" a middle-aged, balding man asked as I stood purchasing coconut yogurt at a small bakery in Havana, Cuba. "Si" (yes), I replied. His dark eyes probing, accompanied his forthcoming question. "Soap, please?" This dignified man did not ask for money or food as I have often been asked for when traveling, but soap. He asked the simple question that saturates his daily life. This encounter illustrated one of my critical insights during my three week trip to Cuba over January break: the shortage of basic goods in Cuba, largely caused by the U.S. sanctions and policies which prohibit imports and trade to Cuba. I traveled to Cuba with two of my fellow friends, Nina and Brian, after obtaining educational licenses through the University of Massachusetts. We quickly became aware of how the United States takes for granted simple resources such as soap and toothpaste, which are a constant difficulty for Cubans to obtain.

Cuba is only around 90 miles from Miami yet communication, trade and travel between the U.S. and Cuba have been very limited since Fidel Castro's socialist revolution of 1959. In October of 1960, the U.S. placed an embargo on Cuba, which still exists today. Currently, the U.S. government, under the Department of the Treasury, only allows certain exchanges concerning Cuba. For example, money for family members still living in Cuba, and food donations can be sent to Cuba. The U.S. government restricts our travel to those born in Cuba and to those with a license issued from the Department of the Treasury. The U.S. government supposedly prohibits contact with our southern neighbors, yet curiously this

U.S. navy has a base in Guantanamo Bay, where they are currently holding suspected members of al Qaeda and the Taliban regime. There is also a Cuban Interests Section office located in Washington, DC.

Upon reaching Cuba, we settled into life in Havana, taking the peso cafe into the center of town and dining on cuitas, small bowls packed full of beans, rice and meat, for 20 pesos, or 80 cents. We journeyed around the University of Havana, Havana Vieja, the port and along the coast a bit outside the city. We were very curious about the educational system, and since we were the age of many students in Cuba, asked numerous questions of the students we met.

"How much does the University cost? How much does dorm housing cost?" The answer was surprisingly, yet invariably, "Gratis." Free.

One of the main goals of the socialist revolution was to build a more egalitarian society through providing basic needs and opportunities to all. This means, health care, education, housing and even food, are all free services provided by the government. Unfortunately, there is an economic crisis in Cuba, caused in part by the U.S. sanctions, which means sometimes it is a low quality of services. For example, there is little funding to renovate houses, the ration books do not provide enough food for families, and it is extremely difficult to obtain medical supplies.

One of the close friends that I made in Cuba, Ariel, shared with me many of his personal experiences. On our final day in Cuba, he and I were walking the long stretch of beach facing north towards the U.S. While he has a deep love for his country and people, the daily pressures of constantly worrying about where the next meal will come from, and what the future holds, make his life very challenging. I told Ariel how impressed I was with the strong, inspiring values and ideals of the Cuban people of equality, community, education and social justice. But as he pointed out, good values don't supply toothpaste or put bread on the table. The fierce dichotomies between the realities and the ideals of life in Cuba make it an extremely complex yet passionate island. I was often identified as "American" when I was in Cuba, but all residents of Central, South, North America and the Caribbean are "Americans."

To build a supportive, inclusive American community, we in the U.S. must be aware of how our foreign policies affect Cuba. We must also honor Cuban values and culture, and open currently forbidden lines of communication and trade.

Natalya Weinstein-Roberts is a UMass student.

Freedom and Liberty:

IAN LALLY

The world is in crisis and no one knows why. It seems as though everyone is fighting for the same cause. Americans, Israelis and Palestinians are using the same language to vindicate violence. Liberty and freedom are used, not as ideological concepts, but as catchphrases. These phrases are used to gather support for violence. If a person is killing for the values of liberty and freedom, human suffering is acceptable. As the battle lines are drawn, the difference in ideology of the warring sides is lost. The identical color of blood is all that remains under similarly defiant and declarative banners of "freedom" and "liberty."

On page 22 of the Boston Globe (April 14), Yasser Arafat condemned attacks targeting civilians. Arafat called on the international community to investigate the "Israeli government's determination to kill the Palestinian hope for liberty and freedom." Palestinian militants and bombers alike are fighting because they lack liberty and freedom. Hope has been crushed for this people. Suicide is an indicator of hope in absence. Suicide is an indicator of liberty and freedom unknown.

On CNN, Arial Sharon stated that the intention of military strikes against the Palestinians is to ensure the "liberty and freedom" of Israeli people. Sixty-five percent of the Israeli public agrees with Sharon and believe that their lives are being threatened. Extreme military action is a sign of a nation living in fear. Explosions in crowded urban centers intensify the fear daily. The anger is justified by the slaying of loved ones. Hope is crushed by the lack of freedom from these fears.

A commercial broke through my living room with the heavy metal crunch of Godsmack. The hyper-speed MTV-style images changed from a scene of airplanes flying to boats cutting through clear water. The raspy male voice, like that heard in the previews for a movie, boomed over the stereo. "Life" flashes across the scene, then "Liberty," as the narration repeats the words, becoming the voice inside my head. "And the opportunity to destroy all who threaten it...accelerate your life...join the Navy." Fight for the values of liberty and freedom. You will be the coolest kid on your block. You get to kill terrorists and keep America safe.

Palestinians are fighting for the same values that Americans are fighting for which are the same values that Israelis are fighting for? What sort of confusing play on words is this? The intention of the use of this language is to gather support for a cause. America is trying to gather support for the Armed forces, as Arafat is trying to gather support for the Palestinian people as Sharon is trying to gather support for military action. How different are the intentions behind the use of these words? Freedom to a Palestinian is not the freedom that is known to an American. Palestinians want to have the right to live without tanks burrowing through their homes. Palestinians want the freedom to not be under the boot of an oppressive occupational force that destroys historical and religious landmarks. Palestinians have been left with nothing but the clothes on their backs. One has to wonder, what is the intention of the Israeli army? Has ruthlessness become a necessary evil of security?

I have seen the pictures on TV of Palestinian supporters waving pictures of Sharon with a dash of mustache painted on his upper lip. How accurate is this Hitler depiction? The Israeli military campaign against the Palestinians is not, by any stretch of the imagination, the best way to go about solving the problem of aggression and suicide bombings. This act of military aggression will perpetuate a cycle of violence and counter-violence, of terrorism and state terrorism. The two sides will destroy each other in a macabre bath of innocent blood, both insisting to the world that "liberty" and "freedom" are more important than rationality. Land is more valuable than life. Pride is more important than peace.

It could be argued that a Palestinian suicide bomber would rather die than live in the condition that she is in. Ayat al-Akhras, an 18-year-old Palestinian, believed very strongly in her personal freedom and liberty. She strapped explosives to her body and detonated herself in a supermarket. She saw her violence as necessary. What sort of military policy would you support if people your own age were blowing themselves up at the Big Y? In dealing with individuals who have no other intention but to kill you, what do you think is the best way to go about defending yourself?

The intention of asking questions is to create a sense of critical thinking. I am not trying to give my own solution to the horror of the human race. Caution must be taken in analyzing tragedy. Thought must be given in the use of words such as liberty and freedom. Have you ever considered what "liberty" and "freedom" really mean to you as an American? Liberty and freedom were given to corporations before it was given to people of color and women. Corporations were given the protection of legal rights under government as darker humans shared a legal status with farm animals. What does this say about the history behind the American definition of liberty and freedom? Here at the University of Massachusetts, we have the luxury of being able to consider such things theoretically. We are not faced with explosive threat on a daily basis. Consider this as your personal ideology of liberty and freedom.

We should all look to the similarities in our definitions of liberty and freedom. Only then will we; American, Israeli, and Palestinian, be able to stop this insane justification of violence. The archetype of the suicide bomber is middle class, educated and our age. Most of the soldiers I see at the airports are not much older than I am. In going to Israel, the majority of the solders I saw there were kids like us. If we are unable to look to the similarities of the human condition, if violence is continually justified for the same reasons by all sides, America, Israel and Palestine will all be "right." No one will be justified. If liberty and freedom are used as empty catchphrases for bloody support the world will end in a fight for the same hope of security.

Ian Lally is a UMass student.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 4.24.02 ARTS EDITOR: MIKE DELANO

Randolph & family

By Peter Blandino
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

ROBERT RANDOLPH
April 20
Pearl Street

What is it that makes 4/20 so special here in the Pioneer Valley? Is it the wandering speeches delivered gleefully by stoned activists? Or is it the sight of two grown men running around Amherst Center in spandex, capes and masks claiming to be marijuana superheroes during the "Extravaganja?"

While I'll agree that both certainly add to the perennial celebration, I would argue that the music is the key component in one of the most widely anticipated dates of the year – 2002 was no exception. Robert Randolph's party at Pearl Street Saturday night was perhaps the most electrifying performance since Dark Star Orchestra played the Calvin in December. Starting the party was Uncle Sammy, a band rooted in the prestigious Berklee College of Music in Boston. Their rhythm section plays various styles ranging from reggae to Latin to rock to jazz improvisation, and is centered around the bass guitarist and vocalist Brian O'Connell, who's dazzling solos served as the highlights of a short set. Max Delaney's work on lead guitar provided the focal point for long instrumental jams that at times became cluttered and disorganized by the overuse of electronic "outer space" sounds from the keyboard. But again, the set was short, and the growing crowd much appreciated Delaney's energetic soloing.

Robert Randolph and family danced their way on stage at about half past ten, and immediately got the house jumping with an uplifting instrumental. The rhythm section, which consists of Cousin Marcus Randolph on drums, Cousin Danyell Morgan on bass guitar, and John Ginty playing organ, compliments Robert Randolph's amazing work on the lap steel guitar – influenced by his idol, Stevie Ray Vaughn – with frequent shifts in tempo and a unique rhythmic texture.

Following the opening dance tune, Danyell Morgan introduced a bluesy gospel-like number called "I've got to go" with his stunning vocals marked by soulful falsetto. This performance, marked by spiritual instrumentation, was easily the emotional climax of the night. Robert Randolph preceded the song with one of a handful of raps, preaching about love and freedom.

The family band then returned to lighter dance rhythms, inviting the packed crowd, which spilled out onto the street where delighted onlookers witnessed the music free of charge through an open window, to get down. Sophisticated fluctuation in tempo and intensity, and changes in instrumentation separated a myriad of rhythmic sections – each seeming to representing a different emotion. At the helm, Randolph captivated the audience with incredible riffs and solos throughout the night.

The performance peaked with its second climax of the night as those in attendance witnessed "The March." A dance invented and performed by Randolph himself, it "stands for love and freedom,...it's the universal dance of love." Randolph preceded to belt out twangy riffs, now on the pedal steel guitar, intermittently rising to dance along with crowd.

Randolph paused once more, this time to preach about enlightenment through prayer before delivering the next song, in which Ginty played a prominent role on organ pounding out riffs reminicking the steel guitar in an instrumental call and response.

The show concluded with an all-out family jam, in which each part played a solo above an emotional, fast paced dance rhythm. Robert Randolph directed the jam like the preacher of a congregation. "Play those drums now!

Turn to RANDOLPH, page 6

Oh how we love that eyebrow

By Ken Campbell
COLLEGIAN STAFF

THE SCORPION KING
Directed by Chuck Russell
With The Rock, Kelly Hu & Michael Clarke Duncan

The Rock reprises his Mummy Returns role of the Scorpion King for this prequel directed by Chuck Russell. That's the nicest thing that can be said about this movie. It holds only limited tie-ins to the Mummy series. The Scorpion King has none of the impressive effects of the other Mummy movies, and even less of a story. It's the classic boy-meets-girl, boy-kidnaps-girl, boy-conquers-evil-villain-while-spouting-one-liners action flick.

The Rock plays Mathayus, the last of a tribe of assassins, hired to kill the conqueror Mamnon's (Steven Brand) best weapon, the sorceress Cassandra (Kelly Hu). Yeah, that's about it. It's an action film, and whenever there isn't any action, the movie just sits there on the screen. The viewer wants to scream, "Just fight already!" But they don't. They try to talk, which is amazingly bad. It's unusually bad for The Rock, which is surprising considering his mic skills in the WWF and two successful turns at hosting "Saturday Night Live" under his belt. Michael Clarke Duncan's talents are utterly wasted as Balthazar, Mathayus' ally. Kelly Hu is inexplicably bad at keeping fully clothed. Peter Facinelli, who is cast as Takmet, Memnon's henchman, doesn't do anything. Every bit of film he's in he sits there eating some fowl (as well as the scenery) or drinking wine and kowtowing to Memnon's "greatness."

Memnon is possibly the least scary villain ever created. Brand is thoroughly unconvincing as the villain. He's not scary, not intimidating and not a particularly even match for The Rock. Oh, and he's quite obviously English. So is a professor-type character, played by Bernard Hill, that perfects the recipe for gunpowder and invents the catapult. Of

Turn to SCORPION, page 6

The Rock wields his huge bow as the Scorpion King.

Kelly Hu as the sorceress, Cassandra.

Say what you will about The Scorpion King, but you can't deny The Rock's charm. He's just oozing with it from head to toe, or, from eyebrow to (rock) bottom.

For a better actor, this movie would have been an embarrassment. And if the movie took itself seriously, it would have been painful to watch. But, it's self-aware enough to know it's bad, and so eschews any attempt at being profound or genuine.

The whole thing is a wink, a nudge and a raised eyebrow to the audience. The Rock delivers his first line – "Boo!" – with a smile on his face, staring right at the camera.

From that moment on, Rock plays the omnicompetent good guy – it's what he's best at, and just what the audience expects him to do. And if you weren't beaten over the head with it already, in one scene, he chooses to save a kid instead of killing the bad guy.

The Scorpion King never lets you forget that you're watching The Rock and not really The Scorpion King (by way of absurd explanation they have him hit by venom-tipped arrow). That's why he can flash a wry smile at the camera; that's why he doesn't need to be a great – or even good – actor; that's why he can give the "people's eyebrow"; and that's why he could've been anything – a lion king, an ostrich king, a dragon king – because the character was just a long-haired, thinly veiled caricature of The Rock himself.

By far the most entertaining wink to the audience was when Kelly Hu stumbled upon The Rock suggestively polishing his large, large sword. Throughout, this brand of supermasculinity is too ridiculous to ever be taken seriously. At one point he enters an enemy tent proclaiming, "I've come for the woman...and your head." Lady killer and bad guy killer, The Rock is one of those protagonists who can magically fight off 43 attackers with a few strategic kicks. The movie's liberally sprinkled with humorous self-reflexivity. And yes, it's awful, but that's what makes it entertaining.

-Julie Burrell

The Sweetest ribald girlfest

Cameron Diaz, Selma Blair and Christina Applegate are girls gone wild in The Sweetest Thing.

By Shauna Billings
COLLEGIAN STAFF

THE SWEETEST THING
Directed by Roger Kumble
Starring Cameron Diaz, Christina Applegate and Selma Blair
Playing at CineMark 12, Hadley

As a title The Sweetest Thing might be a little misleading. The film is a riotous, raunchy girlfest that has precious little to do with the sweet things of life. And therein lies the movie's success.

Films of the "chick flick" persuasion typically follow the same formula – girl who was once either a geek or a prostitute is now gorgeous/ high class, girl meets knight-in-shining-armor, girl lives happily ever. Sure, it's predictable and sure, look in almost any girl's movie collection and you're sure to find a worn copy of Pretty Woman, Never Been Kissed or another of the ilk – but trust me, we girls get pretty sick of the same old "get rescued" story line.

And that's where The Sweetest Thing shines – with its story line switching Hollywood's tried-and-true gender stereotypes. In Sweetest the girls get to be the wild party girls who hand out fake phone numbers while the guys sitting waiting by the phone wonder why she never called.

Christina (Cameron Diaz) and Courtney (Christina Applegate) are best friends living in sunny San Fran, and the film opens up with the girls shakin' their boo-tays all the way up the hill to their apartment. They're sick of partying and all they want is a pizza and flick night, but when they enter the apartment to find best friend No. 3 lane (Selma Blair) sobbing into a tissue over her newly over relationship the trio heads out to the club.

These girls are wild, pretty, cool, confident and get every guy they want. They get to be the girls that the downtrodden Drew Barrymore characters never get to be. Guys send them over martinis and people step back and watch as they dance. But then the unthinkable happens – a guy actually rejects Christina's entreats that he dance with the heartbroken Jane. When he says no, she lets him have it and despises him with every fiber of her being... until she starts to fall for him during their next conversation that night.

But she lets him slide through her fingers, and the rest of the film is about trying to find that love lost to see if it really was meant to be the real thing, or if it was just another example of wanting something just because it's not there. So Christina and Courtney hit the open road to find the MIA Romeo and bring him back to San Francisco.

As in most road trips, it's not about the destination, it's all about the drive – and between Christina's brush with Mr. Maybe Right and the eventual reappearance of Mr. Maybe Right, hilarity ensues – including the obligatory gross out scenes involving fellatio humor, a dressing room movie montage moment, the neighborhood banning together to sing the sappily sweet Armageddon theme song and, of course, the girls taking over the men's room.

The humor gets rather risqué, but the movie sets the mood that you're just chilling with the girls – so it feels like anything goes and everything is appropriate. Cameron Diaz plays her happy-go-lucky-wild-girl-with-a-softer-side like a pro, and her on-screen friendship with Christina Applegate seems like the real thing. Selma Blair plays her party-girl-in-training as if she really was learning from Diaz and Applegate. And the guys throughout the movie just aren't worth mentioning – this is a girls-only clubhouse. Though at times the directing seems rather awkward and slapdash, the movie shines due to an original take on gender roles and the effervescence of its three female stars. And hey, sometimes a girl's just got to laugh at a well stuck pierced you-know-what joke.

Don't Binge on this

INJECTED
Burn It Black Island

When hipster music writers talk about the dearth of quality in Top 40 rock music, about how the radio stations are nothing but corporate drones force-feeding us label-approved mush – well, this is what they are talking about.

Injected joins a long list of crappy rock acts, which includes Hi-Nrgy, Adema and Puddle of Mudd (this, folks, is the future of rock). These are toothless, bland, middle of the road corporate boys that play "heavy" music that's been strained through the filters of "popularity" so many times they have the flavor of baby food. Burn It Black is nothing but an executive's idea of the kind of rock music people want to hear. The people, of course, eat it up and only encourage the labels to make even more wrinkled, third-generation-Xerox copies.

It must be said that the boys in the band aren't chintzy, b-boy wannabe rap-metallers. Nor are they mopey, post-grunge angst rockers who only want to depress with their pain. No, the boys of Injected play big, old-fashioned, balls-to-the-wall rock 'n' roll. Drums pound and thunder along. The guitar solos riff to high heaven. The bass is gritty and crunchy and the vocals are appropriately raspy, as if the lead singer swallowed barbed wire. Too bad there's no soul in the entire album. Everything sounds the same, and the same as everything else on the radio. Listen to a rock station long enough and it becomes one big, blubbery mass of keening nu-metal anger.

To prove that they don't totally suck, Injected includes one halfway decent song ("Faithless"), which has the same mix of muscle and melody as the band's current tour mates Nickleback and Default (coming April 26th to UMass.) To show they are "sensitive," they include the Incubus-like "Only Hurts Awhile." The rest is a swampy morass of generically crashing guitars and sneering attitude.

It's telling that the names of the band members aren't mentioned in the booklet, and the all the photos of them in the packaging are blurry and indistinct. I have the feeling that Injected are trying to distance themselves from their own music. If the band feels like that, then God help the listeners. (Johnny Donaldson)

GUY DAVIS
Give In Kind
Red House Records

Guy Davis is behind his time. That's not necessarily a bad thing when you're a bluesman. Davis is pure Mississippi blues, and God bless him for it. From the opening track "Good Liquor," one would guess that Give In Kind is a classic blues album without the hissing and popping of a vinyl disc. But Davis likes to experiment with things. Davis infuses gospel with blues, using an organ in songs like "Loneliest Road I Know" to punctuate his soulful voice and simple guitar licks. He also experiments with exotic instruments, like the didgeridoo on "Layla, Layla."

Unfortunately, it seems as though the album is frontloaded. That is, all the really great racks are at the beginning of the disc, and the other, usually more personal tracks (such as "Grandma is Dancing") are at the

Turn to CDS, page 6

"Feud's" Dawson kisses all

The folks at Game Show Network chose to commemorate Patriot's Day this year by rolling out a brand-spankin' new program line-up, though the only brand-spankin' new game show it features is "Whammy," a revamped "Press Your Luck" that retains the dumb luck, roulette-style gameplay of the original and throws computer generated Uber-Whammies into the mix. Otherwise, the new line-up resurrects several shows, including "Win, Lose or Draw" and "Hollywood Squares," from the same game show graveyard from whence the rest of its program roster has been dug up. That their (ostensibly) newest game show is nothing more than a remake of an old one is testament to the network's expert handle on kitsch factor. GSN has always recognized America's seemingly insatiable appetite for cultural nostalgia and has abided accordingly with a variety of programs that make us feel better about our own cultural standing, whether through their tacky, loudly-colored set designs (as in "Let's Make a Deal"), lame premises (as in "Match Game") or meager prize packages (as in "Password").

But there is one game show that manages to elude the "retro fate," if only because it was anomalous even back then, with its cornier, bee-down-style theme song, insane gameplay premise and a host that had a habit of showing up to the set drunk. It seems fitting that such a timeless program is also the flagship show on GSN, occupying the coveted 8:00 p.m. primetime slot and airing multiple times throughout the rest of the Broadcast day. That show is "Family Feud."

When I speak of the Feud, I am specifically referring to the Richard Dawson years. I think that there's something deeply unsettling about the saccharine perpetness of former host Ray Combs' shtick, where throwaway quips and token game show host enthusiasm always seem to carry a subtle edge of anger. It's absolutely agonizing to watch Combs offer his contestants encouragement through clenched teeth with the knowledge that this troubled figure went on to take his own life in one of the most bizarre celebrity tragedies of our time. Tom Anderson, the latest man to take up the Feud mantle, also hosts the proceedings with a tangible sense of effigy, though in this case I suspect that it is more indignation than it is the product of a beleaguered personal life, and can almost hear Louie lament, in that shrill but gravel Oscar the Grouch-meets-Gary Shandling whine of his: How has my career been reduced to this?" It would probably help if Louie would just recall his rather luckluster stand-up career and the atrocious "Life With Louie" sitcom. Louie Feud is just as unbearable as Combs-Feud.

Thank-Ye-Lord brethren, Richard Dawson never took an easy lob of the game show host to heart; instead, he took it straight to the bottle. One need only look so far as his penchant on stage antics for proof that he often indulged on the pre-show sip (particularly during the later years). Watching Dawson guffaw about the Feud's set curls to mind how I imagine this guy must've behaved at had cocktail parties: he shambles to and fro, sports dainty hand gestures to observe how he extends his pinkie finger while holding the index cards that contain the questions), utters incomprehensible, slurred ramblings and engages in half-assed flirtations with women.

It is in this last area that drunken Dawson truly excels. Reminiscent of Admiral David Lee Roth circa "California Girls", Richard Dawson finds himself surrounded by a bevy of female contestants in every episode, and gleefully meets each woman with clumsy one-liners and playful kisses smack dab on the lips. Ever the opportunist, Dawson never discriminates, hitting on all female contestants regardless of race, nationality, age or marital status. It is very odd behavior, especially considering that spouses are often standing close-by. Still, his surplus of love is nothing more than a symptom of the general abandon with which Dawson hosts the program, a carelessness that respects the farce that "Family Feud" ultimately is, and a carelessness that makes "Family Feud" endlessly entertaining.

This brings us to the game itself. The gameplay premise of "Family Feud" is absolutely absurd. Whereas "The Price is Right" rewards savvy consumerism and "Jeopardy!" taps trivial knowledge, "Family Feud" prizes incidental common sense, like knowing what a woman might keep in her purse or what people do to get ready for bed. It's not exactly common sense all the time, though, like when the challenge is to "Name an actor that women find sexy" (the top answer to which, incidentally, was Burt Reynolds, whose trademark hairy chest beaskons to the bygone era of American sensuality during which the Dawson years of the Feud ran). For the most part, however, "Family Feud" requires simply that its contestants haven't sleepwalked through the waking hours of their life.

On its own common sense is pretty standard fare for game shows – see "Press Your Luck," for example. But where "Family Feud" distances itself from like-minded game shows and takes a step towards complete lunacy is in its use of the "survey" system. Players do not respond directly to questions; instead, they attempt to guess the most popular answers yielded by 100-person surveys that are conducted, prior to the show, for each question. The stupidity of this approach becomes apparent as the most obvious answers to these common-sense queries get revealed, leaving only the responses given by a minority of the survey. Hence, one family will triumph because say no player on the other team could guess that two people on the survey chose to name Tourette's as a type of bread. Fair? Probably not. Entertaining? Absolutely. I will never tire of watching a player back against the wall and working against the clock, blurt out "Orange?" when asked to name a red fruit. It is a triangulation of moments like these, Dawson's drunkenness and one of the greatest theme songs in television history that makes "Family Feud" the guilty pleasure that it is.

So, while Game Show Network happily partakes out its "Press Your Luck" rehash, I patiently wait for the day that Richard Dawson, brandishing a bottle of rot-gut liquor and a revitalized libido, crashes the set of the new "Family Feud" to usurp Louie Anderson and return the Feud to it glory days.

Jonathan Kearns is a Collegian correspondent.

■ scorpion

continued from page 5

tattoo, bridges

If the movie had a better script, Mummy movies had, it would have been halfway decent. As it stands and a slew of other things the movie doesn't take itself seriously. It's unfortunate that some moviegoers will.

it's an awful movie, a transparent vehicle for Dwayne Johnson (The Rock's real name for all you marks out there) as an action star. Judging by the tight scenes in The Scorpion King he knows what he's doing out there. His opponents leave a lot to be desired. In fact the whole film leaves a lot to be desired. The action sequences aren't that great, the dialogue is non-existent, and plot has more holes in it than proverbial Swiss cheese.

But my esteemed and learned colleague Ms. Burrell is correct – the DRIVE AN EXOTIC CAR Private organization wishing to remain anonymous seeks drivers for fast-paced competitive project. Candidates must be young, energetic and willing to take risks. For more details and liability release, go to www.testdriveinfo.com.

■ cds

continued from page 5

COURTESY OF ISLAND DEF JAM MUSIC GROUP

Imected plays with Nickelback and Default this Friday at the Mullins Center end.

While Give In-Kind is a good blues album, it is probably more suited to the classic, Delta blues fan than the average listener. It's a good disc to get a blues fan, but if classic blues isn't your thing, you're better off looking someplace else. While it's a good album, with some really good, simple songs like "I Will Be Your Friend" and a rag that gets the toe tapping ("Honey Melon Rag"), it's not something most people are going to like.

Unlike some albums, where the good outweighs the bad, Give In-Kind while having some really good songs doesn't have the balance between listenable songs and personal (and unfortunately boring) tracks that dominate the second half of the album. This isn't to say the album is bad. No, it's just definitely not for everyone.

While pop chart success may not be Guy Davis's idea of heaven, he has made a good, low-key album. It's mostly acoustic, with simple songs and simple messages. (Ken Campbell)

BINGE
One More Cup
Mama Raunch Recordings

One More Cup is a mediocre album from a mediocre alternative band, which leaves me with a queasy feeling after the twenty-eight minutes of cheesy guitar riffs, irritating vocals and pointless lyrics. Self-described as a "thrashing, energetic band from Boston," Binge makes me want to... well...binge on some GOOD music, fast!

Binge's sound is attributed to three unattractive, overweight guys and a mysteriously named "KT (which is K" woman on vocals. One More Cup contains nine songs, seven of which are absolutely painful to listen to. The title track "One More Cup" is one of the two songs, however, that does not suck and is all right to listen to if you're in a making-a-voodoo-doll-of-an-ex-boyfriend mood. "My Cancer" leans towards the Mecca of MTV songs used on their shows...you know, the alternative Hole-sounding songs that are used to fade from one scene to another. "Something More" has rather good lyrics which astoundingly make sense and carry on a cohesive message. Looking over the lyrics, I noticed a tendency to use more pronouns than anything else; lyrics such as "If I only had a gun, we could start over for fun" from "My Cancer" make me scratch my head until it shows signs of bleeding.

KT's voice is described on Binge's website as "raw vocals" and that they are; one of the most annoying voices I have ever heard. KT's vocal chords somehow find no accordance with the music the band is playing. On the web page as well, the drummer Bill Morrissey is compared to John Bonham. Now that is just a plain old sin, no drumming of John Bonham likeness did I hear! Also on this fabulous (sarcasm) website, the band cleverly advertises "See us live, buy us beer, we'll be your friend." How about "See us live, throw beer bottles at us, we'll leave the music scene indefinitely."

One More Cup is just average alternative music, ten years too late, and a whole country span across from Seattle. Too bad, because I'd could stand to listen to Binge more. I would have a voodoo doll for all of your ex's too. (Anna Anslen)

■ randolph

continued from page 5

...Play that bass now? ...Play that organ now! The tempo escalated to a frenzied pace as the crowd lost itself in dancing reverie during the third and ultimate climax of the night. Pearl Street management turned the house lights on in the middle of this jam, but the band paid no attention, extending the party past one o'clock in the morning. The music was so powerful it seemed it might never stop, but finally came to an emotionally exhausting conclusion.

Robert Randolph and his family band are truly one the most unique performing acts on the scene. Their style is unlike any and falls into no genre. The music is spiritual and has an almost religious energy. Morrison's vocals are as beautiful as the bells canta style of opera singers, but also contain the soul and emotion of motown singers. Robert Randolph as a performer and a musician is amazing to see, and the success of his band is a product of his charisma and talent.

413.883.1144
Graduation Parties
Private Parties
UMass Discount
Chance Perspective
Entertainment Co.
Hip-Hop
Reggae
R&B

BOSTON UNIVERSITY SUMMER TERM 2002
BOSTON UNIVERSITY SUMMER TERM
Experience Summer
Summer at Boston University is the perfect opportunity to combine challenging academics with the best of Boston's cultural resources. You'll find traditional courses, the latest in technical and professional training – more than 550 undergraduate and graduate courses in both day and evening formats.
Session 1: May 22 – July 3
Session 2: July 8 – August 16
12-Week course: May 22 – August 16
617.353.5124
For a complete schedule of courses visit:
www.bu.edu/summer
Boston University is an equal opportunity/affirmative action educational institution and employer

CINEMARK
The Best Seat in Town
CINEMARK AT HAMPSHIRE MALL
307 Russell St. 413-587-4233
Showtimes for Friday 4/19 – Thursday 4/25
DIGITAL SURROUND SOUND IN ALL AUDITORIUMS
Purchase Tickets Online @ cinemark.com
MURDER BY NUMBER
THE SCORPION KING
CHANGING LANES
NATIONAL LAMPOON'S VAN WILDER
HIGH CRIMES
PANIC ROOM
THE SWEETEST THING(R)
MONSTERS BALL R
THE ROOKIE
DEATH TO SMOOCHY R
CLOCKSTOPPERS PG
BLADE 2
ICE AGE
THE SWEETEST THING
HIGH CRIMES
• NO PASSES • NO SUPERSAVERS
Tickets & showtimes available at cinemark.com

UMass Student Legal Services Office
CALL TODAY
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students
545-1995

I AGREE WITH ELAINE!
www.knowmercy.org

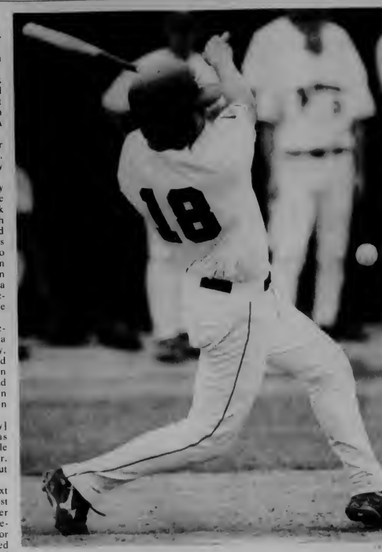
Absolute Last Chance!! to get your Senior Portrait Taken by Davor Photography
Photos will be taken through Friday April 26, 2002 in Campus Center 901 and 902. Make your appointment at www.ouryear.com and use the School Code 147.
Order your copy of the 2002 Index when you get your photo taken, at www.walsworthyearbooks.com, 800-929-1503 or at 304 Student Union!

■ baseball

continued from page 10

good hitting team – it's a shock when we don't hit."

After the Minutemen took the lead in the sixth, it would be all Scheller, as he shut down the Crimson in the sixth and seventh to lower his ERA to 5.25.



"It was awesome," Scheller said about playing at Fenway. "It is always a dream to play [there]."

UMass got going early by manufacturing a run in the first, as centerfielder Derrick Durepo began the contest with an infield single. He advanced to second on Stojanowski's bunt single, and moved to third on an error from Hendricks at first. Aaron Senez then bounced into a double play, but it was effective in bringing Durepo home from third.

In the bottom of the second, Harvard tied it up on a Chaney Scheffield sacrifice fly, and that is how it would remain until the fifth, when the Minutemen retook the lead on a home run by Jason Twomley into the bullpen in right.

"It's good to see [Twomley] hit," Scheller said, who has watched his teammate struggle to a .103 average on the year. "He really helped our team out a lot."

The Maroon and White next compete in Olean, N.Y. against A-10 Eastern Division leader St. Bonaventure in a three-game series. The first pitch for Saturday's contest is scheduled for noon while the second game of the doubleheader will begin at 2:30 p.m.

Adam Stojanowski's two hits led the Minutemen to a 5-3 victory over Harvard, and also picked up his batting average to .297.

UMass BRIEFS:

Women's Track

Sophomore Chante Soares was named the Atlantic 10 Track Performer of the Week for her mark in the long jump this past weekend at the UConn Invitational. Soares won the event with a jump of 19'3.50", which is the third-best jump in school history. In addition, she currently holds the top mark in the A-10, and has qualified for the ECAC Championships to be held May 17-19, in Princeton, N.J.

As a team, the University of Massachusetts women's track team finished third with 103 points in a five-team meet this weekend at the George J. Sherman Family Sports Complex, held Friday afternoon. The Minutewomen won the 5000M run, pole vault and long jump.

UMass returns to action this Saturday, April 27, at Durham, N.H., for the Wildcat Invitational with Maine and New Hampshire. This is a change from the previous scheduled meet at New Haven.

Women's Tennis

The University of Massachusetts women's tennis team went 2-2 at the Verizon Atlantic 10 Championship over the weekend and finished seventh in the tournament. The Minutewomen closed out their season with an 8-14 overall spring record and were 4-2 in conference play.

The Minutewomen defeated Saint Joseph's, 4-0, in the opening round game, but fell to eventual runner-up Xavier, 4-1 later in the day. In the consolation round, the Minutewomen were upset by Fordham, 4-3, but bounced back to top Temple, 4-1, in yesterday's seventh-place game.

-Courtesy Media Relations

Major League Baseball

John Rocker made his return to the Texas Rangers yesterday, despite the fact he never reported to his minor league assignment.

The left-handed reliever was sent down on April 16 after blowing a save in a game against the Anaheim Angels. In six appearances, Rocker had totaled a 0-1 record with a 9.53 ERA.

To make room for him on the roster, Texas placed Ivan Rodriguez on the 15-day disabled list with a herniated disk in his back.

NBA

The awards continue to come in for the Detroit Pistons.

After Ben Wallace was honored with the Defensive Player of the Year Award last Saturday, forward Corliss Williamson was named Sixth-man of the Year yesterday.

Overall, Williamson received 56 of a possible 125 votes, while guard Bobby Jackson of the Sacramento Kings was second with 30 votes.

In other NBA news, the Seattle Supersonics upset the San Antonio Spurs, 98-90, Monday night at the Alamo Dome, despite being outscored 36-22 in the first quarter.

Gary Payton led the way for the Sonics with 21 points, while he was complimented by Desmond Mason's 15, Rashard Lewis' 19 and Vin Baker's 15.

With the victory, Seattle evened the series at one game apiece.

Meanwhile, the New Jersey Nets evened their series against the Indiana Pacers last Monday, pulling out the 95-79 win.

MVP candidate Jason Kidd led the way with 20 points, 10 rebounds and nine assists, which were team-highs in every category.

Keith Van Horn and Kenyon Martin also contributed greatly to the win, scoring 17 and 19 points, respectively.

For the Pacers, Reggie Miller led the way with 26 points.

Information from espn.com was used in this article.

WRITE for Collegian Sports!

WANTED
STUDENTS WITH TRUCK OR BUS DRIVING EXPERIENCE
WANTED FOR SUMMER WORK
EARN $110-$140 PER DAY
Working approximately 14 days in
One or both sessions available. Possibly some July work.
Call 1-888-949-5089

Seven O's
Rt. 116, Sunderland / next to Cliffside Apts
+ Every Wednesday Karoake
+ Every Thursday Dee Jay
+ Live Music every Friday & Saturday
6 Televisions
4 Pool Tables
Air Hockey
Thursday - Harpoon I.P.A.
Friday - Cold Shot
Saturday - Shut up and Dance
Drink Specials - Bud, Bud Light, & Coors Light
All Week Specials
Pitchers $8.00 Pints $2.50
Promo and Prizes
Come and Party with Us

jostens
PURCHASE YOUR OFFICIAL UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS CLASS RING
A Jostens representative will be on campus
April 24-26
10am - 3pm On the Campus center Concourse
Save up to $200.00
$50 DEPOSIT REQUIRED *MAJOR CREDIT CARDS ACCEPTED

the FRESH CUTS
Your alternative music source.
MOTH
MOTH
Previsions, Friction And Gear
The alternative to the alternative. Moth marries pop hooks to punk rock. Features the hit "I See Sound."
9.99
MIDTOWN
MIDTOWN
Living Well Is The Best Revenge
Songs like "Get It Together" and "Like A Movie" demonstrate Midtown's flair for melding meaningful lyrics with aggressive rock and infectious melody.
9.99
THE FLYING TIGERS
The Flying Tigers
11.99 about a boy
BADLY DRAWN BOY
About A Boy Soundtrack
12.99
CORNERSHOP
Handcream For A Generation
12.99
ELVIS COSTELLO
When I Was Cruel
12.99
FIVE FOR FIGHTING
America Town
12.99
PET SHOP BOYS RELEASE
PET SHOP BOYS
Release
12.99
MEDIA PLAY
Your Entertainment Superstore
For the store nearest you, call toll-free 1-888-60-MEDIA.
Selection, pricing and special offers may vary by store and online.
808942 12707
Sale ends May 4, 2002.
www.mediaplay.com

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Fraternities * Sororities Clubs * Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 with the easy Campusfundraiser.com three hour fundraising event. Does not involve credit card applications. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact Campusfundraiser.com at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. - Now Available, 1&2 bedroom apts. Leases begin June, July, Aug or Sept. 1 year lease. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywine-apts.com stop by or call (413) 549-0600.

Puffton Village Apt. Newly renovated great location. Partially furnished three bedrooms includes gas/ grill available June 1st 549-8520.

Take over lease. Puffton 3-bedroom. June 1st. 549-5249.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Summer Sublet with lease option in fall. Boulders. Available 7/1. 256-2373.

Take over our lease. Available June 1 fall option 3 BR upgrade in Puffton call 549-1474.

Take over a lease. 971 N. Pleasant St. Apt. for rent for June, fits 3 folks. Call now! 549-0069.

Condos 3 bedrooms, hardwood floors, study area in basement, cable, telephone (Internet access), in all bedrooms and study NOW SHOWING for JUNE and SEPTEMBER NO FEES. www.amherstlincolnrealty.com 253-7879

CENTER OF TOWN 1,2,3 bedroom apts., hardwood floors. NOW SHOWING for JUNE and SEPTEMBER NO FEES www.amherstlincolnrealty.com 253-7879

COMPUTERS

Color Laptop $99 Pentum tower/ CD Rom $99 with color monitor $139. HURRY! 413-584-8857.

EMPLOYMENT

Promoters wanted!! Student Travel Services is looking for individuals to promote spring break. Enjoy unlimited earning potential and free travel while building a solid resume! Call 800-648-4849. Or visit www.ststravel.com

Computer Programmer/FORTRAN for economic modeling firm. contact: Fred Treyz, REMI, 433 West St., Amherst, MA 01002. info@remi.com.

Painters P/F time 1-3 yrs experience. Michael 367-9810.

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individual, full and part time positions available immediately. Only those able to work the upcoming summer should apply. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413)584-4746.

Experienced yard help. $6.50 hrly. References 549-0413 early.

EMPLOYMENT

SUMMER HELP Cape Cod Ice seeks drivers and P/T 2nd Shift Supervisor in our Sandwich location. Interested candidates call 508-888-8390 for more info.

Be the Campus Red Bull connection. Join our team and help build one of the world's leading brands, you'll have a blast while gaining invaluable marketing experience. You'll even earn a little extra spending cash. Think about it. It's a lot less dangerous than selling term papers! Apply at redbull-college.com.

Models Wanted. Liquid Curves Entertainment is seeking FEMALE talent for nude and/or erotic modeling. No experience necessary. Make money instantly. Apply online at http://www.liquidcurves.com or call our offices at (413) 539-6782.

EMPLOYMENT

Nantucket Island Summer Job opportunity beginning mid June office Assistant with good computer & telephone skills, miscellaneous errand running. Salary & housing 508-228-3942 or send resume to Rafael Osona Auctions P.O. box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02584.

SUMMER INTERNSHIPS Earn $3000 to 7000++ and gain valuable business experience working for the UMASS Official Campus Telephone Directory. Excellent Advertising, Sales, and Marketing opportunity. GREAT RESUME BOOSTER! Call Paul at AroundCampus, Inc. 1-800-466-2221 ext. 288. www.aroundcampus.com

ENTERTAINMENT

Rock Band available for end of year parties free of charge check out our website, oversightrocks.com + contact Charlie @ (508) 243-6091.

FOR RENT

Amherst Center 1 bedroom, off street parking, starting June 1st –early move in available. Call 253-1180.

2 bedroom apt. on bus route avail. June 1 w/fall option $905/mo heat hot water included 549-1883.

FOR SALE

P.S. 2 w/6 games, 2 controllers, DVD remote, mem. Card $400.00 O/B/O. 256-2575.

NEW! CD burner HP internal 8x4x32 Speed BO 259-9382

HOUSE FOR RENT

Hadley 5 bedroom plus. Newer home five minutes from UMASS. June occupancy $2600.00 month. 549-4270.

ROOM FOR RENT

Looking for 1/2 roommates to share apartment for summer. Call 549-2676.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female(s) to share 2 bedroom Brandywine Apt. starting June 1 . 549-1988.

Sublet in Sunderland with possible fall option. $375/mo on bus route. One bedroom available. 665-0377.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

SUMMER SUBLET

Bolders 2 bedroom Apt with possible fall option. Reduced monthly rent 256-2365.

1 bedroom Brandywine rent nego. 3rd floor facing pond. Jason 549-8519.

3 bedroom fully furnished for summer sublet. Great location on rt9 near bus. Call Morgan or Ilana 253-4927.

Brandywine. 2 bdrm. Available June 1. Call 549-1988.

TO SUBLET

3 bedroom available June 1st for summer Sublet or lease takeover. Puffton village 549-1661.

2 Bedroom apartment partially furnished available June 1st to sublet w/option to lease on bus route. 413-549-9612.

TRAVEL

Mexico/ Caribbean or Central America $500 round trip plus tax. Europe $169 one way plus tax. Other world wide destinations cheap. Book tickets on line www.airtech.com or (212) 219-7000.

WANTED

Good Condition bedroom set & desk needed call 546-2609.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement...It Works!

Client: Date: Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash
Date(s) to run: Headline:
Total days x Words = x rate = PAYMENT
Special Heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Rates: $5.00 minimum for 20 words or less. $0.25 per word per day.
Student rate: $4.00 minimum for 20 words or less. $0.20 per word per day.

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

2 CBS
3 NBC
4 Fox Sports NE
5 PBS
6 HSCN Movie Channel
7 WB
8 HSCN Movie Channel
9 TV Guide Channel
10 FOX
11 ABC
12 NBC
13 International Channel
14 UMATV
15 HSCN Info Channel
16 ESPN
17 ESPN 2
18 UVC19
19 ESPN Classic
20 Guide-A-Guard
21 CNN
22 CNN HL
23 Weather Channel
24 Learning Channel
25 History Channel
26 A&E
27 Discovery Health
28 Food Network
29 NASA
30 Home & Garden TV
31 Travel Channel
32 Lifetime
33 CNBC
34 Tech TV
35 BET
36 CSPAN 3
37 USA
38 TNN
39 MTV
40 CMT
41 VH-1
42 TNT
43 TBS
44 E! Entertainment
45 Sci-Fi Channel
46 Court TV
47 Nick at Nite
48 Comedy Central
49 Cartoon Network
50 Game Show Network
51 TV Land
52 FOX Family
53 Animal Planet
54 Cinemax
55 Telemundo
56 College TV Network
57 C-SPAN
58 C-SPAN2
60 Bloomberg Television

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — APRIL 24, 2002

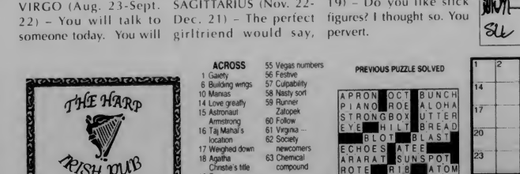
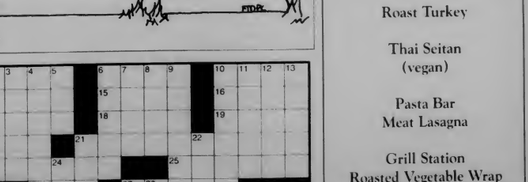
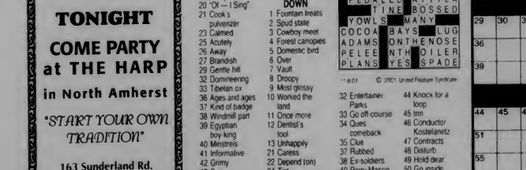
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		CPTV Auction
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	Survivor: Marquesas (N)		Amazing Race 2 "I'm Not a Mime!! No, You're an Idiot!" (In Stereo)		News		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Survivor: Marquesas (N)		Amazing Race 2 "I'm Not a Mime!! No, You're an Idiot!" (In Stereo)		News		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	My Wife-Kids	According-Jim	Drew Carey	The Job (N)	Downtown		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	News	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	Dawson's Creek (In Stereo)		Felicity "The Graduate" (N)		News		Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Ed (N) (In Stereo)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Dazzled" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	20	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Dawson's Creek (In Stereo)		Felicity "The Graduate" (N)		News	Home Imp.	Blind Date	Blind Date
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Ed (N) (In Stereo)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Dazzled" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	That '70s	Grounded-Life	Bernie Mac	Greg-Bunny	News		Raymond	Seinfeld
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Ed (N) (In Stereo)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Dazzled" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Great New England Auction						Great New England Auction Continues
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	My Wife-Kids	According-Jim	Drew Carey	The Job (N)	Downtown		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Frasier	Frasier	Enterprise "Detained" (N)		Wolf Lake (N) (In Stereo)		News	Ent. Tonight	5th Wheel	Shipmates
WTBS	72	Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Roseanne	"Disappearance" (2002, Suspense) Harry Hamlin, Susan Dey				"Disappearance" (2002, Suspense) Harry Hamlin, Susan Dey
A&E	69	Law & Order "Entrapment"		The View (In Stereo)		Biography: Mario Puzo		American Justice		American Justice: Amy Fisher		Law & Order "Censure"
CNN	29	Moneyline		Crossfire (Live)		Live From...	The Point	Larry King Live		News night		Crossfire	Moneyline
COM	35	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Geeks	e•ts: "Other People's Money" (1991, Drama) Danny DeVito				South Park	Insomniac	Daily Show	Sat. Night Live
DISC	23	Lethal end Dangerous: Snakes		Little Killers-Venom		Warrior Island: Yali		Kubu: Struggle for the Forest		Body Piercing		Warrior Island: Yali
ESPN	33	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs	Conference Quarterfinal Game 4 -- Teams To Be Announced (Live)					Major League Baseball New York Yankees at Oakland Athletics
LIFE	97	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"We Were the Mulvaneys" (2002, Drama) Beau Bridges				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	53	Fear	Becoming	Direct Effect (In Stereo)		Prime Time Players (In Stereo)		Cribs	Cribs	Back to the Hood (In Stereo)		Jackass	Jackass
NICK	45	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Sponge b	Told by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers	All in Family	All in Family
SCIFI	26	Star Trek: Journey to Babel		Star Trek: Journey to Babel		Outer Limits "Identity Crisis"		"Lost in the Bermuda Triangle" (1989, Adventure) Tom Verica				Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	27	Flood Path		Daring Capers		Collapse: Extreme Force		Junkyard Wars "Power Pullers"		Panic Mechanics (N)		Collapse: Extreme Force
TNT	25	NYPD Blue (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball Playoffs: Conference Quarterfinal Game 3 -- Teams TBA						NBA Basketball Playoffs: Conference Quarterfinal Game 2 -- Teams TBA
USA	62	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "Father's Day" (In Stereo)		Eco-Challenge: New Zealand				Eco-Challenge: New Zealand
HBO	59	(In Stereo)		e•ts: "Miss Congeniality" (2000, Comedy) Sandra Bullock. PG-13		Path to War		Sex and City	Sex and City	Six Feet Under (In Stereo)		Hookers: 5 Years Later
MAX	65	e•ts: "Cast Castle" (2000) Sylvester Stallone. R				e•ts: "Proof of Life" (2000, Action) Meg Ryan, Russell Crown. (In Stereo) R				e•ts: "Freddy Got Fingered" (2001) Tom Green. R		e•ts: "Blair" (2000)
SHOW	65	e•ts: "Cast 54: Where Are You?" (1994) David Johansen. PG-13				e•ts: "Bad Company" (1994, Drama) Ellen Barkin. R				Soul Food (N) (In Stereo)		Resurrection	Angelic



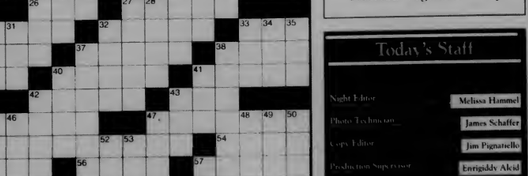
Adam and Eric By Ross Burach



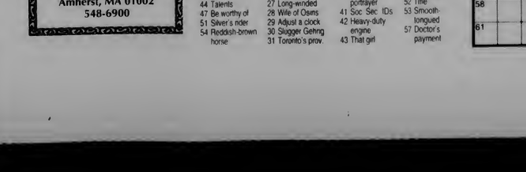
Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas



Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas



Highbrow By Aaron Eppy



Loose Control By Homestarrocker

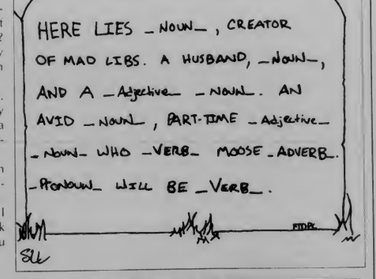
Scarecrow By W. Bird

The Torques By Ken Fredette

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Quote of the Day

> "...Don't knock the weather, 9/10's of the population couldn't start a coversation without it."
>
> -Kin Hubbard



Amherst Weather

Wednesday	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 58 LOW: 35	HIGH: 55 LOW: 36	HIGH: 59 LOW: 29

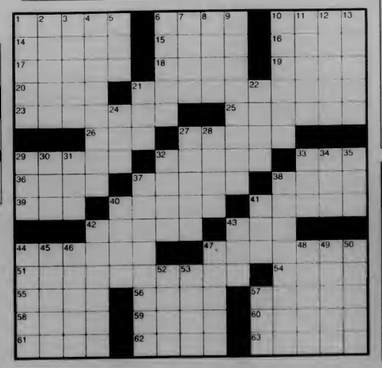
Horoscopes

Spooning By Scott Landes

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You slacker, what are you doing going to class, go get your sleep on!
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Don't eat at the DC next week, there are professors about.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) – The best place to find your lost sneaker in under your bed.
LEO (July 23-Aug 22) – Go to KFC and order your chicken extra crispy.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You will talk to someone today. You will also be bored in class. You will also get pissed off at the horoscopes and burn your copy of the comics page.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 21) – Sure you think your friends are ganging up on you. That's because they don't like you and they're secretly trying to steal your tish.
SCORPIO (Oct. 22-Nov. 21) – Write a letter. Compose a song. Avoid Herter at all costs, damn trick stairways.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – The perfect girltriend would say, "you're so sexy when you're hungover."
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Got a case ot end of semester swipes? Call your friends and buy 20 dollars worth of fresh Bluewall cookies!
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Put on a happy face...or at least take a shower, you look disgusting.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Remember kaleidoscopes can be deceiving.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Do you like stick figures? I thought so. You pervert.

THE HARP IRISH PUB
TONIGHT
COME PARTY at THE HARP
in North Amherst
"START YOUR OWN TRADITION"
163 Sunderland Rd.
Amherst, MA 01002
548-6900

ACROSS
1 Gaiety
6 Building wings
10 Mamas
14 Love greatly
15 Astronaut Armstrong
16 Taj Mahal's location
17 Weighed down
18 Agatha Christie's title
19 Foray
20 "Of —I Sing"
21 Cook's pulverizer
23 Calmed
25 Acutely
26 Away
27 Brandish
29 Gentle hit
32 Domineering
33 Tibetan ox
36 Ages and ages
37 Kind of badge
38 Windmill part
39 Egyptian boy-king
40 Minstrels
41 Informative
42 Grimy
43 Sorry
44 Talents
47 Be worthy of
51 Silver's rider
54 Reddish-brown horse
55 Vegas numbers
56 Festive
57 Culpability
58 Nasty sort
59 Runner Zatopek
60 Follow
61 Virginia — 62 Society newcomers
63 Chemical compound



DOWN
1 Fountain treats
2 Spud state
3 Cowboy meet
4 Forest canopies
5 Domestic bird
6 Over
7 Vault
8 Droopy
9 Most glossy
10 Worked the land
11 Once more
12 Dentist's tool
13 Unhappily
21 Caress
22 Depend (on)
24 Tint
27 Long-winded
28 Wife of Osiris
29 Adjust a clock
30 Slugger Gehrig
31 Toronto's prov.

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

A	P	O	N		O	C	T		B	U	N	C	H
P	I	A	N	O		R	O	E		A	L	O	H	A
S	T	R	O	N	G		B	O	W		U	T	T	E
E	Y	E		H	I	L	T		B	R	E	A	D
		B	L	O	T		B	L	A	S	T
E	C	H	O	E	S		A	T	E
A	R	A	R	A	T		S	U	N	S	P	O	T
R	O	T	E		R	I	B		A	T	O	M
P	E	D	A	L	E	D		A	T	T	I	L	A
		T	I	N	E	L		B	O	S	S	E	D
P	O	W	S			M	A	N	Y
C	O	C	O	A		B	A	Y	S		L	U	G
A	D	A	M	S		O	N	T	H	E	N	O	S	E
P	E	L	E	E		N	T	H		O	I	L	E	R
P	L	A	N	S		Y	E	S		S	P	A	D	E

11-4-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate

32 Entertainer Parks
33 Go off-course
34 Ques
36 comeback
35 Clue
37 Rubbed
38 Ex-soldiers
40 Perry Mason portrayer
41 Soc. Sec. IDs
42 Heavy-duty engine
43 That girl
44 Knock for a loop
45 Inn
46 Conductor Kostelanetz
47 Contracts
48 Disturb
49 Hoid dear
50 Go inside
52 Title
53 Smooth-tongued
57 Doctor's payment

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH
Vegetable Tortellini Soup
Chicken Nuggets
Fiesta Rice & Cheese (vegetarian)
Falafel Pocket Sandwich (vegan)
Pasta Bar
Meat Lasagna
Grill Station
Roasted Vegetable Wrap

DINNER
Vegetable Tortellini Soup
Roast Turkey
Thai Seitan (vegan)
Pasta Bar
Meat Lasagna
Grill Station
Roasted Vegetable Wrap

Today's Staff

Night Editor: Melissa Hammel
Photo Technician: James Schaffer
Copy Editor: Jim Pignatello
Production Supervisor: Enrigaldy Alcid
Production Staff: Cara Horowitz, Lizzy Nielsen

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: ERIC SODERSTROM

Record-tying win-streak reaches 24

Senior Gina Oliveira batted 3-4 this game, including a 3-run home run with 7 runs batted in (RBI) during the win for UMass, as her team goes for a record-setting 25th consecutive win today

UConn stands in way for second consecutive season

By Andrew Merritt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

If you share the opinion of the Massachusetts softball team, then today's game with Connecticut means nothing more than another chance to improve, to execute better and prepare for the playoffs.

However, if you're of the sentimental, passionate fan genus, then today's game means a whole lot more.

Last year around this time, the Minutewomen brought a 24-game win streak to Storrs, Conn., with the hopes of extending that streak, thereby breaking a 12-year old record. But all was for naught, as the Huskies stole the game away on a sixth inning rally, and handed the Maroon and White a 2-1 loss.

Today, the very same teams face off in the very same place, with almost identical circumstances. Coming off a three-game sweep of St. Bonaventure this weekend, the Minutewomen are currently riding a 24-game win streak, tied for the record, set in 1979, as well as last year.

While UMass has the record to shoot for, the Huskies will have a little revenge of their own on their minds. The Maroon and White handed Connecticut a tough loss earlier in the year when senior Ashley Bakken singled junior Kaila Holtz home for the deciding 1-0 lead.

UConn brings a 10-29 record to the game, while the Maroon and White boasts a 39-10 record, its 15-0 conference mark puts them atop the Atlantic 10 standings, which, according to junior Brandi Cross, is all that really matters.

"All that streak stuff doesn't matter, no one's paying attention to it. It'd be great to do it, and fifty years from now we can look back and say we were a part of that team. For right now, though, we're just focused on winning our division, getting into the A-10 tournament and winning it."

The vaunted UMass pitching staff will have its eye on two Husky hitters in particular. Freshman Jen D'Angelo is batting .268 with 30 hits, including two doubles and a home run. Senior Lisa Girolamo is a near mirror image, with a .265 batting average, 30 hits, two doubles and one round-tripper.

Meanwhile, the UMass offense has scorched opponents all around the A-10 and beyond. Senior Teri Rooney boasts the best batting average in the conference, and leads in hits (59), runs (37), RBIs (33), triples (seven) and total bases (80).

Meanwhile, Bakken, junior Emily Rohustelli, and senior Scooter Wheeler are right behind her in various categories, with Wheeler leading the conference in home runs (seven).

The Maroon and White has been a model of persistence, with everyone from the coach down to the freshmen focusing on any deficiencies in any part of the game. Still, the team has one goal heading into today's matchup.

"We just have to play our game," Cross said, "and not worry about what UConn is doing. We just have to play the way we know how."

As for the particulars of the Minutewomen's opponent, the team is taking it in stride.

"We feel prepared," Cross said. "We're looking forward to the game, everyone gets up to play UConn. We're a different team [than we were in the first game], they're a different team - both teams have improved."

Today, the team will find out if history repeats itself, or if the stars have aligned in the right position this time around.

Coach of the year candidates share past as mediocre basketball players

Inside the NBA
with
Glenn Straub

As you read this, the NBA is going to choose this year's Coach of the Year. Front-runners are the New Jersey Nets' Byron Scott, the Detroit Pistons' Rick Carlisle and the Sacramento Kings' Rick Adelman. Other than being Coach of the Year, what do these three basketball gurus have in common? As players in professional basketball, they played for, coached and even third tier cal [illegible]

As a rookie NBA guard, Adelman averaged a mere 7.7 points, 3.1 rebounds and 22.6 minutes per game for five different [illegible] known as the journeyman small forward, Scott averaged 2.2 points and 1.1 rebounds per game in a role [illegible] career [illegible] the first play- [illegible] candidates [illegible] numbers of 14.1 points, 2.5 assists and 1.5 steals.

[illegible] numbers are [illegible] Carlisle's num- [illegible] dismal. But their [illegible] have been a direct [illegible] they played in the [illegible]

Most [illegible] dollar contracts, a transformation in the [illegible] role of today's athlete and an overall improve- [illegible] in [illegible] has led to an alteration in how today's four major professional sports (NBA, NHL, MLB and NFL) are operated. Coaches and managers have lost some of the control over their clubs as the power has shifted to the players and the highest dollar value.

In this new era of professional sports, it has come clear that in order to be a successful skipper, at one point you were not one of the captain's top shipmates when you were on board.

Like Scott, Carlisle and Adelman, many of the successful coaches in today's four major sports were not top-rated players. Take the most successful baseball manger of the past decade, the Atlanta Braves' Bobby Cox. In his playing days he only suited up in two major league seasons — both with the Yankees. He had a .225 batting average with nine home runs and 58 RBI.

Of course there is always the exception to the rule. Former Boston Celtics great Larry Bird had a brilliant three years coaching the Indiana Pacers — leading them to NBA Finals.

There is no evidence that the mid-range to lower level players make decent coaches. There is a science to it all.

Running a professional sports club these days is one of the hardest jobs in the entire world. It is as scary as taming lions. The head coach of a team has the tall order of bringing together a group of grown men who have egos larger than North America.

It seems as if the star of the team always has a big ego and the players who are not happy with how they are being used cannot seem to keep their egos in check as well. There is one group of players on any kind of team that will forever be perceived as unselfish players. "Role" players accept a certain role on the team and stick by it even if they have to sacrifice parts of their game.

"Role" players know what it takes for a team to succeed chemistry. If everyone is on the same page and the talent is there, winning is attainable. Most coaches and managers, like the NBA coach of the year nominees, Scott, Carlisle and Adelman have learned the formula to create chemistry with their players. It has paid off as all three teams won the division title.

Feeling a team's chemistry is an important aspect of coaching but teaching may be even more important. The very best players in a league could have a very tough time dealing with the fact that some players do not have the same abilities as themselves. Look what happened when Magic Johnson tried to coach the L.A. Lakers. He lasted sixteen games due to the fact that he felt that he could not communicate to "today's" player.

Lower-level players see the talent ladder from the bottom-up. Their egos may not be as big either, respectively speaking that is. As a result, it is easier to communicate to everyone on the squad. Bam, there it is, our science!

The best coaches were once lower-level players because it is easier for them to communicate. Phil Jackson was always a bench player for the New York Knicks in the seventies. As a coach he has eight championship rings.

Glen Straub is a Collegian Columnist.

Baseball triumphs at Fenway Park

By Jesse Greenspan
COLLEGIAN STAFF

After failing to score in two consecutive games against Temple, the Massachusetts baseball team finally busted out against Harvard for five runs and the victory.

The win, which improved the Minutemen's record to 15-19 (5-10 Atlantic 10), came mainly as a result of a three-run sixth and another stellar pitching performance from freshman Neil Scheller.

"I feel good," Scheller said, who improved to 2-0 with his two innings of shutout relief at Fenway Park in Boston. "I am starting to pitch more and I am comfortable out there."

Keith Doherty began the game for the Maroon and White, and gave up only a single run in four innings of work.

However, the Crimson were able to take a 3-2 lead off of Matt Boulanger, as he gave up three hits and a walk in the bottom of the fifth. The damage could have been more extensive, but leftfielder Mike Kulak gunned down Trey Hendricks to end the inning when he tried to score from second on a single.

In the subsequent frame, Harvard totaled two quick outs, but UMass mounted a two-out rally to take a 5-3 advantage. Adam Stojanowski (two hits on the day) began the rally by tripling off the Green Monster in left, and came around to score on Jeff Altieri's double down the leftfield line. A Tim Klett single brought home Altieri, and the final run of the inning came when Kulak, who reached on a walk, scampered home when Klett was caught in a rundown between first and second.

"We've been hitting the ball so I knew we would score," Scheller said. "We had problems in a couple of games (two shutouts at the hands of Temple), but...we are a

Turn to BASEBALL, page 7

Freshman Derrick Durepo had a base hit and a run scored at Fenway Park in the consolation round of the Beanpot Tournament.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THURSDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY THREE ☆☆☆☆☆ 4.25.02

JASON VOORHEES: THAT'S WHAT'S GOI[illegible] ARTICLE 5.
R.I.P LAYNE STALEY ED/OP PAGE 4.
SOFTBALL BREAK SCHOOL RECORD SPORTS PAGE 14.

An Update

This is not used to be appropriate to express our information of every article we publish. Last week's feature on student parents. Although well-intentioned, the story's focus on headline, to its final paragraph was both insensitive and inappropriate. Mothers are one of the most precious resources we have. That we would insult them publicly is unacceptable, and we sincerely apologize for the pain that this will no doubt cause.

Sincerely,
Sam Wilkinson - Editor in Chief
Matthew J. Sacco - Managing Editor

Women's shelter offers 'honor cards' to donors

By Jennifer Eastwood
COLLEGIAN STAFF

As May 12 approaches and draws Mother's Day near, many people scramble about, trying to decide just what special gift will perfectly suit Mom. Some opt for flowers – others candies or jewelry. However those in charge of the Holyoke Womanshelter/Compañeras emergency shelter for battered women and their families offer a different approach.

Their proposal asks one to make a donation of $10 or more to the women's shelter, which will then send a Mother's Day "honor card" to the donor's person of choice. Ultimately, the card lets the recipient know they did a "good job" in providing the donor with strong morals that prompted them to make this move to support the organization.

This fundraising campaign is expected to raise about $2,000, according to Melinda Thomas, Development Coordinator for Womanshelter/Compañeras. The money will then go towards various needs for its temporary residents.

Womanshelter/Compañeras keeps all information on those at the shelter confidential, including the exact location of the building itself. Eight families at a time (up to 24 people) can live in the home.

"The average stay [for women and their families] is about a month, but they can stay up to three months," Thomas said.

Life for these families is a balance between remaining safe and conducting their lives in a common fashion. For example, Thomas explained, while the families do all their own cooking, staff members conduct and pay for their grocery shopping.

During their time at the shelter, women meet with consoler advocates to talk through their experiences and are provided with aid in the areas of economic and (if needed) legal assistance. However, as Thomas noted, extra funds for daily activities can always be used.

"The timing [of the Mother's Day card campaign] is crucial," she said. "We're at a turning point in that we're moving into a new season. Women and children need new cloths for the spring, and this money will go towards things like that."

Beyond clothing, Thomas added that some of the collected funds would go towards summer-month events for children residing at the shelter, such as field trips.

"Part of this campaign is if there was a woman who taught you to be caring, this is a way to show her she made a difference in your life," Thomas concluded, embodying the sentiment of the fundraiser's origin. It was Pat Bresnahan, a local businessman in insurance, who initiated the idea for the fundraiser years ago upon visiting Cape Cod and reading an article by a Cape Cod Community College professor describing his intensions for Mother's Day.

Bresnahan's daughter, Eileen, explained how the professor wrote that instead of purchasing a gift for his mother on the notorious holiday, he made a monetary denotation to a women's shelter on the Cape to show he had learned from her to unselfishly give to others.

"I got at first my father was like, 'What was this guy doing?'" Ms. Bresnahan said, but afterwards, she continued, he became very touched by the idea. "It was showing her the value set his mother gave to him."

Mr. Bresnahan wanted to apply this idea a broader scale to get more people involved in his own community, and being that the

Turn to WOMAN'S SHELTER, page 3

Piece of Peace
An Amherst automotive amorously anchored its peaceful opinions via its radio antennae

Republican Club hosts D'Souza

By Rachel Smith
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Dinesh D'Souza visited the University of Massachusetts Campus Center yesterday afternoon for a lecture and book signing an event sponsored by the Republican Club.

D'Souza's book, What's So Great About America is a critique of American culture. Indian born D'Souza graduated Phi Beta Kappa from Dartmouth College and was the senior domestic policy analyst during the Reagan administration. D'Souza covered some of the topics explored in his book and followed up with a lengthy question and answer session.

Several students joined the audience to protest D'Souza's lecture, specifically his views on racism and slavery in the United States.

"As a South Asian American, I feel obligated to show my resistance to this bigoted man who comes from South Asia," said Sonny Suchdev, Office of ALANA Affairs. "He does not represent my community."

The audience was instructed that "disruptive" members of the audience would be forcibly removed from Campus Center Room 101.

Before D'Souza began speaking, a young male in the audience requested to be removed from the lecture because he planned to be "disruptive." The protester accused D'Souza of being homophobic and a racist. Instead of removing the man, D'Souza invited him to stay for the question and answer session.

"Why don't we leave him be until he actually becomes disruptive," D'Souza said. "I don't see any reason to yank him out. I'm quivering."

Uniformed police officers remained at the doorway through most of the event.

"I enjoy getting onto campus, arguing my views," D'Souza said. "I see the radicals as being well-meaning guys but the problem is they haven't been challenged. They're assumptions have been deeply embedded and so part of what I have to do is shake them up a bit. Yeah, I probably take a little perverse pleasure in sparring with them and trying to challenge their assumptions."

D'Souza presented his analysis of the international community's view of the U.S. He used a three-prong approach to tackle his problem.

According to D'Souza, there are three "schools" of anti-Americanism. He divides anti-American sentiment among Western Europe, East Asia and the Islamic nations. American culture subverts European tradition, Asian culture and Islamic religious piety, according to D'Souza.

He went on to claim that the "West" is not responsible for reparations because slavery is not a Western concept. Conversely, emancipation is a uniquely American concept D'Souza said. He encouraged Americans to have pride in their country and its history of egalitarian policy.

"America needs to have a reflective patriotism to sustain itself and the challenges ahead," said D'Souza. "I don't defend a mindless patriotism. It's a patriotism based on the understanding of what America really does and stands for. I'm defending that."

D'Souza closed the lecture portion of the event with an optimistic overview of American society. He described the United States as the only country where ordinary citizens can live a "very good life."

Turn to LECTURE, page 3

UWW offers human services degree

By Howard Weiss-Tisman
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

Heidi Kochanek, a 37-year-old mother from Ware, has been working in the human service field for nearly two decades. When she went to college out of high school she wasn't really ready, she said, and the bachelor's degree she never got has prevented her from advancing in her career.

But she is changing that.

"This is a second chance for me," Kochanek said. "I want to be a professional, and with a bachelor's degree I can."

Human service workers at the state Departments of Mental Health (DMH) and Mental Retardation (DMR), and in private agencies funded by these departments, are working towards their bachelor's degree in human services this semester thanks to an innovative program run through University Without Walls (UWW). The goal of the program is to make a high quality bachelor's degree available to working people in the agencies.

"It's a real collaboration between a public land grant university and state agencies for the benefit of students who just don't have these advantages and wouldn't have them otherwise," Gary Bernhard, UWW director, said.

These students come from far and wide and represent a wide spectrum in the human service field. Twice a week they travel to the University of Massachusetts from Munson, Sturbridge, Springfield and Leyden. They are program directors with 17 years of experience who come to class in nice pantsuits, and young mothers and fathers who are new to the field. They provide substance abuse therapy, work with juvenile offenders and aid developmentally disabled adults.

By coming together in the classroom, away from work, they are able to develop useful relationships with others who are working in human services. The wide diversity of ages, work locations and ethnic backgrounds creates a useful network of peers to share experiences and ideas. Karen Stevens, coordinator for the DMR program, said the class time is constructed to allow for this collaboration.

"In the way we teach the classes, it's an opportunity to listen, to provide support, to provide feedback to each other," Stevens said. "To offer bits of knowledge on books and articles they've read. That's part of the way we set up classes so we can facilitate this as much as possible."

The degree programs grew out of a caucus between University of Massachusetts and the DMR. The agency recognized the importance of improving workforce development and helped create the curriculum. The program aims to enrich skills, open opportunities for graduates, and help retain employees.

"The graduates will become more effective employees. They will see their work in a larger context, and they will stay with the agencies longer," Bernhard said. "The retention will be better, and they will grow with the field so that many of them will go into other kinds of jobs as they get their bachelor's degrees."

The joint program with the DMR was started in 2000 and was expanded to include the DMH in 2001.

The bachelor's degree program in human services is funded through an innovative collaboration between the Commonwealth and the University. In the first year the agency provided 100 percent of the salary for the program coordinator. As the program grows, tuition payments will offset costs. By the third year, Bernhard said, the mental health agencies

Turn to UWW, page 4

SGA discusses RSO budgets, events curfew

By Kristin Shrewsbury
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Members of the Student Government Association Senate gathered for the first time in two weeks to discuss the 2003 Student Activities Trust Fund.

The S-1 Budget Act, which is under the advisement of the Ways of Means committee within the Senate, presented the 1.7 million dollar budget allocations for the up and coming fiscal year.

Due to this year's budget cuts, questions and concerns were raised prior to the SATF presentation and what it would mean for the futures of Registered Student Organizations and Registered Agencies at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

Mike Taugher, Chair of Ways and Means explained this year's allocations before the Senate last night as well as addressed inquiries regarding the committee's allocations.

Taugher addressed questions regarding budget decreases as well as increases as he explained that even though the University has been cut, many agencies and RSO's were not hit as hard as previously expected.

"We looked a lot at agency spending and we decided to put $43,144 into our long term reserve account, so that problems won't occur in the future, because we know that next year's outlook is not any better, if not worse than this year's," Taugher explained. "There were cuts in some agencies due to allocations to other RSO's and we have a Finance Committee, as well as increases in other area's such as the Spring Events fund which we allocated $10,000 more too for this up and coming year."

The Senate will vote on the SATF S-1 Budget Act next Wed. May 1, in which the Senate will need two thirds quorum and a majority vote in order to pass the budget.

"We had 17 new RSO's apply for budgets and 23 old RSO's not funded, leaving us with a net loss of six RSO's all which could have appealed, but many did "I had a phone conversation with the City of Amherst Chief of Police

Turn to SGA, page 3

FILMS

SMITH – Critical Resistance, a film festival sponsored by the Smith College Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender Alliance, will be held in Wright Hall Auditorium on Saturday, April 27, beginning at 10:00 a.m. This event is free and open to the public.

UMASS – The Radical Student Union will present the film, Hidden Wars of Desert Storm, on Monday, April 29, Tuesday, April 30, and Wednesday, May 1, at 7:00 p.m. in room 803 of the Campus Center. The film, narrated by John Hurt, depicts the events leading to the Gulf war, the effects of the U.S. embargo on Iraq, and the phenomenon of "Gulf War Syndrome." Discussion will follow.

UMASS – The Multicultural Film Festival will feature the film Kandahar: The Sun Behind the Moon, on Wednesday, May 1, at 7:30 p.m. in Herter Auditorium. The film, set in Afghanistan, depicts life under the regime of the Taliban. This event is free and open to the public.

AMHERST – The film Ich bin meine eigene Frau [I am my own Woman], will be screened at Amherst College's Merrill Science Center 4 on Thursday, May 2, at 4:00 and 7:30 p.m. The film, which chronicles the life of a German woman through Nazi Germany, WWII, Communist East Germany, and reunification, is part of the German Film Series. This event is free and open to the public.

PERFORMANCES

AMHERST – The Amherst College Women's Chorus Spring Concert will be held on Friday, April 26, at 8:00 p.m. in Arms Music Center's Buckley Recital Hall. Music performed will include pieces by Fauré, Brahms, Martinu, Schubert and others. Admission is free.

MOUNT HOLYOKE – An all-female production of William Shakespeare's Hamlet will be performed at Mount Holyoke College on Friday, April 26, and Saturday, April 27, at 8:00 p.m. in Rooke Theater. A matinee performance will be held on Sunday, April 28, at 2:00 p.m. Tickets are $5 for general admission, and $3 for students and senior citizens. For reservations, call 538-2406.

MOUNT HOLYOKE – The Second Annual Women and Music [W.A.M.] Festival will be held at Mount Holyoke College's Chapin Auditorium and Abbey Green on Saturday, April 27, beginning at 11:00 a.m. Performers will include Patti Griffin, Voices on the Verge, Toshi Reagon, Kris Delmhorst, Jill Sobule, Tish Hinojosa, Antigone Rising, Alex Olsen, and Doria Roberts. General public tickets can be purchased through tickets.com or by calling 800-477-6849.

HAMPSHIRE – Beyond the Envelope – Bringing Electric Sounds to the Art Music of the Indian Subcontinent, a senior recital by Arnab Chakrabarty, will be performed at Hampshire's Music and Dance Recital Hall on Sunday, April 28, at 8:00 p.m. Guest artists will include Mayookh Bhaumik, Black Coffee, and Time Travil. This event is free and open to the public.

MOUNT HOLYOKE – 25th Annual German Theatre Festival and Competition will be held in Mary Woolley Hall's Chapin Auditorium on Thursday, May 2, beginning at 9:00 a.m. The event will feature dramatic presentations of 15 minutes in length, delivered in German, which will be judged by a jury consisting of secondary school German teachers, members of Smith's and Mount Holyoke's German Studies faculty, and members of Mount Holyoke College Theater Department faculty, as well as representatives of the German Consulate and the Goethe Institute of Boston.

HAMPSHIRE – Young Masters – An Evening of Hindustani Music, will be performed on Thursday, May 2, in Hampshire College's Music and Dance Recital Hall at 8:00 p.m. Performers will include Anirban Dasgupta, Sugato Nag, and Tanmoy Bose. This event is free with student identification.

CELEBRATIONS

MOUNT HOLYOKE – Hawai'i Night will be held in Mount Holyoke's Blanchard Campus Center on Friday, April 26, beginning at 7:00 p.m. The event will be a celebration of Hawaiian and local Hawaiian culture and history. This event is free and open to the public.

LECTURES/DISCUSSIONS

UMASS – Louis Uchitelle, Economics Reporter from the New York Times, will deliver a lecture, "The Redundant American," in Memorial Hall on Thursday, April 25, at 4:00 p.m. This event is part of the Center for Public Policy and Administration Lecture Series.

SMITH – Dumisa Ntsebeza, a commissioner for South Africa's Truth and Reconciliation Commission, will deliver a lecture, "Was Amnesty Justified? A Critical Analysis of the South African Truth and Reconciliation Commission," on Thursday April 25, at 4:30 p.m. in room 106 of Seelye Hall. See FILMS for a listing of a screening of the film Long Night's Journey Into Day at Smith College on Wednesday, April 24.

UMASS – Hussein Ibish, Communications Director for the American Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee, will deliver a lecture, "The War on Terrorism: Arab Americans, South Asian Americans, and Civil Liberties," on Thursday, April 25, at 7:00 p.m. in rooms 174-176 of the Campus Center. This event is part of the UMass Asian American Studies Speakers Series.

WESTFIELD – A conference, titled, "Women of Pakistan and India Speak on Rights, Ecology, Economy and Nuclear Disarmament," will be held at Westfield State College from Thursday, April 25, to Sunday, April 28. For more information, call (413) 572-5343.

MOUNT HOLYOKE – Robin Maltz of New York University will deliver a lecture, "The Risk of Arousal: Sexually Explicit Incest Narratives and Feminist Morals," in the Five College Women's Studies Research Center on Thursday, April 25, at 7:30 p.m. Maltz will discuss sexually explicit incest narratives in women's comics, performance art, autobiography, and theater, in order to understand why certain narratives are deemed "revictimizing" by therapeutic feminist discourse and others are deemed "healing."

SMITH – Smith Professor Elizabeth W. Harries will deliver a lecture, "The Glass Coffin: Framing Snow White," on Thursday, April 25, at 7:30 p.m., in the Neilson Library Browsing Room. Harries will discuss various twentieth century versions of the fairy tale. Her latest book is Twice Upon a Time: Women Writers and the History of the Fairy Tale. A book signing will follow.

HAMPSHIRE – A symposium, titled, Latinos and Major League Baseball: Sport, Globalization, and the Poetry of Justice, will be held on Friday, April 26, from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., in Hampshire College's Franklin Patterson Hall. Information about the symposium can be accessed online at www.fivecolleges.edu/upcis+f.html.

MOUNT HOLYOKE – Kamila Shamsie will read from her novel, Salt and Saffron, in South Hadley's Odyssey Bookshop on Friday, April 26, at 7:00 p.m. This event is co-sponsored by the Asian Students Association, Asian American Sisters In Action, and the Asian Studies Program. Odyssey is located at 9 College Street, South Hadley.

HAMPSHIRE – Princeton University Professor Valerie Smith will deliver a lecture, "African-American Biography," in Franklin Patterson's West Lecture Hall, on Wednesday, May 1, at 4:00 p.m. This lecture is part of the "Autobiography in America" series.

Event of the Week

UMASS – The Multicultural Film Festival will feature the film Kandahar: The Sun Behind the Moon, on Wednesday, May 1, at 7:30 p.m. in Herter Auditorium. The film, set in Afghanistan, depicts life under the regime of the Taliban. This event is free and open to the public.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

112 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1582 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Sam Wilkinson Editor-in-Chief
Matthew F. Sacco Managing Editor
Amy Garganta Business Manager
Shimauli Dave Production Manager
Jake Lilien Diversity Editor
Mike Kulak Editorial Production Manager
Jason Smith Advertising Manager

Mike Delano Arts & Living Editor
Matthew Despres Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jennifer Eastwood Features Editor
Catherine Turner News Editor
Tibora Girczyc-Blum Photography Editor
Eric Soderstrom Sports Editor
Brent Siniawski Finance Manager
Charlie Jacco Distribution Manager

Morgan Taylor Advertising Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Cara Murphy Assistant Finance Manager
Shawn Daugherty Assistant Business Manager
Megan Shannon Assistant Advertising Manager

SCIENCE AND RELIGION
Enemies, Strangers, Friends or Partners?

Physics 197
A course for undergraduates at any level*
David K. Scott
Department of Physics
Hasbrouck 134 - M, W, F 12:20-1:10

Historically the interaction between Science and Religion has varied from harmonious, conflicting, or non-overlapping realms of human experience such as Reason and Faith, Truth and Meaning. We shall see that the influence has in fact been deep and profound. Several modern issues will be used to illustrate the interaction, such as the possible models of the birth and death of the universe, the anthropic principle, evolution of matter, mind, soul, spirit, and consciousness, and current interests in a Theory of Everything that could lead to greater integration of Science and Religion inherent in the Great Chain of Being.

* This course may qualify for general education credit under the Interdisciplinary (I) option. Students should verify at registration if interested. For further information go to: www.physics.umass.edu/Science-Religion

LIQUORS 44

½ KEG COORS LIGHT $48.99
½ KEG BUD, BUD LIGHT, MICHELOB, MICH. LIGHT $50.99
½ KEG NATURAL LIGHT & ICE $41.99
½ KEG BERKSHIRE BREWING $88.99
LITE & GENUINE DRAFT 30 12OZ CANS $18.49 + DEP 30 PACK
KEYSTONE LIGHT & KEYSTONE ICE 30 12OZ CANS $12.49 + DEP 30 PACK
COORS LIGHT 20 12OZ BOTTLES $12.49 + DEP 20 PACK
STOCK UP FOR CINCO DE MAYO!!
DOS EQUIS AMBER & SPECIAL 12PK BOTTLES $9.99 12 PACKS
CORONA EXTRA & LIGHT 12PK BOTTLES $9.99 12 PACKS
HANPORN 12PK BOTTLES $10.49 12 PACK
BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT 24 12OZ BAR BOTTLES $9.99 + DEP CASE
MIKE'S HARD LEMONADE 12PK $10.99 12 PACK
FETZER WINES CHARDONNAY, MERLOT, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5L $12.99
WALNUT CREST 1.5L $7.99
FOXHORN WINES CHARDONNAY, MERLOT, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5L $5.49
LINDEMANS BIN 65 CHARDONNAY 750ML $5.99
LUNA DI LUNA CHARDONNAY/PINOT GRIGIO 750ML $7.99
GLASS MOUNTAIN CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750ML $6.99
INGLENOOK WHITE ZINFANDEL 750ML $7.49
SMIRNOFF VODKA 80 PROOF RASPBERRY, VANILLA CITRUS, ORANGE 750ML $9.99
BACARDI RUM SILVER & GOLD 1.75L $17.99
TANQUERAY GIN 750ML $15.49
BLACK VELVET CANADIAN WHISKEY 1.75L $12.99
JOSE CUERVO AUTHENTIC MARGARITAS 1.75L $11.99
RUBINOFF VODKA 1.75L $9.49
DAS KOMET VANILLA SCHNAPPS 750ML $16.49
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
FULL REDEMPTION AT ALL LOCATIONS
DON'T DRINK & DRIVE

Win a $5000 scholarship.
(because eventually you're going to run out of books to sell back.)
monsterTRAK
Log on today at www.monstertrak.com for your chance to win.
See your career center for more information.

WANTED
STUDENTS WITH TRUCK OR BUS DRIVING EXPERIENCE WANTED FOR SUMMER WORK
EARN $110-$140 PER DAY
Working approximately 14 days in June
One or both sessions available. Possibly some July work.
Call 1-888-949-5089

Massachusetts School of Law
AT ANDOVER
CLASSES START IN AUGUST
• LSAT NOT REQUIRED
• DAY AND EVENING PROGRAMS
• ROLLING ADMISSIONS
• AFFORDABLE TUITION PLANS - 1/2 THE MEDIAN LAW SCHOOL TUITION IN NEW ENGLAND
• OUR PRACTICAL/THEORETICAL PROGRAM PREPARES STUDENTS FOR THE PRACTICE OF LAW AS WELL AS NUMEROUS OTHER PROFESSIONS
THE LEADER OF REFORM IN LEGAL EDUCATION
500 FEDERAL STREET, ANDOVER, MA 01810
Phone: (978) 681-0800
email: pcolby@mslaw.edu
www.mslaw.edu
CONTACT US NOW FOR YOUR COPY OF FEDERAL REPORTS 600+ THINGS YOU CAN DO WITH A LAW DEGREE

uww

continued from page 1

will only have to pay one-third of the total cost.

The program will not survive without the financial help from the agencies. It has mostly low-income students and UWW could never charge them enough to make the program self-funding, according to Bernhard.

"In developing this funding scheme we really collaborate on making the program work," he said. "We get to be a part of a really important program with great students, and the agencies get an innovative, creative workforce development program that can really grow over time."

The agencies also provide access to their workforce and help promote the program. Lee Manchester, the academic coordinator for the DMR program said this is a crucial piece of its success. He travels around western Massachusetts, meeting with workers and talking about the program.

"We rely on them to support the program, in terms of allowing us access to their workforce, and going out to promote the program," Manchester said. "Most of our students are drawn from their workforce."

Kochanek said she would never have entered the program without this help. A continuing education class list was circulating at work, and when a few employees called for information, Manchester and Stevens drove to Amherst Regional High School to tell the potential students about the program.

"That was amazing to me," she said. "They were placing value on what I do. All three of us turned in our applications are now enrolled."

Stevens and Manchester both have "decades of experience" in the human service field. They maintain relationships with mental health organizations and bring their experience to the classroom. Through this understanding of what the students are experiencing everyday, their words carry weight and they can help the students see their work on a broader plain.

The students design their own degree plan, and later take six classes in the core program. Classes are at nights and on weekends and come from the departments of psychology, human development, sociology and management at UMass.

The individual degrees are varied. Some of the interests include art therapy, working with youth at risk, mental health administration and family counseling.

The budget crisis has hit the Departments of Mental Health and Mental Retardation and there is a chance this program will be cut. It will not survive without the financial help of the agencies.

But Bernhard has hope.

"I think it will survive because it is unique. We don't know anything like it in the state or even in the country," he said. "We'll do everything we can to see that it does. I have a feeling that the agencies are going to stay with it."

SGA

continued from page 1

this morning and when I told him of the University's decision, he told me that he wasn't surprised," Saunders said. "Honestly I'm really scared for what these events might bring, basically the Administration is giving 6,000 kids the green light to do whatever they want."

Concerns arose around the possibilities of riots breaking loose, as well as drunk driving and other alcohol related incidents that might occur.

"A lot of students will be drinking and there is nothing that the administration or the SGA can do to stop that," Saunders said. "This is absolute garbage to tell Area Governments two weeks before their events take place that they have to end at 11 p.m., otherwise they could have compensated, but now they can't. When people are at event's they get fired up and to stop everything at it's peak is just asking for problems, and students have no where to go, except out. I don't know how the administration will be able to sleep at night if one thing happens to a student on this campus not," Taugher said. "I'm very confident that next week we'll see an overwhelmingly positive response to the budget and it will pass."

President Dave Carr's new Executive Cabinet was also discussed and voted on by the Senate. The newly elected cabinet as voted unanimously by the Senate is Attorney General, Courtney Horrocks; Secretary of University Policy, Hannah Fatemi; Secretary of the Registry, Justin Provencher; Secretary of Administrative Affairs, Jason Bissonnette; Secretary of Public Policy and Relations, Tom Fleenor and Secretary of Finance, Nathaniel Moger.

Other topics discussed by the Senate were the long-standing issues regarding the recently implemented 11 p.m. curfew for all spring events by the Administration.

Speaker Aaron Saunders explained to the Senate his disappointment in the University Administration's lack of student concern, specifically referring to student safety on campus as a result of this."

Residential housing spring events begin next week and will continue throughout the campus into May.

Donation of Hope

Sophmore Nursing major, Kathryn Fuller participated in the National Marrow Donor drive yesterday.

woman's shelter

continued from page 1

firm had previously worked with and supported the Holyoke Womanshelter/Compañeras. he approached them with the idea, Ms. Bresnahan explained.

"Since the beginning of it [Womanshelter/Compañeras], since the birth of it, we have been a supporter of it. We've always donated to them when they have fundraising. We also work with them on insurance," Ms. Bresnahan said, providing examples of years past when the entire office rallied together to buy Christmas gifts for some residents of the shelter.

The "honor cards" themselves will be hand-made by both the shelter's staffers as well as some volunteering residents.

While all inside descriptions will state, "A Gift of Hope and Freedom Has Been Made in Your Name to Womanshelter/Compañeras, providing shelter and services to battered women and their children," the exteriors of each card will be uniquely designed and incorporate the use of added textures such as stamps, foil and various assortments of paper.

"We have some basic designs we're working from, but they [the cards] will be individually created," Thomas said.

The shelter will send the cards out before Mother's Day in hopes that recipients will receive them previous to May 12. Although the shelter can ship cards to anywhere, Thomas advises orders for cards going overseas to be made as early as possible to allow for mail shipment.

Those interested in making donations for the cards should contact Melinda Thomas at (413) 538-9717. Orders will be taken till May 5, and the names of honor card recipients will be printed in the organization's June newsletter.

lecture

continued from page 1

"America is a country where you can write the script of your own life," D'Souza said.

Protesters dominated the question and answer portion of the lecture, but D'Souza didn't mind engaging dissenters.

"I usually feel I'm winning the argument when people run shrieking out of the room," D'Souza said as a young woman exited. "I see it as a sign of mental collapse."

Some students took D'Souza's commentary personally.

"Its very painful and angering when someone makes statements that take literal blows at you, especially when I'm looking at someone who has the same skin color as me," Suchdev said. "I wonder what's going on in his head.

"It doesn't either hurt me or upset me (that people get offended)," explained D'Souza. "...I do feel there are people who have created a psychological protective cover around themselves and in which sensitivity is a governing virtue. These people are not only easily offended, they're professionally offended. Such people are too delicate and do not belong on a campus because part of what college does is offend you.

"What I mean is offend you intellectually by making you question things you thought were sacred," D'Souza continued. "That's my purpose. Not to offend, but to generate debate."

ROCKIN' THE 'SHOE IN 2002

Get Your Tickets TODAY

Monday, April 29
"HOOK UP UNDER THE STARS" MOVIE NIGHT
Fast and the Furious – 8:00 pm
Dazed and Confused - 9:30 pm
SW Horseshoe

Tuesday, April 30
FRANK SANTOS, X-RATED HYPNOTIST
Must buy tickets ($2 each) from FAC Box Office
8:00 pm, Fine Arts Center

Wednesday, May 1
FEELIN' THE HEAT
4:00 pm - 7:00 pm,
DC BBQ & Activitieswith performances by:
Strong Arm - 3:45 pm
Marvis - 4:10 pm
Sal - 4:55 pm
Assention Forever - 5:20 pm
One Entertainment - 6:05 pm
Scattered - 6:30 pm
SW Horseshoe

Thursday, May 2
HANGIN' DOWN SOUTH NIGHT CONCERT
7:45 pm, Rustic Overtones
The Sheila Divine
SW Horseshoe

Friday, May 3
BANGIN' THE 'SHOE, MARDI GRAS STYLE WITH DJ PLAYTIME
8:00 - 11:00 pm,
Outdoor Dance in the SW Horseshoe

Note: No backpacks, bottles, or cans will be allowed in the horseshoe.
Brought to you by Southwest Area Goverment:

"SOUTHWEST WEEK"

April Special: Pilsner Urquell
$2.50 PINT
THE HARP
$9.50 PITCHER
THURSDAY
the Burning Valley Session
Valley all-stars Jam
SATURDAY
Atomic Scissors
Rock & Roll & Oldies
Voted Best New Barlclub in the Valley!
Next Week is our Anniversary Party and Promo...Stay Tuned
163 Sunderland Rd.
Amherst, MA
(413) 548-6900
Just off the bus route next to Cowl's Lumber
NO COVER
"Start Your Own Tradition"

Thanks for all you do!
Southwest/South Resident Assistants and Community Development Assistants
Carolina DeJesus, James Schaffer, Emanuel Napoli, Todd Hill, David Mastrovich, Tara Morgan, Colleen Keefe, Yadira Rivera, Amy Dezenzo, Courney Gamon, Angela Lussier, Smith Utubor, Chisby Bell, Katie Quinn, Kamy Guillemette, Jay Driscoll, Sharonda Williams, Colleen Canty, Jackie Carey, David Synnott, Kate Muzunyk, Lauren DeFilippo, Dana Sanford, John Courtney, Kristin Willett, Rayna Dien, Leighanne Scott, Hillary Miller, Justine Bernhardt, Yaimael Rivera, Winston Bandoh, Caron Roumbakis, Alex Wood, Chante Soares, Amy Veiga, Tanusha Thuralsingam, Trisha Wishart, Wayne Brown, Deanna Levanti, Angelo Daley, Tibora Girczyc-Blum, Joseph Duke, Shiloh Shams, Dean Reese, Kristen Boamah, Miki Kanamori, Ramon Downes, Erin McCarthy, Bruce Maruska, Tom Bartley, Dawn Carroll, Mazen Remadan, Victoria Salesman, Ajodi Morin, Hyung Bhag, Judith Jaquez, Lester Sandres, Elena Panesis, Yuriy Bratslavsky, Swanka Burnette, Lisa Kuchta, Dana Mcfeeson, Pierrette Neh Ntsang, Matt Fries, Joe Charter, Robert Driscoll, Elizabeth Nielsen, Kim Robbins, Jodi Champagne, Michelle Chagnon, Ricky Posner, Brittany Wilkinson, Justin Cormier, Frank Rieti, Stacey Kazinskas, Matt Keogre, Jennifer Temen, Jennifer Casavant, Kate Parnell, Steve Burbman, Melissa Parker, Nar Dong, Chad Portas, Steve Hannum, Jason Rowe, Matt Fries, Erica Morales, Elizabeth Cordero, Jen Mehmed, Tanie Hinds, Laura Siciliano, Jason Tocci, Rachel Brewerlso, Narissa Whyte, Matt Harp, Ryan Debbis, Carolyn Pyburn, Terry Munar
Happy RA/CDA Appreciation Week!
Southwest/South Housing Services: Residence Life

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM WRITING IN A WORLD GONE MAD THE ONES YOU WORK TO GET FLAUBERT ED/OP EDITOR: MATTHEW DESPRES

Clothing giant:
Were they thinking?

As recent signs in the halls of the Campus Center will attest to, the decision by clothing giant Abercrombie & Fitch to create a line highlighted by Asian-themed illustrations has been a controversial and unpopular one. Though they have since promised to pull the line and reevaluate that decision, it has done little to quiet the appropriate widespread anger that has resulted. This story from the Harvard Crimson appropriately responds to that reaction.

(U-WIRE) CAMBRIDGE, Mass. – On Friday, Abercrombie & Fitch recalled a new line of Asian-themed graphic T-shirts, wisely but belatedly recognizing that they are patently offensive and lack any comedic value. Five such shirts had already reached its retail stores, website and catalogue, including one with the racist message, "Wong Brothers Laundry Service: Two Wongs Can Make It White," which mockingly depicts two men with slanted eyes and conical hats.

Abercrombie & Fitch spokesperson Hampton Carney issued a statement designed to demonstrate the depth of the company's regret, saying, "We're very, very, very sorry. It has never been our intention to offend anyone." But in the same breath, he claimed ignorance of the bitterly offensive and disrespectful character of those shirts, demonstrating the lack of cultural awareness among decision makers at Abercrombie & Fitch. "These graphic T-shirts were designed with the sole purpose of adding humor and levity to our fashion line," Carney said.

To its credit, the company's strongly worded statement and quick removal of the offending shirts from retail stores shows at least some recognition of the gravity of its mistake. As many protesters have demanded, Abercrombie should communicate that recognition to all of its customers by displaying an extended apology in its stores, catalogues and Web site. But regret is not enough to prevent egregious lapses of judgment in the future, and Abercrombie & Fitch's apology should describe measures that it will take to prevent jokes of such poor taste from ever leaving the design studio. Of course, they should not even make it that far.

Some have claimed that the uproar over the latest line of shirts is an overreaction, one predicated on a kind of knee-jerk political correctness that refuses to allow America's diversity a place in intelligent humor. But on the contrary, this outrage represents the understanding that blatant and degrading stereotypes are destructive not only to the groups directly targeted but also to an inclusive American society as a whole. Such racist stereotypes, by their very nature, are not funny. The fact that diverse groups have rallied together in large numbers to resist this latest incarnation of cultural ignorance is a promising sign that more and more people respect the distinction between comedy and condescension.

U-Wires represent the majority opinion of the Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

Time to get out

I'm sick of this crap.

School. I mean, UMass. College. Amherst. Western Massachusetts. All the rest of the things that go along with it. I've really gotten to the point where I sometimes stay in my apartment just to avoid going out and seeing all the same old garbage again.

I just can't shake the feeling that I've seen everything there is to see here. I'm fully aware that this feeling is false – I obviously haven't joined every organization, explored every building, gotten to know every person. The vast majority of UMass is uncharted virgin territory to me, and I know this all too well.

However, the fact is that I've seen everything I'm going to see here. I've only got a month of this garbage left. I'm not going to join any clubs. I'm not going to make any new friends. Hell, I don't even want to make any new friends, because it would just be one more person to say goodbye to and leave behind when I get my graduate on.

I know that I've made all the impact that I'm going to make here, at UMass. My time is done here. And that fact takes all the fun out of attending college.

Isn't the promise of greatness and a vast, beautiful future the most appealing thing about college? I mean, coming here as a freshman, I was full of my hopes. I was going to get a girlfriend. I was going to meet new people. I was going to write for the newspaper. I was going to get drunk at parties. I was going to get straight-As. I was going to go to every rock show I could possibly come across. I was going to get all involved in a ton of great organizations. People were going to know my name on this campus.

Man, was I ever full of myself. My goals upon leaving college are somewhat more modest. Get a job. Any job at all. Don't starve to death. Don't get drunk alone to numb the pain of failure. DO NOT hang around Amherst like a lost dog looking for scraps of other people's fun. Don't start wearing Dockers. Simple things.

But the real hell right now is that looking back on all my goals, I more or less achieved all of them. I met the people, dated the hot chicks, wrote for the newspaper, got wasted in public, made the Dean's List, saw some great shows, got involved in a bunch of organizations and, for many of the things, some of my detractors know my name. I did what I wanted. And I get it all back by the end of graduation. Which leaves me with nothing for the year.

Which isn't to say that this year has just been a black hole of wasted time. Because I've had some great experiences, but it was no longer full of hoping for my positive future. Rather it's been a reckless longing for a terribly uncertain future and a terrible hatred of the present. UMass no longer holds any charm for me.

The buildings all look the same to me now. The people all look the same to me now. All the games run together. Learning is a chore. I haven't put any effort into studying for tests or writing papers at all this semester, something that is unthinkable for me as little as a year ago. There just no excitement. It's going through the motions. I hate my on-campus job. I'm tired of interning. Long real work for no money.

It's a shame, because I love Amherst. I really do, but not right now. Because I have not found it here. And, therefore, the answer is terribly unsatisfactory. I wish I could just fast-forward through all this remaining crap and just get my diploma and get the hell out. I may be going to be on again, unlike any other.

I could have it worse though. I could never have accomplished what I have in my four years. I could be full of regret of what might have been. This isn't to say that I don't have my regrets, because I do and they cripple me sometimes, but it's better to have regrets for what you have done than for the things you never had the guts or the ambition to try.

If I quote in this way, but these last few weeks couldn't possibly go as fast as I wish they would. When the place you loved most from any other has turned into a realm of slow torture, it's time to go.

Rob Schulze is a Collegian Columnist.

www.dailycollegian.com

And 'We Die Young'

He died alone. When I think of Layne Staley, I will always remember that first.

He died in a way that I think most of us would fear – isolated, void of contact with the outside world. Surrounded by nothing but his biggest vice, heroin, and emptiness. Layne Staley died down in the hole that he always sang about. He never quite escaped it.

Sometimes the saddest things in life are not what we could not seem coming, there the things that we could. And make no mistake about it: anyone that followed Alice in Chains, the Seattle music scene, or rock music in general saw the downward spiral of Layne Staley.

Staley fell into the category of the tragic genius. And of the tortured soul. And of the hopeless. Everyone knew of his addiction to heroin, but no one could stop it. Not even Staley.

All of us who grew up listening to Alice in Chains remember the things that drove the band – the dark angry riffs; the harmonies between Jerry Cantrell and Staley, and of course, the rasp, gritty lyrics of Staley himself.

The harmonies were the first thing that I noticed. It amazed me the way that harmony could fit so well into songs with such a dark edge to them, but they always did. They made Alice in Chains unique.

The second thing that I noticed, though, were the lyrics. At 14 years old, they scared me. Dark lyrics are nothing new, but I was amazed at Staley's frankness in his music. Not only did he not hide his love for the needle, he glorified it. Not once or twice, but repeatedly. In more than one song, on more than one album. Songs like "Sickman," "Junkhead," "We Die Young," and "Sludge Factory," – they scared the ever living hell out of me when I discovered what Staley was really singing about.

And yet the draw to Alice in Chains remained. Because while the heroin message was loud in clear in AIC's music, it was far from the only message. Anger, frustration, and yes, even hope – they all played vital parts in the sonic confusion that was Alice.

> "Layne Staley died down in the hole that he always sang about. He never quite escaped it."

Did Layne Staley ask for what he got? Did he blatantly disregard the warnings of his friends and family? "You always told me I'd not live past 25," Staley sang in "Sludge Factory". He knew others thought heroin was going to destroy him. He chose to ignore it. Or perhaps revel in it is closer to the truth. Looking back, he played Russian roulette. Eventually, he lost.

Staley never admitted he had a serious problem. And that's the shame in his death. In their heyday, he tried to convince us that "You can't understand a user's mind / But try, with your books and degrees / If you let yourself go and opened your mind / I'll be you'd be doing like me / and it's not so bad."

That was "Junkhead", released in 1992. Five songs on the album were about heroin use. By 1994, it appeared like Alice in Chains was done. It looked like the various addictions of the band members had destroyed everything that had made them successful. And then dramatically, they made a comeback. They released another album. They played an unforgettable live acoustic show for MTV. From the outside looking in, there always seemed to be a little hope that the problems would go away.

Rereading Rolling Stone's feature on the band in 1996, "To Hell and Back," makes it painfully obvious that Staley knew what he was doing could destroy him, but that he thought he had a handle on it. "I wrote about drugs, and I didn't think I was being unsafe or careless by writing about them. Here's how my thinking patter went: When I tried drugs, they were f—ing great, and they worked for years and now they're turning against me – and now I'm walking through hell, and this sucks. I didn't want my fans to think heroin was cool."

In the feature, Staley openly admitted that heroin had been a problem for him. But he refused to admit that it was still a problem for him then – even though he wore gloves to cover puncture wounds in his hands – wounds that it is hard to believe did not come at the hand of a needle. Eight years later, it finally killed him.

It sent chills through my spine reading this article in the dead of the night, eight years after it was written. Staley explained how much death had become a part of his life, as five of his friends had died in the two years before the article was written. He didn't say why, but I think we all could guess.

"I'm gonna be here for a long f—in' time," Staley promised then. "I'm scared of death, especially death by my own hand. I'm scared of where I would go."

Yet that's exactly how he went.

Denial is such a sad, sad thing.

Dan Lamothe is a Collegian Columnist.

© Boston Herald. Distributed by NEA, Inc.

Heroes by any measure

"What is Mass without U?"

This powerful slogan caught my eye as I descended the top floor stairs of Bartlett Hall yesterday afternoon.

Hopefully, this stairwell pit-up, and others like it, has succeeded in stirring more than a sentimental reaction from the UMass community.

Hopefully, there are a declined number of students and faculty members reading this article today, on account of their participation in the Save UMass rally in Boston. For those of you who are in attendance, however, I'd like to examine some modern day heroes, many of whom are fighting the state budget cuts for our university at this very moment.

Often, the word hero conjures up images of action figures like Star Wars' Luke Skywalker or GI Joe in the public mind. But, unfortunately, these super-muscular he-men represent an unrealistic version of a hero by human standards. Harrison Pope, a researcher at McLean Hospital in Belmont reports, "...a GI Joe Extreme purchased in 1997 for the study would have a bicep circumference of 26 inches, larger than any bodybuilder in history. A dedicated weight-lifter would have about 16-inch biceps."

The Cultural Indicators research team at the University of Pennsylvania's Annenberg School for Communication conducted a study in 1995, investigating the portrayal of women and minorities on television. It reported that for every "bad" man there are about two "good" men and for every "bad" woman about five "good" women in both prime time and Saturday morning programs. However, the study also reported that the proportion of "bad" old females is more than eight times that of "bad" old males. "For every elderly male villain there are 13 male heroes of the same age. But for every such heroin there is one elderly female villain."

So, playing into commercial media, are we to presume that only males with a "har-bouncer look", who either use steroids or lift weights compulsively, can be heroes? And while younger women are, for the most part, more "good" than bad, older women cannot be heroes? In addition, young, poor, ethnic males often play the stereotypical villain role.

Now, let us have a look at the true heroes of our day.

Seventy-seven year old Howard Drew is the 2003 Guinness world record holder for donating 28 gallons of blood in a fifty-year time span. His type O-positive blood has made him not only a universal donor, but also a hero in the world of blood donations as such regular donors make up the foundation of the nation's supply system.

> "...it eases my mind to know that our society continues to produce heroes at every turn."

Gloria Steinem is a writer and a champion of women's issues, including equal rights, equal pay, and abortion. In the early 1970s, she co-founded the Women's Action Alliance to develop women's educational programs. She founded Ms. Magazine in 1972, a revolutionary publication that challenges mainstream thinking about women's places in society, and currently advocates for the restoration of women rights in Afghanistan. Steinem tells CNN, "The focus on Afghanistan has made us realize that women need a foreign policy, that gender apartheid is as serious as racial apartheid, and that the shared characteristic of violent societies is a polarization of the gender roles."

Howard Drew is not noted on his muscle tone, nor is Gloria Steinem a woman who has stumbled upon nature's secret recipe for perpetual youth. Yet, each is aware of his/her individual power to make a world of difference; heroes indeed. Please note: a university blood drive will be taking place in early May.

Florida International University juniors, Damian Dunn and Caleb Mendez, spent their spring break volunteering at Ground Zero. The work was mundane: serving food, taking out trash and filling the hospitality racks; however, these broke college-students put the "villain" media stereotype to shame with their heroic works. In turn, they set an example for the thousands of broke-college students across the country whom, instead, headed to the sandy beaches of Florida for their spring break.

Damian tells CBS News that he will always remember one of the signs he saw as he walked around the site one night: "Continue to aspire and persevere." "I thought that was really beautiful," he reflects. Whereas Caleb had entertained the idea of being a firefighter before his experience at Ground Zero, after spending a morning in the firehouse with some of his heroes, he's made up his mind. He responds, "No question about it."

Despite media attempts to limit heroism to only a select few (particular to gender, age, race and class), it eases my mind to know that our society continues to produce heroes at every turn. Closing with Gloria Steinem's final remark, "So, I hope we remember the physicist who said that the flap of a butterfly's wing could change the weather hundreds of miles away. We each have a lot of power."

Sharon Stimpfle is a Collegian Columnist.

FRIDAY THE 13TH:

JASON VOORHEES
THAT'S WHAT'S GOING ON!!!

In case you missed the first nine installments...

By Sam Wilkinson And Mike Delano
KILL KILL KILL – AH AH AH

Never seen a Friday the 13th film? Never want to? Have no fear – we can easily recap all nine.

Friday the 13th – In the late 1970's, camp counselors arrive at Camp Crystal Lake. Promiscuous and foolish (and joined by a young Kevin Bacon), the counselors are murdered, one by one, until one Pamela Voorhees introduces herself as the mother of the soon-to-be-infamous Jason Voorhees. Attempting to kill the only counselor still living, she is beheaded. Best Death – While lying on a bed no more than a foot off the ground, an arrow from the camp's archery is pushed through Bacon's neck. While not "realistic" or "possible," the death is nifty if only because Bacon bleeds like a stuck pig. Notable Quote (tie) – "What you been smokin'? Did you just get off the spaceship? Columbian Gold, man, grass, hash, weed." –Cop...and... "We're going to play strip Monopoly. I'll be the shoe." – Counselor

Friday the 13th Part 2 – Uh-oh. Apparently pissed that a counselor beheaded his mother, Jason Voorhees appears, going crazy while wearing a pillowcase for a mask. Hardly scary looking, Jason reveals that he should be feared when he kills ten characters from the film. Unfortunately, he takes a machete to the shoulder that supposedly kills him forever, although it's clear, with seven more sequels to come, that Jason never truly dies. Best Death – Jeff and Sandra, having completed coitus for the evening, get impaled by a spear that Voorhees, inexplicably, carries around with him. Notable Quote – Question: "You stayin'?" Answer: "Yea, nothin' spoils a party faster than a drunk in a wheelchair." Wisdom: "That's crap."

Friday the 13th Part 3 (Or, Jason in 3-D!!!) – Emboldened by the movie's outrageous disco music and crazy 3-D graphics, Jason Voorhees returns to Camp Crystal Lake, viciously murdering his way through stereotype after stereotype. Ali (the Black Guy), Shelley (the Gettin-No-Play Nerd) and Chuck (the Outrageously Misplaced Hippie) all meet their grisly ends. More importantly, Jason gains the final piece of his gruesome puzzle: the infamous hockey mask. Best Death – Rick walks outside, concerned that a serial killer might be brutally murdering his friends, and is immediately picked up by the head and squeezed until his eyeball pops out.

Friday the 13th: The Final Chapter – Well, if it's called the Final Chapter, rest assured that there are only six more sequels left. After being taken to the morgue at the end of Part 3, Voorhees wakes up at the beginning of The Final Chapter. So, doing what he does, he his way back to, you guessed it, Camp Crystal Lake, where, again inexplicably, there are still more victims! Unfortunately, he runs into a force that no serial killer can stop: Corey Feldman. Best Death – Paul, who is speared in the groin while being held in midair by Voorhees. Honorable Mention – Crispin of Nazareth, no explanation needed. Notable Quote – "Jesus Christmas. Holy Jesus God Damn. Holy Jesus jumping Christmas shit!" –Doctor

Friday the 13th Part V: A New Beginning – Corey Feldman's character, now grown up, is sent to a psychiatric facility where he runs into (oh my god!), Jason Voorhees. Or so we think. It is actually the father of one of the facility's victims. Killing under the mask, the new Voorhees is far more creative than his stumbling predecessor. Best Death – Sticking a road flare in somebody's mouth, which makes said mouth glow bright red. Brilliant. Notable Quote – "Crap, my ass." —Bumpkin

Friday the 13th: Jason Lives! – So if you had been stalked by a crazed serial killer and were sure that he'd been buried, you'd definitely dig him up just to make sure. So would we. And so would Corey Feldman's full-grown Tommy Jarvis. Not surprisingly, Jason's back is struck by lightning and he awakens, going on a tremendous killing spree. An incredible 16 characters meet their demise in this film. Best Death – No question, the sheriff being folded in half at the very end of the film.

Friday the 13th Part VII (The New Blood) – Well, well, when a movie reaches its sixth sequel, it's time for psychics. In this case, a psychic girl awakens Jason, who had been chained to the bottom of Crystal Lake by Jarvis at the end of Part VI. Jason, pissed about his imprisonment, goes on a wild killing spree, making sure that 15 characters bite the big one. Best Death – A girl hides from Jason

Turn to RECAP, page 7

Hodder: Man-God

The legendary Friday the 13th movies wouldn't be the same without one name attached to them. No, I'm not talking about Sean Cunningham, who got the ball rolling by directing and producing the first Friday. Nor am I talking about Harry Manfredini, who's overarranged musical score is a tradition in the Friday movies. No, I am talking about one man who stands head and shoulders above them all, the man who bought life to Jason and forever cemented the hockey masked creep into our lexicon of horror villainy. And that man is Kane Hodder.

Yes, Kane Hodder – the man, the myth, the legend. Any and every true horror fan knows his name. Hodder is as synonymous with Jason as Robert Englund is with Freddy Krueger or Brad Dourif with Chucky. But why did Hodder become so beloved amongst horror fanatics – after all, he portrayed Jason in only four of the Friday the 13th movies, if you count the upcoming Jason X. And when you think about it, Jason Voorhees was only briefly in 1992's Jason Goes to Hell: The Final Friday, in which a blown-up Jason's essence was passed around from person to person.

Hodder, a stuntman and sometime actor, got forever entwined with the mythology of Friday the 13th because he gave the maniac something that the other actors who portrayed him lacked: presence. Only horror fans with the most esoteric knowledge possible could actually remember Warrington Gillette. But every person who's even given a passing glance to Fangoria magazine can name Hodder as Jason. That's why he is

Turn to KANE, page 7

Nine painful lessons learned from a Jasonathon

By Johnny Donaldson
KILLED BY HARPOON

Ah, Friday the 13th. Somehow, someway, this strangely beloved slasher series became a beacon of modern horror, spawning an endless horde of sequels over the course of its 22-year lifespan. The '80s were a boom time for the slasher film precisely because of the unparalleled success of a bunch of movies that detailed the exploits of hockey mask-wearing invulnerable psycho Jason Voorhees. Never mind that many of the F13 movies really sucked (a point proven by an all-day marathon of the movies, wherein it took about only 45 minutes or so to watch part 7 due to all the fast-forwarding) and that the rip-offs (such as The Burning) were even worse. We still got treated to nine of the "Jason movies" (as non-hip people are wont to call them) and this weekend us horror fans get to lay our eyes on the tenth (!) installment, Jason X, where Jason stalks through space (!!) and evil gets an upgrade.

But a strange thing happened while watching a marathon of Fridays on a Saturday. Yes, sometimes things got so painful that a usual non-drinker such as myself ended up drinking a couple of beers. Yes, we attendants to this "party" remarked upon our disgraceful social lives (we spent countless hours watching pathetic teenagers get hacked to death, for godsakes). But I realized just why college students across the country still love the rascally adventures of a silent, lumbering serial killer named Jason. Because it provides valuable life lessons that every teenager should heed.

1.) Never pee in the woods. Pee in the woods and your head gets chopped off. Actually, it's not just urinating that gets you in trouble, but smoking a joint, having sex, taking a shower, talking, eating, etc. The only people who seem to live are the ones who just run around calling out names. So, if you are alone in the woods at night and hear "ch-ch-ch-ah-ah-ah," don't do anything except run around shouting for your friends.

2.) The best time to skinny dip is at night. Apparently, skinny-dipping in the day is a no-no. I guess the best time to get nekkid for a swim is at night, in the cold, when you can't see anything, and a mad killer is likely stalking you with a harpoon.

3.) Summer camps should open in the autumn or winter. Watch a Friday the 13th movie, look closely at the trees. Hell the time, they don't have leaves on them. Hey, with the cold temperatures, it must make a great time for skinny-dipping.

4.) Crispin Glover is one funky-soulful white dude. Hey everybody! Watch George McFly get down with his bad self! In Part 4, The Final Chapter, that great actor Crispin Glover shows his funky dance moves, which involves him spasmodically wiggling around. I know one thing – it inspired me to go out and learn "the Crispin."

5.) If a hulking serial killer whose mode is permanently stuck on murder is chasing you, don't run. Stop and stand still, preferably while shooting a gun into his torso even though it obviously isn't working. Pretty self-explanatory, isn't it?

6.) Consumerism is bad. How else do you explain the inexplicable camera shot of a victim's American Express card floating in the mud after Jason, of course, spears her head with a fence rod? Or maybe it's Voorhees' way of saying, "American Express. Don't leave home without it."

7.) Pterodactyls still exist. At one point during the course of one of the movies there was a strange squawking sound in the woods that someone (I think Arts Editor Mike Delano, but I was pretty inattentive by this point) surmised was a prehistoric flying reptile. I say we assemble a scientific team to go to Camp Crystal Lake to find out. Hopefully, they'll make it out alive.

8.) If possible, do not be any of the following: black, male, brunette, sexually frustrated, sexually active, crazy, handicapped, loaded with personality or an adult. Only blond teenage girls (or, in one case, red-head teenage girls) without any discernible human characteristics survive.

9.) For the love of God, Friday the 15th movies aren't meant to be seen in a marathon. Trust me, even if you are the biggest Jason fan ever, it is a mistake to give an entire day over to watching Jason Voorhees slaughter nincompoop teenagers. Just read my opening paragraphs. Unless you are well versed in the humor of the late, great "Mystery Science Theater 3000" your head will implode. And even then, your smart-humor will probably devolve into boob jokes, in a sad cycle that will take days to clamor out of.

Okay, maybe if you do see a marathon of Friday movies, you'll be able to glean more nuggets of philosophical wisdom on the lines of Aristotle (well, Pauly Shore at least). I kept it to nine in honor of the previous nine Jasons. Let's see if ten gives us more great knowledge, or at least if it's better than the one where Jason fought the psychic girl.

Parrotheads Rejoice

By Jake D. Lewis
COLLEGIAN STAFF

JIMMY BUFFETT
Far Side of the World
Mailboat

Jimmy Buffett is one cool guy, plain and simple. Who is another 56-year old, soft rock performer that can pack his concerts with people from all cultures and age groups? Buffett's devoted legions of fans, dubbed "Parrot Heads" due to the colorful hats they wear, still flock to his shows, but will they descend upon his latest CD, Far Side of the World with as much vigor?

Most decidedly, yes. It's got a lot going for it, namely the catchy melodies and Buffett's hip handling of them. In a few songs, Buffett begins by speaking directly to the listener, acting as a tour guide as he explores the rhythms of exotic locales like the disc's title might suggest. He also answers burning questions from fans, I guess, like at the beginning of the classy "Altered Boy (Beware Paraguay)," cocktail lounge music put to words, when he explains how he gets the ideas for his songs. In "Autour De Rocher," a jazzy synthesizer pop souvenir, he narrates again, recalling the days he "used to rock around the rock" in a dilapidated Caribbean hotel where "If you looked between the cracks of the floorboards in the dancefloor, you'd see Hell." The anecdotal intros by Buffett indicate his laid-back attitude and the smooth appearance of the album.

Like the aforementioned song, Buffett keeps the general feel of the music to origins such as Africa and its Diaspora, a la Paul Simon's Rhythm of the Saints. The opening track, "Blue Guitar," appropriately starts things off with sounds of chanting, most clearly identified with South Asian/African roots, moves northwards towards Euro-pop in "Madamoiselle Voulez-Vouz Danser," changes directions towards the American south with bluegrass tunes like "Savannah Fare You Well," heads further towards the Equator with the reggae and zydeco sounds of the Carribean in "USS Zydecoldsmobile," and brings things full circle culminating in the title track which has clearly African influences. Buffett's musical journey to the far side of the world and back is one that's gladly taken by the listener.

The Far Side of the World is Buffett's 33rd album, and the first for his own company Mailboat Records, but with all these accomplishments, it feels like it lacks some of the humor in mirth in the music that he's often connected with in some of his more well-known songs, like "Cheeseburger In Paradise" or "Margaritaville." That's not to say that Buffett totally shies away from the area; in addition to the previously mentioned storytelling, which is a different type of amusement, there's the slapsticky number "What If the Hokey Pokey Is All It's Really About?" but isn't very memorable, apart from its profound title, because it has a lot of speaking, not much of a traceable melody, and repetition of the famous children's tune. On the other hand, I can already hear it being played as a drinking song, so its presence perhaps makes more sense for Parrot Heads than it first appears. If you're not part of this group, you may react much like myself and scratch your cranium for answers.

"Last Man Standing" may be the most ideal song for concert fodder due to its raucous yuppie pop sound, and it being one of the few that mentions anything close to sex, drugs or rock n' roll: "People passed out on the sofa / Crashed on the floor," as well as "Contending for the ladies favor/ Tasting every flavor." Apart from the partying in the song, Buffett also mentions the idea of retirement, but gives some hint of comfort as he returns to the refrain where he says he wants to be the last man standing, whatever that means.

The album finds Buffett more contemplative of his life, what he's done and those that he hasn't. The latter idea makes up the subject matter for the album's diamond-in-the-rough ballad, "Someday I Will." He is backed up with an acoustic and electric guitar, violins and a choir of singers, and it looks like the song could almost border on a power ballad. Buffett, though, keeps his croon calm and in his lower register, which is perhaps what gives his words such potency. "I'm not Martin Luther King/ I don't have a dream/ It's just sometimes I know/ That's the way I'm s'posed to go."

Jimmy Buffett remains one of music's largest icons in the new millennium, and on The Far Side of the World he proves that the passing of years hasn't changed his inimitable talent. Jimmy Buffett may be at a crossroads with many distant shores left to explore, but he's masterfully brought many of them together on this terrific album.

Fox News hardly a "No spin zone"

"We are America's choice for fair and balanced news, we are Fox News." Such is the battlecry for the network that has surpassed CNN as the most watched cable news source in America. Stop, read that last sentence again. It's true, Fox News has somehow become a source of news for millions of Americans, and as any like-minded person will tell you, it is anything but fair and balanced.

The usual complaint from the political right in this country is that the media is just "too liberal." Of course, they conveniently forget the fact that none of the major news sources in this country are liberal, but hey, why let the truth get in the way of a good story. However, there has never been a news source in the U.S that is so blatantly right wing as Fox News. At least Rush Limbaugh is open about his conservative agenda. At Fox News, the right wing agenda is disguised into reporting under the guise of "fair and balanced" news.

Take a look at the weeknight primetime lineup on Fox News and two of the biggest conservatives in the media reign supreme. At 8 p.m. it's "The O'Reilly Factor," starring Bill O'Reilly. While O'Reilly is a self-proclaimed "free thinker" and rejects the conservative labeling of him, in reality he thinks conservatively about 90% of the time. The extent of O'Reilly's "liberalism" is that he is anti-death penalty, and once asked George W. Bush a difficult question in an interview. Other than that, name a conservative view and O'Reilly has it. If Jesse Jackson, Hillary Clinton or the Rev. Al Sharpton have done anything questionable lately, you can be sure O'Reilly will rip them to shreds, but issues like the Bush administration's possible connection to Enron are quickly glossed over.

The 9 p.m. hour on Fox News brings "Hannity and Combs," which stars one of talk radio's most well known conservatives, Sean Hannity. Combs is "supposed" to be the liberal to counter Hannity, but rarely displays any sort of strong opinion, as Hannity often does. If one quote sums up Hannity's political standing in a nutshell, it has to be his statement last week that, "I don't mind paying my taxes as long as it goes to the military." Yea, because things like schools don't deserve any tax dollars, right Hannity?

Still, at least "The Factor" and "Hannity and Combs" are news editorial programs. Surely the conservative agenda would never make itself into the real news on Fox News. This is precisely the problem with Fox News; it is hard to distinguish what is news and what is opinion. The network seems to be beating the war drums 24/7 with jingoistic red, white and blue graphics and war-like music. Issues such as military strategy in Afghanistan are covered to no end, and alternatives to military responses are rarely touched upon, and usually mocked when they are presented. Case in point: shortly after the vote Congress took to allow for the war in Afghanistan to begin, California Congresswoman Barbara Lee, who voted against military action (the only Congressperson to do so), was interviewed by Bill O'Reilly. Instead of talking about the reasons why the recap

Turn to FOX, page 5

...continued from page 5

Voorhees in her sleeping bag, which Jason picks up and whips against a tree. Just hilarious. Well, as far as death goes anyway.

Friday the 13th Part VIII Jason Takes Manhattan – Wow. If Crystal Lake wasn't enough for Jason, maybe the Big Apple is. And maybe it would be, if 80 percent of the film didn't take place on a boat on its way to the NYC. Needless to say, The Scorpion King's Kelly Hu stops by for a cameo – she gets strangled. So it goes for most of the people on the vote. Those who escape make it to NYC only to find Jason. Oh sure, he drowned in the lake when he was a boy, but now that he's a big strong man, he can swim a hundred miles to NYC, no problem. Best Death – hands down, it would be Julius, who challenges Jason to a boxing match and almost wins, except he gives Voorhees a free shot, which Jason uses to behead Julius with a single punch.

Jason Goes To Hell (The Final Friday) – Again, the producers have no qualms in lying about sequels, as we clearly now that Jason now occupies space, ensuring that the ninth film the series was not the final Friday. Now, in this one, it is revealed that Jason anybody eating Jason's heart can become Jason, which is as stupid as it sounds. At the end, Jason is killed, his body being pulled to Hell, his mask being pulled to Hell by Freddy Krueger's mean right hand. Best Death – The Coroner's Assistant runs into his problem when Jason Voorhees pushes his face through a metal grating. Ouch. Notable Quote – "What do you think about when you hear these two words: Jason Voorhees." Interviewer. "I think of a little girl in a pink dress. Sticking a hot-dog through a donut." Creighton Duke, Bounty Hunter.

Kane

...continued from page 5

the only actor named on the Jason X poster. No Lexa Doig (she's the heroine, by the way). No Lisa Ryder. No Jonathan Potts. (To get off topic for a moment, Doig and Ryder both costar in the Kevin Sorbo TV show "Andromeda." The fact that I can actually identify them just shows the kind useless knowledge my cerebellum retains.) Hodder is Jason.

Hodder has several other credits to his belt. He was a guard slaughtered in Final Friday and played another security guard who gets killed in the really-really-cheesy-in-a-kind-of-good-way deadly genie shocker Wishmaster, where he got turned into a stained glass window! The movie was in fact a smorgasbord of modern horror great cameos: Hodder, Englund, Tony "Candyman" Todd and Reggie Bannister from the Phantasm movies.

Surfing his website, I notice some of Hodder's other credits. Let's see some of his other horror credits: Alligator 2, The Mutation, House 2 and 4, Pumpkinhead 2, and Watchers 4 among others. Okay, not the best filmography in Hollywood. Even the Jason movies where he took over (starting with part seven) weren't all that great. But when he took over Jason – well, a star was born. I don't know how to say it – he brought gravity to Jason. That's why horror fans love him. With a cover page devoted to Jason, it makes perfect sense that we should celebrate the man who made him.

Johnny Donaldson is a Collegian staff member and is non-threatening even in a hockey mask.

To experience the true joy of leaving the clean-shaven ordinary world far behind, log on to mtv.com where you can check out the dates for MTV's Campus Invasion 2K2 and register to win a Jeep Liberty Sport of your very own. Jeep 4x4s and MTV's Campus Invasion 2K2—the ultimate ways to experience the world of rock, in every sense of the word.

Jeep
THERE'S ONLY ONE

No purchase necessary. Must be a residing U.S. citizen 18 years of age or older and have an active online account on or before 3/17/02 to enter. Contest ends 4/28/02. Sweepstakes not open to employees and immediate families of MTV Networks, Viacom International, Inc., CBS, Inc., or affiliated companies and subsidiaries or employees of DaimlerChrysler. Void in Alaska and Hawaii and wherever prohibited or restricted by law. For official rules, go to mtv.com. Jeep is a registered trademark of DaimlerChrysler.

Getting the diploma is the easy part.
"When you're in your twenties, you know that standing in your way between college and the places you're supposed to go is: resumés, cover letters, rejection letters, soul-searching, résumés, being dirt poor, and more rejection letters. Quarterlife Crisis is all about the 'middle crisis' for what might be the hardest decade of your life."
—The Washington Post

Quarterlife Crisis
by
Alexandra Robbins
&
Abby Wilner
ISBN: 1-58542-106-5
Published by Tarcher/Putnam
U.S. $14.95/Canada $21.95
Available at your favorite bookstore or through amazon.com

FREE
Join us for a
Law School
Admissions & LSAT
Strategy Seminar
Thursday, May 2nd, 7:00-8:30pm
at the Amherst Kaplan Center
KAPLAN
Space is limited!
To register, call 1-800-KAP-TEST
kaptest.com

...lace.

ZANNA
Clothing, Shoes & Accessories for Women
Amherst Northampton Williamstown
www.zanna.com

CINEMARK
The Best ...
CINEMARK AT HAMPSHIRE MALL
367 Russell St. (413) 586-4230
Schedule for Friday 4/19 - Thursday 4/25
DIGITAL SURROUND SOUND IN ALL AUDITORIUMS
Purchase Tickets Online @ cinemark.com
SHOWS BY NUMBER (R) 12:00 4:10 7:30 10:20*
THE SCORPION KING (PG13) 12:35 4:50 7:45 10:25*
DIAMOND LANES (R) 12:05 4:05 7:25 10:30*
NATIONAL LAMPOONS VAN WILDER (R) 12:45 4:35 7:50 10:15
HIGH CRIMES (PG13) 12:30 4:20 7:15 10:05
PANIC ROOM (R) 12:40 4:30 7:40 10:35
THE SWEETEST THING(R) 12:20 4:10 7:20 10:00
GHOSTBUSTERS BALL (R) 12:25 7:35
THE BOOGIE (G) 12:25 4:00 7:10 10:10
DEATH TO SMOOCHY (R) 12:50 4:45 7:45 10:20
CLOCKSTOPPERS (PG) 12:55 4:25 7:05 9:30
BLADE 2 (R) 4:15 10:05
ICE AGE (PG) 12:10 2:15 4:25 6:45 9:00
THE SWEETEST THING 12:20 4:10 7:20 10:00
Senior Movie 4/29/02 $500 SHOWS doors open at 11:45am
*NO PASSES NO ATTRACTIONS
Tickets & Showtimes cinemark.com

ALERT
GRE Changes Ahead!
On October 1st, 2002, two essays will replace the GRE Analytical section.
Learn more about the GRE
Join us for a FREE
test strategy seminar
Saturday, May 4th, 11:00am-12:30pm
at the Amherst Kaplan Center
Call or visit us online today to enroll!
KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST
kaptest.com

College Self-Storage
Monthly/Annual Rentals
College Payment Plans
Minutes From Campus
Electronic Card Access
Security Fenced Perimeter
Multi-Size Units
Route 9, Belchertown
323-9792

TAPESTRY Health
Affordable and Confidential
Gyn Exams
Birth Control
Pregnancy Testing
Emergency Contraception
HIV/STD Testing
Quit Smoking
Bangs Center, 70 Boltwood Walk, Amherst
16 Center Street, Northampton
(413) 586-2539 or
www.tapestryhealth.org

Home of the 50 lb bag of ICE
Largest selection of Cigars in Hadley and Amherst.
Special Orders Welcome
BEER WINE LIQUOR ICE
KEGS CIGARS CLOVES
CIGARETTES TOBACCO
Amex, Disc, MC, Visa, Debit Accepted
339 Russell Street (Route 9)
Hadley, MA
Hours Mon-Sat, 9am-11pm
(413) 584-8374

North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
www.northamherstmotors.com
549-RENT

POTTERS
AUTO & TRUCK RENTALS
• Cars • Mini Vans
• Trucks • SUV's
• Cargo Vans
• 15 Passenger Vans
• Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older
• Direct Billing To Insurance Co
• MHEC Rates
(On bus route)

Fox

continued from p.6

Congresswoman voted against military action, she was mocked by O'Reilly to no avail to the point where O'Reilly seemed to be questioning the woman's sanity.

While Fox News does deserve some credit for at least allowing opposite views to be expressed on the network, they don't deserve credit for how the views are presented. The dissenting view is usually immediately countered by an unrelenting conservative view and quickly silenced (or the interview ended) when it appears that the opposite side is actually getting their point across.

Someone defending Fox News might say that they have the right to report the news in any way they see fit, or that they are providing a different perspective on the news. While this may be true, and there is nothing inherently wrong with a conservative point of view, it becomes a problem when someone's world-view becomes presented as fact.

It should be noted that Fox News is not alone in its poor news coverage. All of the networks are dominated by the ideal that entertainment is more important than journalism. Because of this, news coverage has plummeted in this country and become increasingly entertainment oriented, and extremely pro-business because they all are all owned by huge corporations. It just so happens that Fox News leads the pack. It's no wonder that countries like England, which don't have news sources that are slaves to advertisers and the status quo, have far more informed citizens than the United States does. That statement may hurt, but hey, "Info Nuts" like "The Factor" is a "No Spin Zone."

Kurt Pelton is a Collegian Staff Member without an ounce of spin in him.

Illmatic still sounds so fresh, so clean

There are very few hip-hop albums released within the last 10 years that can truly be considered classics. Too often the focus is put upon including one or two hot singles on a full-length album and then filling the rest of the time with mediocre, if not horrible tracks. However, there was one album released in 1994 that not only proved that hip-hop artists could create an entire album filled with bangin' tracks, but, in the process, changed the way anyone viewed hip-hop albums forever.

Illmatic contains only 10 tracks. However, each song is so solid that the listener is left satisfied with such a minimal amount of songs. In addition, there are no filler tracks or skits on this album, which means that you get what you pay for and that is a collection of some of the best songs ever recorded in rap music.

The first standout song is "New York State of Mind" in which DJ Premier lays down a sick piano loop and samples Rakim saying "New York state of mind" as the chorus. Premier's use of the Rakim sample proves that Nas is in the same class as the pioneer rapper and in some respects might even be better than his rap counterpart. Nas proves his worthiness as he spits lines such as: "I'm talkin' rappers to a new plateau/ Through rap slow/ My rhymin' is like a vitamin/ Hell without a capsule." He certainly got the message out that there was a new style in rap and Nas was eager to bring it out to the masses.

Another noteworthy cut is "One Love," which acts as a letter to one of Nas' homeboys who is locked up in prison. Q-Tip comes through with the tight production as he samples the Heath Brothers' xylophone piece "Smiling Billy Suite" to complement Nas' rhyming cadence. The track opens up with the previously mentioned prisoner telling his cell mate that he just got a letter from his man Nas, which leads into the song that explains to him what is going on in the world that he has left behind. The lyrics "What up kid/ I know shit is rough/ Doin your bid/ When the cops came/ You shoulda slid to my crib/ Fuck it black/ No time to looking back/ It's done/ Plus congratulations I heard you got a son" are so descriptive that the listener is almost transported into the same jail cell that Nas' boy is in.

From front to back, Illmatic is a true representation of the new era of hip-hop that came around 1994. However, it never once has sounded out of date. Many times albums are considered classic but when listened to 10 years down the line it is obvious that they sound too old school. I agree that Public Enemy's It Takes A Nation of Millions or Beastie Boys' License To Ill are certified hip-hop classics, but they have lost their uniqueness throughout time. That is not the case with Illmatic. True it represents the sound of the mid 90's, but I could put it on my turntable today and sweat it was released just yesterday.

Eric Goodman is a Collegian correspondent

The Cranes swoop down on Boston

By Kevin Monahan
COLLEGIAN STAFF

There are many female lead singers out there who believe that sounding like a small child adds an extra layer of cuteness to their fluffy music. Then there's Alison Shaw, vocalist for the highly dramatic rock band the Cranes. Shaw's voice may sound like that of a little girl, but it does not carry the same effect that vocalists of the like have. Shaw's vocals range from disturbing to soul wrenching to downright creepy. On their most recent LP, Future Songs, the Cranes have once again presented us with a collection of emotionally wrought tunes complete with heartfelt vocals and a vastly more complex soundscape.

"It's definitely more atmospheric than what we've done in the past," says Shaw. Considering the Cranes previous releases, it's hard to tell what is meant by "atmospheric." Their music is often sweetly melodic, then suddenly unforgiving. "I think 'Fragile' is the song I like most [on the album]. It is the most fun to perform."

Performing is something the Cranes have been doing a lot of lately. Their Future Songs tour is set to hit Boston tonight, and Shaw gave some insight to the Cranes' methods in a recent conversation with the Collegian.

"We're definitely very excited [about touring]. In the studio it's usually just Jim and I. But onstage, there are at least five people so it's a different dynamic."

The Cranes formed in the mid-eighties in Portsmouth, England. The band's name was taken from the machines that loomed in the Portsmouth skyline. The partnership of Alison Shaw and her brother Jim has always been the core of the band as other members have came and went. Combining the art rock aesthetics of the time into something distinctly unique, their sound sometimes resembles the experimental industrial music of bands like Einsturzende Neubauten and the Swans or the ethereal sounds of the Cocteau Twins and Dead Can Dance. Their first release Tube was not widely available. It was their mini-LP Sell Non Sell that caught the attention of John Peel. After doing a Peel Session, they were quickly snatched up by Dedicated records. After releasing several EP's and their first full length LP, Wings of Joy, the band was invited to accompany the Cure on their 1992 Wish tour.

The tour turned out to be a very influential experience, inspiring the 1992 album Forever, which carried the single "Jewel," which was later remixed by Robert Smith and Jim Foetus. Forever brought about a more mellow sound for the band which was later expanded upon on their next release, Loved, which featured the song "Ldies." Their last album, Population 4, was released in 1997.

"I moved to London, took a drama course and began writing material for the new album," says Alison about the band's hiatus. The dark nature of the Cranes' music has brought about a flurry of genres that were eager to be tacked onto the band's name.

"We've never been too keen on labels," says Alison. "I'll admit that we are brooding but not in a negative way."

The Cranes will be playing with Mogwai and Thrush at the Middle East in Cambridge tonight. Tickets are available at the venue or by calling (617) 951-2000.

MATTRESSES
FUTONS
BEDS
ETC...
253-2337
SLEEPY HOLLOW BED CO.
308 COLLEGE ST. (Rt 9) AMHERST 253-BEDS
TO NORTHAMPTON
TO BELCHERTOWN

Rental Office
1040 N.Pleasant St. #410
Amherst, MA 01002
413.549.0145
NEW PUFFTON VILLAGE
Serving All Of Your Rental Needs

WRITE FOR ARTS

Chance Perspective
Got a DJ?
413.883.1144
Private Parties
Graduation Parties
Numark gemini PYLE PRO

I AGREE WITH ELAINE!
www.knowmercy.org

Old Amherst Ale House
Live Music
NO COVER
Must be 21 with a valid ID
Rt. 116 South Amherst
1-1/2 miles South of Amherst
Center on the Mt. Holyoke Bus rt.
APRIL 27 - Catfish Blue
APRIL 28 - Ben Sidlinger & Phil Wiser
10pm - 12:30am

IT'S MORE THAN A GAME
A basketball tourney plus!!!
Velcro Wall
B-ball bounce house
Fenway Fantasy HR derby
Slam dunk contest & more
Prizes & Giveaways!!!
Monster.com Presents -
Traveling Matt
Natural Descent
WWW.HAIGISHOOPLA.COM
(413) 545-5689
new balance
Haigis Hoopla
University of Massachusetts Sport Management Program
We would like to thank our sponsors:
Kaplan Cape Cod Potato Chips Coca Cola
Inside Stuff UMass Food Services Spalding Ultimate Fitness
Masslive.Com Nantucket Nectars Daily Collegian
Bueno y Sano New Balance Lazer 99.3 Healthsouth

Absolute Last Chance!! to get your Senior Portrait Taken by Davor Photography
Photos will be taken through Friday April 26, 2002 in Campus Center 901 and 902. Make your appointment at www.ouryear.com and use the School Code 147.
Order your copy of the 2002 Index when you get your photo taken, at www.walsworthyearbooks.com, 800-929-1503 or at 304 Student Union!

Matt Brady's All-Time Team

Schmidt's combination of speed and defense was unrivaled

1.	Cobb	LF
2.	Wagner	SS
3.	Ruth	RF
4.	Mays	CF
5.	Gehrig	1B
6.	Schmidt	3B
7.	(4/30)	2B
8.	(5/02)	C
9.	(5/07)	P
10.	(5/09)	Man.

Best Of The Rest: Third Basemen

1. Eddie Mathews
2. Brooks Robinson
3. George Brett

This is part six of a 10-part series portraying the 10 members of "Brady's All-Time Team" – a lineup consisting of the best Major League Baseball players ever.

"I couldn't believe my eyes the first time I saw him. He had that much potential." – Tommy Lasorda on Mike Schmidt

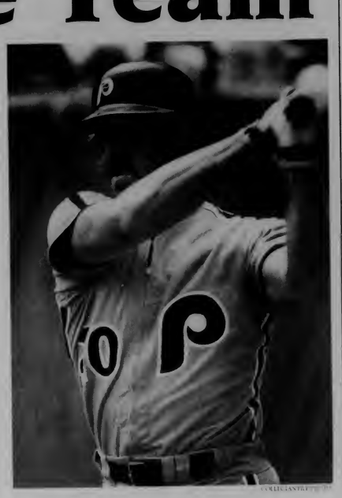
Credentials (all-time rank): 548 home runs (9); 1595 RBI (24); 1507 walks (15); three-time National League MVP (1980, '81, '86); led majors in home runs six times; 10 gold gloves (nine consecutive, 1976-84).

The Argument: On paper, Mike Schmidt does not look like a guy who belongs on an all-time team. Aside from homers, the only other category that he is in the top ten in is strikeouts, which is obviously not a good thing. But more needs to be considered than numbers in almost every case. Schmidt played in a time when pitching was far superior to hitting – aside from the 48 homers he hit in 1980, he only needed between 36 and 40 to lead the majors his other five times. To give you an idea, in 1977, the Phillies led the NL in average with a .279 clip and the Cardinals, who finished in third place in the NL that year, hit a measly 96 longballs.

Eddie Mathews was a fantastic-hitting third-sacker who was always overshadowed by Hank Aaron. As a tandem, the two hit more back-to-back homers than any duo in history. His 512 home runs put him in a tie for 14th on the all-time sheet. But the fact that his average wasn't much better than Schmidt's and that Schmidt was an amazing defensive player put the Phillie ahead of the late Mathews.

Brooks Robinson was a pretty weak-hitting third baseman in almost every category. Because of longevity he hit 250 home runs, and got nearly 3000 hits, but he is 12th all-time in games played. But even if he had hit .240 for his career, he might make this team, because in terms of defensive disparity at a position, there might be no greater gap. Robinson's combination of fantastic range and near-flawless glovework put him far above even Schmidt, who notched 10 gold gloves. Every year from 1960-75, Robinson brought home the gold glove at third. And his defensive plays in the 1970 World Series were enough to win him the MVP for the playoffs. If you get a chance to watch old videos of him, do it...it's art.

George Brett was the guy who you either loved or hated. Everybody remembers the infamous pine tar incident and can visualize the easily excitable Brett going ballistic on the umpire who called him out. He was a near-perfect combination of average and power without being too spectacular in either category. He could lace out the doubles like nobody in his time, and his defense was strong as well. And his .390 clip in 1980 was the best challenge at hitting .400 since Ted Williams did so in 1941.



What you didn't know: Schmidt is one of those guys who doesn't have much written about him. He's just one of those guys who wasn't in the media's attention for the majority of his career. He was just plain great in a time where a lot of players were just plain mediocre.

Third basemen like Mathews, who could hit tape measure home runs, had come around before Schmidt did. Defensive stalwarts like Robinson and Jimmy Collins had played the field in a stellar manner well before Schmidt came along. But perhaps not since Willie Mays had the game seen someone so dominant a power hitter and so efficient with the glove. He was selected The Sporting News' Player of the Decade for the '80s.

Schmidt is an incredibly funny case, as he is the best player at a position that isn't all that stacked for talent – something obvious when it is considered that only nine players at the hot corner are in the Hall of Fame. Second fewest is catcher with 13. Also, Schmidt played during the '80s, when baseball was very much out of the limelight. The 1981 strike left a sour taste in many fans' mouths that did not subside until the careers of such greats as Schmidt, Pete Rose and Jim Rice were pretty much over.

Having Schmidt on the team will make the left-side defense about as good as it can get without taking away from the offense, and his right-handed power in the six slot will put managers through fits going through the lefty-righty gauntlet of this lineup.

Matt Brady is a Collegian columnist.

Mike Schmidt was as solid as they come.

U. Minn newspaper files complaint over police actions in riots

By Joanna Dornfeld
MINNESOTA DAILY (U. MINNESOTA)

(U-WIRE) MINNEAPOLIS – The Minnesota Daily filed a complaint Tuesday with the Minneapolis Police Department's Internal Affairs Division.

The complaint claimed officers infringed on Daily journalists' First Amendment rights during the April 7 riot following the Gophers NCAA hockey championship, Daily Editor in Chief Mike Wereschagin said.

"We feel what happened to the photographers and reporters was wrong, and this is the sort of thing police should not do," he said.

According to written statements in the complaint, a photographer was pushed to the ground from behind and kicked in the back. When a reporter went to help the photographer, she was sprayed directly in the face with chemical irritant. Two other photographers were sprayed in the face with chemical irritant and hit repeatedly with a riot stick.

Two photographers had press passes displayed in the middle of their chests, and the others told police officers they were members of the press, according to the complaint.

"The Minnesota Daily strongly objects to what we feel was the specific and systematic targeting of members of the press by the Minneapolis Police Department," according to the complaint.

Initially, Wereschagin said, Internal Affairs told him only individual journalists could file complaints.

After talking with The Daily's lawyer, Wereschagin and Daily President Ben Esley decided to file a complaint on behalf of the entire organization.

The Daily is concerned Minneapolis police might have tried purposely to prevent Daily staff from documenting the events, Wereschagin said.

"I'm hoping that it was not intentional, that it was not a concerted effort to stop this news from becoming public," he said.

Minneapolis police Sgt. Medaria Arradondo said police Chief Robert Olson is pleased The Daily filed a complaint with Internal Affairs.

"He's glad that the process and the system of making a formal complaint is working," Arradondo said. The Daily also presented a copy of the complaint to Minneapolis Mayor R.T. Rybak's office.

"He was present at the meeting, and I think he ought to know where it's at," Wereschagin said.

Wereschagin met with Rybak, Olson and City Council member Paul Zerby, who represents the University of Minnesota area, April 10 to discuss police treatment of journalists during the riot.

Rybak could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

GRAPHICS
the Collegian is hiring for next semester
College Street Motors
it's spring time!
CAMPUS PARKING NOTICE
21 29 47 50 54 67 North Village Apartments
come talk to Shimauli, Mike or Morgan
or call 545-1864
105 Campus Center Basement

www.dailycollegian.com
Fully paid tuition and stipend
for high academic achievers
in science and engineering admitted to
the inaugural class of the Master of Science
program in the Management of Technology
at the
University of New Hampshire
Whittemore School of Business and Economics
- 2-year trimester format
- Focused on managing technological change and the development and commercialization of new technologies
- Emphasis on team projects and problem solving
- Industry sponsored projects and internships
- Classes scheduled to begin September 2002 upon review by the University System of New Hampshire

Expand your potential and put your career on the fast track by joining the inaugural class.
For more details call 603-862-3370
or email warren.lackstrom@unh.edu at the Hamel Center for the Management of Technology and Innovation
www.mba.unh.edu

Kaila Holtz is no stranger to the batter's box.

drive

continued from page 14

"I loved volleyball and basketball, but I knew I had more of a future in softball," she recalls. "Softball was always my main priority."

It was this priority that caused her to send a profile and videotape to Sortino in the spring of her junior year of high school. Holtz did the same for every other Top 25 squad in the nation. Exactly one of 25 responded to Holtz's queries. The other 24 are probably wishing they had given her tape a second glance.

"I saw a big strong kid who looked like she's physically going to be capable," remembers Sortino about Holtz's video. "Then when I talked to her, I was just so impressed. She was so incredibly mature, and wanting to pitch at the Division I level at this country."

The 24th-year coach flew out to Vancouver to see her recruit, and during the mere 36-hour stay, she experienced one of the "greatest trips of [her] life," Sortino says.

"She got no sleep all weekend," Holtz recalls.

Holtz went from unheralded and unrecruited by the Division I community, to earning a spot on one of the East's most renowned programs. But coming in, the young freshman had the tough task of replacing a certain pitcher named Danielle "Harry" Henderson, who just so happens to have achieved any and all things in the softball world (including national player of the year and a gold medal at the Sydney Olympics). But Holtz didn't have to try to emulate one of the game's most successful players in history.

"You have a Danielle Henderson once in a lifetime," says Sortino about her former Honda Award winner. "I think the pressure for Kaila was the pressure of the winning tradition of the program."

But if she felt any sort of heat, it wasn't reflected on the mound and on the stats sheet. As a freshman, Holtz led the team in almost every pitching category imaginable. And also hit .335 with 24 RBI. But being the new girl on campus didn't have much significance, she maintains.

"When you're a freshman, you really don't know anything about positioning or jostling for a starting spot, you just go and work your butt off," Holtz says.

Now as a junior, Holtz, an Exercise Science major, has shared staff ace duties with Atlantic 10 Pitcher of the Year Jen Hadley. Like a fine wine, Holtz has improved with age. With a 1.03 ERA and a 16-5 record (with nine shutouts), she has used her summer experience to become even more dominant.

"Playing for her national team has given her more confidence; she came back this fall throwing the ball harder than I've ever seen," says Henderson, now an assistant under Sortino. "You can see that it terms of teams that she's pitched against this year, like Arizona and Stanford."

"She's not a ball-thrower any more, she throws each pitch with a purpose," states her backstop Jamie Cahalan. Not surprisingly, she has been able to develop a special relationship with her pitcher. Cahalan has caught all of Holtz's games, but they're also roommates.

Still, don't think for one second that the battery mates are two of a kind.

"My closest relationship is with Jamie because we work every day together, and for us to be on the same page is so important," Holtz says. [But] we're very different people. I'm extremely type-A personality, and she's a little more laid back," she laughs.

"We're dynamically different, complete opposites," Cahalan concurs.

For now, Holtz's mind is now set on this season, and making it to the College World Series. But down the line, she'll be looking to earn a spot on her homeland's team in the 2004 Summer Olympics.

"I think I have a really good shot because I work with people like Coach Sortino and Harry every day," Holtz says. "They know what it takes to make a great pitcher, and they know how to get that out of me."

She isn't the only one with visions of Athens.

"My greatest dream as a coach would be Danielle Henderson pitching for the United States, and Kaila Holtz pitching for Canada, and I can sit in the middle," Sortino smiles.

The 2004 Olympics might be halfway around the world and two years away, but for Kaila Holtz, it's right around the corner.

RICHARD BLAKE/COLLEGIAN

Watch out. Holtz delivers to the plate.

I AGREE WITH ELAINE!
www.knowmercy.org

CAUTION
MCAT Changes Ahead!
Learn more about the MCAT
Join us for a FREE
test strategy seminar
Thursday, April 25th, 7:00-8:30pm
Wednesday, May 8th, 7:00-8:300pm
at the Amherst Kaplan Center
Call or visit us online today to enroll!
KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST
kaptest.com

FREE
Business School Admissions & GMAT Strategy Seminar
Tuesday, April 30th, 7:00-8:30pm
at the Amherst Kaplan Center
J. Serrano, Reg. Dir. Kaplan Test Prep graduate Harvard Business School '01
KAPLAN
Space is limited!
To register, call 1-800-KAP-TEST
kaptest.com

Castaway Lounge
Will proudly present another successful
Amateur Night
Monday May 6th starting at 7 pm

PENTHOUSE PET DOMINIQUE ST.CROIX
◆ Cash prizes awarded
◆ All ladies over 18 must apply in person
◆ Open on Mondays at 3pm with 10 Beautiful Exotic Entertainers. Food and Prizes given away
Open Tuesdays - Saturday 11am - 1am
VIP Room available for private engagement parties
Phone# 413. 665. 8733

Grand Opening!
celebrate with us
IN CELEBRATION OF OUR NEW LOCATION WE EXTEND AN INVITATION TO SAVE!
Thursday, 4/25 20% off UMASS gifts
FRIDAY, 4/26 FRUGAL FRIDAY
BUY 1 CLOTHING ITEM, GET 50% OFF A CLOTHING ITEM OF EQUAL OR LESSER VALUE
WIN GREAT PRIZES!
SEE STORE FOR DETAILS
UMASS University of Massachusetts UNIVERSITY STORE
Campus Center • Phone: (413) 545-2619
www.umass.bkstr.com

Campus MTV MUSIC TELEVISION® invasion 2k2 PERFORMANCES BY:
NICKELBACK
DEFAULT
injected
Friday April 26, 2002
Mullins Center
7 pm show 6 pm doors
$20 tix on sale now at Mullins Center Box Office
And .... don't miss .....
Free MTV | 2 stage with starsailor at 5:30 pm
performing live at Mullins Plaza
and check out the MTV "Interactive Music Expo"
happening on Mullins Ice Rink Parking Lot 12-5pm
Hear new music, get free stuff and more !!!!!!!
Sponsored by SMG
CHECK OUT MTV.COM FOR MORE INFO
© MTV NETWORKS. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED. Jeep is a registered trademark of DaimlerChrysler
HERBAL ESSENCES
Jeep
THERE'S ONLY ONE
GAMECUBE

DAILY COLLEGIAN

CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Fraternities * Sororities Clubs * Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 with the easy CampusFundraiser.com three hour fundraising event. Does not involve credit card applications. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact CampusFundraiser.com at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campus-fundraiser.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. - Now Available, 1&2 bedroom apts. Leases begin June, July, Aug or Sept. 1 year lease. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywine-apts.com stop by or call (413) 549-0600.

Puffton Village Apt. Newly renovated great location. Partially furnished three bedrooms includes gas/ grill available June 1st 549-8320.

Take over lease. Puffton 3-bedroom, June 1st. 549-5249.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Summer Sublet with lease option in fall. Boulders. Available 7/1. 256-2373.

Take over our lease. Available June 1 fall option 3 BR upgrade in Puffton call 549-1474.

Take over a lease. 971 N. Pleasant St. Apt. for rent for June, fits 3 folks. Call now! 549-0069.

Condos 3 bedrooms, hardwood floors, study area in basement, cable, telephone (Internet access), in all bedrooms and study NOW SHOWING for JUNE and SEPTEMBER NO FEES. www.amherstlimitedrealty.com 253-7879

CENTER OF TOWN 1,2,3 bedroom apts., hardwood floors, NOW SHOWING for JUNE and SEPTEMBER NO FEES www.amherstlimitedrealty.com 253-7879

COMPUTERS

Color Laptop $99 Pentium tower/ CD Rom $99 with color monitor $139. HURRY! 413-584-8857.

EMPLOYMENT

Promoters wanted!! Student Travel Services is looking for individuals to promote spring break. Enjoy unlimited earning potential and free travel while building a sold resume! Call 800-648-4849. Or visit www.ststravel.com

Computer Programmer/FORTRAN for economic modeling firm, contact: Fred Treyz, REMI, 433 West St., Amherst, MA 01002, info@remi.com.

Painters P/F time 1-3 yrs experience. Michael 367-9810.

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individual, full and part time positions available immediately. Only those able to work the upcoming summer should apply. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413)584-4746.

Experienced yard help. $6.50 hrly. References 549-0413 early.

EMPLOYMENT

SUMMER HELP Cape Cod Ice seeks drivers and P/T 2nd Shift Supervisor in our Sandwich location. Interested candidates call 508-888-8390 for more info.

Be the Campus Red Bull connection. Join our team and help build one of the world's leading brands, you'll have a blast while gaining invaluable marketing experience. You'll even earn a little extra spending cash. Think about it. It's a lot less dangerous than selling term papers! Apply at redbull-college.com.

Models Wanted. Liquid Curves Entertainment is seeking FEMALE talent for nude and/or erotic modeling. No experience necessary. Make money instantly. Apply online at http://www.liquidcurves.com or call our offices at (413) 539-6782.

EMPLOYMENT

Nantucket Island Summer Job opportunity beginning mid June office Assistant with good computer & telephone skills, miscellaneous errand running. Salary & housing 508-228-3942 or send resume to Rafael Osona Auctions P.O. box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02584.

SUMMER INTERNSHIPS Earn $3000 to 7000++ and gain valuable business experience working for the UMASS Official Campus Telephone Directory. Excellent Advertising, Sales, and Marketing opportunity. GREAT RESUME BOOSTER! Call Paul at AroundCampus, Inc. 1-800-466-2221 ext. 288. www.aroundcampus.com

ENTERTAINMENT

Rock Band available for end of year parties free of charge check out our website, oversightrocks.com + contact Charlie @ (508) 243-6091.

FOR RENT

Amherst Center 1 bedroom, off street parking, starting June 1st –early move in available. Call 253-1180.

2 bedroom apt. on bus route avail. June 1 w/fall option $905/mo heat hot water included 549-1883.

FOR SALE

P.S. 2 w/6 games, 2 controllers, DVD remote, mem. Card $400.00 O/B/O. 256-2373.

NEW! CD burner HP internal 8x4x32 Speed BO 259-9382

HOUSE FOR RENT

Hadley 5 bedroom plus. Newer home five minutes from UMASS. June occupancy $2600.00 month. 549-4270.

ROOM FOR RENT

Looking for 1/2 roommates to share apartment for summer. Call 549-2676.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female(s) to share 2 bedroom Brandywine Apt. starting June 1. 549-1988.

Sublet in Sunderland with possible fall option. $375/mo on bus route. One bedroom available. 665-0377.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

SUMMER SUBLET

Bolders 2 bedroom Apt with possible fall option. Reduced monthly rent 256-2365.

1 bedroom Brandywine rent nego. 3rd floor facing pond. Jason 549-8319.

3 bedroom fully furnished for summer sublet. Great location on rt9 near bus. Call Morgan or Ilana 253-4927.

Brandywine. 2 bdrm. Available June 1. Call 549-1988.

TO SUBLET

3 bedroom available June 1st for summer Sublet or lease takeover, Puffton village 549-1661.

2 Bedroom apartment partially furnished available June 1st to sublet w/option to lease on bus route. 413-549-9612.

TRAVEL

Mexico/ Caribbean or Central America $300 round trip plus tax. Europe $169 one way plus tax. Other world wide destinations cheap. Book tickets on line www.airtech.com or (212) 219-7000.

WANTED

Good Condition bedroom set & desk needed call 546-2609.

HSCN

Housing Services Cable Network

2	CBS-4
3	NESN
4	Fox Sports NE
5	PBS-57
6	HSCN Movie Channel
7	WB-22
8	HSCN Movie Channel
9	TV Guide Channel
10	FOX-61
11	ABC-40
12	NBC-22
13	International Channel
14	MNET
15	HSCN Info Channel
16	ESPN
17	ESPN-2
18	UNC-19
19	ESPN Classic
20	Good Sports Channel
21	CNN
22	CNN HL
23	Weather Channel
24	Learning Channel
25	History Channel
26	A&E
27	Discovery Health
28	Food Network
29	NASA
30	Home & Garden TV
31	Travel Channel
32	Lifetime
33	CNBC
34	Tech TV
35	BET
36	UPN-38
37	USA
38	TNN
39	MTV
40	CMT
41	VH-1
42	TNT
43	TBS
44	E! Entertainment
45	Sci-Fi Channel
46	Court TV
47	Nick at Nite
48	Comedy Central
49	Cartoon Network
50	Game Show Network
51	TV Land
52	BOX Family
53	Univision
54	Telemundo
55	College TV Network
56	C-SPAN
57	C-SPAN2
58	Bloomberg Television

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?

Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, Basement, UMass.

Client: _____ Date: _____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30AM-5PM Mon-Fri 413-545-3500

Student rate: 10 cents/word/per day Non-student rate: 20 cents/word/per day

Headings

- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — APRIL 25, 2002

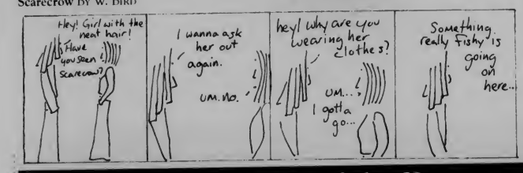
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		CPTV Auction
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	Survivor: Marquesas (N)		CSI: Crime Scene Investigtn.		Agency "The Understudy"		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Survivor: Marquesas (N)		CSI: Crime Scene Investigtn.		Agency "The Understudy"		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Bachelor: The Women Tell All	Bachelor (N)			Primetime Thursday		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	NSYNC: Bigger Than Live	Charmed (N) (In Stereo)			News		Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Friends (N)	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	ER "Brothers & Sisters" (N)	Charmed (N) (In Stereo)	Home Imp.	Blind Date	Blind Date
WTXX	20	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	NSYNC: Bigger Than Live	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	ER "Brothers & Sisters" (N)	News		News	Tonight Show
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Friends (N)	Friends (N)	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	ER "Brothers & Sisters" (N)		News	Raymond
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	★★★★ "The Empire Strikes Back" (1980, Science Fiction) Mark Hamill, Harrison Ford. (In Stereo)						News	Tonight Show
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends (N)	Friends (N)	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	ER "Brothers & Sisters" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Great New England Auction						Great New England Auction Continues
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Bachelor: The Women Tell All	Bachelor (N)			Primetime Thursday		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Frasier	Frasier	WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo)				News	Ent. Tonight	5th Wheel	Shipmates
WTBS	72	Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Major League Baseball	Antonio Dramon/Braves at Atlanta Braves. (Live)				★★★ "The Terminator" (1984, Science Fiction)
A&E	265	Law & Order "Thrill" (In Stereo)		The View (In Stereo)		Biography: Jack Paranoia				★★★ "Shackleton" (2002, Drama) Kenneth Branagh.		Law & Order (In Stereo)
CNN	23	Moneyline		Crossfire (Live)		Live From...	The Point	Larry King Live		Newsnight		Crossfire	Moneyline
COM	266	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Geeks	★★★ "Quick Change" (1990, Comedy) Bill Murray, Geena Davis.				South Park	Men Show	Daily Show	Sat. Night Live
DISC	25	Wild Asia "Temperate Forests"		Wild Asia "Himalaya"		X-Creatures		Would You Believe It?		Beyond Bizarre		X-Creatures
ESPN	21	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs	Conference Quarterfinal Game 5 - Teams to Be Announced. (Live)					Baseball Tonight (N)		Sportscenter
LIFE	29	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Dr Evolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"A Killer Among Friends" (1992, Drama) Patty Duke, Loretta Swit.		Golden Girls		Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	27	Back to the Hood (In Stereo)		First National Sex Quiz		Osbournes	mtvICON "Aerosmith" (In Stereo)			WWF Tough Enough	Celebrity Deathmatch	Jackass	Jackass
NICK	26	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb	Todd by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers	All in Family	All in Family
SCIFI	70	Star Trek (In Stereo)		Star Trek "Dark Lesion"		Outer Limits "Dark Matter"	★★½ "Tales From the Crypt/Presents Demon Knight" (1995)					Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	280	Thunderbirds		Secrets of Forensic Science		Medical Detectives		Tornado: Touchdown		Tsunami		Medical Detectives
TNT	24	NYPD Blue (In Stereo)		Pretender "Someone to Trust"		NBA Basketball Playoffs	Conference Quarterfinal - Teams to Be Announced.			NBA Basketball Playoffs		JAG "The Bridge of Kong So Ro"
USA	32	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "Tailhook: Part 1"		Nash Bridges "High Fall"	★½ "Mr. Wrong" (1996, Comedy) Ellen DeGeneres.			On the Record		Taxicab Confessions
HBO	8	★★ "Someone Like You" (2001, Comedy) Ashley Judd. PG-13				Spider-Man	★½ "Ms. Myself & Irene" (2000, Comedy) Jim Carrey. R			★ "The Forsaken" (2001, Horror) Kiri Smith. R		"Platinum Rhod
MAX	43	(6:45) ★★ "Loser" (2000) Jason Biggs. PG-13				★★★½ "The Shining" (1980, Horror) Jack Nicholson, Shelley Duvall. R				★ "Strikes" (2000, Comedy) Brian Hooks. R		a.k.a. me (2001)
SHOW	46	"The Inspectors 2: A Shred of Evidence" (2000) Louis Gossett Jr.				★★★ "Crimson Tide" (1995, Suspense) Denzel Washington. R				★★½ "Strikes" (2000, Comedy) Brian Hooks. R		a.k.a. me (2001)

Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas

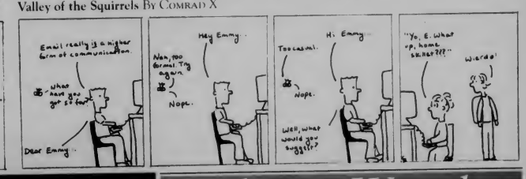
Frolicking in the Ragpatch By Jo-Jo Monkey

Highbrow By Aaron Eppy

Shut the Duck Up By Seany McSean



Adam and Eric By Ross Burach



The Torques By Ken Fredette

Scarecrow By W. Bird

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Quote of the Day

"I say funny things. It's just that nobody ever writes anything down."

-Meg Shannon

Amherst Weather

Thursday	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 55 LOW: 38	HIGH: 57 LOW: 32	HIGH: 65 LOW: 32

Horoscopes

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – "Hey Sugar Lips!" Remember that time at the carnival when you ate that powdered donut?

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – You should decorate your room with little pink bunnies, just like Stephanie Tanner.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Make sure your life doesn't turn out like the Olsen twins.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – At least Uncle Jesse did one thing right, he married a supermodel.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Don't lock your keys in the car, like Kimmy Gibbler.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Be careful, or could be on "Wake up San Francisco" with Danny and Aunt Becky.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Apply for a show next semester on WMUA, and you could be "The Rush Hour Renegades."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – "Hey Mister!"

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Be like Joey and "cut it out." But if you do, you have to use the hand motions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – "Have mercy!"

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – "Go home Gibbler!"

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Get a multiple orgazzm today when you listen to phat beats spun out by DJ Tanner.

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY

Great Beer Great Food Great Service

Amherst's original brewpub serving up fine handcrafted brews and lagers.

★

Featuring fabulous food and great live music!!

Thursday Karaoke w/Cloud Nine Productions $2 cover

Saturday Mindface Tripped out Rock $3 cover

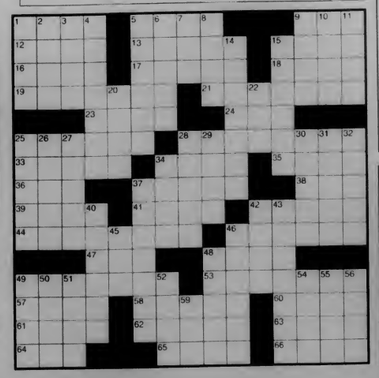
Sunday Funk and Monk Jazz

36 N. Pleasant Street * Amherst 413-253-4400

WWW.AMHERSTBREWING.COM

ACROSS

1 Trickle
5 Recital piece
9 Family man
12 Soprano Gluck
13 Pub sign
15 Ocean motion
16 Trot or gallop
17 "— Vice"
18 Stratford's river
19 Beseech
21 Sell
23 Spring bloom
24 Use a calculator
25 Large primate
28 Sleeper's spot
33 Works on tents
34 Type of lock
35 Big Foot's kin
36 Capp's Abner
37 Roamed about
38 Bruins' grp
39 Slippery ones
41 Baseball's Tommie
42 Interstate sight
44 Like guys who work out
46 Skimpy
47 Forty-niner's quest
48 Woodlands grazer
49 Window-box flower
53 Ingenious
57 Type of interview
58 Process cheese
60 Muffin spread
61 Imitates
62 Rabbits
63 Chowder tidbit
64 Curtain hanger
65 Most excellent
66 Winslet of "Titanic"



DOWN

1 Poultry seasoning
2 Vivacity
3 Give off (heat)
4 New England grodder
5 Kingdom
6 Modules
7 LAX info
8 Pack firmly
9 Plunge in the pool
10 Hubbubs
11 Bears abodes
14 Copied illegally
15 Sleazy
20 February 14 figure
22 Sonnet kin
25 Amazon port
26 Good-bye, in Cannes
27 Pay them!

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

M	I	R	T	H		E	L	L	S		F	A	D	S
A	D	O	R	E		N	E	I	L		A	G	R	A
L	A	D	E	N		D	A	M	E		R	A	I	D
T	H	E	E		P	E	P	P	E	R	M	I	L	L
S	O	O	T	H	E	D		K	E	E	N	L	Y
		O	U	T		W	I	E	L	D
S	L	O	P	E		B	O	S	S	Y		Y	A	K
E	O	N	S		M	E	R	I	T		V	A	N	E
T	U	T		B	A	R	D	S		N	E	W	S	Y
		D	U	S	T			H	O	T
F	L	A	I	R	S		D	E	S	E	R	V	E
L	O	N	E	R	A	N	G	E	R		R	O	A	N
O	D	D	S		G	A	L	A		F	A	U	L	T
O	G	R	E		E	M	I	L		E	N	S	U	E
R	E	E	L		D	E	B	S		E	S	T	E	R

11-9-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Tomato Soup

Chicken Quesadilla

Beef Enchilada Casserole

Vegan Black Bean Quesadilla
Oney Ga

Garlic Eggplant Stir Fry
(vegan)
(W Basics)

DINNER

Tomato Soup

Grilled Ham Steak

Baked Chicken Quarter

Madras Tofu Curry
(vegan)

Today's Staff

Night Editor: Sam Wilkinson

Photo Editor: Tibora Ginzsy-Blum

Copy Editor: Jess May

Production Assistant: Pete Preston

Production Staff: Melissa Hammel, Andrea Mangini

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: ERIC SODERSTROM

Softball breaks school record

Holtz one-hitter sends UMass to 25th straight win

By Andy Vogt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

It had maintained for the last month that its winning streak meant very little. But for the Massachusetts softball team, it made sure that there would be no repeat of last season.

Traveling down to Storrs, Conn. on April 24 of last year, UMass put a 24-game winning streak on the line against the Huskies, looking to break the school record. But UConn proved not a victim of history, as it ended the string of consecutive victories by the Minutewomen, pulling out a 2-1 heartbreaker.

UMass	3
UConn	0

One year to the day, the Maroon and White again faced the same situation of traveling to the Nutmeg State with an opportunity to redeem itself. Not to be denied, the Minutewomen traveled across the border and tamed the Huskies by a score of 3-0, thereby placing themselves alone in the record books with a new run of 25 straight wins.

"There's no greater feeling for a UMass softball player than to leave Storrs with a victory," Head Coach Elaine Sortino said. "I thought we played as a stable, consistent softball team."

Kaila Holtz, who guaranteed a victory earlier in the day at the UMass Weekly Sports Luncheon, threw another gem for UMass, taking a perfect game to the top of the seventh inning. A seeing-eye single by the Huskies' Amanda Schettini was the only semblance of offense UConn mustered all day, and ended Holtz's bid for her fourth career no-hitter. Still, the junior hurler tossed her 11th shutout of the season, and improved her record to an impressive 17-5, striking out six UConn hitters in the process.

Despite the amazing performance, her coach and teammates were upset that she wasn't able to finish her dance with perfection.

"I just felt it was unfortunate, she was incredible," Sortino said. "She totally dominated them."

"It just broke my heart," said sophomore catcher Jamie Cahalan. "That would have put the icing on the cake."

The Minutewomen jumped on the board in the third inning with a pair of runs against UConn starter Barb Cook. Aisha Franke came home on a double steal to plate the first tally, and after Teri Rooney reached on a fielder's choice, Brandi Cross belted an RBI double to drive in Rooney and give Holtz all the offense she would need. The Maroon and White added an insurance run in the fifth inning, as Cahalan crushed an RBI triple to right, bringing in pinch runner K.C. Budrewicz.

Cook picked up the loss, surrendering all three runs on seven hits, and striking out two Minutewoman batters. UMass took a calm approach to the game, not allowing its run of success to affect its play and cause an unwanted experience of deja vu.

"When there's a winning streak, you start to press, and we didn't want to do that," Cahalan said.

For UMass athletes, it doesn't take a lot of motivation to get pumped up to play UConn. The Maroon and White have had a long-standing border war with the Connecticut campus, so Sortino's squad had plenty to play for yesterday afternoon.

"To beat UConn, it's just a great feeling. They're our rival, and we all get up for that game," Cahalan said.

Still, the rivalry has thrived on not only the competition level but the mutual admiration that the two schools have for one another.

"I think both programs have great respect for the other's tradition," Sortino said. UMass defeated the Huskies earlier this season in Columbus, Ga., by a score of 1-0.

The Minutewomen might have respect for the Huskies, but they were a team locked into battle mode on Wednesday.

"We're just a much more mature team [from last year]," Cahalan said. "It was all about us today. It didn't matter who we were playing, we were going to win."

UMass returns to action this weekend, as it travels to the Buckeye State for a clash with Atlantic 10 opponent Dayton for a three game set. The Flyers enter the series tied for second place in the conference standings along with Temple. The Minutewomen will not seek to prolong their current overall winning streak, but also their run of 44 consecutive victories in A-10 play. The pitching staff has allowed just five runs in 15 A-10 contests this year.

This is the jersey Kaila Holtz wants to be wearing in Athens in 2004

Jamie Cahalan, who caught Kaila Holtz' near-perfect game, ripped an RBI triple in the fifth inning to give UMass a 3-0 lead.

Canada drive

Junior Holtz pitches Olympic dreams

By Andy Vogt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Kaila Holtz is focused. As she peers in for the sign, she handles the ball, trying to find the perfect grip. With a fierce delivery, her opponent hits a slow grounder to the right side. Suddenly, Holtz becomes a fireball of emotion, as she erupts off the mound in unrelenting glee.

"They had bases loaded with one out, and we got out of the inning," recalls Massachusetts softball coach Elaine Sortino of Holtz's freshman outing against North Carolina. "She was jumping up and down on the mound.

"[It was] like, 'you can't do that, you're in college now.'"

Fast forward to this past Sunday against St. Bonaventure. Facing the Bonnies' wild and out-of-control Kristen Scheffold, Holtz was plunked for the second time in as many at-bats. Taking her base, she gave Scheffold a look of disgust. It's a good thing for St. Bonaventure that Holtz wasn't pitching that day — she damn well could have struck out every last Bonnie. Holtz's demeanor has changed, but she still thirsts for success.

"The thing about her is that she's an incredible competitor on the mound," says Sortino about her junior hurler. "She will not tolerate anything but the best."

It was this drive for success that catapulted Holtz to reaching her childhood goal after last summer. While most UMass students were working odd jobs, Kaila Holtz was fulfilling her dream by playing softball. For the Canadian National Team. At the age of 19. Most people go a lifetime without seeing their dreams come true, but there she was fulfilling her two years before her college graduation.

Invited to the national training camp at Simon Fraser University in Vancouver, Holtz impressed enough of the staff to earn a spot on the developmental team. And after a strong performance at the Canada Cup, including a dominant game against Australia, Holtz was selected to represent her homeland.

But Kaila's dream almost never came to fruition, which she says makes it all the more sweet.

"The whole process [of making the team] was my proudest accomplishment, because I went from no confidence and really not feeling good about my shoulder, to making the national team and pitching well," Holtz says. Sortino was also able to offer words of encouragement to her young pitcher, telling her in a phone conversation to continue working hard toward her ultimate goal.

The youngest member of the Canadian squad, she was now off with her new teammates to Caracas, Venezuela for the Pan American Qualifying Championships. Unfortunately, Venezuela isn't exactly a softball utopia, so Holtz had a new challenge to undertake.

"Playing in a country that has unsafe food and unsafe water is really hard, because you have to drink bottled water, really can't brush your teeth, and you have to shower with your mouth closed," Holtz remembers. But on a diet of bread, bottled water, and Burger King, she and her fellow Canadians tied for second place at the tournament.

It was a storybook tale for any athlete. But lest you think that her journey was an entirely smooth path, think again.

"I didn't start as a pitcher; I was really wild and I sucked; so it really bugged me that I couldn't pitch," Holtz says. "I think it was because I was really horrible at it. I'm such a perfectionist by nature that it really bugged me that I couldn't do it."

But following the advice of an astute coach at a softball camp while in fourth grade, she slowly grasped the knack of pitching mechanics. Drawing a square on the back of her parents' North Vancouver, B.C. home to act as a strike zone, she constantly worked on drills to perfect the location of her pitches. Not to mention that she caused a ruckus at the house.

"My parents had a business at the time, so you can imagine how annoying it was for them, hearing me whacking the ball against the back of the house," Holtz laughs. "But I did it religiously, day after day."

With her softball potential blossoming, a decision had to be made in giving up other aspects of her athletic career. Although lettering in volleyball and hoops as well during high school, Holtz knew that those two sports didn't hold her Golden Ticket.

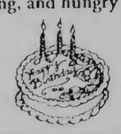
Turn to DRIVE, page 10

Kaila Holtz has thrown three no-hitters in her time at UMass.

ATKINS FARMS
Country Market ...where the apple is just the beginning!
Rte. 116 & Bay Road, South Amherst, MA
(413) 253-9528 • (800) 594-9537

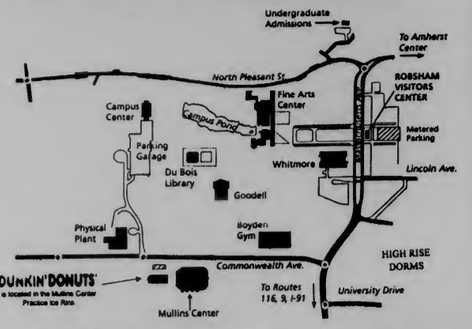
Looking For Something To Do?
Atkins Farms Has Something For Everyone!

Country Bakery
Farm Fresh Produce
Homemade Fudge
Meat Market
Deli & Lunches
Specialty Foods



Full Service Florist
Fruit & Gift Baskets
Gift Department
Take-Out Food
Ice Cream Bar
Specialty Cheeses

A unique country market nestled in one of the oldest apple orchards in New England. Just a five minute drive from UMass on Rt. 116 will give you a chance to sample some of New England favorite foods.



Attention Parents!!
Student Special Care Packages
Great idea for parents far away from their busy, hard working, and hungry college student.

Birthday Cakes
Flowers, Balloons
Snack Paks
Get Well Paks
Mix & Match Paks
& Much More

Call for our brochure
(413)253-9528 or
1-800-594-9537
www.atkinsfarms.com
Deliveries Mon-Sat

DUNKIN' DONUTS®

DONUTS
1.00$ Off any size Coolatta!
Valid only at UMass Dunkin Donuts
Not to be combined with other offers.
Tax not included. Expires 5/31/02.

DONUTS
FREE DONUT!
with the purchase of any med or larger beverage!
Valid only at UMass Dunkin Donuts
Not to be combined with other offers.
Tax not included. Expires 5/31/02.

DONUTS
1.00$ Off any size Coolatta!
Valid only at UMass Dunkin Donuts
Not to be combined with other offers.
Tax not included. Expires 5/31/02.

ATTENTION STUDENTS!
Looking for a car with style and performance that you can afford?
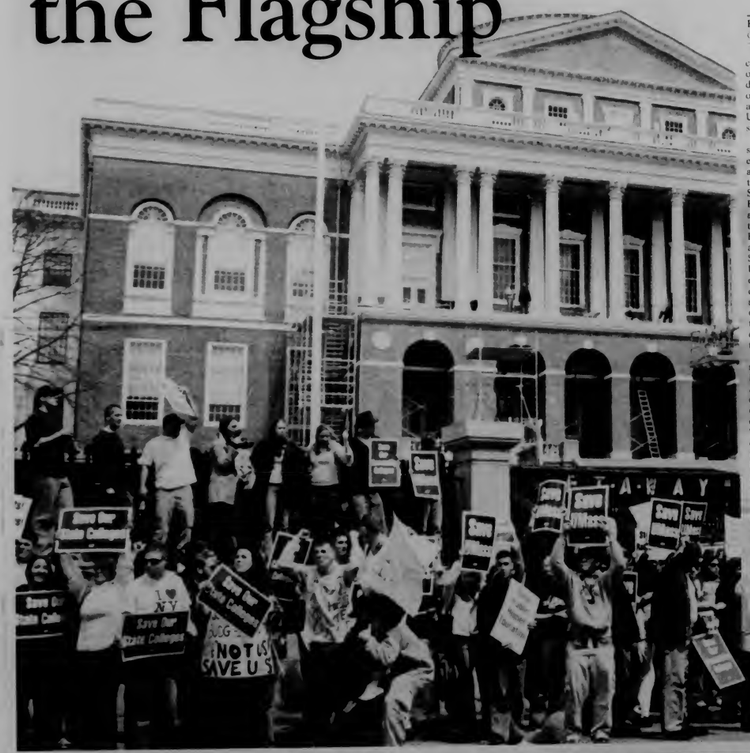
Minuteman Volkswagen of Bedford's Internet Sales Department has put together a Special Program for you!

THE COLLEGE GRADUATE PROGRAM
NO WAITING UNTIL GRADUATION!
1st MONTHS PAYMENT & SECURITY DEPOSIT WILL BE WAIVED!



CONTACT: Cheryl the Internet Manager to schedule a Test Drive at no obligation today.
978.535.0505 or email: minutemanvw@aol.com
FIRST 50 STUDENTS WILL RECEIVE A SPECIAL GIFT FROM THE INTERNET DEPARTMENT!

THE MOOKS ARE COMING TO TOWN ... PAGE 8.
SEXUAL ASSAULT ON CAMPUS NEWS PAGE 5.
... LAX HEADS FOR THE PO... SPORTS PA...

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
WEEKEND EDITION
FRIDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY FOUR ☆☆☆☆☆ 4.26.02

The fight to save the Flagship

SCOTT ELIASON/ COLLEGIAN

By S.J. Port
COLLEGIAN STAFF

BOSTON – As the 15 buses carrying 600 to 700 University of Massachusetts-Amherst students arrived at the state house, one student approached the already large crowd of fellow UMass and state school students shouting, "Amherst has arrived."

The crowd of several thousand public education supporters began the Save UMass rally at just before noon yesterday on the steps of the Massachusetts State House on Beacon Hill in Boston. While organizers set up a stage for students and activists to speak on, students filled Beacon St., overtaking the area and causing traffic delays. Students represented all of the UMass campuses as well as several other state and community colleges. In addition, faculty and some administrators joined students' efforts, showing pride in their school by wearing school colors and clothing and waving their message on signs.

A majority of activists carried signs handed out by the Massachusetts Teachers' Association saying, "Stop the cuts, raise revenues." Other students and activists made their own signs, saying such things as, "We won't be raped by budget cuts, save security," "Money to fight the Union, but no money for classes?" "Education without privatization" and "Scholars against Squalor."

Following the 1989 student rallies to oppose similar budget cuts, UMass Amherst students were chastised for trampling on the flowers in the gardens surrounding the State House. This time, UMass Amherst students gave out and carried flowers, donated to the Save UMass coalition, to give to legislators and workers at the State House. In addition, other students brought each of the legislators they visited an African violet plant following the rally.

Students gave up class time and their personal time to attend the rally for various reasons. For some, it was yet another chance to support UMass and public higher education. For many, it was a singular opportunity to devote a day to a cause close to them.

"The priorities aren't where they should be; make it known through force of numbers and logical arguments, and the rally will do good," said Greg Sobczynski, a freshman biology student.

Several students voiced concern over being able to get into the courses they will need next year in order to graduate on time.

"I'm afraid of what's going to happen next year. They say one in ten classes will be cut, and you can barely get into classes now," Matt Sullivan, a sophomore communications major said.

Anesha Sledge, a sophomore animal science major, had similar concerns.

"I came because although my major isn't really affected, I know how tough it was to get into classes this year, and it's going to be ten times as tough next semester," she said. "They need to stop budget cuts."

Melissa Perlmutter, a senior legal studies and economics major, represented the minority of UMass students who come from out of state.

"There's been talk of losing our accreditation and becoming a state college. Our reputation is at state, and as out-of-state students, we pay twice as much for our education," she explained. "I don't even want to be here anymore. I'm not [going to be]..."

Turn to FIGHT, page 5

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

PHOTO COURTESY OF THE BOSTON GLOBE

And the Legislature responds...

By Ken Campbell
COLLEGIAN STAFF

BOSTON – State legislators offered mixed reactions following the "Save UMass" rally on the State House steps by students, teachers and friends of the University of Massachusetts, state and community colleges.

The House Ways and Means budget was released yesterday as well. The proposed appropriation for the UMass system is $434,789,000, which would be considered level funded taking into account the mid year 29.5 million dollar cut in FY2002.

"This appropriation would result in staff and faculty layoffs, the closing of programs with low participation rates and further increases in student fees," the budget summary stated.

Most representatives were in caucus yesterday due to the release of the House Ways and Means budget recommendation. Senators were in formal session. Along with the newly released budget proposal, the cheering crowd of thousands on Beacon Hill was the topic of conversation in the marbled hallways of the State House.

"This is an unusually good one [rally]," Rep. Ellen Story, (D-Amherst) said as she surveyed the crowd blocking Beacon St. "There are lots of posters, lots of people; lots of noise. The more representatives hear from people back home, the better."

Story said that the timing of the rally was perfect, coinciding with the release of the budget.

"Lots of representatives are here today," Story said. "And there are lots of Massachusetts students lobbying for something that the state should provide them."

Rep. Jose Santiago (D-Lowell) heard the noise from his office.

"I think it sends a message out that it's a serious problem the Legislature needs to address," Santiago said. "It shows the commitment that education should be a priority up here on the hill, as it is for me here."

Santiago, a self-described education advocate, says he realizes what the rally was about.

"A lot of the legislators take notice of the needs of the students," Santiago said. "Surely the ones on the education committee have taken a look at the needs and what this morning's event was all about, and it's about cuts; it's about needs and prioritizing state funding."

However, Santiago said, it is not going to be an easy thing to do.

"I think we need to look at innovative ways to generate revenue. We need to take a hard look at a number of ways to raise revenue funds," Santiago said. "Sometimes we need to make the hard decisions. People understand that the Commonwealth is in the height of a crisis."

Not everyone heard the message. House minority leader Rep. Francis Marini (R- Duxbury) was "behind closed doors with other members," and not aware of the rally, according to Darren Johnson, his press secretary.

"I didn't know about it until I saw it on the midday news," Johnson said.

While legislators were behind closed doors, legislative aides and spokespeople met with small groups of students following the rally. UMass-Amherst students assembled in small groups and lobbied legislators from their home districts.

Matthew Saradjian, a Political Science senior at UMass-Amherst visited legislative offices to urge General Court members to reduce cuts to the University's budget and increase state revenues to ensure a similar situation does not occur.

Christian Scorzoni, a spokesman for Sen. Robert Travaglini (D-Boston), the Senate's majority whip, spoke with Saradjian about cuts, taxes and revenues. Scorzoni pledged his boss's support for the University's current budget.

"Our stance now is yes, we are going to fight to make sure that line items will remain intact," Scorzoni said. "We are

Turn to LEGISLATURE, page 5

Campus Perspectives

By: Pedro Pierce

What do you think about the Southwest curfew?

Tim Brazil
BDK
Sophomore
"It's bullshit. I don't need the University to tuck me in at night."

Chris Marshal
History
Sophomore
"I would mind going and getting arrested."

Pat Reily
SOM
Sophomore
"I feel like the school thinks we are all five years old."

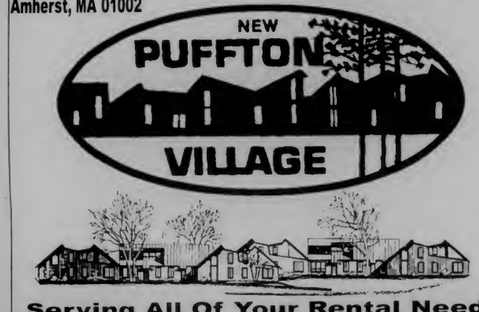
Nicole LaPointe
SOM
Freshman
"Are you serious? I thought this was college?"

Manuel Napoli
Psychology
Senior
"What is this – a high school dance?"

Robert Carson
History
Sophomore
"If these events have to end at 10 p.m., then we shouldn't have other campus activities such as the X Center starting at 2 a.m."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01002
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •



The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar—minus vacations. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenue generated locally among ads. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life became the College Times in 1907, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Sam Wilkinson Editor-in-Chief
Matthew T. Sacco Managing Editor
Amy Garganta Business Manager
Shimauti Dave Production Manager
Jake Lifien Diversity Editor
Mike Kulak Editorial Production Manager
Jason Smith Advertising Manager

Mike Delano Arts & Living Editor
Matthew Despres Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jennifer Eastwood Features Editor
Catherine Turner News Editor
Tibora Ginzye-Blum Photography Editor
Eric Soderstrom Sports Editor
Brent Siniawski Finance Manager
Charlie Jacco Distribution Manager

Morgan Taylor Advertising Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Cara Murphy Assistant Finance Manager
Shawn Daugherty Assistant Business Manager
Megan Shannon Assistant Advertising Manager

Rental Office
1040 N.Pleasant St. #410
Amherst, MA 01002
413.549.0145

Serving All Of Your Rental Needs

IT'S MORE THAN A GAME

A basketball tourney plus!!!
Velcro Wall
B-ball bounce house
Fenway Fantasy HR derby
Slam dunk contest & more
Prizes & Giveaways!!!
Monster.com Presents---
Traveling Matt
Natural Descent

WWW.HAIGISHOOPLA.COM
(413) 545-5689

The new balance Haigis Hoopla
University of Massachusetts Sport Management Program

We would like to thank our sponsors:
Kaplan Cape Cod Potato Chips Coca Cola
Inside Stuff UMass Food Services Spalding Ultimate Fitness
Masslive.Com Nantucket Nectars Daily Collegian
Bueno y Sano New Balance Lazer 99.3 Healthsouth

"HEART-POUNDING ACTION THAT PUSHES DVD TO THE LIMIT!"
- Bruce Kluger, USA Weekly

DVD INCLUDES:
- Director and Producer Audio Commentaries
- Extended/Deleted Action Sequences
- Behind-the-Scenes Featurette & More!

Own It On DVD Or Rent The Video Today!

PG-13
www.behindenemylinesdvd.com

College Self-Storage

Monthly/Annual Rentals
College Payment Plans
Minutes From Campus
Electronic Card Access
Security Fenced Perimeter
Multi-Size Units

Route 9, Belchertown
323-9792

SCIENCE AND RELIGION
Enemies, Strangers, Friends or Partners?

Physics 197
A course for undergraduates at any level*
David K. Scott
Department of Physics
Hasbrouck 134 - M, W, F 12:20-1:10

Historically the interaction between Science and Religion has varied from harmonious, conflicting, or non-overlapping realms of human experience such as Reason and Faith, Truth and Meaning. We shall see that the influence has in fact been deep and profound. Several modern issues will be used to illustrate the interaction, such as the possible models of the birth and death of the universe, the anthropic principle, evolution of matter, mind, soul, spirit, and consciousness, and current interests in a Theory of Everything that could lead to greater integration of Science and Religion inherent in the Great Chain of Being.

* This course may qualify for general education credit under the Interdisciplinary (I) option. Students should verify at registration if interested. For further information go to: www.physics.umass.edu/Science-Religion

Woman assaulted

A woman reported being raped by three men on Thursday, April 18 at approximately 10 p.m. The University of Massachusetts Police Department is still investigating the incident, which took place at the west end of the Fine Arts Center.

The student described her assailants as three white men. The first was approximately six feet tall with dark skin and was wearing khaki shorts and a white shirt.

The second man with him had short blond hair and light eyes and was wearing nylon shorts at the time of the incident. The third individual was blond with a crew cut, wearing nylon shorts and had a tattoo on his left leg.

The victim told police that she believed there were people passing by during the incident.

Anyone that may have any information regarding the incident can call the UMPD Detective Bureau at 545-0803 or place an anonymous tip by calling 577-8477.

Please see Monday's paper for additional coverage.

- Melissa Hummel

■ legislature

continued from page 1

depleting the revenue reserves that we have. We are doing that to make sure that public higher education stays. We have to stop the bleeding."

Scorzoni said that Travaglini favored public higher education and freezing the tax rate at its current 5.3 percent level.

"If we let it get to 5.0 percent, you guys won't have any money," Scorzoni said. "Travaglini is the product of the public higher education system. We are supportive."

Saradjian also spoke with an aide from Rep. Eugene O'Flaherty's (D-Chelsea) office, and Senate President Thomas Birmingham's (D-Middlesex) secretary. Saradjian left a pot of flowers for Birmingham, as a goodwill gesture, for in 1989 students took heat from Boston media for damaging the State House's flowers.

Saradjian spoke with a staff member from Rep. Jay Kaufman's (D-Lexington) office. She commented that the hundreds of handwritten letters from UMass-Amherst students made a difference.

Jamie Lee, a senior History and Political Science major, met with staff members from Sen. Robert Antonioni's (D-Worcester) office.

"Budget cuts are regrettable but should not be interpreted as a loss of support for public higher education," David Mattatall, an aide, said. "Despite what [the students] are saying, we do not consider them disproportionate cuts."

S.L Port, Scott Eldridge II and Tibora Ginzye-Blum contributed to this story.

■ fight

continued from page 1

got a co-op for next semester."

Other students repeated Perlmutter's concern for the cost of tuition and their ability to afford an education.

"I hope they learn to take education seriously, because people work very hard not just academically but to pay tuition, too – just to go to school," Leanda Fontaine, a senior biology major said.

Debbie Dill, a junior education and English major came to the rally to support not only her right to an education, but her right to offer a quality education to her own students down the road.

"We're going to be future teachers, and we've come, because we're worried about the vicious circle. They cut education. They cut teachers and then wonder why kids don't have a good education."

A sophomore Philosophy and STPEC major, Devin Danchise, legitimated Dill's concern for teaching when she said she was there because. "We've lost a lot of good teachers."

Professors in the crowd mingled with students, remembering their years at UMass and economic crisis of the past.

"I've been at UMass for 32 years," said Professor Frank Hugus of Germanic languages, "and this is the worst fiscal crisis I've seen." Hugus added that he believed the rally would help UMass since, "Sometimes you have to be rather vocal and visual about your cause. I think this will help."

Many students did not arrive at the State House with specific issues in hand, but broader ideas about what needed to change for the future good of UMass and public higher education.

"We're here in solidarity to show our state and people that we believe in quality public education for the people. I just think the state needs to not put investments into big business instead of public education," Jess Lider, a junior STPEC major said. "Everyone should have access to public education: it's our birthright. They should raise taxes for our schools; that's what taxes are for."

Sara Lennox, a Professor of German summed up the tone of many students and activists at the rally when she said, "We're here in full force. The survival of the Commonwealth is the survival of UMass. Students are our future."

Please see Monday's paper for additional coverage on the budget talks.

TIBORA GINZYE-BLUM/DAILY COLLEGIAN

Students from all of the University of Massachusetts campuses gathered to protest against the impending budget cuts to the University.

CINEMARK
The Best Seat in Town
CINEMARK AT HAMPSHIRE MALL
367 Russell St. 413-587-4233
Schedule for Friday 4/26 - Thursday 5/2
DIGITAL SURROUND SOUND IN ALL AUDITORIUMS
Purchase Tickets Online @ cinemark.com

LIFE OR SOMETHING LIKE IT (PG13) 12:25 4:35 7:35 10:15*
JASON X (R) 12:50 5:00 7:55 10:30*
MURDER BY NUMBERS (R) 12:00 4:10 7:30 10:20*
SCORPION KING (PG13) 12:35 4:50 7:45 10:25*
CHARGING LANES (R) 12:30 4:05 7:25 10:30
HIGH CRIMES (PG13) 12:05 4:20 7:15 10:05
THE SWEETEST THING (R) 12:20 4:10 7:20 10:00
NATIONAL LAMPOON'S VAN WILDER (R) 12:45 7:50
THE ROOKIE (G) 12:25 4:00 7:10 10:10
PANIC ROOM (R) 12:40 4:30 7:40 10:35
CLOCKSTOPPERS (PG) 12:55 4:25 7:05 9:30
DEATH TO SMOOCHY (R) 4:45 10:20
ICE AGE (PG) 12:10 2:15 4:25 6:45 9:00
Senior Mover - 5/2/02
CHARGING LANES (starts open at 11:45am

• NO PASSES NO SUPERSAVERS
Tickets & showtimes available @ cinemark.com

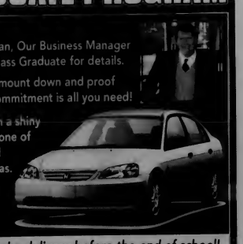
Attention
May 2002 Graduates

If you are a member of the May 2002 graduating class who received Federal Perkins Loans while enrolled at UMass you should have recently received a certified letter about those loans.
We know this is a very busy time for you so we've mailed this information rather than having you attend a meeting.

However there are serious consequences if you fail to return these documents by 5/3/02 as instructed in our letter.

If you haven't received our letter but think that you should have or if you have any question about what you did receive,

CALL 545-2377



...hip. ZANNA
Women's Clothing, Shoes & Accessories
Amherst Northampton Williamstown
www.zanna.com

...style. ZANNA
Women's Clothing, Shoes & Accessories
Amherst Northampton Williamstown
www.zanna.com

...attitude. ZANNA
Women's Clothing, Shoes & Accessories
Amherst Northampton Williamstown
www.zanna.com

HONDA'S GRADUATE PROGRAM
Want a new car for graduation? Lorenz Honda has the answer!

IT'S SIMPLE!
• Call Alan Behan, Our Business Manager and former UMass Graduate for details.
• A minimum amount down and proof of employee commitment is all you need!
We'll get you in a shiny new Honda or one of our Pre-Owned Certified Hondas.

HONDA
Call now to take delivery before the end of school!
BUY AFFORDABLE BUY LORENZ HONDA IN GREENFIELD ROUTES 5 & 10 NORTH GREENFIELD
LORENZ HONDA 774-3200

I AGREE WITH ELAINE!
www.knowmercy.org

WANTED
STUDENTS WITH TRUCK OR BUS DRIVING EXPERIENCE WANTED FOR SUMMER WORK
EARN $110-$140 PER DAY
Working approximately 14 days in
One or both sessions available. Possibly some July work.
Call 1-888-949-5089

ROCKIN' THE 'SHOE IN 2002

Get Your Tickets TODAY

Monday, April 29
"HOOK UP UNDER THE STARS" MOVIE NIGHT
Fast and the Furious – 8:00 pm
Dazed and Confused - 9:30 pm
SW Horseshoe

Tuesday, April 30
FRANK SANTOS, X-RATED HYPNOTIST
Must buy tickets ($2 each) from FAC Box Office
8:00 pm, Fine Arts Center

Wednesday, May 1
FEELIN' THE HEAT
4:00 pm - 7:00 pm,
DC BBQ & Activitiesswith performances by:
Strong Arm - 3:45 pm
Marvis - 4:10 pm
Sal - 4:55 pm
Assention Forever - 5:20 pm
One Entertainment - 6:05 pm
Scattered - 6:30 pm
SW Horseshoe

Thursday, May 2
HANGIN' DOWN SOUTH NIGHT CONCERT
7:45 pm, Rustic Overtones
The Sheila Divine
SW Horseshoe

Friday, May 3
BANGIN' THE 'SHOE, MARDI GRAS STYLE WITH DJ 'PLAYTIME
8:00 - 11:00 pm,
Outdoor Dance in the SW Horseshoe

Note: No backpacks, bottles, or cans will be allowed in the horseshoe.
Brought to you by Southwest Area Goverment:

"SOUTHWEST WEEK"

DRIVE AN EXOTIC CAR Private organization wishing to remain anonymous seeks drivers for fast-paced competitive project. Candidates must be young, energetic and willing to take risks. For more details and liability release, go to www.testdriveinfo.com.

Now More Than Ever, Appearance Counts...
INTERVIEW SUITS
Priced to fit any budget.
We specialize in suits for graduate school and job placement interviews.

Jonathan Reid
The men's store in the Hampshire Mall.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED/OP EDITOR: MATTHEW DESPRES

Right-wing candidate comes up short

The second-place finish of far-right candidate Jean-Marie Le Pen in France's presidential election has placed much attention on Europe in the past week. Most commentators, both inside and outside of France, have denounced Le Pen as a racist and an anti-Semite. One can only hope that the international criticism of Le Pen's bigotries will lead to a further criticism of the shocking wave of anti-Semitism recently seen throughout Western Europe.

The Anti-Defamation League has reported that there have been 400 incidents of anti-Semitic incidents in France over the past several months. Synagogues throughout Europe have been burned and firebombed. In Germany, numerous Jews have been beaten on the streets, prompting police to suggest that Jewish citizens avoid wearing Stars of David or yarmulkes.

The number of these incidents has escalated as the violence in the Middle East has increased. While it is possible that these anti-Semitic hate crimes will disappear when affairs in the Middle East settle down (assuming, it is, that affairs in the Middle East do settle down), recent events have demonstrated a hatred of Jews that goes far beyond a reaction to any international events.

One recent Italian political cartoon recently blamed the death of Jesus on the Jewish people. Guards at the Norwegian parliament prevented a man from wearing a Star of David on his lapel, despite the fact that entrants to the parliament often wear political symbols of Islam and are permitted to do so. Editorials in newspapers have made so many accusations against the Jewish people as a whole that an English daily recently printed a headline asserting that Judaism was not an "evil" religion.

It should be noted, of course, that being critical of Israel (as many Europeans are) automatically qualifies one as an anti-Semite. There are many reasons to disagree with the actions of the Israeli government in recent months. It is also true that the American media often ignores Palestinian viewpoints in its coverage of international affairs.

Another undeniable truth, however, is that many European anti-Semites are masking their hatred of Jews by criticizing "Zionism" instead. Vicious attacks on "Zionism," which are clearly directed at the entire Jewish population, appear commonly throughout European newspapers. In Germany, anti-Semites have gone so far as to drop their "anti-Zionist" stances and attack Jews directly.

"It's been a long time since the hatred of Jews – once disguised as anti-Zionism – has been as socially acceptable in Germany as it is today," wrote Herbert Prantl in Germany's Suededuetsche Zeitung. "It was even permissible at the pro-Palestine demonstrations last weekend to shout out the very slogans that used to get neo-Nazi marches banned...'Jewish pigs,' 'Sieg Heil' and so forth."

Much worldwide attention was placed on the rampant hate crimes against Muslims in the United States following Sept. 11. The focus placed on these events was sorely needed. It seems only fair that the world should become just as vigilant about anti-Semitism in Europe, where attending a synagogue or wearing a yarmulke has become a potentially fatal act.

Information from the Washington Post was used in the writing of this editorial.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

The media off-base:
No link between pedophilia and Catholicism

SEAN JACQUET

Normally in class I'm a pretty quiet guy. I usually prefer to listen than to speak. Sure, I talk when called on, but I'm certainly not that one kid who loves to hear himself speak.

That is, until the subject of religion comes up. Lately, the hot topic is the rash of pedophilia cases within the Catholic Church. Starting with the Geoghan case, hundreds have come forward claiming priests had molested them.

The media, in particular, has exaggerated the link between pedophilia, claiming rigid Church doctrine regarding sexuality creates sexual frustration and thus, pedophilia. Not true.

Now, it is the rare occasion that I defend religion, particularly Catholicism. Indeed, there are few things I dislike more. Rivaled only by the Yankees and Fred Durst, religion tops my most hated list.

But to blame the Church for pedophilia is ridiculous. Some argue pedophilia stems from years of sexual repression due to a priest's inability to masturbate, marry and have sex.

Now I think one should be able to do all of those things without having to feel guilty. But pedophilia isn't a symptom of sexual frustration. Pedophilia is a disease. It must be treated accordingly.

Pedophiles find jobs allowing them to be near children. Some work at children's theme parks or various other jobs where children are around. These jobs didn't create the disease any more than the Church did.

The Church did not create the disease, but it did cover up the symptoms. When approached with evidence of pedophile priests, the Church hierarchy (particularly Cardinal Law), refused to deal with the problem.

Instead, they shuffled these priests around, allowing them to continue molesting children. Geoghan molested 137 children, a number too sickening to comprehend.

Law let this happen, and that's what we should be mad about. The Church's decision to turn the other cheek time and time again is the true crime. Instead of nipping this in the bud, the Church refused to risk losing face and let the problem grow until it could be secret no longer.

The handling of this crisis is a serious crime indeed. The Church is as guilty, perhaps even more so, as those priests that molested children. When the chance arose to stop the bleeding, the Church hierarchy allowed the problem to fester and worsen in order to avoid embarrassment.

"The media has ignored the real story in order to find a more sensational, scandalous story."

While there is plenty of guilt to go around, the Church and pedophile priests are guilty of entirely different things. Those guilty priests, of course, molested children.

One thing to note here, pedophilia is a disease deserving treatment. Dismissal from the priesthood, or even prison time won't reform a pedophile. I'm not trying to alleviate the responsibility here, but the fact remains: pedophilia is a disease that needs to be treated accordingly.

With that said, the Church is guilty of suppressing these cases, intimidating those who came forward, and refusing to fix the problem. Not only that, by failing to repair the crisis, the Church perpetuated the problem by allowing these priests to continue working.

The Church, however, is not guilty of creating pedophilia. While the Church indirectly encouraged these priests to molest children, the Church didn't make the disease.

Again, a fan of religion I am not, but there is no cause-and-effect link between Catholicism and pedophilia, as the media would have you believe. Catholic doctrine may contribute to sexual frustration, but that sexual frustration doesn't lead to pedophilia. Those who want to see the Church modernize its views on certain issues point to the pedophilia issue as a side effect of repressed sexuality. This is misdiagnosis of the problem.

While I agree that the Church desperately needs to alter its archaic views on sexuality, pedophilia is an independent occurrence. The media's attempt to link the two focuses on the wrong issue. There is no need to search for blame. The Church's handling of the pedophilia issue provides more than enough abuse to be angry about. The media sensation attempts to fabricate a cause-and-effect relationship between the Church and pedophilia and blows it way out of proportion.

Catholics are right to be upset at the media coverage indicating Catholic doctrine is responsible for pedophilia. The media has ignored the real story in order to find a more sensational, scandalous story.

Why the media must pursue this angle is beyond me. An outrageous, socially pertinent scandal lies before them, and they choose to go after a false lead. Uncovering the truth is fine, and indeed is the job of the media.

But to create an exaggerated story to manufacture outrage, sell papers, and attract viewers detracts from the credibility from a supposedly noble pursuit. You already have your story. You have plenty to be legitimately angry about. Don't start making stuff up.

Sean Jacquet is a Collegian Columnist.

Write for Ed/OP

Were you at the rally in Boston? Write to Ed/Op at collegianeditorial@yahoo.com and let us know. While we can't guarantee publication of every submission, we welcome the opinion of all those who attended.

Some policy recommendations

YOUSEF MUNAYYER

Events of the past few weeks in Venezuela and the West Bank have received attention from the rest of the world. They have also given birth to reactions from Israel and the United States that do not look very good at the international or domestic level.

First and foremost, the issue in Venezuela truly left some policy makers in the United States looking like clowns. For anyone who hasn't been keeping up with the news (and I don't blame you, because this issue has been greatly overshadowed by the conflict raging in the Middle East), here is a breakdown of events.

About two weeks ago, a Coup d'etat was staged against the democratically elected president of Venezuela, Hugo Chavez. Chavez was elected legitimately three years ago and won 60 percent of the vote. Those who staged the coup spread rumors to the people that Chavez has left politics and resigned. Remarkably, Chavez was able to lead a counter coup within three days of his removal and regain power.

Now the problem occurred when the news of the removal of Chavez emerged and the United States failed to denounce the coup. In fact, the New York Times published an article that noted that officials from the Bush administration met several times with members of the party that ousted Chavez. As you can imagine, this is very embarrassing. I'm sure the people in Washington were not counting on a resurrection on Chavez's part. This U.S. action to aid the insurrection and not denounce the coup once it happened shows that the United States did not support the democratic system in Venezuela. The article in the Times stated, "The administration damaged its credibility as the chief defender of democratically elected governments."

This is a major blunder on the part of U.S. officials. The Pentagon has launched an internal investigation on the issue to find out just how many people were involved in aiding the coup and how direct the involvement was. Chavez was not loved dearly in Washington. This is in part due to his open sympathy for the Cubans, his friendly relationship with Fidel Castro and his socialist style government.

More importantly, the people who ousted Chavez in the first coup were businessman and some ranking military leaders. However, when Chavez regained power shortly afterwards, people supported him greatly, especially the majority of peasants in the surrounding area of Caracas.

"Washington needs to shape up and do a little more homework when it comes to this sort of thing..."

Washington needs to shape up and do a little more homework when it comes to this sort of thing. It has been shown before that democracy and self-determination are not primary on its agenda, but in this case, Venezuela should have been much more carefully considered because of the country's importance to U.S. oil supply. Venezuela provides nearly 20 percent of U.S. oil and is the largest provider in this hemisphere. This blunder will definitely lead to rupture in Venezuelan-U.S relations. Considering many Arab oil-producing countries aren't thrilled with U.S. foreign policy, Washington did not need to cause problems with this large non-Arab oil provider. It seems that someone down in D.C. is finally learning how his or her foot tastes.

Now, regarding the Middle East conflict, I think what has happened in the Jenin refugee camp is horrendous. Many people whom I have spoken to attempt to deny how many people have been killed and how bad the situation really is. I have read that the camp originally "housed" 13,000 people, and now only 3,000 are left there. Many fled the camp in fear and are not being allowed in. Reporters have been made to leave the camp, and pictures show destruction and bodies all over the camp.

Yet I do not want you to believe the pictures or the stories that I have read. What I want you to think about is why Israel will not allow a U.N. fact-finding commission to go into the camp and see exactly what Israel wants to hide from the world. Ask yourself what motivations Israel has behind that. Israel has a funny way of making problems disappear. This reminded me of an incident that happened in January when a former Lebanese official, Elie Hobieka, died in a mysterious car bombing outside his house only one week after saying he was more than willing to testify against Ariel Sharon in a war crimes court. I can't say Israel was behind that bombing, because Hobieka wasn't liked by many, but it does raise some eyebrows, doesn't it?

Finally, I want to mention something I have read in a Jimmy Carter Ed/Op piece in the New York Times. Carter talked about the "...legal requirement that American weapons are to be used by Israel only for defensive purposes, a premise certainly being violated in the recent destruction of Jenin and other villages."

Israel has to remember that the truth about what happened in Jenin will get out eventually, and when it does, Sharon will not have any strikes left.

Yousef Munayyer is a Collegian Columnist.

Housing issues:
What can you do?

KATIE EIDENT

There is a specter haunting Amherst, the specter of the housing crisis. At first glance, it may not seem as if there is anything amiss. Students at the University, housed in dorms or in housing off campus, are happily going about their business. Amherst, with its shops and quaint New England feel, is bustling as usual. But underneath the surface lurks a monster – a seemingly forgotten problem that is directly affecting some of us as well as subtly affecting all of us.

Housing is a universal issue. Everyone needs a roof over his or her head – a place to stay, be safe and relax – a place to call their own. But housing in Amherst and at UMass has been scarce for many years. At this juncture it does not seem as if anyone is concerned enough to attempt to address the problem. While there have been discussions about housing issues between Amherst town officials and UMass Housing Directors in the past, no real agreements have been made and no concrete actions have been taken. Now with the crisis of budget cuts, it doesn't seem like much is going to happen in the way of alleviating this problem.

We students on campus have felt the crunch; we have seen many students forced to live in lounges or the campus hotel. Perhaps we even had to live in such a situation. In 1999, 400 students were made to live in 'temporary' spaces. They ended up living there for the year, and UMass made no real effort to remedy the shortage.

Ironically, even though there isn't enough housing for current students, the University has been enrolling larger incoming classes each year. Where will these students go? UMass cannot offer them a home. Many students feel forced to move off campus due to the lack of physical space and the price tag on the dorms that are available. Living on campus costs $1,418 per semester. This fee covers the basic room: electricity, water, furniture and maintenance. With a meal plan added on, the cost of living on campus soars. This arrangement only works if you are a single student. Students with a family can pretty much forget about living on campus.

So what happens when all these students move off campus and into the surrounding community? While landlords may be excited about the lucrative opportunities to turn a profit, students living in community housing stock severely deplete what is available to students. It is estimated that out of a population of 35,000 people, only 16,000 are permanent residents. The student population makes up almost half of the Amherst population.

These numbers are important for many reasons. The influx of students each fall depletes the housing stock and keeps the rent higher. With a 99 percent occupancy rate, it is nearly impossible for low-income residents to acquire housing in the Amherst area. Many commute from cities such as Holyoke and Springfield to work at the University. Due to some complicated legal issues, much of the subsidizing the state has previously provided is either inaccessible or no longer available. Shuttling people around is in no way helping the housing crisis. In fact, it is spreading it to other communities.

Housing at this point is a no win situation. Students are paying high prices for sub-standard housing. Residents are being pushed out of Amherst. With the budget cuts at UMass, it doesn't seem likely that students will see newer housing units built on campus any time soon. Amherst is currently attempting to address the fact that much of the subsidizing for low-income renters is expiring. The town and the University are barely cordial in regards to housing. There is no formal recourse for renters who want to address the issues themselves.

What needs to be done?

Without pressure from the communities of students and residents, this issue will continue to grow unchecked. Though at first glance it may seem as though the hands of renters of both University and Amherst housing are tied, this is not the case. There are ways in which we can go about finding our voices and speaking up to change this issue.

As students, we have a lot of power. The University needs our money and 'business' to operate. Amherst needs our money to boost its economy. We can organize and demand changes, and it is highly likely that we will get them. It is vital that we educate ourselves more about the issues that affect both Amherst and UMass because we, as a student body, are a part of both communities. It is important to start bridging the divide between the residents of Amherst and the student population. Together we can get the housing crisis under control. As students, we can start pressuring the University into enacting concrete changes in the housing situation. As student renters, we can form tenant associations that will begin to address the exorbitantly high rental rates and other issues related to renting.

We can also learn from the efforts of students working on the same issues at colleges and universities all around the country. The lack of affordable housing is an epidemic that has spread nationwide. Northeastern University has established an "Alliance with the Community" This partnership that has created housing for both students and low-income community members. Other schools have chosen cooperatively organized housing units to help students with Pell Grants and other forms of financial aid to live comfortably and affordably. Though the housing issue is an epidemic, it can be addressed in diverse and creative ways. The housing crisis is too grave a situation to let fall by the wayside. Something must be done now. We cannot wait for the University or the town to begin addressing these issues. We can take the power into our hands and find a compromise that will suit both students and residents. We can find alternatives to what we have. Who says we must either live in cement cubicles or rundown houses in Amherst?

The situation will not go away over night. But taking the first steps in prioritizing the housing crisis will motivate action around solving the problem. We can start small. We can organize and educate ourselves, becoming empowered so that we know what is going on and how to protect ourselves. Then we can link up with the community. We can dialogue about the common issues and learn about how housing affects groups in various ways. We can pressure the University and the town to listen to us and work with us. As Martin Luther King has said, "Human progress is neither automatic nor inevitable...this is no time for apathy or complacency. This is a time for positive vigorous action." As students, we have the resources and the power at our fingertips. We just have to take the first step.

Equal housing for all!

The Global Sustainability Festival, to be held from May 3-5 will be addressing some of the issues described above. For anyone interested in mobilizing around these issues, there will be an action meeting on May 5 at 2 p.m. in room 162 of the Campus Center.

Katie Eident is a UMass student.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS & LIVING Weekend Edition

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 4.26.02 ARTS EDITOR: MIKE DELANO

High hamsters, dramatic woes

By Nika Martin
Collegian Staff

4:20 hamsters

So this past Saturday was 4:20. Oh, I mean 4/20/2002: the date of "Extravaganja" on the Amherst Town Common. That was interesting. I spent about two hours in a room before leaving, playing with someone's cute hamsters and inhaling the excess of more than five people smoking up. I don't smoke, but I think both the hamsters and I got more than our share of second hand air pollution. It's always good when everyone your hanging with is completely fried before you leave the dorm. This sort of activity leads to small problems among the group: the first being that everyone needs water. I swear we had to wait for everyone to use the drinking fountain before we left – an activity that takes longer than you could imagine after smoking for nearly two hours. Okay. So I'm patient. I waited for everyone, and as I was doing so, one of the hamsters peed on my skirt. Excellent.

MUSICAL CHEERS WITH NIKA MARTIN

Once we got outside, we all argued over which route would be the fastest. Once we finally picked a route, we all headed downtown, clad in our hoodies and flip-flops, which by the way, are not pleasant attire for a downpour. Nine kept slipping off my feet because of all the rain. I ended up walking barefoot from the beginning of Frat Row till we got to the tents in town. And boy, is there a lot of broken glass on the ground.

Anyhow, as we walked, random people approached us asking us if we had weed to sell. Now if you could only see us (our group of Central friends), you would know that we definitely did not have any weed. Half of us looked like we would never go near it, and the other half looked like they had smoked every last plant in the world, and if anyone had any more, they would have smoked it themselves.

Once we finally arrived, things became a little more subdued. The group dispersed, and my friend and I went around to the tables, which were selling jewelry and oils and such. I think I dropped 40 bucks. Psychedelic Breakfast played for a while. Most people just stood around and listened, while others took the opportunity to dance around, like a mini Woodstock audience. You've gotta love the guy wearing that tie-dyed Grateful Dead "final tour" shirt who's by himself, dancing like he has no spinal cord, waving his arms all around, and yelling, "Yeah man, that's the shit!"

The event was hosted by a man who spoke a lot about legalizing Marijuana. People seemed to like that idea, as they screamed and cheered. He also spoke about not having fear when you see a police officer coming up behind you when you have weed on your person. That image got a good response with the crowd. Kinda makes you wonder. It was a good time. I doubt any of my friends or the hamsters remember much of it, but I'll remind them later.

Woyzeck Amazing

At the beginning of the second semester, I had this brilliant idea that I should audition for a part in one of the UMass productions for the spring. I did just this, and I tried out for the part of "Marie," supporting actress in Woyzeck, which was performed at the Curtain Theatre this month. Now you must know that I am a terrible actor. My two biggest problems are: (1) I speak way too fast for anyone to understand my lines, and (2) I have an uncontrollable giddiness that is essential to my character, and thus makes me an unfortunate dramatis actor.

So here's what happened: I had never read the script before (big mistake). In fact, I had never auditioned for anything before. But there I was, palms and toes sweating, holding a container of blue Gatorade, a pack of tissues and my U Card. Oh yes, I looked extremely confident. Anyhow, I sat and waited for the people before me to finish their line reading as my name and a male's name was called. (I was unaware that I would soon be partaking in one of my brightest moments of public humiliation and that I would have another student present to confirm this fact.) I was ready to leave, ready to run, but it seemed there was no turning back, as my feet decided that I was definitely going into that room even though my head argued otherwise.

So I auditioned. I raced through a set of lines like I was on speed and pretended to cradle a baby, which in actuality probably looked more like I was holding a watermelon. The guy with me did very well; he actually did get a part in the show. I figured he would. He made me look like a dried grapefruit compared to him. Thanks a lot buddy!

Finally after my three minutes from hell and beyond were through, I retired back to my room and ordered Godzilla Breadsticks Wings and blabbed to my friends about what a terrible actor I am and why I should just "drop out of school." I auditioned for one other project this semester, and of course, I didn't get that either. Quite frankly, I don't blame the directors for not casting me, if I were them, I wouldn't have picked me either. I would have rather had a hand puppet play a part than cast me.

Flash forward to April 18, 2002: the day I saw the finished production of Woyzeck. One word for you readers: spectacular. Woyzeck's cast was the most phenomenal I have ever seen in any college production. I was mystified. The costumes were fabulous, and the face paint, the expression and the drama were each amazing. I just don't know what to say.

Those actors took an incredibly confusing script and turned it into an eye-catching visual and auditory masterpiece. Of course, praise should go to the director of Woyzeck, as it is well deserved. But my goodness, those actors really put their hearts into their parts. Even as the heat reached 92 degrees, they never faltered from their characters. I may not know how to act, but I do know a good performance when I see one, and this was it.

'Snood' replacement 'Nethack' brings back simplicity

By Joshua Goldfond
Daily Targum (Rutgers U.)

(U-WIRE) NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. – In a time when modern consoles are teaching America's youth that games are only as good as the high-octane graphics and crystal-quality sound they possess, it's getting harder and harder to remember that games are only as good as the ideas behind them.

While today's market is saturated by titles and systems which push the limits of what was thought to be viscerally possible some 20 years ago, many widely suffer from being cookie-cutter duplicates of one another: simplistic and unoriginal in all of the ways which make a game truly noteworthy.

For today's generation of gamers, it is difficult to remember that there was a time when low-level computer capabilities forced developers to design games which were truly original and truly challenging. A player's wits were more valuable then his hand-eye coordination. His failure to solve a puzzle did not result in simply buying the hint booklet, but instead in the realization that you had just completely ruined your chances of beating the game. This period in gaming had many luminaries, including such titles as "Might and Magic," "Elite," "Star Control," and "M.U.L.E." However, only one game from this era can truly be said to have endured to the modern day in its original form: "Nethack."

"Nethack" is an extremely popular cult computer classic some 18 years in the making. It is a "dungeon crawler" role-playing game, which references science fiction, pop-culture and ancient myth. In it, players must create a hero and enter into the dreaded "Dungeons of Doom," delve into the pits of Hell, retrieve the Amulet of Yendor and escape the catacombs as enemies nip at their heels.

Along the way, you must build up your character's strength, face an endless horde of monsters and utilize hundreds of items, weapons and devices. The 13 character classes from which you may choose are very diverse and provide for a very different experience every time. The Barbarian and Samurai, for instance, solve most problems with physical brawn, killing creatures directly with weapons. Others, like the Priest and Wizard, are much less physically adept but use magic to win the day. Other, more unusual classes, such as the Tourist, Doctor and Archeologist, will often have to rely on their wits simply to survive.

Another feature that allows for more detailed gameplay is "alignment," which represents the personal creed of the God which your character worships. A lawful deity is certain to frown upon stealing from shopkeepers and murdering law enforcement officials.

The central feature of "Nethack" that makes it so inaccessible for much of today's gaming audience is its interface, which is as basic as one may imagine. Sound is non-existent, and the graphics are in "ASCII" language. This means that the appearance of the game is comprised of symbols from the keyboard. Your player hero appears as a "@," while other creatures and objects are likewise represented by symbols. An exclamation point on the screen represents a potion of some sort; a lower case "h" will be a humanoid some kind (red is a dwarf, while green is a hobbit); an upper-case "H" is a giant of some kind; a "D" is some variety of Dragon and so forth. When it is considered that there are 52 upper- and lower-case letters in the English alphabet and 12 colors in the game, one realizes that there are hundreds upon hundreds of treasures and creatures that might be found in the "Dungeons of Doom."

Added to this are the nearly 30 game commands, from "Fire" to "Quaff" to "Pray." However, this makes for a somewhat steep learning curve, as it takes some time to master all of the possible commands. And therein lies the game's enduring appeal. "Nethack" is so very special because of the incredible level of detail within its endless dungeons. The game is a product of "open-source" programming. In these games, the designers make the game's "code" available to the public, allowing ordinary players to make modifications to the game. The "Nethack DevTeam," the central authority on maintaining and releasing new versions, has incorporated hundreds of improvements suggested by thousands of dedicated fans for almost 20 years. The game has been preserved not by marketing tactics and commercial competition, but by the admiration of a dedicated fan base.

The result is a work of utter quality, with a level of depth, intuition and near-impossibility which leaves even dedicated players still unable to obtain the "Amulet of Yendor" after two decades. For example, in a recent game, my character killed a creature called a "cockatrice," a magical bird that turns its foes to stone. Once dead, I had my character put on a pair of gloves, pick up the corpse and use it as a weapon to smack enemies with the body and turn them to stone. Unfortunately, I was carrying too much equipment, and as I tried to walk down a flight of steps, I tripped and fell. I lost my grip on the cockatrice, and it turned me to stone.

"Nethack"'s newest version, 3.4 may be downloaded for free at www.nethack.org. A far cry from "Halo," "Quake" and the viscerally stimulating games which have defined early 21st century gaming, there is nevertheless an audience waiting in the wings for "Nethack." This audience remains unsatisfied by the clever eye-candy and lazy programming which can be bought for $50-a-pop at Electronics Boutique. Highly addictive, extremely challenging and free, "Nethack" remains the most cost-effective way to destroy one's GPA.

The Five College Area's Source for Discovering the Weekly Happenings of New England and Beyond

The Source

Compiled by Nick Pizzolato Send all submissions to collegiansource@yahoo.com

Jennifer Cocchiola

The Gyuto Monks, a Tibetan Tantric Choir, will perform at the Calvin Theater on May 3 at 8 p.m. Their chants can be heard on soundtracks for the films Kundun and Seven Years in Tibet.

GALLERY EXHIBITIONS

UMASS – The University Gallery will exhibit The Culture of Violence. It is available for viewing between the hours of 11 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. on Tuesdays through Fridays and from 2 to 5 p.m. on Sundays. Free and open to the public.

MUSIC

AMHERST COLLEGE – "An Eclectic Evening of Chamber Music" is a benefit concert for the Amherst Cinema Center that will take place on May 10 at 8 p.m. at Buckley Recital Hall. Featured performers include cellist Matt Haimovitz, violist Kathryn Lockwood, pianist Estela Olevsky, violinist Joel Pitchon, soprano Paulina Stark, clarinetist Michael Sussman and violinist Charles Treger. Each will share the stage in a rich program of large-visioned chamber music and song. Meg Gage, co-president of the Amherst Cinema Center, says of the event, "Any one or two of these artists performing together would be a major event; all seven on the same program is a rare and wonderful gift!" The program includes Dvorak's Piano Quintet in A major, Beethoven's Clarinet Trio, a selection of classical cabaret songs and a new work by Northampton composer Luna Pearl Woolf. Tickets are $10 for students with a valid ID. Patrons in the first three categories may attend a festive dessert reception with the artists after the concert. Tickets can be purchased in person, at the Amherst Cinema Center office, 30 Amity Street or reserved by phone at 413-256-1991.

FILM

UMASS – Hidden Wars of Desert Storm offers insights about the history of Western involvement in the Middle East. Narrated by British actor John Hurt and with the participation of Ramsey Clark, Denis Halliday, Scott Ritter, General Schwarzkopf and many others, the documentary also hopes to shed light on the duplicity of some of our leaders. Shown worldwide on television and in dozens of festivals, it is the grand prizewinner in Portugal and is praised by the widest spectrum of newspapers from the New York Times, who called it, "uncommonly sober, well-researched." The show is free and will be showing at UMass on April 29 and 30 and on May 1 at 7 p.m. in Campus Center room 803. All are welcome to attend.

EVENTS

NORTHAMPTON – The Gyuto Monks, a Tibetan Tantric Choir, will be performing at the Calvin Theater on May 3 at 8 p.m. The Gyuto Monks perform a chant that has been described as a "beautiful sound" of not just one sung note but rather an entire chord. Their chanting is a form of meditation they use to achieve enlightenment, just as Buddha did 2,500 years ago. It is said that only those monks who have "realized selfless wisdom" can correctly achieve the goal of these chants. These particular monks' chants can be heard on the soundtracks for films Kundun and Seven Years in Tibet. For $50, one can eat dessert with the monks and also sit front and center during the show. For more information call 413-586-2802.

AMHERST – The Mothership Art Collective of Amherst will bring their first large event to the Amherst South Common on Saturday, April 27 at noon. The event will feature art-work and music from The Cold Duck Trio, Melee and Tanzana Tenenbaum. The festival is being done in the spirit of bringing the community together. The event is open to all, and the Mothership Collective urges all to attend.

heels

continued from page 12

"The first thing I we need to do] is come up with the draw controls," Barnes said. "Then it's back to the theme of competing, competing mentally and competing physically. We've been working very hard, and we've gotten great effort. We just need to be sharp mentally."

Surely the best way to get back on track is not to play host to the third-ranked team in the country, a team that has won eight in a row and recently knocked off the defending National Champions to win the ACC Tournament for the first time in school history. But that is exactly what UMass must do today.

The last time the Tar Heels stepped on to the field was five days ago in Durham, N.C. when they defeated Maryland 11-10 to capture the ACC crown. Senior midfielder Christine McPike was the star on that day, tying a career-high with five goals to give the 2002 ACC Player of the Year 37 on the season. While that mark is 14 more than any Minutewoman has scored, it is only good for second on the squad, for fellow senior Kellie Thompson, a 2001 Tewaaraton Trophy finalist for National Player of the Year, has 41 tallies to this point, a mark that still did not earn her a spot on the all-ACC team. Those two, along with fellow senior Lindsay Stone (36 goals and a team-high 35 points), have scored 114 times in 2002, just 15 fewer than the entire UMass squad.

If the Minutewomen are to do their best David impression and slay the mighty Tar Heels, they will need to expose Carolina's south recognizable weakness: sophomore goalie Katelyn Hoffman. Hoffman comes in with just a .427 save percentage. She has allowed 103 goals so far this season and has made just 79 saves. If junior Lydia Robinson and sophomore Hope Zelinger can break out of their recent slumps and Jada Emery can continue her eight-game point-scoring streak and exploit Carolina's weakness in the cage, then the Minutewomen might be able to pick up some much needed momentum heading into the A-10 Tournament.

"This is a great opportunity for the program to have an ACC school come up north," Barnes said. "It's a matter of looking for good competition, and you can't get any better competition than North Carolina.

"It's a great way to go into A-10's," he added. "To see where we are on the field. There is no doubt that playing North Carolina will prepare us for the Atlantic 10's."

Nothing would lift the spirits of Barnes and his troops before A-10's more than a win this afternoon against Carolina. It has happened before, and it can happen again, if the Minutewomen can just remember a few words:

And David put his hand in his bag and took thence a stone and slung it, and smote the Philistine (Goliath) in his forehead, that the stone sank into his forehead, and he fell upon his face to the earth.

- (I Samuel 17:49)

Jen Hadley is 7-0 with a 0.65 ERA against the A-10.

softball

continued from page 12

Pending the weather, maybe we'll be able to on Monday morning. We are trying to lock down the No. 1 seed. That's huge for us."

The Minutewomen have six more games after this weekend, including three with conference opponent Fordham to finish off the season.

Due to Thursday's inclement weather, the team lost a day of practice, but Sortino felt confident that it would not be an issue heading into the weekend.

"At this point, rest isn't a bad thing," Sortino added. "We had the pitchers throw today, after a meeting in the dugout, and they'll all do what they need to do [Friday]."

The offense, which started slow but has come on strong in the month of April, will be a key to success for UMass through the end of the regular season.

"We executed our short game phenomenally against Connecticut," Sortino said. "We've been very good about that. We need to exploit our ability to run, slide and bunt in the bottom of the order.

"What's nice is that we're in a situation where we're not praying for any miracles or anything," she continued. "We just have to keep working, keep playing our game."

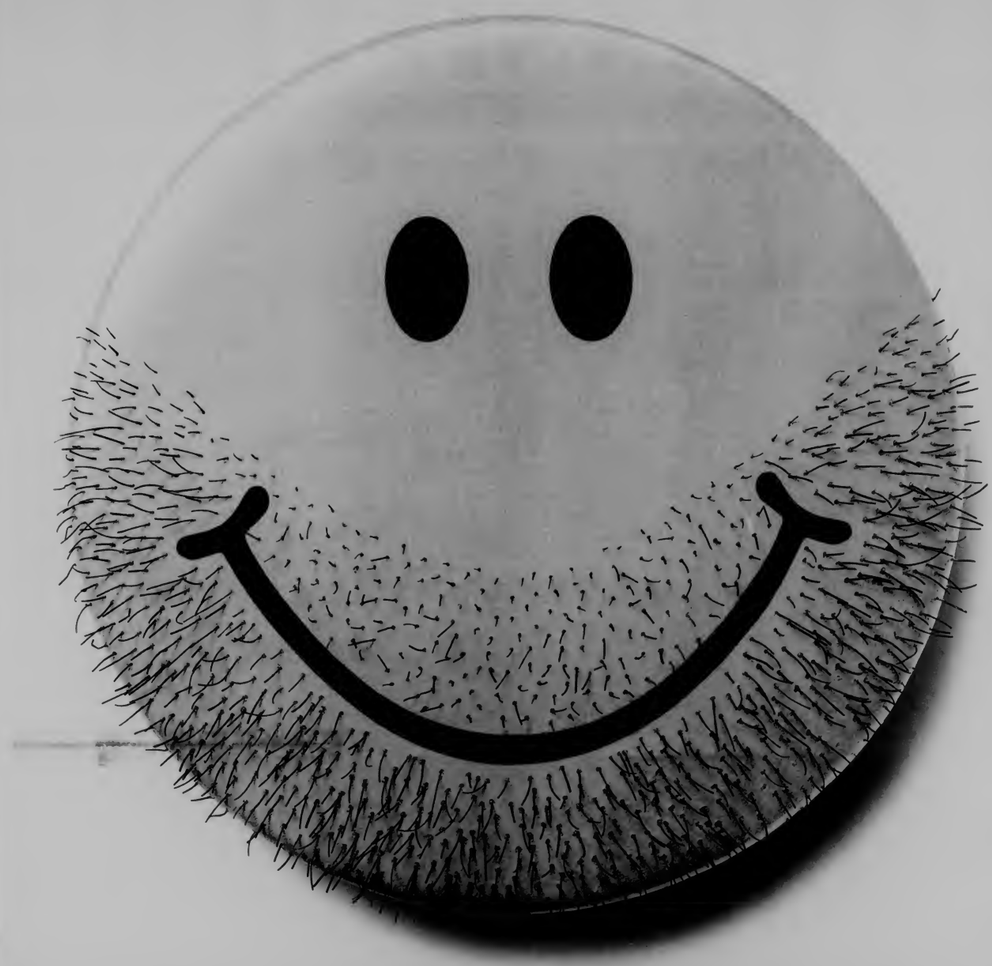
I AGREE WITH ELAINE!
www.knowmercy.org

Eliminate
FEARS/ALLERGIES
In one session
Fear of flying, public speaking, exams, needles, elevators, heights, allergies and other disturbances can be eliminated in one session
Order a free booklet at 413 374 8217

FRUGAL FRIDAY!
JOIN US IN OUR
GRAND OPENING CELEBRATION
FRIDAY, APRIL 26
ONE DAY ONLY!
In support of UMASS Spirit Day!
BUY 1 CLOTHING ITEM
and get an item of equal or lesser value
50% OFF!
UMASS University of Massachusetts UNIVERSITY STORE
Campus Center • Phone: (413) 545-2619
www.umass.bkstr.com

Old Amherst Ale House
Live Music
NO COVER
Must be 21 with a valid ID
Rt. 116 South Amherst
1 1/2 miles South of Amherst Center on the Mt. Holyoke Bus rt.
APRIL 27 - Catfish Blue
APRIL 28 - Ben Sidlinger & Phil Wiser
10pm - 12:30am

413.883.1144
Chance Perspective Entertainment Co.
Graduation Parties
Private Parties
UMass Discount
Hip-Hop
Reggae
R&B



DRIVE AN EXOTIC CAR Private organization wishing to remain anonymous seeks drivers for fast-paced competitive project. Candidates must be young, energetic and willing to take risks. For more details and liability release, go to www.testdriveinfo.com.

Castaway Lounge
Will proudly present another successful
Amateur Night
Monday May 6th starting at 7 pm
PENTHOUSE PET DOMINIQUE ST.CROIX
◆ Cash prizes awarded
◆ All ladies over 18 must apply in person
◆ Open on Mondays at 3pm with 10 Beautiful Exotic Entertainers, Food and Prizes given away
Open Tuesdays - Saturday 11am - 1am
VIP Room available for private engagement parties
Phone# 413. 665. 8733

Medical MD & Veterinary Degree Programs
Making World-Class Physicians & Veterinarians Today, For Tomorrow's World
- Programs to meet the needs of high school and college graduates
- More than a half century old well-recognized and established European medical and veterinary universities
- Programs recognized by the National Committee on Medical Education, Accreditation, and the U.S. Department of Education
- 100% financial aid is available. The U.S. government provides subsidized loans to qualified students in our programs
- Approved by New York Medical Education Board for clinical training in the state of New York. (A state with a high number of residency positions.)
- Medical and veterinary clinical clerkships/training in the USA
- Smaller class size with traditional European tutorial style education
- Programs offer opportunity to earn dual degrees – MD PhD, MD MBA, MD MSHA, MD MPHA, etc.
- Much safer campus environment, compared to many campuses in the USA, allowing retaining and strengthening of cultural identities
- English language curriculum matches to major American medical and veterinary schools.
- An excellent opportunity for hands-on participation for extensive training and experience.
- Alumni holding very good positions all over the USA.

When it comes to medical & veterinary education, our programs set standards for excellence. With cooperation from European universities, Hope Medical Institute brings you a unique, unmatched opportunity at your doorstep.

APPLY NOW!
For the October 2002 Term
For more detailed information, please contact us at:
HOPE MEDICAL INSTITUTE
753 Thimble Shoals Blvd., Bldg 2B, Newport News, VA 23606-3575
PHONE: (757) 873-3333 * FAX: (757) 873-6661

To experience the true joy of leaving the clean-shaven ordinary world far behind, log on to mtv.com where you can check out the dates for MTV's Campus Invasion 2K2 and register to win a Jeep Liberty Sport of your very own. Jeep 4x4s and MTV's Campus Invasion 2K2—the ultimate ways to experience the world of rock, in every sense of the word.

Jeep
THERE'S ONLY ONE

No purchase necessary. Must be a resident U.S. citizen 18 years of age or older and have an active online account on or before 3/17/02 to enter. Contest ends 4/28/02. Sweepstakes not open to employees and immediate families of MTV Networks; Viacom International, Inc.; CBS, Inc.; or affiliated companies and subsidiaries or employees of DaimlerChrysler. Void in Alaska and Hawaii and wherever prohibited or restricted by law. For official rules, go to mtv.com. Jeep is a registered trademark of DaimlerChrysler.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Fraternities * Sororities Clubs * Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 with the easy Campusfundraiser.com three hour fundraising event. Does not involve credit card applications. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact Campusfundraiser.com at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. - Now Available, 1&2 bedroom apts. Leases begin June, July, Aug or Sept. 1 year lease. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywine-apts.com stop by or call (413) 549-0600.

2 bedroom Apt. Millyalley. Asking $900.00, nego. Avail 6/1. 413-896-9365.

Puffton Village Apt. Newly renovated great location. Partially furnished three bedrooms includes gas/ grill available June 1ST 549-8520.

Take over our lease. Available June 1 fall option 5 BR upgrade in Puffton call 549-1474.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 bedroom Puffton Apt. Take over lease. Available June 1 with fall option. 549-7685.

Downtown Amherst: 19b South Prospect St. 2 bedroom June 1. 253-2515. Great for couple.

AUTO FOR SALE

89 Honda Accord $1500 OBO 259-0068.

Purchasing a new or used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center. 545-1995

COMPUTERS

Color Laptop $99 Pentium tower/ CD Rom $99 with color monitor $139. HURRY! 413-584-8857.

EMPLOYMNET

Weekly cleaning $6.50 HRLY part time references 549-0415 early.

SUMMER INTERNSHIPS Earn $3000 to 7000++ and gain valuable business experience working for the UMASS Official Campus Telephone Directory. Excellent Advertising, Sales, and Marketing opportunity. GREAT RESUME BOOSTER! Call Paul at AroundCampus, Inc. 1-800-466-2221 ext. 288. www.aroundcampus.com

EMPLOYMENT

CAMP WAYNE FOR GIRLS- Northeast Pennsylvania (6/19-8/17/02). Children's sleep-away camp. If you love children and want to have a GREAT summer we are still looking for Directors for Swimming, Golf, Tennis, Cheerleading and Ass't Directors for Sports and Gymnastics. Counselors for: Tennis, Gymnastics, Drama, Basketball, Golf, Soccer, Sailing, Sculpture/Tie-Dye, Silkscreen, Batik, Jewelry, Calligraphy, Guitar, Self-Defense, Video, Piano, Ropes, Mother's Helper, Night Watchperson, On Campus Interviews Arranged. Call 800-279-5019 or go to www.campwaynegirls.com.

TOP BOYS SPORTS CAMP IN MAINE! Play and coach sports-have fun-make $$ Camp Cobbossee positions in: all team and individual sports, all water sports plus: camp, hike, rock climbing, ropes, ice hockey, roller hockey, art & crafts, secretaries, top salaries, excellent facilities, free room, board, laundry, travel allowance. Online application www.campcobbossee.com or call 800-473-6104.

EMPLOYMENT

SUMMER IN MAINE Jewish, Co-ed overnight camp in the southern Maine seeks staff: Boys Unit Head (23+), Camping/ Tripping Director (23+), Judaics Director (23+); swim, water ski, and boating/ sailing instructors (lifeguard certification req'd.) ; archery (training avail.), ceramics, general athletics, gymnastics, photography, radio, low ropes, theater; general counselors, office personnel. For information, contact: Ava Goldman, Director, JCC Camp Kingswood, 333 Nahanton street, Newton, MA 02459, 617-244-5124, or e-mail: dirxtor@kingswood.org

Promoters wanted!! Student Travel Services is looking for individuals to promote spring break. Enjoy unlimited earning potential and free travel while building a solid resume! Call 800-648-4849. Or visit www.ststravel.com

SUMMER HELP Cape Cod Ice seeks drivers and P/T 2nd Shift Supervisor in our Sandwich location. Interested candidates call 508-888-8590 for more info.

EMPLOYMENT

Computer Programmer/FORTRAN for economic modeling firm, contact: Fred Treyz, REMI, 433 West St., Amherst, MA 01002, info@remi.com.

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individual, full and part time positions available immediately. Only those able to work the upcoming summer should apply. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413)584-4746.

TEENAGE BICYCLE TOUR LEADERS NEEDED: Be a Teen Tour Leader this summer. Trips in USA, Canada, Europe. We need a 4-week time commitment, salary plus expenses paid. Student Hosteling Program, P.O. Box 419, CONWAY, MA 01341, 800-343-6132 www.bicycletrips.com.

Be the Campus Red Bull connection. Join our team and help build one of the world's leading brands, you'll have a blast while gaining invaluable marketing experience. You'll even earn a little extra spending cash. Think about it. It's a lot less dangerous than selling term papers! Apply at redbullcollege.com.

EMPLOYMENT

Nantucket Island Summer Job opportunity beginning mid June office Assistant with good computer & telephone skills, miscellaneous errand running. Salary & housing 508-228-3942 or send resume to Rafael Osona Auctions P.O. box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02584.

Painters P/F time 1-3 yrs experience. Michael 367-9810

FOR RENT

Amherst Center 1 bedroom, off street parking, starting June 1ST –early move in available. Call 253-1180.

2 bedroom apt. on bus route avail. June 1 w/fall option $905/mo heat hot water included 549-1883.

FOR SALE

NEW! CD burner HP internal 8x4x32 Speed BO 259-9382

HOUSE FOR RENT

Hadley 5 bedroom plus. 1 newer home five minutes from UMASS. June occupancy $2600.00 month. 549-4270.

ROOM FOR RENT

Spacious, share house with fun couple in scenic Montague. $333. May 28-Aug 31, call 367-9822.

Looking for 1/2 roommates to share apartment for summer. Call 549-2676.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female(s) to share 2 bedroom Brandywine Apt. starting June 1 . 549-1988.

2 roommate Brandywine Apt. starting June 1. Cheap rent includes HT/HTW. Call Tom 549-5436.

1-2 females to share large house on route 47 w/4 others starting summer or fall. 546-6106.

SERVICES

Feeling ripped off? Your new car is a lemon; the warranty on your stereo just expired and it needs major repairs; you loaned a friend money and can't get it back or the dry cleaners ruined your favorite suit! Is ELSI giving you grief about your student loan? Are debt collectors knocking at your door? Contact the Student Legal Services Office at 922 Campus Center. 545-1995

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

SUMMER SUBLET

Bolders 2 bedroom Apt with possible fall option. Reduced monthly rent 256-2365.

Nice 3 bedroom townhouse. Practically on campus. Call Joe 549-9441.

1 bedroom Brandywine rent nego. 3rd floor facing pond. Jason 549-8519.

3 bedroom fully furnished for summer sublet. Great location on rt9 near bus. Call Morgan or Ilana 253-4927.

Brandywine, 2 bdrm. Available June 1. Call 549-1988.

TO SUBLET

3 bedroom available June 1ST for summer Sublet or lease takeover. Puffton village 549-1661.

1-2 bedrooms of 3 available in townhouses apt 375/mo rent negotiable call Lauren 253-7250 or Erin 546-5946.

2 Bedroom apartment partially furnished available June 1ST to sublet w/option to lease on bus route. 413-549-9612.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

1	CBS/4
2	NESN
3	Fox Sport NE
4	PBS/57
5	HSCN Movie Channel
6	WB/22
7	HSCN Movie Channel
8	TV Guide Channel
9	FOX/61
10	ABC/40
11	NBC/22
12	International Channel
13	UMASS
14	HSCN Info Channel
15	ESPN
16	ESPN 2
17	UVC/19
18	ESPN Classic
19	Cavalcade of Sports
20	CNN
21	CNN HL
22	Weather Channel
23	Learning Channel
24	History Channel
25	A & E
26	Discovery Health
27	Food Network
28	NASA
29	Home & Garden TV
30	Travel Channel
31	Lifetime
32	A&E
33	Tech TV
34	BET
35	UPN-38
36	USA
37	TNN
38	MTV
39	CMT
40	VH-1
41	TNT
42	TBS
43	E! Entertainment
44	Sci-Fi Channel
45	Court TV
46	Nick at Nite
47	Comedy Central
48	Cartoon Network
49	Game Show Network
50	TV Land
51	FOX Family
52	Univision
53	Galavision
54	Telemundo
55	College TV Network
56	C-SPAN
57	C-SPAN2
58	Bloomberg Television

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass

Client: Date: Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total days x Words = x rate = PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Student rate: 20¢/each word per day. Non-student rate: 35¢/each word per day

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — APRIL 26, 2002

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		CPTV Auction						News	Late Show
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	Carol Burnett Show: Stoppers		Without Warning (2002, Mystery) Dick Van Dyke				News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Carol Burnett Show: Stoppers		Without Warning (2002, Mystery) Dick Van Dyke				News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Funniest Home Videos		Best Commercials		20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	Sabrina-Witch	Raising Dad	Reba (N)	Maybe It's Me	News		Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Providence (N) (In Stereo)		Dateline (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order: Special Victims		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	25	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Sabrina-Witch	Raising Dad	Reba (N)	Maybe It's Me	News	Home Imp.	Blind Date	Blind Date
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Providence (N) (In Stereo)		Dateline (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order: Special Victims		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	When Animals Invade		Dark Angel (N) (In Stereo)		News		Raymond	Seinfeld
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Providence (N) (In Stereo)		Dateline (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order: Special Victims		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Great New England Auction						Great New England Auction Continues
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Funniest Home Videos		Best Commercials		20/20		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Frasier	Frasier	★½ Under Siege 2: Dark Territory (1995) Steven Seagal				News	Ent. Tonight	5th Wheel	Shipmates
WTBS	29	Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends		Major League Baseball Houston Astros at Atlanta Braves. (Live)						★ Mortal Kombat Annihilation (1997, Adventure)
A&E	16	Law & Order: "Point of View"		The View (In Stereo)		★★★ Fatal Vision (1984, Drama) (Part 1 of 2) Karl Malden				★★★ Fatal Vision (1984, Drama) (Part 2 of 2) Karl Malden
CNN	30	Moneyline		Crossfire (Live)		Amer. Stories	The Point	Larry King Live		News night		Crossfire	Moneyline
COM	30	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Kaels	Premium	Premium	Com-Presents	Com-Presents	Com-Presents	Com-Presents	Jim Breuer: Hardcore
DISC	32	Savage Paradise		Wild Discovery: Mating Game		Mortuary School		L.A. Coroner		Crime Scene Clean-Up		Mortuary School
ESPN	33	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs Conference Quarterfinal Game 5: ... Teams To Be Announced. (Live)						Baseball Tonight (N)		Sportscenter
LIFE	45	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait Cheryl Ladd.		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		The Third Twin (1997, Drama) Kelly McGillis, Larry Hagman
MTV	53	Real World	WWF Tough	WWF Tough	Andy Dick	Andy Dick	Andy Dick	Back to the Hood (In Stereo)		Music in High Places (N)		Jackass	Jackass
NICK	55	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb	Chalk Zone	Oddparents	Invader Zim	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers
SCIFI	59	Star Trek: "Out of the Fire"		Star Trek: Deep Space Nine		Strange World (In Stereo)		Fanscape (N)		Lexx: You Way to Go (N)		Strange World (In Stereo)
TLC	72	Hurricane Force		Dating Capers (N)		City Surveillance		In Search of Eden		Quest for the Lost Civilization		City Surveillance
TNT	26	★★½ Purgatory (1999, Horror)		TBA Eric Roberts.		NBA Basketball Playoffs Conference Quarterfinal ... Teams to Be Announced. (Live)					Inside NBA	Cagney Down Under (1996)
USA	62	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG: Chains of Command		★★★ Clear and Present Danger (1994, Drama) Harrison Ford, Willem Dafoe						Law & Order: Criminal Intent
HBO	63	Real Sports		★★½ The Replacements (2000) Keanu Reeves. PG-13				★★ 3000 Miles to Graceland (2001, Action) Kurt Russell. R				Path to War	Dennis Miller
MAX	65	★½ Where the Heart Is (2000) PG-13		★★★ The Perfect Storm (2000, Drama) Cecepa Gloonev. (In Stereo) PG-13								★★★ Cast Away (2000, Drama) Tom Hanks. PG-13
SHOW	67	★½ Whatever It Takes (2000, Comedy) Shane West. PG-13				★★½ Dr. T & the Women (2000, Comedy) Richard Gere. R						Stargate SG-1	Jeremiah "The Red Kiss" (N) (V)	Red Shoe

Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas

Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas

Highbrow By Aaron Eppy

Scarecrow By W. Bird

Shut the Duck Up By Seany McSean

Shut the Duck Up By Seany McSean

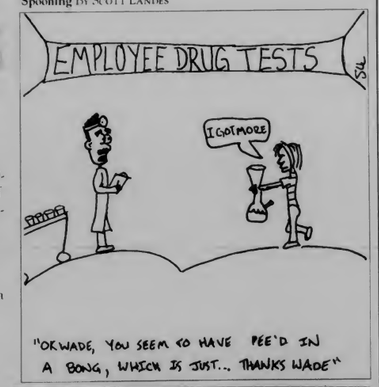
The Torques By Ken Fredette

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Quote of the Day

"Are you sayin' that Jesus Christ can't hit a curveball?"

-Major League



Amherst Weather

Friday	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 55 LOW: 33	HIGH: 64 LOW: 32	HIGH: 64 LOW: 40

Horoscopes

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Go find the latest copy of Yohany's CD, and enjoy!
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – When surfing the Internet, remember to bring your surfboard.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Go get your roast beef at the Dove's Nest.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Hard work is just the easy work you put off until the last minute.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You will meet Shirley Manson sometime this weekend.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – When the tough questions of life boggle your mind, turn to "Ozzy" and just be thankful you're not him.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – The day is long, but you'll get through it.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Be weary of that strange green substance in your fridge.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – You can never have too many productivity rooms.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Question of the day: how many tattoos does Ozzy Osbourne have on his body?
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Pisces is a "no-spin" zone.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Aries women are hot!

Spooning By Scott Landes

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Vegetarian Vegetable Soup

Shepherds Pie

Fish Nuggets

Lentil Chili (vegan)

Vegan Nuggets (W Basics)

DINNER

Vegetarian Vegetable Soup

Cajun Catfish

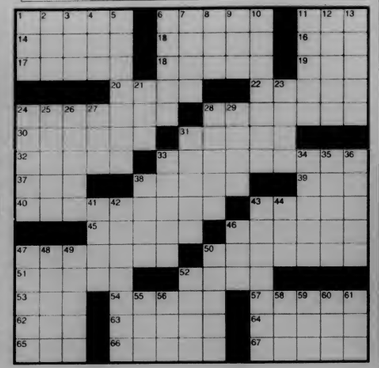
Salisbury Steak with Gravy

Vegetable Sturdel Marinara (vegan)

Potato & Mushroom Delight (vegan) (W Basics)

NEW at DB Mart...
HOT STUFF PIZZA
Buy a Breakfast Sandwich
Get 2 FREE HASH BROWNS and a 12 oz COFFEE
Redeem this coupon at:
255 TRIANGLE ST.
AMHERST, MA
413-549-5606
1 coupon per customer per visit - cash

ACROSS
1 Quilt stuffing
6 Cadge
11 Actress — Dawn Chong
14 Cosmetic buy
15 Vex
16 Vintage
17 Eavesdrop
18 Informal speech
19 Daily record
20 Make's shout
22 Dancer Castle
24 Sea north of Iran
26 Swiss and American
30 Major road
31 Veldt scavenger
32 Horse's "brakes"
33 One that's immune from criticism
37 Mandela's org.
38 Kind of premiere
39 Yes, to Yvette
40 "Get lost!"
43 Does pull-ups
45 Sword fights
46 William's title
47 Bulletins
50 Bedroom furnishing
51 Snowy-white bird
52 Pleasures
53 Contend for
54 Speck in the ocean
57 More gentle
62 Peron or Gabor
63 Midwest airport
64 Privileged few
65 Soak hemp
66 Head supporters
67 Dance spot



DOWN
1 Pause fillers
2 Charged particle
3 Batman and Robin, e.g.
4 Alter —
5 Garage jobs
6 Brick worker
7 Exclusively
8 — shoestring
9 Debate side
10 Cleanliness
11 Actors' quests
12 Solo
13 Rims
21 Loft filler
23 Use the library
24 Gem weight
25 Stadium
28 Adhere
27 Pig's digs
28 Pedal
29 Pasture browsers

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

S	E	E	P		D	U	E	T			D	A	D
A	L	M	A		O	N	T	A	P		T	I	D	E
G	A	I	T		M	I	A	M	I		A	V	O	N
E	N	T	R	E	A	T		P	R	O	W	E	S	S
		I	R	I	S			A	D	D
B	A	B	O	O	N		W	A	T	E	R	B	E	D
E	D	I	T	S		Y	A	L	E		Y	E	T	I
L	I	L		R	O	V	E	D		N	H	L
F	E	E	L	S		A	G	E	E		M	O	T	E
M	U	S	C	U	L	A	R		M	E	A	S	L	Y
			O	R	E			D	E	E	R
P	E	T	U	N	I	A		R	T	L	E	S	S
E	X	I	T		G	R	A	T	E		O	L	E	O
A	P	E	S		H	A	R	E	S		C	L	A	M
R	O	D			B	E	S	T			K	A	T	E

11-1001 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate

31 Listens	48 Pointed arch
33 Gets dirty	49 Small gift
34 Pocket change	50 — on acts like a grandparent
35 Cup fraction
36 More sensible	52 Nimy
38 Playground shout	55 "— sells seashells"
41 Singer Brickell	56 Resinous deposit
42 Bidding sale	58 Spinks defeater
43 Peaked	59 "Conduct" start
44 That fellow's	60 Catchall abbr.
46 Use a crowbar	61 Vintage auto
47 Not even once

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Matthew F. Sacco
Photo Technician	James Schaffer
Copy Editor	Jennifer Eastwood
Production Supervisor	Mike Kulak
Production Staff	Mike McCormack, Adam DeYoung

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
WEEKEND EDITION
SPORTS
COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: ERIC SODERSTROM

Lax up for an Orange crush

The UMass men's lacrosse team pulled away in the final 2:21 as it walked to an 11-6 win against Syracuse tonight in the Carrier Dome.

Haven't beaten 'Cuse since '81

By Matthew F. Sacco
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Greg Cannella readjusts in his office chair as a smirk invades his expression. He gives the view of a man recalling a humorous memory, but as words begin to escape his lips, it becomes clear that the memory isn't very fond at all.

"Since I've gotten to UMass, that's all I wanted to do," Cannella recalled. "Beat Syracuse."

Fourteen years after Cannella arrived in Amherst in the fall of 1987, he still hasn't accomplished his goal. And to make matters worse, the program itself hasn't beaten Syracuse in 21 consecutive outings, with a 22nd said to be imminent by lax gurus across New England as the No. 8 Massachusetts men's lacrosse team heads to the Carrier Dome to take on the Orange.

It's not impossible to win at the Dome, but 11 wins in 141 tries for division I lacrosse teams isn't exactly a statistic that screams "likely." And few people know that better than Cannella. The eight-year coach has had his fair share of Carrier Dome experiences — he's been as close as a 10-9 overtime loss in 1996 and as far away as a 17-7 blowout two years ago. With his experience, Cannella knows that if you go into the game intimidated, then the result is already decided.

That's why during Thursday's practice Cannella blasted hard-rock music, usually designated for pregame, to simulate the terrible hearing conditions in the dome. That's also why he has no plans to tell rookie netminder Bill Schell how difficult it is to see with the silver bleachers on each end of the field masking the ball. And don't even expect him to mention the 6,000-plus attendance the Orange has averaged for each home game.

No, he isn't going to let his team develop any preconceived notions for this game. Instead, he's just going to let them play.

"It doesn't matter," Cannella said. "We want to go in loose and focused."

Now Cannella doesn't mince words: "We have to play near perfect; it's a challenge beating a team you haven't beaten in 21 years." But then again, UMass possesses something 'Cuse knows nothing about — incentive.

"We talk about being hungry and having an edge," Cannella said. "We lost last year [9-8]; that's our edge. We haven't won in 21 years; that's our edge."

Besides, what could be a mental advantage, UMass does actually possess an edge at some of the skill positions, and it's going to need it.

The play of the offensive midfielders could very well decide the game. Chris Fiore, Kevin Leveille, Don Little, Jeff Zywicki and Dusty Smith form possibly the best offensive middy unit in the nation. All five players have broken double digits in points, including Fiore and Leveille who have 30-plus. Any scoring Cannella gets from his attack will be a bonus, because John Glatzel, Sal Bliss and Billy St. George are all All-America candidates.

Frankly, the UMass middies will have to carry the load.

The second key match up will be in net. Both squads sport rookie goalies, but Schell has been more of a standout while Orange netminder Jay Pfeifer has been seen as somewhat of a weak link on a powerful team.

Schell is coming off a career high 20-save performance against Georgetown and has all the confidence in the world. But Pfeifer does have the home field advantage, and by now, he must be used to the conditions of the dome. Schell will have to carry the Minutemen again for them to have a chance.

Cuse is much deeper and talented than G-Town was. While the Hoyas sport one Steve Dusseau, the Orange can roll out three of the same caliber at attack. Mike Powell, Josh Coffman and Mike Springer are all player of the year candidates with 30 plus points at attack. Matt McFarland and company will have their hands full, because even if you shut down one of the trio, you're still left with two guys that average over three points per game. Powell leads the team with 30 goals and 39 points and will likely draw McFarland.

UMass will have to at least limit the formidable trio, while Paul Hutchen and, perhaps the best defensive midfield in the nation shuts down Cuse's talented offensive middies.

Not since 1981 has UMass faced Syracuse and walked off the field as victors. Twenty-one years, and you'd think the contest would lose its luster.

But said Cannella, "I still get fired up."

Pitching duel set for opener

By Jim Pignatiello
COLLEGIAN STAFF

As the month of May creeps closer, the Massachusetts baseball team is suddenly two thirds of the way through its season. The Atlantic 10 playoffs are just three weeks away and with a less-than-impressive 15-19 overall record (5-10 A-10), the Minutemen desperately need to win now.

Checks in the "W" column this weekend against a conference foe would increase the team's confidence and go a long way to improving on its current fifth-place status in the A-10 East.

One problem.

UMass is taking on St. Bonaventure this weekend in Olean, N.Y.

With a 17-8 record (9-5 A-10), the Bonnies are a good team anywhere, but they are really good on their own diamond. In seven games this year at McGraw-Jennings field, the home team has won six. They have also won nine of their last 11.

Overall, reigning A-10 Pitcher of the Year, Kyle Johnson, has been effective, if not dominating, through his first six starts of the year. Johnson has eaten up some innings, going the distance four times, but has a middle-of-the-road earned run average at 4.51. He came in seventh in the nation last year (first in the A-10) with an untouchable 1.88.

Johnson has returned to form in his last three starts (all wins), giving up just 10 hits and four runs in 21 innings.

NBL's ace should take the hill against UMass' A-10 Pitcher of the Year hopeful, Jesse Santos, Saturday. Each hurler usually starts off the weekend series for their respective team to get a leg up on the competition.

Santos has been masterful in this capacity, winning six games in eight starts. The Chelmsford, Mass. native has been able to rest the bullpen during his games, going the distance five times in those eight starts. The righty is holding batters to a .218 average while striking out 30 in 59 innings.

UMass head coach Mike Stone has recently found a diamond in the rough in his bullpen in freshman Neil Schiller. The Westfield, Mass. native pitched two relief innings of one-hit ball in Tuesday's consolation game win over Harvard at Fenway Park. One week earlier, he held a very dangerous UConn team to just one hit in four innings of relief work to earn the win.

The entire Minuteman staff will have to deal with a very dangerous Bonnies' lineup. Mike Rapacioli is the team's best all around hitter and leads the team with a .358 average and 10 doubles. Freshman Damian Blakely has stepped right into the starting lineup and been very productive, batting .333 while leading the team with four triples. Junior Greg Osganian is a tough out (.329 average, .455 on base percentage) but has shown a lack of power at the plate (.443 slugging percentage). Senior Dan Dennison, on the other hand, hits a ton and leads the team with nine homeruns (.630 slugging percentage).

After carrying their team offensively through the first month of the season, UMass captains Aaron Senez and junior Chris Morgan have cooled off at the plate. Senez remains dangerous at the plate. He still leads the team in batting (.325) and slugging (.555), but just isn't getting as much of the bat on the ball as he was earlier in the season. Morgan, meanwhile, hasn't been the same at the plate since injuring his arm a few weeks ago. Normally a catcher, Morgan hasn't played in the field since the injury and hasn't hit the ball as well either.

Not to worry, their teammates are picking up the slack. After hitting an atrocious .230 in March, junior first baseman Jeff Altieri's bat has heated up in April (.398). Altieri leads the team in doubles (10) and shares the lead in runs scored (19) with senior Connell Clark. Clark and classmate Mike Kulak have been carrying some of the load offensively as well, with .316 and .318 averages, respectively.

The Minutemen have nine A-10 games left and with the postseason in plain view, they must get some more wins. Two or three this weekend would help tremendously.

Field hockey just a stone's throw from a major upset

By Justin Pearson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

It's Thursday afternoon, and Phil Barnes, the Massachusetts women's lacrosse coach, is sitting alone in his office. He looks tired and run down as he begins to dub a tape of No. 3 North Carolina, the Minutewomen's opponent this afternoon, for his players. He realizes the true depth of the task put before him and his players when they take on the Tar Heels at Totman Field.

"What we've talked about this past week is going back to the details but also just competing and playing well," Barnes said. "All we need to do is play moment by moment for the full 60 minutes."

Just nine days ago, the Minutewomen were looking good. They were 8-4 and had clinched a berth in the Atlantic 10 Tournament with a pair of road wins against St. Joseph's and LaSalle that improved their conference record to 5-1.

But then the wheels began to fall off.

UMass (8-6, 5-2 A-10) now finds itself limping toward the postseason, stuck in the midst of a two-game losing streak that has seen the club outscored 29-9 by Temple and Connecticut. But making this latest swoon all that much more worse has been the team's lackluster play over this latest stretch. In each of the last two games, UMass has allowed its opponent to run off at least seven straight tallies, a stat that cannot be repeated if the Maroon and White are to stand any chance of pulling off the upset.

Turn to HEELS, page 8

The women's lacrosse team will have its hands full against a dangerous UNC offense.

Record streak changes focus

A-10 title only worry for softball

By Andrew Merritt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The streak talk is over. The Massachusetts softball team has carved a place in history with its record breaking win streak. Now, there is a new focus of the season.

And with three games against the Dayton Flyers this weekend, that focus enters the spotlight, as the Minutewomen chase the Atlantic 10 crown.

UMass currently sits atop the Atlantic 10 standings, and this weekend will provide a chance for the team to prove itself as the elite in the conference. Dayton resides in second place, tied with Temple, and the Flyers would certainly love to take a few games from the league leaders mere weeks before the tournament.

However, the Minutemen will certainly have other intentions for the three game set.

With an offense that ranks second in the league (.287 team batting average, 229 runs, 365 hits, 43 doubles, 14 triples, 13 home runs) and a pitching staff and defense that has been the hallmark of the Minutewomen's success, the Maroon and White rolls into Dayton on the heels of a 3-0 win over Connecticut.

"With the streak and everything," senior Teri Rooney said, "the biggest part of that game was just beating Connecticut."

Junior Kaila Holtz took the win with her tenth shutout of the season on six innings of perfect pitching. Holtz ended the day with one hit and six strikeouts to her credit.

"The pitching has done extremely well," Rooney said, "and will continue to do extremely well. Pitching and Defense has been what keeps us in games. We weren't dodging bullets Wednesday. Kaila only let up routine grounders."

Now, the Minutewomen head to Ohio with visions of an A-10 Championship not too far away from their minds, although Head Coach Elaine Sortino insists that there is no reason to think about anything beyond the first clash, scheduled for 1 p.m. on Saturday.

"This is a very important series for us and a very important series for them, in terms of positioning for the Championship," Sortino said. "We can't look beyond the weekend now, though."

Turn to SOFTBALL, page 8

The Minutewomen will put their undefeated A-10 record on the line this weekend against Dayton at the Softball Complex.

streetball

continued from page 14

opponent's legs, retrieve it and throw down a reverse slam in someone's mug. That reality didn't come from the idea that originated just 30 miles West of here in 1891, inside the wits of a physician fiddling with a ball that didn't bounce and a rickety old peach basket that had no escape chute. Basketball's father, Dr. James Naismith, had no metaphorical moniker. The street never called his name.

In fact, it doesn't summon many. Guys like Earl "The Goat" Manigault don't come around too often. A street god, The Goat has a legend which includes him putting his chin on the rim, snatching quarters from the top of the backboard, dunking two balls at once and dunking one ball, catching it and dunking it again before landing on the New York blacktop. Those things are unforgettable in nature.

But here, the highlights are a bit different. The Horseshoe is immune to history. No one stays around long enough to create a legacy. Therefore, there's no point to hire a hoop historian. Most Horseshoe anecdotes don't even make it out of Southwest anyway. The stories are just too uninspired, like their birthplace.

It seems as if the Horseshoe is situated too far from University Drive. There's too much space, too much room to maneuver. If this were the city, there'd only be one court, and it'd be fenced in. The buildings would be closer. The cars louder. The air thicker. Life harder.

But inside the gates, on the other side of the chain links, the world would feel freer. It'd be like living every second of your life underwater, except for the ones you spent between the lines. That is the feeling of the street. Knowing your boys have lost all love for you. Knowing your teammates won't be too happy if they're sitting next game. Knowing that at any moment, you could become someone's gyroscope. Those are the feelings of the street.

And that's why you play ball.

THE COLLEGIAN WOULD LIKE TO THANK THE SPORT MANAGEMENT DEPARTMENT FOR ITS ASSISTANCE WITH THIS WRAP.

HUNGRY?

Subway of Amherst offers fresh 6" and footlong subs, delicious salads and, for smaller appetites, 4" round sandwiches.

SUBWAY®
4 Main Street, Amherst • 256-1919
Monday - Saturday 10AM - 12AM
Sunday 11AM - 12AM

FREE FOOD
BUY ANY MEDIUM OR LARGE PIZZA
+
CHOOSE ONE FREE

BREAD STICKS,
CINNA STICKS,
1/2 LITER SODA
OR CHEESE BREAD

GOOD 12 NOON TO 12 MIDNIGHT
NOT GOOD WITH ANY OTHER OFFERS
AMHERST 256-8911
EXPIRES 4/30/02

TICKET to SAVINGS
SAVE YOUR CINEMARK 12 THEATRES MOVIE STUBS
For great savings at participating stores!
See Customer Service for complete listing of discounts good every Monday-Thursday.
Hampshire Mall
Route 9, Hadley
(413) 586-5700

Requiem for a Hoopla

There was a point on Saturday where next to the campus pond, the cacophony of Haigis Hoopla couldn't be heard. No blown whistles, no booming hip-hop, no shouts. Nothing. The only sound was of a goose sunning herself in the middle of the pond, gliding along under a cloudless sky.

But nobody witnessed that serenity, because there wasn't anybody at the campus pond Saturday. They were all at Haigis, and there was basketball to play.

If Caligula had been a basketball fan, he would have been at Haigis also. It is an orgy of basketball: more than 30 courts, 300 teams and at least 1,000 players. On two days that were deceptively cooler than they appeared to be, at least 600 games were played. But it isn't about the specific numbers, as impressive as they might be. It's about the game.

Maybe it's about the game anyway. There was a lot of promotion going on during the tournament on the Haigis lawn. Everybody's got a t-shirt with sponsors on the back. The Army set up a large climbing wall; Bueno Y Nano sold burritos; Yoplait showed up with the biggest bottle of Yoplait ever made; boxes of Cape Cod Potato Chips kept blowing over in the wind; New Balance gave away shoes; and nothing says basketball like AC Delco auto parts. Haigis isn't just basketball, it's a chance to sponsor and advertise. On the bottom corner of this year's Haigis poster, there's even a little Daily Collegian symbol. And despite all of that, and the logos that covered players' clothes and shoes, Haigis was about the game.

And the sponsorship. But mostly about the game.

That's why there are so many people getting sunburned; they are there for the game. They are playing, or they're watching, or they're waiting. A significant part of Haigis is the waiting. Everybody's always waiting for the next game. Each team gets to play three. It's guaranteed in the contract. Games are, inexplicably, to 14. Teams have to win by two, or it's the first team to 17. Fouls only get counted after eight points. When the teams aren't playing, they're waiting. Few people seem genuinely interested in the vendors on the lawn. There are a few people climbing the Army wall, but everyone wants to watch the other games. Little kids and older men, local coaches and the referees all seem so interested with the game itself.

If they're interested, the teams playing are intense. They've all got a strategy that's going to put them over their opposition. Some of the teams try to overcompensate for a lack of size with speed and hustle. Some of the teams try to out muscle their opposition. Some teams try to out class the others. And some teams dominate.

That's what the Spuds did against the Drake Ballers Saturday afternoon. The Spuds are an older team, for two of the players – Brian Dandrea and Rod Paynemeyer are 44 and 45, respectively. They're much slower than the Ballers. They can't jump as high. They aren't as quick, even when they're not being forced to run. The Drake Ballers know this and try to take the game right at the Spuds. Between the two of them, Dandrea and Paynemeyer neither scores more than three points. Two taller players on the team do most of the scoring, including an outside shooter who's on early. Still, their team wins 14-5. Constantly subbing, the Spuds absolutely dominate the Ballers, who can't hit a shot. And when Dandrea hits his only shot of the game, a bank shot from the top of the key, his defender rolls his eyes in frustration.

Both love the competition. Paynemeyer says he doesn't know who "this Haigis guy is," but he puts on a great tournament."

Dandrea sums up his game, saying that he wished he were 20 years younger. He's a project engineer for Avery Dennison during the day, and he only plays for fun. Paynemeyer's a landscaper who took the weekend off for the tournament, and he says he enjoys playing and watching the games.

While the Spuds were handling the Drake Ballers, there was a man in a Magic Johnson Lakers jersey (a tough sin in this part of the country) on an adjacent court shooting from beyond the spray painted arc. He didn't miss. He's balding with faint tattoos on his shoulders. During his game (games are always going on), he throws a no look pass over his shoulder. Magic-like, to an open teammate who drains the shot.

Dandrea and Paynemeyer breath heavily after their first game. Dandrea is particular sweaty, and get loads for their next.

Their opponents, players in the 10-and 11-year-old division, run around on another nearby court. They're almost aimless in their strategy. At that age, they've graduated from a random approach to their offense, but they're certainly not ready to run the Princeton backdoor. One of the players, one of a set of twins, Dan Clark looks like a little Jason Williams. He's lanky with a shaved head. He's the best dribbler and scores because he grew before the rest of the kids on his team. Like everybody else who's playing, he seems to love throwing no-look passes.

A coach is flailing his arms, begging his team to run a pick-and-roll, but when they finally get the message, the play is busted. Dan sheepishly scores again. Despite the level of play, Dan's dad, Mitch, likes the experience that his boys are getting.

He says it's good for them to play against kids they never met (they're from Deerfield), because in local recreation leagues, they're constantly playing against their friends. For his part, Dan is frenetic and gives quick answers.

Who's your favorite player?

"Kobe Carter," he says looking away quickly. He means it. The coach's wife, whose own daughter isn't playing because she's too young, is mad because the kids are trying to get swelled heads from getting interviewed for this article.

Notably, the Redneck+ have just won 14-12. There's a lot of jawing with the referee during the game, nothing like setting an example for the kids), but cheering pair, one another on the butt afterwards. Scott Wood, who's in his thirties, but seems much younger, was on the post and tries to explain to the ref that his opponent was hooking his arm.

The games are intense. The day before, a player injured himself running into WMUA's radio equipment during a pick up game. Two players suddenly scrambled for the ball, and one ran the other into the setup. The booming hip-hop music cut out, then back in and then stuttered, as the CDs in the tray were knocked free.

The problem with games on the front two courts is that they're impossible to watch. The games on both are always pulsing affairs. Right after the transmitter is hit, a player shoots from outside and looks away before it hits the bottom of the net. The game is over, and they've won, 14-7. Everything happens too fast for any one person to follow, and that means picking favorite games. On Sunday, there are plenty to choose from.

Mike Babul, a three-time Atlantic 10 All-Defensive Team selection, is playing. No more Mullins Center. No more NCAA Tournament. No more Rip Hamilton or Ron Artest or Kenny Gregory to guard. He's reduced to playing in front of maybe 100 people in the hot sun in the mid-afternoon against guys who might have started their senior year in high school. He still doesn't shoot, and realistically, it doesn't look like he cares that much. He throws passes and lets his team do the scoring. He watches from the top of the arc. One of his teammates keeps trying to use a ridiculous headfake that nobody's bought yet. Babul's twin brother, Jon, is watching from the sidelines. A player tries to drive to the basket by dribbling through Babul's legs. Mike knew it was coming; the player gets the ball back and unsuccessfully tries again. It won't matter in the long run, as Babul's team moves on, 14-8.

Cut away to Court One, with the bent rim from the dunk competition that Jameel Pugh would have won had he only competed, where a player going up for a rebound gets undercut and grabs his wrist in pain. The injury becomes important later in the game. KFC, a team from Fitchburg, is griping to the referee even though they're up by 10.

"C'mon referee. Call it," a player whines.

"I won't bail you out in front of these people," shoots back a disinterested referee. The team from Fitchburg is the kind of team that abuses the rules and complains every time their opposition does the same thing.

"That's just un-sportsman-like," says a woman in the crowd, decked out in UMass women's basketball warm-ups. Her favorite team is losing to the Fitchburg team.

It's 11-5, and the Fitchburgers start up again. It's 13-7, and they still haven't gotten a call. It's 13-9, and they can't finish the game. From the top of the key, the player who has been the loudest lobs a pass to a cutting teammate who reverses the lay-up, finishing the other team. The teammate beat the injured player's replacement on the play.

The referees complain about the volume of WMUA's music after one of the next game's players does. This player is quite short, and it is a bet that his team is going to play the quick game. Out-hustle, out-shoot, out-think and pray that enough goes in before the opposition's big men can beat them. It's a simple style, but no one's supporting them, at least no one from the WMUA table.

3Dom Ring, the shorter team, starts out hot, burying four two-pointers in a row. It's 8-0 in the blink of an eye. With the music quiet, they communicate as best they can and eventually make one more two-pointer.

The opposition is, predictably, unorganized and unready to play against such speedy opposition. Ring loses its long-distance shot, but they've opened up their opposition. Excellent Money, and four quick lay-ups later, Ring wins 14-8.

Back to the other court. Kathy Coyner, the UMass women's basketball standout, might be playing her last pseudo-official game on campus. Graduated former teammates Tonia Thomas and Jaywana Bradley and a cheering section of current UMass players join her. Coach Joanie O'Brien disappears before the game begins.

Coyner drives the baseline and makes a double pump lay-up after a foul had been called. Her teammates stand and shake towels at her. Meanwhile, the opposition never had a chance, but Thomas is playing the game with a ferocious intensity, and when a call goes against her, she turns around and screams "mother-fucker." She posts up against a player much taller than she, turns around and buries a jumper. She wobbles her head a little bit, acknowledging how badly she just schooled the other girl. Her opposition can only agree with Thomas.

And that opposition is later soundly beaten by a crossover reverse layup from the UMass team's fourth player, someone's friend from New York. She's wearing glasses and a pink bandana tied around tight braids and a white tank top. Nobody really knows who she is, but one of the UMass players says she's "nice," and they mean her style of play, not her demeanor. UMass wins 14-11.

This is Haigis. Games that don't, in the long run, matter. The sun's unforgiving – nobody goes home without getting burnt – and the winner's euphoria won't last for more than a few hours. Nobody will remember who won tomorrow, and it won't matter anyway.

It isn't about the championship or the individual points scorer or the best rebounder. It's about basketball and all of the different people who come together for two warm days at the beginning of a Massachusetts spring to play a simple game.

So yeah, nobody was next to the pond Saturday afternoon watching the peaceful scene. Why would they? There was a game to be watched, and everybody was playing.

Sam Wilkinson is a Collegian columnist.

Symphony of STREET

By Eric Soderstrom
Collegian Staff

If you ball here, you know the Horseshoe. Two courts locked end-to-end, set in the heart of downtown UMass, kin to five pillars of red brick that offer no escape from the Valley's burning stare. Basketball peasants border white lines, waiting to hark on the entanglement of their brethren, while passers-by yield, yearning for the chorus of the street. The dismantling yo-yo choreography of ball-handling brilliance. The thunderous volume of choke-on-this jams. The oil-slick ensemble of cross-over ankle-breakers. The silencing swish of leather in the Drain-O inflicted mug of a self-proclaimed Mr. Basketball who is positive he is asphalt's gift from God. That is the soundtrack of the street.

But this is Amherst, where no such record seems to exist. Not even "The Doctor," Julius Erving, who once challenged this area with the extent of his orbit, would sacrifice his legend to say it ever did. This isn't the story of New York City or any of its playgrounds. This story does not take place on the professional pavement of Harlem's 155th and Eighth Avenues at Rucker Park, and it goes without mention of Pee Wee Kirkland, Skip to My Lou, Half-Man Half-Amazing, Headache, Aircraft, Main Event and Shane the Dribblin' Machine. This isn't about the fenced-in hoop altar on West 4th Street in Greenwich Village lined with fans who'd skip out of church early just to see a guy named Hot Sauce slinky a ball through his

Turn to STREETBALL, page 13

Tax rates, last thoughts and letters in Ed/Op. page 4.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
MONDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE ONE-HUNDRED TWENTY-FIVE ☆☆☆☆☆ 4.29.02

Speakers voice funding concerns

By S.J. Port
Collegian Staff

Speakers voiced their concerns on the steps of the State House last Thursday at the "Save UMass" rally.

Bob Haynes, the president of the Massachusetts branch of the AFL-CIO, began the event. Haynes served as a member of the Board of Trustees for the University of Massachusetts.

"Good afternoon my sisters and brothers, and good citizens of the commonwealth and students," Haynes said in front of the thousands of students and activists assembled at the State House. "Do you know why we built this building behind me? For you!"

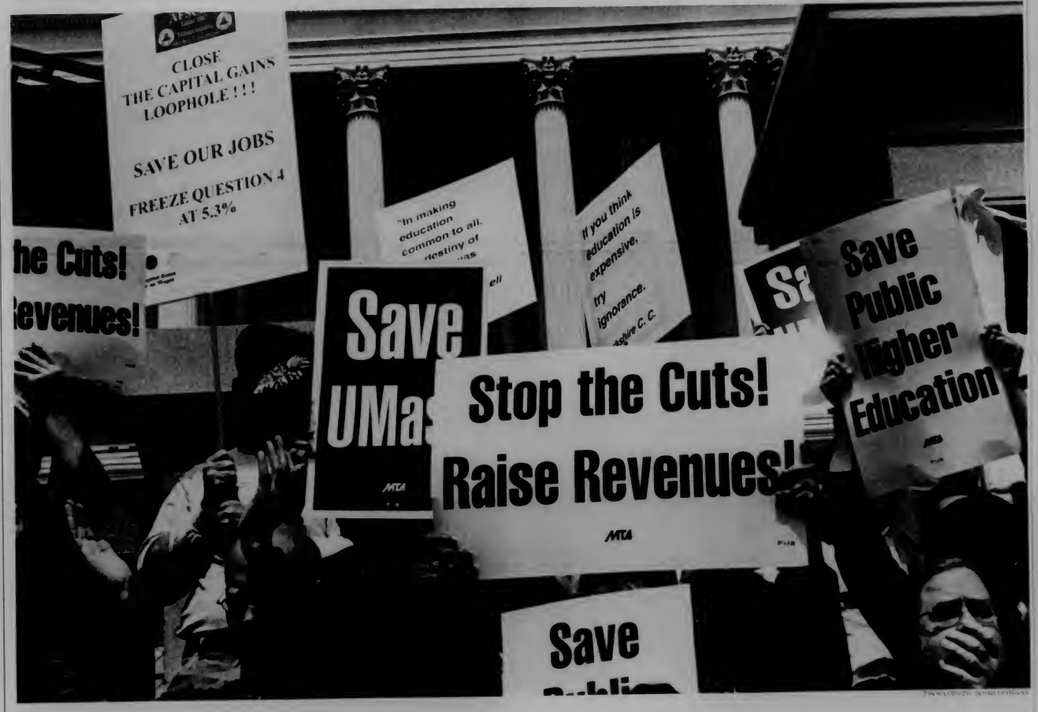
Haynes, a UMass alum, believes the budget cuts to be detrimental to public higher education.

"This is foolhardy behavior, cutting the heart and soul out of the state," Haynes said. "On behalf of a number of different unions here in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, the union movement's here to tell you today that you don't stand alone, we're with you."

Speeches began at 12:30 p.m. and continued until 2 p.m., alternating between administrators, professors and part-time faculty, undergraduate and graduate students. The crowd stayed enthusiastic and vocal, cheering on each of the speakers until it was over.

Rafael Ieonor, the UMass-Dartmouth student trustee spoke about how the budget cuts have affected his campus, and what public higher education means to him.

"The state legislature and governor cut public higher education by 70 million dollars this year alone! That's the largest cut of any state in the country," Ieonor said. "The clincher on these statistics is that Massachusetts is not a poor state. In fact it ranks as the nation's third wealthiest state per capita income.



"Like so many of you students here today I do not come from a privileged background. I came to this country, as a young immigrant from South America," Ieonor added. "For me the University of Massachusetts has been the pathway for a collegiate education. If it were not for its existence and its open doors my dreams of attaining a higher educational experience wouldn't have been possible."

Later, fellow UMass-Dartmouth student Rachel Lapointe also spoke to the issue of affordability for students who look to public higher education as their only option.

"I came to this University because I wanted a high quality education at an affordable cost; the affordability is gone. I am a working student. I work 30 hours a week and go to school full time," Lapointe said. "I have one message for those boys up there on the hill – do not cut the budget again!"

The speeches continued with Ann Withorn, a faculty member at UMass-Boston for over twenty years, and the parent of a UMass-Amherst student.

Turn to RALLY, page 4

Students from colleges and Universities across the state came out to support the funding of public education.

Sexual assault statistics provide perspective

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

This is the first story in a weeklong series addressing the issue of sexual assault.

This month is dedicated to the awareness of sexual assaults both on the University of Massachusetts-Amherst campus and across the nation. As a way of focusing upon the importance of safety, The Collegian is running a series each day this week highlighting different safety issues on campus and the groups that deal with them.

Various agencies report startling statistics on sexual assault cases every year.

Someone is sexually assaulted every two minutes in America.

One out of every six women across the United States has been the victim of a violent sexual crime or an attempted sexual crime, according to the National Institute of Justice.

There are an estimated 4.8 million intimate partner rapes and physical assaults against women annually, approximately two million of these result in physical injury to the victim, and of that two million, only 552,192 receive medical treatment for their injuries.

Even on the UMass campus numbers of sexual assaults remain fairly high. In 1998, the campus saw a total of 28 on-campus sexual assaults, in 1999 a total of 27 and in the year of 2000 a total of 30 reported on-campus sexual assaults.

Barbara O'Connor, chief of the UMass Police Department explained the statistics in a previous interview with The Collegian.

"Statistics can be deceiving things. As people become more aware of the services available to them on campus, people are more willing to report crimes," she said, explaining that it was also possible for the reverse to occur. "There may be more [cases than reported] because of the sensitivity of that crime."

She also explained that much like the national average (63 percent of all sexual assaults are committed by an individual known to the victim), much of what the UMPD deals with is acquaintance rapes.

"99.9 percent of the time we deal with acquaintance rapes," she said.

The Police Department does offer strategies for the prevention of violent sexual crimes suggesting that students walk in groups and use the on campus help phones if they notice anything suspicious.

The department also suggests that students use on campus resources like the Everywoman's Center if they are victims of sexual assault.

"During the past 15 years, the University has devoted considerable time, energy and resources to the development of a comprehensive network of services for victims of sexual assault. This network includes skilled and sensitive rape crisis counselors, a 24-hour rape hot line, police officers, therapists, nurses, physicians and campus administrators," the UMPD website states. "Victims are offered medical assistance, legal information and advocacy in the criminal justice system and in the University disciplinary system, as well as ongoing support in the form of rape crisis counseling and some academic support services.

"These services are provided to all students and community members to help victims, both male and female, deal with the emotional and physical trauma of sexual assault and resume progress toward educational goals," the website adds.

Statistics for this article were obtained from the United States Department of Justice, the National Institute of Justice and The National Crime Victimization Survey.

Vegetarians may be at risk for developing heart disease

Vegetarianism has become a popular alternative to the traditional Western-style diet for many individuals. Rises in protests against animal slaughtering and recognition of potential health benefits have led to this trendy way of eating. A vegetarian diet is considered beneficial by many because of the low intakes of saturated fat and cholesterol along with high amounts of fruits and vegetables. Results from previous research have shown that diets low in saturated fat and cholesterol are associated with a decreased risk for heart disease. However, vegetarians, especially strict vegans, may be at an ever-increasing risk for developing heart disease.

Studies comparing vegetarian diets to omnivore (meat-eating) diets have shown that vegetarians have increased homocysteine levels. Homocysteine is an amino acid formed in the body. Elevated homocysteine levels have shown to increase the risk of heart disease because it leads to inflammation of arterial walls. The breakdown of homocysteine requires vitamin B6, vitamin B12 and folate. So why vegetarians?

Vegetarian diets are often low in vitamin B12 and vitamin B6. Plant sources lack B12 and are very low in B6. The essential amino acid methionine is another substance often very low in vegetarian diets. When a deficiency of either folate or B12 occurs, the body cannot efficiently metabolize homocysteine to form methionine. An alternative pathway exists for homocysteine metabolism, which requires vitamin B6. Normal homocysteine metabolism leads to production of methionine. Methionine is then converted to a compound known as SAM,

Turn to VEGETARIAN, page 3

INTERNATIONAL BRIEFS

China

By Chloe Wiley
THE REVEILLE (LOUISIANA STATE U.)

(U-WIRE) BATON ROUGE, La. – To answer the "Where do rodents come from?" question, Louisiana State University paleontologist Suyin Ting traveled to the Heyuang Basin in Southern China.

There, she researched a hypothesis regarding the migration of early mammals.

Ting and a group of researchers made the journey to provide evidence toward the "Last of Eden" hypothesis proposed by Chris Beard of the Carnegie Museum of Natural History.

The main point of Beard's hypothesis is the thought that early mammals originated in Asia and then migrated to North America. Rodents kept showing up in the fossil records found in Wyoming and West Texas, and people wanted to know the reason, Ting said.

Ting organized the field work and served as principal investigator during January 2000.

The researchers geared up in raincoats and boots as they studied the boundaries for two weeks in harsh weather conditions. "Ideally, good weather is essential in these field work projects, but we were unlucky in that area," Ting said. "We worked in extremely rainy and windy conditions, as well as freezing zero degree temperatures. The weather was the main problem."

Group members received a lot of help from the local residents of the Basin area, Ting said.

She said the entire project ran smoothly and organized, with participants working well together.

Although they cannot indicate the specific species, they confirmed the migration route specified in Beard's hypothesis. The venture was funded by a National Geographic grant through the LSU Museum of Natural History and results were published by the Scientific Journal.

There are future plans to return to the China location and continue work in order to provide better and more evidence, said Ting. Ting has been a research assistant at LSU since 1995 and participates in projects of this nature for the sheer scientific importance. She finds personal rewards in the findings of various items that prove hypotheses and provide evidence of scientific value.

Foreign Affairs

By Jaclyn Lisenbi
THE MIAMI HURRICANE (U. MIAMI)

(U-WIRE) CORAL GABLES, Fla. – From Afghanistan and Pakistan to Miami to Venezuela and back to Miami. Such is the life of a foreign correspondent.

University of Miami adjunct journalism professor Juan Tamayo traveled to Afghanistan and Pakistan three months ago to cover the continuing terrorist activities.

More recently, he went to Venezuela returning last Saturday after covering the 48-hour coup that was supposed to overthrow President Hugo Chavez.

He is a veteran foreign correspondent who has worked for the Miami Herald since 1982.

Cuban-born but raised in Connecticut, Tamayo uses his bicultural identity to his advantage while corresponding in other countries.

"Being Cuban-American certainly helps me relate in Latin American countries. Things in Venezuela didn't seem as foreign to me as maybe they would have seemed to other people," Tamayo said.

Tamayo stressed that understanding other ways of life is the key to good journalism, as well as the key to maintaining peace in any environment. His class CNJ 510-International Mass Communication focuses on the way newspapers cover foreign stories, including how other countries view the United States.

"The question to ask is always, 'What interests people of one country about another country?'" Tamayo said. This helps in understanding of where opinions are coming from, he said.

When asked if he had any exciting experiences in Pakistan and Afghanistan, Tamayo laughed.

"It was pretty interesting. Very hard work with the huge language difference, but the biggest challenge was the lack of factual knowledge. The people thrive on the rumors and gossip. Facts are not readily available to the public like they are here," he said.

Tamayo works hard, he said, to understand the culture of the people where he is corresponding before he begins working there. For example, he read many Venezuelan newspapers before writing his article about the coup. Tamayo believes that having a working correspondent teach a class is valuable to the students.

"It's important to hear from people in the field," he said. "Although I'm not an academic, I can offer some fun learning to journalism students."

His students have a "working correspondent address" at the beginning of every class, where students can ask questions, learn, and have fun.

Tamayo's advice to students after visiting so many parts of the world? "Work hard. Understand the people you're working with and the place where you are. It starts with understanding."

Israel

By Mike Meyers
DAILY CALIFORNIAN (U. CALIFORNIA-BERKELEY)

(U-WIRE) BERKELEY, Calif. – Berkeley, Calif., may be adding a hate crimes unit to its police force in response to a rash of attacks against Jewish organizations in the city.

Mayor Shirley Dean said Thursday that she proposed the idea to Police Chief Dash Butler after receiving reports of death threats and bomb scares at Berkeley synagogues.

Within the past month, Berkeley Jewish institutions have been vandalized, and Jewish residents have been attacked on the streets.

"People are scared to let the community know they are Jewish," said Brandon Tuman, treasurer of University of California-Berkeley's Jewish Student Union.

Temple Beth El, Berkeley's largest Jewish temple, has received roughly 25 threatening phone calls in the past month, said Beth El Rabbi Feyne Raj.

Last Friday, the temple received a call stating all Jews should be "annihilated" and "holocausted."

Raj said the Berkeley police have done a good job investigating the crimes but that a specially trained police unit is a good idea.

"One should not wait until something horrible happens (to take action)," he said.

Berkeley Hillel, a resource center for Jewish students at UC Berkeley, received a bomb threat last weekend, as did the synagogue Congregation Netivot Shalom. Hillel was also vandalized earlier this month with anti-Semitic graffiti painted on the property.

Hillel Executive Director Adam Weisberg said the tense atmosphere on campus and in the city has been increasing for more than a year.

Since the vandalism at Hillel, the violence "has reached an alarming level," he said.

Weisberg said he connects Berkeley's violence to international events.

"I think people use the current violence in the Middle East as an excuse to act out in violent or hateful ways," he said.

Weisberg echoed Raj's statements in praise of the Berkeley police response to the incidents and supported Dean's hate crimes unit proposal.

Dean said she will package the proposal for a police crimes unit with a broader recommendation for how to end the recent barrage of hate crimes. Her proposal is expected to be considered by the City Council at its May 14 meeting.

"If there is a recognition that we want extra attention paid to this, it will help stop it," Dean said.

Hate crimes against other groups in Berkeley have also been on the rise. In March, Latino groups in Berkeley received racist letters laced with a white powder mistaken for anthrax. And Arab and Muslim residents have also been threatened, Dean said.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life became the College Signal in 1907, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Daily Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Sam Wilkinson Editor-in-Chief
Matthew F. Sacco Managing Editor
Amy Garganta Business Manager
Shimauli Dave Production Manager
Jake Ellen Diversity Editor
Mike Kulak Editorial Production Manager
Jason Smith Advertising Manager

Mike Delano Arts & Living Editor
Matthew Despres Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jennifer Eastwood Features Editor
Catherine Turner News Editor
Tibora Girczyc-Blum Photography Editor
Eric Soderstrom Sports Editor
Brent Siniawski Finance Manager
Charlie Iacco Distribution Manager

Morgan Taylor Advertising Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Cara Murphy Assistant Finance Manager
Shawn Daugherty Assistant Business Manager
Megan Shannon Assistant Advertising Manager

WHO IS ELAINE?

Elaine is an Environmental Science senior, loves to go on adventures with the outing club and drives buses for PVTA. She is also a Christian. Funny thing is, she wasn't a Christian when she came to UMass. In fact, she wasn't even sure she believed in God.

On May 1st, Elaine will be sharing her amazing journey that has taken her from skepticism to faith. Admission is free and there will be a question and answer session at the end. Everyone is invited.

Wednesday, May 1st 7:00pm
UMass Campus Center rm # 174

Brought to you by MERCYhouse - "It's a church"
www.knowmercy.org - 374-7532

PROMISES

Tuesday, April 30, 2002
7:00 p.m.
Campus Center Auditorium
UMass Amherst

A feature-length documentary about seven Palestinian and Israeli children living in Jerusalem and the nearby Dheisheh refugee camp. "Promises" speaks to the heart of the Palestinian-Israeli conflict as seen through the eyes of its children.

Discussion with director B.Z. Goldberg following the film

ACADEMY AWARD NOMINEE
BEST DOCUMENTARY

Free and open to the public

Presented by the UMass Office of Jewish Affairs and the Campus Activities Office
For information call 413.545.9642 or www.umass.edu/jewish

■ rally

continued from page 1

She came to the rally for herself and her daughter, who was also in the crowd.

"I'm here for both things, I've seen the cuts at my own University and worried about my daughter's education," Withorn said. During her speech she made it clear that she was a determined supporter of public higher education.

"I've been at UMass-Boston since 1977, and this is one of the best crowds I've ever seen here," Withorn said. "If we have to be back here next week we'll be back, and we'll be back, and we'll be back, because we know now more than we ever did why it's important to save UMass."

Asia Algrady, student body president of Bunker Hill Community College, spoke for her peers when she said "nine out of ten community college students continue to live and work in the Commonwealth after graduation" therefore returning the investment the state makes in public higher education.

Algrady went onto explain the importance of education as part of society.

"The lack of an education begets ignorance, and when you're ignorant you are powerless. You do not comprehend what you can possibly achieve," Algrady said. "Education also assists in the understanding of our environment, it provides us with role models to let us know that regardless of race, gender, sexual orientation, class or creed, we have the power to say no to ignorance and yes to equal educational opportunities."

Phillip Johnston, the chairperson of the Democratic Party for Massachusetts and an alum of UMass-Amherst told students to enter the State House and their representative's offices understanding that as students, they had friends within the legislature. In addition, he represented the Democratic Party as being supportive of public higher education.

"There is no Institution I care more about in the state of Massachusetts than UMass, and I am here to tell you that the state Democratic Party of Massachusetts supports the University of Massachusetts. Investing in the young people is the smartest thing that the governor and the legislature can do. That's why we not only want the cuts restored, but we want to make the University of Massachusetts the premier public institution of higher education in this country," Johnston said. "And we can do it. I'm going to tell you that all of us are going to fight, as the senate president said the other day, 'with every fiber of our being' for the political process and your right to be here in front of the state house.

"You've got a lot of friends in that building, don't think that they're adversaries, they're friends, and at the end of the day we're going to strengthen this great University and we're going to continue to be proud of you, and your professors and UMass," Johnston added.

Jim St. George, director of Tax Equity Alliance of Massachusetts, spoke to rally attendees about the importance of taxes within the issue of budget cuts. St. George began by saying that his degree from a public university was from a time when the state was raising spending on higher education, as opposed to now.

"Twenty years ago spending for higher education in Massachusetts was seventh in the nation. Do you know where we are today? 49!" St. George said. "It's time to turn those cuts around, and I got to tell you there's only one way to do it, you need to raise taxes to do it."

TOM WEA GIBLIN/COLLEGIAN

Save UMass activists pitch their cause to school children.

SCOTT ELLSBURY/COLLEGIAN

The rally featured speakers such as, Phillip Johnston head of the Massachusetts Democratic Party, featured above.

■ vegetarian

continued from page 1

which is required for over 100 reactions in the body. SAM regulates the rate at which the body breaks down homocysteine. When methionine levels are low, so are SAM levels. Thus, a deficiency in vitamin B12, B6, or folate can affect the rate at which homocysteine is metabolized and can lead to elevated concentrations in the body. Low methionine intakes can also exacerbate the problem.

Diets low in B12 are also low in vitamin B6, which are found widely in animal food sources. Most of the heart disease risk among vegetarians occurs because of the lack of vitamin B12. As noted above, a deficiency in the vitamin can lead to a deficiency in other vitamins despite their presence in the body.

If a deficiency of vitamin B12 were to exist for too long, anemia could develop characterized by overly large red blood cells. Folate deficiency may occur indirectly because vitamin B12 is required for making it available to aid in DNA synthesis. Food manufacturers have tried to prevent folate deficiency and folate-related hyperhomocysteinemia by adding folic acid to foods. This has been an effective strategy; however, this has not completely solved the problem. Yperhomocysteinemia is now related to B12 deficiency. Folic acid can mask B12 deficiency because impaired red blood cell synthesis will not occur. Yet, homocysteine levels will still be very high.

It is important to understand that even though you follow a vegetarian diet, you may still be at risk for developing heart disease. Vegans appear to be at the highest risk because of total lack of animal sources in the diet, leading to very low, if any, B12 consumption. Foods high in vitamin B12 are foods of animal origin, like eggs, dairy products and meats. Becoming aware of this problem, food manufacturers have begun to add vitamin B12 to a variety of foods. Vegetarian diets have been shown to lower total and LDL cholesterol. Yet, a vitamin deficiency resulting in elevated homocysteine levels will negate any of the other potential benefits. Making sure that your diet is adequate in all of the essential nutrients is crucial. Once this is achieved, only then can you be sure that you will maintain a healthy body. Be Healthy!

Christopher Theberge is a Collegian Columnist.

Prayer Service for Healing in the Catholic Church

Wednesday, May 1st
The Feast of St. Joseph
7:30pm Newman Center Chapel

Please join us for an evening of prayer and reflection for healing in the Catholic Church as we ask for God's guidance, strength and forgiveness.

St. Joseph,
Patron of the Church

Transgender erotica focus of new book

By Rachel Smith
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Amherst's Food for Thought Books hosted readings Wednesday evening from Best Transgender Erotica, an anthology of short stories by and for the transgender community. The book is the first of its kind.

Co-editor Raven Kaldera introduced the book and read selections to the small gathering at Food For Thought. Co-editor Hanne Blank could not leave her home in Maryland for the reading and book signing.

Kaldera is an intersex activist and a parent. He's authored two other books, both dealing with transgender subjects.

Kaldera described his book as an act of resistance against dangerous stereotypes of transgender individuals that persist in erotica.

While erotica in the past objectified transgender people and usually ended with some kind of punishment for people who dared to break free of the social constraints of gender, Kaldera and Blank's book covers the full spectrum of the transgender community in a positive light, according to Kaldera.

"Most people don't know what transgender folks do in bed," Kaldera said. "It's not sick."

After Kaldera offered some background information about Best Transgender Erotica, he began the one-hour reading simply and directly.

"Without further ado, let's have some smut," Kaldera said.

The first selection was an explicit account of an affair between two men who dress as women, Penelope and Belle. Besides containing a fair amount of "smut," the story explored the complex dynamics of the characters' relationship and the duality of their sexuality.

Penelope asked Belle to dress and behave as a man while they took Penelope's son to a baseball game. Belle was not comfortable slipping in and out of gender roles and ultimately declined. The relationship ended.

Humanization of transgender individuals as exemplified by Penelope and Belle was exactly what Kaldera hoped to accomplish.

"I'm doing this to change people's heads," Kaldera said. "I'm doing this to show trans-folk in an entirely different way. Except for the [stories] that are fantasy or science fiction, we really pushed for stories about people who could be real, could be your next-door neighbor.

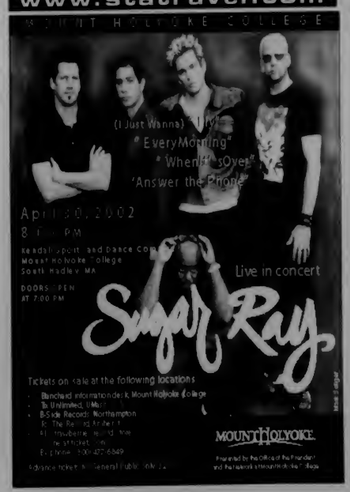
"These could be folks that you know, not fantasy creatures with improbable anatomy doing stupid, ridiculous things that we don't do," he added. "We wanted something where people could say, 'Yeah, I can imagine doing something like that with a person like that'."

While Kaldera hopes to reach a broad audience, his primary focus is the transgender community.

"These are my brothers and sisters and it's a self-worth issue," Kaldera explained. "A lot of trans-folk have a hard time thinking of ourselves as positive sexual beings because we have such trouble with our bodies. When you have all this trouble with your body, its really hard for your mind and body to be in the same place when you're having sex. So, that's one of my big goals [with the book]."

Best Transgender Erotica is available now, and Kaldera may publish a second volume depending on the anthology's success.

Write for News!



STUDENT TRAVEL
It's YOUR trip, take it!

London.....$288	BUDGET HOTELS for as little as
Paris.....$377	$18 A NIGHT!!!
Brussels.....$458
Rio de Janeiro..$654
San Jose C.R...$523

Fares are round-trip from Hartford. Restrictions may apply. Tax not included.

STA TRAVEL
800.777.0112
www.statravel.com

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM "WRITING IS 5,000 CUTS, BUT THE BANDAGES WASH OUT EASY." HEMINGWAY ED/OP EDITOR: MATTHEW DESPRES

Gang violence isn't "tough"

The violent altercation between two rival motorcycle gangs in Laughlin, Nev. on Saturday is just another example of what's wrong with gang activity in the United States.

For the most part biker gangs have separated themselves from the drunken, violent image of a decade ago. But whenever large groups of arrogant and charged motorcycle riders get together there is always the risk of violence, as was the case on Saturday when biker gangs from all across the country gathered in Nevada for the 20th annual River Run event.

The event annually draws anywhere from 50,000 to 80,000 motorcycle enthusiasts each year. That number includes infamous gangs such as the Hells Angels, who are notorious for finding themselves in the midst of violent acts.

That reputation was furthered early Saturday evening when a member of the rival gang Mongols wandered into a group of Hells Angels and a melee ensued. Three men lost their lives in the incident and at least 10 more were injured for no apparent reason. Police are investigating the death of a biker on Interstate 40 in California for links to Saturday's altercation.

Authorities found and collected weapons ranging from knives to tools to guns and over 200 people were questioned, but the cause for the violence has not yet been determined.

But when gangs like this are involved, the reason could be anything. Maybe the Mongol gang member looked at one of the Hells Angels the wrong way, maybe he snickered as he walked by, or maybe he threw a punch – no matter. Violence like this is inexcusable and it is exactly the reason why gangs like this will always cause a problem in this country.

For some reason gang members feel it is imperative to prove their toughness through violence whenever the opportunity presents itself. Many times it can result in simple roughhousing or maybe just a bar fight that ends in a few bumps and bruises, but as we saw and read about on Saturday, sometimes people get killed.

If not for the large police presence already in the area for the River Run, the death toll could have been a lot larger than three. Consider that a police officer was actually forced to draw his firearm and engage a firing gang member, and it's easy to wonder how more lives weren't lost. In fact, seven more men were treated for bullet wounds and another officer's gun discharged while he was wrestling with one of the assailants – all because one gang member convinced himself it would be okay to walk into a group of rival gang members.

Imagine how easily this event could have been avoided. But if you talked to one of the gang members, they would likely argue that it could not have been stopped. They would probably argue that it was a test of manhood, or toughness or something of that insignificant sort.

The fact is that gangs of any kind, not just biker gangs, are ugly events waiting to happen. And despite the evidence that most of these gangs have done much to lessen their infamous reputation – especially the Hells Angels, who have severely dropped off from the type of altercations they used to engage in – wherever these gangs go there is still a danger that violence will occur.

Information from CNN.com was used in this editorial.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

Should five percent appear too small
Thoughts on the rally

KEN CAMPBELL

I witnessed one of the things that make this life so interesting last Thursday. I stood on the steps of the State House and watched as thousands of activists from five University of Massachusetts campuses, a slew of community colleges and a bunch of state colleges showed the Commonwealth what they wanted. The outpouring on the stage from the speakers paled in comparison to the sheer weight of emotional force projected from the crowd. They cheered. They yelled. They hooed budget cuts. They waved their signs and most importantly, they were there. The students, teachers, and friends who attended the Save UMass rally showed everyone who tried to drive through Beacon St. that they cared about their education.

And not just for themselves. They were there for each other, and for the bus after bus filled with school children on field trips to the state capital. The kids, no doubt, thought the activists were all crazy. Some of them put it. Some of them realized that the college kids screaming in the road were there for them. One activist told a group of school children why they were there.

"We're doing this for you," he said. "Good luck paying for Harvard."

And it's true. Statistically speaking, at least some of those hundreds of children would be accepted to private schools. How they would pay for them is another story. State schools are the most easily affordable, quality education for many of these kids. Well, it used to be anyway. With revenue dollars falling it seems as though other state programs are being funded by auctioning off educational resources. Worse, while the Commonwealth of Massachusetts is one of the richest states in the Union, it ranks toward the bottom in spending for public higher education. There is a two billion dollar shortfall in the budget next year. This will result in annualizing the budget cuts of a few months ago. This means more suffering for college students. This means fewer crowded classes. That's not a good thing, because crowded classes are the only kind that will exist. These cuts will mean fewer teachers, fewer educational opportunities. The only things increased by the budget cuts are stress, years in attendance and student debt. The problems facing this campus now are not going to go away, despite the action of those thousands last Thursday. And the General Court knows it. It said as much in the proposed House Ways and Means budget. Legislators know that the cuts will negatively and possibly irreparably harm the University.

"The answer is simple, but unpleasant. The tax rate, which has been falling based on a voter initiative, must freeze."

Legislators were concerned with other things – like whether their special interests are funded to their liking. Aides and spokespeople told students that while the General Court does care about education, it cares about a lot of other things too. Their hands are effectively tied, in other words, because there just isn't the money available to fund everything satisfactorily. To reiterate: Massachusetts, one of the richest states per capita in the Union, cannot afford to fund its programs. The government is no longer by the people, because the people are not supporting it with the green lifeblood it needs. The only way currently that the educational budget slashes could be fixed is through drastic slashing of other needy programs, like healthcare. UMass could not sleep at night if it knew that the money filling its mattress came from sick children, the elderly and other citizens who needed healthcare.

The dilemma posed to the Commonwealth is understandable. While the efforts put forth by the activists on Thursday were admirable, it is unlikely to significantly effect immediate change. That is said, especially considering the pure caring will of those involved. I have never been so proud to be a student, and that is something for a guy with as much school pride as I have. Unfortunately, looking at the House budget, it is a harsh reality that the money just is not there. Something must change on a large scale, in order to benefit all parties. Not just the University students, but those needing healthcare, towns and cities around the Commonwealth that depend on the General Court to fund local programs, and every other line item in that heavy gray bill.

The answer is simple, but unpleasant. The tax rate, which has been falling based on a voter initiative, must freeze. In fact, it should return to a higher level. The Commonwealth is bleeding out, and the voters stopped the intravenous feed of revenue via the ballot box. Nobody likes paying taxes. It is especially hard when you don't make that much money, and it seems like all of your money goes for taxes. It gets worse when one reads of the extremely wealthy escaping taxes because of tax loopholes. We cannot let this distract us though. Revenues must increase first and foremost. Once this nearly rudderless ship of state government is back on an even keel, then we can take steps to even distribute the tax load on more sturdy shoulders.

It is one of those situations where the cure is almost as bad as the disease. We must pay more in order to save UMass, healthcare, childcare, construction programs, trial courts, libraries and a slew of other line items that are just as deserving as our fair University. I hate thinking that taxing is the only way to combat this problem, but there are only a few ways of raising revenue, and taxation is one of them.

Ken Campbell is a Collegian Columnist

ed/op!
sq\obi

WRITE TO ED/OP AT COLLEGIANEDITORIAL @YAHOO.COM

Letter to the editor:
Student parenting

To the Editor:

I sat there as those words of strangulation and suffocation turned my lips blue from silence. I was not intending to be the Collegian poster child for single mothers in college, adjacent to an article about twenty-one year olds complaining that they can't finish their homework and how they drool in envy of their peers eating lettuce from Earthfoods. I don't consider myself some lonely mother raising my crying seed alone, deserted by the man who was supposed to hold the flame that guided me to an everlasting serenity. I am not a "story," I am not looking for a pity party, and I possess a lot more humility then I do shame when someone praises me for going to school with a child. My "story" of having a baby in college does not hold a candle to the stories I can tell you about growing up Latina in the inner city or about how the white man has raped my family's tribe of their land – that's struggle.

Despite popular belief, my daughter was not the product of a night of bliss, or the lack of a condom. Sorry, where I come from I was taught that self-move is self-wealth. I don't sit by and feed my soul to words of C.R.E.A.M. (Wu-Tang song), where they speak of their hoes, because I know that I am worth more than that. I am not one of those girls who think they're respected because they "gave it up." The fact of the matter is that I probably do the same amount of homework now that I did before I had my daughter. I do just as many extracurricular activities and my above average GPA is not a product of the extra effort I put in because I "owe it to my daughter" or "I have to prove myself as a single mom." I do not attempt to garner respect out of the consequences I undertook by having my daughter. I am more worthy of respect for the culture I practice, the righteousness I preach and the bond that I have with my pen and paper. In fact, I don't consider my daughter a consequence at all, she is a part of my life, as is getting my education, my family, my friends, and all the other thing that make me who I am.

Not for nothing, but my situation is not that much different from the next girl that walks by in the campus center. They face the same consequences I do only in different form. I see these girls running around disguising their identities. They think they're unique and beautiful yet self-hatred stares through where midnights used to, as they reminisce about the abortion they had last week. My daughter is not a consequence of my teenage ignorance nor is it a consequence of me trying to "do the right thing." So, before you cast me as a struggling, regretful single mom crying because she can't go to Club Kai on Thursday night, campaigning for teenage girls to be careful because they too might end up in my situation, think again, because I would rather be at home, with my daughter, philosophizing on some ill Bell Hooks quote.

Michaela Hantaywee Sanchez-Church
UMass

I was wondering…
Weren't you?

BRIAN LOHNES

I haven't got much time left; I am outta here in just a couple of weeks and I only have a couple of columns left. Ok, now stop crying, we have to be strong here. As with most seniors I have been looking at things as "lasts," as in, this is the last night I will spend in the lockup at the Amherst police station. Or, this is the last time I will secretly curse the kids whacking themselves in the nuts with Nerf swords on the town green. Then I just gave up with all that and decided that I may as well lead my life as I have been for the last four years, so normal things started aggravating me.

Why is it that I can go to the supermarket and spend 130 dollars on food and get a line by line itemized receipt of everything I bought, then minutes later go to Blockbuster video and rent one movie for $4.19 and have a receipt that is even longer? I seriously think that Blockbuster has a large section of the rainforest reserved for their receipts.

Whose bright idea was it to put a giant granite block at the end of an 800-foot pathway down by Southwest? This path, which is dubbed the "Amherst/UMass bikeway connector", doesn't need a piece of mountain-side to mark its existence. I wonder when the "Rape Trail" granite block is going to be placed. I think I see a perverse game of one-upmanship going on here between the residents of Southwest. These kids have figured out how to burn, pillage and destroy pretty much everything else in the world so let's see how they do with a giant granite block. This is a direct challenge to you, the residents of Southwest. They think you can't move a rock weighing more than several of your VW Jettas combined. They don't believe in the triumph of the drunken freshman male spirit. They don't understand that if you drink enough Natural Ice in one sitting anything is possible. I say make them understand. Southwest: Make them understand. Also, do not get squashed under the rock when performing these superhuman tasks – that would look bad. Girls do not dig guys that have been reduced to 2-D.

"…this is the last time I will secretly curse the kids whacking themselves in the nuts with Nerf swords on the town green"

Why is it impossible for anything in my life to happen without being insanely drawn-out? You see fair reader, I have had one waking dream my whole entire life. I've wanted to get a job with a major car or truck magazine. I may be 22-years-old legally, but I am about eight mentally. Racecars and big trucks are just about the neatest thing in the world to me and always have been. So a job that involves me looking at them and writing about them for a living is just about ideal. I shipped a bunch of resumes out to Los Angeles, where all the magazines are located. Weeks and months go by and I hear nothing. I figure that I didn't have the gusto to get the job done; they wanted someone else. Then last Friday happened. I got a call from (you guessed it) Los Angeles, not telling me I have the job, but instead telling me that it is between me and one other guy for the job and the guy making the decision is going on a trip for the next week or so. Perfect.

Why are any of us actually going to graduation? Let's see here, we do not actually get a diploma, we do not walk across a stage, we will listen to Kenneth Feinberg and we will leave confused and still unemployed. This may be the one question that could be answerable. Our parents and family are the reason we are going. My mom has been asking me where she should sit to see me at graduation. I calmly told her that graduation is in the football stadium and unless she has a hunting scope with her, I will look like the several thousand other people at graduation, wearing a dress and a had hat. I still think she believes that I am going to be involved in this ceremom somehow.

Why did I forget to bring me camera down to the Mullins Center on Saturday night for the big country music show that was going on? What would I need a camera for at a country music concert? Mullet pictures, of course. There were probably more mullets packed into the Mullins Center on Saturday night than in the entire state of Massachusetts on any given day. I actually heard a rumor that vendors were selling clip-on mullets to those people that were unlucky enough to have a current hairstyle.

How many people actually graduate from a mail-order high school/college degree program? Talk about risky, think of times that a professor has lost your exam or paper between your classroom and the office! Imagine hundreds of postal workers handling your classwork as it passes from one coast to the other. Potential for disaster, very high. I am also curious to find out how many of those people specialize in the "gun care" studies department.

Brian Lohnes is a Collegian Columnist.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 4.29.02 ARTS EDITOR: MIKE DELANO

Remembering Left Eye

COURTESY TLC.COM

Lisa "Left Eye" Lopes.

By Nikolas Markantonatos
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The world has lost one of its most gifted and talented young entertainers.

Lisa "Left Eye" Lopes, the snarky, sometimes volatile member of the Grammy-winning trio TLC was killed in a car crash while on a humanitarian visit to Honduras. Lopes, who was reportedly not wearing her seatbelt at the time of the crash, was one of seven passengers in the car, and the only one killed. She would have turned 31 next month.

"We had all grown up together and were as close as a family," said surviving members Tionne "T-Boz" Watkins and Rozanda "Chilli" Thomas in a statement on Friday. "Today we have truly lost a sister."

Since their first album in 1991, Oooohhh…On the TLC Tip, the world had watched the sensational trio grow up into true adult superstars, witnessed three great albums and countless headline dramas. Now the thrilling show seems to be over.

The tragedy of her death is all the more poignant because of all Lopes had to look forward to, and all she had to offer. Lopes was more than your average, run-of-the-mill R&B singer. She was known for her very individual sassiness, an appealing blend of sensuality and cool. Her charity work showed that she never let the trappings of celebrity get to her head. To true music fans her prodigious gifts were well known.

Atlanta based TLC was one of a handful of artists/groups pushing the boundaries of popular music and brought a whole new palette to R&B and hip-hop. The group had street credibility and mainstream appeal; they were smart, sexy and on the cutting edge of music. Their classy but cool style still kept them closely connected with African-American culture. This formula deeply affected the course of TLC's career and helped secure record album sales for a girl group (21 million).

The band also soon became know for its flashy, hyper videos and picked up a number of MTV Video Music awards.

TLC had a natural chemistry that other groups lack. Their unique sound, which paired Watkins and Thomas' vocals with Philadelphia-born Lopes' fast-paced rhymes, along with their baggy wardrobe, made them an immediate sensation.

Other girl groups such as Destiny's Child can't match their smooth blend of irony and attitude. Although Survivor was a great album, their together-forever stance that is found on nearly every track of the album barely holds up considering their revolving door of group members. Similarly, the Spice Girls, lost one of their members and never exuded the girl-power audacity found in TLC's lyrics and performances.

TLC's biggest success is the 1994 landmark 10 times platinum CrazySexyCool. Within the group, Lopes was dubbed the "crazy" member, while Thomas was the "sexy" one and Watkins the "cool" one. The album saw the women abandon their sometimes gimmicky intrage to evolve into a critically acclaimed group. The album won them the first two of their four Grammy Awards.

TLC's songs delivered a message of female empowerment, using sassy, tongue-in-cheek rhymes. They made it abundantly clear that they didn't want no scrubs. The lyrics to "Ain't Too Proud to Beg," "Waterfalls," and "No Scrubs" were straight from the streets, yet poignantly addressed safe sex, AIDS, black-on-black crime and self-respect, becoming part of their endearing feminist credo.

"No Scrubs," written by members of another Atlanta group, Xscape, drew attention for its take on underachieving men with overactive egos. The song was so influential that it spawned a male version titled "No Pigeons" by hip-hop group Sporty Thievz, which took aim at gold-digging women. "You birds wanna take over?" it says. "Get some cash and a Jenny Jones makeover." Needless to say, the song wasn't nearly the hit "No Scrubs" was.

Other social statements made by TLC set them apart from other groups as well. Lopes earned her "Left Eye" nickname because of a fondness for covering up her left eye with a condom while on stage, promoting contraception to their young fan base. Lopes even served as host for MTV's shortly run daily show, "The Cut." Both on and offstage, Lopes delivered her lines with authority without sounding too preachy.

But over the years, with that success came one screaming headline after the other. The trio declared bankruptcy a few years ago, citing poorly structured recording contracts. Watkins was hospitalized several times, suffering from sickle cell anemia. More than any other member of the group, Lopes became a character, and what she did offstage became just as interesting as what she did onstage.

In 1994, Lopes set fire to the Alpharetta, Ga. house of then-boyfriend Andre Rison, the Atlanta Falcons receiver to whom she would later become engaged.

Turn to LOPES, page 6

Jason X a stunning romp

COURTESY NEW LINE PRODUCTIONS

Jason Voorhees pre-upgrade in Jason X.

COURTESY NEW LINE PRODUCTIONS

Some of Jason's scantily-clad victims.

By Sam Wilkinson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

JASON X
Directed by James Isaac
With Kane Hodder and Unknown Teen Actors

This is the simple "slasher" formula – a murderer ruthlessly pursues a group of teenagers, killing them one by one until some sort of climatic conclusion. Scream played with the gimmick, using two killers and keeping it a mystery until the end. I Know What You Did Last Summer sought to make the killer's victims hardly innocent. Urban Legend tried to pin the killings on amorphous legends. For a while, the alterations were both clever and successful. Teen horror movies banked big bucks. Critics seemed to appreciate Hollywood's new self-aware attitude toward horror films.

But beneath the surface at Camp Crystal Lake, one critic was miffed. Where, he wondered, were the traditional killers? Where, he wondered, were the moral messages? Where, he wondered, were the sorts of things that made slasher movies successful in the beginning?

Enter Jason Voorhees.

With Jason X, Voorhees has now appeared in ten movies, all featuring the same premise – seeking revenge against those who wronged him. Voorhees murders the teens who remind him of those that let him drown in Crystal Lake in the middle part of the last century (technically, the first installment featured Voorhees's mother seeking the same sort of revenge, and the fifth installment featured another parent seeking revenge under the guise of Jason).

Like the fairy-tale story of an aging veteran returning for one final game, Voorhees's return to the big-screen in Jason X is an overwhelming success. After the government botches an attempt to study Voorhees's incredible ability to regenerate after taking endless abuse (including his ability to escape Hell after the ninth movie apparently), he is cryogenically frozen for 450 years. So is his final almost-victim – Jason stabs her but she is frozen before she dies.

And thus, a plot is born when teenage explorers from a class (what sort of class, one might wonder…) return to Earth and bring both Jason and his victim on-board tried to pin the killings on amorphous legends. For a while, Hollywood's new self-aware attitude toward horror films.

But beneath the surface at Camp Crystal Lake, one critic was miffed. Where, he wondered, were the traditional killers? Where, he wondered, were the moral messages? Where, he wondered, were the sorts of things that made slasher movies successful in the beginning?

Enter Jason Voorhees.

With Jason X, Voorhees has now appeared in ten movies, all featuring the same premise – seeking revenge against those who wronged him. Voorhees murders the teens who remind him of those that let him drown in Crystal Lake in the middle part of the last century (technically, the first installment featured Voorhees's mother seeking the same sort of revenge, and the fifth installment featured another parent seeking revenge under the guise of Jason).

Like the fairy-tale story of an aging veteran returning for one final game, Voorhees's return to the big-screen in Jason X is an overwhelming success. After the government botches an attempt to study Voorhees's incredible ability to regenerate after taking endless abuse (including his ability to escape Hell after the ninth movie apparently), he is cryogenically frozen for 450 years. So is his final almost-victim – Jason stabs her but she is frozen before she dies.

And thus, a plot is born when teenage explorers from a class (what sort of class, one might wonder…) return to Earth and bring both Jason and his victim on-board the ship. Hijinks ensue.

Okay, the plot is stupid.

Then again, so were the first nine.

The point isn't the plot. It's the killing, and Jason is back to his old tricks in his ruthless slaughter of more than twenty characters. Easily besting the record he set in the film's ninth installment, Voorhees is as creative as he's ever been. One victim's face is frozen in liquid nitrogen, and then shattered. Another falls onto a massive drill-bit and spins his way down it ("he's screwed," says one clever character after finding the body). Two more are bludgeoned to death in a brilliant scene paying tribute to Jason's best-ever kill.

Save Voorhees, none of the characters are appealing, but at this point, maybe that's the point. Roger Ebert, who should really be a food critic, savaged Jason X in his latest review, saying that it was incredibly stupid. Well duh, Roger. The only way to enjoy Friday the 13th movies is to enjoy the mindless fun in watching stupid characters slaughtered by a vicious killing machine. Sick as it may seem, anybody watching Jason X expecting anything else is fooling themselves.

Once again, Voorhees comes out of his movie as the true star. There is a reason why ten of these have been made after all – a hockey-mask wearin', machete swingin', teen-killin', spaceship-ridin' son-of-a-gun is just hard to ignore, even if he's in space, and even if his victims are stupider than ever.

So while his critics line up to blast his franchise, Voorhees waits, knowing that it is he, and none of the critic-favored horror movies, who remains the horror icon. He might not have created the formula that today's directors forever try to subvert, but he owns it, and based on his recent performance, it will be his for a long time to come.

Alive's dancing repetitive yet impressive

Dancers performing in the student-choreographed show, Alive with Dance.

By Melissa Ladd
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Variety was not the spice of life at the Alive With Dance annual concert at Bowker auditorium this past weekend. Alive With Dance is a club for senior UMass dance majors to display their choreography. The show was somewhat redundant in the over abundance of modern dance. It would be nice to see a wider range of talent in the graduating dance majors. There were a few bits of hip-hop and jazz thrown in the mix, but overall, the show was lacking diversity.

Michele Chrisbacher's "Hidden at Dusk" was a nice opener to the concert. With music from the movie Crouching Tiger Hidden Dragon, Chrisbacher's dancers danced as smoothly as the music flowed. The movement sped up as the dance progressed into choreography that definitely required stamina and strength. Chrisbacher incorporated a beautiful arching leap using the entire body in one long curve backwards, which gave great level changes to the dancers on stage. "Hidden at Dusk" seemed to have traditional African as well as modern influences. The costumes were simple but effective; tight black tops and shorts that exposed the shoulders, mid-drift and legs to the red and blue lights.

Tovah Eve Bodner made an excellent choice of music for her piece "Reveries," which contained excerpts from the Requiem for a Dream soundtrack by the Kronos Quartet. The music is dark, mysterious and entrancing, from a movie about people and their addictions. The dancers came slowly crawling on stage in what could have been a brilliant dance, but the movement became stark and strange. Although strange can be good, there was no connection with the music and not much fluidity. The dancers seemed to go expressionless from one step to the next without meaning or reason. The costumes were light materials, in bright oranges, yellows and pinks, making the dancers look almost like children. The correlation between movement, costume and music just wasn't there.

"Izarra," Joseph DiDonato's piece was an eye-catcher. The low, eerie lighting, the well constructed shapes, the strong movements and the jazz style created a well-rounded piece. Dancing to "Commissioner Castration" by the Dust Brothers William Brown Jr. gave a powerful stage presence, surrounded by a collection of pretty but unyielding women; Megan McGrath, Jillian Prudente, Misty Podrebartz and Megan Rourke. DiDonato's agile dancers gave very clean shapes and executed several lifts that contained uniqueness and novelty. The dance seemed to go a little deeper than just the motions, and a message of power, lust and manipulation spoke through the choreography.

"No Exit" choreographed by Michelle Kennedy was a nice compilation of yet more modern steps. The levels were nice, with dancers up and down keeping the viewer's attention. One innovative move on the ground was where the dancers, lying on their side, used their arms to smoothly push themselves across or off the stage, keeping the body in a straight line. It was an interesting way for dancers to exit. The piece flowed well with the music, "Reeves."

Carla Vilas-Boas has a terrific sense of the use of space and contact in her modern choreographic work. "Stroke of Consciousness." The opening view of the stage had all the dancers lying down facing away from the audience in a diagonal line. Each dancer's head was resting on the person ahead of them. The purple costumes and the bare backs of the dancers were a wonderful sight of color. The stage was lively, swirling with bright hues and enthusiastic choreography.

"Set In" had wonderful white costumes that really extracted that extra energy from the movement when the dancers spun, and accompanied the wonderful line of the leg as it reached into space. The music was powerful, albeit unknown.

Turn to DANCE, page 6

Lopes

Lopes earned five years of probation and a stint in rehab for a reported alcohol addiction but went on to reunite with Rison. A wedding set for last summer was called off at the last minute.

Public feuds with Watkins and Thomas were also common. In 2000, after the release of the triple-platinum album No Scrubs, Lopes challenged Watkins and Thomas to put out solo albums and let fans determine who was the most popular group member. The challenge never materialized and the rift seemed more like natural sibling rivalry and creative differences than actual hate among the three. For TLC, it was always the fun music that attracted attention, but it was the issues that attained that all-important interest.

The group worked best when the three worked together. Lopes' own album, Supernova, was shelved but some radio stations showed interest. Other individual projects among the members stalled made it all the greater.

Lopes had signed to Suge Knight's Tha Row Records and announced plans to release material under a pseudonym, N.I.N.Y. (New Identity Not Applicable). The fate of these projects is undetermined. She also helped start the group "Blaque," an R&B trio who had the hit "Bring It Home To Me."

TLC had been on hiatus but had recently been in the studio working on new material for either a greatest hits compilation or a new record due to have been released later this year. The release of either project was going to depend on Watkins' health.

Lopes became a single mother two years ago when she adopted a girl named Snow, said a spokesman for TLC Rob Goldstone. The girl, 9, was not with Lopes at the time of her death.

Few acts in the history of pop have been nearly as entertaining as TLC. Whether TLC will continue as a group or replace Lopes is unknown. There is no word yet on how much material Lopes recorded for her new solo album or for the next TLC project, or what plans if any there are for the release of those albums. But a new member will never replace the unique personality of Lopes.

Up to her last breathing moment, Lopes was working on life-changing work. According to the U.S. Embassy spokesman in Honduras, Carlos Bakota, Lopes often visited the region and was working with a child development center there. The embassy said Lopes had visited Honduras frequently since Hurricane Mitch killed thousands and caused billions of dollars in damage across Central America in 1998. It was also reported that Lopes had been visiting a Caribbean getaway La Ceiba and was working on several projects there: a clothing line, a solo project and a book of journal entries and poetry.

Lopes, along with her group TLC, was a music business rarity: a teen idol who transformed herself into a critically acclaimed R&B soul artist and a singer who successfully remained sassy while crafting powerful messages to her impressionable fans.

Information from the Associated Press was used in this article was omitted from print in [illegible]. The piece was attractive, as the costumes, yet lacked originality. It was another one of many in a [illegible] that was easily consumed by mainstream dance. One would assume, from Mary Jo's extensive jazz and ballet training.

dance

"Hip-hop nut Invasion" by Kendrah Lynn Otis Hall was a refreshing and used an interesting backdrop that moved and engaged. The piece almost seemed to start out as a modern dance and then morphed to hip-hop with a jazz influence. The piece had symmetry and choreography mixed with the individuality of each dancer.

Eric Arlen's piece swirled around Melissa Hart Ellis's modern piece "Cassidy Hears." The song, Neil Young's "Heart of Gold," was powerful, led by the beautiful golden glow that lit up the stage and the relationship from dancer to dancer as they worked in the ensemble. The piece began with the dancers all standing Pericath an illuminated light bulb that hung from a wire and the sound of waves in a rushing tide. Hart Ellis took the place of Amanda Burs who couldn't perform, and was a wonderful fireball of energy, power and flow. Ellis as she moved in and around her dancers.

William Brown Jr.'s hip-hop piece Turn On It pleased the audience with the best, fun and fabulous dancers. It was refreshing. Michele Kennedy held a smile on her face the entire dance, obviously enjoying what she does. Smith and student Kiara Brown was a sight to watch with her professional stage presence and arms and feet that reached to all corners of the theater. Justin Ternullo did so many revolutions in his pirouettes that if he added any more turns he just might go into orbit! Megan Rourke, Jillian Prudente and Rachel Unterberger were also sparkling assets to Turn On It.

The last performance was Arlene Stainer's "Doing, Did, Done" danced to "Sing Sang Sung" by Gordon Goodwin's Big Phat Band. Wearing black tops and Baldy yellow pants, this piece tried its best to close the show with a bang. The movement was fast and enjoyable, and flowed well, but the stage could have been filled with a lot more dancers. The choreography was great but it needed that extra energy found in numbers. Strokes of Consciousness would have been a more vibrant finish to the WMD concert.

The choreography was repetitive, and each dance could have been individually memorable had there been a bigger variation of style, but there is talent in graduating dance majors. They know their stuff. And, as an added note, Brenda Cortina's lighting design was superb, bringing life and attitude to the theater.

Conference dominance

Softball swept Dayton this weekend to clinch first place in the Atlantic 10. Read about it in tomorrow's Collegian.

baseball

improve his record to 2-4 on the year.

Alteri drove in the games first run in the top of the first on a single that brought senior Mike Kulak home. He drove his second run in two innings later when, after back-to-back singles by Derrick Dunepo and Aaron Senez, the junior first baseman brought home Dunepo with a fielder's choice.

The Bonnies got sloppy in the fifth when two errors and a passed ball allowed UMass to increase its lead to 4-0. Kulak reached and scored on two separate errors and Senez singled and scored on a passed ball.

SBU senior Dan Dennison cut the lead to 4-3 with a three-run homerun to right off Doherty.

The Giants, Mass. native ran into some more trouble in the following inning, but relievers Matt Bontempo baffled his team and the game 13-9th. Ingram Fay Soley with a been [illegible].

The Minuteman and White's next loss [illegible] continued to [illegible] as the day scored four of the team's five runs.

Sunday's game was a [illegible] situation for the Minutemen after losing both games in Saturday's doubleheader.

UMass ace Jess Sattes went the distance in game one, but was charged with his second loss of the year due to a six-run fourth inning by the Bonnies.

The Chelmsford, Mass. native had a 1-0 lead and two outs in the fourth inning when sophomore Eric Wilson reached on an infield single.

And then things fell apart.

Junior Kevin Ryan followed with a single to center and scored — along with Wilson — on a double down the leftfield line by freshman catcher Damian Blakely. After a walk, senior Mike Sedor scored Blakely with a single and scored on a three-run blast by junior Greg Ogaman.

The Minutemen couldn't get any offense going to help their ace, and lost 6-1.

The Bonnies celebrated the game one victory with a 15-6 shellacking of the Maroon and White in game two.

After Senez hit a two-run blast in the top of the third inning to give UMass a 2-1 lead, St. Bonaventure answered with a seven-run bottom half of the inning. Minuteman errors contributed to the scoring as half of the Bonnies' first eight runs were unearned.

SBU plated seven more runs to establish a new season-high scoring mark for A-10 games this season.

Sophomore Eric Olsson was charged with the loss, dropping his record to 1-7.

The Minutemen will return to action Tuesday afternoon with a trip to Burlington, Vt. take on the University of Vermont. The Catamounts are coming off a two-game sweep of Binghamton to extend their winning streak to six games. Brian Robinson pitched a one hit shutout in game one Saturday to set the tone.

Chris Morrell (center) of UMass after striking out in a slump

Hey, Arts staff!
There will be an Arts meeting this Wednesday at 7 p.m. Be there, or risk the wrath of Jason.

WANTED
STUDENTS WITH TRUCK OR BUS DRIVING EXPERIENCE WANTED FOR SUMMER WORK
EARN $110-$140 PER DAY
Working approximately 14 days in June and 12 days in August.
One or both sessions available. Possibly some July work.
Call 1-888-949-5089

Now More Than Ever, Appearance Counts...
INTERVIEW SUITS
Priced to fit any budget.
We specialize in suits for graduate school and job placement interviews.
Jonathan Reid
The men's store in the Hampshire Mall.

Munchie Madness 3-6PM TUESDAY-FRIDAY
Bacon 'n' Cheese Skins 8.45 4.48
Fried Shrimp Tempura 7.25 3.63
Sweet Potato Fries 6.75 3.38
1/2 PRICE!
UCMP Welcome Here
CLOSED ON MONDAYS
Judies
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

Domino's Pizza
Amherst 256-8911
$9.99
2-1 TOPPING
10 INCH PIZZA +
2 COKES
ADD 10 WINGS $4.99
ADD 8 TWISTY BREAD $2.99
EXPIRES 5/30/2002
TUESDAY ONLY
BUY ANY PIZZA GET 1 FREE
NO DOMINATORS PIZZA
EXPIRES 4/30/02
MONDAY ONLY
$6.99
LARGE 1 TOPPING PIZZA
ADD 10 WINGS $4.99
EXPIRES 5/30/2002
OFFERS CAN NOT BE COMBINED

Getting the diploma is the easy part.
Quarterlife Crisis
by Alexandra Robbins & Abby Wilner

CINEMARK
The Best Seat In Town
CINEMARK AT HAMPSHIRE MALL
367 Russell St. 413-587-4232
Schedule for Friday 4/26 - Thursday 5/2
DIGITAL SURROUND SOUND IN ALL AUDITORIUMS
Purchase Tickets Online @ cinemark.com
LIFE OR SOMETHING LIKE IT (PG13) 12:25 4:40 7:20 10:15
JASON X (R) 12:50 5:00 7:30 10:00
MURDER BY NUMBERS (R) 1:00 4:10 7:30 10:00
SCORPION KING (PG13) 12:30 4:50 7:45 10:25
CHANGING LANES (R) 12:30 4:05 7:25 10:30
HIGH CRIMES (PG13) 12:45 4:20 7:15 10:05
THE SWEETEST THING (R) 1:20 4:10 7:20 10:00
NATIONAL LAMPOON'S VAN WILDER (R) 12:45 7:50
THE ROOKIE (G) 12:25 4:00 7:10 10:10
PANIC ROOM (R) 12:40 4:30 7:40 10:35
CLOCKSTOPPERS (PG) 12:55 4:25 7:05 9:30
DEATH TO SMOOCHY (R) 4:45 10:20
ICE AGE (PG) 12:10 2:15 4:25 6:45 9:00
Senior Movie - 5/1/02
CHANGING LANES (starts open at 11:45am
• NO PASSES, NO SUPERSAVERS
Tickets & showtimes available at cinemark.com

AS CONTROLLER FOR A MAJOR FASHION HOUSE YOU COULD:
SPEND $800,000
ON A SHOW THAT LASTS 12 MINUTES
TRAVEL 6,760 MILES
TO OPEN A FLAGSHIP STORE IN TOKYO
CHARGE $1,699
FOR A PIECE OF FABRIC 4 FT LONG
START HERE. GO PLACES.
If you know business and accounting, you can get a job anywhere. Because the skills you learn in business – strategic and analytical thinking, communication, and leadership – are always in demand. In some of the coolest industries in the world. Even in fashion.
HOW DO YOU GET A JOB LIKE THIS?
WWW.STARTHEREGOPLACES.COM/BIZ15
Go here and take the first step toward the career you want.
American Institute of Certified Public Accountants

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. - Now Available, 1&2 bedroom apts. Leases begin June, July, Aug or Sept. 1 year lease. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywine apartments.com stop by or call (413) 549-0600.

3- Bedroom Apartment in Puffton Village. Available June 1st. Great location! 549-4097.

2 bedroom Apt Mill valley. Asking $900.00, nego. Avail 6/1. 413-896-9365.

Summer Sublet with fall option. Puffton 3 BR, 2 BA. June 1st. 549-4814

2 bedroom apt. Take over our lease and SAVE $$$. Free heat & hot water on bus line. 253-4876.

2 bedroom Puffton Apt. Take over lease. Available June 1 with fall option. 549-7685.

Take over our lease in June $905/M Brandywine. Call Dan 549-8318.

Downtown Amherst: 19b South Prospect St. 2 bedroom June 1. 253-2515. Great for couple

AUTO FOR SALE

Maxima 1989. Original owner. 134000 miles. Good car Jim 545-5677.

89 Honda Accord $1500 OBO 259-0068.

COMPUTERS

Color Laptop $99 Pentium tower/ CD Rom $99 with color monitor $139. HURRY! 413-584-8857.

EMPLOYMENT

CAMP WAYNE FOR GIRLS- Northeast Pennsylvania (6/19-8/17/02). Children's sleep-away camp. If you love children and want to have a GREAT summer we are still looking for Directors for Swimming, Golf, Tennis, Cheerleading and Ass't Directors for Sports and Gymnastics. Counselors for: Tennis, Gymnastics, Drama, Basketball, Golf, Soccer, Sailing, Sculpture/Lino Cuts, Silkscreen, Batik, Jewelry, Calligraphy, Guitar, Self-Defense, Video, Piano, Ropes, Mother's Helper, Night Watchperson, On Campus Interviews Arranged. Call 800-279-5019 or go to www.campwaynegirls.com.

EMPLOYMENT

SUMMER IN MAINE Jewish, Co-ed overnight camp in the southern Maine seeks staff: Boys Unit Head (25+), Camping/ Tripping Director (23+), Judaics Director (23+): swim, water ski, and boating/ sailing instructors (lifeguard certification req'd.) ; archery (training avail.), ceramics, general athletics, gymnastics, photography, radio, low ropes, theater: general counselors, office personnel. For information, contact: Ava Goldman, Director, JCC Camp Kingswood, 333 Nahanton street, Newton, MA 02459, 617-244-5124, or e-mail: director@kingswood.org

TEENAGE BICYCLE TOUR LEADERS NEEDED: Be a Teen Tour Leader this summer. Trips in USA, Canada, Europe. We need a 4-week time commitment, salary plus expenses paid. Student Hosteling Program, P.O. Box 419, CONWAY, MA 01341. 800-343-6132 www.bicycletrips.com.

Painters P/T time 1-3 yrs experience. Michael 367-9810.

EMPLOYMENT

TOP BOYS SPORTS CAMP IN MAINE! Play and coach sports-have fun-make $$ Camp Cobbossee positions in: all team and individual sports, all water sports plus: camp, hike, rock climbing, ropes, ice hockey, roller hockey, art & crafts, secretaries, top salaries, excellent facilities, free room, board, laundry, travel allowance. Online application www.campcobbossee.com or call 800-473-6104.

Computer Programmer/FORTRAN for economic modeling firm, contact: Fred Treyz, REMI, 433 West St., Amherst, MA 01002. info@remi.com.

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individual, full and part time positions available immediately. Only those able to work the upcoming summer should apply. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413)584-4746.

EMPLOYMENT

Be the Campus Red Bull connection. Join our team and help build one of the world's leading brands, you'll have a blast while gaining invaluable marketing experience. You'll even earn a little extra spending cash. Think about it. It's a lot less dangerous than selling term papers! Apply at redbullcollege.com.

Nantucket Island Summer Job opportunity beginning mid June office Assistant with good computer & telephone skills, miscellaneous errand running. Salary & housing 508-228-3942 or send resume to Rafael Osona Auctions P.O. box 2607 Nantucket, MA 02584.

SUMMER INTERNSHIPS Earn $3000 to 7000++ and gain valuable business experience working for the UMASS Official Campus Telephone Directory. Excellent Advertising, Sales, and Marketing opportunity. GREAT RESUME BOOSTER! Call Paul at AroundCampus, Inc. 1-800-466-2221 ext. 288. www.aroundcampus.com

FOR RENT

Amherst Center 1 bedroom, off street parking, starting June 1st –early move in available. Call 253-1180.

2 bedroom apt. on bus route avail. June 1 w/fall option $905/mo heat hot water included 549-1883.

FOR SALE

Furniture for sale call 259-0068. Book-Shelf, Coffee-table, bed and more.

NEW! CD burner HP internal 8x4x32 Speed BO 259-9582

HOUSE FOR RENT

Hadley 3 bedroom plus. 1 newer home five minutes from UMASS. June occupancy $2600.00 month. 549-4270.

ROOM FOR RENT

Spacious, share house with fun couple in scenic Montague. $333. May 28-Aug 31. call 367-9822.

Looking for 1/2 roommates to share apartment for summer. Call 549-2676.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female(s) to share 2 bedroom Brandywine Apt. starting June 1. 549-1988.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Puffton. Looking for roommate to share 3 bdrm. Available June 1. Call Christina 549-0209.

2 roommate Brandywine Apt. starting June 1. Cheap rent includes HT/HTW. Call Tom 549-5436.

1-2 females to share large house on route 47 w/4 others starting summer or fall. 546-6106.

SERVICES

Feeling ripped off? Your new car is a lemon; the warranty on your stereo just expired and it needs major repairs; you loaned a friend money and can't get it back or the dry cleaners ruined your favorite suit! Is ELSI giving you grief about your student loan? Are debt collectors knocking at your door? Contact the Student Legal Services Office at 922 Campus Center. 545-1995

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

SUMMER SUBLET

Bolders 2 bedroom Apt with possible fall option. Reduced monthly rent 256-2365.

Nice 3 bedroom townhouse. Practically on campus. Call Joe 549-9441.

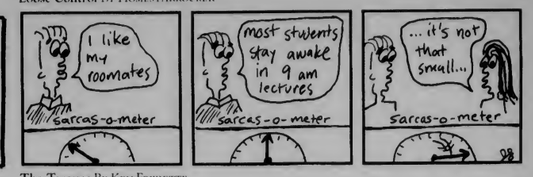
1 bedroom Brandywine rent nego. 3rd floor facing pond. Jason 549-8319.

3 bedroom fully furnished for summer sublet. Great location on rt9 near bus. Call Morgan or Ilana 253-4927.

Brandywine. 2 bdrm. Available June 1. Call 549-1988.

TO SUBLET

3 bedroom available June 1st for summer Sublet or lease takeover, Puffton village 549-1661.



1-2 bedrooms of 3 available in townhouses apt 375/mo rent negotiable call Lauren 253-7250 or Erin 546-3946.

2 Bedroom apartment partially furnished available June 1st to sublet w/option to lease on bus route. 413-549-9612.

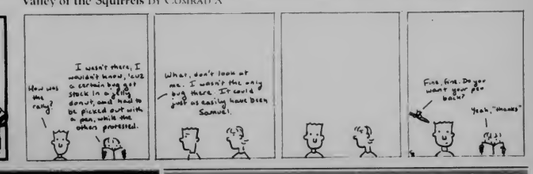
Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas

Loose Control By Homestarrocker

Highbrow By Aaron Eppy

The Torques By Ken Fredette

Highbrow By Aaron Eppy



The Torques By Ken Fredette

Loose Control By Homestarrocker

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Quote of the Day

"We just love having premarital sex!"

-Virtual Reality Camp Counselors
Jason X

Amherst Weather

Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 50 LOW: 34	HIGH: 57 LOW: 34	HIGH: 64 LOW: 35

Horoscopes

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — You slacker, what are you doing going to class, go get your sleep on!
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Don't eat at the DC next week, there are professors about.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) – The best place to find your lost sneaker in under your bed.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Go to KFC and order your chicken extra crispy.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — You will talk to someone today. You will also be bored in class. You will also get pissed off at the horoscopes and burn your copy of the comics page.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 21) – Sure you think your friends are ganging up on you. That's because they don't like you and they're secretly trying to steal your fish.
SCORPIO (Oct. 22-Nov. 21) — Write a letter. Compose a song. Avoid Herrter at all costs, damn trick stairways.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – The perfect girlfriend would say, "you're so sexy when you're hungover."
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Got a case of end of semester swipes? Call your friends and buy 20 dollars worth of fresh Bluewall cookies!
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Put on a happy face...or at least take a shower, you look disgusting.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Remember kaleidoscopes can be deceiving.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Do you like stick figures? I thought so. You pervert.

A.I. By Joseph Hession

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Cream of Broccoli Soup

Fried Chicken

Hot Roast Beef Sandwich

Vegetable Taco (veg)

DINNER

Cream of Broccoli Soup

Chicken with Dijon Sauce

Beef Stew

Vegetable Stir Fry with Rice & Beans (vegan)
(W Basics)

Today's Staff

Night Editor: Ken Campbell
Photo Technician: Richard Blake
Copy Editor: Jesse Greenspan
Production Supervisor: Alicia Upans
Production Staff: Shannen Farrington, Mike Kulak

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

2 CBS
3 NSCN
Free Speech NE
PBS-TAT
4 HSCN Movie Channel
WB 56
5 HSCN Movie Channel
TV Guide Channel
6 FOX 25
ABC 40
NBC 22
7 International Channel
UMASS
8 HSCN Info Channel
9 ESPN
ESPN 2
10 LIVE 19
ESPN Classic
Good Life Guide
11 CNN
12 CNN HL
Weather Channel
Learning Channel
Discovery Channel
A&E
Sunrise Health
Food Network
14 NESN
15 Home & Garden TV
Travel Channel
Lifetime
16 A&E
17 TBS
18 E! Entertainment
Sci-Fi Channel
Court TV
Nick at Nite
Comedy Central
Cartoon Network
Game Show Network
TV Land
20 FOX Family
Animal Planet
Galavision
Telemundo
College TV Network
C-SPAN
C-SPAN2
Bloomberg Television

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass.

Client: Date: Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash
Date(s) to run: Headline:
Total days x Words = x rate = PAYMENT
Special Heading ($2.50 extra). Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

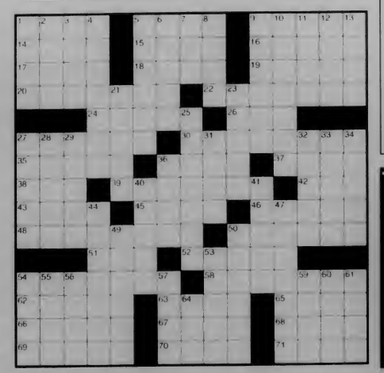
Open 8:30 a.m. - 5:00 p.m. (413-545-3500)
Student rate: 20 cents word per day. Non-student rate: 35 cents word per day.

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — APRIL 29, 2002

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	32	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Antiques Roadshow (N)		Frontier House	The American Dream (The Promised Land) (N)			Austin City Limits (In Stereo)
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	King	Yes, Dear	Raymond	Becker (N)	48 Hours "Trouble Next Door"		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	King	Yes, Dear	Raymond	Becker (N)	48 Hours "Trouble Next Door"		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Gilda Radner's Greatest		"Gilda Radner: It's Always Something" (2002) Jami Gertz.				Friends	Raymond
WLVI	56	Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	7th Heaven "Letting Go" (N)		Angel "The Price" (In Stereo)		Third Watch "Unleashed" (N)		Crossing Jordan (In Stereo)
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Fear Factor Twins. (In Stereo)		Third Watch "Unleashed" (N)		Crossing Jordan (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	9	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	7th Heaven "Letting Go" (N)		Angel "The Price" (In Stereo)		News	Home Imp.	Bled Date	Bled Date
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Fear Factor Twins. (In Stereo)		Third Watch "Unleashed" (N)		Crossing Jordan (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	Boston Public (N) (In Stereo)		Ally McBeal (N) (In Stereo)		News		Raymond	Seinfeld
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Fear Factor Twins. (In Stereo)		Third Watch "Unleashed" (N)		Crossing Jordan (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Antiques Roadshow (N)		Frontier House "The American Dream (The Promised Land) (N)				Charlie Rose (N) (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Fraser	Gilda Radner's Greatest		"Gilda Radner: It's Always Something" (2002) Jami Gertz.		News	Ent. Tonight	5th Wheel	Shipmates
WSBK	38	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Eastern Conference Quarter. Game 6 - Bruins at Canadiens				★½ "House Arrest" (1996, Comedy) Jamie Lee Curtis.
WTBS	72	Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Roseanne	★★★ "Deuce" (1983, Comedy) Kevin Kline, Sigourney Weaver.						Law & Order (In Stereo)
A&E	40	Law & Order	Silver (In Stereo)	The View (In Stereo)		Biography: Code Power		Investigative Reports "Criminal Instinct"				Crossfire	Money Line
CNN	42	Money Line		Crossfire (Live)		Live From... The Point		Larry King Live		News night		Live From... The Point	Money Line
COM	100	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Geeks	Let's Bowl	Whose Line ?	Whose Line ?	Whose Line?	Com.-Presents	Com.-Presents	Daily Show	Sat. Night Live
DISC	70	Giraffes		Congo		Walking With Dinosaurs		Real Eve				Walking With Dinosaurs
ESPN	21	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs. Western Conference Quarter. Game 7 - Colorado at Red Wings						Baseball Tonight (N)		Sportscenter
LIFE	52	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait (In Stereo)		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★½ "Someone to Watch Over Me" (1987, Drama) Tom Berenger.				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	53	Movie Awards: Uncensored		Back to the Hood (In Stereo)		Fear (In Stereo)		Real World	Real World	Real World	Viva (In Stereo)	Osbournes	Osbournes
NICK	69	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Blue's Clues (N) (In Stereo)			Hold by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers	All In Family	All In Family
SCIFI	59	Star Trek (In Stereo)		Star Trek: The Enemy Within		Outer Limits "Double Helix"		★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley. (In Stereo)				Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	24	Greatest Prisons		Medical Detect	Medical Detect	Code Blue: St. Patrick's Day		Maternity Ward		Hollywood Knives (N)		Code Blue: St. Patrick's Day
TNT	20	NYPD Blue (In Stereo)		Pretender "Betrayal" (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball Playoffs First Round				NBA Basketball Playoffs First Round
USA	62	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "The Stalker" (In Stereo)		Nash Bridges "Hot Powder"		★★ "Last Man Standing" (1996, Drama) Bruce Willis. Premiere.				JAG "Promises" (In Stereo)
HBO	60	(5:30) ★½ "Sorority Law" (1993)		★★★ "Passed Away" (1992, Comedy) Bob Hoskins. PG-13				Band of Brothers (In Stereo)		John Leguizamo's Sexaholix... A Love Story		★★ "The Specialist" (1994, Drama) Sylvester Stallone. R
MAX	46	★★½ "The Tailor of Panama" (2001) Pierce Brosnan. R				★★ "The Wedding Planner" (2001) PG-13		IP 1		Queer as Folk (TV) (In Stereo)		Red Shoe	Red Shoe
SHOW	50	★★★ "Running on Empty" (1988, Drama) Christine Lahti. PG-13				★½ "Autumn in New York" (2000) Richard Gere. PG-13

NEW at DB Mart...
HOT STUFF PIZZA
Buy a Breakfast Sandwich
Get 2 FREE HASH BROWNS and a 12 oz COFFEE
Redeem this coupon at:
259 TRIANGLE ST. AMHERST, MA 413-549-5606
1 coupon per customer per visit valued



ACROSS
1 Melting watch artist
5 Tenets
9 Arrow part
14 Important mineral
15 Orange Bowl org.
16 Wahine's greeting
17 — serve: gas sign
18 June honorees
19 NBA coach Pat
20 Require
22 Waiters
24 Sky-high
25 "Vive le —!"
27 Small quake
30 Rained
35 Like an old sock
36 Libya neighbor
37 Hindu princess
38 All-purpose truck
39 Bring
42 Seine
43 Like early LPs
45 Olden times
46 Mel's Diner waitress
48 "Seven Years in Tibet" star
50 Relies on
51 Bear's digs
52 More certain
54 Supermarket buy
58 Cutting remarks
62 Film award
63 Dappled
65 Listen
66 Quiet
67 Land measure
68 Bullpen stats
69 Unhappily
70 Monster-hunter's loch
71 Shoe bottom

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

12-27-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

DOWN
1 Compact —
2 Territory
3 Relax
4 Excite
5 Not outside
6 Wolf down
7 Impractical
8 Impudent talk
9 Thin
10 Noted Hamlet portrayer
11 Decorated brewers
12 The ex-Mrs. Bono
13 Alfalfas
21 Boxer Patterson
23 Wash away
25 Jeans' partners
27 Leaf through
28 Turbine part
29 Actress Verdugo
31 Own
32 Sari wearers
33 Bail out
34 Goes steady
36 Coagulate
40 Giving the once-over
41 Harder to find
44 Flake
47 Rolls
49 Like teeth
50 Gridiron deals
53 PC owners
54 Throw
55 Is, in Madrid
56 Sour
57 Extend across
59 Flying prefix
60 Animal that barks
61 Consumer gds.
64 Chill

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: ERIC SODERSTROM

Dome sweet dome for Syracuse

Win 22nd straight over Minutemen

By Eric Soderstrom
COLLEGIAN STAFF

SYRACUSE, N.Y. – Just off an emotional victory at Georgetown which clinched a spot in the NCAA Tournament, the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team suffered a letdown Friday night, falling to No. 2 Syracuse, 18-10, inside the Carrier Dome.

Riding an 8-0 run over 19:38 of the first half, the Orangemen (11-2) kept their past season hopes alive by holding all the No. 8 Minutemen (10-3), likely victims of a lack of urgency.

"We lost a little of our focus and we didn't get it done," said senior Mary Morley, his program now winless in its last 22 games versus Syracuse. "We just didn't play our game today."

Missing the drive it showed last weekend in the nation's capitol, UMass failed to find comfort in the bubble. And as it does every year, the Dome proved itself an opposing evil.

"The guys aren't used to playing indoors, and it's real different communication-wise because the crowd is so tough," coach Greg Cannella said, who blasted music during practice all week in an attempt to simulate the deafening environment. "It's hard, because you can't really do that much to prepare for it."

But the Orangemen, who played their last three games (and nine of their last 11) on the road, couldn't have been more excited to be back underneath the big top.

"We were comfortable in the Dome once again," said Syracuse coach John Desko, whose team at one point this year shared half the playing surface with its men's basketball team for practice time. "Our defense was swarming, and when [UMass] had opportunities we took them away."

The Minuteman defense worked the other way. Tight unanswered goals during the middle stages of the first half dismantled the UMass poise and allowed Syracuse a 10-2 advantage with 8:10 remaining. Twice in the opening quarter the Minutemen clanked open shots off the post, and early in the second stanza they failed to convert on a 5-on-1 opportunity.

"Anytime you play Syracuse up and down like that, you have to finish the ball early if you want to stay in the game," Cannella said. "They shut off our short sticks and got us out of the flow defensively. They rode us really well and knocked the ball out of our sticks."

Sophomore Neil Lundberg ended the scoring drought for the Minutemen with a bouncer at the 5:58 mark, and UMass added two more goals, including junior Kevin Leveille's third of the game, to cut the lead to 10-5 at the half. But Syracuse scored three quick goals to begin the third quarter and killed any chance of a Minuteman comeback.

"We know UMass plays a really up-tempo game and we knew we could never get comfortable with them because they score in bunches," said Desko, whose team hosts Georgetown next week in its regular season finale. "But Chris Bickel did a good job on faceoffs and helped keep the ball in our end. It put a lot of pressure on UMass."

Winning 19 of the game's 32 draws, Bickel helped Syracuse score the first four goals of the fourth quarter and open up a 12-goal lead, its largest of the game with 7:14 left. But the Minutemen scored the final four goals of the game, including three from Morley, to make the final tally somewhat respectable.

Freshman Bill Schell made 15 saves in the cage for the Minutemen, including a splendid 1-on-1 rejection of Syracuse savior Michael Powell late in the first quarter. The 18 goals allowed by the Minutemen, however, marked the most that an opponent had scored since a 21-10 defeat at Loyola (Md.) during the 2000 season. Still, Cannella remained optimistic.

"We're not through with what we set out to accomplish," said Cannella, whose team closes out the regular season on Saturday, in a 1 p.m. game with ECAC foe Rutgers at Garber Field. "Maybe this is incentive to go out next week and win the ECAC alone. We don't want to share it this time."

Syracuse	18
UMass	10

Jeff Altieri (with ball) drove in the first two runs in UMass' win Sunday.

Dan Paccione (No. 3) went seven out of 17 faceoffs in UMass' loss to Syracuse Friday.

Baseball loses series to A-10 power Bonnies

By Jim Pignatello
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The Massachusetts baseball team needed some spectacular wins on its trip to St. Bonaventure, NY this weekend.

It ran into Jason Hoover instead.

After a 6-5 loss in the first game of a doubleheader that included an offensive explosion that forced the Minutemen to score in every inning but two, Hoover, pitching in relief, shut down UMass' offense for the rest of the game, striking out 2 batters and getting 7 ground outs to McGraw-Lemmerman for the three remaining innings yesterday.

St. Bon.	6	15	4
UMass	1	6	5

Jeff Altieri drove in the first run in the first and third innings to put UMass (16-21, 6-12 Atlantic 10) on top for good in game three of the weekend's series at St. Bonaventure.

The Maroon and White avoided a sweep in beating the Bonnies 5-4 yesterday behind solid pitching from freshman southpaw Keith Doherty. The win snapped a four-game conference losing streak for the Minutemen, including the first two games of St. Bonaventure series while snapping a six-game Bonnie winning run.

Doherty went 7 2/3 innings, scattering eight hits and giving up three run to

Turn to BASEBALL page 6

Minutewomen fall to Tar Heels

Carolina cruises after eight-goal run to start

By Justin Pearson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

David did it. Jimmy Chitwood, Norman Dale and the Hickory Huskers did it; even the 1980 U.S. Olympic hockey team did it. They all pulled off improbable upsets that few felt were possible.

The Massachusetts women's lacrosse team, however, could not join the ranks of this illustrious crew as they fell 14-6 to the No. 3 North Carolina Tar Heels at Boden Field.

But despite not being able to secure a victory and hatch the biggest upset of the season in college lacrosse, UMass (8-7, 5-2 Atlantic 10) head coach Phil Barnes was content with the way his team played.

"We were looking to play moment by moment today and that is something that we did," he said. "I'm really happy with what our players did, even though on the scoreboard it doesn't show the effort and how well we played. It's a great way to finish, ironically, with a loss going into A-10's."

Carolina (14-2) opened up an 8-0 lead in the first 22 minutes of the game with six different Tar Heels scoring, and looked to be well on its way to a cakewalk before the Minutewomen finally found their game. With 6:59 to go junior midfielder Lydia Robinson beat UNC goalie Katelyn Hollman with a high shot to get UMass on the scoreboard and breath some life into the squad. Thirty-five seconds later Robinson did it again, scoring her 26th goal of the year to make the score 8-2 and stun the ACC Champs.

"Lydia really stepped up, that's what she can do," Barnes said. "Once she got going it showed everyone that we can do this. It was a great catalyst."

While Robinson was igniting the offense, fellow junior Cyndi Doyle was keeping the Tar Heels at bay at the other end of the field. Despite giving up 14 goals, Doyle was sensational in the cage for the Maroon and White, making 9(8 saves, many of which were sure-fire goals.

"She's been working really hard and today her work paid off," Barnes said of his goalie. "She's been doing some work not just physically but mentally as well and she stepped up and made some great saves."

After trailing 10-2 at the half, UMass set out after the break looking to redouble its defensive efforts and fight its way back into the game. As a result the Minutewomen held one of the country's best offenses, with four players with 50 goals or more, to just four goals while scoring four of their own.

Leslie Pollock scored her 13th and 14th of the season while Kelli Kurtz and Jada Emery each notched a tally after the break.

Kellie Thompson, UNC's top goal scorer notched a game-high six points on four goals and two assists while fellow senior Lindsay Stone also added a hat trick in the win.

For 38 minutes the Minutewomen showed that they could go toe-to-toe with the best that the nation has to offer without backing down. They took the best that Carolina could dish out and did not back down. The only problem was that the first 22 minutes was all Carolina.

While the result was not what UMass would have liked, the way they played on the heels of back-to-back poor performances was. With the third-seed in this week's A-10 Tournament already sewn up the Minutewomen needed a good showing against the Tar Heels much more than they actually needed the win, and that is exactly what they got.

UNC	14
UMass	6

Maura McGarrity and the women's lacrosse team were outshot 36-13 by UNC Friday.

GUYS BEAT UMASS 'SESAME STREET' BLUES ED/OP PAGE 4. SOFTBALL WINS 24TH STRAIGHT SPORTS PAGE 10

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
TUESDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE ONE HUNDRED TWENTY SIX ☆☆☆☆☆ 4.30.02

35 arrested at Whitmore showdown

University of Massachusetts Police Chief Barbara O'Connor places an activist under arrest during yesterday's protest at the Whitmore Administration Building.

By Ken Campbell and Scott Eldridge II
COLLEGIAN STAFF

University of Massachusetts police arrested 35 union activists yesterday, ending a multiple hour standoff in and around the Whitmore Administration building.

Protesters were demonstrating what they termed a "show of solidarity" with Resident Assistants and Community Development Assistants, who claim that the University is violating Massachusetts law by refusing to bargain with the fledgling RA union. The University says that the law does not allow undergraduates to organize.

The scheduled 12:30 p.m. support rally on the Student Union steps served as a staging point for activists to gather and march on to Whitmore, where 15 people from several organizations occupied the Student Affairs offices. Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Javier Cevallos read the University's picketing code to the protesters inside his offices. The policy states that while students have a right to demonstrate, protests should not interfere with the daily routine of others.

James Shaw, president of United Auto Workers local 2322, told supporters at the Student Union that the picketing code had been read and that the UMass Police Department would arrest the protesters inside Cevallos' office.

Alexis Rosenblatt, a senior Mathematics major and Ariana Sicairos, a sophomore Legal Studies student, addressed the small crowd huddling under the Student Union roof. Both women reminded the crowd that the RAs had voted to form a union in a March 5 election supervised by the Massachusetts Labor Relations Board.

"The University has refused to respect that decision," Sicairos said. "Apparently the University is above the law. We'll fight them in the courts."

The supporters then marched to Whitmore, where they found the third floor Student Affairs office locked, and a police officer outside. A police sergeant was inside, and more officers with helmets were in a side room. The 15 activists inside the office sat with their arms linked, stretching from the reception area, through a rear hallway and into Cevallos's office. The crowd outside the office fluctuated between 30 and 40. The group chanted and sang to show support for the activists locked inside the offices.

Leslie Edwards, president of the Graduate Student Organization, was one of the protesters sitting on the floor of Cevallos's office.

"If we let [the University] to break the law here, where will it end?" Edwards said. "[The University] has done this to every union that has been formed on this campus."

The group inside the office consisted of Hampshire College students, GEO members, and at least two UMass RAs. Linking arms and joining in the various chants of the supporters in the hallway, the protesters responded to every action taken by Cevallos.

Joshua Jackson, a Hampshire College student, directed his statements at Cevallos.

"The citizens of Massachusetts are going to be awfully ashamed of this place," Jackson, a native of Maine, said. "You're bucking progress, sir."

The administration ordered the building closed at 1 p.m.

Union organizer Tim Scott arranged phone calls with press members, he instructed protesters not to resist when the police entered.

"When the police come in, do not resist," Scott said.

Meanwhile, on a stairwell away from the office, Labor Studies graduate student Robert Caldwell was asking police officers if he could supply the sit-in participants with food.

"The officer said no, that it wasn't

Turn to PROTEST page 4

Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs Javier Cevallos looks on as police Chief Barbara O'Connor informs sit-in participants that they will be subject to arrest

NYU plant biologist gives grad lecture

'PathExplore' new project to track gene behaviors

By Tam Nguyen
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

Last Thursday, Gloria Coruzzi, plant-molecular biologist for the Biology department of New York University, visited the University of Massachusetts as part of the Plant Biology Graduate Lecture Series to present "A Systems Approach to Carbon/Nitrogen Sensing-signaling in Arabidopsis."

The herb, arabidopsis thaliana, also known as thale cress, was the first plant genome to be mapped in its entirety, announced in December 2000.

With over 25,000 genes and 125 million nucleotide base pairs in each plant cell – small numbers in comparison to other plants – arabidopsis is a favorite among plant biologists for its attributes of quick reproduction and small space requirements. Three thousand plants could fit on the surface area of the front page of this newspaper.

"I am here to present new work," Coruzzi said. The audience of about two dozen braced themselves at those words as she introduced the arabidopsis plant genome's follow-up project, "N2010: Nitrogen Network in Plants."

The aim of the project is "not only to identify [all of] the gene functions by 2010, but also to see how the pathways converge [chemical interactions]."

Coruzzi worked with her team to produce up-and-coming methods, including a computer program, "PathExplore," for synthesizing plant genomes.

"Generating data is no problem," Coruzzi said. "What's difficult is what it all means."

"PathExplore" tracked gene behaviors in the following way: The user would enter steps (behaviors) A through X. A pathway, or sequence of chemical reactions, is saved in the computer. Genes could then be tested against the pathway to see if it makes it through all the steps. All genes in the genome are run through the pathway.

The genes that make it through all the steps would be defined as co-regulated, indicating that the same metabolistic systems are at work with those grouped genes.

Genes that were not previously associated could now be studied with greater context, with researched links in the form of these pathways, at hand.

With the study of Arabidopsis, Coruzzi explained that the search for biological significance with gene behavior were far-reaching and important. A better understanding may mean more productive crops, advances in medicine, and a better understanding of all genomes.

With each completion of a genome, whether a fruit fly or a bacterium, there is more speculation of what the future will hold once humans complete the human genome project, especially with issues such as patents on intellectual property in question. A human cell has three billion nucleotide pairs, and the human genome is estimated at 30,000 genes.

Sexual Assault Awareness Month highlighted by Everywoman's Center

By Melissa Hammel
COLLEGIAN STAFF

This is the second part of a week-long series addressing the issue of sexual assault.

This month is dedicated to the awareness of sexual assaults both on the University of Massachusetts-Amherst campus and across the nation. As a way of focusing upon the importance of safety, The Collegian is running a story each day this week highlighting different safety issues on campus and the groups that deal with them.

The Everywoman's Center at the University of Massachusetts spends its time affecting the campus in a variety of ways. This month the center set up a table in the Campus Center with information and pamphlets to make students aware of the issues surrounding sexual assault and personal safety for Sexual Assault Awareness month. They also assist with issues central to rape victims and victims of sexual abuse.

"We focus primarily on issues of concern to women, but many of these issues are also of concern to men, families, anyone," said Carol Wallace, Director of the Center in a previous interview with the Collegian. "People can come in or call the Everywoman's Center with just about any concern you could imagine because we have a resource referral program and provide short term counseling."

The resource referral program allows students and members of the community to call the Center and speak to a staff member about finding the information required.

The Everywoman's Center has a number of other several as well several though the Counselor/Advocate Program.

They have a 24-hour hotline for "victims/survivors of rape/battering, incest, sexual assault and sexual harassment. Specially trained in crisis counseling, the Counselor/Advocate Program also provides court and medical advocacy when needed and offers support groups for survivors of rape and child sexual assault," the Center's website explains.

Legal advocacy includes helping survivors of sexual assault obtain restraining orders at area courts.

The program also provides 10-week sessions that provide support for women who are survivors of child sexual abuse or rape. The groups often focus upon reactions and concerns and "help individuals to feel less alone."

There is also free short-term counseling provided by the center for women from UMass and the Five-College Community. Traditionally survivors meet with counselors for 10-12 weeks on an individual basis.

"All women are welcome to call and speak with a counselor for help and support, referrals, or to schedule an appointment for counseling," its website explains. "The Counseling Program also provides free assessments to individuals and couples, offers short-term counseling, and makes appropriate referrals to therapists and agencies when needed."

Anyone interested in getting in touch with the center's 24-hour hotline can call 545-0800 for the UMass campus and 1-888-337-0800 for the MASS Toll Free Hot-line.

National Briefs

Illinois

By Ryan Adair
[illegible]

(U-WIRE) CHICAGO – A 22-year-old Columbia College student died last week due to heart failure.

Michael Mario of Lockport, Ill. was a junior majoring in product design in the art and design department. According to those who knew him, Mario had a heart condition since childhood but friends said he never let his condition prevent him from doing the things he loved.

Mario was an avid hockey player in addition to playing bass guitar for the band Infrared. Melissa Mongiardo, a Columbia photography major and longtime friend of Mario's, said Mario always seemed to motivate everyone who knew him.

"He was a really gifted musician and was the life of Infrared," Mongiardo said.

Mario's younger brother, Emil, also played drums with the band, also spoke of Mario's capabilities.

He touched more people in the 22 years than most people can touch in one lifetime," he said. "He was the greatest big brother and bandmate, nothing could ever replace him."

In response to Mario's death, members of Infrared have set up an online prayer book on the band's Web site. There family, friends and classmates of Mario's have posted messages. Bridget written to him, in addition to expressing condolences and writing of fond memories.

Mariannie noted Mario had a unique personality and possessed a sense of humor that was all his own.

"He would make up the stupidest jokes, but it was funny because it came from Mike," she said.

While Mariannie said Mario's humor might have been unusual, she reaffirmed one thing was certain. "He was the sweetest guy I ever knew. I don't think there was a bad bone in his body."

Mario's funeral was held Thursday at St. Bernard's Church in Lockport. He is survived by his parents, Robert and Nora, brother Tony, and several aunts, uncles and cousins.

Hawaii

By Sacha Mendelsohn
[illegible]

(U-WIRE) HONOLULU – University of Hawaii graduate student residents say they are being uprooted and lumped together with undergraduates to accommodate out-of-towners.

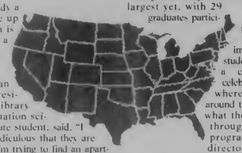
Hale Amuenu, the 40-bed dormitory currently reserved for graduate students will be converted into conference housing to accommodate visitors attending conferences and sporting events, said David Zelmer, director of student housing services.

Graduate students then will have to apply for housing with the undergraduates in the nongraduate-specific dormitories.

We would all have to go into double rooms living incoming freshmen and those," said Reyna Luna, a graduate student getting a master's degree in medical anthropology and a graduate certificate in ocean policy. "We would have liked them to have given us equal options about where we can live."

Luna, Lanz and Amuenu resident Linda Lee, a graduate student in East Asian languages and literatures, said, "It seems that they are trying to push graduate students off campus, which seems to go against the strategic plan to have a collegiate atmosphere."

Zelmer said, "I can understand and appreciate their concerns. They have every right to feel that the building provided."



However, Zelmer said, it became evident that Hale Aluna, which is currently being used for conference housing and has 2-bedroom suites, would be better used for student housing.

"Hale Anuenue is the smallest facility we have, and if we change it into conference housing, we get a net gain of 226 beds," Zelmer said. "The bad thing is the people now in Anuenue are not able to live there."

Zelmer said student housing services would try to work with the graduate students if they wanted to live together next fall. He said he would place them in adjacent rooms or apartments if they submit all of their application packets together.

Lanz said she was told Gateway House would be made into graduate and undergraduate housing, so there would not be any designated graduate housing.

"We study a lot and are up late, which is not fair to a roommate," she said.

Katie Kraus, an Anuenue resident and library and information science graduate student, said, "I think it's ridiculous that they are closing it. I'm trying to find an apartment, which is pretty inconvenient the last few weeks of the semester."

Luna said, "Just two days ago they let everyone know that the dorm was going to close. At first they made no provisions for us."

Zelmer said, "Long term we want to build a new residence hall where Frear Hall is. The plan is to put up a 400-bed facility. We would hope to be able to continue to build dorms."

Minnesota

By Dan Haugen
[illegible]

(U-WIRE) MINNEAPOLIS – With the setting sun illuminating a pair of rainbow flags in the University of Minnesota's Carlson School of Management dining hall, gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender students celebrated the ceremonial closure of their college careers Thursday.

"It's nice to be recognized," said Tina Love before receiving a certificate at the Lavender Graduation and Awards Ceremony. "It is difficult to be gay at the University."

But much has changed at the University since Love first started taking courses in 1986. She points to the creation of GLBT programs and an expanding women's studies department as signs things are improving.

The sixth annual event, sponsored by the Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual and Transgender Programs Office, was the largest yet, with 29 graduates participating. "It's important for students to have a community celebration where everyone around them knows what they've gone through," GLBT programs office director Beth Zemsky said. "They've earned more than a degree. They've learned how to survive and thrive in an environment that doesn't always favor them," she said.

Zemsky said it's up to the student to decide whether the GLBT graduation ceremony serves as a supplement or a substitute for traditional ceremonies.

Graduating College of Liberal Arts senior Brad Hasskamp said he plans to walk again in his college's ceremony with the rainbow tassel he and other participants received at Thursday's event.

"This one's for me. The other one is for my family," Hasskamp said. Several partners, parents and other relatives were in attendance Thursday.

"I'm sure it's very good for those who are graduating," said Phyllis Olson, Love's mother.

A GLBT graduation ceremony will also take place this year at the University's Duluth campus. Zemsky said the trend has spread since 1996, when a colleague at the University of Michigan organized the first known GLBT graduation ceremony.

Oklahoma

By George Zabolski
Oklahoma Daily (U. Oklahoma)

(U-WIRE) NORMAN, Okla. – A student from Dallas Baptist University who visited Norman last weekend was diagnosed with meningitis, University of Oklahoma President David Boren said Tuesday.

The person was on campus visiting friends and family, arriving Thursday evening. By Sunday, he began to show symptoms of the disease. He has been hospitalized in Norman. An emergency response center was established Tuesday at the McCasland Field House to accommodate students, faculty and staff who feel they might have come in contact with this person. It will be open again Tuesday from 2 to 10 p.m. An emergency help line has also been established at 325-8777.

"The first stage of this center will be to determine whether or not the student or individual has had the kind of contact with our campus visitor that might expose them to," Boren said.

Those determined to have been at risk will be given Cipro, an antibiotic, said Jerry Vannatta, dean of the OU medical college.

"It's relatively cheap and it requires only one dose," Vannatta said.

Michael Bronze, chairman of the OU Department of Medicine, said the type of meningitis in this case is meningococcal meningitis. He said Cipro keeps the organism from taking hold as it attacks the lining of the brain. Bronze said giving the antibiotics should be an effective preventative process.

"The incubation period is two to 10 days," Bronze said. "The likelihood of this spreading rapidly through a college campus is very small."

Bronze said meningococcal meningitis can lead to meningococcal septicaemia, a type of blood poisoning that is a much more life-threatening form of the disease. Kristy Bradley, deputy epidemiologist for the state health department, said Oklahoma sees about 30 to 40 reported cases of meningitis each year.

"We're proceeding in a standard way of managing this case," said Kristy Bradley, deputy epidemiologist for the state health department. "It's a little bit atypical in the fact that this individual visited a large number of venues in Norman and may have caused more persons to be at risk."

Boren said the safety of the student body is the university's first concern.

"I want to stress that there is no reason for any kind of panic in this situation," Boren said. "We want to err on the side of caution.

"We want to make sure that anyone that might have had this kind of contact does receive the appropriate medical attention."

Students looking for information on meningitis at Goddard Health Center will be directed to the Field House, said Jeff Hickman, OU press secretary. Hickman advised students who have made appointments at Goddard to confirm them, since many staffers there have been diverted to the Field House to help with the response center. A smaller staff might force some appointments at Goddard to be canceled.

Boren said those not affiliated with the university might also have come in contact with this person.

"There may be others in Norman who feel they may have had exposure to this individual," Boren said. "These people need to go to the Cleveland County Health Department. The Cleveland County Health Department will administer the antibiotic at that location."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

[illegible] Massachusetts Daily Collegian [illegible] University of Massachusetts Amherst. [illegible] Monday through Friday during the academic year, except during vacations and examination periods. [illegible] Weekly rates are $110 per year. [illegible] Periodicals postage paid at Amherst, MA 01004. [illegible] Postmaster: Send address changes to the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Amherst, MA 01003. (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:00 p.m.

Sam Wilkinson Editor-in-Chief
Matthew F. Sacco Managing Editor
Amy Garganta Business Manager
Shimauli Dave Production Manager
Jake Lilien Diversity Editor
Mike Kulak Editorial Production Manager
Jason Smith Advertising Manager

Mike Delano Arts & Living Editor
Matthew Despres Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jennifer Eastwood Features Editor
Catherine Turner News Editor
Tiborn Ginzvy-Blum Photography Editor
Eric Soderstrom Sports Editor
Brent Sniawski Finance Manager
Charlie Iacco Distribution Manager

Morgan Taylor Advertising Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Cara Murphy Assistant Finance Manager
Shawn Daugherty Assistant Business Manager
Megan Shannon Assistant Advertising Manager

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Now Hiring Advertising Account Executives for Fall 2002

Call 545-3500 or stop by our office, room 113 in the Campus CenterBasement, with your resume for more information

All Majors & Classes Welcome to Apply
Current Freshmen Strongly Encouraged

Prayer Service for Healing in the Catholic Church

Wednesday, May 1st
The Feast of St. Joseph
7:30pm Newman Center Chapel

Please join us for an evening of prayer and reflection for healing in the Catholic Church as we ask for God's guidance, strength and forgiveness.

St. Joseph, Patron of the Church

The Internationally Award-Winning Commencement Ball

Dinner, Dancing and Drinks (positive ID required)
Horse & Carriage Rides
A Night to Remember!
2002

Friday, May 24, 2002
7:00 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. Student Union

To purchase tickets ($35.00 per person):
* Order on-line at www.umassalumni.com
* Call the Alumni Office at 545-2317
* Stop by the STARS table in the Campus Center : May 1-3, 6-10, & 13-14
* Stop by Cap and Gown Distribution the week of May 20th

Commencement Ball is supported by:
UMass Alumni Association, Alumni Relations Office, The Massachusetts Daily Collegian, Student Government Association Programming Board, Campus Activities Office, College of Humanities and Fine Arts, College of Social and Behavioral Sciences, College of Natural Sciences and Mathematics, Auxiliary Services, and Greek Affairs

ALUMNI ASSOCIATION UMASS

Don't forget to make your pledge to the Senior Campaign!

protest

continued from page 1

his call," Caldwell said. "I was in the stairwell, and I saw a number of people, police officers and what looked like administration people coming toward me, and one of the people that looked like administration said 'get him.' I was told that the building was closed, and I would have to leave. I started going up the stairs to get my belongings and I was arrested."

The protesters were informed by police Chief Barbara O'Connor that metal studs and other potentially harmful items would result in felony charges, prompting one Hampshire student to remove the spikes from her leather jacket. Many of the protesters took time to place nametags on their backpacks and other belongings.

Cevallos' remarks were limited to the repetition of the administration's refusal to negotiate, as well as his own sentiments on the protesters intruding into his personal office. "You are welcome to congregate out there," referring to the waiting area, "but this is a private office."

At approximately 2:30 p.m., an impartial observer was called into the office, and the protesters were given a final opportunity to leave before arrests took place. Police officers removed members of the media from Cevallos' office and then began arresting sit-in participants.

"We went limp, and the whole time we were saying, 'we are not resisting'," Edwards said. Edwards was dragged through the room and placed on a stretcher. She was carried out of the building and placed on a waiting bus. The bus and the Whitmore loading dock was cordoned off by police, and a crowd of supporters formed at the police line.

An officer instructed the activists that if they crossed the line, they would be subject to arrest.

As the "Whitmore 15" were carried and led out onto the bus, the assembly yelled the detainee's name and the word "power." Four women linked arms and strode through the police barricade. They walked five yards before several officers placed them under arrest. An officer with a video camera recorded each arrest.

Fifteen activists linked arms and blocked the bus in. Chief O'Connor informed them that if they did not move they would be subject to arrest. Protesters were given one chance to move, and then arrested and placed on the bus. The bus then went to a makeshift booking area at the Mullins Center, where the suspects were processed.

All 55 persons are being charged with disorderly conduct in a roadway and resisting arrest. Some are being charged with trespass. A few of the suspects posted their own $25 bail, and the UAW provided funds to cover this expense. Shaw stated that UAW lawyers would represent the 55 at their arraignments, which will be held today, Wednesday and Thursday in Hampshire County Court in Northampton.

SCOTT ELLERBROCK/COLLEGIAN

Leslie Edwards, president of the Graduate Employee Organization, smiles to supporters as she is loaded into a bus by police. Edwards' wrists were bruised and cut by restraints.

SCOTT ELLERBROCK/COLLEGIAN

Police restrain an activist who refused to move while blocking the loading dock.

SCOTT ELLERBROCK/COLLEGIAN

Activists supporting the RA union peer as police load sit-in participants onto a bus for transport to the Mullins Center for booking.

Ten years later, UCLA reflects on riots

By Peijean Tsai
Daily Bruin (U. California-Los Angeles)

(U-WIRE) LOS ANGELES – Ten years after the outbreak of the Los Angeles riots, University of California-Los Angeles experts addressed the problems leading up to the uprising and apply the lessons learned in the wake of the riots to social issues of today.

In addition to discord with the verdict of the Rodney King trial, social and economic injustice contributed to the unrest of those who participated, professors said. While improvements were made in the institutions affecting the community, professors feel that there is still room for improvement.

A lack of understanding between the different ethnic communities of South Central Los Angeles contributed to the eventual uprising among African-Americans, Koreans and Latinos of the community, said Kyeyoung Park, a UCLA professor of anthropology who has published six articles on the uprising.

But 10 years later, there may still be a need to address misunderstanding. Mechanisms must be put in place for people to be able to learn about other racial communities to avoid this sort of conflict, said Park.

Programs founded as a result of the riots, such as the Korean Immigrant Workers Advocates, work to close the boundaries of racial division by providing assistance to low income workers, Park said.

"There was a genuine interest in different groups wanting to know more about each other," Park said.

Park, however, pointed out the lack of a diversity requirement in the UCLA undergraduate education.

"We don't provide the mechanisms for people to learn about other groups," Park said. "Asian-American studies classes are mostly taken by Asian-American students only."

UCLA is the only UC campus that does not require its students to fulfill diversity requirements.

The behavior of officials in the Los Angeles Police Department has also been a continued issue and seen substantial improvement over the past 10 years, said Iorja Prover, a UCLA professor of social welfare.

After the riots, changes in the department included improved hiring practices and screening of people who "may have been liabilities in the past," she said.

Also, LAPD charter reform restricted the term of a chief of police to five years, after which he or she would be subject to evaluation for a second term.

"Being the chief of police used to be like being king," Prover said.

Daryl Gates, who was chief during the riots, served a term of 14 years, and former chief William Parker died in office in 1966 after serving for 16 years, Prover added.

The term limit under the charter reform took effect when Chief Bernard Parks was rejected for rehire by the Los Angeles Police Commission this month. Parks failed to meet expectations, including reforming the police force, which has a reputation for corruption, his opponents said.

News meeting tonight at 5:30 p.m.

Now More Than Ever, Appearance Counts...
INTERVIEW SUITS
Priced to fit any budget.
We specialize in suits for graduate school and job placement interviews.
Jonathan Reid
The men's store in the Hampshire Mall.

WANTED
STUDENTS WITH TRUCK OR BUS DRIVING EXPERIENCE WANTED FOR SUMMER WORK
EARN $110-$140 PER DAY
Working approximately 14 days in
One or both sessions available. Possibly some July work.
Call 1-888-949-5089

Win a $5000 scholarship.
(Because eventually you're going to run out of books to sell back.)
monster TRAK
Update your resume today on www.monstertrak.com for your chance to win.
Stop by your career center for more information.

DAILY COLLEGIAN
EDITORIAL/OPINION
COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED/OP EDITOR: MATTHEW DESPRES

Union talks needed
But RAs losing respect

The UMass administration is wrong. Again. The longer the RA union drama gets dragged out, the more painfully obvious that is. The RA union isn't fighting for anything specific or earth-shattering yet, it's fighting for the right to negotiate. It's fighting for the right to fight, basically. It is completely and utterly ridiculous that such a simple right can be denied.

Few of us at the University have any love for the way things are run out of Whitmore. We all get frustrated with the hoops that complicates the way we pick our classes, pay our bills, and live our lives on campus. But the RA union is losing the respect of the general student body by the day. It's finding it hard to sympathize with a group that seems more willing to whine about its situation than to do anything responsible or constructive to fix it.

Yes... the UMass administration is still wrong. And yes, Whitmore is still breaking every applicable law that has to do with UMass' RA union. It isn't fair. It isn't right. Administration has not played by the book with the organized RA's from day one, and it's easy to see why anyone fighting for the right to organize and negotiate would be angry and frustrated.

Yesterday's protest outside of Whitmore does nothing to serve the purpose of the RA union, however. Sure, it draws attention to the way that the University has chosen to treat the organized students. That means little. Because while it does embarrass UMass leadership to have incidents such as what occurred yesterday happen, it also destroys the little respect that the union has at this point.

Right there was the RA union occupying the offices several weeks ago at Whitmore. Now there's this. Thirty-five people were arrested yesterday for something that amounts to little more than stupidity. We at the Collegian understand the frustration that must be building for our organized RAs. Their rights are being trampled on. Their beliefs are being challenged. But we also believe that there is a better in way. In fact, it is tough to believe that there could be a worse way.

The RA union's first asset was that it had done everything right. It played by the book. Recent events have showed that It is turning away from that trend, and that is very unfortunate. The lower that the RA union is willing to go, the more difficult it is to believe that It will be able to maintain any kind of credibility. And without credibility, it has nothing.

Hopefully it realizes that before it's too late.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

Administration wrong
Whitmore needs to negotiate

DAN CLAWSON

I've just come from the Whitmore loading dock, where I watched the arrest of a couple dozen students. Their crime? Trying to get the administration to obey the law. Hosts of prominent people (elected representatives, ministers, a gubernatorial candidate) have urged the administration to obey the law and negotiate with students; the administration continues to refuse to do so.

For many months undergraduate student resident assistants have been trying to win a voice in the decisions that affect their lives and to gain recognition for their right to form a union that will represent their interests and bargain with the administration. The administration has opposed them at every turn, and at every point the law has come down on the side of students.

But each time the administration has refused to accept that students have a right to democratically elect representatives and negotiate about the terms of work. The administration insists that students don't have any such rights, that the administration should be able to dictate the terms of work.

When resident assistants (RAs) wanted a voice at work, they organized with United Auto Workers Local 2322, the same union that represents graduate teaching assistants and research assistants on campus. When students had gathered support from a large number of RAs, the union filed with the Massachusetts Labor Relation Commission (MLRC) asking that an election be held. Whitmore argued that it was impossible for someone to be both a worker and an undergraduate student, and since the RAs were students, they couldn't be workers.

The state labor commission heard these arguments, listened to the students describe what they in fact have to do, and ruled that the students are workers and have a right to vote on whether or not they want a union. It should be noted that Massachusetts has had Republican governors for the last dozen years, so the commissioners are not exactly a bunch of leftist radicals.

The commission then scheduled an election. The administration ran an aggressive and vehement anti-union campaign, doing its level best to persuade resident assistants not to support a union, and setting out a variety of reasons why a union would be (in Whitmore's opinion) a terrible mistake. Students listened, and listened also to the arguments of resident assistants who supported the union. The vote was held and a large majority of students supported forming an RA union. This is a history-making precedent: a first-in-the-nation union for undergraduate RAs.

No one questions that it was a fair election. No one questions that a majority of students voted to have a union. But the administration refuses to accept the result, and refuses to accept that students have a right to sit down and bargain with administrators. Whitmore has declared it will defy the law and refuse to bargain. It's spending thousands of your dollars for a private anti-union lawyer to make the case that it should not have to obey the rulings of the (Republican appointed) Massachusetts Labor Relations Commission.

A variety of prominent people are dismayed at the administration's refusal to bargain, and have signed a letter saying that, "The administration should respect the law, the decisions of the MLRC, and the outcome of a democratic election." Among those who have signed the letter are former Secretary of Labor and current Democratic Gubernatorial Candidate Robert Reich, Congressman John Oliver, Senator Stanley Rosenberg, Representative Steven Kulik, Representative Ellen Story, Mount Holyoke College Dean of Religious Life Andrea Ayvazian, Rabbi Sheila Weinberg, the heads of every major union on campus, and a number of professors (including me, John Bracey, Nancy Folbre, Sut Jhally, Linda Smircich, Tom Juravich).

"...The administration refuses to accept the result [of the RA election] and refuses to accept that students have a right to sit down and bargain with administrators."

The administration's message to students has been the following: defy the law, don't respect the results of elections, treat RAs as though they do not have the right or the good judgment to decide on what is in their best interests. It's little wonder students were driven to civil disobedience yesterday, and I hope the punishment (if any) recognizes that student actions came only in response to administration defiance of legal rulings and the results of elections. Both the demonstrators and the police are to be congratulated for civil disobedience at its finest: demonstrators standing up for a principle, and both police and demonstrators behaving with respect and moderation.

Where will this go in the future? If Whitmore persists in fighting legal rulings and refusing to accept the results of a democratic election, and continues to use large quantities of student fees to do so, what choices will the students have? It's not surprising they aren't willing to wait through interminable legal delays drawn out until long after all current RAs have graduated, or engage in other forms of civil disobedience.

The administration's reckless disregard of the law is likely to lead to bad publicity for the university at the worst of times, just as our budget is being debated. I know it's painful for any administrator to admit that students have rights, but I strongly urge the administration to sit down and bargain with students, as state rulings and election results require them to do.

Dan Clawson is a professor of sociology.

No growing up

MELODY ZAGAMI

The "G" word is getting thrown about quite nonchalantly as of late. I've got a few more of these pup pies to go, but I have to write now before I go [illegible] consuming me. I can't eat and all I can think of is "Why? Why does this [illegible] to me?" I've lived a good person. I've given to the Red Cross and once [illegible] Tickle Me Elmo to Toys "R" Us. Why me, why?"

I know what you're saying, Mel, you're being dramatic. Let's start with the fact that I'm an adult. And I say unto you, dear reader, that's exactly what I'm worried about.

"How am I going to succeed in the real world if I can't even decide between ham or chicken salad?"

I'm an adult now. I have a full time job, a car, and a mortgage. I'm [illegible] up-a-joe. But, seriously, I have to be in a state of mind where I can look at myself in the mirror and not want to vomit. I'm 25 this month. I will be 26 in May. I will be 27 in March of 2003. I will be 28 in May 2004. I will be 29 in March of 2005. I will be 30 in May 2006. I will be 31 in March of 2007. I will be 32 in May 2008. I will be

■ Elena

continued from page 5

posedly dilate when we come in contact with those pretty people that make us tick. So if you meet a girly that stares into your eyes with quite large pupils and seems to touch your arm a lot then maybe she's "the one."

I can tell you that life is way too short to sing the "I coulda, shoulda, wouldja blues." If you are interested in this girl and you are absolutely sure that your feelings have blossomed into more than those of friendship, then do not let anything stop you! It sounds like she is merely an office acquaintance, so I recommend that you start off slow by asking her to hang out with you outside of work with a group of people. Keep it casual so that she does not scare off and then you will able to find out if she has a boyfriend and perhaps gain a sense of where you stand.

Then in time maybe you will want to move it to the next level by asking her on a date. But do not worry about losing any friendship that the two of you have built up to this point. If she is a mature adult worth your time and companionship, then she will continue to be your friend even if she does not share your interest.

We all know women and men that will avoid someone who they once considered a good friend because that person has shown his or her true colors to be of the pink and red Valentine's Day hue. Yet, why would you want to be friends with someone who could be so juvenile and cruel? So be confident and do not fret too much about the consequences. You can make casual friends any day of the week, but a person that you feel comfortable enough with to date or call your girlfriend can be hard to find. Do not sit back and settle for friendship if that's not true to your heart. You should never live life with regrets!

Elena Panesis is a Collegian columnist.

Got a question to ask Elena? You'd better hurry! The sassy UMass advice columnist has only two more issues of Ask Elena. So send your questions now to askelena@yahoo.com.

Murphy speaks on new CD

By Kevin Monahan
COLLEGIAN STAFF

PETER MURPHY
Dust
Metropolis

It's not every day that you give a ring to the lead singer of one of your favorite bands. A band whose existence has become legendary in your mind because its inception and dissolution occurred before you had appreciation of music of any sort. But sunnehow, it didn't seem all that surreal to be calling the number provided by Metropolis Records and ask, "Uh, hi. Is Peter Murphy there?"

Moments later, "Hello this is Peter..." And the first thing I do is to mispronounce the name of his collaborator.

"It's Mercan [mer-jhan] Dede. It's understandable. In Turkish it's pronounced as 'J.' Not that we would know that," Murphy said. (So polite!)

Of course, the event to which I owe this pleasant conversation is the release of Murphy's sixth solo studio LP, Dust. To say that Dust is a departure for Murphy is an understatement, despite the fact that he's been heading in this direction for quite some time.

"If you listen very carefully back, even on Should the World Fail to Fall Apart [Murphy's first solo album] I've got a song called 'Irmal' and there's a Turkish fretless guitar on that," Murphy said. "The Turkish element has really been due to meeting my wife and finally moving there [Turkey] in 1992. There have been one or two Turkish guest musicians on most of my albums. But, I've never wanted to make a jump into anything as overtly Turkish as I have on this album."

Peter Murphy talks about his new CD, Dust.

If you're looking for catchy pop tunes like "Cuts You Up," you won't find it here. Dust is an intricately layered album that probably won't spawn even one single. The lengths of the songs are not radio-friendly (the shortest track clocks in at 6:55). What Dust does offer is richly textured soundscapes accompanied by Murphy's trademark vocals. The instrumentation carries influences of traditional Turkish/Sufi music, rather than the guitar generated noise that characterized his band Bauhaus.

"I've felt that before it may have been sort of presumptuous to attempt anything of the kind," Murphy said. "I didn't want to appear as a pseudo-world artist, which I'm not actually. I'm a result of a very particular kind of British post-punk generation. But I knew, with Mercan that he knew what I wanted out of the Turkish instrumentation. It was all about authenticity, a desire to bring about an authentic qualities within a very progressive, alternative rock music form. I didn't want a Turkish album or a Western album. I wanted a synthesis that was neither of East or West, but right in the middle."

Murphy's collaboration with Montreal-based musician Mercan Dede came about by accident.

"My wife is an artistic director and she's always looking for source music for her pieces," Murphy said. "She's in the habit of bringing a lot of traditional Turkish music home with her. There was an album hang on my desk one day by Mercan Dede. I expected it to be a traditional Sufi album. But it really crossed over into a much more contemporary attitude, more likened to a trance album. It triggered a curiosity into who Mercan was. The phone rang in one of those great synchronicity sort of moments, and it was Mercan Dede calling for my wife, and I insisted that we meet. Instinctively knew that was the person to approach in making what has become Dust."

Although Dust might not be easy to listen to at first it is easy to get lost in its enveloping sound. "Things to Remember" opens the album with Murphy's voice in a quiet whisper. "Girlchild Aglow" and "Your Face" are two of the album's highlights. Traditional Turkish instruments such as the kanun and mey are contrasted with synths and sound effects. Murphy's lyrics are at the top of his form (not that he's ever had a problem in that area). Re-recordings of "My Last Two Weeks" and "Subway (Epilogue)" close the album as an extra treat for his fans, at the insistence of Mercan Dede.

Dust is Murphy's second album on the Metropolis label, the first being a Live Just for Love, a double live album documenting one show in Los Angeles on his Just for Love tour in 2000. Murphy toured twice in 2000, in support of Wild Birds, his "best-of" collection, then later on the Just for Love tour. The latter of which was a stripped down, minimalist approach featuring just three musician onstage.

"The Wild Birds tour was a celebration of everything that one would expect Peter Murphy to be," Murphy said. "And a sort of flexing that sort of theatrical muscle. But when we exhausted all of that – it was getting to be almost a two-and-a-half hour show – I decided to do some numbers that were not rehearsed with just myself on acoustic guitar. That sort of gave me the inclination to do a tour that was kind of like me walking onto the stage on my own, stripped of the spectacle and costume and looking to see if I existed in there without that... I was for me a very powerful tour because all of that theatricality and glamour was still there. And I thought what better live album to put out than this kind of album that was not a re-hashing of the full arrangements, but a Peter Murphy album that would count as an album on its own."

Dust is also the first new material we have seen from Murphy since 1988's Recall LP, which was recorded with KMFDM's Sascha Konietzko, Tim Skold and Bill Rieflin.

"They were amazing to work with," Murphy said. "It was a great creative nucleus. I came away from that project with a great admiration for Bill. Not only was he adding some very wonderful arrangements, but he's an amazing drummer. Maybe in the future I'll work with them again[...] but Sascha's more interested in his KMFDM project. That's just the kind of artist he is."

With Bauhaus selling more records after their breakup and when they were together, Murphy doesn't feel the need to distance himself from those members.

"I have very fond [...] Murphy said. "I completely embrace it. I don't think it's right need to take the attitude that Bauhaus is something different. I was a large part of Bauhaus and Peter Murphy is Peter Murphy in a way of Bauhaus."

After their 1983 breakup, Murphy and his bandmates (formerly known as Love and Rockets) reunited once in 1998 for the Resurrection tour. They claimed the chemistry was right at that time, and Murphy doesn't think that would be right again.

"If the creative motion and attitude within the band was right," Murphy said. "I'm a bit of a Bauhaus fundamentalist. I don't go along with the idea that we can rest on our laurels. If Bauhaus is going to exist it must be as a 100 percent tight committed band, without any sort of trite attitude. From that point of view I don't see it happening, because I don't think we all see it like that. Then it's not Bauhaus, it then a parody, which is the worst thing possible."

If the attitude was right we could make just a good an album as..." Murphy hesitates for a moment. "...as Dust even. Part of me thinks that Dust is the best Bauhaus album yet."

■ style

continued from page 5

following staples.

The Baseball Hat – Every guy owns a rather substantial collection of baseball hats. But there is always that ONE cap, that no matter how mangled, smelly, dirty and torn it gets, the guy will not stop wearing it. Maybe it's a loyalty thing, maybe it's a cheapness thing, or maybe it's just that it's the perfect shape for his head – but no matter how many new hats you buy a guy, he just won't change up until that hat falls apart.

The Cargo Pant – This is perhaps the only new fashion trend that guys jumped upon. When cargo pants came into vogue about four years ago, guys across the country bought them by the armful. Today, the cargo pocket has become rather passé, however guys will just not give it up. So all the stores still stock cargo pants to restock the cargo pants that got destroyed while offroading.

The Sweatshirt – Most often it's a sweatshirt, but sometimes it is a flannel. Either way, every guy has that one piece of warmer outerwear that he will wear every day. Usually the more obnoxious the color or the more faded with bleach, the better. It's like a mark of pride to say, "Yeah, I've worn this Roots sweatshirt three days in a row."

The Shoe-of-choice – There's not much variety in the guy shoe of choice. There are only two acceptable options: sneakers or leather Doc Marten styles.

Sporty Style – When a guy wants to get really comfortable – you know, away from the tight constraints of a T-Shirt and jeans – a guy will bust out the sports gear. Warm-up pants and previously mentioned sweatshirt, mesh shorts or a favorite hockey jersey. Really, the only fashion faux pas is a pair of sweatpants that shrunk a little in the dryer – too tight sweatpants are just not acceptable.

Dress-up – When a guy just wants to clean up a little, out come the khaki pants and button-down shirts. It's quick, it's easy, it's fully washable in a laundry machine and dryer... and it just looks so good. Especially after said guy has been rocking his sweatshirt all week.

The T-Shirt – Yes, every guy you'll meet has an entire drawer full of T-Shirts ranging from the really worn-out, lived-in, moth-holed variety to the carefully selected band T-Shirt. T-Shirts can be worn underneath a button-down shirt, or can make a complete outfit on it's own. It's the most versatile of all the guy staples.

The Facial Hair – At some point, in every guy's life, a guy puts a lot of effort into growing a beard or sideburns of some sort. It's a hair safari, full of tough decisions like, "Do I go with the goatee or the mutton-chops? For those interested in facial hair help, which thankfully I have no knowledge about, you may want to check out www.beards.org. It's full of exciting tips, and some really bizarre facial hair style that many may not have ever considered.

Guys have the right idea. They're fully capable of taking the time to dress themselves nicely, and from time to time they will. But most of the time, why would you even bother. And since all guys dress the same, they don't even have to worry about dressing up to impress the ladies. It's like they have a secret union or something, and all voted one day to stop the ironed shirt madness. And damn, do they look good.

Shauna Billings is a stylin' Collegian columnist.

Hey Arts Staff!!!
(and all those who want to be Arts Staff)
All Arts Staff Meeting tonight at 7 p.m. in the Collegian. If you don't come, we'll make you review the next Baha Men album!!!!!!

'Legendary Bingo' puts crazy spin on classic game

By Christopher J. Thell
DAILY TROJAN (U. SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA)

(U-WIRE) LOS ANGELES – "Chatty chatty, hush!" the self-billed Fabulous Belle Aire bellows into the microphone. The Dupar's coffee shop crowd in West Hollywood has become too gregarious for the commanding drag queen. Clad in tight black stretch pants and tank top, the strapping Belle Aire, who stands over six feet tall in her three-inch stilettos, looks like actress Teri Hatcher on steroids. She's ready to start the next game – and Belle Aire gets what Belle Aire wants.

"Damnit, people, let's play some Bingo!"

Bingo, oft-associated with old women in smoky halls of suspect decoration, had its genesis in the 16th-century Italian Lottery, which then migrated to France in the late 1770s to become Le Lotto, an entertainment for French intellectuals. The game made its way across the Atlantic in the early part of the 20th century, and was a staple of country fairs across North America, where it was called Beano because players would mark their cards with dried beans, shouting "Beano!" if they won.

New York toy salesman Edwin S. Lowe gave Beano its new name. While visiting a county fair, he watched as a tongue-tied woman accidentally yelled, "Bingo!" instead of the proper, "Beano!" Inspired, Lowe developed and marketed his new game in New York. Bingo finally etched a permanent place in American popular culture when a parishioner at a New York City church realized that the game could help his parish raise much needed money.

Now that a new millennium is under way, markers have replaced beans as the preferred means of score keeping, and Bingo is still going strong, raising money for worthy causes. Although it seems safe to say that when Edward S. Lowe had his epiphany almost a century ago, he never envisioned Bingo would be celebrated as it is at Dupar's.

"Legendary Bingo," held every single Thursday night in West Hollywood since April 1998, celebrates its fourth anniversary this week. The brainchild of Jeffery Bowman, a spritely, late-30s man with an impish grin, "Legendary Bingo" started as a fund-raiser for AIDS Project Los Angeles. Desiring more community-based events, Bowman, the always affable host of the evening whose official title is Bingo Boy, started "Legendary Bingo." It began at the now-defunct Stonewall Coffeehouse, just a few blocks down Santa Monica Boulevard, but now currently resides inside the West Hollywood Ramada Inn coffee shop.

"The crowds were initially, like, 10 people, and if we broke a $100 that was a big night," he said.

After the Stonewall went out of business, Bowman moved the event to a nearby Starbucks, but as the event grew in popularity, more space was required. Dupar's has housed the event for the last two and a half years, with enthusiastic crowds of close to 200 people regularly filling the restaurant.

"Even though we were small at first, I had so much fun doing it, and it was for such a good cause, we just kept going," he said. "It was totally unplanned. I started to think, why not do it for a different charity each week?"

Belle Aire came on board during the first few months, and has been a staple of the show since. Her haughty demeanor and sharp tongue provide a refreshing contrast to the monotone calls and trite humor of normal Bingo announcers. When a player complains she's having bad luck that night, the unmoved Belle Aire rejoins, "Take your bitter queen pill and report to valet immediately," to the delight of the audience.

A B-list star joins Belle Aire at the podium every Thursday to help read the numbers that are pulled from a small, hand-churned onyx cage. Past celebrities have included Tippi Hedren, Jean Smart, Tina Yothers, a host of other minor celebrities plucked from daytime television, comedians on the rise and celebrities of the month such as "Survivor" host Jeff Probst and even Darva Conger.

The only people Bowman, who by day is the publicist for the "Hollywood Squares," won't invite to host are porn stars, although he says many have offered their services.

"Yeah, we're a little naughty, but we want to make sure that families feel welcome, too," he said.

In addition to standard Bingo, participants play such intriguing variations as "Camel Toe," "Rim Job" and "Blouse Clowns," although none of these terms, in keeping with the family-values theme, is ever explained or demonstrated.

UMass BRIEFS:

Crew

The University of Massachusetts won its seventh Verizon Atlantic 10 Women's Rowing Championship title in as many years this weekend on the Cooper River in Collingswood, N.J.

The Minutewomen won five of eight races in posting 44 total points. Rhode Island enjoyed its best-ever finish at the Verizon Atlantic 10 Championship by placing second with 34 points. George Washington, which had finished second each of the last six years, was third with 23 points. Dayton was fourth with 22 points, followed by Fordham (16 points), Saint Joseph's (15 points), La Salle (12 points), Duquesne (eight points), and Temple (seven points).

Massachusetts' five wins are the most by an Atlantic 10 team since the Minutewomen posted six wins in 1999. UMass' Sarah Pollman, Lea Jakobsen, Katia Prokopenko and Anna Talucci took gold in the Quad (7:43.50), while the Novice 4 boat of Bethanny Peters, Christen Dexter, Lizzy Boyle, Becca Bell and Lauren Rowell won in 8:27.43.

The Minutewomen's Varsity 8 boat of coxswain Megan Mastropolo, Jakobsen, Pollmann, Prokopenko, Colleen Banfield, Hayley McGrath, Talucci, Erin Cooke and Lauren Cromwell took first in a season-best time of 6:48.66.

Next weekend, UMass heads to Syracuse, N.Y., for a meet against Syracuse and Villanova, Saturday, May 4.

Men's Basketball

Massachusetts senior guard Shannon Crooks received the George "Trigger" Burke Most Valuable Player Award at the team's season-ending banquet Sunday at the Log Cabin in Holyoke, Mass.

Crooks, who led the 2001-02 Minutemen in scoring (14.6 ppg), assists (116), steals (37) and minutes played (1,017) was the only UMass player to start all 29 games during the squad's 13-16 campaign. Only the fourth player in school history to finish his career with 1,000 points, he had 1,074 points, good for 28th place on the school's all-time scoring list) and 300 assists (he dished out 310 in his three-year career, which stands as the 10th-best effort in school history). Crooks also received the team's Julius Erving Scoring Award and the Rick Pitino Assist Award after leading the club in both categories last season.

Senior forward Eric Williams picked up a pair of awards, as he was honored with the team's Skip Connors Academic Award and the Jim Laughnane Free Throw Shooting Award after hitting a team-best 78.1 percent at the foul line. Two other seniors, Kitwana Rhymer (drafted by the Brooklyn Kings with the 15th pick in the United States Basketball League Draft) and Ronell Blizzard were also honored. Rhymer picked up the Lou Roe Rebounding Award after posting a team-high 6.0 average, while Blizzard received the John Murphy Inspiration Award.

Junior Micah Brand earned the Alex Eldridge Coaches Award after ranking second on the team in rebounding (5.7 rpg) and third in scoring (9.3 ppg).

Sophomore Anthony Anderson, the 2002 Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Year, earned the Mark Donoghue Most Productive Player Award. He led the team in three-point goals made (71), attempted (117) and percentage (.439), while ranking second on the squad in minutes (985), assists (100), steals (51) and scoring (10.0 ppg).

Another sophomore, Raheim Lamb, earned the Jack Leaman Award as the team's top defensive player. Walk-on sophomore Paco Kotaridis took home the Derrick Claiborne Mr. Hustle Award, while freshmen Brennan Martin and Kyle Wilson earned the Jim McCoy Most Improved Player and Rafer Giles Sixth Man awards, respectively.

Coach Steve Lappas' Minutemen, who open the 2002-03 season in the prestigious Maui Classic, will return seven letterwinners, including three starters, from the 2001-02 squad.

– Courtesy U. Mass Media Relations

The UMass crew team won its seventh straight A-10 Championship.

CINEMARK
The Best Seat in Town
CINEMARK AT HAMPSHIRE MALL
367 Russell St. 413-587-4233
Schedule for Friday 4/26 – Thursday 5/2
DIGITAL SURROUND SOUND IN ALL AUDITORIUMS
Purchase Tickets Online @ cinemark.com
LIFE OR SOMETHING LIKE IT PG-13 2:25 4:55 7:15 9:45
JASON X R 1:00 3:00 5:00 7:00 9:00 11:00
MURDER BY NUMBERS PG-13 1:40 4:10 7:30 10:00
SCORPION KING PG-13 1:20 4:20 7:05 9:40
CHANGING LANES R 4:40 7:10 9:50
HIGH CRIMES PG-13 1:10 4:25 7:20 9:55
THE SWEETEST THING R 1:30 4:15 7:00 9:30
NATIONAL LAMPOON'S VAN WILDER R 1:45 4:30 7:30 10:00
THE ROOKIE PG 1:20 4:00 7:10 10:10
PANIC ROOM PG 1:40 4:30 7:40 10:35
CLOCKSTOPPERS PG 1:50 4:50 7:50
DEATH TO SMOOCHY R 4:40 7:10 9:40
ICE AGE PG 1:10 2:15 4:20 6:45 9:10
CHANGING LANES 10:00 a.m. show only
• NO PASSES-NO SUPERSAVERS
Tickets & showtimes available at cinemark.com

Eliminate
FEARS/ALLERGIES
In one session
Fear of flying, public speaking, exams, needles, elevators, heights, allergies and other disturbances can be eliminated in one session.
Order a free booklet at 413 374 8217

BOSTON BARTENDERS SCHOOL of AMERICA
Bartenders Have More Spirit!
www.bostonbartender.com
Why not be a bartender?
• Only professional school in Western MA
• Hands-on training in real bar/club setting
• National certification in alcohol awareness
• Lifetime refresher • ID Card • Resume
• Special UMass student discount
• Conveniently located in West Springfield
Call TODAY! (413) 747-9888

North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
www.northamherstmotors.com
549-RENT OOPS!
POTTERS AUTO & TRUCK RENTALS
• Cars • Mini Vans • Trucks • SUV's • Cargo Vans • 15 Passenger Vans • Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older • Direct Billing To Insurance Co • MHEC Rates
(On bus route)

STUDENT TRAVEL
It's YOUR trip, take it!
London.....$288
Paris.....$377
Brussels.....$458
Rio de Janeiro..$654
San Jose C.R...$523
Fares are round-trip from Hartford. Restrictions may apply. Tax not included.
BUDGET HOTELS for as little as $18 A NIGHT!!!
STA TRAVEL
800.777.0112
www.statravel.com

TAPESTRY Health
Affordable and Confidential
• Gyn Exams • Birth Control • Pregnancy Testing • Emergency Contraception • HIV/STD Testing • Quit Smoking
Bangs Center, 70 Boltwood Walk, Amherst
16 Center Street, Northampton
(413) 586-2539 or
www.tapestryhealth.org

UMass INTRAMURAL SPORTS
STILL TIME TO ENTER:
Tennis Doubles (M/W/C).....A.S.A.P.
Diamond Derby (M/W).....A.S.A.P.
World Cup Soccer (M/W).....A.S.A.P.

Massachusetts School of Law
AT ANDOVER
CLASSES START IN AUGUST
• LSAT NOT REQUIRED
• DAY AND EVENING PROGRAMS
• ROLLING ADMISSIONS
• AFFORDABLE TUITION PLANS - 1/2 THE MEDIAN LAW SCHOOL TUITION IN NEW ENGLAND
• OUR PRACTICAL/THEORETICAL PROGRAM PREPARES STUDENTS FOR THE PRACTICE OF LAW AS WELL AS NUMEROUS OTHER PROFESSIONS
THE LEADER OF REFORM IN LEGAL EDUCATION
500 FEDERAL STREET, ANDOVER, MA 01810
Phone: (978) 681-0800
email: pcolby@mslaw.edu
www.mslaw.edu
CONTACT US NOW FOR YOUR COPY OF FEDERAL REPORTS 600+ THINGS YOU CAN DO WITH A LAW DEGREE

GRAPHICS
the Collegian is hiring for next semester
College Street Motors
It's Spring Time!
CAMPUS PARKING NOTICE
come talk to Shimauli, Mike or Morgan
or call 545-1864
105 Campus Center Basement

PROMISES
Tuesday, April 30, 2002
7:00 p.m.
Campus Center Auditorium
UMass Amherst
A feature-length documentary about seven Palestinian and Israeli children living in Jerusalem and the nearby Deheishe refugee camp. "Promises" speaks to the heart of the Palestinian-Israeli conflict as seen through the eyes of its children.
Discussion with director B.Z. Goldberg following the film
ACADEMY AWARD NOMINEE BEST DOCUMENTARY
Free and open to the public
Presented by the UMass Office of Jewish Affairs and the Campus Activities Office
For information call 413.545.9042 or www.umass.edu/jewish

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. - Now Available, 1&2 bedroom apts. Leases begin June, July, Aug or Sept. 1 year lease. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywine-apts.com stop by or call (413) 549-0600.

3 Bedroom Apartment in Puffton Village. Available June 1ST. Great location! 549-4097.

2 bedroom Apt. Millvalley. Asking $900.00, nego. Avail 6/1. 413-896-9365.

Summer Sublet with fall option. Puffton 3 BR/ 2 BA. June 1ST. 549-4814.

2 bedroom apt. Take over our lease and SAVE $$$. Free heat + hot water on bus line. 253-4876.

2 bedroom Puffton Apt. Take over lease. Available June 1 with fall option. 549-7683.

Take over our lease in June $905/M Brandywine. Call Dan 549-8518.

Downtown Amherst: 19b South Prospect St. 2 bedroom June 1. 253-2513. Great for couple.

AUTO FOR SALE

Maxima 1989. Original owner, 154000 miles. Good car $m 545-5677.

89 Honda Accord $1500 OBO 259-0068.

COMPUTERS

Color Laptop $99 Pentium tower/ CD Rom $99 with color monitor $139. HURRY! 413-584-8857.

EMPLOYMENT

SUMMER IN MAINE Jewish, Co-ed overnight camp in the southern Maine seeks staff: Boys Unit Head (23+), Camping/ Tripping Director (23+), Judaics Director (23+); swim, water ski, and boating/ sailing instructors (lifeguard certification req'd.); archery (training avail.), ceramics, general athletics, gymnastics, photography, radio, low ropes, theater; general counselors, office personnel. For information, contact: Ava Goldman, Director, JCC Camp Kingswood, 333 Nahanton street, Newton, MA 02459, 617-244-5124, or e-mail: director@kingswood.org

EMPLOYMENT

Camp Counselor wanted for Tennis, Gymnastics, Water Ski, Arts, and more! Gain valuable experience at award-winning camps, while having the summer of a lifetime. Apply on-line at www.pine-forest.com

CAMP WAYNE FOR GIRLS- Northeast Pennsylvania (6/19-8/17/02). Children's sleep-away camp. If you love children and want to have a GREAT summer we are still looking for Directors for Swimming, Golf, Tennis, Cheerleading and Ass't Directors for Sports and Gymnastics. Counselors for: Tennis, Gymnastics, Drama, Basketball, Golf, Soccer, Sailing, Sculpture/Lino Cuts, Silkscreen, Batik, Jewelry, Calligraphy, Guitar, Self-Defense, Video, Piano, Ropes, Mother's Helper, Night Watchperson. On Campus Interviews Arranged. Call 800-279-5019 or go to www.campwaynegirls.com.

EMPLOYMENT

PCA/ Babysitter wanted 256-3763.

Promoters wanted!! Student Travel Services is looking for individuals to promote spring break. Enjoy unlimited earning potential and free travel while building a solid resume! Call 800-648-4849. Or visit www.ststravel.com

TEENAGE BICYCLE TOUR LEADERS NEEDED: Be a Teen Tour Leader this summer. Trips in USA, Canada, Europe. We need a 4-week time commitment, salary plus expenses paid. Student Hosteling Program, P.O. Box 419, CONWAY, MA 01341. 800-343-6132 www.bicycletrips.com.

Computer Programmer/FORTRAN for economic modeling firm, contact: Fred Treyz, REMI, 433 West St., Amherst, MA 01002. info@remi.com.

EMPLOYMENT

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individual, full and part time positions available immediately. Only those able to work the upcoming summer should apply. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413)584-4746.

Be the Campus Red Bull connection. Join our team and help build one of the world's leading brands, you'll have a blast while gaining invaluable marketing experience. You'll even earn a little extra spending cash. Think about it. It's a lot less dangerous than selling term papers! Apply at redbullcollege.com.

FOR RENT

Amherst Center 1 bedroom, off street parking, starting June 1ST -early move in available. Call 253-1180.

2 bedroom apt. on bus route avail. June 1 w/fall option $905/mo heat hot water included 549-1883.

FOR SALE

Furniture for sale call 259-0068. Book-Shelf, Coffee-table, bed and more.

King size bed $75 and other furniture 253-1140.

HOUSE FOR SALE

Hadley 5 bedroom plus. Newer home five minutes from UMASS. June occupancy $2600.00 month. 549-4270.

ROOM FOR RENT

Spacious, share house with fun couple in scenic Montague, $333. May 28-Aug 31, call 367-9822.

Looking for 1/2 roommates to share apartment for summer. Call 549-2676.

1 bedroom available in Alpine commons. Excellent roommates. Call Bryan 253-9499.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female(s) to share 2 bedroom Brandywine Apt. starting June 1. 549-1988.

Puffton. Looking for roommate to share 3 bdrm. Available June 1. Call Christina 549-0209

ROOMMATE WANTED

2 roommate Brandywine Apt. starting June 1. Cheap rent includes HT/HTW. Call Tom 549-5436.

1-2 females to share large house on route 47 w/4 others starting summer or fall. 546-6106.

SERVICES

Know your rights! Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

ST. JUDE

May the sacred heart of Jesus be loved and glorified. St. Jude-Powerfull Intercessor-True relative of Jesus-Pray for us. M.

SUMMER SUBLET

Bolders 2 bedroom Apt with possible fall option. Reduced monthly rent 256-2365.

SUMMER SUBLET

Nice 3 bedroom townhouse. Practically on campus. Call Joe 549-9441.

1 bedroom Brandywine rent nego. 3rd floor facing pond. Jason 549-8319.

3 bedroom fully furnished for summer sublet. Great location on rt9 near bus. Call Morgan or Ilana 253-4927.

Brandywine. 2 bdrm. Available June 1. Call 549-1988.

3 bedroom available June 1st for summer Sublet or lease takeover, Puffton village 549-1661.

TO SUBLET

2 bedrooms available in a Puffton 3 bedroom apt., 1 with fall option. Available 6/1 or end of May. 549-5837.

2 Bedroom apartment partially furnished available June 1st to sublet w/option to lease on bus route. 413-549-9612.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

- 3 CBS / 4
- 4 NESN
- 5 Fox Sport NE
- 6 PBS / 57
- 7 HSCN Movie Channel
- 8 WB / 56
- 9 HSCN Movie Channel
- 10 TV Guide Channel
- 11 FOX / 61
- 12 ABC / 40
- 13 NBC / 22
- 14 International Channel
- 15 UMATV
- 16 HSCN InfoChannel
- 17 ESPN
- 18 ESPN 2
- 19 UVC-19
- 20 ESPN Classic
- 21 Cozzi-fo-Govt
- 22 CNN
- 23 CNN HL
- 24 Weather Channel
- 25 Learning Channel
- 26 History Channel
- 27 A & E
- 28 Discovery Health
- 29 Food Network
- 30 NASA
- 31 Home & Garden TV
- 32 Travel Channel
- 33 Lifetime
- 34 CNBC
- 35 Tech TV
- 36 BET
- 37 UPN-38
- 38 USA
- 39 TNN
- 40 MTV
- 41 CMT
- 42 VH-1
- 43 TNT
- 44 TBS
- 45 E! Entertainment
- 47 Sci/Fi Channel
- 48 Court TV
- 49 Nick at Nite
- 50 Comedy Central
- 51 Cartoon Network
- 52 Game Show Network
- 53 TV Land
- 54 FOX Family
- 55 Univision
- 56 Galavision
- 57 Telemundo
- 58 College TV Network
- 59 C-SPAN
- 60 C-SPAN2
- 61 Bloomberg Television

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, Basement, UMass

Client: _____ Date: _____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

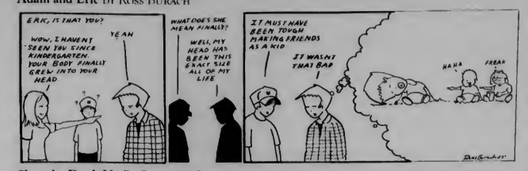
ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30 a.m. - 5:00 p.m. 413-545-3500

Student rate: 20 cents word per day. Non-student rate: 30 cents word per day.



Headings

- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — APRIL 30, 2002

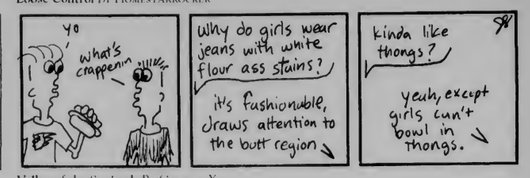
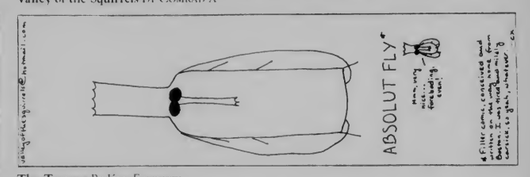
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "Why the Towers Fell"		Frontier House "Til Death Do Us Part/Survival" (N) (In Stereo)				Connecticut Journal Rewind
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Tribunal" (In Stereo)		"Living With the Dead" (2002, Suspense) Ted Danson.				News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Tribunal" (In Stereo)		"Living With the Dead" (2002, Suspense) Ted Danson.				News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Dharma & Greg (N)		Spin City (N)		NYPD Blue "Low Blow" (N)		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Nanny		Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond		Gilmore Girls (N) (In Stereo)		Smallville "Drone" (In Stereo)		Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7	News		NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)		Bob Hope's Funniest Outtakes		Frasier (N)	Scrubs (N)	Tonight Show Anniv.		News	Tonight Show
WTXX		5	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me		Gilmore Girls (N) (In Stereo)		Smallville "Drone" (In Stereo)		News	Home Imp.	Blind Date	Blind Date
WVIT		30	News		NBC News	Extra (N)		Hollywood		Bob Hope's Funniest Outtakes		Frasier (N)	Scrubs (N)	Tonight Show Anniv.		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	11	Simpsons		Friends	Seinfeld		Raymond		70s Show		That '70s Show Special (N)		70s Show		News	Seinfeld
WWLP	22	22	News		NBC News	Jeopardy!		Millionaire		Frasier (N)		Scrubs (N)		Tonight Show Anniv.		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	6	World News		Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "Why the Towers Fell"		Frontier House "Til Death Do Us Part/Survival" (N) (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	20	News		ABC News	Seinfeld		Frasier		Dharma & Greg (N)		Spin City (N)		NYPD Blue "Low Blow" (N)		News	Nightline
WSBK	38		Wheel-Fortune		Jeopardy!	Frasier		Frasier		Buffy the Vampire Slayer		Roswell "Crash" (In Stereo)		News		Ent. Tonight	Simpsons
WTBS	72		Cosby Show		Roseanne	Friends		NBA Pregame		NBA Basketball Playoffs First Round - Teams to Be Announced. (Live)				NBA Basketball Playoffs: Conference Final
A&E	10		Law & Order	Biography (In Stereo)		The View (In Stereo)		Biography: Peter Falk		 "Columbo: Murder, A Self Portrait" (1989, Mystery) Peter Falk.				Law & Order "Forgiveness" (N)
CNN	20	23	Moneyline			Crossfire (Live)		Live From...		The Point		Larry King Live		Newsnight		Moneyline
COM	63	39	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)			Daily Show		 "It's Pat" (1994, Comedy) Julia Sweeney.		Murray Hill		Murray, Live, Anyhow		Sweet Spot	Bettleboits	Daily Show	Sat. Night Live
DISC	62		Nature's Babies (In Stereo)			Amazing Desert Elephants		New Detectives-Forensic				New Detectives-Forensic		FBI Files "Vanished"			New Detectives-Forensic
ESPN	21		Sportscenter (N)					da la Hoya		Stanley Cup Playoffs Conference Quarterfinal Game 7 -- Teams to Be Announced. (Live)						Sportscenter
LIFE	49		Golden Girls	Golden Girls		Intimate Portrait Bonnie Carrity				Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Charlestown Strangler" (1997, Drama) Melissa Gilbert.				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	43		Osbournes		Osbournes			Osbournes		Real World	Real World	Real World	Real World	Real World	Osbournes (N)	Jackass	Dismissed
NICK	25		Rocket Power	Rocket Power		Hey Arnold!		Rugrats		Spongeb	Told by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers	All in Family	All in Family
SCIFI	65		Star Trek (In Stereo)			Star Trek (In Stereo)				Outer Limits "Organ of Species"		 "Species" (1998, Science Fiction) Michael Madsen.				Knowing Over	Knowing Over
TLC	69	28	Hubble Telescope			Medical Detect		Medical Detect		Without Warning "Menace"		Quest for the Lost Civilization		Quest for the Lost Civilization		Without Warning "Menace"
TNT	29		NYPD Blue (In Stereo)			Profiler "Barrier" (In Stereo)				Law & Order "Boom" (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Fright" (In Stereo)		Charmed (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Bronx Cheer"
USA	59		Walker, Texas Ranger			JAG "Tiger Tiger" (In Stereo)				Nash Bridges "Overdrive"		 Animation Xpac (1998, Suspense) Jeff Bridges. Tim Robbins.				Monk "Mr. Monk Goes to Germany"
HBO	42		 Center Stage (2000, Drama) Amanda Schull. PG-13							The Gathering Storm (2002) Albert Finney.				Path to War		Six Feet Under (In Stereo)
MAX	60		 Jay + Bartleby Earth (2000) John Travolta.					 Cast Away (2000, Drama) Tom Hanks, Helen Hunt. (In Stereo) PG-13				* "Freddy Got Fingered" (2001) Tom Green. R				Real Sex 24
SHOW	66		 Jumanji" (1995, Fantasy) Robin Williams. PG							 "Nurse Betty" (2000, Comedy-Drama) Renee Zellweger. R				Chris Isaak "Dream" (HV)		Queer as Folk (HV) (In Stereo)

Adam and Eric By Ross Burach

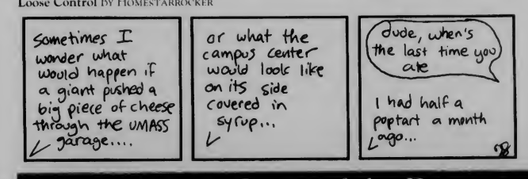


Highbrow By Aaron Eppy

Shut the Duck Up By Seany McSean



Loose Control By Homestarrocker



The Torques By Ken Fredette

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Loose Control By Homestarrocker

The Torques By Ken Fredette

Quote of the Day

"I couldn't eat a can of Kodak and puke a better movie."

-Lola from The Mirror Crack'd

Amherst Weather

Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 56 LOW: 40	HIGH: 64 LOW: 30	HIGH: 73 LOW: 40

Horoscopes

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You may have reason to regret a recent decision today, but before long you'll realize that you are indeed on the right road.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – You needn't take things quite so seriously today – and yet you yourself will surely be taken seriously as you wish, nonetheless.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Don't lose sight of things you most want to attain. It may mean you have to go without something in order to acquire something else.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Someone close to you is likely to wan to get even closer today, and the responses he or she gets from you are likely to surprise both of you!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – The more unusual it is, the more you're going to like it – whether at the workplace or at home.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – The unlikely may well prove likely today—and vise versa. You may have to enter a new realm of activity today in order to address certain issues.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – You may come in contact with someone who knows how to make sense of issues you've found difficult or even impenetrable.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You won't find yourself waiting around too much today; be prepared to swing into action early on – and to keep it up all day long.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Now is no time to neglect your home in any way. Keep things neat and tidy, and don't forget to make those changes and improvements you've planned.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Take care that you're not living too much in your head at this time. Trust something that you're not likely to forget.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – What begins with excitement is likely to develop quickly today into something that you're not likely to forget. Take care you don't get burnt out.

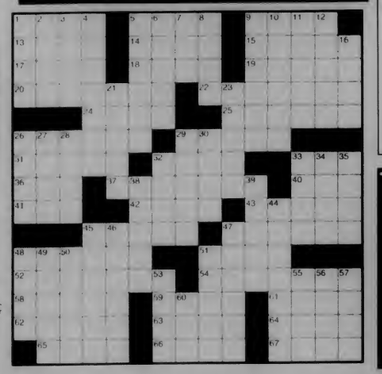
ARIES (March 21-April 19) – What you need to know now is spend some time fine-tuning the major push is over, now it's time once again to concentrate on the details.

Collegian Graphics: we're the peanut butter to your jelly.

NEW at DB Mart...
HOT STUFF PIZZA
Buy a Breakfast Sandwich
Get 2 FREE HASH BROWNS and a 12 oz COFFEE
Redeem this coupon at:
259 TRIANGLE ST.
AMHERST, MA
413-549-5606
1 per customer. Please present coupon before ordering. Not valid with other offers.

ACROSS

1 Bantu people
5 Dog paddle
9 Moby Dick's pursuer
13 Before long
14 Voucher
15 Home in the woods
17 Columbus ship
18 Drizzle
19 Shudder
20 Perpetual
22 Ambler
24 Stalk
25 Roman orator
26 Obstruct
29 Brooks of country music
31 Coast downhill
32 Fling
33 Move quickly
36 Married Unser
37 Extra helpings
40 Nabokov heroine
41 Mauna —
42 Like the sky
43 Gambol
45 Quack to learn
47 Frothy dessert
48 Fumbled
51 Zoo staffers
52 Kin
54 Hook up
58 Burning
59 Talk wildly
61 Great Lakes port
62 Coral-reef explorer
63 Early Peruvian
64 Crevice
65 Hardy's dairymaid
66 Bucket
67 Has supper



DOWN

1 Grey of westerns
2 Apartment
3 Solitary
4 Defenseless
5 Abrade
6 Largest mammal
7 Jr.'s son, perhaps
8 Alias abbr.
9 Clear
10 — of venison
11 Diminish
12 Slurps visitor
16 Ruler before Galba
21 Knots or bumps
23 Pungent
26 Writer Dinesen
27 Fr. title
28 Galileo's home
29 Halloween disguise
30 Cousin's mother
32 Blemish
33 Shocks
34 March 15 in Rome
35 Fix potatoes
38 Hedge
39 Dundee citizens
44 Forbidding
45 Has mercy
46 Gauges
47 In the head
48 Degree holder
49 Do a tailoring chore
50 Popeye's girl
51 Painter Leonardo da —
53 Faucet problem
55 Soprano's piece
56 Pick up
57 Grants approval
60 Santa — CA

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

S	A	L	T	S		B	O	A	T		L	A	M	B
P	L	E	A	T		E	L	B	A		O	V	E	R
A	D	O	R	E		T	E	R	M		G	E	A	R
R	A	N	G	E		S	O	U	P	T	E	S	T
			E	D	S				P	A	N
B	A	T		T	U	T		P	E	T	E	S
A	B	E		P	O	R	E		B	U	R	E	A	U
B	A	L	D	O	N	M	O	R	T	G	A	G	E
A	S	L	E	E	P		U	F	O	S		R	E	D
R	E	S	E	T		S	R	T	A		P	Y	R	E
			I	S	T			D	U	O
	J	U	N	C	T	I	O	N		S	M	A	S	H
H	A	L	O		A	F	R	O		H	A	I	K	U
A	N	N	A		F	L	E	D		E	D	D	I	E
Y	E	A	H		F	E	S	S		R	E	A	D	S

12-29-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH
Six Bean Soup
Chicken Jambalaya
Broccoli & Cauliflower Casserole (vegetarian)

DINNER
Six Bean Soup
Breaded Pork Chops
Turkey Divan
Vegan Cutlets (vegan)
Grilled Portabella Mushroom Steaks (W Basics) (vegan)

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Eric Soderstrom
Photo Technician	Scott Eldridge II
Copy Editor	Andy Vogt
Production Supervisor	Jess May
Production Staff	Frank DiMeglio, Erika Earl

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: ERIC SODERSTROM

Second Wheeler had 3 runs batted in on the weekend for UMass, hitting her eighth homerun of the season.

Softball dodges Dayton threat

UMass streak is now 28-straight

By Andy Vogt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

On paper, it seemed like an inevitable blowout. But teams don't compete on paper, they compete on the playing field.

After waxing Dayton once on Saturday afternoon and then again early Sunday, the Massachusetts softball team seemed destined for a quick, three-game sweep in Ohio. The Flyers had other ideas, however, and UMass had to hang on for dear life in a 3-2, 10-inning nail-biter against the home squad.

By pulling out the extra-frame squeaker, the Minutewomen (43-10 overall, 18-0 Atlantic 10) clinched their 15th Atlantic 10 title in 17 years, and also extended their 28-game winning streak, a run tied for 15th-best in NCAA history.

"They went through two very lopsided wins in very difficult climatic conditions," said Head Coach Elaine Sortino about her players fighting through the tornado-like weather in the Buckeye State. "I thought they held their poise."

The finale of the three-game set was an uncharacteristically close match for a team that has been so utterly dominant in A-10 play this season. With the two teams deadlocked in a 2-2 tie through nine innings, a reliable face came through in the 10th frame. Brandi Cross laced an RBI double down the right field line to drive in Ashley Bakken, who had singled to lead off the inning. The tie-breaking hit made a winner out of Kaila Holtz, who went the distance for the Minutewomen. Holtz scattered seven hits and allowed two runs in her second victory of the weekend, striking out 12. The two wins improved the junior's record to a stellar 19-5 on the year.

Dayton took the early 1-0 lead in the contest after a second-inning blast from Shannon St. Clair, but Emily Robustelli's RBI single knotted the teams up at 1-1 in the third. After scoreless fourth and fifth frames, UMass jumped ahead in its half of the sixth when Holtz doubled in senior Scooter Wheeler to take the 2-1 lead. But Cassie Gross' RBI triple in the bottom half of the inning tied up the two teams again, giving the Dayton fans several innings of extra softball.

The Flyers had a golden opportunity to hand the Minutewomen their first conference loss of the season, but could not cash in on a bases-loaded situation in the ninth inning. With two outs, Gross hit a sharp grounder to first that eluded Cross. But Bakken made a heads-up play, coming over from second base to grab the deflection, race to the bag, and set up Cross' theatrics in the next inning.

"My premise is always that hitting comes and goes," Sortino said. "We had so many opportunities to score, and we didn't."

During the rest of the weekend, however, things were as tightly contested as a Harlem Globetrotters game. The Flyers were simply outmatched, as they were outscored 20-1 in the first two contests, including a 13-1 whitewash in Sunday's opener. The Maroon and White gave Dayton a lethal dose of offensive firepower right out of the gates, tallying seven runs in the first inning off five hits and a Flyer error. Senior Scooter Wheeler led the barrage with a 3-for-3 outing with five RBI, including her team-leading eighth home run of the season. Anna Perey drove in three runs as well for the Minutewomen, as they banged out 14 hits in the mercy-rule victory. Jen Hadley and freshman Kelli Arnold combined to stymie the Flyers, allowing just one run on four hits while striking out seven Dayton hitters.

Saturday's game had all the makings of a pitchers' duel until UMass pounded out five hits to take a 4-0 lead. Cross blasted a two-RBI double to center, and Wheeler followed with a double of her own to drive in the Diamond Bar, Calif. native. Robustelli drove in two more Minutewomen with a two-bagger in the sixth, and sophomore Jamie Cahalan capped off the scoring outburst with an RBI single in the seventh, giving the Maroon and White its seventh run. The offensive output was more than enough for Holtz, notched her 11th shutout of the season in her complete game three-hitter, striking out eight.

Still, Sortino was most impressed about her team's performance in the extra-inning affair, saying "we could have found many opportunities to lose that game. I thought we were incredibly poised."

The Minutewomen return to action today against nonconference opponent Boston College at the Softball Complex. UMass defeated the Eagles, 5-2, on April 17 in Chestnut Hill, a game in which Hadley went the distance for her team. The Eagles enter today's matchup with a record of 23-24. The first pitch is scheduled for 5:00 p.m.

"I think it's going to be hard because we're tired, and we've come out of cold elements," Sortino said. "We know we have a really formidable opponent in Boston College."

Matt Brady's All-Time Team

Alomar's defense separates him from all second-sackers

This is part seven of a 10 part series portraying the 10 members of "Brady's All Time Team" – a lineup consisting of the best Major League Baseball players ever.

Credentials (all time rank): .306 career average; .377 career on base percentage; 448 stolen bases; 448 doubles; 1534 runs; .984 fielding percentage; 10 Gold Gloves from 1991-2001.

The Argument: I just off before you denounce me for this, hear me out. I thought long and hard about second base before making my decision, and here was my logic. I decided that with such a talented offensive team out there, I definitely needed someone at second base that could handle the load defensively. After all, up-the-middle defense is considered one of the most important elements of any given team. Alomar is certainly the best defensive second sacker of all time. I think most would agree, as his fielding percentage is ridiculous for his position, and he is even credited with more errors than some others at 2B because he has far more range than anyone who preceded him.

Rogers Hornsby – some contend – was the best righthanded hitter ever to live. Some say he's the best hitting second baseman out there. I say he's the best hitter to ever play at second. Hornsby was atrocious defensively (in a way he was comparable to Ted Williams with the amount he concentrated on defense) and so he certainly can not fill the hole up the middle defensively. Also, Hornsby peaked in the '20s and '30s, which might have been the most offensive period in baseball's history (yes, even including today). Between 1920 and 1930, five different players posted eight .400-plus seasons (15 total have been posted since 1901), and the three best sub-.400 years all were posted during this time. This makes Hornsby's batting average inflated, even for today's standard, and without the .358 he is not all that dangerous offensively.

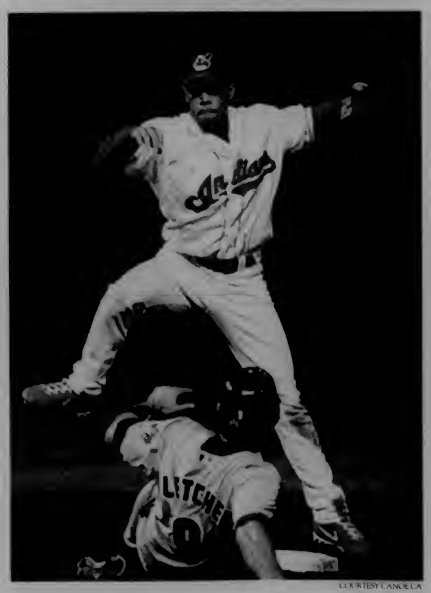
Nap Lajoie is another guy who is tough to keep off this team. But again, he was not good enough defensively to qualify for the position. Don't get me wrong, he was amazing offensively, posting the highest single-season average since 1900, with a .426 clip. And he did have a team named after him (the Cleveland Naps). For the most part of his career, he was a mid-.300s hitter with a decent amount of power for his era and a lot of speed, but his ineptitude on the field can't be overlooked.

Eddie Collins is the most overlooked man on all-time teams ever. A scrappy player who is best known as being one of the clean players on the 1919 Black Sox, Collins was phenomenal defensively, had a .333 career average is seventh all-time in steals, 12th in triples and 15th in runs. The problem is that Collins is not as good on defense as Alomar and his single-season high for home runs was six. And that was in 1924 after the dead-ball era was over. The fact is that Alomar is far and away the most well-rounded of the players up for selection, and his defense and the fact that he has time to bolster his numbers still put him at the top.

What you didn't know: Everybody knows about the so-called "spitting incident," but still many people do not know the details behind the event that will haunt Alomar for the rest of his career.

After being called out on strikes by John Hirschbeck, Alomar and the umpire began a heated argument which resulted in heated insults being thrown at Hirschbeck and racial slurs being returned to Alomar. That is when Alomar spit in the umpire's face.

The part of the story that is not often told is that Hirschbeck had recently lost his son to ALD (Adrenoleukodystrophy), a genetic disease found in boys that rapidly deteriorates the muscles and eventually renders its victim comatose. Soon after the incident, Alomar apologized personally to Hirschbeck, and made a contribution to ALD research. Since then the two have become good friends, with Alomar making regular contributions to the research.



Aside from that, I'm sure you know pretty much everything about the guy. And if not, catch a Mets game sometime soon to find the seven-hitter for Brady's All-Time Team.

Matt Brady is a Collegian columnist.

1. Cobb LF
2. Wagner SS
3. Ruth RF
4. Mays CF
5. Gehrig 1B
6. Schmidt 3B
7. Alomar 2B
8. (5/02) C
9. (5/07) P
10. (5/09) Man.

Best Of The Rest: Second Basemen

1. Rogers Hornsby
2. Nap Lajoie
3. Eddie Collins

COURTESY CANOE.CA

Alomar's multiple tools and superior defense make him the best all-around second baseman in Major League history.

MAY

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN

WEDNESDAY ☆☆☆ ISSUE ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY SEVEN ☆☆☆ 5.1.02

Israeli and Palestinian children show promise for peace

By Catherine Turner
COLLEGIAN STAFF

It seems like every day in the news, no matter whether it's on television or in the newspaper, there are reports of more violence and strife in the Middle East, particularly in the area of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

Though there is little encouraging news about the conflict, there is hope for peace. One example of this optimism came last night in a film entitled, Promises, which was shown in the Campus Center Auditorium.

The film, which is a collection of profiles and stories of both Israeli and Palestinian children, was filmed over a three-year span, from 1997-2000, during a relative calm.

One of the directors of the film, B.Z. Goldberg, explained at the beginning of the film his reasons for embarking on such a documentary and for concentrating solely on children.

"I knew that the children here had something to say and no one was asking them what they thought of the conflict or the peace process."

Seven children were highlighted from different areas in and around Jerusalem. Each child lived 20 minutes or less from the others, but had absolutely no contact, or possibility of contact with each other, due to the set up of the city and the checkpoints between Arab and Jewish areas.

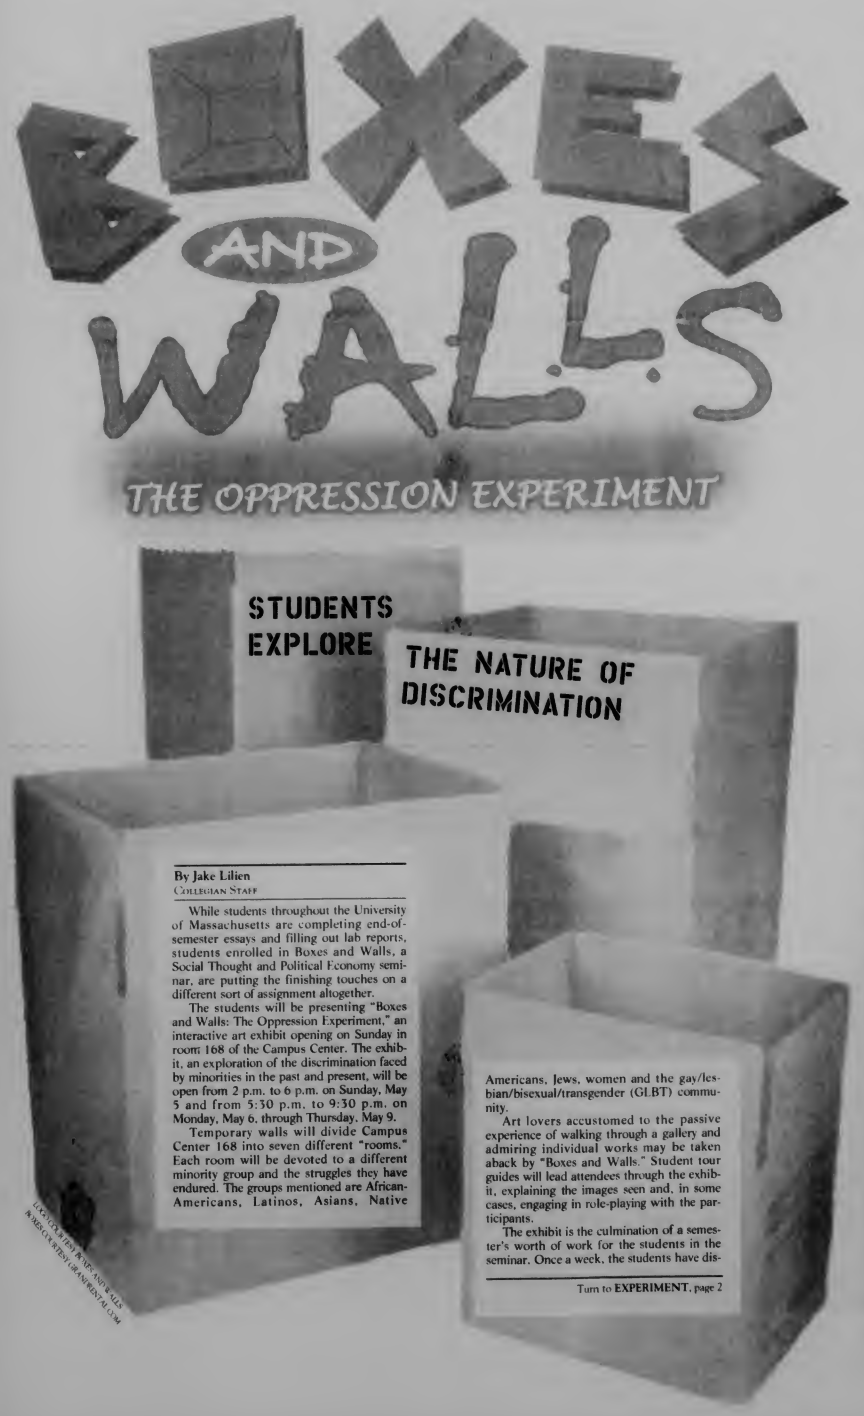
The children were from: an Israeli neighborhood in Jerusalem; a Palestinian neighborhood in East Jerusalem; the Jewish Quarter in the Old City of Jerusalem; and Palestinian territories and refugee camps. Their political or religious affiliations ranged from Orthodox Jewish, secular, a-political Israelis and Israeli Arabs, to Muslim Palestinians and supporters of Hamas.

Each child was interviewed and filmed in their every day life. They were shown dancing, playing sports and interacting with their families and their surroundings. Each child also had a passionate opinion about the situation in their area.

"When I see a Jew, I want to pick up a stone and throw it at him," one of the children said early in the movie.

Similar sentiments were shared by other children, but the enemy was reversed. However, feelings changed as the film progressed. At one point, four children from opposite sides were introduced to one another. Liberal Israeli twins from the city spent a day with Muslim Palestinians in the refugee camps on the West Bank. The children were at first timid, but as they spent time and talked with one another, they became friends.

With the new friendships also came confusion. The film focused on the way that the children's minds opened up to the possibility of Arabs and Jews meeting.



"Arabs and Jews should meet. No politicians, just children," one girl said.

"I used to think that people who liked the Hamas were insane. Now I can understand," one of the twins said. "If I were them I'd feel the same way."

"Peace between us is impossible unless we get to know each other," a third child said.

The concluding portion of the film was a follow-up two years later after the first, and major interviews took place. Goldberg asked each child if their opinions had

Turn to PROMISES, page 2

By Jake Lilien
COLLEGIAN STAFF

While students throughout the University of Massachusetts are completing end-of-semester essays and filling out lab reports, students enrolled in Boxes and Walls, a Social Thought and Political Economy seminar, are putting the finishing touches on a different sort of assignment altogether.

The students will be presenting "Boxes and Walls: The Oppression Experiment," an interactive art exhibit opening on Sunday in room 168 of the Campus Center. The exhibit, an exploration of the discrimination faced by minorities in the past and present, will be open from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. on Sunday, May 5 and from 5:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. on Monday, May 6, through Thursday, May 9.

Temporary walls will divide Campus Center 168 into seven different "rooms." Each room will be devoted to a different minority group and the struggles they have endured. The groups mentioned are African-Americans, Latinos, Asians, Native Americans, Jews, women and the gay/lesbian/bisexual/transgender (GLBT) community.

Art lovers accustomed to the passive experience of walking through a gallery and admiring individual works may be taken aback by "Boxes and Walls." Student tour guides will lead attendees through the exhibit, explaining the images seen and, in some cases, engaging in role-playing with the participants.

The exhibit is the culmination of a semester's worth of work for the students in the seminar. Once a week, the students have dis-

Turn to EXPERIMENT, page 2

UMPD offers women a self-defense system

By Melissa Hammel
COLLEGIAN STAFF

This is the third part of a week-long series addressing the issue of sexual assault.

This month is dedicated to the awareness of sexual assaults both on the University of Massachusetts-Amherst campus and across the nation. As a way of focusing upon the importance of safety The Collegian is running a story each day this week highlighting different safety issues on campus and the groups that deal with them.

Feeling safe walking alone at night is a major issue for many women on campus, which is why the University of Massachusetts Police Department offers a way to help women protect themselves.

Rape Aggression Defense System, or R.A.D. as its participants call it is a self-defense program which is geared toward teaching women basic techniques as well as awareness, prevention and risk reduction of violent crimes.

"The RAD System's objective is to 'enhance the options of self-defense so they may become viable considerations to the woman who is attacked'," its website explains. "Contrary to popular belief, rape is not a crime of sex. Rape is a violent crime and a devastating experience, but it is survivable."

Trained members of the UMPD staff teach the course over the span of 14 hours or four class sessions.

The first night addresses risk reduction and prevention, the second and third classes deal with self-defense moves and the last class is a simulated attack that allows students to test out the skills that they have learned.

"There is no one sure way to prevent a rape, because each situation is different. However, there are steps that can lessen the chances of a woman being raped. The Rape Aggression Defense System is a program of realistic, self-defense tactics and techniques," the website explains. "RAD is dedicated to teaching women defensive concepts and techniques against various types of assaults, by utilizing easy, effective and proven self-defense tactics. This system of realistic defense will provide women with the knowledge to make an educated decision about resistance."

When women complete the program they are members for life. This allows them to go to anywhere in the United States in which RAD classes are offered and take one for free.

"We operate on the premise that a spontaneous violent attack will stimulate a natural desire to resist on the part of the victim," The UMPD website explains. "We educate women by enhancing their options of physical defense as being not only prudent, but also a necessity if a natural resistance is to be effective. The RAD system empowers women to make their own decisions regarding self-preservation and self-defense options."

There is also a self-defense course called S.A.F.E. being offered through the UMass Alumni Association in the Campus Center Auditorium on Thursday May 9th from 6:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m. and a self-defense class for women is offered through the physical education department.

Free fall'n

Professor Tom Houston puts on a tree climbing display for his Ariel Techniques class near the Southwest purple lot

■ experiment

continued from page 1

cussed the oppression of minority groups and heard the input of lecturers.

"People bring their own personal experiences and share them with the class, and the students learn from each other," explained Dan Springer, one of the course's instructors. "The final goal of the class is to make someone feel like they're in their shoes."

Students try to achieve this goal by constructing the exhibit and leading its attendees through its interactive maze. Participants spend seven minutes in each room, where the tour guides attempt to convey what each group has faced.

"We want the tours to leave feeling that they've been oppressed, confused and hurt," Springer said. "Some of the ideas are pretty extreme, and others are more placid. It's all meant to affect the senses and mind in some way."

This is the second year that "Boxes and Walls" will be exhibited at UMass. Last year, the course Boxes and Walls was taught as a one-credit seminar. Springer and his co-instructor Christopher Ruc and Todd Glickman were students in the course and helped to construct the "experiment."

The class was taught by Sarah Raful, a Jewish Campus Service Corps Fellow. Raful had seen a similar exhibit when she was an undergraduate at the University of Illinois – Chicago. After being led through "Boxes and Walls" in Chicago, she decided that she would bring the idea with her when she taught at a different campus.

"It was an hour and a half that changed my life," Raful explained.

When Raful came to UMass as a Corps Fellow to facilitator for Jewish student life and was given the opportunity to design her own seminar, she knew what her choice would be. She spoke to groups on campus and recruited participants for the Massachusetts version of "Boxes and Walls."

"When I taught the class, we spent time talking about how we would create each individual room," Raful explained. "Each class of the semester was spent talking about one of the different groups. We spent one day on Jewish issues, one day on African-Americans and one on Latinos, and we brought in speakers and educators. We talked about the hate these groups feel."

The learning experiences in "Boxes and Walls" were not, however, passive ones. The seminar was based on class discussion as well as lectures and assignments.

"As much as we brought in educators, it was more a sense of us learning from each other," Raful said. "When we spoke about African-Americans, the African-Americans in the class spoke to the rest of the us about how they felt."

Eventually the class developed an interactive five-room exhibit. Some of the exhibits, such as a room filled with images of offensive Native American mascots, were created through purely visual mediums. Others involved the active participation of both the viewers and guides.

In the African-American room, one of the most provocative and potentially controversial exhibits, tour guides treated participants as if they were slaves on a ship.

"The students who led the tour would yell racial slurs," recalled Springer. "They would ask one person in the group what their name was, and then tell them that their name was 'Coon'."

While such experiences may have been difficult for exhibit-goers to endure, both Raful and Springer claim that most of the feedback they received was glowing.

"I'd say that the reaction I got was 99 percent positive," said Raful. "It changed people's lives. It changed their views on who other people are in this world.

"It is very intense," she added. "People react differently to intensity. It was hard to gauge how some people would be affected. For some people, it was too intense. For others, it hit all of the right buttons, and it felt good. They learned things that they never knew."

Springer claimed to have never heard of anyone offended by the exhibit.

"I haven't heard any negative feedback," he said. "We just hope that people realize that we're not yelling things at people because we're racist. We're doing this because people hear those things every day."

While this year's "Boxes and Walls" exhibit is devoted to the same theme of oppression, Springer claimed that all of the rooms and the concepts expressed in them have changed.

"There's not one idea that's the same," he explained. "It's a different experience."

Springer refused to divulge any specific details about the exhibit – the experience is intended to be shocking – and he claimed that even he is not entirely sure what to expect.

"All of the ideas are the students'," Springer said. "We [the instructors] just deal with technical stuff."

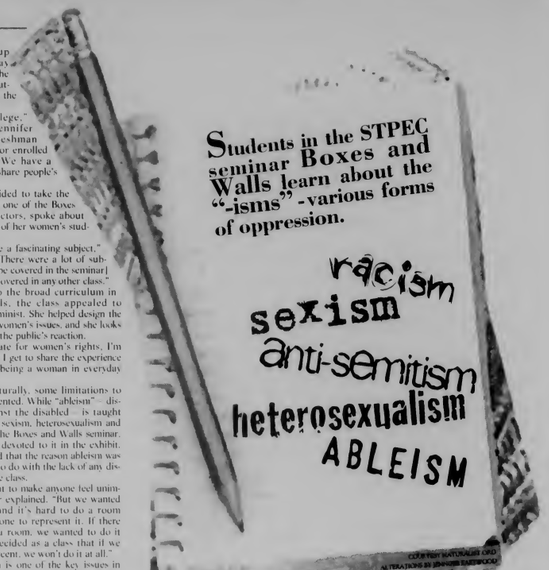
While an assignment such as this – in which students are asked to summarize the suffering of an entire group of people – may seem daunting, the students participating seem to enjoy the challenge.

"It's a privilege," explained Jennifer Anderson, a freshman legal studies major enrolled in the course. "We have a responsibility to share people's oppression."

Anderson decided to take the course after Rue, one of the Boxes and Walls instructors, spoke about the course in one of her women's studies classes.

"It seemed like a fascinating subject," Anderson said. "There were a lot of subjects [that would be covered in the seminar] that wouldn't be covered in any other class."

In addition to the broad curriculum in Boxes and Walls, the class appealed to Anderson as a feminist. She helped design the room devoted to women's issues, and she looks forward to seeing the public's reaction.



"As an advocate for women's rights, I'm really excited that I get to share the experience of what it's like being a woman in everyday life," she noted.

There are, naturally, some limitations to what will be presented. While "ableism" – discrimination against the disabled – is taught alongside racism, sexism, heterosexualism and anti-Semitism in the Boxes and Walls seminar, there is no room devoted to it in the exhibit. Springer explained that the reason ableism was not included had to do with the lack of any disabled people in the class.

"We don't want to make anyone feel unimportant," Springer explained. "But we wanted representation, and it's hard to do a room when there's no one to represent it. If there was going to be a room, we wanted to do it right – and we decided as a class that if we can't do it 100 percent, we won't do it at all."

Representation is one of the key issues in the presentation of "Boxes and Walls." While many of the students involved are not members of the minority group represented in their "room," all of the tour guides belong to the group about which they speak.

"We've chosen people who fit the room," said Springer, citing an Asian student who will be giving the tour of the Asian room. "You could have four non-Jewish students in the Jewish room, and they could do a great job, but they can't talk about their own experiences."

COURTESY PHOTO/SARAH RAFUL
ILLUSTRATIONS BY JENNIFER FASTWOOD

All of the participants point to this concept – learning about others' experiences – as the ultimate goal of the exhibition.

"We want everyone to experience it," Springer added. "It's an amazing project, and there's no way to describe the way you feel after you go through it."

"It's not easy to put all of the hatred that women and Jews have felt over the years and put it into five minutes," Raful said. "It's daunting – but it's better than nothing. It gives people one little feeling of what minorities go through every day. It makes you think about what surrounds you in this world."

Fight for your right

Students, faculty and staff from UMass Amherst, along with people from other state schools rally in an effort to restore tuition

■ Promises

continued from page 1

changed during the two years that had gone by. The children were still skeptical of peace, but some did acknowledge that friendly interaction between Jews and Arabs was the key to a peace process.

Throughout the film there was footage of the city, its holy places and the contrasts between life inside Jerusalem, and life outside in the camps. The narrative was also interjected with historical footage from the 1948 emigration of Jews from Europe, the 1967 war, and even current news coverage of terrorist violence.

At the conclusion of the film, a representative from Campus Activities and introduced director Goldman, ushering in a question and answer period.

"We hope that you find that the film touches your heart the way it does ours," the representative from Campus Activities said. "We hope it will be an inspiration for all of us who [want to] contribute to solving this problem."

Goldberg then discussed a little bit about the process of creating the film.

"We wanted to try and tell stories about an issue in a region. We wanted to get something that would not be so complicated."

He then addressed questions that ranged from the feelings of Christians in Jerusalem, to the permits he had to obtain in order to film. Before the questions began, Goldberg discouraged the crowd from becoming too politically charged and to keep the discussion focused on the subjects in the film.

"We'd rather try and keep the conversation to questions, rather than manifestos," he said.

Goldberg also, to the surprise of the audience, introduced one of the children from the film, Feraj, who traveled to Amherst and was there to also answer questions.

"At the time of the making of the film we were saying, 'we're the children of the world and we want peace'," he said, according to his translator (he spoke in Arabic). "I want to be a voice for every child back in Palestine."

Toward the end of the question period, audience members began to file out. Some expressed their admiration for the film and their amazement with the children.

"The whole time they grew up hating the other side," Diana Fassbender a junior Political Science major said. "They were so young, it was easy for them to let go of those chains."

Fassbender, along with her two friends, were also surprised by the knowledge that the children possessed about history and politics, and how articulate they were.

"What strikes me is in so many ways they think they're knowledgeable about the other side, and yet it's actually next to impossible for them to get to know people from the other side," David Mednicoff, a Legal Studies professor said. "If people like us can see the hope that these kids had and how horrible the situation is now, not only can they learn something, but it's possible that they can play a role to break thru that hostility. Idealistic committed young people here really can make and difference over there."

Goldberg was a guest in Mednicoff's Legal Studies/Middle Eastern Studies class, "Explaining Terrorism," earlier in the day. During his visit to the class he expanded on his experience in the refugee camps and in filming.

Promises will be playing again tonight at Amherst College at 7:30p.m. in Fayerweather Hall. It is free and open to the public.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Echo because the College Signal in 1907, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Sam Wilkinson Editor-in-Chief
Matthew F. Sacco Managing Editor
Amy Garganta Business Manager
Shimauli Dave Production Manager
Jake Lilien Diversity Editor
Mike Kulak Editorial Production Manager
Jason Smith Advertising Manager

Mike Delano Arts & Living Editor
Matthew Despres Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jennifer Fastwood Features Editor
Catherine Turmer News Editor
Tiberra Girczyc-Blum Photography Editor
Eric Soderstrom Sports Editor
Brent Siniawski Finance Manager
Charlie Jacco Distribution Manager

Morgan Taylor Advertising Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Cara Murphy Assistant Finance Manager
Shawn Daugherty Assistant Business Manager
Megan Shannon Assistant Advertising Manager

The Office of Alumni Relations

EARN FAST CASH!

The Office of Alumni Relations is now accepting applications for Alumni Weekend 2002. Must be available June 7, 8 and 9. Students needed to provide transportation, bellhop, host events and more. $6.75/hour. Meals will be provided during working hours and lodging is available. Call Lynn Zlotnick at 545-2317 for more information or stop by Memorial Hall.

Work all weekend.
We provide meals during working hours and lodging!

STUDENT TRAVEL
It's YOUR trip, take it!
London.....$288
Paris.....$377
Brussels.....$458
Rio de Janeiro..$654
San Jose C.R...$523
Fares are round-trip from Hartford. Restrictions may apply. Tax not included
BUDGET HOTELS for as little as $18 A NIGHT!!!
STA TRAVEL
800.777.0112
www.statravel.com

McMurphy's
featuring...
Live Music
THE GUITAR DUDES
every wednesday
NO COVER
positive ID required

Bowl-a-thon '02 big success for Big Brothers Big Sisters

By Janet Jock
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

The University of Massachusetts fraternities and sororities joined together in the 2002 Bowl for Kids' Sake Bowl-a-Thon last month.

With 12 houses being represented and almost 90 students participating, the event turned out to be an extraordinary success.

The Greeks, as a group, raised more than $4,300 and the event all together, raised $34,000 for the Big Brothers Big Sisters of Hampshire County.

"In the past, the individual fraternities and sororities have contributed to Big Brothers Big Sisters, but this is the first time they joined together as a team," said Ashley Dennis, the organization's publicity coordinator. "Judging by the success of the event this year, it is apparent that you can do so much more as a group."

The Bowl-a-Thon is held every year. It is the largest annual fundraiser for the Big Brothers Big Sister of Hampshire County, a non-profit mentoring agency that matches adult volunteers with children in the community that may be in need of a role model, or even just a friend.

"Some of these kids come from single parent or financially unstable homes," Dennis explained. "It is hard to be there for your children all the time if you have to work ridiculous hours just to put food on the table. The mentors allow for the children to see a different world; taking them places and allowing them to experience and see things they wouldn't normally get to see."

The house that raised the most money, winning the inter-Greek competition, is Kappa Kappa Gama. They will be presented with the special Greek Bowl-a-Thon trophy and Bowl-a-Thon grand prize for their exceptional contributions, having raised $1,100 for the organization.

"Over 17 sisters participated, and everyone was required to raise $20 individually over the course of a few weeks," explained Jaime Reichle, who holds the philanthropy seat of Kappa Kappa Gamma. "The trophy that we won this year will be passed on to sororities and fraternities who raise the most money for the organization in years to come. The Bowl-a-Thon is one of the best philanthropies we've participated in since I've been here, and is definitely something we will be considering for participation in years to come."

The money raised from the Bowl-A-Thon will be used for recruiting, screening, and training new volunteers.

"Fundraising is a wonderful way to give back, and is just as valid as individual volunteering because it allows us to keep the services going," Dennis added.

Although the organization is quite successful, there are still 170 children on the waiting list, over 100 of them being boys.

"The most important thing to know is that you don't have to be a perfect person to volunteer," Dennis emphasized. "All you have to do is spend some time with one child and you could change their life."

For more information on how Big Brothers Big Sisters of Hampshire County works, as well as details on volunteering and fundraising, contact the organization's central office, located in Amherst, at 413-253-2591.

Say hello to Mr. Ed

A student prepares to show a horse at last weekends live stock fair.

Indiana U. students are plagued with child care woes as wait grows

By Sarah Troito
INDIANA DAILY STUDENT (INDIANA U.)

(U-WIRE) BLOOMINGTON, Ind. Senior Erin Fagg had to wait nearly 17 months before she could register her 3-year-old son in the daycare she wanted.

A single mother, Fagg said she wanted the best for Kaiden Thomas, but she wound up on a lengthy waiting list for one of Indiana University's best daycare centers. In the meantime, she enrolled Kaiden in an unlicensed center unaffiliated with the University.

"I was very discouraged," Fagg said. "You want your child – if you're not raising him – in just as good of hands as you would take care of him."

But at IU, there aren't enough hands. University childcare offers eight spaces licensed by the state for infants, creating a waitlist of about 65 families at the only center offering such service – Campus View Child Care Center. Knee High Day Care Cooperative, an unlicensed co-op, also tends to children as young as six months and enrolls up to 14 families.

A parent would have to sign up for infant care when she is pregnant – if not before – to ensure a spot at Campus View, said Tim Dunnuck, coordinator for child care services at IU.

Also, the hands caring for Indiana's children arguably aren't good enough. State center regulations do not address 40 percent of the national standards that govern health and safety, according to a study by the Indiana Institute on Disability and Community (IIDC) at IU in August 2000.

With health and safety not up to par, activists are working to improve the rules. Indiana childcare providers will meet this summer to attempt to change state regulations that haven't been rewritten since 1985.

"It's my strong opinion that we don't have strong enough regulations for childcare," Dunnuck said. "The regulations for childcare givers are much less than they are for cosmetologists. Dog groomers have stronger regulations for their work than childcare providers, which doesn't make much sense. They also make more money, too."

Dunnuck said childcare givers at IU in particular should make more money. But in order for that to happen without the cost of childcare rising, the University would have to give more money to the childcare system.

Convincing IU administration to do that will require additional summer meetings. Dunnuck said he'll meet with Chancellor Sharon Brehm after April to discuss possible improvements.

One of those proposals involves enrollment. IU's seven childcare programs offer full-time enrollment to 212 children on a campus of about 38,000 students, with additional room for part-time care. IU doesn't count how many students have children. The waitlists together hold 230 to 300 families, although some families register on more than one list.

Graduate student Mohammad Al-Khadhrawi, 36, placed his 8-week-old daughter on the waiting list at Campus View six weeks ago. Sixty families are listed ahead of his. Because of the wait, Al-Khadhrawi's wife must stay home with their daughter instead of attending IU graduate school. He said they don't know when they'll get off the waitlist.

"We hope by the beginning of the fall," Al-Khadhrawi said. "Even part time would be good because my daughter could be watched three to four hours a day, so my wife can go back for her master's."

BIG MONEY FOR LITTLE PEOPLE

Not only is quality childcare sparse, it's pricey.

Infant care in particular is expensive. If it weren't reduced to $163 per week for students, the care would cost $250 per week, Dunnuck said. The price runs high to pay teachers, one of whom must be present for every four infants, according to state regulations.

Fagg said she's fortunate. State-funded vouchers have paid for expenses that range up to $170 a week. The vouchers through Indiana's Child Care and Development Fund provide relief for low-income parents who work and/or attend school full time.

IU students use a third to half of the vouchers in Bloomington, Ind., said Pete Giordano, director of Bloomington's Community and Family Resources Department. The vouchers usually relieve most, if not all, childcare expenses, he said.

Dunnuck said he'd like to see Brehm's office and the general funds that finance IU childcare drop those expenses further. Seven Big 10 schools allot more financial aid than IU does for campus childcare, according to a 1999 survey by University of Michigan.

Often IU does not compare well to other Big 10 schools in terms of state appropriations, student fees and other income, said Maynard Thompson, vice chancellor and dean for Budgetary Administration and Planning.

"A lot of people are pleased we can accomplish so much even though our resources aren't great," Thompson said.

More financial aid might go toward childcare, he said. Meetings will be held this summer about possibly increasing enrollment and adding variety to programs. Thompson added Brehm is committed to the campus representing a "family-friendly environment."

Dunnuck said an increase in aid would be necessary for additional infant and toddler care and increased teachers' salaries. He acknowledged the University has done a lot for childcare since 1996, when his position was created and 50 enrollment spots were added. Subsidy has increased from $30,000 in 1996 to $185,500 this year, he said.

SAFETY FIRST

While the state regulations might be considered faulty because they were written in 1985, IU's centers are held to stricter standards, such as keeping teacher-child ratio small, Dunnuck said. Campus View, for example, employs three full-time teachers to care for eight infants, although state law requires two teachers.

Four of IU's seven programs are state licensed and employ professional staff. But a licensed center doesn't necessarily mean a safe center, said Pat Cole, research associate for IIDC at IU.

Dunnuck said parents should visit a center and ask about the staff's education and experience before selecting a program.

Al-Khadhrawi said he researched on the Internet, talked to providers and reviewed centers' curriculums and staffs before placing his 5-year-old daughter, Maria, on 15 to 20 waitlists. Maria remained on Campus Children's Center's waitlist for two and a half months after the family arrived in Bloomington from Saudi Arabia.

But Al-Khadhrawi said he knows he made the right decision, especially after Sept. 11, when the staff treated him and Maria with respect and love.

"It's the place to be," Al-Khadhrawi said. "I haven't met anyone there I'm not comfortable having my daughter around."

That was worth waiting two and a half months for.

Correction: In yesterday's Plant Biologist lecture story, it was quoted that the genome project had not yet been completed. However, in a similar story in yesterday's New York Times, it was reported that the genome project had actually been completed in June 2000.

413.883.1144
Graduation Parties
Private Parties
UMass Discount!
Chance Perspective
Entertainment Co. gemini
Hip-Hop
Reggae
R&B

CINEMARK
The Best Seat in Town
CINEMARK AT HAMPSHIRE MALL
367 Russell St 413-587-4233
Schedule for Friday 4/26 - Thursday 5/2
DIGITAL SURROUND SOUND IN ALL AUDITORIUMS
Purchase Tickets Online @ cinemark.com
LIFE OR SOMETHING LIKE IT (PG13) 12 25 4 35 7 35 10 15*
JASON X (R) 12 50 5 00 7 55 10 30*
MURDER BY NUMBERS (R) 12 00 4 10 7 30 10 20*
SCORPION KING (PG13) 12 35 4 50 7 45 10 25*
CHANGING LANES (R) 12 30 4 05 7 25 10 30
HIGH CRIMES (PG13) 12 05 4 20 7 15 10 05
THE SWEETEST THING (R) 12 00 4 10 7 20 10 00
NATIONAL LAMPOON'S VAN WILDER (R) 12 45 7 50
THE ROOKIE (G) 12 25 4 00 7 10 10 10
PANIC ROOM (R) 12 40 4 30 7 40 10 35
CLOCKSTOPPERS (PG) 12 55 4 25 7 05 9 30
DEATH TO SMOOCHY (R) 4 45 10 20
ICE AGE (PG) 12 10 2 15 4 25 6 45 9 00
Senior Movie - 5/1/02
CHANGING LANES doors open at 11:45am
*NO PASSES/NO SUPERSAVERS
Tickets/showtimes available at cinemark.com

CAUTION
MCAT Changes Ahead!
Learn more about the MCAT
Join us for a FREE
test strategy seminar
Thursday, April 25th, 7:00-8:30pm
Wednesday, May 8th, 7:00-8:300pm
at the Amherst Kaplan Center
Call or visit us online today to enroll!
KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST
kaptest.com
*MCAT is a registered trademark of the Association of American Medical Colleges

WANTED
STUDENTS WITH TRUCK OR BUS DRIVING EXPERIENCE
WANTED FOR SUMMER WORK
EARN $110-$140 PER DAY
One or both sessions available. Possibly some July work.
Call 1-888-949-5089

College
Need to build credit?
When: Summer School Session 1
May 28th-June 14th
Summer School Session 2
June 24th-August 2nd
Time: 6:00 - 9:00pm
For Further Information call (401) 865-2487 or email ssilva@providence.edu check out our website: www.providence.edu/sce

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM

"...LIFE, BUT THE ONES THAT WORTH LIVING." -FITZGERALD

ED/OP EDITOR: MATTHEW DESPRES

Protestors need to think twice about action

There is something to be said for standing up for your principles.

There really is.

Individuals should be commended for their willingness to stop at nothing to have their point of view represented in the face of all adversity. Protests where students were thrown in jail for marching on the streets and objecting to slavery or speaking their point of view in an open forum are both productive and necessary.

However, there is a difference between standing up for your principles and commandeering the office of an administrator for several hours, getting a building closed down and getting yourself arrested in the process.

When those individuals protesting for the rights of RAs decided to take over an administrator's office and get themselves arrested, all 35 of them stepped over the line.

That is not to argue that their cause was not true, that RAs on campus do not have the right to bargain or that the University is not in the wrong for their decision to take the newly formed union to court, however those organizers of this protest committed a serious folly.

First off, they were representing the thoughts and interests of all of the RAs on campus, however the majority of those arrested were not RAs at all but instead members of GEO. Their actions were more similar to that of children trying to get their own way than of either RAs or union members that were honestly trying to get the University to one-day bargain with them.

Taking over an administration building and preventing all of its employees from doing their jobs is not the way to be taken seriously.

Wasting the time of the police and forcing them to deal with protestors rather than with real crimes will not change the perspective that the administration has surrounding the union, in fact it only worsens it.

Those individuals who spend their time complaining that the administration is wasting time on lawyers to fight them in court are now wasting time and money by forcing the complete shutdown of an entire building and then wasting the time and energy of the police force.

In attempting to spread awareness about the need for the University to bargain with the RA union, the individuals who got arrested only managed to draw attention away from the actual issue and instead towards their own childish antics.

Rather than garnering support for the cause, those arrested have only managed to embarrass themselves and make the entire union look bad.

There are better ways to stand up for your principles. Sometimes literally getting arrested is not the answer.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

Housing and the RA Unions

SCOTT KANE

During the past few months I have watched the epic drama of housing vs. the RA union unfold from the viewpoint of an RA. I signed up to be an RA in what I considered a scam to get a free room. The RA job is probably the one that had the greatest potential to save me money on college bills. My experience with housing has been largely negative but that is mostly because of my own personality. For some people being an RA is a wonderful experience. For me and many other people it is not. I am writing this column for both former and future RAs.

There are a number of really bad qualities in housing I have noticed while I have been an RA. For example, housing is incredibly inefficient. In what is a very typical case, I recently "volunteered" to take part in the RD/ARD interviews. They only had seven positions open but choose to interview 35 people. Why? I can only suppose they wanted to give everyone a chance. However housing is not willing to do this entirely within their office. It spreads the misery around to as many RAs as possible. Housing acts like a person who doesn't have confidence in him or herself. It spreads decisions around as widely as possible. Of course, the concept of an RA interviewing a RD doesn't really make sense. Just think about this: how can I interview somebody who could potentially be my supervisor? Five people had to interview one candidate for just over an hour. There were 35 candidates so that makes 175 man-hours, not counting the other interviews the RD/ARDs had to go to and the prep time involved. I would not be surprised if the total for the entire mishap was more like 300 man hours. This is typical of everything housing does. The RA selection process works this way as does the RA training period only on a much larger scale.

How can housing afford to pay for this? Very simple, it doesn't. It asks us to volunteer, i.e. work for free. The best analogy I can use about housing is that it is like a friend that keeps asking for favors. As long as you like your friend you won't really mind, but eventually you'll get tired of this needy friend. In short, if you are an RA you can count on having a lot of your time being wasted. There are duty shifts, staff meetings, one-on-one meetings, bulletin boards, socials and educationals to plan, a extra cluster dependent duty such as RA council, weekly reports and a mountain of other paperwork, occasional write ups, as well as the occasional staff development meeting or housing wide dinner. These add up and you get sick of spending time with your needy friend. Housing-speak becomes clear in these instances. You are a professional when they need you to do something but otherwise you are a student. It occurred to me at some point in the semester that I really wasn't getting paid very much. RAs get $50 a week, a "free" double single, and a wellness center membership. Supposedly this is valued at just over $4500 but $3000 of that is your room. The problem with that thinking is that it doesn't cost housing $3000 to set us up with a double single.

This isn't where what housing asks of you ends though. It isn't enough to do all of your work, show up for all your meetings and work on a team. Housing tries as hard as they can to make you be friends with your cluster and other RAs on campus. In their ideal world, a staff will end up being a group of friends instead of a group of coworkers. Why? Friends do favors for friends. Friends volunteer. Like I said before, some people go into a cluster and end up being genuine friends with a lot of other RAs. That is good for those people. For people like me who don't want to operate that way this ends up being a procession of meaningless gifts and pointless gatherings.

I am so ashamed at having been an RA here that I have recently taken it off my resume. However, I am not an ideal RA. With that in mind I have compiled a list of qualities that in my opinion make the ideal RA. The ideal RA isn't very bright because if they are they will realize they are being used. The ideal RA is easily brainwashed during and after training. The ideal RA hasn't had much work experience outside of grocery stores and fast food restaurants. For them being an RA is a step up. The ideal RA wants to be friends with everyone in their cluster and everyone on their floor. The ideal RA has an easy major and therefore an awful lot of spare time. The ideal RA agrees with housing's leftist politics. There are very few people who are ideal RAs though. That is why there is a huge turn-over rate every year. With all this in mind I have come to the conclusion that housing is just evil, or at least pretty naughty.

> "...all I can say is that both housing and the union are evil but of different kinds."

This brings me to the issue of the RA union. When the RA union first started, I was mildly against it. I strongly suspected it would turn into a poorly run mess. However a combination of housing's and the University's appalling viewpoint that we're not employees, my own terrible experiences with housing and listening to the union representatives put me mildly in favor of the union by the time the election came. I had no doubt it would pass and it did. Now I can clearly see the union descending into the poorly run student mess I thought it would be. Up until the election, the union fought its battles where they should be fought, in court. They did things legally and they won. Now the University is clearly trying to buy time while interest in the union dies out. This is a legitimate strategy. Abandoning their protest-free high road approach, the union has really descended to new depths with completely ineffective and inappropriate protests. These protests essentially do nothing but piss people off. The University has obviously made its stance on this issue. Do the protesters really expect housing to come out and apologize to a bunch of children yelling and throwing a temper tantrum? What these protests are is an entertainment activity that makes a handful of RAs feel good about themselves for "fighting the good fight."

I disagree with the protests on campus but the union has not stopped there. In what I can only describe as wildly inappropriate the union took it upon themselves to go picket outside of the provost's home at 7:00 a.m. They aren't just protesting a public official when they protest at a home. They are protesting their spouse, their children and their neighbors who have absolutely nothing to do with this. What if the children were young and this scared and confused them? This isn't letting your voice be heard, this is blatant intimidation, a scare tactic more fit for the Mafia. The union is moving down a low road and that trend will probably continue. With the mess I can see this becoming I can only think that this is probably evil too.

So which is the lesser of two evils? I can't really decide. I think housing has only itself to blame for the union's existence. They treat RAs pretty badly in terms of compensation in my opinion. However the union is certainly not a bunch of angles. In my final analysis all I can say is that both housing and the union are evil but of different kinds. I am sincerely grateful that I will be graduating and getting a real job very soon. I will never have to see this stupid drama unfold.

Scott Kane is a UMass student

www.dailycollegian.com

Accepting me as I am

"I will take you as you are/please accept me as I am." – Badly Drawn Boy

I bought chicken at Stop and Shop the other day and I feel awful about it. Apparently, the chicken wasn't free range, and the employees who killed it weren't unionized. This was brought to my attention by diligent protestors protecting the rights of chickens everywhere.

I wore a sweatshirt from Wal-Mart the other day and I feel awful about it. Apparently, I am not supposed to wear a cheap and affordable sweatshirt made by sweatshop labor. This was brought to my attention by diligent protestors protecting the rights of children everywhere.

I made a joke about women the other day and I feel awful about it. Apparently, it supposedly went "Why can't Helen Keller drive? Because she's a woman." This was brought to my attention by diligent protestors protecting the rights of women everywhere.

I voted for Al Gore the other day and I feel awful about it. Apparently, I was supposed to vote for Ralph Nader because he cares about the common man far more than corporate candidates like Gore do. This was brought to my attention by diligent protestors protecting the rights of Green Party candidates everywhere.

I didn't listen to WMUA the other day and I feel awful about it. Apparently, I am supposed to listen to WMUA because it offers me a wide diversity of music that I can't hear on corporate radio stations. This was brought to my attention by diligent protestors protecting the rights of student-radio stations everywhere.

I watched wrestling the other day and I feel awful about it. Apparently, I am not supposed to enjoy masochistic displays that offend the local community. This was brought to my attention by diligent protestors protecting the rights of non-wrestling fans everywhere.

I accidentally said that I supported Maine's Angus King and Minnesota's Jesse Venture, the only independent governors in the United States, and I feel awful about it. Apparently, I am not supposed to support independent candidates who aren't aligned with the Green Party. This was brought to my attention by diligent protestors protecting the rights of the Green Party to be the only acceptable third-party everywhere.

I didn't mourn the death of Layne Staley the other day and I feel awful about it. Apparently, I am supposed to believe that Staley was a victim of heroin, and not an individual who threw his life away because he refused to throw away the drug. This was brought to my attention by diligent protestors protecting the rights of heroin victims everywhere.

I drank a Pabst Blue Ribbon the other day and I feel awful about. Apparently, I am obligated to drink small micro-brews for $4.50 a bottle without regard for what I genuinely want. This was brought to my attention by diligent protestors protecting the rights of small breweries everywhere.

I shopped at Old Navy the other day and I feel awful about it. Apparently, I am supposed to shop at the stores in Amherst, even if I can't afford a single pair of shorts at any of them. This was brought to my attention by diligent protestors protecting the rights of local businesses everywhere.

> "Apparently, I am a mindless drone who will only find freedom in modeling myself exactly after the local liberal community."

I wondered aloud the other day how schools costing students upwards of $30,000 per year could possibly be considered liberal and I feel awful about it. Apparently, despite the fact that most people can't afford such exorbitant annual fees, I am supposed to ignore the tuition and just know that they are liberal. This was brought to my attention by diligent protestors protecting the rights of Amherst, Mt. Holyoke, Smith and Hampshire College students everywhere.

I thought to myself the other day that Volvo drivers with "Buy Locally Grown" bumper stickers are total hypocrites and I feel awful about it. Apparently, I am supposed to ignore an inconsistency like this because they want me to buy locally grown. This was brought to my attention by diligent protestors protecting the rights of hypocrites everywhere.

I got angry when I heard another aging feminist condescending to her college-aged sisters and I feel awful about it. Apparently, I am supposed to ignore this frequent condescension because youthful women today just "don't know how it used to be and they owe us." This was brought to my attention by diligent protestors protecting the rights of aging, humorless feminists everywhere.

I did a lot of things today and I feel awful about them. Apparently, I am a mindless drone who will only find freedom in modeling myself exactly after the local liberal community. This was brought to my attention by diligent protestors protecting the rights of individuals who don't realize that their indoctrinations are no better than anybody else's.

Sam Wilkinson is a Collegian Columnist.

Interested in writing for Ed/Op next year? Come down to our office at 113 Campus Center basement and talk to Matt or Dan. If you'll be around in the fall, we'll give you the information you need to get a head start. collegianeditorial@yahoo.com

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 5.01.02 ARTS EDITOR: MIKE DELANO

Hey Good Lookin'...

By Barbara Eisenhaure & Jean Baker
TUFTS DAILY (TUFTS U.)

(U-WIRE) MEDFORD, Mass. – Summer's a great time to learn something new, so why not try cooking? Once you're off the meal plan and in your own apartment, you'll soon grow tired of eating out every night. Cooking for yourself, at least some of the time, will save you a ton of money, not to mention unwanted calories. Once you feel the pride of being a survivor in the kitchen, you'll be hooked.

A Few Very Easy Cookbooks to Get You Started

To get started, you'll want to pick up a good, basic cookbook. There are several written just for college students and other beginners. One, called Help! My Apartment Has a Kitchen ($17, Chapters Publishing, 1996), was put together by Kevin Mills and his mother, Nancy Mills.

After two years of living in a dormitory, Kevin moved into his own apartment. He reveled in going to restaurants and ordering take-out every night, until the day he realized that he had gone through his year's worth of food money in only a few months. In desperation, Kevin called his mother and asked for a few easy recipes. Over the next few months Kevin began to feel at home in his kitchen. Wanting to share his new found skills with others in need, Kevin and his mom put together this very easy and practical cookbook.

The best thing about this cookbook is that its directions are easy to understand. The book tells readers what to do to feed themselves without cluttering up the pages with the origins of food. The recipes are rated Very Easy, Easy, and Not So Easy, and the preparation and cooking times are given. More than half the recipes are vegetarian, and the book tells you how to adapt most of the others to make them vegetarian. The pictures keep you laughing and the "Mom Tips" are really helpful, though they may make you a little homesick.

The downside of the book is that it doesn't give any nutrition information (maybe you think that's a plus!) and several of the recipes are quite high in saturated fat. However, "Mom Tips" for some of these recipes tell you how to lower the fat content. Even the high fat recipes are okay to have once in a while, as long as you don't rely on them too heavily.

Another good starter cookbook is Where's Mom When You Need Her? (Aspen West, 2000). There's not much nouvelle cuisine here, just easy-to-fix "comfort food" like macaroni and cheese, tuna noodle casserole and spaghetti with meat sauce. The cooking directions are clear, but may not be specific enough for the truly novice cook. (How do you grease a pan? Where do you get a ready-made piecrust? This book doesn't say.) Also, the recipes don't indicate how many servings each makes, so unless you can gauge this from the ingredient list you may end up with lots of leftovers.

On the plus side, this cook book includes simple recipes that call for inexpensive and readily available ingredients. There is also a shopping guide — with advice like how to choose produce and how to store different kinds of foods – that can help you get the most from your grocery dollar. True to its subtitle – "surviving away from home" – this book covers other useful things like how to sew on a button, how to get stains out of clothes and how to treat simple medical problems. There's even a section on things that you can do around your apartment to lower your energy costs, advice that you

Turn to COOKING, page 6

Nickelback, Default, Injected rock Mullins

Nickelback went rogue when MTV invaded the campus.

Default opened. That's all we have to say.

By Dan Lamothe
COLLEGIAN STAFF

NICKELBACK with INJECTED and DEFAULT
MTV Campus Invasion Tour
April 26

"Come on man! Let's bang this out and go get drunk!"

Chad Kroeger brought that gleeful attitude and his band Nickelback's brand of Canadian rock to the Mullins Center Friday night as a part of MTV's Campus Invasion Tour.

Opening with "Woke Up This Morning," Nickelback blended a mix of old and new songs from their two major albums, the current Silver Side Up and their breakthrough disc The State. Strong vigorous covers of "Too Bad," "Breathe," "Never Again," and "Old Enough," highlighted the early portion of the set.

Mixed in, Nickelback unwrapped two new songs that will fit right in on Silver Side. Both were riff-heavy jams. When Kroeger asked the crowd "So does it make the cut?" he got resounding chaotic cheers.

Nickelback's act on the Campus Invasion tour was much more delinquent and amusing than they were before. In December they played a solid, inspired show in Springfield, but for the most part it was pretty tame. To the delight of most in attendance, the hijinx came out Friday in front of a predominantly college-aged crowd.

"What is that they just threw?" Kroeger asked as something hit the edge of the stage and fell to the floor underneath.

"That looks just like a gawd damned doobie! NO! I LAY IT! ...I'll get that later," he said with a sly grin. The crowd roared with laughter.

Nickelback pulled out the stops, dousing the packed floor crowd with water hoses. Kroeger came offstage and sprinted a lap around the floor, camcorder in hand.

After closing with "Leader of Men," Nickelback returned to the stage for an encore. "How come I got the shitty stool? Can I have a beer?" Kroeger complained as he took a seat.

After chugging a brew, Kroeger and Nickelback played the obvious choice, the smash hit, "How You Remind Me." After starting acoustic, they pulled a surprise, swapping to electric mid-song. "You thought we were going to play the whole thing like this? No! What are ya, retarded!" Kroeger giggled.

Default was the middle act of the night. Playing a set predominantly comprised of their current disc The Fallout, they played a solid, aggressive set that highlights the energetic work of their guitarist, Jeremy Hora. Their hit single "Wasting My Time," really doesn't do the band justice. Many of their other songs are superior. Hotra impressed with his ability to improvise, tossing the riff from Led Zeppelin's "Heartbreaker" in the middle of their song. For some reason Default never quite got the crowd into their set, despite some outstanding musicianship.

Highlights of the Default set included "Sick and Tired," "Let You Down," "Live a Life," and its closer, current single "Deny."

Opening the night was Injected. Part punk, part angst rock, Injected's set grew monotonous quickly. While its songs are upbeat, the simple chords and similar tempo to all their songs didn't take long to grow old.

Werewolves and bad horror movies

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

There have been so many bad teen horror movies released (The Forsaken, Urban Legends: Final Cut) that one has to wonder about the quality of the movies that don't (or barely) make it to theaters. In despair at the poor quality of Hollywood's "real" releases, and being the kind of horror connoisseur who is willing to stomach the chaff to get to the wheat, I headed over to the Blockbuster shelves to see what the world of direct-to-video had to offer.

GINGER SNAPS
Directed by John Fawcett
Starring Katherine Isabelle, Emily Perkins and Mimi Rogers

Ginger (Katherine Isabelle) and Bridget (Emily Perkins), two outcast sisters, are the kind of teenagers who stage gory fake deaths and then photograph them for a school project as part of their "screw you" youthful rebellion. On the night that Ginger experiences her first period, she is attacked by the Beast of Bailey Downs, a lupine monstrosity that has been tearing apart neighborhood pets. Soon, she begins to change from a Goth-doom loner to a vivacious young woman who happens to have strange urges and a tail.

Ginger Snaps sounds, at first plot description, like the kind of teen horror bummer that makes critics grit their teeth in pain. But director John Fawcett and writer Karen Walton have more on their mind beyond cheap gore. Like the great TV show, "Buffy, the Vampire Slayer," this werewolf film uses its paranormal hook as a metaphor for the angst of teen life. Horror fans shouldn't be disappointed because the movie piles up the torn bodies. The more exacting fan will appreciate that the film's characters are more than the usual oversexed teen automatons. If I have one quibble, it's that Walton's script begins to turn into more conventional horror as it draws toward its conclusion. As for the acting, Isabelle and Perkins give impressive performances that turn their characters into flesh and blood and not 2-D cutouts. Ginger Snaps is a perfect illustration of Hollywood's myopia when it doesn't realize the good films it actually has.

SOUL SURVIVORS
Directed by Steve Carpenter
Starring Melissa Sagemiller, Eliza Dushku, Wes Bentley and Casey Affleck

In this half-baked rip-off of The Sixth Sense, Jacob's Ladder and Carnival of Souls, Cassie (newcomer Melissa Sagemiller), a dimpled blond co-ed, is involved in a fatal car accident that kills her boyfriend (Casey Affleck) and sends her spiraling into a nightmare of... what, exactly? She's chased by mysterious masked creeps, has ghostly visions of her dead boyfriend and experiences a really nasty nosebleed during class. We're meant to believe Cassie's trapped in a metaphysical Chinese box where nothing is as it seems, but the movie, as inept as it is, never convinces us that the ending we think is coming isn't really going to happen. The movie itself is nothing but smoke and mirrors.

The writer and director, Steve Carpenter, obviously wants us to think we are being creeped out by the "spooky" supernatural enigmas, but the movie never actually develops any kind of reasonable facsimile of a true reality. It hardly helps that the movie is this badly made. Carpenter has no idea how to stage a scene. Wooden and dull, Soul Survivors is the kind of movie that seems to get longer the closer it gets to the end. The acting comes down to a contest of who is worse: the girls (Eliza Dushku is reduced to nothing but a sexy bad girl tic) or the guys, who act like zombies impersonating wax statues playing mannequins.

THE MANGLER 2
Directed by Michael Hamilton-Wright
Starring Lance Henrickson

Was there anyone itching for a sequel to The Mangler, a Stephen King adaptation that ended with the impressive image of a possessed press iron chasing the nominal heroes (ooh, scary). The Mangler 2 is a Z-grade sequel that looks as if someone spent a weekend shooting it for a total cost of 50 bucks.

Funny thing is, as bad as the first film was, this one doesn't even have a connection to the original. The setting is a private school where the computer gets taken over for by a demonic virus that proceeds to bump off a small group of annoying teens stuck at the school during a field trip. The movie could've had a tawdry B-movie kick, had it not made the scare sequences look like attractions in a church's Halloween haunted house. Witless, uninspired and absolutely painful, the movie gives us the added insult of staging death scenes that make me long for the relative sophistication of a lesser Friday the 13th sequel.

All Arts meeting (current and interested staff) tonight at 7p.m. (meeting REALLY is tonight - yesterday's ad was an error).

Yep, a real Peach

Sassy fashion sense... weird band – The Moldy Peaches.

By Kenneth Smith
THE DAILY AZTEC (SAN DIEGO STATE U.)

(U-WIRE) SAN DIEGO - The Moldy Peaches tread a fine line between profanity and profundity, silliness and sincerity. Though not above the occasional dive into the toilet or tossing out a random dk joke for comic relief, the final result is obviously the product of sharp, albeit admittedly twisted, minds.

Peaches co-founder/co-frontperson (along with Kimya Dawson) Adam Green maintains a philosophical outlook on the Peaches duality, perhaps best exemplified by a line from "Steak for Chicken." Dawson sings, "We invented this new kind of darts / Hit a bull's-eye, cut a fart," while Green simultaneously sings, "We invented this new kind of art / Postmodernist throwing darts."

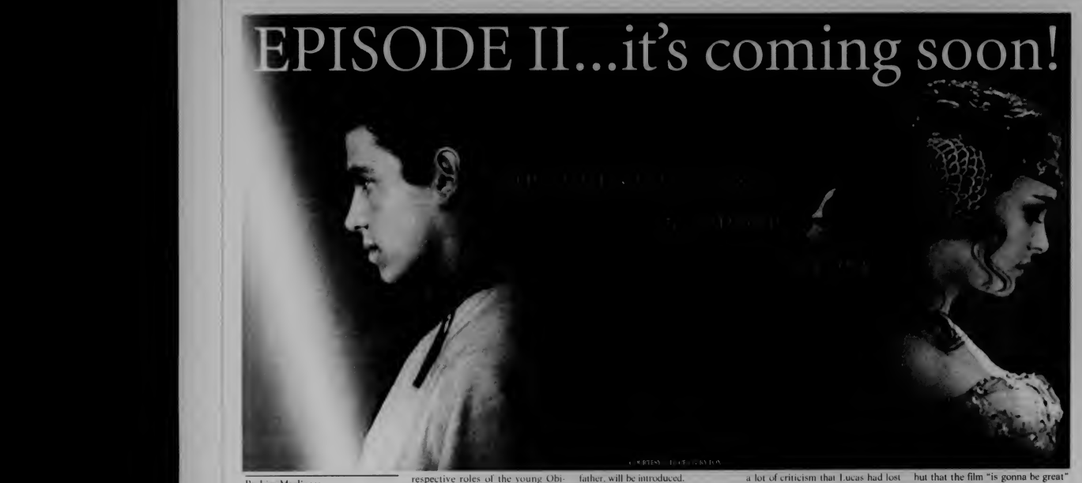
"It's kind of like a dream," he said. "Like in a dream you'll have serious things juxtaposed beside something that's pretty comical if you try to describe it to someone."

"But whatever it is makes sense because in a dream things seem automatically true and perfect. Your mind makes it undeniable. That's kind of how I try to write lyrics, like they're a dream, put the silly part next to the scary part."

Despite, or perhaps because of, this Bunuelian approach to songwriting, humor stays at the forefront of the Peaches music.

"We're not trying to be not funny," Green said. "Everyone else tries to be not funny."

"We don't have a goal when Kimya and I write together, we just try to write something we like. It's like our real personality, like everyone's personalities – sometimes we're funny and sometimes we're really serious.



"It's kind of weird when you meet some serious, sadback songwriter who doesn't have anything funny in his songs, then he cracks a joke. You feel like you're being lied to by his songs. I don't think people are surprised by our personalities after hearing our record.

"I mean, of course we aren't doing all the stuff we sing about, but we're definitely the type of people who would write songs like that."

Green is also philosophical about the band wearing ridiculous costumes

Turn to PEACHES, page 6

EPISODE II...it's coming soon!

By Lisa Maglioca
THE DAILY TITAN (CAL STATE-LAS VEGAS)

(U-WIRE) LAS VEGAS – In a land not so far away, director George Lucas created an empire in Star Wars. On May 16, 25 years after the original film, Lucas will add Episode II: Attack of the Clones to his ongoing "Star Wars" saga. Lucas once again proves to be skillful at building anticipation by releasing the movie's merchandise in installments, which began April 23, until the film is released.

Though Lucas has striven to keep all the important plot points secret, most fans accept a few major points in Episode II as a given.

Set 10 years after the end of Episode I, many characters will return for this chapter in the tale. Ewan McGregor, Natalie Portman and Ian McDiarmid reprise their respective roles of the young Obi-Wan Kenobi, Amidala and Supreme Chancellor Palpatine/Darth Sidious. Anakin Skywalker returns with a different, "more mature" face as Hayden Christensen takes over the role as the character begins his turn to the dark side of the force.

Episode II is set up into two parts. Half the movie focuses on the budding romance of Anakin and Amidala, who are reunited after Anakin and Obi-Wan foil an assassination attempt on the lonner queen. This lends to obvious rumors that Episode II will culminate in a wedding between the two at the end of the film.

The other hall of the film focuses on Obi-Wan investigating the assassination attempt on Amidala and ultimately discovering the clone arms. It is during this that Jango Fett, cult favorite bounty hunter Boba Fett's father, will be introduced.

One of the few other plot points that Lucas has acknowledged is a huge Jedi battle, and that fans will be able to see Yoda kick some ass in that fight.

I have been a Star Wars geek ever since I saw "Return of the Jedi" in the theater when I was 4. I even know that Sir Alec Guinness, the original Obi-Wan Kenobi, asked Lucas to kill off his character in "Star Wars" so he wouldn't have such a large part in subsequent movies or speak what he thought were banal lines. It goes without saying that I will be seeing Episode II – probably on opening day. But how many others, aside from the couple of guys who have been camped out in front of a Seattle theater for months, plan on turning out for this film?

After Episode I: The Phantom Menace came out in 1999, there was a lot of criticism that Lucas had lost his touch. Fans were disappointed with several aspects of the film, especially the character of Jar Jar Binks.

Sophomore David Rosen said that Jar Jar was the worst part of Episode I.

"There's a rumor he gets killed in 'Episode II,' which is one of the main reasons I'm going to see it," he said.

UNLV alumnus Becky Cain agreed. In fact, she said that one of the parts she looks most forward to in Episode II is, "seeing Jar Jar Binks die," along with seeing Anakin's progression towards the dark side.

Not everyone is looking forward to seeing Anakin take action, however. He may end up getting as much criticism as Jar Jar. CCSN physical education student Jesus Ahedo said that "Anakin looks gay and cocky," but that the film "is gonna be great" despite that.

As for going to see it, Rosen, Ahedo and Cain all said that they would see it on opening day if possible.

Senior biology and education major Pic Dulas concurred with, "I will be at the front of the line [opening day]."

Based on the fact that there are people like those guys in Seattle, it may be a good idea to buy tickets in advance if you want to see Episode II on opening weekend. You can buy tickets at a theater that is showing it in advance, or purchase them through Fandango.com, which wasn't really an option when "Episode I" came out. Whenever you decide to see it, though, I don't think you'll be disappointed. After all, nothing could be as bad as Jar Jar asking, "Innocent people gonna die?"

■ Peaches

continued from page 5

on stage.

"Everyone on stage is wearing a costume," he theorized.

The Peaches push this to the limit, though. Dawson often dresses as a bunny, appropriate attire considering the band covers "Little Bunny Foo Foo" on their self-titled debut.

"It started because our first shows were at our house, back in Port Townshend, Wash.," Green said. "Our first show was to pay our power bill, and we decided to play our songs for everyone in town.

"When people come over to your house for a show, you don't want to just be yourself when they get there. You don't want to be just sitting there eating a bowl of cereal."

"So we went up to my room and we all got dressed up in crazy stuff, and sent a messenger down to tell everyone we wouldn't come down unless they chanted our names. It just stuck when we started playing bars and places like that."

All this blending of high art, philosophy and absurdity makes for a strange cacophony that is hard to provide a point of reference for.

"The music is based more on personalities than musical influences," Green said. "It's more about people we've met and talked to and hung out with. We'll just change it up every time, whatever we feel like playing.

"It's more like folk music, in that kind of vein, like as long as we have a melody, we'll sing to it. And we sing in our real speaking voices, so it's not so stylized."

The now New York-based Peaches started as a duo, but have since expanded to six members. This is a source of contention for Green, as many believe he and Dawson are the Peaches.

"Any songs we write from now on, it's with them, and we share the songwriting credit with all of them. Because it's a collaboration – it's always been a collaboration."

Green hopes the band's new single, "County Fair/Rainbows," will clarify this.

"It's the first thing released with all six of us. It's got all six of us on the cover to make it clear, like hopefully people can put two and two together."

And what lies in the future for the newly expanded Peaches?

"We just wrote a song about cheese with all six of us," Green said. "It's called 'Who's got the Cheese'."

Considering the fact one of the band's best-known songs is called "Who's Got the Crack," it's hard to tell if Green is telling the truth.

"Seriously. It's actually four separate songs called 'Who's got the Cheese A through D'."

■ cooking

continued from page 5

may need when you get your first electric bill. The book costs about $15 and is available through large booksellers like Barnes and Noble and Amazon.com.

For the most basic of cooking instructions, try The Starving Students' Cookbook (Warner Books, 1994). Although written for the "college student who is short on time and money," that pretty much describes the recent graduate as well. Dozens of recipes for easy-to-fix foods list the utensils you'll need, how long each takes to cook, and the number of servings. There are some inventive microwave meals like a tortilla dog, wrapped in a paper towel and ready in two minutes flat, and tequila-soaked fish that's done in 10 minutes. One of our recipe testers – a graduate student whose idea of cooking is nuking a Lean Cuisine – prepared a "definitely edible" meal in under 30 minutes.

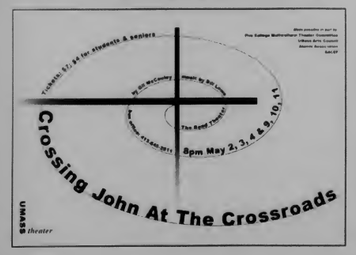
The cookbook includes a few vegetarian options, such as a basic stir-fry and a pesto sauce, and several salads that would make good brown bag lunches. There are no nutrient analyses included with these recipes, but if you are trying to limit your intake of fat and calories, it's probably a good idea to choose recipes that call for chicken or fish rather than sausage or Spam.

Check the front of the book for shopping and food storage hints that can help keep foods fresher longer. This means less money spent on replacing wilted lettuce and yogurt that has passed its prime. The book costs about $10, which is cash you'll easily recoup by making your own meals rather than buying carry-out.

If these three books haven't whetted your appetite to jump into the kitchen and get cookin,' check out:

The College Cookbook: An Alternative to the Meal Plan by Geri Harrington (Storey Books, 1988)

The Healthy College Cookbook by Alesandra Nimetz, Jason Stanley, and Emeline Starr (Storey Books, 1999)



You're Not in Mom's Kitchen Anymore by Garry Pastore (Ramholtz Publishing, 1998)

Bon appetit!

Changing Jobs or Retiring?
Call A.G. Edwards for alternatives on how you can receive and manage your distribution from your company's retirement plan.

Michelle Spaziani
91 Main St
Greenfield, MA
800-445-3685
A.G. Edwards INVESTMENTS SINCE 1887
Member SIPC © 2001 A.G. Edwards & Sons, Inc.

GRE Changes Ahead!
On October 1st, 2002, two essays will replace the GRE Analytical section.
Learn more about the GRE
Join us for a FREE
test strategy seminar
Saturday, May 4th, 11:00am-12:30pm
at the Amherst Kaplan Center
Call or visit us online today to enroll!
KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST
kaptest.com
SM/PSC03
*GRE is a registered trademark of the Educational Testing Service

WHO IS ELAINE?
Elaine is an Environmental Science senior, loves to go on adventures with the outing club and drives buses for PVTA. She is also a Christian. Funny thing is, she wasn't a Christian when she came to UMass. In fact, she wasn't even sure she believed in God.
On May 1st, Elaine will be sharing her amazing journey that has taken her from skepticism to faith. Admission is free and there will be a question and answer session at the end. Everyone is invited.

Wednesday, May 1st 7:00pm
UMass Campus Center rm # 174
Brought to you by MERCYhouse - "It's a church"
www.knowmercy.org - 374-7532

UMass rows its way to victory

By Tibora Girczyc-Blum
COLLEGIAN STAFF

"Row, row, row your boat," and that's just what the Massachusetts women's crew team did to win it's 7th consecutive Atlantic-10 Championship last weekend on the Cooper River in Collingswood, N.J.

The Minutewomen won the championship with a total of 44 points, University of Rhode Island came in second with a total of 34 points and George Washington University came in third with a total of 23 points.

"The level of competition within the A-10 conference is starting to get stronger," Head Coach Jim Dietz said, indicating that this year's race was different than the past ones.

The individual boats rowed well and earned five first place finishes out of the 10 total events. The most weighted event was the Varsity 8 race, which UMass took first. The members of that boat were coxswain Megan Mastropolo, Lea Jakobes, Sarah Pollmann, Lauren Cromwell, Katia Prokopenko, Hayley McGrath, Colleen Banfield and co-captains Erin Cooke and Anna Talucci.

Sophmore varisty team member Lauren Cromwell felt confident that this race was the best one of the season. "We utilized our power to row at a low stroke rating and it just flowed," she said.UMass' first place time was 6:48.66. Dayton University came in second (6:55.81) and Fordham came in third (7:01.86).

"Both captains did a great job. They really stepped up," Dietz said.

The varsity crew team takes its boat out of the water after finishing first in last weekend's race.

The Minutewomen have been training all through the winter for this race with 6 a.m. rows on the Connecticut River, intense workouts in Boyden Gym and their weightlifting schedule. They ended their fall season in good standing and have carried over that position in their spring season, fairing well in all of their spring races.

In the beginning of April, the team traveled to sunny San Diego, Calif. and competed in the 29th annual San Diego Crew Classic. The team came in second place with a time of 6:49.87, finishing just behind first place Duke University (6:43.40). The Varsity 8 roster that rowed in the Crew Classic is not the same as the one that competed in the Atlantic 10 Championship. The team has been continually shifted around to find the best combination of rowers for the varsity boat.

"I made an effort to move around the team, in order to see what combination works best," Dietz said.

Coxswain Amy Fuller, Amanda Wing, Claire O'Donnell, Bonnie Swart and Liz Farrell were all part of the fifth place varsity four that had a time of 8:55.60. The Varsity-B boat won first place in its race as well with a time of 7:11.15. The team included coxswain Alpana Sharma, Mila Gorzowski, Rachel Fischer, Kate Bonner, Liz Rohh, Katie O'Brien, Ann Roberts, Lindsay Hayward and Laura Hutchinson. URI came in second (7:17.90) and Dayton came in third (7:21.85).

The Novice team displayed a strong stance in its first Atlantic 10 championship race. It accumulated 13 points towards the team's win. The A-boat came in first place (7:25.70), beating George Washington University (7:32.27) and Saint Joseph's University (7:38.00).

The team members include coxswain Carrie Champigny, Liz Eleftheraki, Bryce Philbin, Faith Harkins, Carrie Hellstedt, Lesley Day, Naomi Rudov, Stacey Schaedler and Jenn Tomich.

The Novice 4 boat also came in first place (8:27.43), beating out LaSalle University (8:42.08) and Rhode Island University (8:45.51).

The Crew team has two more races left in their spring season, and will be racing this weekend in Syracuse, N.Y. Its last race will be on the Schuylkill River at the Dad Vail Regatta in Philadelphia.

Captain Erin Cooke holds the crew team's seventh consecutive A-10 championship trophy.

FREE
Join us for a
Law School
Admissions & LSAT
Strategy Seminar
Thursday, May 2nd, 7:00-8:30pm
at the Amherst Kaplan Center
KAPLAN
Space is limited!
To register, call 1-800-KAP-TEST
kaptest.com

GRAPHICS
the Collegian is hiring for next semester

come talk to Shimauli, Mike or Morgan
or call 545-1864
105 Campus Center Basement

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
Now Hiring Advertising Account Executives for Fall 2002

Call 545-3500
or stop by our office, room 113
in the Campus CenterBasement, with your resume for more information
All Majors & Classes
Welcome to Apply

UMass BRIEFS:

Women's Water Polo

Junior Mattie Newell was named to the Collegiate Water Polo Association's Northern Division All-Conference first team as announced yesterday by the league. Newell, who was the lone Massachusetts representative, was also recently named to the All-EAC and All-CWPA Eastern Championship first teams.

Newell scored a team-high 43 goals in 33 quarters this season. She also dished out six assists and shot a team high .518 from the field. Newell drew a team high 52 ejections and 12 penalty shots. The 12 penalty shots drawn were the most in a UMass single season, while the 52 ejections drawn placed her second on the school's all-time chart. Defensively, Newell recorded one block and 32 steals this season.

For her career, Newell played in 333 quarters, scored 79 goals and dished out 16 assists. She drew 118 ejections and 27 penalty shots which rank third and second, respectively, on the UMass all-time list. Newell was a two-time Coaches Academic All-American selection and has been a mainstay on the UMass Athletic Council's Honor Roll.

The Minutewomen finished the season with a 15-18 overall record and placed fifth at the CWPA Eastern Championship, losing by one goal in double-overtime to eventual runner-up and 14th-ranked Hartwick College.

Men's Track

The University of Massachusetts men's track and field team finished first with 202.50 points in the Wildcat Invitational, held this past Saturday on Mooradian Field, at the University of New Hampshire. The Minutemen won six events including the 100M dash, 200M dash, 800M run, 1500M run, high jump and the shot put.

Leading the way for the Maroon and White was junior Kwesi Frimpong-Boateng who won the 100M dash with a time of 10.59 seconds. That mark is the third-fastest in school history and qualifies him for the New England Championships to be held May 10-11 at Storrs, Conn. Frimpong-Boateng, who was named the Atlantic 10 Track student-athlete of the year last week, also qualified for the IC4A Championships to be held May 18-19 at Princeton, N.J.

Junior Eric Uliano won the shot put with a season-best mark of 52'10.00". That mark also qualified him for the New England Championships and IC4A Championships.

Senior co-captain Sal Nastasi won the 800M run with a season-best time of 1:55.04, while classmate Kevin Curtin won the 1500M run with a season-best time of 4:02.84 seconds. Freshman Joe McCormack won the 200M dash with a time of 22.62 seconds, while freshman Mike Carr won the high jump with a mark of 6'3.50.

Freshman Derek Swart finished second in the long jump with a mark of 22'0.75", while finishing third in the same event was freshman Henry Smith who had in a mark of 21'00.75".

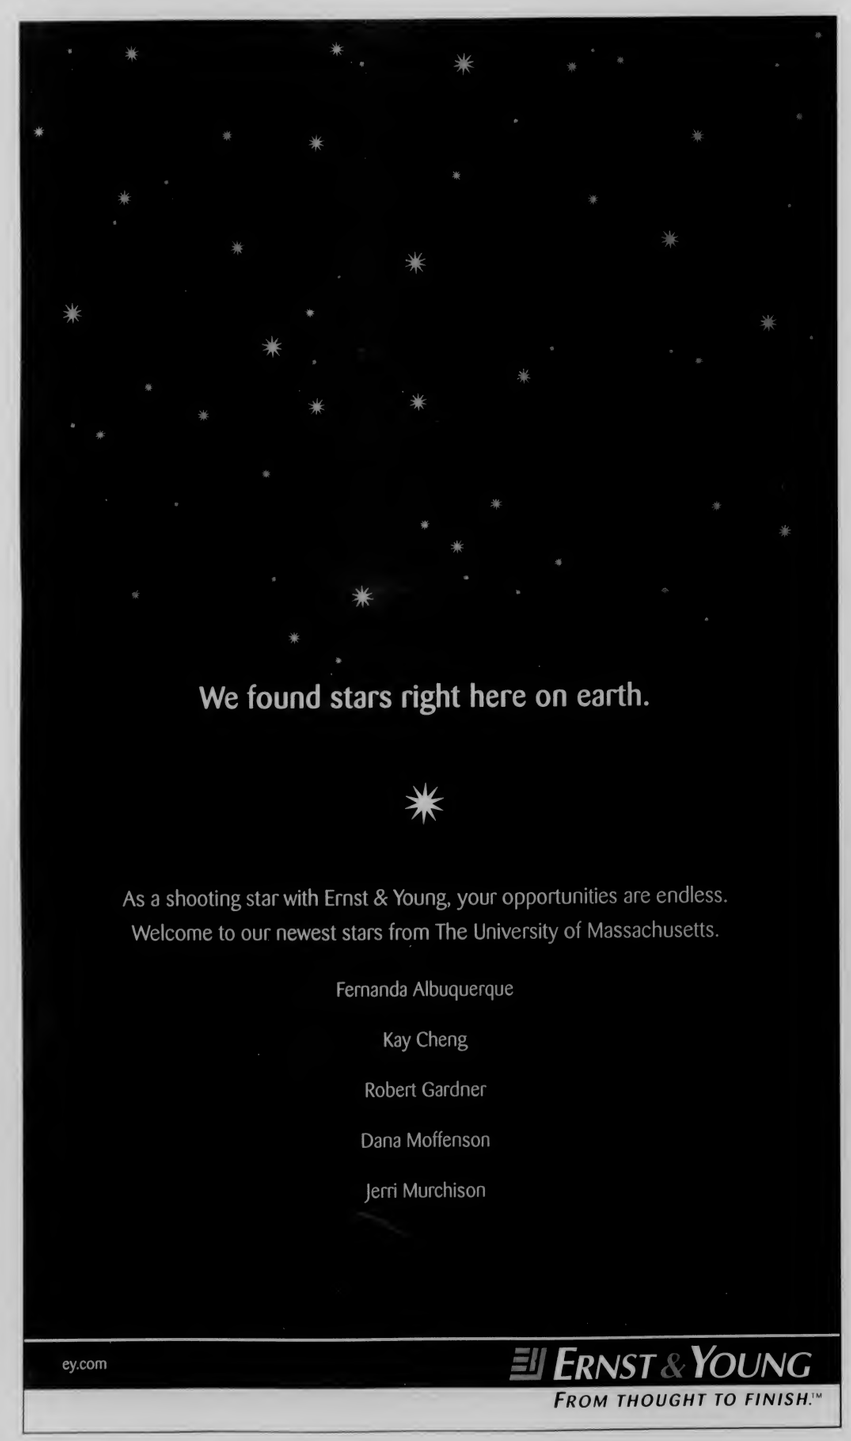
Overall the Minutemen turned in 24 season-best performances, had four New England qualifiers and two IC4A qualifiers.

The Minutemen return to action this Saturday, May 4, at Richmond, Va., for the Atlantic 10 Championships. UMass is looking to win its 17th conference title under head coach Ken O'Brien.

Women's Track

The University of Massachusetts women's track team finished third with 160 points in a quad-meet this past weekend at the Wildcat Invitational, held Saturday at Mooradian Field. The Minutewomen won six events including the 100M hurdles, pole vault, javelin, long jump, triple jump and the 4x100M relay.

Leading the way for UMass was senior co-captain Rhianna DaCruz who won the pole vault with a season-best mark of 11'6.00". She also won the javelin with a season-best throw of 132'6.00". That mark also ranks as the second-best throw in school history.



Sophomore Chanté Soares won the long jump with a mark of 18'6.00". It is the second consecutive week she was won the event and on April 23, was named the Atlantic 10 Performer of the Week for her efforts.

Freshman Marissa Callahan won the triple jump with a mark of 36'3.50 and sophomore Shannon Jackson won the 100M hurdles with a time of 14.83 seconds.

The 4x100M relay team also picked up a win turning in a time of 49.49 seconds.

Other schools that competed include Harvard (180.50 points), New Hampshire (167) and Maine (82.50).

The Minutewomen return to action this Saturday, May 4, at Richmond, Va., for the Atlantic 10 Championships. UMass is looking to win its second consecutive outdoor title and third in four years under head coach Julie LaFreniere.

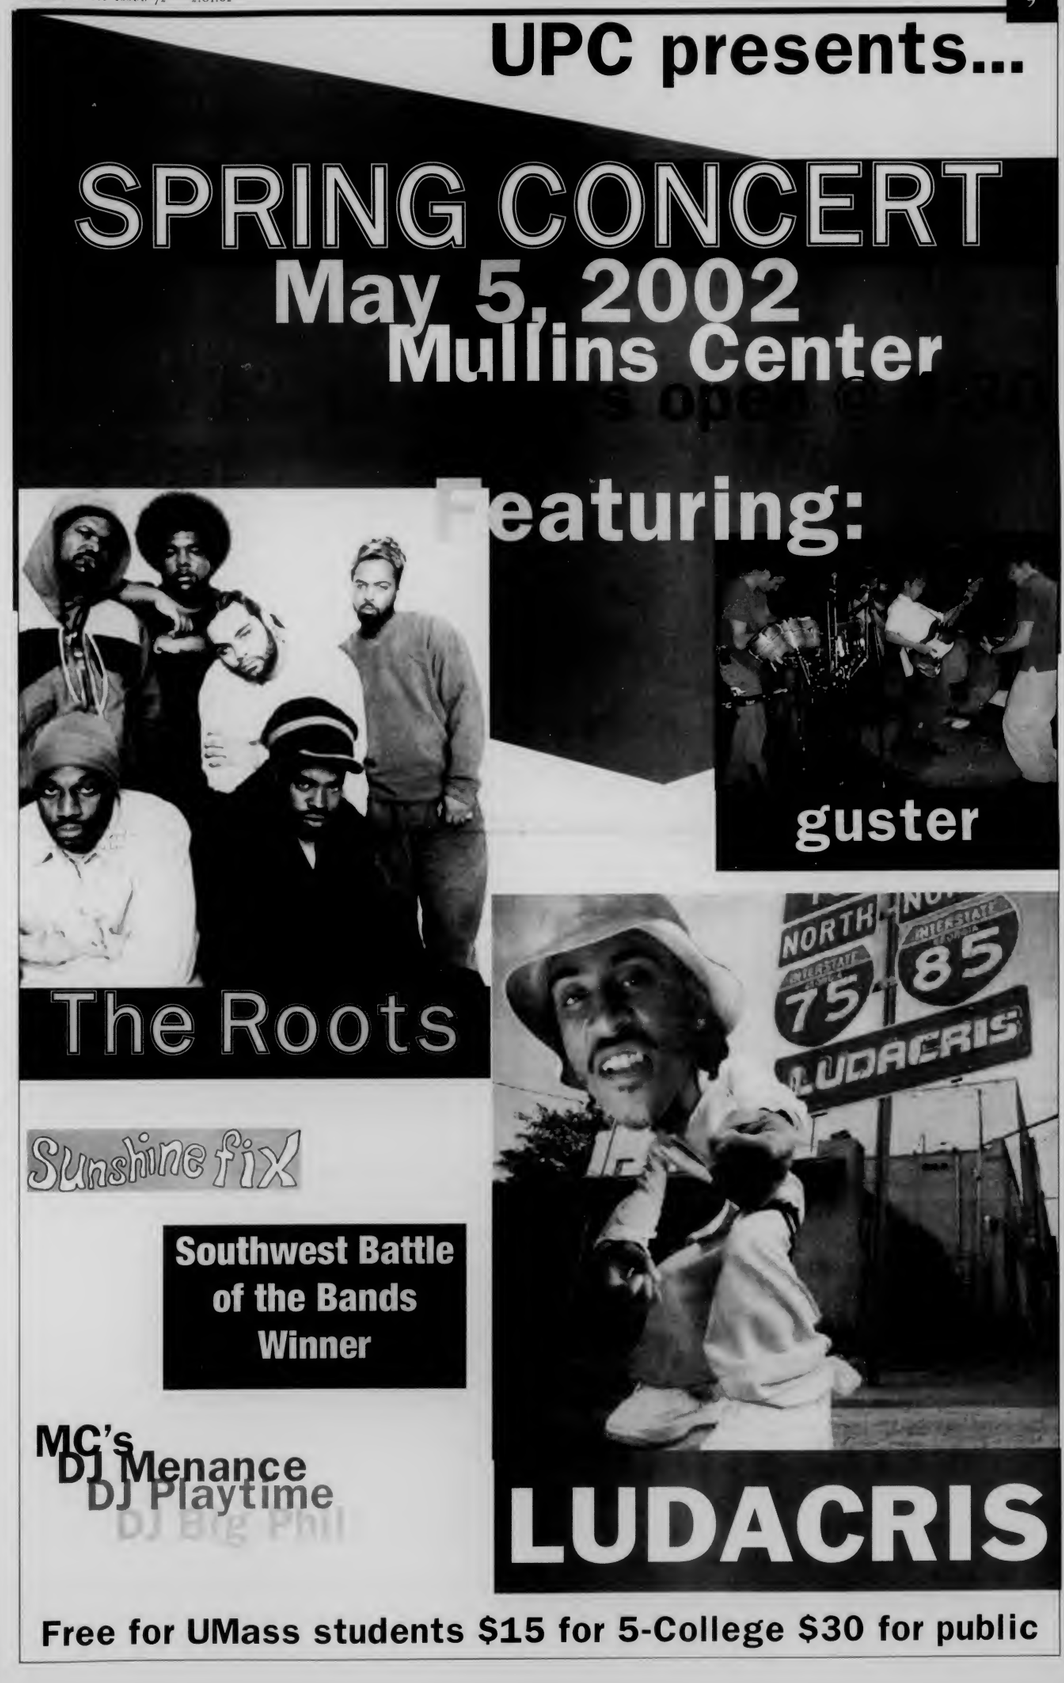
■ nba

continued from page 12

perfection. Kidd has hit his shot first and then made great passes second. Kidd is not only averaging eight rebounds and just under ten assists through the first three games, his scoring average has jumped from 14.7 during the regular season to 23.3 in the first three games of the Pacers series.

Once upon a time, teams could leave Kidd open because his jumpers would not hurt them. Now if they leave him open he will either burn a three or Kenyon Martin will bury a dunk in their mug. A double threat makes Kidd the most imposing threat.

Baron Davis – I believe Orlando's Tracy McGrady is correct when he says that he was the best player for either the Magic or the Hornets in their first round series. Now ask me who made a bigger impact for his team, and hands down it was Davis.



Davis was throwing it down while his teammate Jamal Mashburn has been throwing up due to a vitamin B-12 deficiency. Davis made the steal of McGrady at the end of game one to preserve a Hornet one-point win. Then in game three, after a bogus wave-off of his incredible buzzer beater, Davis proceeded to score nine points in overtime and record a triple-double. His presence is the reason why the Hornets are moving on to the second round.

Robert Horry – How does he make this list? This is a guy who has been part of four NBA Championship Teams (1994 and 1995 Houston Rockets and the 2000 and 2001 LA Lakers), but seems to be bored with the regular season. He looks as if he just goes through the motions for 82 games just waiting for his chance to strike during the postseason.

He did it with big shots against the Knicks and Magic in the '94 and '95 finals. Horry scored seven of the first ten points during the Lakers' 33-14 game-ending run against Portland during game seven of the 2000 Western Conference Finals. Horry also hit a go-ahead three during game three of last year's finals against Philly after Shaq had fouled out.

Then with just a little over 10 second left on Sunday, the Lakers were trailing by two points and Kobe Bryant was the man that most people thought was going to take the last shot. We should have known better with Horry out there. With Kobe drawing the double team, Horry was open for three. End of game, end of Blazers and another clutch shot from a big game player.

David Rose is a Collegian Columnist.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. - Now Available, 1&2 bedroom apts. Leases begin June, July, Aug or Sept. 1 year lease. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywine-apts.com stop by or call (413) 549-0600.

3- Bedroom Apartment in Puffton Village. Available June 1st. Great location! 549-4097.

2 bedroom Apt. Millvalley. Asking $900.00, nego. Avail 6/1. 413-896-9565.

Summer Sublet with fall option. Puffton 3 BR/ 2 BA. June 1st. 549-4814.

2 bedroom apt. Take over our lease and SAVE $$$. Free heat + hot water on bus line. 253-4876.

2 bedroom Puffton Apt. Take over lease. Available June 1 with fall option. 549-7685.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over our lease in June $905/M Brandywine. Call Dan 549-8518.

Downtown Amherst: 19b South Prospect St. 2 bedroom June 1. 253-2515. Great for couple.

AUTO FOR SALE

Maxima 1989. Original owner. 154000 miles. Good car Jim 545-5677.

89 Honda Accord $1500 OBO 259-0068.

Purchasing a new or used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

COMPUTERS

We pay CASH for your used lab tops 413-584-8857.

Color Laptop $99 Pentium tower/ CD Rom $99 with color monitor $159. HURRY! 413-584-8857.

EMPLOYMENT

SUMMER IN MAINE Jewish, Co-ed overnight camp in the southern Maine seeks staff: Boys Unit Head (23+), Camping/ Tripping Director (23+), Judaics Director (23+); swim, water ski, and boating/ sailing instructors (lifeguard certification req'd.) ; archery (training avail.), ceramics, general athletics, gymnastics, photography, radio, low ropes, theater; general counselors, office personnel. For information, contact: Ava Goldman, Director, JCC Camp Kingswood, 333 Nahanton street, Newton, MA 02459, 617-244-5124, or e-mail: director@kingswood.org

Camp Counselor wanted for Tennis, Gymnastics, Water Ski, Arts, and more! Gain valuable experience at award-winning camps, while having the summer of a lifetime. Apply on-line at www.pine-forest.com

EMPLOYMENT

PCA/ Babysitter wanted 256-3763.

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individual, full and part time positions available immediately. Only those able to work the upcoming summer should apply. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413)584-4746.

Be the Campus Red Bull connection. Join our team and help build one of the world's leading brands, you'll have a blast while gaining invaluable marketing experience. You'll even earn a little extra spending cash. Think about it. It's a lot less dangerous than selling term papers! Apply at redbullcollege.com

ENTERTAINMENT

Reckless Abandon is coming May 11th at the bowl.

FOR RENT

2 bedroom apt. on bus route avail. June 1 w/fall option $905/mo heat hot water included 549-1883.

FOR SALE

King size bed $75 and other furniture 253-1140.

Desk for sale new wooden 4 drawer perfect condition call Meg 549-0072.

Furniture for sale call 259-0068. Book-Shelf, Coffee-table, bed and more.

HOUSE FOR RENT

Hadley 5 bedroom plus. Newer home five minutes from UMASS. June occupancy $2600.00 month. 549-4270.

ROOM FOR RENT

Spacious, share house with fun couple in scenic Montague. $333. May 28-Aug 31, call 367-9822.

1 bedroom in Alpine commons. Excellent roommates. Call Bryan 253-9499.

ROOM FOR RENT

Looking for 1/2 roommates to share apartment for summer. Call 549-2676.

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 More needed to share 3 bdrm. Apt. N Amherst- townhouses $375 mo. , bus rte. June 1 – May 03. Needed ASAP Call Shannon. 549-9594 or 508-241-5185.

Need a place for fall sem. only? Share our 3 bdrm.! $375 mo. bus rte. Call Shannon ASAP! 549-9594 or 508-241-5185.

Female(s) to share 2 bedroom Brandywine Apt. starting June 1 . 549-1988.

Puffton. Looking for roommate to share 3 bdrm. Available June 1. Call Christina 549-0209.

2 roommate Brandywine Apt. starting June 1. Cheap rent includes HT/HTW. Call Tom 549-5456.

ROOMMATE WANTED

1-2 females to share large house on route 47 w/4 others starting summer or fall. 546-6106.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

ST. JUDE

May the sacred heart of Jesus be loved and glorified. St. Jude-Powerfull Intercessor-True relative of Jesus-Pray for us. M.

SUMMER SUBLET

Brandywine. 2 bdrm. Cheap. 3rd floor. Furnished, AC. 549-4110 Bus route.

One large bedroom available at Cliffside apts. Starting June 1 partly furnished 617-842-4657.

Nice 3 bedroom townhouse. Practically on campus. Call Joe 549-9441.

SUMMER SUBLET

Brandywine. 2 bdrm. Available June 1. Call 549-1988.

TO SUBLET

2 bedroom. Free heat and hot water, Fall option, 253-9629.

2 bedrooms available in a Puffton 3 bedroom apt., 1 with fall option. Available 6/1 or end of May. 549-5837.

2 Bedroom apartment partially furnished available June 1st to sublet w/option to lease on bus route. 413-549-9612.

TRAVEL

Mexico/ Caribbean or Central America $300 round trip plus tax. Europe $169 one way plus tax. Other world wide destinations cheap. Book tickets on line www.airtech.com or (212) 219-7000.

HSCN

Housing Services Cable Network

2	CBS/4
3	NESN
4	Fox Sport NE
5	PBS/57
6	HSCN Movie Channel
7	WB/20
8	HSCN Movie Channel
9	TV Guide Channel
10	FOX/61
11	ABC/40
12	NBC/22
13	International Channel
14	UMATV
15	HSCN Info Channel
16	ESPN
17	ESPN 2
18	UVC-19
19	ESPN Classic
20	Gasse-tool Govt
21	CNN
22	CNN HL
23	Weather Channel
24	Learning Channel
25	History Channel
26	A & E
27	Discovery Health
28	Food Network
29	NASA
30	Home & Garden TV
31	Travel Channel
32	Lifetime
33	CNBC
34	Tech TV
35	BET
36	UPN-38
37	USA
38	TNN
39	MTV
40	CMT
41	VH-1
42	TNT
43	TBS
44	E Entertainment
45	Sci-Fi Channel
46	Court TV
47	Nick at Nite
48	Comedy Central
49	Cartoon Network
50	Game Show Network
51	TV Land
52	FOX Family
53	Univision
54	Galavision
55	Telemundo
56	College TV Network
57	C-SPAN
58	C-SPAN2
61	Bloomberg Television

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?

Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass

Client _____ Date: _____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Office Hours: Open 8:30AM - 4:00PM - 413-545-3500

Classifieds are charged per line. Non-profit student events word free day.

Headings

- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 1, 2002

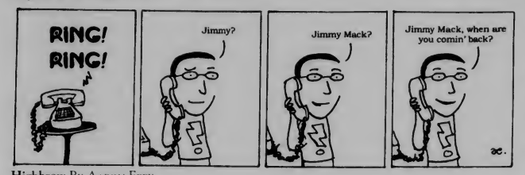
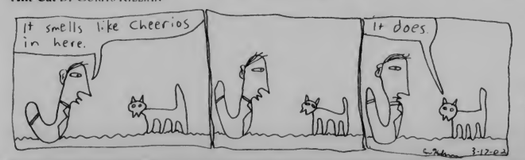
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour with Jim Lehrer (N)		American Family (In Stereo) (R)		Frontier House "Family Affair/The Reckoning" (N) (In Stereo) (R)		48 Hours "Lies (Part 1)" (In Stereo)		News (N)	Late Show (N)
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo) (R)		Amazing Race 2 (In Stereo) (R)		48 Hours "Lies (Part 1)" (In Stereo)		News (N)	Late Show (N)
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo) (R)		Amazing Race 2 (In Stereo) (R)		48 Hours "Lies (Part 1)" (In Stereo)		News (N)	Late Show (N)
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle (N)	My Wife-Kids	According-Jim	Drew Carey (N)	Drew Carey (N)	Primetime Special Edition (N)		News (N)	Nightline (N)
WLVI	56	Nanny (N)	Just Shoot Me	Friends (N)	Raymond	Dawson's Creek "After Hours"		Felicity "Time Will Tell" (N) (R)		News (N)		Friends (N)	Raymond
WHDH	7	News (N)	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Ed (N) (In Stereo) (R)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo) (N)		Law & Order "Foul Play" (N) (N)		News (N)	Tonight Show
WTXX	25	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends (N)	Just Shoot Me	Dawson's Creek "After Hours"		Felicity "Time Will Tell" (N) (R)		News (N)	Home Imp.	Blind Date (N)	Blind Date (N)
WVIT	30	News (N)	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Ed (N) (In Stereo) (R)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo) (N)		Law & Order "Foul Play" (N) (N)		News (N)	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons (R)	Friends (R)	Seinfeld (R)	Raymond	Malcolm-Mid.	Grounded-Life	Bernie Mac (N)	Greg-Bunny	News (N)		Raymond	Seinfeld (R)
WWLP	22	News (N)	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (N)	Ed (N) (In Stereo) (R)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo) (N)		Law & Order "Foul Play" (N) (N)		News (N)	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (N)		American Family (In Stereo) (R)		Frontier House "Family Affair/The Reckoning" (N) (In Stereo) (R)				News (N)	Nightline (N)
WGGB	40	News (N)	ABC News	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	My Wife-Kids	According-Jim	Drew Carey (N)	Drew Carey (N)	Primetime Special Edition (N)		News (N)	Tonight Show
WSBK	38	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (N)	Frasier (R)	Frasier (R)	Enterprise "Fight Or Flight" (N)		Wolf Lake (N)		News	Ent. Tonight	5th Wheel	Ship-mates
WYBS	68	Cosby Show	Roseanne (R)	Friends (R)	Roseanne (R)	Ripley's Believe It or Not!		★★ "Mortal Kombat" (1995, Adventure) (PA) Robin Shou				Ripley's Believe It or Not!
A&E	69	Law & Order "Expert" (N)		The View (In Stereo) (N)		Biography: George H.		Colombo: Caution—Murder Can Be Hazardous to Your Health"				Law & Order "Hit Pursuit" (R)
CNN	20	Moneyline (N)		Crossfire (N)		Live From... (N)	The Point (N)	Larry King Live (N)				Crossfire (N)	Moneyline (N)
COM	29	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show (N)	Geeks	★★ "Police Academy 2: Their First Assignment" (1985, Comedy)				South Park (N)	Insomniac (N)	Daily Show (R)	Sat. Night Live
DISC	60	Savage Paradise		Swamp Alligator		FBI Files "Unabomber" (N)		Jack the Ripper: Mystery		Summer of Terror: Son of Sam		FBI Files "Unabomber" (R)
ESPN	31	Sportscenter (N)		Major League Baseball Teams To Be Announced. (Live) (N)						Baseball Tonight (N) (N)		Sportscenter (N)
LIFE	62	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo) (R)		★ "The Wednesday Woman" (2000) Suspense) Mare-Ith Exeter		Melting-Video	MTV Special	Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	67	Real World	Real World	Direct Effect (In Stereo)		Sex Drive	Now What	Andy Dick	Andy Dick	Making-Video	MTV Special	Jackass	Dismissed
NICK	63	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats (R)	Spongeb	Told by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers	All in Family	All in Family
SCIFI	65	Star Trek "Patterns of Force" (R)		Star Trek "The Naked Time" (R)		Outer Limits "Last Anniversary"		★½ "Army Assassins" (1998, Science Fiction) George Wendt (R)				Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	66	Greatest Engineering Feat		Tales From the Tower		Monster Machines		Junkyard Wars "Solo Aqua		Panic Mechanics (N)		Monster Machines
TNT	59	NYPD Blue (In Stereo) (R)		Pretender "Homefront" (R)		NBA Basketball Playoffs First Round Teams To Be Announced. (Live) (N)						NBA Basketball Playoffs: First Round
USA	59	Walker, Texas Ranger (R)		JAG (In Stereo) (R)		★★ "The Substitute" (1996, Drama) Tom Berenger (R)						★★½ "The Substitute 2: School Of Of" (1998) Treat Williams (R)
HBO	33	(4:30)		★★★ "The Perfect Storm" (2000, Drama) George Clooney PG-13		Unfaithful		Sex and City	Sex and City	Six Feet Under (In Stereo) (R)		Small Town Esteem (In Stereo)
MAX	35	(5:00)		★★½ "The Net" (1995, Suspense) Sandra Bullock PG-13 (R)				★½ "Dude, Where's My Car?" (2000) PG-13 (R)		★★ "The Wedding Planner" (2001) PG-13 (R)		Nightcap (R)
SHOW	36	★½ "Mambo Cafe" (1998, Comedy) Thalia PG-13 (R)						★★★ "Whitewash: The Clarence Brandley Story" (2003, Drama) R		Soul Food "Fly Away Home" (R)		Resurrection "The Ghost" (R)



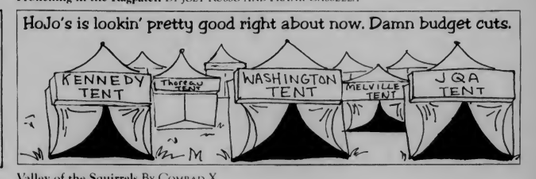
Adam and Eric By Ross Burach

Shut the Duck Up By Seany McSean



Highbrow By Aaron Eppy

Highbrow By Aaron Eppy



Ant-Cat By Curits Killian

Frolicking in the Ragpatch By Joey Russo and Frank Cassella

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Quote of the Day

"It's not premarital sex if you don't plan on marrying him."

-Meredith Rosenblum

Amherst Weather

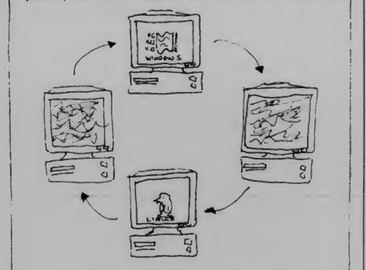
Wednesday	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 47 LOW: 29	HIGH: 49 LOW: 33	HIGH: 53 LOW: 29

Horoscopes

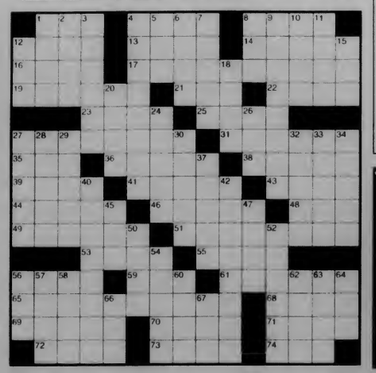
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) –Beware of the squirrels near the campus pond.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Now you know who your true friends are, finally.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) –Don't feed the swans!
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) –Don't open the umbrella inside. It's bad luck!
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Lovers' Lane is just a left turn away.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Don't be boggled, this day will bring lucky charms.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Long live the Busey family!
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – The best medicine is a spoonful of sugar.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – When given two choices, choose C.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Always dunk your cookies in milk.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Ribbit!
ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Beware of parking services.

THE HARP IRISH PUB
TONIGHT
COME PARTY at THE HARP
in North Amherst
"START YOUR OWN TRADITION"
163 Sunderland Rd.
Amherst, MA 01002
548-6900

ACROSS
1 Food steamer
4 Fellini or Montez
8 Robust
12 Written reminder
13 Part of NYU
14 Writer Zola
16 Necklace part
17 Car adjunct
19 Not anchored
21 Make a mistake
22 Clever ploy
23 Melodies
25 Go it alone
27 Studio
31 Casseroles
35 Detective's cry
36 Wall painting
38 Blockade
39 Pouches
41 Thaws
43 Novelist Seton
44 Strut
46 Fire alarm
48 "Morning Edition" netwk.
49 Continued story
51 Tumblers
53 Half-moon tide
55 Queen's quarters
56 White-hair wearer
59 Pretix for angle
61 Horse operas
65 Capless
68 Part of a foot
69 Way over a fence
70 Singer Braxton
71 Bald head
72 Finales
73 Unit bit
74 Mind-reading



DOWN
1 Do garden work
2 General Bradley
3 Brown bear
4 Radiant
5 Out — — limb



PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

F	I	L	L		M	A	C	A	W		E	L	S	A
O	B	E	Y		I	M	A	G	E		G	O	W	N
R	E	A	R		S	I	D	E	S		S	H	A	D
E	X	P	I	R	E	D		S	T	A	N	D	B	Y
			C	U	R			E	G	O
A	F	A	B	L	E		D	R	A	G	O	N	S
S	E	A	L		Y	U	K	O	N		S	C	A	T
T	N	T			B	E	D			C	O	O
I	C	E	D		M	I	N	O	R		R	U	M	P
R	E	S	I	D	U	E		S	A	F	A	R	I	S
			A	N	T			I	A	N
C	L	I	M	A	T	E		C	L	A	C	K	E	D
E	R	O		S	L	O	W		W	E	R	O
A	N	O	N		R	I	A	T	A		E	L	M	O
R	A	N	D		S	A	S	S	Y		S	P	A	R

12-24-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

A.I. By Joseph Hession

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Canadian Cheese Soup

Chicken Burrito

Fried Clams

Bean Burrito (vegan)

DINNER

Canadian Cheese Soup

Chicken Cacciatore

London Broil

Native American Stew (vegan)

Vegetable Cacciatore (vegan) (W Basics)

Today's Staff

Melissa Hummel

Scott Eldridge II

Jim Pignatiello

Riki Alcid

Mike Kulak
Cara Horowitz

DAILY COLLEGIAN

SPORTS

COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: ERIC SODERSTROM

Byrne steps out of the shadows

Walk-on defender making a name for herself as lacrosse co-captain

By Justin Pearson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Shy plays what may be the least glamorous position in all of sports. As a defender, Bridget Byrne, a junior co-captain for the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team rarely gets her name in the papers. It's goals and saves that grab all the headlines, not caused turnovers and ground balls.

But while the play of Byrne on the field may not catch the eye of the average fan, her personality off the field certainly will. She is devoid of the intimidating static that is associated with men's defenders like Tom Fallon and Matt McFarland of the Minutemen, replacing it with a warm and welcoming smile.

"I laugh a lot. I talk a lot. I make fun of people," Byrne said. "I'm not like a hard-ass, or at least I try not to be. I guess a defender is normally supposed to be a tough guy, but I don't like it when people don't like me."

"Bridget's personality is completely the opposite [of the typical defender]," added her head coach, Phil Barnes. "She's someone who enjoys everything she does and is always quick to make a joke. She's constantly laughing, she enjoys life everyday."

Three years ago, Byrne arrived in the Pioneer Valley from the small town of Glenside, Pa. As a lowly recruited defender from Abington High School, Byrne received no scholarship offers despite a distinguished career for the Galloping Ghosts, and was unsure of whether she would even play at the college level. She was a four-year letter winner for the Ghosts and earned a spot on the all-conference team while winning team MVP during her senior year. But after considering attending schools such as Indiana, which did not have a lacrosse team, or Bloomsburg (Division II), Byrne finally decided on heading east to Amherst and walking on with the Minutewomen.

"One of the girls I played in high school with went here," Byrne said. "So I visited her and I just loved the school and that was what made me want to come here just to play and hang out with her."

That friend was Kate Gates who was an attacker for the Minutewomen from 1997 to 2000. She played together with Byrne at Abington in 1996 and the duo would join forces once again in 2000. However their chances to be on the field together this time would be limited. Gates appeared in just four games scoring a pair of goals and collecting five ground balls after recovering from knee surgery.

Byrne's opportunities to show what she was capable of were few and farther between as the Minutewomen had one of the nation's best defenses. During the season UMass was the nation's scoring defense, allowing just 6.75 goals per contest with senior goalie Jen Nardi anchoring the most stingy defense in Atlantic 10 and Northeast Region All-American honors. Seniors like Colleen Wales and Lynne Young, a four-time Northeast Region All-American, were also firmly entrenched in the UMass defensive fold, restricting Byrne's playing time, but leading the team to its first ever A-10 Championship and providing her with fabulous mentors.

"I watched our defense, [that year] with Lynne Young and Colleen Wales just to see how they did it," Byrne said. "It made me understand the defense so much better until it clicked. It took me almost my whole freshman year to finally understand what was going on. It helped to see how our defense was supposed to be played so that once I actually got out there I had something to push myself to be like."

One year would be all that Byrne was granted to watch and learn as she was thrust into a starting role at the beginning of her sophomore year. Young and Wales graduated leaving the Minutewomen thin on the backline and forcing Barnes, the second year coach to rely on Byrne. She started all 16 games, finishing fourth on the team with 19 caused turnovers, which, also collecting 13 groundballs and often being asked to shut down the opposition's best attacker.

But perhaps her most gratifying moment came on April 19 in a 19-2 win over Albany. On that day Byrne, a lifelong defender, tallied her first career goal on just her second ever shot.

Her growth both on and off the field during the 2001 season led Barnes to name Byrne as one of his two co-captains for 2002 along with classmate Jada Emers. Emers and Byrne are two of eight juniors on the Minutewomen this season, and with no seniors on the squad, all eight have been asked to step into crucial leadership roles, which they have done with aplomb.

Once again Byrne has anchored a strong UMass defense which is allowing just nine goals per contest and, despite a three-game losing streak to close out the regular season, she has the Minutewomen poised and ready heading into this weekend's A-10 Tournament in Pittsburgh.

Personally, she ranks second on the squad in caused turnovers and collected her second career goal (a game-tying tally) in the second half of the 10-8 loss to Richmond, the Minutewomen's first round opponent on Friday.

Just two years ago this open and outgoing defender was on the sidelines learning from some of the best backs in the nation. Now she is the one mentoring the underclassmen trying to make them as good as her predecessors made her.

"I don't want to be like another coach out there, or a mother-she'll try out to be like 'you're doing this wrong' but I try and play in a way that says 'if I can do it than you can do it'" Byrne said. "But sometimes I try and do everything so I just have to step back and worry about myself."

Women's Lax stand-out Bridget Byrne has made a career of matching up against the other team's top competitor.

BU up next for streaking softball

By Andrew Merritt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

All hope for the Massachusetts softball team to make it into playing by one thing

The weather.

Yesterday, the Minutewomen's clash with the Boston College Eagles was cancelled due to the uncertain weather conditions experienced in Amherst.

Today, the Maroon and White gets back on the field to take on the Boston University Terriers in a 3:00 p.m. showdown at the Softball Complex.

The Terriers bring two America East award winners to town. Freshmen Jamie Haas and Julie Hennicke were selected as Player and Rookie of the Week, respectively.

BU boasts a 23-20 overall record, and a conference leading 19-3 record against America East opponents.

"This is a game we look forward to playing," Head Coach Elaine Sortino said. "I'm looking forward to it, and the team is too."

Meanwhile, UMass is riding high after securing the Atlantic 10 regular season title. The Minutewomen swept Dayton to clinch, and proved they can win the close ones, squeaking out a 3-2 victory in the last half of Sunday's doubleheader.

"I think it's a great testimony to the character of the team," Sortino said. "This team has great character, and character and team mentality separates the champions from the rest."

Meanwhile, the Minutewomen had yesterday to rest up for the final five games of the season, and rest isn't exactly an enemy to a team that has played 53 games in less than three months.

"The rest is a good thing," Sortino said. "It gives the kids time to catch up on their classes and papers. They're under a lot of academic stress now, so the rest is welcome."

However, the team didn't treat it as an entire day off, and tended to some small business.

"We did a little hitting today," Sortino said. "We did the stuff we needed to get done organizationally."

That rest will come in handy against the Terriers, who took both ends of their own doubleheader with Hartford Saturday. BU won both games 2-0 on stellar pitching from Juniors Robyn Horrick and Tiffany Finateri, who allowed only three hits over the course of the two games.

Boston University's pitching is second in the America East with a 1.35 team ERA, and Hennicke and Horrick sit 1-2 in opposing batting average.

Of course, UMass has some powerful weaponry to counteract that. Junior Kaila Holtz was named A-10 Co-Pitcher of the Week for her efforts against Dayton and Connecticut. Those efforts earned her a near-perfect game against the Huskies, who produced a late base hit in the 3-0 UMass victory.

Provided the wacky New England weather can hold off for two hours today, the Minutewomen will have a chance to prove their worth against another conference's powerhouse.

Catcher Jamie Cahalan has been a rock behind the plate for the Minutewomen, and has also blasted four triples and three homers on the year.

First round of NBA playoffs nearly over

Inside the NBA with David Rose

The NBA Playoffs are into day number 11, and fortunately if you thought that you had missed the first couple of games of the Conference Semifinals, don't sweat it, cause for reasons unknown to any sane human being, the first round is not over yet. Eleven days and still not done with the first round, the NBA apparently is doing its best to make this question arise: "Which came first, the end of the NBA Playoffs or Rocky VI?" However, despite the fact that the playoffs drag on, some wish they will never end.

Paul Pierce

After a game late last year in Los Angeles, Shaquille O'Neal called the Celtics forward, "The Most Hated Truth." While those would not be the words of choice for some people to get their point across, the rest of the NBA is starting to find out why. "The Big Aristotle" made that type of statement.

Pierce has been the rock for the Celtics all season, but may not get the publicity as other big name players such as O'Neal, Iverson, Bryant or McGrady. Against Iverson and the 76ers in the first round, Pierce has averaged 28.3 points and 10.3 rebounds per game, leading the C's to a 2-1 series lead going into game four tonight in Philadelphia. However, Boston fans do not settle for 2-1 series leads against Philadelphia. They now expect their team to do more and Pierce is the guy to do it.

However, Boston fans looking ahead to a NBA Finals match-up against LA, let's win a series first and then maybe the talk will start.

Dirk Nowitzki – Let's examine a trade from 1998. Milwaukee traded the rights to its first round draft pick to Dallas for Robert "Tractor" Traylor. The first round pick for the Bucks that year, Nowitzki.

Considering Ray Allen, Sam Cassell and the Bucks are playing golf, Traylor now rides the pine for the New Orleans, I mean Charlotte Hornets and Nowitzki is putting up numbers that can be only rivaled by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. I wonder who got the better of that deal?

Nowitzki went postal against the T-Wolves in the first round, accounting for 33.5 points and 15.7 rebounds per game. His 30 points and 15 rebounds in four straight playoff games is only matched by Kareem, who accomplished that feat twice.

He has the Mavericks heading for a second round showdown against the top-seeded Sacramento Kings and possibly a showdown against the Lakers in the Western Conference Finals. Many people believe that the Mavs are the best chance to knock off the Lakers. If the German Giant can continue his hot shooting, do not bet against them.

Jason Kidd – At this time last season, Kidd was fighting off charges of a domestic disturbance with his wife, a dispute with Phoenix Suns owner Jerry Colangelo and a season that ended with a loss to the Kings in the opening round.

One year later, Kidd might be the MVP of the league, the best point guard in basketball and leading the Nets into a game four contest last night with Indiana where they had a 2-1 lead in the series.

The Pacers' game plan was simple enough; make Kidd think shoot first and pass second and it has worked to

Turn to NBA, page 8

Frailty DISTURBS
ARTS PAGE 5.

A LOOK AT RELIGION
ED/OP PAGE 4.

SOFTBALL TAKES OUT THE WIN
S PAGE

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

THURSDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY EIGHT ☆☆☆☆☆ 5.2.02

Bush puts student loans in jeopardy

By Catherine Turner
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The Bush administration announced on Sunday that it was making plans to make cuts to the federal student loans program. Specifically, the administration is seeking to end the fixed interest rates on consolidated loans.

The U.S. Public Interest Research Group maintains that the Federal government provides 70 percent of all postsecondary student aid, 58 percent in the form of loans, and that in 2001, over 1.7 million students graduated with college debt. Of those, 680,000 consolidated their debt with low fixed interest rates in the Federal Loan Consolidation Program.

Bush, who is facing a $100 billion budget deficit, believes that an estimated $1.5 billion could be saved if the program is cut.

The proposal is to end the program that allows college and graduate students to consolidate their student loans at a fixed, federally subsidized rate and take up to 30 years to pay back.

The fixed rate would be replaced by a variable, or floating, interest rate that would be determined by market forces. This variable rate would rise or fall depending on the economy. The hope of the proposal is that the variable rate would be so unpopular that students would be less likely to consolidate and thus save the government money.

Student advocates believe that if the program is cut, the interest rates will rise drastically for the approximately 700,000 borrowers each year.

According to Senator Paul Wellstone (D-MN), the average college graduate of a public university typically has $14,000 in debt, and graduates of private schools have up to $20,000. By cutting the fixed interest rate, a graduate with $20,000 worth of debt that would be paid off over a 20-year span would end up paying an extra $9,000. A graduate paying off a $30,000 loan over the same payback period of 20 years would pay an extra $13,000.

"This is a really distorted priority – all for the sake of Robin Hood and reverse tax cuts with so much of the benefit going to the top one percent of the wealthiest of citizens," Wellstone said.

Critics of consolidation believe that the program only benefits the wealthiest of students and graduates, allowing doctors and lawyers to consolidate their loans at the expense of the government.

However, proponents of consolidation point out that only three percent of all college graduates go on to pursue post-graduate degrees such as those associated with doctors and lawyers, and the majority of the people who use the program are middle-income and low-income Americans who count on the system to keep their payments low.

Democrats use this latest move by the Bush administration as an example of his failure to meet campaign promises of supporting education and his "No Child Left Behind" education reform law.

In addition to attempting to eliminate low interest rates, Bush has also failed to increase Pell Grants to his promised levels. According to information gathered by the office of Senator Kennedy (D-MA), Bush promised to raise funding for Pell Grants to $5,100 per recipient. He froze the Pell Grant maximum award at $3,850.

Turn to LOANS page 4

Bob Marcum surveying Garber Field

Marcum to retire

By Matthew F. Sacco
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Athletic Director Bob Marcum is the latest to add his name to the University of Massachusetts' early-retirement list. After nearly a decade at the helm of the UMass athletic program, Marcum becomes one of the most visible officials to take advantage of the Commonwealth's early retirement program.

"We've had a great run, but I've been thinking about making this move," Marcum said. "With a new Chancellor [John Lombardi] on board, it just seemed that the timing was right."

Marcum's tenure ebbed and flowed success as one of New England's high profile athletic departments. Although Marcum led the program to 70 NCAA Tournament appearances including a Final Four for men's basketball in 1996 and a Division I-AA National Championship for football in 1998, his time at UMass was somewhat marred by unfinished projects and a damaging NCAA violation.

So while Marcum enjoyed success, his career was counterbalanced by a voided Final Four appearance, a failure to make the move to Division I-A football and the unsuccessful improvement of many of the campus' below average facilities.

But that is not to say Marcum has not made some strides since he arrived in the Pioneer Valley. Under his watch, UMass teams have won over 60 percent of their games. Men's basketball has increased notoriety and annually plays nationally televised games; the hockey program has been reinstated and looks to continue with improvement under Marcum-hired Don "Tod" Cahoon; and the Men's Lacrosse program has been cleaned up and fixed in the right direction under Greg Cannella. If there is one positive stamp that Marcum put on this program, it was attention to the smaller programs. Field Hockey is a regular contender for the NCAA Tournament; softball likewise with the College World Series; and both Water Polo and Gymnastics teams are nationally ranked on an annual basis.

"What Bob Marcum has been able to achieve for nearly a decade can be summarized with one word: excellence," UMass President William M. Bulger said.

Marcum has put the plans in motion for the completion of two new facilities on campus, including the soccer-softball complex that is expected to be finished this summer and a new student recreation center, which does not yet have a timeline in place. Marcum, however, will not be around to see his plans come to fruition.

And with the recent University-wide budget cuts, Marcum's tenure ends on a sour note. With the athletic department already strapped for cash and facing bigger setbacks, Marcum and his staff made the decision to cut seven sports including Final Four participant men's Water Polo and top ten ranked Men's Gymnastics.

Before the cuts were made, U.S. News & World Report named UMass one of the top 20 athletic departments in the country. But with its number of sports marked down to 22, only four above the national average, and without a truly dominant revenue sport or a notable football program, it is likely that UMass will once again drop into the realm of afterthought.

Even with the gains he has made, Marcum will likely be remembered for what he didn't accomplish. He didn't make the move to I-A football; he didn't sustain the success of the basketball program; and he failed to upgrade facilities. All this while New England rival Connecticut made the move in football and continues to be a power in basketball and sports the top set of sports facilities in the region. It may not be a fair was to judge the success of an Athletic Director, but the pressure from Alumni and from fans make it the only acceptable measuring stick.

Interim Chancellor Marcellette G. Williams noted that a director will be appointed on a temporary basis, and a search committee will be assigned by the end of next week.

Tibetan Treasures

The Gyuto Monks visited the campus on Wednesday. They are performing on Friday night at the Northampton Calvin Theater at 8pm.

SGA reaches agreement on budget

By Kristin Shrewsbury
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The 2002-51 Fiscal Budget Act was passed unanimously by the Student Government Association Senate.

The Senate, which convened for their second to last meeting of the year, had little to debate regarding the 2002-03 student budget. The budget was put out by the Ways of Means committee under the direction of Chair Mike Taugher, a veteran to the committee.

"This was the first year that I can remember where there was no opposition to the budget," Speaker Aaron Saunders said. "There are always a few questions, especially when you're dealing with 1.6 million dollars, and they did a ton of work, and it showed through the budget."

Members of the Senate also took time to discuss safety issues at the University of Massachusetts, specifically in regards to two rapes on campus occurring at the Fine Arts Center. Members brought up issues surrounding the Administration's lack of involvement and concern towards the alleged incidents.

"We had a meeting with Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs Javier Cevallos, and basically they [Administration] have taken no precautions," Student President David Carr said. "This is going to be a huge issue for us."

Other members expressed their concern over the lack of student information regarding the recent events. Senators questioned the motives behind the lack of administrative support and action taken to ensure safety for students.

"I don't feel that students should have to be taken the lead on making this campus safe," Associate Speaker Bill Powers said. "Students should be able to take for granted that they can walk safely around this campus."

Saunders further expressed his concerns regarding the issues by explaining that if the Administration does not take action, that the SGA would.

"The last thing the University wants to do is to say anything, especially with new students coming onto our campus right now," Saunders said. "Students aren't going to check the UMass Public Safety website to get information. They need to be told what is going on, and I will personally go up to every new student group on campus and hand them copies of information regarding these assaults. It is unacceptable that that people cannot feel safe on this campus."

The 2003 Massachusetts state budget came out for the up and coming fiscal year, which also drew attention to members of the Senate. The budget released stated that for the 2003 school year, there is a cut of $29 million to UMass higher education.

"We were cut 29 million dollars for the next year, and I definitely feel that it is a scare tactic," Saunders said. "People need to keep on sticking it to the legislator so that next year when revenue's increase we can be at the table to fight for the money that we deserve."

Two motions were presented at last night's Senate meeting from the Finance committee requesting the allocation of $950 to the Haitian Culture Night, an event being held later this month by the Haitian American Students Association (HASA). The senate debated the allocation regarding an amendment to give the Registered Student Organization (RSO) more than what was allocated by the committee, which was originally $1500.

"This was the second time that HASA has come to us requesting money, and we've been cut almost half of our finance reserves account for next year, and the money we have left goes into that account," Senator Brian Thompson said. "They came to our meeting expecting to get the money, and I find it scary when RSOs come to us expecting that there will be no problems getting funding."

Other members disagreed, explaining that the SGA has the money and has no reason not to give it to RSOs that put on campus events. Members felt that the suggested increase of $250 would not be a problem to give to HASA.

"This event is expected to have 500 to 600 students attend," Powers said. "The money was put in finance reserves for RSO's to come and get, and if the money is going to help the event, why not give it to them."

The Senate voted against the $250 increase in funding but did vote to grant HASA the $950 originally passed by the Finance committee.

Members of the Senate also passed an allocation of $1160 to the International Relations Club to fund their annual United Nations conferences.

Senators will meet for their last meeting of the semester next week at 7 p.m. in room 168 C of the Campus Center.

Safety a student concern

By Melissa Hammel
COLLEGIAN STAFF

This is the forth part of a weeklong series addressing the issue of sexual assault.

This month is dedicated to the awareness of sexual assaults both on the University of Massachusetts-Amherst campus and across the nation. As a way of focusing upon the importance of safety, The Collegian is running a story each day this week highlighting different safety issues on campus and the groups that deal with them.

Campus safety is a major concern for both individual students and groups on campus. The ability to feel safe when walking at night remains a pivotal issue for many.

"You come to UMass for an education," student trustee-elect Bill Powers explained. "If students are afraid to go to the library, it is obvious that they do not feel safe."

Powers explained that student safety was a major issue for all people on campus and is something that the Student Government Association (SGA) has been working on actively since the elimination of the security vans.

"The public safety office needs to become more assessable towards preventative measures," Powers said. "They have a less visible presence with the elimination of the escort van."

The van, which was eliminated due to budget cuts, was replaced by PVTA busses running later hours on campus in order to allow students to have a way to get home to their dormitories late at night. The SGA fought hard against the elimination of the vans, passing a number of motions to try to keep the service alive on campus.

While Powers maintains that the later hours provided by the PVTA as being one possible solution, the busses do not feature a trained member of the police force like the vans did.

"It is a solution, obviously, but it may not be the best solution," Powers explained. "We want the best that is available. When it comes to safety, you don't want to cut corners, and

Turn to AWARENESS page 1

DIVERSITY CALENDAR

Event of the Week

UMASS – An evening of ALANA Poetry will be held in the Campus Center's Graduate Lounge on Thursday, May 2, from 7 to 9 p.m. Invited poets from the area will present spoken word at the event, and food will be served.

FILMS

AMHERST – The film Ich bin meine eigene Frau (I am my own Woman), will be screened at Amherst College's Merrill Science Center 4 on Thursday, May 2, at 4 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. The film, which chronicles the life of a German woman through Nazi Germany, WWII, Communist East Germany and reunification, is part of the German Film Series. This event is free and open to the public.

UMASS – Marcel Camus's film Black Orpheus will be screened in room 163 of the Campus Center on Friday, May 3, at 7 p.m. The film is an updated version of the Orpheus-Eurydice legend played against the background of Carnival in Brazil. Admission is $2.

UMASS – The film Cultural Criticism and Transformation, featuring noted author bell hooks, will be screened in room 805 of the Campus Center on Monday, May 5, at 7 p.m. This event is sponsored by the Radical Students Union, the Black Students Union and the Office of ALANA Affairs.

UMASS – The Inner Tour, a documentary about a group of Palestinian tourists from the West Bank and Gaza taking a tour through the state of Israel, will be screened in room 163C of the Campus Center on Tuesday, May 7 at 7 p.m. This event is free.

SOUTH HADLEY – A free screening of the Indian film Monsoon Wedding will take place at South Hadley's Tower Theaters on Wednesday, May 8, at 7:30 p.m. The film, a comedy, details the hijinks surrounding an arranged marriage.

AMHERST – Copeland Fellow Fatima El-Tayeb will present her film, Everything Will Be Fine, a black German lesbian comedy, at 6 p.m. on Thursday, May 9 in Amherst College's Morrill 4.

PERFORMANCES

MOUNT HOLYOKE – The 25th Annual German Theatre Festival and Competition will be held in Mary Woolley Hall's Chapin Auditorium on Thursday, May 2, beginning at 9 a.m. The event will feature dramatic presentations 15 minutes in length and delivered in German. A jury consisting of secondary school German teachers, members of Smith's and Mount Holyoke's German Studies faculty, members of Mount Holyoke College Theater department faculty as well as representatives of the German Consulate and the Goethe Institute of Boston will judge each presentation.

UMASS – Crossing John at the Crossroads, a multi-media theater piece created by UMass Theater Professor Gil McCauley and composer Bill Lowe, will be performed at the Fine Arts Center's Rand Theater on Thursday, May 2, Friday, May 3, and Saturday, May 4, at 8 p.m. Performances will also be held the following week at 8 p.m. on Thursday, May 9, Friday, May 10 and Saturday, May 11. The piece, centered on a young man's search for wisdom, draws on multi-cultural influences and blends text, music, video and dance. Tickets are range from $4 to $7.

HAMPSHIRE – Young Masters – An Evening of Hindustani Music will be performed on Thursday, May 2 in Hampshire College's Music and Dance Recital Hall at 8 p.m. Performers will include Anirban Dasgupta, Sugato Nag and Tanmoy Bose. This event is free with student identification.

UMASS – A Celebration of Diversity Through Music will be held at the UMass Campus Pond on Friday, May 3, from noon to 1 p.m. and 5 to 10 p.m. The schedule is as follows: The Uplifters will play from noon to 1 p.m. Gordon Stone and Mike Daves will play from 5 to 6 p.m. The Henry Geddes Band will play from 6 to 7 p.m. Regie Gibson will play from 7 to 8 p.m. Celesphere will play from 8 to 9 p.m. Odeon will play from 9 to 10 p.m.

MOUNT HOLYOKE – Dance Du Ventre: Dance of the Belly, an evening of Middle Eastern dancing, will take place in Mount Holyoke's Blanchard Campus Center on Friday, May 3 at 7 p.m. This event is free.

UMASS – Bill Shannon, the "Crutchmaster," will perform in Bowker Auditorium on Friday, May 3, at 8 p.m. Shannon's disability-based crutch technique is described as "a continuous exploration of street performance and contemporary club culture." Tickets are $12 for the general public and $5 for students.

SMITH – A Gamelan concert will be performed on Saturday, May 4, at 4 p.m. in Sage Hall's Sweeney Concert Hall. Javanese dancers will accompany Smith's Javanese music ensemble in a performance of "Lawung," the traditional Javanese lance dance. The piece is directed by Sumarsam and Urip Sri Maeny. This event is free and open to the public.

AMHERST – A Jhankaar performance will be held in Arms Music Center's Buckley Recital Hall on Wednesday, May 8, at 8 p.m. This event is a Southeast Asian student cultural show. Admission is free.

CELEBRATIONS

MOUNT HOLYOKE – Holi, the Hindu festival of color, will be celebrated at Mount Holyoke's Skinner Green on Saturday, May 4 beginning at 1 p.m.

RALLIES

UMASS – A speak-out, titled, Loud, Black, and Proud, will be held on the Student Union steps on Wednesday, May 8, from noon to 1 p.m. The speak-out will feature a speaker from the Black Panther Collective.

RELIGIOUS

UMASS – The Jewish Student Union and the UMass Hillel House will hold the Senior Awards Service on Sunday, May 5, at 1 p.m. in Hillel House. Graduating seniors who contributed to Jewish life on campus will be honored.

LECTURES/DISCUSSIONS

SOUTH HADLEY – Author Sylvia Brownrigg will read from her latest novel, "Pages For You," in Odyssey Bookshop on Tuesday, May 7, at 7 p.m. Odyssey Bookshop is located at 9 College Street, South Hadley, in the Village Commons. This event is sponsored by the Mount Holyoke English Department.

AMHERST – Professor Jon Goldberg-Hiller of the University of Hawaii will deliver a seminar, titled "Subjectivity is a Citizen: Deconstructing Civil Rights," on Wednesday, May 8, at 4:30 p.m. in room 100 of Amherst College's Clark House. Attendees will discuss Goldberg-Hiller's paper, which reflects on two recent debates over civil rights in Hawaii. To receive a copy of the paper, e-mail ljspalluzzi@amherst.edu.

SOUTH HADLEY – A book signing and reception with author Joan Cocks will be held on Thursday, May 9, at 4 p.m. in Odyssey Bookshop. Cocks, a Politics Professor at Mount Holyoke, is the author of "Passion and Paradox: Intellectuals Confront the National Question." The bookshop is located at 9 College Street, South Hadley in the Village Commons.

SOUTH HADLEY – Elizabeth Hartmann, Director of the Population and Development Program at Hampshire College, will read from her novel, "The Truth About Fire," on Thursday, May 9, at 7 p.m. in Odyssey Bookshop. The bookshop is located at 9 College Street, South Hadley in the Village Commons.

EXHIBITS

UMASS – "Boxes and Walls: The Oppression Experiment," an interactive art exhibit, will be held in room 168 of the Campus Center from 2 to 6 p.m. on Sunday, May 5 and 5:30 to 9:30 p.m. on Monday, May 6, through Thursday, May 9. The exhibit details the oppression felt by minority groups. Admission is free.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Daily Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Sam Wilkinson Editor-in-Chief
Matthew F. Sacco Managing Editor
Amy Garganta Business Manager
Shimauli Dave Production Manager
Jake Lilien Diversity Editor
Mike Kulak Editorial Production Manager
Jason Smith Advertising Manager

Mike Delano Arts & Living Editor
Matthew Despres Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jennifer Eastwood Features Editor
Catherine Turner News Editor
Tibora Girczyc-Blum Photography Editor
Eric Suderstrom Sports Editor
Brent Siniawski Finance Manager
Charlie Jacco Distribution Manager

Morgan Taylor Advertising Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Cara Murphy Assistant Finance Manager
Shawn Daugherty Assistant Business Manager
Megan Shannon Assistant Advertising Manager

ZIONISM IS THE NATIONAL LIBERATION MOVEMENT OF THE JEWISH PEOPLE.

After the Jews were forced into exile from the Land of Israel by the Romans 2000 years ago, they were continuously persecuted and denied basic human rights in the lands of their dispersion. By giving Jews self-government in Israel, Zionism guarantees Jews their basic rights - including the right to live in peace with their neighbors.

We support Israel in its continuing quest for peace.

WHEREVER WE STAND, WE STAND WITH ISRAEL.

HILLEL

ADL ◆ AIPAC ◆ American Jewish Committee ◆ Caravan for Democracy ◆ Committee for Accuracy in Middle East Reporting in America ◆ Hamagshimin ◆ JCPA ◆ Jewish Agency for Israel ◆ JNF ◆ Kesher/Union of American Hebrew Congregations ◆ KOACH - The United Synagogue of Conservative Judaism ◆ Media Watch International ◆ USD/Hagshama.

Brought to you by Hillel: The Foundation for Jewish Campus Life with the support of the Charles and Lynn Schusterman Family Foundation.

To learn more about Israel and to take action, go to www.hillel.org.

awareness

continued from page 1

this is cutting corners."

Powers mentioned that his biggest concern revolved around all of the area events that were coming up during the month of May, such as Southwest week and Bowl Day.

"We have to look out for each other," Powers said. "We are on a campus but we do not have a strong campus community. A lot of this comes down to taking care of ourselves. We have to take responsibility for our own safety."

Britta Anson, a sophomore History major, had similar thoughts on safety. She explained that she usually feels safe on campus but not at all times.

"Generally I feel safe, but not at night," she said. "I try not to walk alone at night on campus."

She explained that she takes extra precautions in order to ensure her own safety.

"I try to avoid situations where I would have to walk alone at night," she said. "And when I do, I try to walk near groups of people in well-lit areas."

Brenda Huard, a freshman School of Management major made similar comments explaining that she avoids situations that she considers dangerous in order to feel safe walking around on campus.

"I don't walk around at night by myself," Huard said.

HA HA

As an advertisement for the 6th Annual New England College Comedy Jam, the members of Mission Improv offered free boat rids in the Campus Pond. The Intercollegiate festival is happening on Friday in Herter 231 and Saturday in the Campus Center Auditorium.

loans

continued from page 1

"The purchasing power of the maximum Pell grant has eroded from 84 percent of the cost of a public university in 1976 to 40 percent of average fixed costs (tuition and fees, room and board) at four-year public colleges (15 percent at four-year private colleges) today. A $7,000 grant would restore the Pell Grant's purchasing power to the 1976 level," the office stated.

"State colleges facing the worse state budget crunch in a decade, and this is across the country, are proposing the largest tuition hikes in recent history," Kennedy said. "On top of this, we find an effort by the bush administration to reduce support for the college loans and cutting back on Pell Grants. Which is really shortchanging America's future and effectively increase the average student debt by $10,000 over the course of the student loans. This is devastating, and it's affectively a tax—a tax on low income and middle income families."

Meanwhile students around the country have begun to take action against the proposal. Public outcry, along with a unified Democratic effort to block the plan, forced the administration to back down from their original statement.

The New York Times reported yesterday that the administration conceded that the proposal had little chance of succeeding. Despite the encouraging news, Democrats continue to be on the defensive about Bush's plans to "undermine" education, both higher and elementary.

A rally against Bush's Education cuts is taking place in Washington D.C. today. Senators Wellstone, Kennedy, Murray, Dodd and Reed are all scheduled to be there and speak, along with labor unions, students and teachers.

"The future of our country really depends on good schools that help young people fulfill their potential, and I think we all recognize that there's bad news on the horizon for America's college students," Kennedy said.

BEER TASTING
Thursday, May 2nd 6 to 8 pm
FEATURING
New Castle Brown Ale
$2.00 Draft Beers
Prizes - Prizes - Prizes
ELIJAH BOLTWOOD'S TAVERN at
The Lord Jeffery Inn
30 Boltwood Ave., Amherst on the Town Common
253-2576 www.lordjefferyinn.com

Castaway Lounge
Will proudly present another successful
Amateur Night
Monday May 6th starting at 7 pm
PENTHOUSE PET DOMINIQUE ST.CROIX
◆ Cash prizes awarded
◆ All ladies over 18 must apply in person
◆ Open on Mondays at 3pm with 10 Beautiful Exotic Entertainers; Food and Prizes given away
Open Tuesdays Saturday 11am 1am
VIP Room available for private engagement parties
Phone# 413. 665. 8733

ALERT
GRE® Changes Ahead!
On October 1st, 2002, two essays will replace the GRE Analytical section.
Learn more about the GRE
Join us for a FREE test strategy seminar
Saturday, May 4th, 11:00am-12:30pm
at the Amherst Kaplan Center
Call or visit us online today to enroll!
KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST
kaptest.com
®GRE is a registered trademark of the Educational Testing Service

Fully paid tuition and stipend for high academic achievers in science and engineering admitted to the inaugural class of the Master of Science
program in the Management of Technology
at the
University of New Hampshire
Whittemore School of Business and Economics
- 2-year trimester format
- Focused on managing technological change and the development and commercialization of new technologies
- Emphasis on team projects and problem solving
- Industry sponsored projects and internships
- Classes scheduled to begin September 2002 upon review by the University System of New Hampshire

Expand your potential and put your career on the fast track by joining the inaugural class.
For more details call 603-862-3370
or email warren.lackstrom@unh.edu at the Hamel Center for the Management of Technology and Innovation
www.mba.unh.edu

ELAINE'S STORY

Staying conscious through the entirety of a service was a major feat in the church where I grew up. My sisters and I kept ourselves entertained watching the alter boys nod off in the front of the church. My parents are quite devout, so even though we were bored to tears, we went to the 8 AM service every Sunday without fail. Our hearts leaped with joy when we heard the words, "Go in peace..." which meant it was time to go home.

I also went to classes at the church every week until I started going to a private high school where I took religion classes. For a long time, I really embraced the religion, but knew not what it meant to have a relationship with God. Somehow I thought that the routine of going to church and going through the motions was making me a better person. I was a good girl, and I planned on being one for the rest of my life. But to me at the time, the religion was just ritual. I had a list of stuff I did that I thought somehow gave me character and made me a good person. For all my Christian education, somehow I missed the part about knowing and following God. Either I wasn't paying attention, or no one told me, but I never learned what it really meant to have faith.

When I was 17, my family met up with some hard times. While we were all struggling to stay sane, my mother was the one person in the family that we all went to with our problems. I remember looking to her that year and seeing that she not only had to bear her own troubles, but she took ours on, too. I couldn't understand how she could have that kind of strength. When I realized that her faith in God made her strong, I still was confused.

For all her faith, she still faced these hardships.

I decided if God wasn't going to take away my problems, I wanted nothing to do with Him. I'd find my own strength and do it without Him. So that year I turned my back on God. After that, it was only a matter of time before I considered myself an open-minded atheist.

When I came to UMASS, I met a guy. He was here on exchange for one semester, so we only dated for about a month before he went home. We never really talked about religion while he was here, but shortly after he left, he informed me that he had started going to church again. As time passed it became clear to me that his faith was becoming very important to him – even to the point where he sometimes quoted the Bible in emails, which really weirded me out.

My main objection to believing in God was that nothing about Him could be proven by any method I trusted. I wasn't hostile to the idea that a god had created the world, but the idea that Jesus could be real was something I strongly doubted. What started to change my thinking was that this boyfriend of mine believed in Jesus and happened to be one of the most intelligent people I knew. So I began to think there might be some merit to this Jesus thing after all.

I was skeptical about asking for help, because I was afraid of getting mixed up with a cult or being subject to institutional views rather than the real truth.

At the same time, I was confused. I knew that my relationship with this guy could never work as long as I wasn't Christian. But I didn't want to join a religion for another person. I also didn't want to reject Christianity for the wrong reasons. Even though I struggled with these conflicting issues and motives, my mind had been re-opened to a search for spiritual truth.

When I later broke up with the boyfriend, I was free from all those mixed up motives. I decided that I was going to figure out what was what. I was skeptical about asking for help, because I was afraid of getting mixed up with a cult or being subject to institutional views rather than the real truth. So instead, I went to the library. I took out a bunch of books with appealing titles and spent many a night flipping through them looking for anything of substance.

The first thing I read was Mere Christianity by C.S. Lewis. Lewis argues for the validity of Christianity by starting with basic truths about human nature and making his way to the ultimate truth that Jesus is the Son of God. When I finished that book, I believed in God, and suspected that He was the God of the Bible. I wasn't totally sold on the Jesus thing yet, but over the coming weeks, as I read more and more, something clicked. I had reached a point where I acknowledged that Jesus was in fact the Son of God and that He had died for my sins.

I knew then that I needed to start applying my new belief to my life. That meant reading up on the Bible and learning what it said about living as a Christian. I went to my first Bible study at MERCYhouse shortly after Easter of last year. It was like stepping into another world. Everyone was so friendly and cheerful, and at the same time seemed pretty normal. Even though people were nice, that first experience thoroughly freaked me out, but I knew I needed guidance studying the Bible. So after giving myself pep talks for a few days, I went back for more. This time it was a lot more comfortable. I began to see that living my faith out alongside others, who were pursuing the same goal, would really help me understand how to get to know God better and how to become the person He created me to be.

So here I am a year later, putting my story in the newspaper. God has done much in me in the last 12 months to confirm that my steps of faith toward Him were the right steps to take. I realize that there are a lot of people out there who may be asking some of the same questions that I was so I jumped at the opportunity to let you know these things that have happened in my life. If you have questions or comments don't hesitate to let me know at askelaine@knowmercy.org

Brought to you by . . . MERCYhouse It's a church www.knowmercy.org

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED/OP EDITOR: MATTHEW DESPRES

Los Angeles: 10 years after

It's been 10 years since Los Angeles rose across the national consciousness, as Rodney King was arrested and beaten, spurring some of the most violent riots this country has ever witnessed. A decade later, after much debate, and debatable reactions, how much have situations improved, if at all? This editorial from the University of Mississippi only scratches the surface of that argument, but nonetheless raises an interesting point: why is this nation of 'equal opportunity' so inclined to sit back and watch parts of itself go to waste? We at The Collegian encourage your responses and reactions to that situation.)

(U-WIRE) OXFORD, Miss. - Police scandals, gang violence and high unemployment in South Central Los Angeles are in the news headlines. Are we talking about 1992? No, we're talking about South Central in 2002, where the conditions that led to some of the worst riots in U.S. history are still present. Monday marked the 10-year anniversary of what some would call the darkest day in L.A.'s history.

Some things have changed over those 10 years. For example, the Los Angeles Police Department (LAPD) now features a more diverse payroll with more than 47 percent Latino and black officers, but the recent Rampart scandal has cast a familiar shadow over the troubled department. High-profile citizens including Magic Johnson have made successful efforts to help the community, but the economic conditions remain far below the average for the county and the state. New jobs have come to the community including a new shopping center that employs more than 600 of South Central's residents, but as a whole, nothing has really changed. Contrary to popular belief, the acquittal of four white L.A. police officers did not cause the riots, but rather served as a catalyst for a community tormented with racial tension and socio-economic stress.

So, could a riot similar to the one in 1992 happen again? We believe that the answer is yes, simply because the underlying conditions that led to the 1992 riot have not changed. The only way that change will happen in this poverty-stricken community is for the state of California to invest in its residents by strengthening its education institutions and bringing in industries to support the highly blue-collar community. L.A.'s other community leaders and role models need to step up and deliver for a community that is truly in need. With an unemployment rate at more than three times the state average, South Central is a community in dire need of jobs and community-strengthening programs. Organizations such as HOPE and First AME are a step in the right direction, but more people have to join in the fight to help the people of South Central.

If we truly live in a land of equal opportunity, how can South Central and many other urban communities remain mired in their current situations? If we sit back and allow conditions like the one in South Central Los Angeles to exist, we are slowly allowing our society to decay.

U-Wires represent the majority opinion of the Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

Who am I to judge?

DAN LAMOTHE

I wrote two columns for you yesterday.

I was going to run a column where I condemned the majority of the protesters in Monday's melee at Whitmore for taking part in a cause that isn't really their own.

I won't.

I was going to publish a column where I put down the Graduate Employee Organization (GEO) for adding the Resident Assistant (RA) union's plight to their list of holier-than-thou causes. I was going to put them down for destroying the credibility that the fledgling RA union is losing so that they could take another opportunity to embarrass UMass administration.

I can't.

I was going to raise a question, asking whether the RA union should let others represent them in their battle to get UMass leadership to sit down at the bargaining table with them.

I will not.

I can't do any of these things anymore, because I realize I did not understand the situation before. I knew the way it looked to the common student (me) and the way it probably looked to the general public watching the news and reading the paper as the controversy on campus Monday was told. I could have slammed the protesters for being stupid and for not understanding what their actions would be perceived. But they do. That's where I was all wrong.

I spoke with Chris Fierro, an RA in Webster that organized the union campaign that led up to the RA union's creation. I asked him if he thought whether the arrests and chaos were really going to benefit the union's cause.

"Yeah I think so," he said. "We have to draw attention to the fact that the University is breaking the law here."

It surprised me. Chris was my former RA, and I respect him as being a reasonable person of sound judgment. For him to not condemn the actions of those Monday, but in fact to embrace them – it made me think that maybe I was missing something.

I walked into the GEO office, a place that few of us would be willing to venture because of the stigma attached to it. After all, they're considered "weird" in there. I wanted answers. I wanted the other side. I wanted to make sure that I understood the feelings, beliefs and principles of those so willing to put their academic livelihoods at stake for a cause.

What I found was a room filled with worried but determined people. I saw a room filled with people like me, save that they had found something that they believed in so strongly that they would do anything in their power to get it. I saw organized, responsible students, huddled together discussing in, low worried voices the uncertainties of their situation.

I talked to Heather Robbins, a sophomore RA in Brown that was one of the "Whitmore 15" arrested in Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs Javier Cevallos office. Without faces on the names, I was picturing each of the 15 to be dirty, loud, and obnoxious. I was picturing the stereotypical hippy.

Instead I got Robbins. Quiet. Nervous. I'd be willing to bet that she's never been involved in another controversy in her life, and now she finds herself concerned with suspensions, arrests, and her future at UMass. But I could also tell that as nervous as she was yesterday, she wouldn't change the role she played in Monday's protest.

I also got Alexis Rosenblatt, a senior RA in Chadbourne that, like Fierro, appreciates all of the people who risked arrest to show support for the RA union on Monday. Arrest meant the strong possibility of suspension to graduating seniors like Rosenblatt and Fierro, a danger that would cost them their diplomas this year.

I asked her and Fierro about the four Hampshire college students arrested during the protest, students that I and many others felt had no business in Whitmore in the first place. "No," Rosenblatt flatly stated. "They've been with us since the beginning."

So who am I to judge? Who am I to say that the RA union and all of individuals fighting for their legal right don't understand what they are doing? They do. All involved parties fighting for the RA union understand that there could be consequences to the actions that they are taking. They realize that the arrests go on their permanent record.

"When one wants something so bad that they willingly stick their own neck out, I have a hard time not to admire that."

They believe in their cause that strongly. When one wants something so bad that they willingly stick their own neck out, I have a hard time not to admire that. The RA union isn't the cause of the day for these folks, it's something that they truly believe in with all of their hearts.

The whole point to their actions that they are taking is to draw attention in any and every way possible to the fact that the University is acting unreasonably, unfairly, and unlawfully with the RA union. Congressmen are now taking notice. Gubernatorial candidate Robert Reich is now taking notice. UMass will have no choice but to negotiate eventually. And this is the point. While I still think that what the activists are doing borders on nuts, I cannot condemn it. Their hearts are in the right place, and they are reasonable people.

You will not read that other column that I wrote yesterday. You will not read it because I was wrong.

Dan Lamothe is a Collegian columnist.

Write for Ed/Op

"I DON'T THINK THE SECRETARY WANTS TO GO BACK..."

God and man at UMass:

Part I: Religious scholarship

(Editor's note: This is the first in a two-part series on the role of religion on the UMass campus).

KEVIN POWERS

With the passage of time it becomes increasingly apparent that many students in the modern epoch have little to no faith in a Creator of stature greater than any man presently alive upon the earth. This is a curious situation – and not only by virtue of the fact that it is completely unreflective of the generally religious, if even casually so, nature of the average American. Indeed, the faithlessness so often taken for granted on college campuses today has broken the intellectual legs, shoulder blades and vertebrae of the overwhelming vast majority of students who have chosen to strike themselves with it. And so one must beg askance in the midst of this curious circumstance exactly why it is that students have chosen to have their faith in God sucked out from under them like – well insert here your favorite dirty metaphor. One must inquire as to what the state of God and man at UMass truly is.

Atheists have existed since the dawn of time, but it has been millennia since a genuine surge of atheistic loathing for even so much as the casual reading of the Bible was prevalent – high or even tolerable. It has been hundreds of years since the man on the street, even such a man at a university was unable to identify such major historical figures as Jacob, Joseph, Isaac, Rachel, Sarah, Abraham and Moses. More or less, everyone understood, until several decades past that the Bible has been the very root of civilization since thousands of years ago. Whether a pack of angry atheists thought that they had no further use for Scripture or not, no one was so downright foolish as to presume that the entirety of the Word was altogether without any merit. How things have changed.

Now more than ever before students disdain the very concept of drawing knowledge from Scripture. Read as literature or lanes to no lesser degree than, for example, the works of John Cleland, the Bible has been relegated to a dusty corner of the pompous intellectual's bookshelf. And it is that arrogant, self proclaimed "scholar" who will reap a bitter harvest from his seeds of religious lethargy.

In 1951, William F. Buckley, Jr. lamented the absence of courses at Yale that were not genuinely hostile toward the Judeo-Christian tradition. He found it repellant and pathetic that professors saw outright harm in admitting that they found faith in God to be of more worth than simple academic study. Oh, to be so blessed as Buckley in this age, to be granted such opportunities for theological study as to be resigned to lament absences merely of vigorous love of the Lord. For what has engulfed the American university, UMass sadly being a sterling example, has deprived the average student of much more than a fevered endorsement of faith.

Those who want an education in the New Testament must confine themselves to their church of choice or listen to professors hold forth on the literary merits of the Gospels as though they were another piece of literature in the proud tradition of the Greek myths. Indeed, comparisons with Greco-Roman mythological modes dominate courses on the Old Testament. In such cases, the Old Testament is given high praise as prose but little credit as being the living, breathing, aching, sighing, echoing, howling "Word Of God" to the Hebrews. But at least the Judeo-Christian tradition is not harlotted about in the manner in which the Koran is. The Koran, the holy text of the Muslims, is revered as an icon of multiculturalism by the atheistic Left, and Allah is praised not as a religious conception but instead as a graven idol of the secular-statist troopers who despise all religions.

Students reading Thomas Hobbes' Leviathan will be inundated by references to Moses and the Israelites at Mount Sinai as well as innumerable other bits of Scripture. The same is largely true of Machiavelli, who routinely makes swift references to one or another figure from the Bible. This was not intended by either author to be an attempt to subversively proselytize; quite to the contrary, such references were simply an implicit acknowledgement of the fact that analyzing politics, society or civilization without taking into account the profoundly central role that Genesis, Exodus and other books have played in the course of human history would be downright ridiculous.

And yet, from Sociology to Political Science, professor after professor has made the executive decision that Marx outweighs Moses in historical merit, no matter for how many centuries the latter has been the rudder of civilization. Reading the classic texts, such as the aforementioned Hobbes and Machiavelli, students are reacting with a disturbing degree of confusion at casual Bible quotations. This is not a sign of enlightenment; it is a sign of a quite selective and absolutely intentional deaf ear being turned toward the vast bulk of human history. And that is nothing short of an outright tragedy.

Why in a university as large as any in the state of Massachusetts is a Christian confined to his Church for education in his faith as being more than a momentary aberration in the course of human history? Why is his Bible discarded by all but the most sterile of literary examiners? Why does the same hold true for the few who actually believes that his religion amounts to something more than Communism and a self-defeating concept of minority identity? Why is the Hebrew Bible taught only as a matter of grammar and conceptual arrangement, rather than as the Word? Why is the most common voice in campus Islam almost always that of the bitter Palestinian who wastes valuable time that could be used for prayer to scream bitter slurs against Israel? Why do more and more campus Muslims refuse to repudiate the artificial leaders of their faith and refuse to teach their faith not as a secular culture but instead as a means of worship?

Kevin F. Powers is a UMass student. The second part of his essay will run tomorrow.

UMass whispers and details

The end of the school year is coming to a close, and there are hundreds of stories on this campus just waiting to be told. Sadly, I can't get to all of them, but here are a few I came across this past week.

Administrators at UMass never cease to amaze me. Spring events ending at 11 p.m.? The statement speaks for itself. I received my parking sticker renewal form in the mail the other day, only to find that the price for permits went up again. Seniors keep telling me that they remember when parking stickers only cost $30. Yay, Parking Services!

The one department that has truly hit a nerve in me this week is Housing Services. A former lieutenant governor of Northeast, Ewan Munro recently lost his Resident Assistant (RA) status for the rest of the semester, because he accidentally burnt popcorn in the microwave in his room. A microwave. I'm sure we all know RAs with worse things in their rooms. And for that matter, a regular student in the dormitories who gets caught with a microwave would only be written up. We wouldn't lose our housing. Ewan was one of the best and most respected RAs in the cluster, and he was fired for this one accident. There are only about four weeks left in the semester and housing has fired him, kicked him out of his room and is now charging him about $350 for housing for the rest of the semester. Where is the justice in this? The icing on the cake: I heard through the grapevine that Housing wants to ban hairdryers in the dormitories for next year.

I had the opportunity to interview a graduate student who was arrested during Monday's protest at Whitmore. Politics around this issue have been so heated that she didn't want to go on the record, nor would she even tell me which department she was graduate student in. I will refer to her as Jane. Jane was arrested outside of Whitmore and charged with disorderly conduct, blocking a roadway and resisting arrest. Jane, along with other protestors were handcuffed and put onto the UMass riot bus. The green, armored bus was allegedly bought from the INS for the UMass police department (UMPD) to use. The bus then went to the Mullins Center, where the students were detained until all the paperwork for their arrests was complete.

Jane was one of the last people off the bus and said she waited over three hours for her turn. The energy on the bus was very high the entire time, since the students who on the bus expected to be arrested. "I knew I was going to be arrested. It was a peaceful demonstration, and we have the moral high ground. They [UMass] are the ones that are breaking the law," she said. Jane isn't even an RA, but she believes strongly in the labor movement and the importance of unions. "The rights of workers are very important. I felt a moral obligation to do this action," she said. The students arrested will be arraigned at 8:30 a.m. on Thursday and Friday this week in Hampshire District Court. Without even taking the RA union issue into account, does it bother anyone else that the UMPD physically arrested a group of peaceful demonstrators? Our fellow students? And what is UMass doing spending money on an armored riot bus?

Speaking of protests, what was with those crazy Asians outside of Holyoke Mall last Saturday? The 25 Asian-Americans were students from the Five College Area who gathered to promote a boycott of the retailer Abercrombie and Fitch (AF). At the beginning of April, AF released a new line of T-shirts that included racially insensitive slogans and designs towards Asian-Americans. One shirt was an advertisement for "Wong Brothers Laundry," with both Wong brothers baring big buckteeth, smiling slanted eyes and conical hats. The slogan written on the shirt was, "Two Wongs Can Make It White." Play on words, right? Hmmm... look at it more closely. This design along with "Pizza Dojo: You Love Long Time," "Wok-n-Bowl, Chinese food and Bowling" and others were created by AF to market to Asian-Americans who have $230-billion plus spending power in the United States, and Asians didn't think they were funny.

Though the shirts have been pulled from the shelves, AF never issued an official apology. A national campaign has been launched to boycott AF, and protests have been happening all across the country, the biggest ones taking place in California. The most blatant problem with the shirts is that the designs reinforce stereotypes about the Asians. It also trivializes the historical, Asian-American experience in the United States. Over-sensitivity? I don't think so. It's racism towards Asian-Americans, and apparently things like this are okay in this country. As long as you leave the blacks and Latinos out of these designs, it's not racism. Or how about this: an AF T-shirt design advertising for McCormick's Tavern showing a drunk Irishman with the slogan, "Where the Irish CAN Apply." That design would never make it to the sales floor. Go to www.boycottAF.com and think about the issue before you buy anything else from AF.

"Boxes and Walls: The Oppression Experiment" is returning to UMass next week. The "Boxes and Walls" project is an interactive exhibit that explores the experiences of underrepresented people in this country. It's an amazingly powerful experience that I highly recommend. The exhibit is put together by UMass students, so come out and support your peers!

That's all for now. Stay safe and be aware of what's going on around you. There's more news on this campus than just budget cuts.

Jamie Loo is a Collegian columnist.

Spring Concert!

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 5.02.02 ARTS EDITOR: MIKE DELANO

Money for nothin' and your concerts for free

Nothing in life is free. You pay for heat, electricity, food even water (Earth's most abundant resource). And going to UMass we all know that things here don't get cheaper, but just skyrocket in price. Books, note books, pens, D.P. Dough, and don't forget the little tuition increase awaiting all incoming students. But forget about all that, because we here at UMass can enjoy the one of the last free things made available to us. No, I'm not talking about the free cases of Red Bull or LAZER 99.3's bottle openers, I'm speaking of the one and only UMass Spring Concert.

Students have always looked forward to the show, not only because it allows us to swarm the floor of the Mullins Center with two thousand other undergrads, but just because the word "free" precedes it. And in the four years I've been here, the free aspect has made the trip down to the House that Calipari Built well worth it.

In the last three years The Mighty Mighty Bosstones have traveled from Boston to soothe our punk souls from the radio hell that is Western Mass. KRS-1 has passed on his positive hip-hop message. Red and Meth dished out some rhymes for the masses. The Long Beach Dub All-Stars performed new songs and ones from their Sublime roots for those in attendance. Beenie Man showed us what reggae was all about. And although Teck 5 never showed, Cypress Hill, Lil' Kim and Uncle Kracker performed in front of the students who escaped the confines of their dorm room for one show.

This year, University Productions and Concerts (the group responsible for putting the show together) have followed up last year's poorly attended and received line-up with perhaps the strongest line-up since the 1999 show. Scheduled to perform along with local DJs (including DJ Big Phil, who was last year's saving grace, giving the audience something to do until Lil' Kim made her tardy entrance), the UMass Battle of the Bands winner, and The Sunshine Fix are three diverse and popular acts. The show will include performances by the self-proclaimed "wuss rock" band Guster (who, according to their bumper-stickers, are for lovers), hip-hoppers The Roots, and one of the newest faces in mainstream rap music today, ATL representative Ludacris.

Trying to please the many different musical tastes at UMass, UPC hopes that this year's show variety will bring in more students than years past. (Nick Pizzolato)

THE ROOTS

By Eric Soderstrom
COLLEGIAN STAFF

You will see five microphones, all draped with towels. You will see a drum set, a keyboard and two guitars. But then you won't.

The lights will go out, and all you'll be able to do is listen.

"We settin' it from Southside, pushin' this up North/From Philadelphian reps, to fly points across the map/Bring it back to Respond React/Then bring it back to Respond React..."

Shocking the darkness of the Mullins Center, those words will initiate your musical enlightenment Sunday at the Spring Concert. Led by Black Thought, his right arm thrashing the night, the Roots will stir you with their commitment to bringing the studio to the stage, and building the frame they continually strive to break out of.

Their sound is an experimental type of jazzed up hip-hop, laced with an unforgiving delivery. And although sometimes seen as mellow and funked-out, the Roots are truly aggressive in nature. As you will find out this summer on their new LP Phrenology, they come at you from all sides of the spectrum and leave your

Turn to ROOTS, page 7

Ludacris

Ludacris, one of the superstars on the Def Jam label, is fresh off his double-platinum, Grammy-nominated album Back for the First Time with not only a national tour that includes this Sunday's Spring Concert but also his latest album Word of Mouf, which already has dropped its third single in the last six months.

Luda's music has seen huge popularity including singles like "What's Your Fantasy" and "Southern Hospitality" from Back for the First Time, "Area Codes" (featured in the movie Rush Hour 2), "Roll Out (My Buisness)," and the new single "Saturday" from Word. Ludacris has grown nationally popular with his Dirty South rapping style and has sparked new interest in the genre.

Ludacris has said that he hopes his music will reach out to the entire country, believing that that's what Word of Mouf is all about, reaching the country and "banging from cars." And he has made an impression.

Constant airplay and collaborations with other artists (including global superstars OutKast) has made Ludacris well known and respected as one of the new faces in rap music. The 24-year-old Atlanta native (well, actually he was born in Chicago but considers the ATL his home) sold 50,000 of his indie album, which was coincidentally sold on word of mouth, showing that he has the skills to be recognized even without radio or music television.

UMass students are expected to hear his hits and a powerful performance by Ludacris as he gains the honor of headlining this year's Spring show, sharing the spot that has been held by prestigious other rap acts. (Nick Pizzolato)

GUSTER

Last year's Spring Concert was opened with a bang by Dropkick Murphys, who treated the Mullins Center faithful to a healthy dose of their ferocious Irish punk rock. Even though this year's first act will be a bit more subdued than the Murphys, you'll be still treated to the one hell of a live show that is Guster.

The three-piece group from Somerville, Mass. will be bringing its blend of catchy tunes and soulful melodies to Amherst this Sunday, with a potentially large crowd in tow. Guster has developed quite a cult following during their existence, and with good reason. According to one of the band's many webpages, Guster's specialty is "wuss rock built around soaring harmonies, inventive guitar riffs, and infectious hand-percussion beats, all of which make for a unique and amazing musical experience." The band's fusion of rock, blues and folk, spiced with a little bit of punk, has treated plenty of fans for years. But Guster itself is even more unique. Two guitar players, no bass, and a drummer might not sound all that special. But then take into consideration that said drummer uses merely his hands on his array of percussion, and there you have Guster.

Guitarists/vocalists Adam Gardner and Ryan Miller and percussionist Brian Rosenworcel (otherwise known as the guy acting like a maniac behind his two bandmates) formed their group almost 11 years ago, but Guster's first album Parachute didn't arrive until some three years later. The follow-up Goldfly came in 1996, but it was the band's most recent album Lost and Gone Forever that gave the band its most significant mainstream recognition. Carried by Forever's two singles, "Barrel of a Gun (4.3.2.1)," and "Fa Fa," Guster started to receive play on modern rock and college radio stations nationwide. In the last few years, the group has played at Woodstock '99, on David Letterman, and has opened up for acts such as Dave Matthews Band, Barenaked Ladies, and Bob Dylan. Not too shabby of a resume.

Guster's three full-length albums have drawn strong acclaim from music critics, but any of their fans will tell you that their live show is where they are at their best. Not only do they bring an extra amount of energy to their songs in concert, but fans are also treated to numerous covers, which encompass all genres. While their albums are composed of strictly original material, Guster has consistently covered live anything from Sixpence None the Richer to Ben E. King to Led Zeppelin to AC/DC.

Guster tours extensively throughout the year, especially in New England, so if you happen to miss them on Sunday, you'll have plenty of opportunities to catch the hand some other time. But since each of their shows is a unique experience, you'd probably be missing out. (Andy Vogt)

Information from the Guster FAQ (www.geocities.com/guster-fru) was used in this article.

COURTESY LISA METCALF

Paxton's Frailty leaves a lasting impression

"Bill Paxton" Don't come any more stop. Aaah.

By Jake D. Lewis
COLLEGIAN STAFF

FRAILTY
Starring Bill Paxton, Matthew McConaughey and Powers Boothe
Directed by Bill Paxton
Playing at Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield

Long after leaving the theater, Frailty remained with me. It lingered long into the late-evening and early-morning hours of the next day and then came to me again while I slept. For the entire next day, it gnawed at me too, perhaps even more so than the previous day. A completely absorbing and hypnotic work, Frailty is also one of the most disturbing films I have ever seen.

I'm not sure if it's the sort of story that needs to be, nay, should be, told, yet now that it has been, it will undoubtedly provoke controversy from scorn to praise. It manages to go from a story of an eerie, police procedural to a tale of domestic terror to a suspense mystery a la The Usual Suspects and finally to something much deeper and profound. I'm not sure that I enjoyed Frailty so much as a piece of entertainment (for lack of a better word), but more as an extraordinary piece of work for the film world by first-time director Bill Paxton. It is reminiscent of Paxton's work in 1996's A Simple Plan, which also functions off of the evil in everyday man. Frailty, though, is an uncompromising, complex film that reels us in with its appearance of a much simpler, independent one.

The film opens on a rainy night, as McConaughey's character appears in the office of FBI Agent Wesley Doyle (Boothe) and introduces himself as Fenton Meiks. Meiks says he knows who has been responsible for the serial killings that have haunted this area for years. Told in flashback, we are brought back to the year 1968 and into the home of the Meiks. Fenton, age 10, and his brother Adam, age 7, live with their father (Paxton) in a rickety old house behind a public rose garden. They lead a simple and peaceful life. Dad is an automechanic, and the biggest concerns of the two children are what movie they're going to see the next weekend. The innocence of their beautiful lives is permanently interrupted when Dad tells them that an Angel of God visited him, giving instructions for him and his sons to destroy the demons on Earth who have taken on human form.

Seven-year old Adam believes anything his father says, but Fenton is more skeptical. Dad tells them both that, "This is our job now. We've got to do this." And even though Dad is comforted by the fact that he is not killing humans but destroying demons ("Don't cry for her, she wasn't human"), he never at one point turns away, or questions it, something that even Moses, King David and Jesus did before God appeared to them again. Even the story that older Meiks is telling is suspect; one agent says to another: "Fenton Meiks? What kind of a name is that?"

Nonetheless, when Dad touches the bodies of the beings he must kill, he (along with the audience) is shown graphic visions of the sins that the person has committed. Whether these visions are accurate, however, and whose eyes, exactly, we're seeing them through, are left unanswered and will most likely become a topic of debate afterwards. Yet it is made clear that these are not creatures sent from Hell, disguised in human skin, but just terrible people who have committed atrocious sins. This is how Dad justifies their killing, which he does with the help of his two sons.

At first, even Dad has doubts about it, but he reminds Fenton and Adam and even himself that if they don't do this, it will mean the end of the world. One message that Dad receives from the angel is that he must also kill his son, Fenton. We are reminded here of the contemporary drama of Andrea Yates, who also believed she heard a voice from beyond that told her the only way to save her children was to drown them. Yet unlike Yates, and even the Biblical story of Abraham who is told to slay his son Isaac, Dad is not an abusive father. His children are his prized possession, and even though he says he's following God's orders, he refuses to believe the latest decree. Yet, in one scene, he gives Fenton an unusually cruel punishment and continues with it until Fenton "sees God." Bill Paxton's acting is top notch, frightening in its quiet intensity and startling conviction to the undertaking he has been given, making Dad not evil, but only a man lost in his own delusions.

Paxton's surprising talent with the direction of Frailty matches his subtly engrossing acting. With first-time screenwriter Brent Hanley, he paints a world that is haunting in the fact that it feels like there isn't another soul alive (which makes sense when considering the religious tones of the story). You hardly ever see anyone else in the small town where the Meiks' live, as well as there being hardly any camera shots that help you establish the size of certain things: the house, the mechanic shop that Dad works at, and so on. Only one scene, in which Dad is driving to work along an immense, barren cornfield, contradicts this point. Even that however screams loneliness. There's a general feel of claustrophobia to the movie that goes hand in hand with the blackness of night, but it's not something that goes away when you close your eyes and wish for the morning that never comes. The world that the film takes place in continues to somehow get darker as it progresses.

Paxton's biggest risk as a first-time director, though, is the shot at religion and faith that he takes with the film. It will inevitably encounter great controversy for the fact that it shows the concept of being spoken to by God in a negative light in addition to making an overall jab at the religion of Christianity. (And it certainly is such a religion because of the Sunday school song the brothers sing at the beginning of the movie, the Church vocabulary like "Praise the Lord!" and "May God welcome you and keep you!" and the ambience of the Bible Belt setting.)

Some may say that Paxton could only get away with such a project, because his career doesn't rest in the hands of getting another directing job, since he is first and foremost, an actor. His collaboration with cinematographer Bill Butler gives the film both its frigid gloss and a remarkably warm feel. The music by Brian Tyler is appropriately haunting, and McConaughey's acting is among his better work in recent years. Even though he mostly does voice-over work and very little on-screen time, he convinces the audience that there's more to him than meets the eye. While I have no way of proving it, an ad-lib by McConaughey, regarding his real-life police record, is briefly muttered when his character is being lowered into a squad car. The young actor who plays the child Fenton (Matthew O'Leary) superbly measures up to McConaughey's and Paxton's performances. But let's not mince words here; this is most assuredly Paxton's show, and he dominates every single minute of it.

While critics and audiences may find this movie quite stirring, it's not for everyone. Even I still find it difficult to remember the fact that it is, after all, just a movie. I'm concerned with the fact that even with its slightly predictable moments, it feels so darn real. I worry about the concepts the film peddles regarding the tremendous impact that adults can have on their children and what parents will do to see the same beliefs reproduced in their offspring. I'm bothered that after all the deliberation, I still don't know what it is, exactly, that the film is trying to say. What is the stance it's making, especially in regards to its controversial topic? Frailty may be about the weaknesses of humans, but it is one of the strongest films I have seen and maybe ever will.

KNOW ANY SENIORS?
Did you ever just run up to one and give them a nice, big KISS?

Now's your chance to "Kiss" your favorite seniors goodbye!

$5.50 or 2 for $12.00

Tell your friends that you will miss them. Send them a 2002 mug or champagne glass filled with Hershey Kisses!

To order your Kiss today you can either..

Stop by the STARS' table on the concourse
OR
go to www.umassalumni.com
under the "Seniors" section

If you have any questions, call the STARS office at 577-1390
(Have you bought your Commencement Ball tickets yet?)

FREE
Join us for a
Law School Admissions & LSAT Strategy Seminar
Thursday, May 2nd, 7:00-8:30pm
at the Amherst Kaplan Center
KAPLAN
Space is limited!
To register, call 1-800-KAP-TEST
kaptest.com

UMass Student Legal Services Office
CALL TODAY
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students
545-1995

Best! 2002
UMASS ★★★★★★★
Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Let us know your picks for the UMASS BEST ISSUE

DEADLINE MAY 6
Please fill this out & send your answers either via campus-mail, or stop by the Collegian, 113 Campus Center basement

Unique UMass Best
Reason not to graduate:
Place to have sex:
Classroom:
D.C.:
D.C. dish:
Spring break place:
Magazine:
Way to gain Fresman 15:
Apartment complex:
Reason to miss class:
Reason to hand in a paper late:
Place to read the paper:
Place to study:

Best Arts & Entertainment
Place to hear live music:
Local band:
radio station:
Music store:
Pool hall:
Cheap date place:
Video store:
Internet site:

Best Shops & Services
Grocery store:
Florist:
Clothing store:
Gas station:
Bike shop:
Hair salon:
Place to workout:
Tanning salon:
Candy shop:
Liquor store:
Car repair place:

Best way to waste time
Amherst bar:
Northampton bar:
Beer:
Shot:
Drinking game:
Bartender:
Off Campus party place:
Frat party:
Nudie bar:
Porn shop:
Condom brand:

Best Food
Pizza place:
Sub shop:
Date restaurant:
Place to go when parents are paying:
Ice cream shop:
Chinese:
Italian:
Mexican:
Indian:
Japanese:
Breakfast (hangover cure):
Bagel shop:
Vegetarian:
Best Wings:
Northampton restaurant:
Coffee shop:

YOU HAVE YOUR REASONS FOR LIVING OFF CAMPUS...
BRANDYWINE AMHERST
SO DO WE.
BRANDYWINE APARTMENTS
1655 BRANDYWINE DRIVE • AMHERST, MA

SUPER STOP & SHOP
All the ingredients needed to be voted UMass Best!

Walk it! Bus it!
PUFFTON VILLAGE
Bike it! Drive it!

THE HARP
"START YOUR OWN TRADITION"

■ Roots

continued from page 5

ears fighting for each sound.

Tariq "Black Thought" Trotter, the group's lead vocalist, might just be the most underrated emcee in the game. Had his solo project, Masterpiece Theatre, not been shelved due to sample clearance problems, Thought would have been given the notice he deserves. Listen Sunday for his new joint, "Thought at Work," an homage to Kool G Rap and DJ Polo's "Men at Work," off 1989's Road to the Riches. It's ripped hard, end-to-end, and demonstrates Thought's battle-hard mind state. But don't ignore his presence on the much slower "Silent Treatment," where he breathes life into what could have been an uninspired street ballad. Earlier this year, Thought showed his versatility by laying down the vocals to "Tao of the Machine," a techno influenced track featured on the Blade 2 soundtrack. And although he won't be rocking the trance culture on Sunday, don't erase any Axel Rose or Kurt Cobain impersonations from your expectations.

Ahmir "?uestlove" Thompson, the Roots' drummer, is the best hip-hop has to offer. Marked by his classic afro, ?uest has been praised for saving the urban music scene. As a DJ, producer and musician, ?uest is the most sought after talent in the industry. He toured recently with D'angelo and although not shown in the video, ?uest was asked by Bono of U2 to lay down the sticks on the 9-11 tribute track, "What's Going On?"

Also in the backdrop is Leonard Hubbard on bass guitar and Kamal Gray on the keyboard. Hub, chewing on his traditional alfalfa root, feels the music more than anyone, grooving on the left side of the stage for the entire show. While Kamal, never removed from behind the keys, he plays with a conceited but playful headnod.

Scratch is the Roots' DJ, but you won't find him behind any Technics. Master of the vocal turntable, Scratch could destroy Rahzel, formerly of Roots fame, in the realm of any amplifier. Rahzel tops Scratch in the helicopter and Terminator brands of hustle, but when it comes to turntable imitation, there is no one better than Scratch. You can catch his solo effort, Embodiment of Instrumentation, in stores June 4.

Last on the Roots' roster is the crew's newest member, guitarist Ben Kenney, who fills in the spot of departed vocalist Malik B. Proficient on the strings, Kenney's new sound has offered the group even more experimental maneuvering. He also works well with ?uestlove during the drummer's solo at the end of the show in what you could call a merry-go-round of rhythm.

If you know what the Roots have to offer, and you haven't seen them in a while, you can expect a different playlist than usual. Starting with "Respond/React," you can expect them to play the new joints "Water", "Pussy Galore" and "Rock You," a fierce hip-hop version of Queen's "We Will Rock You."

But if you're just going to hear the classics, you won't be let down. A Roots show never ends without the Grammy award winning "You Got Me" or the instant classics "What Ya Want" or "The Next Movement".

So, what's this you hear about Hip Hop 101 and individual solos? Just don't go to the concert with a total Roots or urban outlook. Ever heard of Black Sabbath, Rock James, the Red Hot Chili Peppers, Guns n' Roses, Run DMC, the Sugar Hill Gang or the 69 Boyz? Well, the Roots have. And they're not afraid to show them any love.

www.dailycollegian.com

CASH FOR BOOKS
WE PAY TOP DOLLAR
Jeffery Amherst College Store
55 SOUTH PROSPECT ST. AMHERST
253-3870 253-7816

413.883.1144
Graduation Parties
Private Parties
UMass Discount
Chance Perspective
Hip-Hop Reggae R&B
Entertainment Co. gemini DVLP PRO

North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
www.northamherstmotors.com
549-RENT
OOPS!
POTTERS
AUTO & TRUCK RENTALS
• Cars • Maxi Vans • Trucks • SUV's • Cargo Vans • 15 Passenger Vans • Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older • Direct Billing To Insurance Co. • MHEC Rates
(On bus route)

Four Seasons Wine & Liquor
BEER WINE LIQUOR ICE
KEGS CIGARS CLOVES
CIGARETTES TOBACCO
Amex, Disc, MC, Visa, Debit Accepted
Home of the 50 lb bag of ICE
Largest selection of Cigars in Hadley and Amherst.
Special Orders Welcome
333 Russell Street (Route 9)
Hadley, MA
Hours Mon.-Sat. 9am-11pm
(413)584-8774

TAPESTRY Health
Affordable and Confidential
• Gyn Exams • Birth Control • Pregnancy Testing • Emergency Contraception • HIV/STD Testing • Quit Smoking
Bangs Center, 70 Boltwood Walk, Amherst
16 Center Street, Northampton
(413) 586-2539 or
www.tapestryhealth.org

The Internationally Award-Winning
Commencement Ball
Dinner, Dancing and Drinks (positive ID required)
Horse & Carriage Rides
A Night to Remember!
2002
Friday, May 24, 2002
7:00 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. Student Union
To purchase tickets ($35.00 per person):
• Order on-line at www.umassalumni.com
• Call the Alumni Office at 545-2317
• Stop by the STARS table in the Campus Center : May 1-3, 6-10, & 13-14
• Stop by Cap and Gown Distribution the week of May 20th
Commencement Ball is supported by:
UMass Alumni Association, Alumni Relations Office, The Massachusetts Daily Collegian, Student Government Association Programming Board, Campus Activities Office, College of Humanities and Fine Arts, College of Social and Behavioral Sciences, College of Natural Sciences and Mathematics, Auxiliary Services, and Greek Affairs
Don't forget to make your pledge to the Senior Campaign!
ALUMNI ASSOCIATION UMASS

LIQUORS 44
½ KEG COORS LIGHT $48.99
½ KEG BUD, BUD LIGHT, MICHELOB, MICH. LIGHT $50.99
½ KEG NATURAL LIGHT & ICE $41.99
½ KEG BERKSHIRE BREWING $88.99
CORONA & CORONA LIGHT 2/12PK BOTTLES $18.49 CASE
DOS EQUIS AMBER & SPECIAL 12PK BOTTLES 12 PACK $9.99
COORS LIGHT & COORS 30-12OZ CANS $18.49 30 PACK
MILWAUKEE'S BEST 30-12OZ CANS $10.49 30 PACK
HEINEKEN & AMSTEL LIGHT 24-12OZ LOOSE BOTTLES $19.49 CASE
SAM ADAMS 12PK BOTTLES 12 PACK $10.99 FEATURING SAM ADAMS LIGHT
PAULANER HEFE-WEIZEN 12PK BOTTLES 12 PACK $10.99
SMIRNOFF ICE 12PK BOTTLES 12 PACK $10.99
20% OFF ALL
CALIFORNIA CHARDONNAY 1.5L $7.99
GEORGES DUBOEUF CHARDONNAY, MERLOT, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5L $7.99
BANROCK WINES ALL TYPES 1.5L $8.99
CITRA WINES ALL TYPES 1.5L $5.99
REDWOOD CREEK CHARDONNAY, MERLOT, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5L $11.99
SUTTER HOME WHITE ZINFANDEL 1.5L $6.99
BOGLE MERLOT 750ML $7.99
ALMADEN CHABLIS BURGUNDY BLUSH RHINE BURGUNDY, DOLCEN, ALTRUSO RED 5L BAG IN A BOX $6.99
JOSE CUERVO GOLD TEQUILA 750ML $15.49
CUERVO AUTHENTIC MARGARITAS 1.75L $11.99
GREY GOOSE VODKA 80 PROOF & L'ORANGE 750ML $22.99
POPOV VODKA 1.75L $11.99
SEAGRAM'S GIN 1.75L $14.99
CAPTAIN MORGAN SPICED RUM 1.75L $19.99
SOUTHERN COMFORT 1.75L $19.99
CLAN MACGREGOR SCOTCH 1.75L $12.99
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 586-3007
HOLYOKE 534-4555
FULL REDEMPTION AT ALL LOCATIONS
DON'T DRINK & DRIVE

Tickets $7! At the students & seniors
Crossing John At The Crossroads
9pm May 2, 3, 4 & 9, 10, 11
UMASS theater

MATTRESSES
FUTONS
BEDS
ETC...
253-2337
SLEEPY HOLLOW BED CO.

Mavi Jeans
at Zanna
ZANNA
Amherst Northampton Williamstown
www.zanna.com

CAUTION
MCAT Changes Ahead!
Learn more about the MCAT
Join us for a FREE
test strategy seminar
Wednesday, May 8th, 7:00-8:300pm
at the Amherst Kaplan Center
Call or visit us online today to enroll!
KAPLAN
1-800-KAP-TEST
kaptest.com

FX's "f'n" new show

It's been an eventful past few months in the world of cable television. First Ozzy Osbourne and his "f'n" family captured the eyes and hearts of MTV viewers, and now another relentlessly vulgar cable series has burst on the scene grabbing viewers and headlines. "The Shield," FX's new cops and robbers series, which airs Tuesday nights and has gotten the attention of viewers and critics for its edgy storylines and language. But is all the fuss worth it? "Tube Notes," as always, provides the answers.

"The Shield" stars Michael Chiklis of "Commish" fame as Detective Vic Mackey. What makes "The Shield" unique is its blurring of good and evil in its stories, and especially in the Detective Mackey character. This past Tuesday's episode featured Mackay getting a confession out of drug dealing frat boy in the probably not-so-legal way of pressing his face against the face of a dead body and screaming at him. He also blackmailed a fellow cop so he could get away with stealing some drugs. Yet, he is still the "good guy" in many situations. Ah, the irony of cable television.

Then of course there are those "too hot for TV" words. In the first half-hour of Tuesday's episode I heard "shit," "bitch," and even "d*k in your mouth." Not since the Bobby Knight movie on ESPN has basic cable been filled with such potty-mouthed language. Of course, that's part of the show's appeal, as it has drawn as many as 3.3 million viewers since its March 12th debut, the highest in FX history and a very respectable number in the cable world.

The vulgarity carries the show as the plots aren't anything to rave about. It is mainly standard police drama fare with a few "edgy" twists such as a Cop that hits on a widowed wife in a murder case that he is assigned to. Gotta get her while she's vulnerable, you know?) and, of course, the aforementioned "bad" cops. Also notable are the bouncy NYPD Blue style camerawork and the rapid fire pacing and cuts. The show is so fast paced that it is hard to get bored by it even if the plot isn't particularly engaging.

In addition to attracting viewers, the show has attracted its share of detractors because of its vulgarity. Advertisers have threatened to pull their ads, which could threaten the show's future. Still, series creator Shawn Ryan isn't worried. As he told Zap2it.com recently, "I know a few advertisers pulled out, but my understanding is that we gained 11 new advertisers since last week. The ratings are good. The demos are really great. We've been lucky enough to have some critical acclaim."

Why advertisers would be in an uproar over a show that airs on cable at 10 p.m. at night that is clearly aimed at adults is beyond me. Actually, it isn't that hard to understand when you remember that many advertisers are stuck, actually glued stuck, on their moral high horses. Sure, the show has some swears, but it is a show totally aimed at adults and has not been marketed towards kids, or even teens, at all. The show has also been rated TV-MA in accordance with all of the necessary television standards. After all, if a kid hears the phrase "d*k in your mouth," is the world really going to end?

"The Shield" deserves some credit for being a fun and thought-provoking program. Is it worth the hype? Probably not, but most things aren't. Grade: B

Kurt Polesky is Collegian staff member.

softball

[illegible] As if there was any more [illegible] for the Maroon and White to get back on track, this [illegible] the University of Connecticut it will come to town [illegible] as third clash of the season [illegible] the Minutewomen. The Huskies were the victim that gave UMass its school record 26th [illegible] win last Wednesday in [illegible] 3-0.

Want to be Sports Editor? Drop off an application. Big money. No life.

NHL Playoffs, Round Two Staff picks

Inside the NHL with Matt Brady

Okay, so I somehow pulled off getting six out of eight series right. It's really funny that the two teams who didn't win were my two favorite teams. Props to Vogt and the Hurricanes for giving my Devils a sense of humility in the first round. Now for the second round preview.

#3 Carolina Hurricanes v. #8 Montreal Canadiens

Like approximately 100 percent of the rest of the hockey fans in the world, I did not expect to see the two teams with the lowest point totals in the playoffs to face off in the second round. I leave it to the NHL to give the Canes home ice advantage until they hit the Stanley Cup finals.

This series is the tale of two goalies, Kevin Weekes and Jose Theodore. Both were phenomenal in winning games five and six for their respective teams. For Theodore, to those who have been paying attention to him for a few years, this performance was far from a surprise. He has a pretty good shot at winning the NHL MVP this year, in fact. Weekes was supposed to be a great goalie when he entered the NHL but hasn't seen any real success in his time in the league.

Both teams have pretty strong defense and deep forward talent, but I give the edge to the Habs. Saku Koivu is invaluable to this team, and Donald Audette, Doug Gilmour and Yanic Perreault all have good playoff experience. The Hurricanes have a better defense, but not by enough to counter the advantage the Canadiens have up front. Plus, Weekes is far more likely to come back to earth than Theodore, and Arturs Irbe might not arrive in time to help the team recover if he does falter. Still, the Habs can't expect to win if they continue to let their opponents outshoot them by a two-to-one margin. They won't.

Prediction: Canadiens in seven.

Staff picks: Carolina: Vogt (6), Montreal: Rose (6), Merritt (6), Succo 7).

#4 Toronto Maple Leafs v. #7 Ottawa Senators

Surprisingly, more people didn't pick the Sens to win over Philly. Philly's struggles over the last month of the season were augmented in the playoffs as they put out the most anemic offensive effort in NHL playoff history. Patrick Lalime was fantastic in net but not deserving of a .38 goals-against average. Ottawa is one of the most complete teams from top to bottom in the NHL; they just didn't get it together until late in the season.

As for the Leafs, they just finished an all-out war with the Islanders. That series was old time hockey at its best – the competition, the toughness, the excitement – it was beautiful. Curtis Joseph didn't play well for most of the series and can be expected to step it up for the next round. Toronto has a wealth of offensive depth and a strong defense, which puts them above most other teams.

Unfortunately, the series with the Isles beat the Leafs up and tired them out, while Ottawa was cruising to victory. That shifts the tide toward the Sens, who have enough talent to top the Leafs, without a doubt. However, I have a lot more faith in Culo than I do in Lalime, and I can't resist picking a Leafs-Canadiens semifinal. This series could go either way, and it should be a dogfight.

Prediction: Maple Leafs in seven

Staff picks: Toronto: Vogt (5), Rose (7), Merritt (5), Succo (6).

#1 Detroit Red Wings v. #4 St. Louis Blues

The Wings hit a major speed bump in the first round against an upstart Canucks team who had nothing to lose. Fortunately for Hockeytown, they remembered who they were in time to recover against Vancouver and win four in a row. Hasek was decent in the first round but will likely perform much better as the playoffs roll on. This team has so much talent and experience, it isn't even funny.

The Blues had an easier time in the first round, as Brent Johnson was fantastic in net. He is the reason St. Louis got rid of Roman Turek, and he's showing why that was a good move. The Blues still have a ton of depth up front and a lot of crafty veterans out there. The defense is strong enough to keep them in any game.

This one comes down to Detroit, really. If the Hasek of old shows up or the forwards forget their age and remember their experience, the Wings will roll. Johnson has to completely outplay his counterpart to give the Blues a shot. However, that's only a shot, and a long shot at that.

Prediction: Red Wings in six.

Staff picks: Detroit: Vogt (5), Merritt (7), Succo (6) St. Louis: Rose (6).

#2 Colorado Avalanche v. #3 San Jose Sharks

For the second straight year, the Avalanche kept the pesky Kings around for seven games and thoroughly scared their fans. Still, when it counted, everybody was accountable, and Patrick Roy was king yet again. He's a guy you just think will never lose. It's really scary. The Avs offense got a boost from the return of Peter Forsberg, which was nice because Joe Sakic was far from normal for the Avs.

The Sharks got no respect from anybody as the Coyotes were everyone's favorite team. San Jose has four solid lines up front, and Marcus Ragnarsson and Brad Stuart are two of the best unknown defensemen in the NHL. Teemu Selanne, Vincent Damphousse, Mike Ricci and Adam Graves provide a tremendous amount of experience for a team that has a lot of youthful talent on its roster. Evgeny Nabokov has shown that he's the real deal.

The Sharks are rested, deep and energetic. The Avalanche are experienced, but tired. The Sharks have Nabokov. The Avs have Roy. Game over.

Prediction: Avalanche in six.

Staff picks: Colorado: Merritt (6), Vogt (4), Rose (5) San Jose: Succo (7).

Matt Brady is a Collegian columnist.

ATTENTION UMASS SPORTS FANS !

UMass CLUB LACROSSE VS. BOSTON COLLEGE what?

Thursday, May 2
Garber Field, 7pm

www.dailycollegian.com

CINEMARK
The Best Seat In Town
CINEMARK AT HAMPSHIRE MALL
367 Russell St. 413-587-4233
Schedule for Friday 4/26 - Thursday 5/2
DIGITAL SURROUND SOUND IN ALL AUDITORIUMS
Purchase Tickets Online @ cinemark.com

LIFE OR SOMETHING LIKE IT (PG13) 12:35 4:55 7:35 10:00
JASON X (R) 12:15 2:40 5:00 7:30 10:00
MURDER BY NUMBERS (R) 12:30 4:50 7:30 10:00
SCORPION KING (PG13) 12:55 2:55 4:55 7:45 10:25
CHARMING LANES (R) 12:30 4:45 7:05 9:30
HIGH CRIMES (PG13) 12:10 2:15 4:25 6:45 9:00
THE SWEETEST THING (R) 1:00 3:00 5:00 7:00 9:00
NATIONAL LAMPOON'S VAN WILDER (R) 12:45 3:00
THE ROOKIE (G) 12:25 4:40 7:10 9:10
PANIC ROOM (R) 12:40 4:30 7:40 10:35
CLOCKSTOPPERS (PG) 12:55 4:25 7:05 9:30
DEATH TO SMOOCHY (R) 1:20 4:00 10:20
ICE AGE (PG) 12:10 2:15 4:25 6:45 9:00
Senior Movie Tuesday
CHARGING LANES doors open at 6:45pm

• NO PASSES • NO SUPERSAVERS
Tickets & showtimes available at cinemark.com

May '02

ARTS ON CAMPUS...
A monthly calendar brought to you by the UMass Arts Council.

Events

Thursday, May 2
THEATER: Crossing John at the Crossroads a theatrical blending of live music, video, and dance that traces a young man's search for wisdom and the mysterious figure who guides him on his journey. 8 p.m. in the Rand Theater. $14-25. Through 5/4. Also showing 5/8-11.
MUSIC: Orchestra & Voices University Orchestra, Chamber Choir & Chorale with Lorraine Manciewicz, tr. & F. Wayne Abercrombie, directors. 8 p.m. in Concert Hall. $14-25.
Friday, May 3
COMEDY: NE Comedy Improv Jam Ten improv sit-com theatres including Mission Improvable and Toast'd as well as other student groups from across the country. 8 p.m. in the Campus Center 546-6442. Also on 5/4 in Herter Hall.
DANCE: Bill Shannon Dubbed Crutch Master for his breakdancing prowess, a unique fusion of movement integrates disability based crutch technique with a rhythmic lexicon. 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. $14-25.
MUSIC: Five College Early Music Collegium with Robert Eisenstein, director. 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. $14-25.
THEATER: Paula Vogel Pulitzer prize winning playwright will offer two lectures at 1:30 p.m. in the Curtain Theater and 4:30 p.m. in the Rand Theater. 545-3490.
Saturday, May 4
CULTURAL NIGHT: Native American Social performances by the Native American Indian dancing group Music River Rain River and the Mashpee Wampanoag Singers. 7 p.m. in the Cage Student Lounge. 545-3646.
MUSIC: Transformations Bill Lob Brown & Gregory Shedeker, directors. 8 p.m. in Concert Hall. $14-25. 11 through 5/5.
WORKSHOP: Scenes & Arias Opera workshop with Elizabeth Parker, director. 3 p.m. in the Arts Center Rooms 44. $14-22.
Monday, May 6
MUSIC: Vocal & Instrumental Jazz Vocal & Chapel Jazz Ensembles with Catherine Jensen-Hole & David Sperry, directors. 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. $14-22.
Tuesday, May 7
THEATER: Martha From Scotland comes a delightful combination of theater and puppetry about friendship and trust. 7:30 p.m. in Concert Hall. $14-25.

Exhibits

AUGUSTA SAVAGE GALLERY
101 New Africa House 545-5177
M-TU 1-7 pm; W-F 1-5 pm
Clay: Pinster and Metal Sculpture by Students of Dorrance Hill
Through May 3
Student Exhibits
By Erin Gillespie, Mingung Kim & Matthew Melkon
May 6-10
Reception May 6, 5-7p.m.
CENTRAL GALLERY
Central Residential Area
Infirmary Way-Wheeler House
545-0680
M-TH 3-6 pm; SU 2-5 pm
BFA Exhibitions
Peter Gordon May 5-9
Veronica Beal May 19-23
CHAMPDEN GALLERY & SCULPTURE GARDEN
Southwest Residential Area 545-0680
M-TH 12-6; SU 2-5 pm
MFA Thesis Exhibitions
Annie Akerbrook May 5-9
Amy Allen May 12-16
Kelly Weiburn May 19-23
Nora Valdez: The Journey
Through May 24
HERTER ART GALLERY
125A Herter Hall 545-0976
M-F 11-4 pm; SA-SU 1-4 pm
MFA Exhibitions
Through May 10
Junior/Senior Awards Exhibition
May 20-26
Reception May 26, 11 a.m.-1 p.m.
STUDENT UNION GALLERY
Student Union Building 545-0792
M-TH 10-5 pm; F 10-3 pm
BFA Exhibitions
Anne Symmes
Adventures of a Nut
by Susan Loomis
Through May 3
MFA Exhibitions
Babble by Jason Vasu
May 6-10
Reception: May 7, 4-6 p.m.
UNIVERSITY GALLERY
Fine Arts Center 545-3670
TU-F 11-4:30 pm; SA-SU 2-5 pm
The Culture of Violence
Through May 17
Arthur Siegal Woodcuts
through May 17

Live College students are offered a discounted admission at Fine Arts Center events
Sponsored, in part, by a grant from the UMass Arts Council

5/02

UMass Arts Council·101 Hasbrouck Lab·545-0202

College Self-Storage

Monthly/Annual Rentals
College Payment Plans
Minutes From Campus
Electronic Card Access
Security Fenced Perimeter
Multi-Size Units

Route 9, Belchertown
323-9792

Rental Office
1040 N.Pleasant St. #410
Amherst, MA 01002
413.549.0145

NEW PUFFTON VILLAGE

Serving All Of Your Rental Needs

Hey, We Are 1 Year Old!!!
Voted Best New Bar/Club in the Valley!

THE HARP

THURSDAY
Dazes
Top Shelf
Scottish Rockers

SATURDAY
Yellow Brick Ed
Original Rock

Party with us this Thursday, May 2nd
Belhaven Night "Keep the Glass" $2.50 Pint
Cool Give Aways: T-shirts/Barstuff etc.
NO COVER
(413) 548-6900
163 Sunderland Rd. Amherst, MA
Just off the bus route next to Cowl's Lumber
"Start Your Own Tradition"

UPC presents...

SPRING CONCERT
May 5, 2002
Mullins Center

featuring:

The Roots

guster

Sunshine fix

Southwest Battle of the Bands Winner

MC's
DJ Menance
DJ Playtime
DJ Big Phil

LUDACRIS

Free for UMass students $15 for 5-College $30 for public

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. - Now Available, 1&2 bedroom apts. Leases begin June, July, Aug or Sept. 1 year lease. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywine-apts.com stop by or call (413)549-0600.

3- Bedroom Apartment in Puffton Village. Available June 1st. Great location! 549-4097.

2 bedroom Apt. Millvalley. Asking $900.00, nego. Avail 6/1. 413-896-9565.

Summer Sublet with fall option. Puffton 3 BR/ 2 BA. June 1st. 549-4814.

2 bedroom apt. Take over our lease and SAVE $$$. Free heat + hot water on bus line. 253-4876.

2 bedroom Puffton Apt. Take over lease. Available June 1 with fall option. 549-7685.

Take over our lease in June $905/M Brandywine. Call Dan 549-8518.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Downtown Amherst: 19b South Prospect St. 2 bedroom June 1. 253-2515. Great for couple.

AUTO FOR SALE

89 Honda Accord $1500 OBO 259-0068.

Maxima 1989. Original owner. 154000 miles. Good car Jim 545-5677.

COMPUTERS

We pay CASH for your used lab tops 413-584-8857.

Color Laptop $99 Pentium tower/ CD Rom $99 with color monitor $139. HURRY! 413-584-8857.

EMPLOYMENT

Week cleaning. $6.50/ hourly. Part-time references 549-0415.

Summer Work! Student work program! Earn great summer income! $18.25 base-appt. Customer service and sales. Scholarships available. 732-2252. www.morelocations.com

EMPLOYMENT

Promoters wanted!! Student Travel Services is looking for individuals to promote spring break. Enjoy unlimited earning potential and free travel while building a solid resume! Call 800-648-4849. Or visit www.ststravel.com

Camp Counselor wanted for Tennis, Gymnastics, Water Ski, Arts, and more! Gain valuable experience at award-winning camps, while having the summer of a lifetime. Apply on-line at www.pine-forest.com

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individual, full and part time positions available immediately. Only those able to work the upcoming summer should apply. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413)584-4746.

EMPLOYMENT

TEENAGE BICYCLE TOUR LEADERS NEEDED: Be a Teen Tour Leader this summer. Trips in USA, Canada, Europe, We need a 4-week time commitment, salary plus expenses paid. Student Hosteling Program, P.O. Box 419, CONWAY, MA 01341. 800-343-6132 www.bicycletrips.com

PCA/ Babysitter wanted 256-3763.

Be the Campus Red Bull connection. Join our team and help build one of the world's leading brands, you'll have a blast while gaining invaluable marketing experience. You'll even earn a little extra spending cash. Think about it. It's a lot less dangerous than selling term papers! Apply at redbull-college.com.

FOR RENT

2 bedroom apt. on bus route avail. June 1 w/fall option $905/mo heat hot water included 549-1885.

FOR SALE

King size bed $75 and other furniture 253-1140.

Desk for sale new wooden 4 drawer perfect condition call Meg 549-0072.

Huge Lawn sale! Lots of good + cheap stuff. 9 Edgehill Place, Amherst. May 11.

Furniture for sale call 549-2914. Table and chairs, breakfast bar, TV stand and more.

Mountain bike-99 Rocky Mountain fusion 19" excellent cond. See www.bikes.com with car rack, extras. $350. 585-0517.

Furniture for sale call 259-0068. Book-Shelf, Coffee-table, bed and more.

HOUSE FOR RENT

Hadley 5 bedroom plus. Newer home five minutes from UMASS. June occupancy $2600.00 month. 549-4270.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENT

Guitar-Cort Elec/Acoustic cutaway. Mint never played. With Fishman preamp and case. $350. 585-0517.

ROOM FOR RENT

Spacious, share house with fun couple in scenic Montague. $333. May 28-Aug 31, call 367-9822.

1 bedroom in Alpine commons. Excellent roommates. Call Bryan 253-9499.

Looking for 1/2 roommates to share apartment for summer. Call 549-2676.

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 More needed to share 3 bdrm. Apt. N Amherst- townhouses $375 mo. , bus rte. June 1 – May 05. Needed ASAP Call Shannon. 549-9394 or 508-241-3183.

Need a place for fall sem. only? Share our 3 bdrm.! $375 mo, bus rte. Call Shannon ASAP! 549-9394 or 508-241-3183.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female(s) to share 2 bedroom Brandywine Apt. starting June 1 . 549-1988.

Graduating and moving to the Boston area. I am looking for a third roommate to share a 3 bedroom house in Arlington if interested call 253-7426.

Puffton. Looking for roommate to share 3 bdrm. Available June 1, Call Christina 549-0209.

2 roommate Brandywine Apt. starting June 1. Cheap rent includes HT/HTW. Call Tom 549-5436.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

ST. JUDE

May the sacred heart of Jesus be loved and glorified. St. Jude-Powerfull Intercessor-True relative of Jesus-Pray for us. M.

SUMMER SUBLET

Brandywine. 2 bdrm. Cheap. 3rd floor. Furnished, AC. 549-4110 Bus route.

SUMMER SUBLET

One large bedroom available at Cliffside apts. Starting June 1 partly furnished 617-842-4657.

Nice 3 bedroom townhouse. Practically on campus. Call Joe 549-9441.

Brandywine. 2 bdrm. Available June 1. Call 549-1988.

TO SUBLET

2 bedroom. Free heat and hot water. Fall option, 253-9629.

1 bedroom Brandywine Apt. Sublet available June 1 Fall option 549-7148.

2 bedrooms available in a Puffton 3 bedroom apt., 1 with fall option. Available 6/1 or end of May. 549-5837.

2 Bedroom apartment partially furnished available June 1st to sublet w/option to lease on bus route. 413-549-9612.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

3	CBS/3
4	NESN
5	Fox Sport NE
6	PBS/57
7	HSCN Movie Channel
8	WB/20
9	HSCN Movie Channel
12	TV Guide Channel
13	FOX/61
14	ABC/40
15	NBC/22
16	International Channel
17	UMATV
18	HSCN Info Channel
19	ESPN
20	ESPN 2
21	UVU-19
22	ESPN Classic
23	Cinemax-East
24	CNN
25	CNN HL
26	Weather Channel
27	Learning Channel
28	History Channel
29	A&E
30	Discovery Health
31	Food Network
32	NASA
33	Home & Garden TV
34	Travel Channel
35	Lifetime
36	CNBC
37	Tech TV
38	BET
39	UPN-38
40	USA
41	TNN
42	MTV
43	CMT
44	VH-1
45	TNT
46	TBS
47	E! Entertainment
48	Sci-Fi Channel
49	Court TV
50	Nick at Nite
51	Comedy Central
52	Cartoon Network
53	Game Show Network
54	TV Land
55	FOX Family
56	Univision
57	Telemundo
58	College TV Network
59	C-SPAN
60	C-SPAN2
61	Bloomberg Television

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass.

Client: _____ Date: _____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Deadlines: 2:30 p.m. - 3 business days prior to publication
Student rate: $3 per inch per day. Non-student rate: $6 per inch per day

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 2, 2002

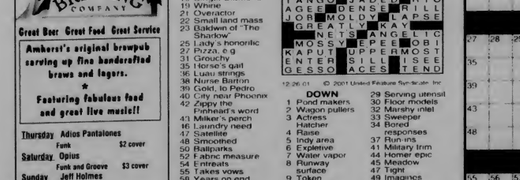
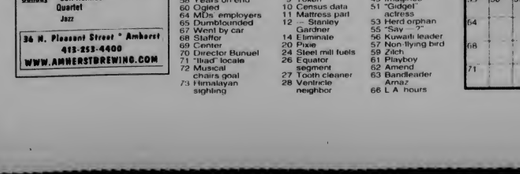
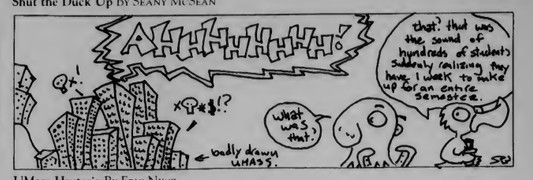
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Clifford-Rad	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Globe Trekker "New England"		Frontline "Terror and Tehran"		Lime Rock Park		This Old Hse.	Hometime
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	Survivor: Marquesas (N)		CSI: Crime Scene Invstgtn.		Agency "Double-crossover"		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Survivor: Marquesas (N)		CSI: Crime Scene Invstgtn.		Agency "Double-crossover"		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	America's Funniest Home Videos: The Battle of the Best (N)				Primetime Thursday		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	Charmed (In Stereo)		Charmed (N) (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Friends (N)	Friends	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	ER "Tre Letter" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	20	Sabrina W.tch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Charmed (In Stereo)		Charmed (N) (In Stereo)		News	Home Imp.	Blind Date	Blind Date
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Friends (N)	Friends	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	ER "Tre Letter" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	★★½ "Return of the Jedi" (1983)		Science Fiction) Mark Hamill, Harrison Ford. (In Stereo)		News		News	Raymond
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends (N)	Friends	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	ER "Tre Letter" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		This Old Hse.	Doctors	Frontline "Terror and Tehran"		Mystery! Hetty Wainthropp		Charlie Rose (N) (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	America's Funniest Home Videos: The Battle of the Best (N)				Primetime Thursday		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Frasier	Frasier	WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo)				News	Ent. Tonight	5th Wheel	Shipmates
WTBS	29	Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Roseanne	★ "Wild Wild West" (1999, Western) Will Smith, Kevin Kline				★½ "Switchback" (1997, Suspense) (PA) Dennis Quaid
A&E	69	Law & Order "Corruption"		The View (In Stereo)		Biography: Leslie Nielsen		Columbo "Identity Crisis"				Law & Order "I.D." (In Stereo)
CNN	32	Moneyline		Crossfire		Live From... (N)	The Point	Larry King Live (N)		Newsnight		Crossfire	Moneyline
COM	30	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Geeks	★★½ "Strictly Business" (1991, Comedy) Tommy Davidson.				South Park	Man Show	Daily Show	Sat. Night Live
DISC	23	Wild Asia		Wildest South America		Dead Sea Scrolls, Part 2		Ocean Mysteries		X-Creatures		Dead Sea Scrolls, Part 2
ESPN	33	Sportscenter (N)		Stanley Cup Playoffs Conference Semifinal Game 1 -- Teams to Be Announced. (Live) (N)						Baseball Tonight (N) (N)		Sportscenter (N)
LIFE	59	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Fight for Justice: The Nancy Conn Story" (1995) Marlu Hiniker.				Woman Docs (N)
MTV	43	Fear (In Stereo)		Direct Effect (In Stereo)		Prime Time Players (In Stereo)		MTV Special	WWF Tough	WWF Tough	Celebrity	Jackass	Dismissed
NICK	25	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb...	Told by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Chesn	Chesn	All in Family	All in Family
SCIFI	63	Star Trek "In Any Other Name"		Star Trek "The Lowly Years"		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		"Deathstalker II: The Warriors From Hell" (1988, Fantasy)				Crowing Over	Crowing Over
TLC	49	Greatest Mountain -- Everest		Medical Detect	Medical Detect	Secrets of Forensic Science		Ramses the Great		Great Books: Wuthering		Secrets of Forensic Science
TNT	20	NYPD Blue "It Takes a Village"		Pretender "Flesh & Blood"		NBA Basketball Playoffs First Round -- Teams to Be Announced. (Live)				Inside NBA		★★ "Above the Rim" (1994) (PA)
USA	62	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG (In Stereo)		Nash Bridges (In Stereo)		JAG "Pilot" (In Stereo)				JAG (In Stereo)
HBO	26	Real Sports	★★ "Cats & Dogs" (2001) Jeff Goldblum. PG			★★½ "Forrest Gump" (1994, Comedy-Drama) Tom Hanks. (In Stereo) PG-13				On the Record		Q-String Dives	Q-String Dives
MAX	27	★★½ "Hollow Man" (2000, Suspense) Kevin Bacon. R				★★½ "Timecop" (1994, Science Fiction) R		White Face		★★★ "Meet the Parents" (2000, Comedy) Robert De Niro. PG-13
SHOW	28	★★★ "Impromptu" (1991, Comedy-Drama) Judy Davis. PG-13				★★★½ "The Ocean Mile" (1999, Drama) Tom Hanks, David Morse. ITV (In Stereo) R						★★ "Essex Boys" (2000) R



Adam and Eric By Ross Burach



Adam and Eric By Ross Burach



Shut the Duck Up By Seany McSean

Blink and Boobies By Doug and Webhead

Shut the Duck Up By Seany McSean

UMass Hysteria By Eric Nycz

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Highbrow By Aaron Eppy

Quote of the Day

"I'd rather be whistling in the dark."

-They Might Be Giants

Amherst Weather

Thursday	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 67 LOW: 44	HIGH: 61 LOW: 32	HIGH: 69 LOW: 32

Horoscopes

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Cheap Date Tip #67: Beer tasting. Grab a random person and start chugging; but don't forget your beer goggles!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Dating Tip #108: Dinner is for the birds; get your slam on and then if it's good a midnight snack is in order.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) –Cheap Date Tip #257: Go bowling. If the date doesn't turn out that great, you're sure to at least have grabbed someone's balls.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Dating Tip #69: Go deep-sea fishing. Yeah, you know what we're talking about.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Dating Tip #42: If your date is going well, scream out "Who's your Daddy?"

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) –Cheap Date Tip #81: Naked dates are the best dates.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Dating Tip #45: Go to the movies and make fun of all the couples on dates. Now, that's romance!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Dating Tip #2: Go running. By the end of the date you'll already be hot, sweaty and breathing heavy.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) –Cheap Date Tip #4: Go to a petting zoo. Enough said.

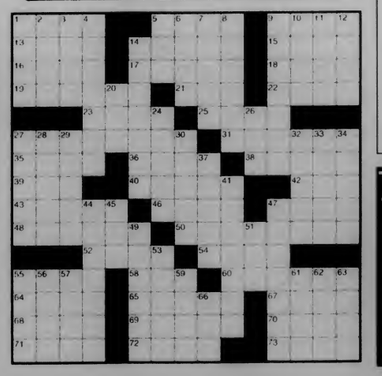
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Dating Tip #73: Goodnight kiss? Screw that, just get laid!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Cheap Date Tip #15: Do laundry together. If she still wants to go out after that, bless her.

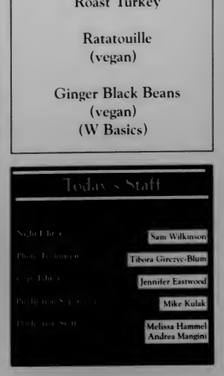
ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Cheap Date Tip #99: Rent movies. Sure she's expecting When Harry Met Sally, but surprise her with porn.

A.I. By Joseph Hession

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Great Beer Great Food Great Service
Amherst's original brewpub serving up fine handcrafted brews and lagers.
★
Featuring fabulous food and great live music!!
Thursday Adios Pantalones Funk $2 cover
Saturday Opius Funk and Groove $3 cover
Sunday Jeff Holmes Quartet Jazz
34 N. Pleasant Street * Amherst
413-253-4400
WWW.AMHERSTBREWING.COM



ACROSS
1 Be too fond of
5 Publish
9 Clubbie weapon
13 Skating jump
14 Rodeo noose
15 Frankenstein's servant
16 Jurd
17 Complete
18 Singer Diamond
19 Whine
21 Overactor
22 Small land mass
23 Baldwin of "The Shadow"
25 Lady's honorific
27 Pizza, e.g.
31 Grouchy
35 Herne's gal
36 Luau strings
38 Nurse Barton
39 Gold, to Pedro
40 City near Phoenix
42 Zippy the Pinhead's word
43 Milker's gear
46 Laundry need
47 Satellite
48 Smoothed
50 Railparks
52 Fabric measure
54 Entreats
55 Takes vows
58 Years on end
60 Ogled
64 MDs' employers
65 Dumbfounded
67 Went by car
68 Staffer
69 Center
70 Director Bunuel
71 "Iliad" locale
72 Musical chairs goal
73 Himalayan sighting



PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

O	L	L	A		F	R	A	U		O	S	A	K	A
C	A	A	N		L	O	I	N		R	A	D	A	R
T	U	R	N	T	A	B	L	E		C	L	A	N	K
E	G	G		E	V	E		S		S	H	A	M	E
T	H	E		M	O	S		P	A	M
			A	P	R		B	U	R	R	I	T	O
T	A	N	G	O		J	A	D	E		R	I	O
A	G	E			D	E	N	S	E		R	I	L	L
J	O	B		M	O	L	D	Y		L	A	P	S	E
	G	R	E	A	T	L	Y		K	A	Y
		N	E	T	S		A	N	G	E	L	I	C
M	O	S	S	Y		E	P	E	E		O	B	I
K	A	P	U	T		U	P	P	E	R	M	O	S	T
E	N	T	E	R		S	I	L	L		I	S	E	E
G	E	S	S	O		A	C	E	S		T	E	N	D

12-26-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

DOWN
1 Pond makers
2 Wagon pullers
3 Actress Hatcher
4 Raise
5 Indy area
6 Explosive
7 Water vapor
8 Runway surface
9 Token
10 Census data
11 Mattress part
12 — Stanley Gardner
14 Eliminate
20 Pixie
24 Sleet mil fuels
26 Equator segment
27 Tooth cleaner
28 Ventricle neighbor
29 Serving utensil
30 Floor models
32 Merely: Intel
33 Sweeper
34 Bored responses
37 Run-ins
41 Military trim
44 Homer epic
45 Meadow
47 Tight
49 Imagines
51 "Gidget" actress
53 Herd orphan
55 "Siv" Jr.
56 Kuwaiti leader
57 Non-flying bird
59 Zilch
61 Playboy
62 Amend
63 Bandleader Arnaz
66 L.A. hours

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Vegetable Tortellini Soup

Beef Stroganoff

Honey Garlic Chicken Wings

Vegetable Chow Mein

Oney Ga (vegan)

DINNER

Vegetable Tortellini Soup

Roast Turkey

Ratatouille (vegan)

Ginger Black Beans (vegan) (W Basics)

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Sam Wilkinson
Photo Technician	Tibora Greeve-Blum
Copy Editor	Jennifer Eastwood
Production Assistant	Mike Kulak
Production Staff	Melissa Hammel, Andrea Mangini

DAILY COLLEGIAN

SPORTS

COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: ERIC SODERSTROM

Jogging through history

Despite letdown, Softball continues record streak

By Andy Vogt
Collegian Staff

UMass	4
BU	1

Because of its amazing run during the last month and a half, the Massachusetts softball team was due for a letdown. And with Boston University visiting its home turf yesterday, the squad had that nearly felt that disappointment.

Still, the Minutewomen found a way to beat the Terriers 4-1 and extend their streak to 29 consecutive wins.

On a breezy evening with the Softball Complex stands packed, UMass did little that was spectacular but executed enough to eke out the victory.

"I did not like that game at all," Head Coach Elaine Sortino said. "I just thought we were flat and just very uninspired."

The UMass bats were held relatively quiet by the BU pitching, banging out only five hits during the contest. However, the Minutewomen were able to take advantage of several Terrier miscues in order to plate their runs.

Senior Teri Rooney scored on an error by BU third baseman Jennifer Shields to open the scoring in the first inning. Jamie Cahalan followed with a single, driving in Scooter Wheeler and Kaila Holtz stole home later in the inning to give the Minutewomen all the offense they would need.

BU was able to cut the deficit to two in the third inning on an RBI base hit by Julie Hennicke but could not dent into the UMass lead any further. UMass added an insurance tally in the fourth when Emily Robustelli walked with the bases loaded, bringing in Anna Perez.

Kaila Holtz notched her 20th victory of the year, allowing one run on four hits and striking out five in the complete game. The win was made all the more special with her parents Al and Ann in attendance, all the way from North Vancouver, B.C.

"This is the first time they've been here together, so it's really special," Holtz said. "I want to share this with them."

Although it picked up the win, UMass committed several baserunning blunders and was not nearly as effective with the stick as it has shown this year. But the Minutewomen have been unable to practice for nearly a week due to inclement weather in the area, which potentially contributed to their sluggishness yesterday. That combined with the grueling series this past weekend against Dayton in grueling conditions and the fact that UMass is a team in need of finding stability, Sortino said that it all amounts to being able to get back into the normal routine.

"I think our players need to practice and I think the weather has been really detrimental to us," Sortino said. "We really need to do some things. We're not a team that can take days off."

With only four games left before the Maroon and White travel to Kingston, R.I. for the Atlantic 10 championship, Sortino and her squad have plenty of time to right the ship. If the weather holds up, that process will start today.

"We just weren't sharp," Sortino said. "We played like we were in a fog and I think we need a workout."

Jamie SOFTBALL page 8

Ashley Bikker (left) and Heidi Robustelli helped the UMass softball team extend its winning streak to 29 games.

Minutemen win again on squeeze in extra innings

By Jesse Greenspun
Collegian Staff

UMass	11
UVM	10

Apparently, Massachusetts baseball coach Mike Stone loves ending games with a squeeze bunt.

Only two weeks removed from an extra-inning squeeze that ended a 19-18 thrilling victory over UConn, Stone tried it again in the 13th inning of yesterday's match-up with Vermont.

Once again, this strategy proved effective, as Mike Athas laid down a beautiful bunt to plate Aaron Senez (who led off the inning with a single to right) and give the Minutemen the 11-10 lead. In the bottom half of the inning, there would be no UVM magic, as Eric Chown ignored his past struggles to shut down the Catamounts and pick up his second victory of the year.

Overall, Chown went 7.2 innings in relief, replacing starter Scott Ratliff in the sixth and finishing it out from that point on.

At the beginning of the contest, things looked bleak for UMass. Vermont got out to a 4-0 lead in the first, which was capped off by Jeff Tartigo's two-run shot to left. In the third, the Maroon and White closed the gap to two behind a Mike Kulak RBI triple and a Senez RBI single, but UVM extended the lead back to four in the bottom half of the inning.

The Catamounts were able to contain the Minuteman offense in the next frame, but it broke out in the fifth and sixth, scoring seven runs in the two innings to take the 9-6 advantage.

However, the lead would be short-lived, as UVM took advantage of four hits and two UMass errors to plate three runs and take a 10-9 lead going into the ninth.

With the Maroon and White down to its final out, Derrick Durepo singled to right before coming home on Connell Clark's double down the rightfield line, knotting the game at 10 and setting up the 13th inning heroics.

With the win, the Maroon and White improved to 17-21, ending Vermont's eight-game win streak in the process. The Catamounts now stand at 22-14.

Hitting stars for UMass included Clark, Senez and Jeff Altieri, all of who totaled three hits on the afternoon. Altieri also had three RBIs in the contest, with two of them coming on a base hit to left in the fifth.

Now, the Maroon and White looks to carry its momentum into today's match-up with Harvard on Earl Lorden Field in Amherst. This is the second time the two teams have met this season, as the Minutemen pulled out a 5-3 win in the Beanpot Tournament on April 23.

In that contest, UMass used good pitching performances from freshmen Keith Doherty and Neil Scheller, as well as a three-run sixth inning to secure the victory.

Hitting has not been the Crimson's strong suit this year, as they come into the contest with a 15-21 record and a .264 overall batting average. Trey Hendricks leads the squad, batting .373 with five home runs and 25 RBIs. However, shortstop Mark Mager leads the team in ribbies with 26.

On the mound, Ben Crockett (4-3, 3.16 ERA) and Justin Newedle (4-2, 5.05 ERA) both have had plenty of rest and should be available to go for Harvard.

Matt Brady's All-Time Team

Cochrane's defense and intensity caught him acclaim

1. Cobb	LF
2. Wagner	SS
3. Ruth	RF
4. Mays	CF
5. Gehrig	1B
6. Schmidt	3B
7. Alomar	2B
8. Cochrane	C
9. (5/07)	P
10. (5/09)	Mar.

Best Of The Rest:
Catchers

1. Johnny Bench
2. Ivan Rodriguez
3. Mike Piazza

This is part eight of a 10-part series portraying the 10 members of "Brady's All-Time Team — a lineup consisting of the best Major League Baseball players ever.

"Lose a 1-0 game and you didn't want to get into the clubhouse with Cochrane. You'd be ducking studs and gloves and bats and whatever else would fly." — teammate Doc Cramer

Credentials (all-time rank): .320 career average (53rd); 857 runs batted in; 1041 runs; two-time American League MVP (1928, 1934); one of the best defensive catchers ever.

The Argument: Well, until the other day I was sure I was going to pick Ivan Rodriguez for this position, but then I decided I would take another look at the numbers. So I looked today and did a lot of thinking and I came up with some conclusions. I found out how much I've been dissepecting Johnny Bench for all these years and I found out just how good Mickey Cochrane was.

Bench was a fantastic player in the '70s, one of the keystones to the Big Red Machine. His 389 home runs and 1376 RBI are incredibly impressive considering also his 10 consecutive Gold Gloves. I never realized just how good Bench was defensively, but as good as he is, he's still third best of all-time behind Cochrane and Rodriguez. And his .267 career average is so hard for me to overlook, even though he walked enough to post a .344 career on base percentage. Outside of his peak years, he faded considerably, which certainly hurts him in my eyes. He's a close second in a tough race for the top spot.

Rodriguez was cruising along until a couple of years ago when he began getting bitten by the injury bug. Obviously, he is the best defensive catcher of all-time, combining stellar ability with a cannon of an arm. His combination of power and speed is up there among catchers, but he can't draw a walk to save his life and his injury prone nature is of a concern. If he has a few more solid years that he plays injury free, he might find his way back to the top of this list.

Mike Piazza is the best hitter ever to play catcher. But he's a first baseman who only plays catcher in the Major Leagues today because of how many teams there are to play for. If there were only 20 teams, it's likely he would not have ever played behind the plate. Still I couldn't keep him off this list considering he will easily break the all-time homer mark for backstops and his .325 career average would be tops puts him 39th ever, tops for catchers. His defense has improved over the last couple of years, but not enough to make the team as a starter. I'll love having a weapon like him on the bench though.

Note: Josh Gibson was not considered because this article considers only Major Leaguers. Stay tuned next year for my All-Time Negro League Team.

What you didn't know: There's probably a lot you didn't know about Cochrane. First off, he is the only Hall of Famer to have another HOFer named after him. Mickey Mantle's dad was a huge baseball fan in Oklahoma and the great outfielder was named for Cochrane, who starred for the Philadelphia A's great squads of the late '20s and early '30s before moving to Detroit for the twilight of his career.

Cochrane was incredibly smooth behind the plate, considered the prototype catcher defensively. He was so good in fact, that he won the MVP in '34 despite only hitting only two homeruns and 76 RBI. I know what you're thinking: it must have been an off year. But no, in '34 Gehrig won the AL Triple Crown. Cochrane's defense and competitiveness was enough to overcome his lack of power that season.

The competitiveness is the thing about Cochrane that makes him desirable as a GM. He hated losing more than possibly anyone since him. His fire drove him to play so much above his ability, but his ability was nothing to scoff at either. He'll be a key to the middle defense and will knock in a few runs to boot.

Matt Brady is a Collegian columnist.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Mickey Cochrane, the reason Mr. Mantle names his son Mickey.

A MESSAGE FROM THE EDITOR
ED/OP PAGE 4.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
WEEKEND EDITION
FRIDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-NINE ☆☆☆☆☆ 5.03.02

Dead child found in dorm bathroom

By S.J. Port
Collegian Staff

A maintenance staff member discovered the corpse of a newborn male in the trashcan of the second floor of James dormitory in Southwest yesterday at approximately 7:30 a.m.

The mother, a resident of the dormitory, was taken to an area hospital to receive medical attention. An autopsy will be done on the corpse of the baby today. So far, it is unclear whether the child was stillborn or alive at birth. At 8:15 a.m. University of Massachusetts police and State Police from Troop B, Northampton barracks, arrived at the scene.

The bathroom in which the newborn was found was blocked off to students, creating confusion for residents as to what had happened and why the police were in their hallway.

The State Police, as well as campus police, remained in and around James dormitory throughout the day. Maintenance workers were sent home, and resident advisors were notified of the incident in order to assist students.

The District Attorney's office would not return phone calls requesting comment. Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Javier Cevallos declined to comment, saying that the issue was in the jurisdiction of the State Police.

Area Director Ron Trunzo, and James/Emerson Resident Director Susan St. John each issued a statement of "no comment" to the Daily Collegian and other press associations. In addition, all RAs on staff at James and Emerson were warned not to speak to the press.

Students coming in and out of James yesterday had either no comment or knew nothing of the incident.

A meeting was held at 8 p.m. yesterday for James and Emerson residents to inform them of the event, and advise them on how to handle the attention they might possibly receive from press and other students.

Trunzo, St. John and resident directors from each of the dormitories in Southwest-North attended the meeting, with resident advisors and residents from James and Emerson. In addition, staff from Mental Health Services, Health Services, and Assistant Dean of Students Merle Ryan were in attendance to assist any student with questions on how to get help for themselves or others in need. Students at the meeting discussed their view of the event and how it had thus far affected them.

One resident broke into tears as she described her confusion and astonishment as she emerged from her room across from the bathroom to find police blocking her from entering the bathroom to take a shower. Although the bathroom had been taped off, the door had not been closed, allowing residents to witness the crime scene. The resident said that she understood the need for the police's presence and did not mind it as long as they were polite and respectful of the emotional state of the residents, which she did not feel they had been that morning.

A friend of the mother's spoke up during the meeting to ask that residents not speak with the press, or help to further rumors regarding the incident and what may or may not have happened. She hoped that if the press did not receive further information they would "drop the story."

Other residents spoke to the importance of creating a more educated atmosphere, especially in an all-female dorm such as James, on how to find help if a resident did become pregnant. A resident in attendance stated how she had had trouble even finding the number for the Everywoman's Center, and couldn't image where to look for help concerning a pregnancy.

RAs at the meeting appealed to residents to ask them for help, saying that if the RAs didn't know, they would find out any information their resident needed.

The meeting became a forum for residents to ask for help and discuss the emotions surrounding the incident, but advisors and administrators running the meeting halted debate over how the issue was handled by the mother.

Residents were asked to seek help at any time in the coming days, and advised to curb drinking and partying as their emotional states in combination with the alcohol may result in more tragic events.

Andrew Merritt, Melissa Hammel, Sam Wilkinson, Scott Eldridge II, Matt Despres, Matt Sacco and Ken Campbell contributed to this story.

JAMES SCANTLEBURY/COLLEGIAN

Local and State police are investigating the discovery of a baby's corpse in the second floor bathroom of James dormitory.

Child abandonment on the rise

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

During the past 10 years, there has been an increasingly high number of cases of child abandonment across the United States.

One incident that got a great deal of media attention occurred in 1997 in Freehold, N.J. Melissa Drexler was charged of murder and endangering the life of a child. She delivered a boy in the restroom of her school prom, strangled the six-pound child and threw him into a trashcan still alive, and then returned to the dance. She was convicted of aggravated manslaughter and was sentenced to 13 years of prison.

Another incident took place in the neighboring state of Delaware in November 1996 when Brian Peterson, Jr. and his girlfriend Amy Grossman, both 18, were charged with the murder of their newborn son.

Peterson drove three hours from his school at the University of Delaware to pick up Grossman; the two then checked into a Comfort Inn in Newark where they delivered the child, and then placed it in a trashcan.

The couple had dated during high school and were both from an affluent community.

Following the birth of the child, Grossman returned to Gettysburg College to her dormitory room. It was learned that her child was missing when she sought medical care for complications relating to the birth.

The autops revealed that the child was born healthy but officially died of a skull fracture and injuries to the brain.

Both Peterson and Grossman pled guilty to manslaughter and now face 10 years in prison rather than

Tam to CHILDREN page 3

Campus faced sexual assaults in past

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

This is the fifth part of a weeklong series addressing the issue of sexual assault.

This month is dedicated to the awareness of sexual assaults both on the University of Massachusetts-Amherst campus and across the nation. As a way of focusing upon the importance of safety, The Collegian is running a story each day this week highlighting different safety issues on campus and the groups that deal with them.

Sexual assaults have been a major issue for students on the UMass-Amherst campus within the last few years.

Recently there have been a number of assaults on campus, one taking place on April 18 outside the Fine Arts Center at approximately 10 p.m. when a woman was sexually assaulted by three men. The incident is still under investigation by the University of Massachusetts Police Department.

While some sexual assaults go unsolved on campus, quick acting by both the victim and the police can also result in apprehending the individuals suspected to be involved. On Oct. 22 of this year, police did just that.

Two individuals reported being assaulted on campus at the "maze" near the McGuirk Alumni Stadium. After hearing the description of the vehicle involved in the incident, the police pulled over a vehicle matching that description driving on state Route 9.

The individuals in the vehicle matched the descriptions of the three suspects. Police arrested 18-year-old Luis G. Sumba of Northampton, Mass. on the charges of rape of a child with force, and 20-year-old Luis E. Sumba of Northampton for attempted rape, and indecent assault and battery on a person 14 years of age or older.

Edgar Guzman, 22, of Amherst was arrested for attempted rape, indecent assault and battery on a person 14 years of age or older.

Perhaps the most publicized incidents that occurred on campus in the past four years were the string of sexual assaults that took place on campus two years ago.

The first recent incident of sexual assault two years ago began in Nov. 2, 1999 when a student reported being raped between the hours of 5:30 and 6:30 p.m.

Exactly one week later another sexual assault occurred on campus in broad daylight in the center of campus. A female student reported that she was grabbed from behind at approximately 2 p.m. and pulled into the bushes near the campus pond. The third rape allegedly took place on Nov. 15 when a woman was assaulted at 9:30 p.m. on a sidewalk near the campus pond. A fourth attack was reported but then later turned out to be false.

During this time period, there was a number of vigils and rallies for safety and an increased awareness on campus.

No one was apprehended in conjunction with the assaults.

JAMES SCANTLEBURY/COLLEGIAN

When it rains, it pours

The constantly poor weather has put a serious hamper on the current Southwest week events.

Weekend Events

UMASS – There will be a Global Sustainability Festival at the University of Massachusetts from May 3 to May 5. Contact www.sustafest.org for more information.

UMASS – Crossing John at the Crossroads, a multi-media theater piece created by UMass Theater Professor Gil McCauley and composer Bill Lowe, will be performed at the Fine Arts Center's Rand Theater on Friday, May 3, and Saturday, May 4, at 8 p.m. Performances will also be held the following week at 8 p.m. on Thursday, May 9, Friday, May 10 and Saturday, May 11. The piece, centered on a young man's search for wisdom, draws on multi-cultural influences and blends text, music, video and dance. Tickets are range from $4 to $7.

UMASS – The Brothers of Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity are sponsoring their sixth annual basketball tournament at the Southwest Horseshoe courts on Sunday, May 5. Games start at noon. For more information call 413-545-1123.

SMITH – A Gamelan concert will be performed on Saturday, May 4, at 4 p.m. in Sage Hall's Sweeney Concert Hall. Javanese dancers will accompany Smith's Javanese music ensemble in a performance of "Lawung," the traditional Javanese lance dance. The piece is directed by Sumarsam and Urip Sri Maeny. This event is free and open to the public.

MOUNT HOLYOKE – Holi, the Hindu festival of color, will be celebrated at Mount Holyoke's Skinner Green on Saturday, May 4 beginning at 1 p.m.

Campus Perspectives

By James Schaffer

"Have RAs gone too far with their protests at Whitmore?"

Adam Turgeson
Sophomore SOM
"It's good [Whitmore] RAs are finally getting active. We can't have [only] the RAs out there."

Jon Lakow
Sophomore SOM
"RA Union? Protest? Huh?"

Rick Gould
Sophomore Economics
"Other than what happens to my RA, I don't give a crap. I just want to drink beers and be happy."

Scott Boris
Junior Legal Studies
"I am [not] sure [what the RAs are trying to do] but I'm [open] to events."

Jennifer Poulin
Junior Exercise Science/Pre-Med
"RAs are a very important part of this campus, and I think the school needs to listen to what they have to say."

Audrey Vilaca
Sophomore Biology
"I think the protest was pretty crazy, but I think the RAs have a right to say what they want to."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

Sam Wilkinson Editor-in-Chief
Matthew F. Sacco Managing Editor
Amy Garganta Business Manager
Shimauli Dave Production Manager
Jake Lilien Diversity Editor
Mike Kulak Editorial Production Manager
Jason Smith Advertising Manager

Mike Delano Arts & Living Editor
Matthew Despres Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jennifer Eastwood Features Editor
Catherine Turner News Editor
Tibora Ginzye-Blum Photography Editor
Eric Soderstrom Sports Editor
Brent Siniawski Finance Manager
Charlie Iacco Distribution Manager

Morgan Taylor Advertising Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Cara Murphy Assistant Finance Manager
Shawn Daugherty Assistant Business Manager
Megan Shannon Assistant Advertising Manager

College Self-Storage
Monthly/Annual Rentals
College Payment Plans
Minutes From Campus
Electronic Card Access
Security Fenced Perimeter
Multi-Size Units
Route 9, Belchertown
323-9792

CRAVE SPEED? Great opportunity for skilled drivers in fast paced competitive field. We are looking for risk-takers who work well under pressure. Knowledge of CPR a plus. For salary details and medical liability waiver, please go to www.testdriveinfo.com.

Eliminate
FEARS/ALLERGIES
In one session
Fear of flying, public speaking, exams, needles, elevators, heights, allergies and other disturbances can be eliminated in one session.
Order a free booklet at 413 374 8217

CINEMARK
The Best Seat in Town
CINEMARK AT HAMPSHIRE MALL
367 Russell St 413-587-4233
Schedule for Friday 5/3 - Thursday 5/9
DIGITAL SURROUND SOUND IN ALL AUDITORIUMS
Purchase Tickets Online @ cinemark.com
SPIDERMAN (PG13) 12:15 4:15 7:30 10:15*
SPIDERMAN (PG13) 12:45 4:45 8:00 10:35*
SPIDERMAN (PG13) 1:15 5:15 8:30*
SCORPION KING (PG13) 12:35 4:50 7:45 10:25*
DUCES WILD (R) 12:55 4:25 7:05 9:45*
HOLLYWOOD ENDING (PG13) 12:20 4:30 7:15 10:00*
LIFE OR SOMETHING LIKE IT (PG13) 12:25 4:35 7:35 10:15*
JASON X (R) 12:50 5:00 7:55 10:10*
MURDER BY NUMBERS (R) 12:30 4:10 7:30 10:20
THE SCORPION KING (PG13) 12:25 4:50 7:45 10:25*
CHANGING LANES (R) 12:00 4:05 7:25 9:55
HIGH CRIMES (PG13) 10:05
PANIC ROOM (R) 7:40 10:30
THE ROOKIE (G) 12:25 4:00 7:10
ICE AGE (PG) 12:10 2:15 4:25
Senior Movies 5/5/02
MURDER BY NUMBERS doors open at 11:45am
• NO PASSES-NO SUPERSAVERS
Tickets & showtimes available at cinemark.com

Rental Office
1040 N.Pleasant St. #410
Amherst, MA 01002
413.549.0145
NEW PUFFTON VILLAGE
Serving All Of Your Rental Needs

Looking for EMPLOYMENT this summer?
Campus Center Hotel is currently accepting applications for summer help. Applicants should be available to work from Mid-May through Labor Day Weekend. Employment at the hotel provides work experience in the Hospitality industry; chance to work on campus; make new friends, as well as an opportunity to earn cash.
Positions available include: room attendants, guest service attendants and laundry attendants.

Identity theft hits UCal-Davis

By Oyang Teng
The California Aggie (U. California-Davis)

(U-WIRE) DAVIS, Calif. – When mail started showing up at a Davis, Calif., woman's door about a year ago, she knew something was wrong. The orders for credit cards she hadn't applied for and telephone calls from a dating service she had never called were telltale signs that she had become one in an increasing number of victims of identity theft nationwide.

Identity theft occurs when someone's personal information is taken without his or her knowledge and used to commit fraud or theft. The woman, a Davis landlord who wished to remain anonymous, was eventually able to trace the source of the unwanted mail to a UCD graduate student living as a tenant in her building.

"The reason I'm talking to you is that identity theft is part of the community now," she said. "This isn't just a one-shot deal. It's everywhere."

After a federal crime lab confirmed handwriting samples from the student, the case was turned over to the district attorney. The student, who had also fraudulently signed up for magazine subscriptions, eventually pleaded no contest and was ordered to pay the woman's legal fees and given one year of probation and 30 days of community service. According to the woman, the student holds a leadership position on campus.

"I just can't believe that someone in an academic leadership position would do what this young man pleaded no contest to," she said. "When I was in college, we had an honor code."

There are several means by which to commit identity theft, the easiest and most common being credit card fraud. An identity thief can open a credit card account using someone else's name, date of birth and Social Security number, then change the mailing address on the new account. Since the bills are sent to the new address, the victim may not immediately become aware that something is wrong.

By all accounts, instances of identity theft are increasing. The Federal Trade Commission, which maintains the only national clearinghouse for identity theft reports, cited the crime as the number-one consumer fraud complaint in 2001. Out of 204,000 complaints entered into the database, 42 percent were identity-theft related. Jennette Bayer, a consumer associate with CalPIRG, counsels victims of identity theft.

"It's definitely increasing," Bayer said. "It's hard to estimate [the numbers of identity theft victims] because credit bureaus are unwilling to release numbers to the public, which is an indication that they're bad. It's more and more of a problem in a credit-driven society."

In California, 15,000 instances of identity theft were reported in 2001, the second-most per capita after the District of Columbia. Bayer estimates the actual number is much higher, between 30,000 to 70,000 annually, based on her experience talking with identity-theft victims and law enforcement. She said that reported numbers fall far below the actual statistics, since there is no central clearinghouse other than the one maintained by the FTC, and not everyone who experiences identity theft reports it.

Nationwide, 86,000 identity theft victims reported to the database in 2001. There have already been 100,000 complaints logged in to the database this year, and it appears that local trends are reflecting national trends.

According to the Davis Police Department, local incidents of identity theft rose from two in 1995 to 38 in 2000. Last year showed a 121 percent increase with 84 reports of identity theft, and so far this year 26 incidents have been reported. Lt. Jim Harritt of the DPD speculated on why such numbers have risen in recent years.

"The Internet certainly facilitates access to information, and for whatever reason, more and more crooks are dabbling in [identity theft]," Harritt said. "It's an easy crime to commit. It can be difficult to trace, depending on how greedy you are."

The show must go on Workers continue to set up for yesterday's Sheila Dyrne concert despite the continued drizzle and overcast skies.

■ children

continued from page 1

the life in prison or death sentence, which is what they would have faced had they been tried and found guilty. Grossman served 30 months of jail time and then was released.

In the year 2000, Carolyn Jones, 21, of Fairfax, S.C. was charged with assault and battery and the intent to kill after she buried her newborn infant son headfirst in a shallow grave in a dump near town.

Rescue workers were alerted to the situation when Jones arrived at Allendale County Hospital showing signs of having given birth but without a child.

Jones took police to the spot where the child was buried and a board covered his head. The child sustained no lasting injuries from the incident.

This year in February, 27-year-old Rosemary Gutierrez of Los Angeles placed her infant son in a shopping bag and left him in a hospital parking lot where he was found in good condition by a nurse.

She currently faces charges of child abandonment.

In a number of states, including Connecticut, it is legal for parents to leave their children in a safe place such as a hospital and not face criminal charges.

In Massachusetts, there is no such law.

Information from CNN.com was used in this story and The Round Up the New Mexico State University newspaper.

Professor points to UN involvement

By Rachel Smith
Collegian Staff

M.J. Peterson, a University of Massachusetts Political Science professor, delivered a lecture about the United Nations at the Campus Center Wednesday. The UMass International Relations Club sponsored the lecture, the last of a series for the Spring semester.

UMass students and the Political Science department formed the I.R. Club two years ago. The club sends student delegates to model U.N. conferences across the country. Next year the I.R. Club will send delegates to Georgetown and the University of Pennsylvania.

Peterson called the lecture "Where's the U.N. in This?" Peterson's admittedly ambiguous sounding title referred to the Israeli and Palestinian conflict in the Middle East and the newly unified opposition to terrorism across the globe. According to Peterson, the U.N. has been "heavily" involved.

The U.N. operates as both a forum for member states and as a secretariat. While acts of terrorism have persisted since the inception of the U.N., the United Nations has been reluctant to use the word terrorism, Peterson said.

"One country's terrorist is another country's freedom fighter," Peterson explained during her lecture.

After Sept. 11, not only did the U.N. begin characterizing certain groups as terrorists, the Security Council adopted resolutions condemning terrorist activity.

Peterson went on to explain that the U.N. has also been heavily involved in Afghanistan by providing humanitarian aid.

The U.N. has been involved with the issue of a Palestinian state since its inception. According to Peterson, the U.N. promised the Israelis and Palestinians a "homeland" in its doctrine. There is no legal definition of a "homeland." The ambiguity of the term "homeland" complicated the interpretation of the U.N.'s doctrine, Peterson explained.

Peterson also explained in her lecture that the United States and the Soviet Union provided balance in the U.N. concerning the Palestinian/Israeli conflict. The U.S. was pro-Israel, and the U.S.S.R. voted pro-Palestinian. Now that the Cold War is over, no such balance of power exists in the U.N., making its resolutions a little less predictable.

Peterson could not offer any solutions to the conflict in the Middle East or the issue of terrorism and resolving the civil war in Afghanistan, but her job wasn't to solve the world's problems. She hoped to create awareness.

"Basically what I was hoping to communicate was that the U.N. has a certain role both in the dealings with terrorism and in the Middle East, but it's a limited role," Peterson said. "The U.N. can do certain things but there's certain things they can't do."

The I.R. Club will sponsor another lecture series in the fall semester.

HEY, YO.
WRITE FOR NEWS.

Goten
COOKING AT YOUR TABLE
413•665•3628 call for RSVP

Best! 2002
UMASS ★★★★★★★
Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Let us know your picks for the
UMASS BEST ISSUE

DEADLINE MAY 6
Please fill this out & send your answers either via campus-mail, or stop by the Collegian, 113 Campus Center basement

YOU HAVE YOUR REASONS FOR LIVING OFF CAMPUS...
BRANDYWINE AT AMHERST
SO DO WE.
BRANDYWINE APARTMENTS
549-0900
WWW.BRANDYWINEAPTS.COM
186 BRANDYWINE DRIVE • AMHERST, MA

Unique UMass Best
Reason not to graduate:
Place to have sex:
Classroom:
D.C.:
D.C. dish:
Spring break place:
Magazine:
Way to gain Fresman 15:
Apartment complex:
Reason to miss class:
Reason to hand in a paper late:
Place to read the paper:
Place to study:

Best Arts & Entertainment
Place to hear live music:
Local band:
radio station:
Music store:
Pool hall:
Cheap date place:
Video store:
Internet site:

Best Shops & Services
Grocery store:
Florist:
Clothing store:
Gas station:
Bike shop:
Hair salon:
Place to workout:
Tanning salon:
Candy shop:
Liquor store:
Car repair place:

Best way to waste time
Amherst bar:
Northampton bar:
Beer:
Shot:
Drinking game:
Bartender:
Off Campus party place:
Frat party:
Nudie bar:
Porn shop:
Condom brand:

Best Food
Pizza place:
Sub shop:
Date restaurant:
Place to go when parents are paying:
Ice cream shop:
Chinese:
Italian:
Mexican:
Indian:
Japanese:
Breakfast (hangover cure):
Bagel shop:
Vegetarian:
Best Wings:
Northampton restaurant:
Coffee shop:

THE HARP
"START YOUR OWN TRADITION"

Walk it! Bus it!
NEW PUFFTON VILLAGE
Bike it! Drive it!

SUPER STOP & SHOP
All the ingredients needed to be voted UMass Best!

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM "WRITING IS A LONELY LIFE, BUT THE ONLY ONE WORTH LIVING." FLAUBERT ED/OP EDITOR: MATTHEW DESPRES

Yesterday from the Editor

Yesterday afternoon, I sent two reporters and two photographers to James Hall. We had heard reports that an infant –perhaps a child, perhaps a fetus – had been found dead in the building.

Attempting to gather the information necessary for today's front-page coverage, our staffers were told by RAs that they had "no right" to be there. Finding this out, I called the James-Emerson Cluster office. I said that I was from the Daily Collegian and was told that nobody "had any comment" and then I was hung up on.

Furious, I called back. I was livid at hearing that my reporters had been told they had "no right" to do their jobs and I was furious that I was hung up on. I wanted her to know that we all knew that something had happened, that chasing off reporters was bound for failure, that attempting to cover, protect, or hide the facts would only slow the relentless crawl of the media.

Without giving her a chance to respond, I hung up.

In as much as I made a mistake in screaming at her, the University of Massachusetts made a mistake making students the first line of defense.

Why was it she that I found myself angry at?

Because the University abandoned the situation to RAs who are totally unprepared to handle this. Not only are they unprepared, this surely should not be considered part of the job they do. Where responsibility should have been taken, our reporters and I only got endless "no comments."

Our News Office would only offer a terse "no comment" for our reporters who called there. The University administration – from Javier Cevallos to the Housing Office to Resident Directors – similarly refused comment. Both answered our queries from the relative safety of their offices.

Nobody from the University was at James Hall. Nobody from the University thought to take the time to be at James Hall at the precise moment that the story's first facts were filtering through. When television reporters and newspaper reporters (and not just ours) came looking for information, they found only Resident Assistants who had been told not to speak. They found only Resident Assistants who had been given the impression that the press had no right to investigate. They found only Resident Assistants who had been given no direction on how to handle this horrific situation.

The University of Massachusetts failed to appropriately deal with this situation. With ignorance, it forced students to play the roles that should have been filled by administrators trained to handle this sort of situation. Our RAs are not trained to handle the press, nor are RAs prepared to learn that their community has experienced the loss of a child (and I don't even know if that is the right way to phrase that sentence). Expecting them to handle my reporters (and the reporters from so many other outlets) with a level head is expecting far too much.

I apologize to the student I hung up on, and I, along with my staff, are embarrassed by the behavior of our failing University.

Sam Wilkinson
Editor-in-Chief

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

Dealing with rape at UMass:
Where is our attention focused?

CATHERINE TURNER

I have two great fears in life: rape and drowning. I'm working on getting over the drowning part, but the fear of rape is something I don't think I'll ever lose.

About 10 days ago, a woman was raped on our campus by the Fine Arts Center. It was about 10 p.m., and she was approached by three men. The description of these men could have described about 50 percent of our campus. It could have been anyone: someone in one of my classes, someone I've ridden the bus with, someone that was in my dorm.

I can't even begin to imagine how this woman – or any woman who has been raped – feels.

She must be traumatized, so completely violated that now she must be full of fear.

Imagine being in her place. You're walking home from the library or walking to your car after a review session in Herter. You're walking along and all of a sudden you're forced into a shadow by three men. They throw you down on the cement and rip your pants off. You are so scared you cry, but they don't care. They put their hands over your mouth. One after another three men stab you in the vagina with their penises. It hurts so much.

When a woman is tense, scared or upset, the walls of the vagina contract, tighten. Therefore, it is even harder for a penis to penetrate. And these men are intent on ramming their penises into your vagina. Your vagina chafes, it bleeds, it hurts. But your attackers don't care. They just keep thrusting themselves inside you. And while one is raping you, the others look on, condoning and encouraging the behavior. Are they laughing? Are they scared of being caught? Are they enjoying watching you squirm and cry and hurt? Or are they angry? Are they yelling and swearing at you? Are they beating you up, smacking your face or grabbing your breasts?

And then, finally, after what seems like hours, they slam you down, zip up their pants and run away, leaving you alone and battered. Then what? You go to a callbox? Oh, you mean one of the say, two callboxes on this campus in inconvenient locations? Do you run into the street to find someone, anyone to help? How do you know that the next person you see won't hurt you too?

And even if you do go to the cops, what do they do? How do you feel safe with them even though you know that your attackers are still out there? What you feel is defeated, violated and angry. How could this happen? Why you? Why do men rape women?

Why DO men rape women? What was going through the minds of these men? What kind of sick minds rape women? There is no excuse. Maybe they are so insecure about their own sexuality or masculinity that they have to rape a woman to prove what a straight, strong man they are. Maybe they harbor anger and resentment toward women because of a past relationship or a family problem. Maybe they get high off of gaining power over a woman, maybe they get high off of hurting someone or dominating them – an adrenaline rush. Maybe they just think its funny, something to do. Whatever the reason, rape is wrong. These three men have scarred this woman. They've changed her life. Every man who rapes a woman is wrong. He is sick and needs a serious head check.

Don't get me wrong, not all men are rapists by any measure. Most guys don't rape women or even think about it. They respect women and know that rape is wrong and horrible. But, we have to acknowledge that there are rapists out there and it could be anyone. In actuality, statistics tell us that the majority of rapes are done by an acquaintance – date rape, etc. And it's the date rapes that are truly insidious and terrible. Everyone gets outraged about an armed attack in a public place, but many people don't even realize that rape goes on behind closed doors so therefore they don't say anything against it.

So now this woman has got to be traumatized. She has lost her trust in men, her sexual confidence and her sense of safety. If I were her I'd be paranoid, skittish and plagued with nightmares. And, on top of the mental anguish, now she has to worry about pregnancy, STDs and AIDS. Who knows what kind of diseases these men were intent on spreading.

People should be outraged that rape – and all forms of sexual assault and violence – occurs, regardless of whether it's behind closed doors or on campus. The school should put in more lights and callboxes and find money for security. According to the victim, people were walking by during this gang rape and didn't do anything. There needs to be vigilance. There needs to be a concerted effort, a consciousness against rape and violence against women. Until this happens, all women need to be frightened and aware. And anyone who knows of cases of rape should report them and speak out against it. Women have to be strong and committed to stopping this behavior. They cannot feel at fault for it. We need to protect ourselves, be aware of our surroundings and fight for better security. Both women and men have to work together to eliminate this senseless, violent, heart-breaking crime.

The gang rapists that are walking around feeling smug about abusing an innocent woman, probably crushing her sense of safety and possibly her self esteem and trust of men, I must ask them to ask themselves, how would they feel if someone gang-raped their mother, or sister or their friends? What if they were gang-raped? I hope they feel awful. I hope they are rotting inside. I hope they get caught and convicted and locked up so they can't violate anyone else's lives.

Catherine Turner is a Collegian Staff member.

ed/ op!

www.dailycollegian.com

God and man at UMass:
Part II: religious observance

KEVIN J. POWERS

Editor's note: this is the second in a two-part series on the role of religion on the UMass campus.)

Important Note: The examination of the Jewish Christian and Islamic religions in sequence represents only a chronological inspection; no claims or implications of superiority or inferiority are in any way expressed or implied.

Why is religion treated as academic whipping boy of professor and student alike at the University Of Massachusetts? While no answer to this question has yet been offered by the Left, an examination of the decline in religious authenticity may help to shed some light on the problem of faithlessness and how human beings who claim to seek knowledge came to shut so many gates to learning in their own faces.

What is often most disappointing is the departure from any sort of real faith which has come to plague the descendants of those who once were the only monotheists, folk on the face of the earth. The children of Jacob have, save for those who are often derided by their supposedly enlightened wayward cousins as being ultra-Orthodox, abandoned any semblance of true belief in God that they might style themselves nothing more than a race like any other. But this is deceit and treachery, for without faith in the Lord, a Jew has no claim to racial identity, for the only basis of such identity is the Biblical precept that the Jews are all sons of Jacob.

It's a complete refusal to reckon with this simple but compelling fact the average bradleyite the modern university attempts to fabricate and endorse what pass for Jewish values without any semblance of Jewish theology.

Sadly, these misguided and delusional notions which essentially amount to the premise that Marx and his brethren replaced Moses over the course of the last century and a half, have done more to demolish actual Jewish faith (which, indeed, is utterly inseparable from acceptance of God) than any Torquemada or Hitler could have possibly dreamed. But at least such godless Socialists have their Jewish Studies departments to prop up the arrogant notion that they need to pay no heed to the Commandments, and that Irun Dresher is a much more palatable matriarch than Biblical figures could ever have been.

Every man of faith on the face of the earth can learn a great deal from the tragedy of Reform which has decimated the Jews. Stripped of their faith by the notion that they can "reform" their religion, Reform and Conservative epicenters of "Progressive" change have found themselves holding many more golden calves than sacred tablets. What millions of Reform Jews have found themselves left with is a relatively meaningless husk of Yiddish words and Eastern European foods, not to mention a heretical idolatry of the Democratic Party and Liberalism. When the same lack of piety inevitably descends upon Christians, all of mankind should pray that the followers of Jesus en masse fare better than the Reform Jews have. Unless the mass of Jews can steer themselves back to faith and away from the seductive false prophets of casual morality (which is to say, hardly a shred of morality at all), and unless the mass of Christians can find again a faith to profess sincerely, the collapse of both may even now be foreshadowed by the decrepit condition of each within the university.

Christians may have fared marginally better than Jews, but only because of their sheer numbers and the simple fact that they find identity not in claims to a secular race, but instead in a faith. Of course the wandering Catholic would need quite a great deal of good luck in order to find a single course at UMass in the New Testament. Though no Liberal would appreciate being told that the primary figure in his political wing was Al Sharpton, Protestants of all stripes have to endure being repeatedly told that their faith is the Gospel according To Saints Falwell And Robertson. While messing with MassPIRG will bring charges of fascism, dumping a heap of verbal manure atop the innocent men who want nothing more than to offer passers-by a free New Testament will bring praise and accolades from seemingly every quarter of the university. Wearing the cross is okay, so long as one never makes even the slightest attempt to speak of Jesus in a classroom. And there won't be one reader of this column who will be ignorant of the condemnation with which moral judgment (Jewish or Christian, but much more harshly toward the latter than the former) is swifth met.

Muslims have distinguished themselves on the University as utterly refusing to read the last chapter of The Autobiography Of Malcolm X, which rings time and time again with an insistence to turn from a hatred of America and become a people of faith rather than a people of hate. There is no compelling reason why the followers of Islam have to distinguish themselves by a vitriolic loathing of Israel or hanging their ideological coats on morons like Louis Farrakhan, widely believed to have been behind the assassination of Malcolm X. Indeed, the most compelling question is why the second most numerous faith in the world would choose to turn from Mosque to machine gun. And the honest truth, of course, is that real Muslims (such as the Malcolm X of 1965, who a horde of Liberal lunatics from the Nation Of Invaints was fit to gun down) would love America, the one nation in the world in which they have a real opportunity to practice their faith entirely as they see fit.

With the drought of riots that has struck just about every faith on campus, it is little wonder that scholars seeking to understand the history of man come up perpetually dry in the way of conclusive analysis. As more effort goes into trying to prove that secularism is a functional manner of living, less effort goes into furthering the one view which actually demands that all men be treated equal: The Creation of all men by a Divine God. While Liberals moan and wail (though not necessarily in that order) for equal opportunity, lack of prejudicial discrimination, and the like, they ignore the simple most compelling reason for the world to listen to them. This naturally calls into question whether a man who rejects God prima face actually has any compassion for his brother, or whether he ultimately stands only to act according to the most efficient way to realize his desires.

So long as student after student voluntarily closes eyes, ears, and mind to the concept of an Almighty God, the reservoirs of scholarship and integrity will continue to be depleted. God help us all.

Kevin J. Powers is a UMass student.

Letters to the editor:
Union protestors

To the editor:

In September of 1990, I become a resident assistant (RA) at the University of Massachusetts. My family and I were having a difficult time with my college costs and the housing waiver was crucial to my completion.

That was the hardest job I have ever held. Many believe that the free room and the stipend ($26.88/week 1991-1992, $50.00/week 2002) are a good deal. However, I found that hours did not end with the office shifts. Each day as an RA I was "on-duty" on my floor. In my case, I was immediately thrown into an unfamiliar, rowdy dormitory. On my first night of work I had to confront hundreds of angry students who had been fighting in the parking lot. Another night an intoxicated student threatened to kill me. During my senior year, a student committed suicide on my floor, and I had to try support the roommate and other friends on the floor. Even though I had some good experiences, there were many stressful moments.

During my final year, the job requirements began to shift. We were informally told to watch for students violating laws; if we suspected that underage drinking, or marijuana smoking was occurring behind closed doors, we were to knock and investigate. I believe that the purpose of an RA position is to provide a knowledgeable, experienced student on each floor as a guide for other students.

A union is completely appropriate for the Resident Assistants at the University of Massachusetts. According to a Gazette article, (UMass Suspends seven in Sit-In, 5/1) Massachusetts state law requires that when an election has been held, voted on, and certified, the employer is legally required to bargain with the new union.

It is for all these reasons that the University must recognize and negotiate with the new union.

Tawnya Kelley Tiskus
UMass grad student

To the editor:

On April 29 I stood outside the administration building and watched as police arrested 30 or so of my peers. The situation was both disturbing and inspiring. Disturbing in that local authorities cordoned off a section of campus and operated there in as a kind of military occupation force; inspiring in that people I know and have come to respect stood their ground against that threatening presence in light of what they believe to be not only socially just, but constitutionally justified.

Those who participated in Monday's civil outcry deserve respect for their passive display of personal integrity and not further humiliation through expulsion from the University. Members of the community such as these are the reason the University has strength when we are otherwise left out in the cold by legislators and authorities.

As a member of this University and as a citizen of the Commonwealth I implore you and your authority to uphold the ideals of this institution's members and this state's citizens. Please come forward and embrace the actions of these brave members of our community, and show your support for their basic social and political freedoms.

Aaron Wyatt
UMass

To the editor:

The Collegian's op-ed "Protestors Need to Think Twice About Actions" was horribly unfair to those involved in Monday's action at Whitmore. Stating that "their actions were more similar to that of children trying to get their own way than of either RAs or union members..." is very insulting to those protestors, especially the RAs, that made the very adult and unselfish decision to risk criminal charges and academic sanctions for their union.

Many of the protestors are now facing serious disciplinary action by the University in addition to the criminal charges. All the undergraduates are facing sanctions up to and including suspension from the University. The RAs may be terminated from their jobs any day now.

Initially the RA union supporters had decided not to put the RAs in a position where they could be expelled or fired, and that's why so many of their union brothers and sisters from GEO took up the fight. However, some

RAs decided to stand in solidarity with union activists who had already been arrested, and were arrested themselves, knowing full well the consequences of their decision.

This was a courageous, principled and unselfish decision. Unlike "children trying to get their own way," these RAs decided to put their own jobs and academic careers on the line for their fellow RAs. They decided they would fight for the rights of RAs now and in the future, even if that meant sacrificing themselves.

This is not the first union I've been involved with. I've been in the Hotel and Restaurant Employees Union and the Teamsters. These so-called "children" have as much guts as any union member I've ever met.

Omar el-Malah
GEO/UAW Local 2322

"When the people lead, the leaders they'll have to follow, and all their lies and their alibis, they will have to swallow."

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING Weekend Edition

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 5.03.02 ARTS EDITOR: MIKE DELANO

Last ever "In the Ring"

If my math serves me correctly, since "In The Ring" is a bi-weekly Friday column (the proverbial dark match of college journalism), this will be the final "In The Ring" column ever, as two weeks from now the semester will be over. So in order to bring you the readers through life without "In The Ring," I'll break out my crystal ball and let you all know what is going to happen over the next year in the world of wrestling. That way, even though you won't have me to give you the news, you'll know what is going to happen anyway.

The Rock's days in the WWF will be numbered – With the success of "The Scorpion King," The Rock is suddenly one of Hollywood's most sought-after leading men. The Rock has always maintained that no matter how much success he had in the movies, he would always maintain a relationship with the WWF. Still, I'd bet in the next year we will be seeing much more of The Rock on the big screen and much less of him in the squared circle. His days headlining "Raw" and "Smackdown!" may already be over. I look for Rock to only wrestle a dozen or so "special" matches in the next year. It will be interesting to see if the WWF is able to create another big name star to take his place. The positive for the WWF in all of this is that they have access to a major crossover star for big matches a few times a year. The negative is they are losing full time access to their biggest, (or second biggest) star of the past several years.

All Challengers to the WWF will fail miserably – There are two potential competitors to the WWF on the horizon. The first is the XWF, headed by Jimmy Hart, which provides fans with a taste of 1980s wrestling and "today's stars" mixed into one. The other is Jeff Jarrett's promotion that is set to air beginning in June on Pay-Per-View only. Unfortunately for both, there is no audience for any sort of wrestling in the United States except the WWF, and the WWF has almost all of the decent talent signed anyway. Aside from about a one-year period in the mid 1990s when both the WWF and WCW were successful, there has always been one dominant national promotion in the U.S. There simply aren't enough wrestling fans to spread between more than one promotion, and the WWF isn't going anywhere anytime soon.

Hulk Hogan's return will eventually become a miserable failure – Hogan sucks. Sure, he has gotten some big pops since his return, and there has been some nostalgia in seeing him back in a WWF ring. However, things are out of control with him as WWF champ and now fighting The Undertaker at the next Pay-Per-View. That match was awful ten years ago back when Hogan was in his "prime." I shudder to think how pitiful it will be this time around. It's only a matter of time before WWF fans grow tired of seeing Old Man Hogan go through the motions. Once the nostalgia wears off – and it has already started to – the boos will shower down on Hogan and it will finally become obvious that his time has come for retirement. Of course, he'll probably stick around longer, and blame his sinking ratings and popularity on others, not his lack of ability or decrepit old age.

The WWF will still not be able to get over a Cruiserweight Division – Since McMahon's obsession with the "big guys" has led to the WWF's inability to get over lighter weight wrestlers and a Cruiserweight division in the WWF. It is too bad, since the WWF has the talent to make such a division work, and a good Cruiserweight match is always an entertaining addition to a show.

A few more predictions where explanations are not necessary:

-Triple H will manage to keep himself on top of the WWF and avoid doing jobs like the plague.

-Kevin Nash will blame the WWF writers for the fact that he can't get over, instead of his lack of ability, sort of like his buddy Old Man Hogan.

-The Big Show will suck.

-Steven Regal will continue to be the single most overrated wrestler by the Internet wrestling community. Has this guy ever had a memorable match?

-Sid will make a return (again) to wrestling. It will suck.

-Kurt Angle will remain the best all around performer in the wrestling world.

-Prince Albert will suck.

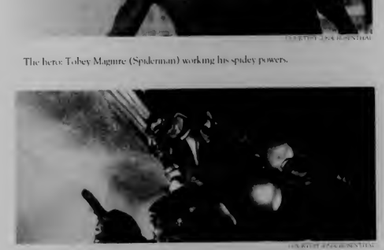
-Missy Hyatt will sleep with some more wrestlers. Check out her book, available on amazon.com, by the way.

-And finally, a few reminders and tips for wrestling fans.

-pwtorch.com and wrestlingobserver.com are the only good sources for wrestling news on the net. Oh yeah, my friend's site, www.geocities.com/ sheetreaders is pretty good too.

-Vince Russo made the WWF.

-The single most annoying thing about wrestling fans and casual wrestling fans must be clarified one more time! Wrestlers do not use fake blood when they bleed! They cut themselves with razor blades. Also, they don't use "fake" chairs or ones made of "cookie tin" as I recently heard some know-it-all profess. They are real chairs people, and yeah, it does hurt.



For now, "In The Ring," like The Undertaker's opponents, will "Rest In Peace."

Kurt Polesky is a Collegian Staff Member.

Spidey slings into theaters

The hero: Tobey Maguire (Spiderman) working his spidey powers.

The bad guy: Willem Dafoe as the Green Goblin.

The love interest: Kirsten Dunst as Mary Jane.

By Matthew F. Sacco
COLLEGIAN STAFF

If it seems like Spider-Man has been slinging through every conceivable media outlet over the last few weeks – that's because it's true. Your friendly neighborhood superhero has cast a web over television commercials, magazine advertisements and the toy industry.

The reason for the seemingly ubiquitous Spidey is two-fold. First off, Spider-Man is clearly one of the most anticipated movies of the year and the producers have a huge fan base to appeal to with commercials, contests and action figures.

But likely the biggest reason for the seemingly ubiquitous wall crawler is the inevitable release of Star Wars Episode II: Attack of the Clones.

Needless to say George Lucas' second installment of the Star Wars prequel-trilogy will steal some of Spider-Man's thunder, if not all of it. That's what makes it so important for the web-slinger to get in his licks while he can.

With little box office competition and no dominant movies in the theater entering the weekend, the next three days could be an absolutely huge draw, as could the following weekend.

But by May 16 nobody will remember this movie, making it all the more important that the film opens with a bang. And from looking at the previews and ad campaigns, Spider-Man is as close to a sure thing as comic movies can be.

The makers of Spider-Man have everything going for them. X-Men already set a precedent for success of comic book based films, and there is also the examples of failure in this genre in the past.

But different from X-Men and other comic book movies that have come before it – Superman for example – the biggest challenge for the makers of this film will be duplicating the traits that made thousands of fans adore the Spider-Man comic books.

First of all, people have to realize that as far as widespread popularity goes, X-Men is a virtual infant compared to its web-slinging counterpart. Spider-Man has been in existence and wildly popular for a very long time, which means that most fans that see this movie will be intimately knowledgeable with the character and the storyline.

From what we've seen it looks like the story has been severely modified and compacted – needless to say, that won't sit well with many purists. But the biggest component will be capturing Peter Parker's deep and interesting character traits.

Spider-Man is widely known as one of the deepest characters in comics. He never survives simply on brute strength alone and he is consistently torn between what is right and what is wrong. It looks like we may see part of that character in this movie but to truly wow audiences, all of Spidey's theatrics will have to be adequately complemented by a wise cracking but also interesting personality.

By a simple analysis of the characters in the movie, there will be ample opportunity to prove that Spider-Man is not just a flaky superhero. After all, his archenemy in the movie is Green Goblin, who just happens to be the father of his best friend.

And even though we know how many Spider-Man's battles with his enemy in the comic turn out, the movie makers have made it clear that this is not like the comic book.

But really it doesn't matter how the story is told, only if it is told well.

Koontz's latest:
A good story obscured

COURTESY IMAGINE US

By Jake D. Lewis
COLLEGIAN STAFF

ONE DOOR AWAY FROM HEAVEN
By Dean Koontz

Much like his last book, From the Corner of His Eye, the latest Dean Koontz novel One Door Away from Heaven gets its title from a riddle posed to the main character. The answer, however, is a bunch of philosophical jargon that is meant to be profound but instead is head-scratchingly nonsensical.

Fortunately, that description can't be applied to the book as a whole, which is entertaining for the most part. However, unlike his rival Stephen King, Koontz still hasn't found his voice yet in the transition from writing horror to the recent forays of more human dramas. Koontz is trying to follow in the footsteps of King, oftentimes echoing the same themes as him, but, in all honesty, I don't see it in the cards as ever happening. This is not the first, second or even third attempt Koontz has made at this new technique, and while he sometimes does it better than others (namely Soul Survivor), very little is memorable. For example: King's last novel, DreamCatcher, released last Fall, was about aliens coming to Earth and wreaking havoc. Similarly, One Door... is about little, friendly aliens coming to Earth, but this time humans seek vengeance on them. Yet, even though it became involved in this slowly unfolding story, touting for some characters and booing others, it did not contain anything of substance, feeling faker than the toupee Koontz now dons in his publicity shots. My recommendation: return to your roots, Koontz. What happened to the days of The Watcher and Cold Fire? That's what your readers want.

Michelina "Mickey" Bellsong is an unemployed, recovering alcoholic who lives in a Southern California trailer park with her daft aunt Geneva, who constantly confuses incidents in her own life with those of famous movies (at one point, she thinks she was Ingrid Bergman in Casablanca), which is mildly amusing. Their new next-door neighbor is Leilani Klonk, a sweet 10-year old girl who has had a deformed hand and leg ever since birth, attributed to the heavy drug use of her mother Sensinilla (yes, as in marijuana). Leilani's stepfather, Preston Maddoc, is a world-renowned doctor who has a fascination with aliens. The dysfunctional family travels all over the country in its motor home to research the ET sightings and abductions, and to find out where they will touch down next. Because, when they do, Preston wants to be there, for he believes that they will heal Leilani's disfigured body. Leilani, however, knows the truth of the situation, because her brother Lukipela was similarly deformed and was brought to the star men. He never came back, and Leilani suspects that Preston ultimately killed him and will do the same for her when it's her time to "be healed."

Zoom to southern Arizona, where a lone boy is fleeing from government agents hot on his tail after they killed his mother (for a reason to be disclosed). We follow him as he traverses the American West with his faithful dog Old Yeller (Koontz always has a canine sidekick in his books but this one is the most two-dimensional), meeting two Las Vegas showgirls with a fascination in aliens, and other local yokels along the way, including a fabulous scene in a highway rest stop diner. In fact, the boy's interactions with the people around him are the most amusing and touching moments in the novel. He engages in a humorous conversation with a hillbilly trucker about the name of his pet, and there is an oddly bittersweet relationship established with Donella, a waitress at the pit stop restaurant, who the boy compares to his own, deceased mother. The sentimentality is perfectly captured. Koontz not overdoing it and going too mushy, but appropriately includes this quite human situation (ironic, in the general context of the book's theme). But there's also a scene with an old curmudgeon who is a security guard at a theme park specializing in the old West. He's about as obnoxious as Jar Jar Binks in Star Wars, and serves just as little purpose. Fortunately, Koontz realizes this and casts him aside before too long.

The boy, Curtis (as he is later identified), is harboring a dark secret that isn't revealed until the last hundred pages, and also carries The Gift with him (not mentioned until the last 20 pages). Even when you find out what The Gift is, it seems like a joke, not a gift at all, and very loosely has anything to do with the plotline of the novel. For a long time the reader may be wondering where the novel is going anyways, mostly consisting of Curtis weaving his way through the American Southwest while Mickey becomes more invested in Leilani's safety. I cannot say whether Koontz was writing off the top of his head and seeing where it lead, but he keeps it moving along at a relatively steady pace. He could have transformed a decent trek into a fantastic adventure if he had a little more direction.

The direction of the story leads everyone to Nun's Lake, a recent UFO site that is neither symbolic nor supernatural like the rest of the novel. When the reader is introduced to Curtis, as he is scrambling for safety from the killers, he goes unnamed, adding purposeful mystery to his character. Koontz's descriptions of the barren deserts, vast skies overhead, and the unique locals are right-on and exciting. For all that the story lacks, it is rich with a clear vision of the people, places and actions. Sometimes this goes on too long, seen when Leilani begins to over-philosophize on her tumultuous childhood, but Koontz keeps most of it in check. You can smell the mildew and feel the claustrophobia in the cluttered farmhouse of the hick who spotted the UFO that brings the characters to Nun's Lake at the novel's climax. This environment, more than anything else, is Koontz at his best.

There's a fascinating and original story somewhere that's trying to break through, but it gets too obscured by Koontz trying to be a more grown-up author than he actually is. The best thing for Koontz to do now is close the door on this chapter in his writing career and open the one he shut too long ago.

The Five College Area's Source for Discovering the Weekly Happenings of New England and Beyond

The Source

Compiled by Nick Pizzolato Send all submissions to collegiansource@yahoo.com

Radical simplicity

This untitled woodcut (1915) part of Kogel's "Antwerp" series is part of the exhibition "Artists and Workers: the Graphic Arts in Depression Era, 1929-41" at the University Gallery, located in the Fine Arts Center.

GALLERY EXHIBITIONS

UMASS – The University Gallery will display the exhibit The Culture of Violence. It is available for viewing between the hours of 11 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. during Tues., Fri. and 2 to 5 p.m. on Sundays. Free and open to the public.

UMASS – What happens when you take a neglected space and make it into a walk-through exhibition? You have the exhibition 'Anhedonia' by UMass student Ellen Pangerelli. It's located in Goodell and it will be on display from May 1 to the 14.

UMASS – The Hampden Gallery will be showcasing the show 'Material Immaterial' a MFA thesis from May 12 to May 16. There will be an opening reception from 4 to 6 p.m. All are welcome to come. The gallery hours are Monday through Thursday from 12 to 6 p.m. and Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m. It is sponsored by The University of Massachusetts Arts Council.

MUSIC

UMASS – The University Chorale, directed by H. Wayne Mcsharrow, will present its annual spring concert on Sunday, May 12 at 4 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. The show will perform folk music from Africa, Europe and the United States. The Women's Choir will also perform, showcasing Japanese and German folk songs. Tickets are $10 for the general public, $5 for students, elders and children.

UMASS – The UMass Jazz Ensemble I will be spoofing award shows in an arrangement put together by an UMass undergraduate student. Other songs covered will include work from Rodgers and Hart, Michael Brecker and Gershwin. The event will be on May 14 and is open to all interested in attending. Tickets are $10 for the general public, $5 for students, elders, and children.

SMITH COLLEGE – The Smith College Music Departments present its final concerts of the 2001-2002 season. Alannah Gustavson will present her eclectic senior voice recital on May 4 at 7 p.m. in Sweeney Hall. The event is free and open to the public.

AMHERST COLLEGE – "An Eclectic Evening of Chamber Music" is a benefit concert for the Amherst Cinema Center that will take place on May 10 at Buckley Recital Hall, Amherst College at 8 p.m. Featured performers include cellist Matt Haimovitz, violist Kathryn Lockwood, pianist Estela Olevsky, violinist Joel Pitchon, soprano Paulina Stark, clarinetist Michael Sussman and violinist Charles. The program includes Dvorak's Piano Quintet in A major, Beethoven's Clarinet Trio, a selection of classical cabaret songs, and a new work by Northampton composer Luna Pearl Woolf. Tickets are $10 with a student ticket with valid ID. Tickets can be purchased in person, at the Amherst Cinema Center office, 30 Amity Street or reserved by phone at 413-256-1991.

THEATER

SMITH COLLEGE – The Smith College Theater Department presents A Piece of My Hart by Shirley Lauro and directed by Elizabeth Schwan-Rosenwald '02, and starring four members of this year's graduating class. The play will run from May 16-18 at 8:30 p.m. in Theater 14 in the Mendenhall Center for the Performing Arts. Tickets are $7 for the general public and $4 for students and seniors.

FILM

UMASS – The Student Association for the Multicultural Brazilian Alliance (S.A.M.B.A.) will be showing the Brazilian film Orpheus, based on Greek Mythology, and is spoken in Portuguese with English sub-titles. The film is tonight, May 3 at 7:30 p.m. sharp. All are welcome and there is a $2 admission fee.

UMASS – On Tuesday The Radical Student Union will screen the film Pack of Lies, a documentary by the Media Education Foundation, which reveals the deception of tobacco industries claims that they do not seek to addict. Monday and Wednesday a documentary that is devoted to critical consciousness and awareness of oneself and society, examines postmodern blackness. Pack of Lies reveals powerful insider information about their claims. The film is open to all and will be showing on Mondays, May 6 in Campus Center Room 803 and also on May 7 and 8 in room 803. All showings are at 7 p.m.

UMASS – The Radical Student Union will be premiering the films Looking for Answers, and Occupation. The films will run on three days, starting on Monday, May 13, and continuing on the 14 and 15 in the Campus Center (in a room to be announced at a later date). Answers is a film that tries to explain the hatred behind the worst terrorist attack in U.S. history. Occupation is a film about Harvard students, employees, and the community, fighting the battle for a living wage. All are welcome as the shows are free and will begin at 7 p.m.

EVENTS

UMASS – Student Valley Productions will be hosting the Sixth Annual New England Collegiate Comedy Jam at 7 p.m. in Herter 231 and the Campus Center Auditorium. Local improv groups Mission: IMPROVable and TOAST! and the sketch comedy group Casual Sketch will be performing with other comedy troupes from across the East Coast in the free comedy show. All are welcome and encouraged to attend.

NORTHAMPTON – The Gyuto Monks, a Tibetan Tantric Choir, will be performing at the Calvin Theater on Friday, May 3 at 8 p.m. The Gyuto Monks perform a chant that has been described as a "beautiful sound" by not only singing one note, but also an entire chord. Their chanting is a form of meditation that they use to achieve enlightenment like Buddha did 2500 years ago. It is said that only those monks who have "realized selfless wisdom" can correctly achieve the goal of these chants. The chants of these particular monks can be heard on the soundtracks for the films Kundun and Seven Years in Tibet. For $50 people have the opportunity to eat dessert with the monks and also sit front and center during the show. For more information call 413-586-2802.

AUDITIONS

AMHERST – The Valley Light Opera will be holding auditions for its fall production of Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Yeomen of the Guard" on Saturday, May 11 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sunday, May 12 from 1 to 4 p.m. at the First Congregation Church on 165 Main St., Amherst. All voice parts are needed, and those interested in a principal role should prepare a solo number for that character. Those interested in the chorus should prepare one verse of a song, which displays their range and projection.

DANCE

SMITH COLLEGE – The Smith College Gamelan Ensemble presents its spring concert on Saturday, May 4 at 4 p.m. in Sweeny Concert Hall in Sage Hall. The concert features the "Lawung" or Javenese Lance dance. The concert is free and open to the public.

High Times Tour stops by Pearl Street

By Eric Goodman

The High Times Tour blazed its way into Pearl Street in Northampton on Wednesday, May 1 featuring hip-hop artists Non Phixion, Afu-Ra, Buckshot and Smif N Wessun.

As what has become a staple for small venue hip-hop shows, the first act, Non Phixion did not appear on stage until well over an hour after the scheduled 8:30 p.m. start. However the wait was well worth it, as the opening act and every group that followed did not disappoint one bit.

As expected Non Phixion's newly released mixtape 'Future Hits' was recently released. The Future Is Now album, and it appeared that the crowd was very much into their new material. However Bill-Bill Gates and the rest of the group's members were happy to perform requests for some of their older singles like "I Shot Ricky" and "Black Helicopters". Because Pearl Street is such a small venue, there were many opportunities for the crowd to interact with the performers. The highest moment from the crowd ranged in disapproval of the boos from Sir Vyrell 'A Gun' which was used from freestyle from the Brooklyn bad boys. Ill Bill proved that this kid was just another punk who jumped up to get beat down as he smacked him upside his head, and the show continued. Non Phixion's energy certainly set the tone for the rest of the night.

The next performer was a whirlwind through the city of Northampton, Afu-Ra centric. Afu-Ra joined by his Forgotten Monks crew. Afu also had a new album to promote, but unlike Non Phixion, he has a song on the new High Times: The Hip-Hop Collection LP. Of course, Afu-Ra did cuts off of both those albums, but he also dropped many songs from his debut album, Body of Life Force. The stage presence of Afu-Ra and the Perverted Monks is truly a sight as each member's dreadlocked hair stands a good two feet in the air, and their clothing is reminiscent to that of African warriors. Overall, Afu and his crew did a great job getting the crowd involved when it was obvious that they were not familiar with most of the stuff that he was performing.

After Afu-Ra wrapped up his set it was time for Buckshot Smif N Wessun and the majority of the rest of the Boot Camp Clik to represent their skills on the microphone. Of course Buckshot and Smif N Wessun performed the songs that they did for the High Times album, but after that it really felt like a showcase of some of the most classic underground joints ever done in the history of hip-hop. Smif N Wessun blessed the crowd with excellent performances of "Let's Git It On" and "Bucktown" while Buckshot spit his timeless lyrics from such Black Moon bangers as "Who Got The Props" and "I Gotcha Opin." In addition, Starang from OGC and Rick of Heltah Skeltah were on hand to do their solo joints as well as collaborative efforts such as "I Ain't Havin That." The entire Boot Camp's performance was certainly the highlight of the show, especially if you grew up listening to Black Moon's and Smif N Wessun's debut albums.

Overall this show was a great example of the diversity that has recently become a large part of hip-hop. The show opened up with five white boys on the stage, followed by the Afrocentric styles of Afu-Ra and ending with the straight-up grimy crew from Bucktown. Each act brought its own flavor to the hip-hop melting pot, which resulted in a terrifically tasty treat.

Medical MD & Veterinary Degree Programs

Making World-Class Physicians & Veterinarians Today, For Tomorrow's World

- Programs to meet the needs of high school and college graduates
- More than a half century old well-recognized and established European medical and veterinary universities
- Programs recognized by the National Committee on Medical Education Accreditation, and the U.S. Department of Education
- 100% financial aid is available. The U.S. government provides subsidized loans to qualified students in our programs
- Approved by New York Medical Education Board for clinical training in the state of New York. (A state with a high number of residency positions.)
- Medical and veterinary clinical clerkships training in the USA
- Smaller class size with traditional European tutorial style education
- Programs offer opportunity to earn dual degrees: MD PhD, MD MBA, MD MSHA, MD MPHA, etc.
- Much safer campus environment, compared to many campuses in the USA, allowing retaining and strengthening of cultural identities
- English language curriculum matches to major American medical and veterinary schools
- An excellent opportunity for hands-on participation for extensive training and experience
- Alumni holding very good positions all over the USA

When it comes to medical & veterinary education, our programs set standards for excellence. With cooperation from European universities, Hope Medical Institute brings you a unique, unmatched opportunity at your doorstep.

APPLY NOW!

For the October 2002 Term

For more detailed information, please contact us at

HOPE MEDICAL INSTITUTE

753 Thimble Shoals Blvd., Bldg 2B, Newport News, VA 23606-3575

PHONE: (757) 873-3333 * FAX: (757) 873-6661

write for artz, yo!

The Office of Alumni Relations

EARN FAST CASH!

The Office of Alumni Relations is now accepting applications for Alumni Weekend 2002. Must be available June 7, 8 and 9. Students needed to provide transportation, bellhop, host events and more. $6.75/hour. Meals will be provided during working hours and lodging is available. Call Lynn Zlotnick at 545-2317 for more information or stop by Memorial Hall.

Work all weekend.

We provide meals during working hours and lodging!

CASH FOR BOOKS

WE PAY TOP DOLLAR

Jeffery Amherst College Store

55 SOUTH PROSPECT ST. AMHERST

253-3870 253-7816

Now More Than Ever, Appearance Counts...

INTERVIEW SUITS

Priced to fit any budget.

We specialize in suits for graduate school and job placement interviews.

Jonathan Reid

The men's store in the Hampshire Mall.

UPC presents...

SPRING CONCERT

May 5, 2002

Mullins Center

featuring:

The Roots

guster

Sunshine fix

Southwest Battle of the Bands Winner

MC's

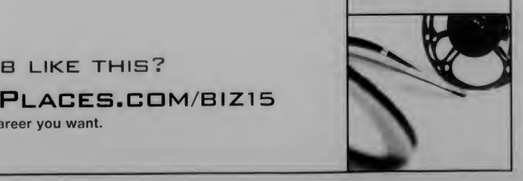
DJ Menance

DJ Playtime

DJ Big Phil

LUDACRIS

Free for UMass students $15 for 5-College $30 for public



AS SENIOR VP OF FINANCIAL PLANNING AT A MAJOR MOVIE STUDIO YOU COULD:

O.K. A $93 MILLION BUDGET

HIRE 7,500 EXTRAS

RENT 273 PALM TREES
(AND 1 BIG FAN TO MAKE THEM SWAY)

START HERE.
GO PLACES.
If you know business and accounting, you can get a job anywhere. Because the skills you learn in business – strategic and analytical thinking, communication, and leadership – are always in demand. In some of the coolest industries in the world. Even in the movies.

HOW DO YOU GET A JOB LIKE THIS?
WWW.STARTHEREGOPLACES.COM/BIZ15
Go here and take the first step toward the career you want.

American Institute of Certified Public Accountants

UMass ace Jesse Santos leads his team in strikeouts with 52 and wins with six. No. 10 will take the mound in game one of this weekend's three-game series against St. Joseph's.

Baseball's against the wall

Must win out for a chance at postseason

By Jim Pignatiello
COLLEGIAN STAFF

It wasn't supposed to come down to this.

Heading into the 2003 season, the Massachusetts baseball team (17-21, 6-12 Atlantic 10) was chosen to win the A-10 East by coaches throughout the conference.

But with two three-game series remaining on UMass' conference schedule, including this weekend's trio at fourth-place St. Joseph's, just winning all six games won't even guarantee the team a place in the A-10 Tournament.

Six teams make the conference's postseason, the top two teams from each division and the best two teams remaining, regardless of division. Since the A-10 West has dominated the East all season, only two teams from the UMass' division are likely to make the postseason.

The Minutemen currently sit in fifth place, five and a half games behind first-place St. Bonaventure.

"It's do or die right now," said Jesse Santos, the team's No. 1 pitcher. "We need to win all six games [and get some help]."

A UMass sweep in Norristown, Pa. would essentially knock the Hawks out of playoff contention, but would nowhere near guarantee the Minutemen a tournament berth.

The Maroon and White sit two games behind Rhode Island and Temple, which are tied at 8-10 for second place and playing each other in a three-game series this weekend. One team will win at least two games in that series and then head into next weekend as the favorite to win the spot behind the Bonnies in the A-10s.

URI has a tough matchup at St. Bonaventure in that final regular season series, while Temple is playing an easier opponent (St. Joe's) at home. Both teams must lose at least three out of these final six games for the Minutemen to have any chance at the postseason.

And they have to win all six remaining games of their own.

"Our mentality is to do what we can," said Santos, a senior, who has claimed all year long that he desires an A-10 Championship ring before he graduates.

Realizing that his performance in Saturday's game one must set the tone for the rest of the season, Santos seems unfazed by the situation, pointing out that he puts pressure on himself every time he heads out to the mound.

"Every A-10 game is big," Santos said. "I know I go into [every game] with the same mentality as always."

The Chelmsford, Mass. native claims that putting any extra pressure on himself simply isn't going to help his performance.

"Hopefully we can come out on top," he said.

St. Joseph's got off to an awful start in the A-10, losing eight out of its first nine conference matchups. But the Hawks have rebounded nicely, running six out of seven games before losing a pair to URI last weekend.

SJU has a strong offense, led by a trio of dangerous batters. Senior shortstop Pace Bradshaw leads his team in batting average (.378) and hits (62), while placing second in runs scored (31). Junior third baseman Mike Walls has a little more power in his swing, with six homeruns, 36 runs batted in, and 14 doubles to go with a .334 average. Senior outfielder Justin Gardosky leads the Hawks in homers (eight), RBIs (40), slugging percentage (.604), total bases (95), and OPS (1.027).

St. Joe's lineup boasts two more regulars batting over .300 in Kevin Dougher (.319) and Bill McCollum (.316).

On paper, it sure looks like Santos and the rest of the Maroon and White pitching staff will be hard-pressed to hold the Hawk offense down for an entire series. The pitching can't be expected to carry the load, so the UMass offense will have to pull its own weight and take advantage of a poor St. Joe's pitching staff.

McCollum doubles as the team's top pitcher with an earned run average of 4.31 and a 3-4 record. Senior Mike Minerva is considered the team's ace, but has pitched more like a deuce, with a 6.18 ERA and a 4-6 record. He has started seven games and gone the distance three times.

UMass captain Aaron Senez, who leads the team in just about every offensive category, must once again be the spark in the offense, with clutch hits. Senior outfielders Mike Kulak and Connell Clark are both hitting in the .330s and must find ways to get on base and into scoring position.

All three seniors are down to their last chance to make a statement and do everything possible to keep the hope of a postseason bid alive.

UMass BRIEFS:

Women's crew

The University of Massachusetts women's crew team's Varsity 8 boat earned ECAC Crew of the Week honors for the week of April 23-29 after capturing the Atlantic 10 title last weekend on the Cooper River in Collingswood, N.J.

Nine Varsity 8 boats raced in the heats and six qualified for the Grand Final. With a slight headwind and flat water, Massachusetts went off the line fast, but with a low rate, around 38 strokes per minute. Settling to a 31-32, the Minutewomen rowed a steady piece, with even splits for the first two 500's. In the second half of the race, the University of Dayton made a push, but UMass maintained a strong margin, winning by open water in a season-best time of 6:48.66, some 7.25 seconds ahead of second-place Dayton.

The UMass Varsity 8 boat of coxswain Megan Mastropolo (Old Tappan, N.J.), Lea Jakobsen (Copenhagen, Denmark), Sarah Pollmann (Hamm, Germany), Katia Prokopenko (Pskov, Russia), Colleen Banfield (Billerica, Mass.), Hayley McGrath (Florence, Mass.), Anna Talucci (West Chester, Pa.), Erin Cooke (Sinking Spring, Pa.) and Lauren Cromwell (Missoula, Mont.), captured the school's sixth A-10 title in the event's seven years.

In all, coach Jim Dietz's team won five of eight races en route to 44 total points. Massachusetts' five wins were the most by an Atlantic 10 team since the Minutewomen posted six wins in 1999. UMass boats which took gold include the Quad, the Novice 4, Varsity 8, second Varsity 8 and Novice 8-A.

Rhode Island enjoyed its best-ever finish at the Verizon Atlantic 10 Championship by placing second with 34 points. George Washington, which had finished second each of the last six years, was third with 25 points. Dayton was fourth with 22 points, followed by Fordham (16 points), Saint Joseph's (15 points), La Salle (12 points), Duquesne (eight points), and Temple (seven points).

"We were very happy with our effort last weekend," Dietz said. "It [winning the A-10 meet] is a tremendous accomplishment. I thought our captains (Cooke and Talucci) did a great job. They really stepped up.

"The level of competition within the A-10 Conference is starting to get stronger," he added.

UMass heads to Syracuse, N.Y., on Saturday, May 4, to face Big East rivals Villanova and host Syracuse.

Women's tennis

Sophomore Iafra Depontes (Kailua-Kona, Hawaii) and freshman Stephanie Price (Columbia, Mo.) were each named to the Atlantic 10 All-Conference Team as announced Wednesday by the conference office.

Depontes, who was also a 2001 selection, compiled a 10-13 singles record this spring from the first, second and third spots. She was 2-2 at the Verizon Atlantic 10 Championship. Price compiled a 13-10 record, including an impressive 8-2 mark at the second spot. She was also 2-2 during the conference's postseason tournament.

In doubles action, Price and Depontes were 15-7 from the first and second positions. They won 13 of their last 14 No. 2 doubles matches, including a perfect 3-0 mark at the A-10 Tournament.

In just two seasons, Depontes has 43 career doubles wins, placing her sixth on the all-time charts. She has also tallied 34 singles wins thus far.

The Minutewomen finished the year 9-17 overall and 3-2 in the A-10. They placed seventh at last month's conference championship.

Lauren Clay of Xavier was named the conference's Most Outstanding Player and Most Outstanding Rookie. This is just the third time that a player has won both of these awards. The most recent was UMass' Francesca Mancini in 2001.

Mark Wesselink of Richmond was named the Coach of the Year.

Women's water polo

The University of Massachusetts women's water polo team received a No. 18 ranking in the final Collegiate Water Polo Association poll released Wednesday. The Minutewomen, who have not been ranked in the last six polls, received 12 points.

The Minutewomen finished the season 15-18 overall and 3-3 in the CWPA, while coming in fifth place at last week's Eastern Championship. Their only loss was to 14th-ranked and eventual runner-up Hartwick, 6-5, in double-overtime. Their three wins in the tournament came against St. Francis, Harvard and No. 16 Brown.

Junior Mattie Newell (Dillsburg, Pa.) earned first team All-Conference honors as well as being named to the All-Eastern Championship and All-ECAC first teams. She was the lone Minutewoman on any of these prestigious teams.

UCLA finished the season ranked first with 100 points, while Stanford, Southern California, Long Beach State and California-Berkeley rounded out the top five.

Stanford, UCLA, Loyola Marymount and Michigan will compete in the 2002 NCAA Championship, May 11-12, in Los Angeles, Calif.

-Courtesy UMass Media Relations

NEED MORE? WWW.DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM

SKILLED DRIVERS NEEDED
Seeking experienced drivers 18 years+ for confidential project in high-speed environment. Must hold valid driver's licence and be willing to take risks. Please send blood type and employment history to www.testdriveinfo.com

WANTED
STUDENTS WITH TRUCK OR BUS DRIVING EXPERIENCE WANTED FOR SUMMER WORK
EARN $110-$140 PER DAY
Working approximately 14 days in
One or both sessions available. Possibly some July work.
Call 1-888-949-5089

Castaway Lounge
Will proudly present another successful
Amateur Night
Monday May 6th starting at 7 pm

PENTHOUSE PET DOMINIQUE ST.CROIX
- Cash prizes awarded
- All ladies over 18 must apply in person
- Open on Mondays at 3pm with 10 Beautiful Exotic Entertainers; Food and Prizes given away

Open Tuesdays Saturday 11am 1am
VIP Room available for private engagement parties
Phone# 413. 665. 8733

413.883.1144
Graduation Parties
Private Parties
UMass Discount
Chance Perspective
Hip-Hop Reggae R&B
Entertainment Co. gemini PYLE PRO numark

...mavi. ZANNA
Women's Clothing, Shoes & Accessories
Amherst Northampton Williamstown
www.zanna.com

...diesel. ZANNA
Women's Clothing, Shoes & Accessories
Amherst Northampton Williamstown
www.zanna.com

... urban outfitters. ZANNA
Women's Clothing, Shoes & Accessories
Amherst Northampton Williamstown
www.zanna.com

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. - Now Available, 1&2 bedroom apts. Leases begin June, July, Aug or Sept. 1 year lease. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywine-apts.com stop by or call (413) 549-0600.

Large One Bedroom Apartment 665-9313. Take over my lease at the end of May with Fall option (6 or 12 month leases available).

3- Bedroom Apartment in Puffton Village. Available June 1ST. Great location! 549-4097.

Summer Sublet with fall option. Puffton 3 BR/ 2 BA. June 1ST. 549-4814.

2 bedroom apt. Take over our lease and SAVE $$$. Free heat + hot water on bus line. 253-4876.

2 bedroom Puffton Apt. Take over lease. Available June 1 with fall option. 549-7685.

Take over our lease in June $905/M Brandywine. Call Dan 549-8518.

AUTO FOR SALE

Maxima 1989. Original owner. 154000 miles. Good car Jim 545-5677.

89 Honda Accord $1500 OBO 259-0068.

COMPUTERS

We pay CASH for your used lab tops 413-584-8857.

Color Laptop $99 Pentium tower/ CD Rom $99 with color monitor $139. HURRY! 413-584-8857.

EMPLOYMENT

Experienced, yard worker 6.50/hr. References. 549-0413.

Week cleaning. $6.50/hourly. Part-time references 549-0413.

Camp Counselor wanted for Tennis, Gymnastics, Water Ski, Arts, and more! Gain valuable experience at award-winning camps, while having the summer of a lifetime. Apply on-line at www.pinehirest.com

PCA/ Babysitter wanted 256-5765.

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Work! Student work program! Earn great summer income! $18.25 base-appt. Customer service and sales. Scholarships available. 732-2252. www.movieovations.com

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individual, full and part time positions available immediately. Only those able to work the upcoming summer should apply. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413)584-4746.

Be the Campus Red Bull connection. Join our team and help build one of the world's leading brands, you'll have a blast while gaining invaluable marketing experience. You'll even earn a little extra spending cash. Think about it. It's a lot less dangerous than selling term papers! Apply at redbullcollege.com.

EMPLOYMENT

CAMP WAYNE FOR GIRLS- Northeast Pennsylvania (6/19-8/17/02). Children's sleep-away camp. If you love children and want to have a GREAT summer we are still looking for Directors for Swimming, Golf, Tennis, Cheerleading and Ass't Directors for Sports and Gymnastics, Counselors for: Tennis, Gymnastics, Drama, Basketball, Golf, Soccer, Sailing, Sculpture/Lino Cuts, Silkscreen, Batik, Jewelry, Calligraphy, Guitar, Self-Defense, Video, Piano, Ropes, Mother's Helper, Night Watchperson. On Campus Interviews Arranged. Call 800-279-5019 or go to www.campwaynegirls.com.

FOR RENT

2 bedroom apt. on bus route avail. June 1 w/fall option $905/mo heat hot water included 549-1883.

FOR SALE

King size bed $75 and other furniture 253-1140.

FOR SALE

Desk for sale new wooden 4 drawer perfect condition call Meg 549-0072.

Furniture for sale call 549-2914. Table and chairs, breakfast bar, TV stand and more.

Mountain bike-99 Rocky Mountain fusion 19" excellent cond. See www.bikes.com with car rack, extras. $350. 585-0517.

Furniture for sale call 259-0068. Book-Shelf, Coffee-table, bed and more.

HOUSE FOR RENT

Hadley 3 bedroom plus. Newer home five minutes from UMASS. June occupancy $2600.00 month. 549-4270.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENT

Guitar-Cort Elec/Acoustic cutaway. Mint never played. With Fishman preamp and case. $350. 585-0517.

RENTAL PROBLEMS

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning lease? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

ROOM FOR RENT

1 bedroom in Alpine commons. Excellent roommates. Call Bryan 253-9499.

Looking for 1/2 roommates to share apartment for summer. Call 549-2676.

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 More needed to share 3 bdrm. Apt. N Amherst- townhouses $375 mo. , bus rte. June 1 – May 03. Needed ASAP Call Shannon. 549-9594 or 508-241-3185.

Need a place for fall sem. only? Share our 3 bdrm.! $375 mo. bus rte. Call Shannon ASAP! 549-9594 or 508-241-3185.

Female(s) to share 2 bedroom Brandywine Apt. starting June 1 . 549-1988.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Graduating and moving to the Boston area. I am looking for a third roommate to share a 3 bedroom house in Arlington if interested call 253-7426.

Puffton. Looking for roommate to share 3 bdrm. Available June 1. Call Christina 549-0209.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

ST. JUDE

May the sacred heart of Jesus be loved and glorified. St. Jude-Powerful Intercessor-True relative of Jesus-Pray for us. M.

SUMMER SUBLET

Brandywine. 2 bdrm. Cheap. 3rd floor. Furnished, AC. 549-4110 Bus route.

One large bedroom available at Cliffside apts. Starting June 1 partly furnished 617-842-4657.

Nice 3 bedroom townhouse. Practically on campus. Call Joe 549-9441.

SUMMER SUBLET

Brandywine. 2 bdrm. Available June 1. Call 549-1988.

TO SUBLET

2 bedroom. Free heat and hot water, Fall option, 253-9629.

1 bedroom Brandywine Apt. Sublet available June 1 Fall option 549-7148.

2 bedrooms available in a Puffton 3 bedroom apt., 1 with fall option. Available 6/1 or end of May. 549-5837.

Sublet in Brandywine with possible fall option. Looking for 1-3 people to take over 2 bedroom. $225/ month. Starting June 1ST. 549-9178.

2 Bedroom apartment partially furnished available June 1ST to sublet w/option to lease on bus route. 415-549-9612.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

1	CBS/3
2	NBSN
3	Fox Sports NE
4	PBS/57
5	HSCN Movie Channel
6	HSCN Movie Channel
7	TV Guide Channel
8	FOX/61
9	ABC/40
10	NBC/22
11	International Channel
12	UMATV
13	HSCN Info Channel
14	ESPN
15	ESPN 2
16	LIVE/19
17	ESPN Classic
18	Classic Sport
19	CNN
20	CNN HL
21	Weather Channel
22	Learning Channel
23	History Channel
24	A&E
25	Discovery Health
26	Food Network
27	NASA
28	Home & Garden TV
29	Travel Channel
30	VH1
31	TNT
32	TBS
33	E! Entertainment
34	Sci-Fi Channel
35	Court TV
36	Nick at Nite
37	Comedy Central
38	Cartoon Network
39	Game Show Network
40	TV Land
41	POV Family
42	Univision
43	Galavision
44	Telemundo
45	College TV Network
46	C-SPAN
47	C-SPAN2
48	Bloomberg Television

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass.

Client: Date: Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run Headline:

Total days x Words = x rate = PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m. 413-545-3500

Student rate: 20 cents word per day. Non-student rate: 30 cents a word per day.

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 3, 2002

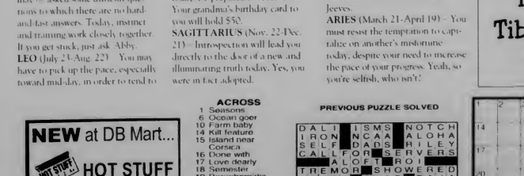
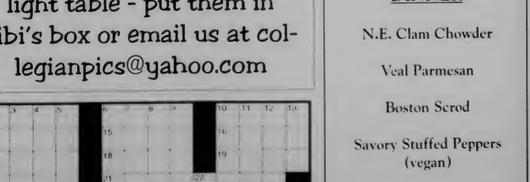
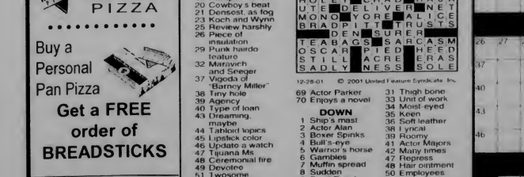
		C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	13	14	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Sonja Henie, Queen of the Ice		Now With Bill Moyers (N)		Nova Why the Towers Fell
WFSB	3	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	CSI: Crime Scene Invstgtn.		First Monday Tarnish Secret		48 Hours Thrilled (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	CSI: Crime Scene Invstgtn.		First Monday Tarnish Secret		48 Hours Thrilled (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	American Bandstand's 50th... A Celebration! (N) (In Stereo)				20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI	56		Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	Sabrina-Witch	Raising Dad	Reba (N)	Maybe It's Me	Maybe It's Me		Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Providence (N) (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)		Law & Order: Special Victims		News	Tonight Show
WTXX		15	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends		Just Shoot Me	Sabrina-Witch	Raising Dad	Reba (N)	Maybe It's Me		Home Imp.	Blind Date
WVIT		30	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Providence (N) (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)		Law & Order: Special Victims		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	11	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	Simpsons	Dark Angel Fresh Nation (N)			News		Law & Order: Special Victims	Tonight Show
WWLP	22	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Providence (N) (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo)		Law & Order: Special Victims		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	5	BBC World	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Now With Bill Moyers (N)		Blackadder	Red Green	Charlie Rose (N) (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Fraser	American Bandstand's 50th... A Celebration! (N) (In Stereo)				20/20		News	Nightline
WSBK	38		Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Fraser		♦Ty "The Glimmer Man" (1996, Suspense) Steven Seagal				News	Ent. Tonight	5th Wheel	Shipmates
WTBS	72		Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Roseanne	Major League Baseball Atlanta Braves at St. Louis Cardinals. (Live)						♦♦♦ "Pale Rider" (1985) (PA)
ABE	20		Law & Order	Surrender, D	The View (In Stereo)		Biography: Johnny Cash		Columbo "Swan Song"				Law & Order "Benevolence"
CNN	43	43	Moneyline		Crossfire		Amer. Stories	The Point	Larry King Live		Newsnight		Crossfire	Moneyline
COM	42	100	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Geeks	Com. Presents	Com. Presents	Kevin James: Sweet		Com. Presents	Com. Presents	Com. Presents	Com. Presents
DISC	53		Nature's Babies		India's Sacred Monkeys		Stealing Millions		Casino Diaries		High Rollers II: The New Breed		Stealing Millions
ESPN	26		Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs	Conference Semifinal Game 1 — Teams to Be Announced. (Live)					Baseball Tonight (N)		Sportscenter
LIFE	39		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait "Brandy"		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"Woman on the Run: The Lawrencia Bembenek Story" (1993, Drama)				Tatum O'Neal
MTV	35		Real World	Real World	Real World	Real World	ET on MTV (N)	MTV Special (In Stereo)		Cribs	Unplugged (In Stereo)		MTV Special (In Stereo)
NICK	46		Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb	Chalk Zone	Oddparents	Invader Zim	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Chiens	Chiens
SCIFI	45		Star Trek "The Omega Glory"		Star Trek "Mirror, Mirror"		Strange World Food (N)		Fanscape Premiere (In Stereo)		Fanscape Kirk's Return (N)		Strange World Food
TLC	69	24	Boston's Big Dig		In the Mind of Criminal		Hollywood Cops "Street Life"		World of Bounty Hunters		Rites of Passage (N)		Hollywood Cops "Street Life"
TNT	54		♦♦♦ "Pat Jr." (1998, Drama) Erik Estrada, Erin Gray				NBA Basketball Playoffs First Round - Teams to Be Announced. (Live)					Inside NBA	♦♦♦ "Platoon" (1986) (PA)
USA	62		Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG (In Stereo)		Nash Bridges (In Stereo)		½ "Birds of Chucky" (1998, Horror) Jennifer Tilly				Law & Order: Criminal Intent
HBO	48		(5:45) ♦♦♦ "Jason" (1996) Thomas Going, PG			Spider-Man	♦♦♦ "X-Men" (2000) Hugh Jackman, PG-13		John Leguizamo's Seinfeld... A Love Story (In Stereo)				Dennis Miller
MAX	49		(4:05)		♦♦½ "The Professional" (1994) Jean Reno, R		Sex, Swordfish & "Quiet Intentions" (2000) Robin Dunne, PG-13		♦♦½ "Virtuosity" (1995) Denzel Washington, R				Best Sex Ever
SHOW	50		(4:45)		♦♦♦ "Regrets in Paris: The Movie" (2000) G		♦♦♦ "City Slickers II: The Legend of Curly's Gold" (1994) PG-13		Stargate SG-1 Jeremiah "The Red Kiss" (TV)				Red Shoe



Highbrow By Aaron Eppy

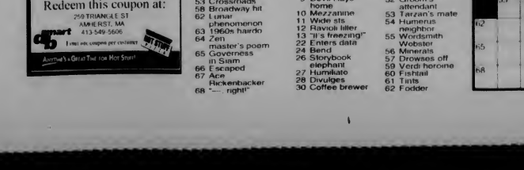


Shut the Duck Up By Seany McSean

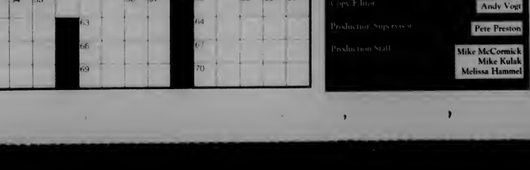


Highbrow By Aaron Eppy

UMass Hysteria By Eric Nycz



Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X



Scarecrow By W. Bird

The Torques By Ken Fredette

The Torques By Ken Fredette

Quote of the Day

> "After Star Wars comes out I'm gonna have to find a new reason to live."
>
> -Overheard

Amherst Weather

Friday	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 57 LOW: 36	HIGH: 68 LOW: 32	HIGH: 75 LOW: 39

Horoscopes

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You'll want to do things in your own way today – to the extent that others may back away and leave you very much alone for a time. Kind of how the Cowsines left Chunk alone with Sloth. It all works out in the end. Just make sure you have plenty of Rocky Roooooaaaaad!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – It's up to you to keep deception out of the picture today. During evening hours, a misunderstanding may bring tensions to the boiling point. Add ice.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – You may be asked some difficult questions to which there are no hard-and-fast answers. Today, instinct and reasoning work closely together. If you get stuck, just ask Abby.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – You may have to pick up the pace, especially toward mid-day, in order to tend to all the personal business on the docket at this time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Don't err yellow-snow. And beware high shelves. However, today will be a great day for you. Perfect even.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – You'll find yourself embracing things that you had shied away from in days or weeks past. Your attitude is undergoing a change for the better. Once you get yourself laid this weekend, you'll be all set.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – A phone call, letter, telegram or other form of long-distance message is essential to your peace of mind today. Be prepared to receive it. Your grandma's birthday card to you will hold $50.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Introspection will lead you directly to the door of a new and illuminating truth today. Yes, you were in fact adopted.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – They say love is a two-way street, but today you may have to hug the road in order to make any headway. The Collegian offers one solution to the fears.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You can improve your own outlook, and your productivity, simply by accepting current limitations and beginning to work with them willingly.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – You may find yourself entangled in a bittersweet triangle of sorts. Others involved are likely to depend upon you for a solution. But you don't have one. So tell them to ask Jeeves.

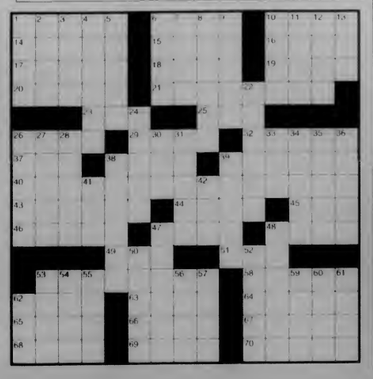
ARIES (March 21-April 19) – You must resist the temptation to capitalize on another's misfortune today, despite your need to increase the pace of your progress. Yeah, so you're selfish, who isn't?

Need a job in the fall?

Have a SLR / Digial camera?

Come down to the Collegian and apply to be a photographer! Applications are on the light table - put them in Tibi's box or email us at collegianpics@yahoo.com

NEW at DB Mart...
HOT STUFF PIZZA
Buy a Personal Pan Pizza
Get a FREE order of BREADSTICKS
Redeem this coupon at:
250 TRIANGLE ST
AMHERST, MA
413-549-5606
1 visit per coupon per customer
Another's a Great Time for HOT STUFF!



ACROSS
1 Seasons
6 Ocean goer
10 Farm baby
14 Kilt feature
15 Island near Corsica
16 Done with
17 Love dearly
18 Semester
19 Paraphernalia
20 Cowboy's beat
21 Densest, as fog
23 Koch and Wynn
25 Review harshly
26 Piece of insulation
29 Punk hairdo feature
32 Mannywich and Seeger
37 Vignette of "Barney Miller"
38 Tiny hole
39 Agency
40 Type of loan
43 Dreaming, maybe
44 Tabloid topics
45 Lipstick color
46 Update a watch
47 Tijuana Ms.
48 Ceremonial fire
49 Devotee
51 Twosome
53 Gossipers
58 Broadway hit
62 Lunar phenomenon
63 1960s hairdo
64 Zen master's poem
65 Governess in Siam
66 Escaped
67 Ace Rickenbacker
68 "— right!"

DOWN
1 Ship's mast
2 Actor Alan
3 Boxer Spinks
4 Bull's-eye
5 Warrior's horse
6 Gambles
7 Muffin spread
8 Sudden
9 Devil Rays' home
10 Mezzanine
11 Wide sts.
12 Havoc-liter
13 "It's freezing!"
22 Enters data
24 Bend
26 Storybook elephant
27 Humiliate
28 Divulges
30 Coffee brewer
31 Thigh bone
33 Unit of work
34 Moist-eyed
35 Keen
36 Soft leather
38 Lyrical
39 Roomy
41 Actor Mayors
42 Mahy times
47 Repress
48 Hair ointment
50 Employees
52 Groom's attendant
53 Tarzan's mate
54 Humerus neighbor
55 Wordsmith Webster
56 Minerals
57 Drowses off
59 Verdi heroine
60 Fishtail
61 Tints
62 Fodder

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

D	A	L	I		T	S	M	S		N	O	T	C	H
I		R	O	N		C	A		A	L	O	H	A
S	E	L	F		D	A	D	S		R	I	L	E	Y
C	A	L	L	F	O	R		S	E	R	V	E	R	S
			A	C	E		F	I		R	O
T	R	E	M	O	R		S	H	O	W	E	R	E	D
H	O	L	E	Y		C	H	A	D		R	A	J	A
U	T	E		D	E	L	I	V	E	R		N	E	T
M	O	N	O		Y	O	R	E		A	L	I	C	E
B	R	A	D	P	I	T	T		T	R	U	S	T	S
		D	E	N		S	U	R	E	R
T	E	E	B	A	G	S		S	A	R	C	A	S	M
O	S	C	A	R		P	I	E	D		H	E	E	D
S	T	I	L	L		A	C	R	E		E	R	A	S
S	A	D	L	Y		N	O		S	O	L	E

12-28-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

N.E. Clam Chowder

Pot Roast

Fish & Chips

Curried Chick Peas (vegan)

Spinach Noodle Bake (vegetarian) (W Basics)

DINNER

N.E. Clam Chowder

Veal Parmesan

Boston Scrod

Savory Stuffed Peppers (vegan)

Tofu Fajita (vegan) (W Basics)

Today's Staff

Night Editor: Matthew F. Sacco
Photo Technician: James Schaffer
Copy Editor: Andy Vogt
Production Supervisor: Pete Preston
Production Staff: Mike McCormick, Mike Kulak, Melissa Hammel

DAILY COLLEGIAN
WEEKEND EDITION
SPORTS
COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: ERIC SODERSTROM

Second season starts

Postseason begins this weekend for lacrosse

By Glen Straub
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The Massachusetts women's lacrosse team is the ultimate two faced squad. One face of the team displays confidence and has a healthy swagger. The other is a happy to hide in a cave. It is hard to predict which team will show up to each and every game.

"They [could] be any kind of team that can show up this weekend to play, because now the situation is either win or go home."

Today, the Minutewomen travel to Pittsburgh on the campus of Duquesne University to participate in the Atlantic 10 Conference Championship Tournament.

Is it going to be the team that dramatically upset the Helsinki Pride 12-6 on the road in the second game of the season? Or is it going to be the team that showed little patience and execution against conference opponent Temple at home two weeks ago?

After finishing the year on a three game losing streak, UMass fell down the ranks of the A-10 standings from first all the way down to third. As the third seed, they match up with the second seed, Richmond, in the second game of the day at Rooney Field.

The Minutewomen finished their regular season last week against lacrosse juggernaut North Carolina in a losing fashion – falling 14-6 to the Lady Tar Heels.

They go into the postseason with an 8-7 record overall and 3-2 in conference play.

But the postseason gives the ladies a chance to press the 'restart' button. They would love their restart to imitate the early weeks of the 2002 campaign as they went 3-0 to begin the year.

"We want to make sure we are mentally prepared, because we know we have the physical talent," Head Coach Phil Barnes said.

The opening draw is set for 1 p.m. against Richmond, and the Minutewomen know they will have their hands full all game long trying to combat the tough Spiders.

In a back and forth game which saw the Minutewomen's top three scorers – Jada Emery, Lydia Robinson and Hope Zelinger – each score a pair of goals, UMass came up short of exterminating the Spiders – losing 10-8 in Richmond.

Like time and time again this season, the Minutewomen showed its beautiful face and ugly face in a matter of the sixty minutes of regulation time.

Richmond jumped out to an 8-2 lead by halftime. However, UMass relinquished its top-notch play and scored six straight goals at the start of the second half.

Unfortunately, the Minutewomen suffered a late game break down and UR netted two goals in the final minutes of the contest en route to their 10-8 victory.

"That type of game happened to us all year long," Barnes said. "It happened against New Hampshire and it cannot happen again."

The seesaw style of play is unacceptable in the playoffs and everyone on the team is aware of this fact.

If the Minutewomen are able to show their good side and pull off the victory over Richmond, they will duel for the A-10 crown on Saturday against the winner of the Temple and Fordham – host Duquesne game.

"We must come out ready to play," Barnes said.

Sophomore Hope Zelinger (No. 31) scored on the women's lacrosse team with 47 goals in 13 games.

Minutemen don't want to share

Win would clinch sole possession of ECAC title

By Eric Soderstrom
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The message from the Massachusetts men's lacrosse office this week was the same as it had been all year.

"We're out trying to focus on this game and this game alone," said coach Greg Cannella, whose Minutemen host Rutgers Saturday afternoon in their regular-season finale. "We just want to come out and play the best lacrosse we can."

Even with Sunday's NCAA Tournament selection show looming, Cannella maintained his troops are only worried about one thing.

"When Sunday comes, then we'll deal with that," Cannella said. "But Saturday is a huge game for us. It's the difference between being co-champs or champs. And it's been the guys' goal all year to win the ECAC Championship outright."

UMass shared the ECAC crown with Georgetown last year but, because of its loss to the Hoyas, failed to secure the conference's automatic bid to the tournament. It was that mistake which allowed the NCAA Men's Lacrosse Committee to overlook last year's 12-2 Minuteman for an at-large bid.

But after its 15-11 tripping of Georgetown two weeks ago in Washington, D.C., UMass now sits on a ticket to this year's big dance. And with a win over the Scarlet Knights tomorrow, the Minutemen will also take sole possession of their conference title.

Rutgers doesn't pose much of a threat though, as it visits Garber Field with only two victories – none in the ECAC. UMass beat its four conference opponents by a combined 18 goals, while the Knights' last 11-8 loss by a combined 30. That, combined with the trend-to-recent-history doesn't give Rutgers much of a chance at upsetting the No. 10 Minutemen.

The Knights, who cannot in fact victors March 20 against St. Joseph's, enters the game having lost six straight and 10 of its last 11. And it doesn't help that UMass holds a 13-7 edge in the all-time series, and has won its last 10 games against Rutgers. Last year, the Minutemen defeated Rutgers 17-7 behind a combined seven goals from Mare Morley and junior Kevin Leveille. You have to go back to 1986 to find Rutgers last UMass conquest, a 7-6 decision in New Brunswick, N.J.

But it's that underdog status that keeps Cannella alert to the possibility of a Scarlet Knight threat.

"[Rutgers is] going to come in with the same attitude every one else does," he said. "It would make their season to beat us. We're going to go into it wanting to play the UMass style of lacrosse."

The Minutemen want to stop thinking about the demonstrations in their 16-10 loss to Syracuse Friday night in the Carrier Dome. Matched by the Orangemen's speed and strength, UMass was rattled early and allowed eight unanswered goals in the middle stages of the first half from which it never recovered.

Although the seeds won't be established until Sunday night, there is a good chance that there could be a UMass/Syracuse rematch in the second round of the Tournament. But that's all hype.

For now, the focus is on Rutgers and the Minutemen's eight seniors, who have just one game left on the friendly confines of Garber Field. Morely, Paul Hutchen, Dan Paccione, Don Little, A.J. Cappelli, Rob Schneider, Dusty Smith and Matt McFarland will all be honored before the game for their dedication to the UMass program.

But that's all. After the honors, it's back to business for Cannella. Don't expect him to start anyone for sake of times past. That would go against his style.

"I've never [started all the seniors]," he said. "It never made any sense to me."

Sophomore Neil Lundberg has scored eight goals in 13 games this season.

Coaches react to Marcum's retirement

By Matthew F. Sacco
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Less than a day after Athletic Director Bob Marcum announced he would take advantage of the Commonwealth's early retirement program coaches are reacting to the news.

Head Men's Water Polo Coach Russ Yarworth, whose sport is scheduled to be terminated next year, said that many of his players were asking him if Marcum's retirement would mean that water polo had a chance of being reinstated. But Yarworth added that he assured his players that this is an unlikely scenario.

Yarworth, who until the cuts was responsible for both the men's swimming and diving team and the men's water polo, is still responsible for his other squad which was not cut and showed little distress for Marcum's plans to leave the University.

Men's gymnastics coach Ros Johnson, whose team has also been cut under Marcum, had a similar reaction to the news. But he was a little more adamant about plans to combat the cuts.

"Nothing has stopped us from working to get our program reinstated," Johnson said. "The UMass gymnastics foundation has been created and is getting ready to make a proposal."

The proposal that Johnson alluded to is rumored to be a plan that will allow the gymnastics program to continue representing UMass without the financial support of the University.

With the large amount of alumni support that gymnastics receives and with a good fund raising campaign, a plan like this is feasible. But the question is if it will be accepted if the offer is put on the table, and with the inconsistency of donations and fund raising, how long it would be able to last.

Johnson did not directly blame Marcum for the situation his team is in right now, but he did not appear to give the A.D. much credit for battling the effects of the cuts.

"All the cuts are hard," Johnson said. "If you asked me if Bob made a difference, I don't think so. The greatest thing he did here was create the UMass Hall of Fame."

Elaine Sortino, coach of the UMass softball team and an Assistant Athletic Director, did give Marcum his due credit and defended the notion that he chose to retire under high scrutiny from fans, friends, alumni and University officials.

"I think he has been an effective leader for our department," Sortino said. "I think there's a lot of people that think they could be Athletic Director.

"They should try it sometime."

Sortino also expressed distress at Marcum's chosen time of retirement, as he is in the midst of numerous projects that would boost the reputation of the program.

"I wasn't surprised, actually I was sad," Sortino said. "I know that Bob has a lot left to do and I think he has been a strong leader for our athletic program for all of his 10 years."

Marcum has yet to release a statement with specific reasons regarding his decision. He has only said that this is the right time for his decision.

Gutterflower WILTS ARTS PAGE 5.

LOHNES SAYS GOODBYE ED/OP PAGE 4.

SOFTBALL W...

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
MONDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY ☆☆☆☆☆ 5.06.02

Baby's death still under investigation

By S.J. Port and Ken Campbell
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Authorities have yet to determine a cause of death for the baby found last Thursday in a William James dormitory trash receptacle area by a maintainer.

Northwestern District Attorney Elizabeth D. Scheibel explained that the investigation in what happened to the nine pound three ounce Caucasian boy is still ongoing. The mother of the child is described as a 19-year old University of Massachusetts freshman from Massachusetts. The father is not a UMass student, but is allegedly from the hometown of the woman.

The identities of both are being withheld due to privacy issues.

"First we need to determine, obviously, whether a crime has been committed," Scheibel said. "And we'll need to get the results of the autopsy, the complete results including further examination and once that is done and once the investigation is done including additional statements that are being taken in relation to the case then we'll make a determination."

The maintenance worker discovered the child at approximately 7:20 a.m. Thursday. The preliminary autopsy results have not clarified the time of the child's birth or death.

"Obviously before 7:20 a.m." Scheibel said. "Sometime before then, but I'm not going to be more specific."

Scheibel said the mother had been interviewed by police but refused to comment on whether or not the mother had requested an attorney or waved her rights before speaking with authorities. Information from the mother's statement was used to obtain a search warrant for the mother's dorm room and the second-floor bathroom of the all-female dormitory.

"Evidence was obtained, and was taken as a result of that search," said Scheibel.

Scheibel confirmed rumors that the mother had denied the pregnancy to dorm mates.

"She was thought to have been pregnant," Scheibel said. "There is no information that anyone was with her at the time the baby was born."

Campus police were called after the discovery and state police were brought in afterward. Interviews pointed police toward the young woman, who was "thought to be pregnant." The mother was taken to an area hospital for medical attention. Information regarding the condition of the mother has not been released.

The DA's office would not speculate on possible charges, if any, against the woman until the autopsy results are final and the investigation is complete. If the child was stillborn, the charge, according to Scheibel will not be murder.

"I think it's fair to say that the range would be from no crime having been committed to disposing improperly or moving a body to a charge of murder," Scheibel said. "It is, all at this point real speculation until we know what we have."

The case is not the only one the DA is looking into.

Prosecutor Renee Steese said that Artie R. Sorel, a 21-year old Ware resident, killed her newborn son in October of last year.

"The baby was placed into a closet for a period of approximately two days, thrown in a river and recovered a couple of months later, discovered by some young boys who were playing along the banks of the river," Steese said.

The case is pending in Ware District Court. Sorel is being charged with moving a body and manslaughter. She has pleaded innocent to the charges.

Northwestern District Attorney Elizabeth Scheibel presented information at Friday's press conference regarding the incident that occured in James dormitory.

Community event to address student concerns

The body of a newborn boy was found in James dormitory last Thursday.

In light of the recent discovery of a deceased infant in James dormitory on Thursday, there are a series of resources on campus designed to help students to cope with the incident.

There will be an event held entitled "A Community Comes Together" that is open to the public and will address issues that students have surrounding the incident.

The open forum is held in order to "support those who are grappling with the recent discovery of a newborn in our community," the information for the event explains.

It will be held today from 6 to 7 p.m. in the ping-pong lounge of Prince/Crampton dormitories.

The Graduate Women's Network of the Graduate Student Senate, the Alanaui Caucus of the Graduate Employee Organization and the Multilingual Volunteer Interpreters Project of the Everywoman's Center are sponsoring the event.

Beyond allowing students to express their views and concerns, the forum also features guest speaker Lynette Bloise from mental health services to address some of the emotional issues for the individuals on campus.

This is the second event that has been held following the incident. The first was a closed meeting for the residents in James dormitory the day that the death had occurred and offered students within the building a chance to talk about their feelings and made them aware of the resources that were available to them on campus.

The Everywoman's Center is also offering support to those coping with the incident by having special walk-in hours in the resource and referrals conference room in Wilder Hall.

Counselors will be available from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. today or students can call 545-0883.

-Melissa Hammel

Advocates stress importance of laws allowing safe havens

By Melissa Hammel
COLLEGIAN STAFF

There has been a recent resurgence in the advocacy for Safe Haven laws within Massachusetts following a series of incidents involving abandoned infants.

Safe Haven laws have been implemented in 40 states across the country and give parents the ability to drop their infant off in a safe place such as a hospital or to a literal "safe haven" or a police officer or a doctor without fear of criminal prosecution.

President George W. Bush was the first governor to sign Safe Haven legislation into law in the state of Texas and has allowed for additional federal money to be available in order to publicize safe haven programs.

A law of that type has been debated and has lingered in the Ways and Means in Massachusetts for the past eight months.

Similar laws are being debated in Alaska, Hawaii, Missouri, Nebraska, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania, Vermont, Virginia and Wyoming – the other nine states that do not have legislation in that area.

"If you look at it population-wise, 90 percent of the population is covered by a safe haven law," Michael Morrisey, a citizen advocate for safe haven legislation explained. "We don't have a legal way to help children, our legislature is turning its back on all of these statistics. Why is it that we are in the bottom percentage of the country?"

While safe havens are legal in Connecticut and New York, in other places in New England such as Vermont, New Hampshire and Pennsylvania they are not.

"[I]a mother] went to Connecticut over the state line she could have relinquished the baby," Morrisey explained. "She could have walked away."

He went on to explain that there was an incident that occurred in Connecticut in which two parents brought their newborn child to the nearest hospital and dropped the child off, however the couple crossed state lines into Massachusetts and was prosecuted for abandonment.

"The baby was brought into Massachusetts. [the couple] didn't know that the state didn't have the law, they assumed that everyone did," Morrisey explained, going on to say that because they faced legal problems in relation to the incident that it may have made other women apprehensive about the process. "It would scare any woman."

Morrisey explained that during the past eight months there had been a series of child abandonment cases, including the incident that occurred on Thursday at the University of Massachusetts campus as a case of alleged infant abandonment.

"It was the sixth incident of abandonment that has happened within the past eight months in Massachusetts or in which the woman was from Massachusetts," Morrisey said. "What's sad is that these are the ones we know about, there are probably a few more that have not been discovered."

He explained that without laws to assist mothers that the state of Massachusetts is not helping to prevent this from happening.

"[The mother] is going to be scared and may not know what she is doing," Morrisey explained. "That could be a potentially horrible situation."

Four of the six incidents that have happened within the state resulted in infant deaths.

"We can't do anything without a law. If we had a three or four or five month head start we may have been able to prevent this from happening," Morrisey explained regarding the ability to put up posters and advertise a safe haven hotline. "It

Turn to HAVEN, page 3

INTERNATIONAL BRIEFS

France

By Abby Williams
THE DAILY PRINCETONIAN (PRINCETON U.)

(U-WIRE) PRINCETON, N.J. – A Princeton University panel met Thursday to discuss and evaluate the recent presidential primary election in France, in the second bowl of Robertson Hall.

In a vote that shocked French citizens and people around the world, Jean Marie Le Pen – the far-right candidate with a history of staunch nationalism and Nazi sympathy – defeated the popular Socialist candidate Lionel Jospin. During the two-hour-long forum, panelists discussed the French voting choices and the future of the country's politics.

The panelists first explained the election's surprising outcome to an overflowing audience comprising graduate and undergraduate students, faculty and foreign press.

Pascal Richie, chief Washington, D.C. correspondent for the French publication Liberation, expressed the country's utter shock at the election results – the far right earned its highest-ever percentage with 20 percent of the ballots, 17 percent of those votes going to Le Pen himself.

"In France nobody saw this coming. Nobody saw this earthquake coming," Richie said.

The five panelists offered a variety of possible explanations for Le Pen's victory – including the division of the left's electorate among five candidates. The higher-than-usual number of candidates detracted from Socialist support and prevented Jospin from earning the votes needed to advance in the elections.

Ezra Suleiman – professor of politics and director of the committee for European Studies – also suggested the results indicate a deep dissatisfaction among the poorer and younger French living outside of Paris. Because the capital city houses all of France's cultural and political life, the rest of the country feels the government is out of touch with their concerns, he said.

"I would say that there is an element of out of touchness," Suleiman said. "There is a wide gap between the Ile de France and the rest of France."

Another possible explanation offered by Sophie Meunier – a Princeton research associate and co-author of the recent book "The French Challenge: Adapting to Globalization" – is that Le Pen played off of the public's fear of losing its national identity through globalization. Promising a France that would return to the franc, limit immigration and avoid the dangers associated with a free market economy, Le Pen appealed to a fearful public.

Regardless of its causes, the panel said Le Pen's victory is an embarrassment to the French people. During the question and answer session, two students with French citizenship expressed fear and concern over Le Pen's reputation of intolerance. Members of the panel said they thought current President Jacques Chirac almost certainly would emerge victorious in the final presidential election in June.

"I also hope it will be a blip, but I don't think it is. There is a big niche for politicians who are nostalgic for an old France," she said.

Richie closed the session by presenting a propaganda pamphlet Le Pen had distributed throughout France, in which his wife extolled his virtuous persona. As the panel and audience chuckled at the catchphrases and loaded statements, a French student shouted the propaganda on the inside of the pamphlet is not quite as humorous as that on its exterior.

"It is scary to me," she said with a nervous smile.

Taiwan

By Christina Mcgough
THE DAILY ATHENAEUM (WEST VIRGINIA U.)

(U-WIRE) MORGANTOWN, W.Va. – Fifty years ago Taiwan had one political party and earned $150 per capita. Today it has 95 political parties, and the average person earns about $14,000.

According to Chien-Jen Chen, director of the Taipei Economic and Cultural Representative Office in Washington, D.C., the biggest reason for the country's massive improvements is "timely assistance from the United States."

Chen came to speak at West Virginia University Thursday evening about the many reasons behind Taiwan's advancements and the growing relationship between Taiwan and America.

"Many feel Taiwan has created an economic miracle, and I tell them, 'Yes, we have, but it's because of the hard work of our people'," Chen said.

Although the island is half the size of West Virginia, it has 340 daily newspapers, 100 radio stations and five television networks.

Chen said it also has prospered because it has enjoyed relative peace and stability.

"It's said that so many Third World countries still fight each other. This is what keeps them back, and this is not Taiwan," he said.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Sam Wilkinson Editor-in-Chief
Matthew F. Sacco Managing Editor
Amy Garganta Business Manager
Shimauli Dave Production Manager
Jake Lilien Diversity Editor
Mike Kulak Editorial Production Manager
Jason Smith Advertising Manager

Mike Delano Arts & Living Editor
Matthew Despres Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jennifer Eastwood Features Editor
Catherine Turner News Editor
Tiborcio Rincon-Blum Photography Editor
Eric Soderstrom Sports Editor
Brent Siniawski Finance Manager
Charlie Iacco Distribution Manager

Morgan Taylor Advertising Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Cara Murphy Assistant Finance Manager
Shawn Daugherty Assistant Business Manager
Megan Shannon Assistant Advertising Manager

Domino's Pizza
Amherst 256-8911
$9.99 2-1 TOPPING 10 INCH PIZZA + 2 COKES ADD 10 WINGS $4.99 ADD 8 TWISTY BREAD $2.99 EXPIRES 5/30/2002
TUESDAY ONLY BUY ANY PIZZA GET 1 FREE NO DOMINATORS PIZZA EXPIRES 4/30/02
MONDAY ONLY $6.99 LARGE 1TOPPING PIZZA ADD 10 WINGS $4.99 EXPIRES 5/30/2002
OFFERS CAN NOT BE COMBINED

CINEMARK
The Best Seat In Town
CINEMARK AT HAMPSHIRE MALL
367 Russell St. 413-587-4233
Schedule for Friday 5/3 - Thursday 5/9
DIGITAL SURROUND SOUND IN ALL AUDITORIUMS
Purchase Tickets Online @ cinemark.com
SPIDERMAN (PG13) 10:15 4:15 7:30 10:15*
SPIDERMAN (PG13) 12:45 4:45 8:00 10:35*
SPIDERMAN (PG13) 1:15 5:15 8:30*
SCORPION KING (PG13) 12:05 2:50 5:40 7:45 10:25*
DUECES WILD (R) 12:55 4:25 7:05 9:45*
HOLLYWOOD ENDING (PG13) 12:20 4:30 7:15 10:00*
LIFE OR SOMETHING LIKE IT (PG13) 12:25 4:55 7:35 10:15*
JASON X (R) 12:50 5:00 7:55 10:10*
MURDER BY NUMBERS (R) 12:30 4:10 7:30 10:20
THE SCORPION KING (PG13) 12:25 4:50 7:45 10:25*
CHANGING LANES (R) 12:00 4:05 7:20 9:55
HIGH CRIMES (PG13) 5:05
PANIC ROOM (R) 7:40 10:05
THE ROOKIE (PG) 12:25 4:00 7:10*
ICE AGE (PG) 12:10 2:15 4:25
Senior Movies - $5.75 ($5.00 after 6pm)
MURDER BY NUMBERS (PG13) 4:10 7:30 10:20
*NO PASSES. NO SUPERSAVERS
Tickets & showtimes available at cinemark.com

CASH FOR BOOKS
WE PAY TOP DOLLAR
Jeffery Amherst College Store
55 SOUTH PROSPECT ST. AMHERST
253-3870 253-7816

TAPESTRY Health
Affordable and Confidential
Gyn Exams
Birth Control
Pregnancy Testing
Emergency Contraception
HIV/STD Testing
Quit Smoking
Bangs Center, 70 Boltwood Walk, Amherst
16 Center Street, Northampton
(413) 586-2539 or
www.tapestryhealth.org

Fall 2002 Housing Assignment Information

Housing Assignment Office ● 235 Whitmore Administration Building
413.545.2100 ● www.housing.umass.edu

The following is important Housing Information for Fall 2002:

- The last day to submit a request for an assignment change or application is Friday, May 24, 2002.
- If you are eligible and wish to cancel your housing assignment, please call the Housing Assignment Office before May 31, 2002 to avoid a cancellation fee.

HOUSING SERVICES

- ✔ There will be a $100.00 cancellation fee from June 3rd - June 28th.
- ✔ There will be a $200.00 cancellation fee from July 1st - July 31st.
- ✔ If you cancel after July 31st there is a $300.00 cancellation fee.

American children experience high rate of obesity, study says

A recent study published in The Journal of the American Medical Association showed that children are becoming obese at an alarming rate.

A study was conducted between 1986 to 1998 measuring the prevalence of obesity in children aged four to 12 years old in the U.S. Results revealed that within that time period the number of overweight children significantly increased. Hispanic children had the highest prevalence of obesity with 21.8 percent meeting the obesity classification status used. African American children followed reaching 21.5 percent and non-Hispanic whites were at 12.3 percent. It was also found that children were latter in 1998 than 1986. One of the major concerns with this is that obesity in childhood often results in obesity in adulthood.

Obesity is associated with an increased risk for Type 2 diabetes, as well as cancer and heart disease. Diabetes is the leading cause of kidney failure, limb amputations, and new onset of blindness in adults, as well as a major risk factor for heart disease and stroke. The majority of Type 2 diabetes cases are predominantly in adults over 40 years of age. However, with the increasing amounts of obese children, children are developing this form of diabetes more than ever. Children are now faced with huge risk factors that will definitely alter their quality of life in the future.

With the increase in television watching, computer use, and overall lack of physical activity, more children spend their time sitting than actually moving around. Children cannot be blamed for this problem either. Overweight adults constitute about 60 percent of the United States' population. Children develop food tastes and lifestyle habits from those of their guardians.

Food advertising has focused more on fast food and unhealthy items marketed strictly for children, with a majority being placed during kid's television programs. Children are very susceptible to this advertising, pushing their parents to buy these items.

As the rate of childhood obesity goes up, taxpayers will end up picking up the slack. About $100 billion dollars of taxpayer money goes to care for people with diabetes. Although family history of diabetes increases one's risk for developing the disease, it is largely preventable. Obesity, along with physical inactivity, seem to be the major causes of the disease.

It is now the parent's responsibility to make sure that their children start exercising more. Limiting the amount of time that children watch television, play on the computer, or play video games is a start. Getting them involved in sports activities or having them walk home from school are just a couple of ways to increase physical activity. Physical activity doesn't have to be running for an hour and then weight training for another hour. Children, especially obese children, will benefit from just starting out slow. Small steps are necessary if one is going to keep up with it. Dieting is not the answer either. Rarely do dietitians put children on diets.

Children need more calories to aid in growth and development. It is encouraged to just increase physical activity. Starting an exercise program with your children may also help. This will increase the quality time that you spend with your kids, and will allow both of you to become healthier. Obesity in children is an endemic problem and must be prevented. Give them a fighting chance by preventing it from developing. Increasing your risk for chronic diseases while you are young is not a way to start a long, healthy life. Be Healthy!

Christopher Theberge is a Collegian Columnist.

Meet the Greeks

Members of the Greek community volunteered their time at a car wash as part of Greek Week. All funds raised go to the Amherst Survival Center; the event was coordinated by Marlena Meloy and Carl Lanna t.

■ haven

continued from page 1

can happen again."

Some opponents to safe haven laws fear that fathers will not have the right to the child if it is put up for adoption. Other concerns are that the children that are dropped off at safe haven shelters will not have papers that give information about their medical history. That is not an issue in states that allow mothers to drop off medical information anonymously.

Morrisey explained that while he is not optimistic about the law passing during this legislative session, he feels that it is still very important.

"Somebody's going to get hurt or killed and this person is going to be one day or one minute old infant who cannot defend itself," he said. "I would so much rather see any child live. Save the life of the child first."

Anyone interested in getting in touch with a safe haven can call 1-877-796-HOPE. This is a toll-free national hotline.

Write for news

Munchie Madness 3-6PM TUESDAY-FRIDAY
VEGGIE POTATO SKINS $3.49 $4.48
NACHOS ESPECIAL $2.49 $4.48
SWEET POTATO FRIES $2.99 $3.98
1/2 PRICE!
Judies
10% COMP WELCOME HERE
CLOSED ON MONDAYS
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

Landscape students, looking for project supplies? Come to:
Valley Miniatures
YOUR SUPPLY HEADQUARTERS
-WE SELL-
-Scale Basswood & Balsa
-Acrylic Sheets
-Brass Tubing
-Landscape Materials
-Glues
-Paints
-Dremel & X-acto Tools
-Architecture/Design Materials
584-5006
141 Damon Rd. - Northampton
OPEN: 9:30 -5:00 Mon. - Thurs. 9:30-4:00 Fri. & Sat.

McMurphy's
Southern Comfort
Finlandia
Jack Daniels
Present Casino Night
Beat the Dealer Win a Prize From 10-12
Monday May 6th

GRAPHICS
the Collegian is hiring for next semester
College Street Affairs
it's Spring Time!
CAMPUS PARKING NOTICE
come talk to Shimauli, Mike or Morgan or call 545-1864
105 Campus Center Basement

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN
Now Hiring Advertising Account Executives for Fall 2002
Call 545-3500 or stop by our office, room 113 in the Campus CenterBasement, with your resume for more information
All Majors & Classes Welcome to Apply

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM WRITING ISN'T ABOUT LIFE, BUT THE ONES LIFE WORTH LIVING FLAUBERT ED/OP EDITOR: MATTHEW DESPRES

Prison safety

Time to evaluate

The fire at Mitchell County Jail in North Carolina was, simply put, a tragedy that further illustrated some major safety problems in prisons that have been effectively ignored for all too long.

Mark Haley Thomas, a college senior, was serving a weekend sentence for drunk driving when the fire started. Thomas was one of eight men who lost their lives in the blaze that started one floor below.

Deputies on duty managed to free many of the inmates on the floor where the fire originated but the thickness of the smoke and the direction of the inferno caused confusion and a mad scramble to find the keys to the upstairs cell.

In the end the guards could not reach the cell upstairs and seven of the eight men in the cell perished – including Thomas.

There are two major factors that contributed to the death of eight inmates and both could clearly have been avoided and should be looked at to prevent such tragedy in the future.

The first was the age of the prison. Mitchell County fail is a 1950's era structure and it clearly does not meet all fire safety standards. There were likely a lot of flammable materials, which allowed the blaze to spread rapidly, thus not giving the guards enough time to react and free all the inmates. It's likely that the deputies were only able to unlock the low level cells before nearly they lost nearly all visibility.

Clearly jails are one of the last concerns on the minds of taxpayers and government officials when it comes to building renovation. Maybe it's because criminals are unjustly considered a step below other citizens or because no one has ever thought that even jails need better living conditions.

Nonetheless, the condition of these jails is consistently overlooked and there is simply no excuse. Innocent men perished in this tragedy and it could have easily been prevented by attention to the state of these jails. Going along with the need for better and more advanced jails is the fact that individual cells need more efficient locking systems.

Instead of having guards fumble with a set of keys when there is an emergency, it would be advantageous in the interest of both the guards and the inmates to have a mechanical or electronic locking system to augment the archaic lock and key version. Something like this would not cost an inordinate amount of money and really, can we put a price on safety?

Especially in the wake of Friday's accident, it is impossible to ignore the situation for much longer. Some of these people were not even given a chance to fight for their lives. They were locked in their cell with little or no hope for survival. And what makes it all the more tragic is the small but overlooked steps that could have been taken to prevent all of this.

We understand that society's view of jails and their inhabitants are narrow and often slanted, but many of these people are simply paying their debt to society. Not to mention the fact that the guards are in danger as well, and all they do is work there. The fact is that change is needed, because it simply isn't fair to put someone's life at risk because of ignorance.

Information from CNN.com was used in this editorial.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

www.dailycollegian.com

You don't have to go home, but you can't stay here

Brian Lohnes signs off

Brian Lohnes

Well folks, this is the end of the line for me. Aside from my installment of "Notes from the Campus Center Basement" – a collection of statements, lies and off-color jokes.

I started writing these things my second week here as a freshman. I was lucky enough to have an RA who worked at the paper and encouraged me to write and blatantly lied to me by telling me that it was good. I have to admit that I was pretty much in awe when I saw my name in this paper for the first time, and every week thereafter. This is not to say that it's been all wine and roses, there have been some down moments too.

Like the time I got the bright idea to poke fun at an activist that was coming to campus to give a speech about how the Barbie doll presents a bad image to young girls and it can be psychologically damaging if the girls can't fit that image. I successfully angered every woman on campus and received a big stack o' hate mail to go along with it.

Then there were the morons who called my room and threatened me when I wrote a column about racist bastard David Duke. After being called names that you'd never, ever in a lifetime expect to be called at UMass, I shrugged it off and figured that if these guys had the gusto to do me in, they would have already done it and forgone the phone call.

I've been lucky enough to have a couple of my columns scooped up and put on the U-Wire, the national college paper equivalent of the Associated Press. It's pretty neat to know something you wrote is being read all over the nation, and people as far away as Nebraska can curse what you write and call you a moron.

I have learned that there are many, many people who are completely devoid of a sense of humor. Anything resembling a joke, or even satire (gasp!) is not funny, but offensive, stupid, and cause to insult the size of my genitalia (trust me, I've been through it. I learned that most people appreciate good humor and that they despise the insane ramblings of some of the people who have appeared on these hallowed pages. Once your column crests 1,300 words you tend to lose any audience, credibility and interest in your work. I've learned that this campus will never have any idea how important the Collegian is to the every day operation of UMass. Go to other schools, even those in Boston and look at their student newspaper. I guarantee that you will be shocked, both at the fact that it probably comes out once a week and that it looks like it was assembled by high school kids.

"To the one person out there reading this and thinking, "I could do better than that guy." Come down to the Collegian office and give it a try – it worked for me."

I learned that it becomes way too easy to get into a pissing contest with people who do not agree with you, directly insult you, or try to wind you up. I have taken my share of shots from the fellas over in the Republican Club bunker, but I've always jabbed back. I learned to at least listen to what people I don't agree with have to say. This seems to be a skill that most of the people at this place seem to have forgotten. I learned that despite how much I disagreed with Ralph Nader and the legions of followers he had here on campus and how annoyed and aggravated I became when it was impossible to escape him, that I will always remember that time as one where people really cared and united for something.

I learned that no matter how I dress myself up and how hard I try, I'm a blue-collar guy with grease under my fingernails and will never work in a nine-to-five office setting.

I learned that chasing a lifelong dream is about the most exciting, scary, and nerve racking experience that I could ever imagine and that every single person should have to experience it sometime in their lives.

I learned that the smartest people on this campus work in a garage at UMass Transit and that the student body could never even visualize what would happen if Transit stopped running. They keep this place from becoming a gridlock of doom.

I learned that planning a big event on this campus is harder than getting government approval for a new fighter plane.

Lastly, I learned that for the past four years I have had a voice on this campus and I really don't want to give it up. It is pretty therapeutic to be able to spill your beans to 30,000 people once a week. To those people who read every week, thanks. To those people who read every week because you hated what I had to say, and I know there are some, thanks. To the one person out there reading this and thinking, "I could do better than that guy." Come down to the Collegian office and give it a try – it worked for me.

Brian Lohnes is a Collegian Columnist.

Diocese debacle

Ken Campbell

The Boston diocese of the Catholic Church has decided not to settle with more than 80 litigant over charges of sexual abuse at the hands of priests. The horrible part is that this is not the decision of the much maligned Cardinal Bernard Law, but of a council of laymen in charge of the diocese's finances. It is obvious to even the most casual reader that Cardinal Law has been totally untaring when it comes to the victims of abuse, an allegedly going so far as to cover up abuse by transferring priests from parish to parish.

The cost to settle the cases seems to be about $50 million. According to media reports, the Church has the money. The finance council of laymen doesn't want to pay it. They say it would cost nearly all the diocese has to settle these cases, and that is just not acceptable to them.

Ridiculous.

It is utterly reprehensible, gentle reader, that the diocese is refusing to settle these cases. The answer of "we can't afford it" is not acceptable. Thirty million dollars? The diocese is getting off cheap. Just by thinking about how many lives, how many minds have been completely destroyed by the actions of horrible, evil men in vestments, I think thirty large is a low figure. These poor souls have been totally stripped bare, devoid of all trust of people who you are told from birth that you can put total faith in. The clergy are supposed to be pure. The parish priest is the one who cleanses your sins, not the one who adds to them.

It is not enough to begin rebuilding these poor victims' lives. Thirty million? Or over 80 people? No. Not enough at all. These people have been robbed of something more valuable than any material good. They have been burgled of their innocence. They must have enormous difficulty trusting any other human being after having been victimized by someone that everyone around you says is implicitly good and holy.

What's more offensive than the simple news that the victims will not be compensated is that the decision was made over Cardinal Law's objection. Law himself hate him. Law is a high-ranking official of the Church. His word is not something easily turned aside. It takes a grave act of stupidity to ignore the Cardinal's advice in such a heated and contested matter as the finance council has.

When finally it seems as though progress is being made, women screw it up. Their excuse is that the settlement will grievously hurt the diocese. What about the grievous hurt the diocese has caused the victims by ignoring their pleas and cries for help? What about them? The fact that the diocese is concerned with the bottom line disturbs me on another level as well.

The Catholic Church has survived for centuries based on the faith of its parishioners. It has never been a really "for profit" religion. The religion has survived persecution, dissenters, heretics and other undesirable circumstances. The fact that the Boston diocese, the fourth largest in the nation, does not want to pay is ludicrous. Bankrupt the Church if need be. Fix this problem. It will strengthen the waning faith of the Boston diocese. Parishioners will continue to support the Church through its time of need. Money is not an issue; faith is.

The sad thing is by expressing this viewpoint I will instantly be at the whim of detractors: Diocese sexmen and women who exist to solely put the diocese, not God, above corporeal criticism.

I have remained publicly silent throughout the entire crisis in the Catholic Church. I have not ventured an opinion. For the longest time I felt conflicted. On the one hand, I am a Catholic, born and raised. But primarily, I am a human being and there is something inherently unnatural and inhuman about abusing children. However, now it is clear. The problem in the Church is more than the supposed bungling of Cardinal Law. It is an endemic problem in the Boston diocese. It appears that almost no one in power will admit that there was or is a problem.

And the worst part is, any Catholic who speaks against the diocese's actions is labeled a traitor. I was told last week that if I considered myself "a good Catholic" I would support the Church, regardless of any personal belief. No. That's not the answer. I have faith in a higher power, omniscient over all that is seen and unseen. I believe in one holy catholic and Apostolic Church. I believe in baptism as the forgiveness of sins. The fact that I can recite that from memory, from the heart, means more to me than the "for-show Catholics" who go to Mass only on Christmas, Easter Ash Wednesday and Good Friday. I do believe. It gives me solace. To hear that because I question not God but the mortal (and hence fallible) administration of a man-made construct (the diocese) I am a "bad Catholic" or any other derogatory label angers me. Blind faith in men does not make one a "good Catholic." That's not what I was taught in catechism.

"To hear that because I question not God but the mortal (and hence fallible) administration of a man-made construct (the diocese) I am a "bad Catholic" or any other derogatory label angers me."

I was taught in catechism that by being a good person and by trying to make other people happy I would be a good soul in the eyes of God. Nowhere in those many years spent in St. Bernard's basement was I told I had to take whatever a Church official said as Gospel. In fact, I was taught exactly the opposite – all mortals are fallible, with the spiritual acceptance of the Holy Father, and then only when he is speaking ex cathedra, or "from the chair" of St. Peter the Rock. He hasn't done so in a really long time. I feel absolutely no guilt in placing blame squarely on the shoulders of the laymen who presume to doubt the faith and support of the Boston diocese parishioners. Those parishioners will continue to support their Church, not because they are afraid of damnation, but because they believe. It is not for mortal men to withhold compensation for other mortal men's, and by this I mean pedophilic priests', actions.

Settling is not only the right thing, but the honorable and respectable thing to do. The rest of the Church will look favorably upon those who sacrifice in order to protect those that truly believe. Even if it means the Boston diocese goes back to the old ways of celebrating Mass. Me? I'd be glad to attend a Mass at a stone altar in a field somewhere if I knew that the diocese had made things right again.

Ken Campbell is a Collegian Columnist.

Letter to the Editor:

The IT minor

To the Editor:

For all of us students of the University of Massachusetts-Amherst, Information Technology is a vital part of our future. Because it is so essential, we urge the University's Faculty Senate to pass the proposed Information Technology minor, which is before the Senate now.

The IT minor – 15 credit hours, not including a pre-requisite – is intended to be open to every undergraduate student, regardless of discipline. Its goal is to help any student become IT-proficient in the student's own field of choice (see: www.umass.edu/itprogram)

The proposed IT minor is an opportunity for students to gain knowledge and experience in an area that can be applied to every career. It will allow people who aren't computer science or electrical engineering majors to gain a working knowledge of computers and information technology. The program is unique, in that it encompasses a wide range of disciplines campus-wide. Not only will it be beneficial to us, who wish to take advantage of it – but it is unrivaled in other public institutions, and can help set the University apart.

The college Deans, dozens of faculty, administrators, staff and students alike have banded together, gathering support for the program from all nine colleges and schools. We believe the IT minor will be of interest to many students and will be in high demand, once it's approved. To be successful, students must know the tools used in their research area or profession. The IT minor will allow us to gain knowledge important to developing our individual paths of study, and give us skills that will make us more attractive to prospective employers as well.

Many of us have already enrolled or are completing courses that will fulfill the minor requirements, in hopes that it will pass. One of us (Michael Frank, a Communications major) believes so strongly in the minor's importance that he's delaying his graduation in order to complete the 3 courses for the minor that he has left to qualify. He's confident that the minor will improve his odds when looking for a job.

Because of the University's budget trouble, the IT minor will enroll only about 50 students a semester, until it can raise more resources. To benefit more students, we hope the University will not only pass, but will expand the minor to help students compete in the job market and in life. This program will greatly benefit the campus in general. It doesn't make any sense not to pass it.

In order to pass the minor, the campus IT Task Force, which developed in 1998, is asking the University and the Faculty Senate for no additional funding. Funds to run the program are coming from grants and off-campus organizations. The Senate has responded favorably thus far, already reviewing and passing the minor in the University Computer and Electronic Communication Committee and the Academic Matters Council. The Senate's Program and Budget Council and Rules Committees are now considering the minor.

The IT minor is extremely close to becoming a reality – it needs to happen. We hope the Senate, and the University, will pass and support it.

Tom Feeley
Sue Mallett
Michael Frank

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 5.06.02 ARTS EDITOR: MIKE DELANO

Rustic Overtones performed in Southwest on Thursday

Solo artist woes

Folk Singer Seeks Musicians

I learned to play the guitar so that I could write songs and sing in public. That's what I'm all about – singing, really. People who have heard me say that I am a good folk singer, but honestly, though I appreciate any compliments, I'm not particularly fond of folk music. I try my best not to sound like a folk singer and just when I think that I may have accomplished that, I get off stage and some nicely dressed, middle aged woman comes up to me and says something along the lines of, "Oh what a fresh folk sound you have, I just really enjoyed your set." Well thanks a lot, but I think you've discouraged me from ever singing again. Well, maybe it's not to that point, but I hate being thought of as a folk singer.

Now don't get me wrong I have nothing against folk music, and in fact, people who sing with acoustic guitars are some of my favorite musicians. But I do not want to be thought of as an outdated Joni Mitchell wannabe, singing about world peace and tree hugging.

The thing is, that I, for reasons that are out of my control, seem to fit this stereotype quite well with my Wildlife and Fisheries Conservation minor (tree hugger and naturalist), my obsessive recycling, and the fact that most of my songs are about relationships or saving the world from itself. But I'm not a folk singer!

Am I?

MUSICAL CHEERS

WITH NIKA MARTIN

Ok, so maybe I am. What's wrong with that? Its not like I'm trying to change the world with my music or such. I just want everyone to live in peace and harmony and protect the environment, and...fine, fine so this is a little dramatic. I know. Just be lucky you don't have to deal with me on a personal basis.

As part of my coming to the university, I made it my mission to start a band, a good band, a real band. So around my third week of being here in September, I put up what seemed like billions of flyers in the UC, Campus Center and everywhere in between. Garbage cans, light posts, doors, the pavement. I was seriously looking for some people.

Luckily, though it took a little time, I heard back from a few nice guys who were interested in playing and who were rather willing to be flexible with my crazy schedule. I had a nice guitarist, things were working out well, and I was finally moving away from my folk singing status, a strict personal goal of mine. Unfortunately, about a week before our first performance he told us that he was leaving to study in England for a semester.

Oh brother. So I put out more flyers. Fortunately, a friend of mine, who is a brilliant guitarist offered to play and we got along even better than the first guy and I did. For instance, he taught me to move beyond my personal spectrum and try to play other types of songs in particular Guns n' Roses tunes. Interesting. So we had a good time.

We were just about to get ready to (finally) play out for the first time, when (drum roll please), our fantastic drummer quit. Fan-bloody-tastic. This guy will probably be very famous, he is awesome. He was in my band, and now he's gone. Ok, ok, its time to regroup, I thought. We can do this. We don't really need to have a drummer, right? Wrong. And this began the slow, yet impeccably steady decline of my first and only rock band.

And where does this leave me, you might ask? Van Meter. I sometimes play solo at those nice open mics they have up there on Wednesdays. I guess I'm back to my roots just myself and my guitar. And so it's all good and I'm happy with that for now, at least until next year. Anybody want to be in a band?

Hypnotism Hysteria

I love going out and getting dressed up, so I make it my business to find out exactly what is going on on campus, whether it be a concert play or any other kind of entertainment. Last Friday, I opened the Collegian and saw an advertisement for Frank Santos, the X-rated hypnotist. I thought that would be interesting, being skeptical of hypnotism, magic or basically anything that plays with the mind.

Luckily, a friend of mine works at the Fine Arts Center box office, and was able to get us about seven tickets to the nearly sold-out show. It seemed to be a real hit and friends of mine who had attended last year said it shouldn't be missed. So there I was, filing into the first balcony, as I realized that I had left my eyeglasses back at my dorm in Central. I am practically blind as a bat without my glasses, I don't even recognize my parents or friends when they are walking toward me in a public place until I near pass them.

So with fifteen minutes left to show time I figured I had enough time to run like hell and still not miss the opening act. So I ran and it took me a little longer than I had suspected, but I made it back in time. I was certainly not willing to have a repeat performance of Halloween night, when I went to the Campus Center with the same friends to see the Rocky Horror Picture Show and did not have my glasses. Both the live actors and the screen actors looked like blurry excuses for people and I swore to myself that I would not waste money on a show and then be stupid enough to not bring my glasses.

Finally, I was seated and waited for the show to start. Frank Santos had his little helpers pick thirty "eager and willing" contestants to participate in the on-stage hypnotism. My friend suggested that I raise my hand and volunteer. I am so glad I didn't. First off, the hypnotism wouldn't have worked on me, most likely because I went into the experience not believing that it was real and second, because I know I would have completely humiliated myself for life.

The people who went on stage and were actually hypnotized did a great job; they were so funny and brazen. It's a good thing their parents couldn't see them. If you missed the show, go next year. Oh, and I think that next time they should ask for faculty volunteers to mix it up a little.

Nika Martin is a Collegian Columnist.

Gutterflower a forgettable, messy mix

The Goo Goo Dolls-Robby Takac, Johnny Rzeznik (oooh...that hair!) and Mike Malinn.

By Jake D. Lewis
COLLEGIAN STAFF

GOO GOO DOLLS
Gutterflower
Warner Brothers Records

The new Goo Goo Dolls CD, Gutterflower, is the true definition of a rock n' roll album, which is a double-edged sword. On the positive side, the Dolls have penned some songs that are really likable and fun to blast at the top volume of your car stereo. But, conversely, there is not one slower-paced track on the CD like their past hits "Black Balloon," "Iris," or "Name." The closest they come to a low-key number is with "Sympathy," a folksy ditty that is shiny and pretty, despite its melancholic lyrics ("It's stranger than your sympathy/And all these thoughts you stole from me"), but it doesn't do anything for the listener except give a seventh-inning stretch between hard rock numbers. The lack of any power ballads brings the overall enjoyment of the CD down a notch, even though the tunes that are on it are nothing to dislike.

Many Goo Gooers already know the first single, "Here Is Gone," perhaps the best track from the CD. If this is the case, then where can radio stations go from here once the song gets old? (Trust me, it will.) While a bunch of the other tunes are pretty good, they don't have the attractive angst in lead singer Johnny Rzeznik's voice or the catchy hook. Don't be deceived by songs like "Big Machine" and "What A Scene," where you'll be saying to yourself that this is a really memorable song as it's playing, but once they end you'll drive yourself crazy trying to remember how the song went. On their own, many of the songs hold up to be first-rate, but grouped together they become a messy conglomeration of like songs.

That's the largest flaw with the CD: the songs all sound too similar, and that's why the absence of any ballads was a large mistake on the band's part. Rzeznik and the rest wrote one of the best rock n' roll albums of the 90's, which was their last studio album Dizzy Up the Girl, and while such an accomplishment may not be easily recaptured, if they had pulled off at least half of the appeal of Dizzy... with Gutterflower then it would be hard to turn your nose up at it.

Another problem with the album was the wait for it. In the interim of four years since Dizzy... (an eternity for a new band release) fans were left only with a less-than-worthy greatest hits album with a ridiculous title, 2001's What I Learned About Ego, Opinion, Art and Commerce. That album was mostly a disappointment because it didn't feature any songs from Dizzy... and it also shows just how little the Dolls' sound has changed over the years, which is not a good thing. Gutterflower is more of the same old song and dance, pop songs with some power but not enough to propel them forward as a rock band.

What is a change is that raspy-voiced back-up singer Robbie Takac takes charge of some songs that are among the album's highlights, like "You Never Know." If it weren't for his scratchy singing style these could become some really good songs, but his intonation and inflection is too hard to listen to for long. He keeps his songs short and doesn't sing too much, making it easier to get through the songs. It would've been wiser, perhaps, to give Rzeznik all of the singing duties, or at least for the ones that Takac sings – "You Never Know," "Up, Up, Up" and "Smash," a deliberate rehashing of the mega-hit "Slide" from Dizzy....

What will make this album stay afloat is the peddling of it at Goo Goo Dolls concerts. Indeed, they are one of the best bands to see and hear perform. The excitement of hearing those songs in a huge amphitheatre this summer might be the only hope of giving this album its much-needed legs to stand on. Otherwise, Gutterflower is an album that will regrettably, but easily, wilt.

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Fraternities * Sororities Clubs * Student Groups
Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with the easy Campusfundraiser.com three hour fundraising event. Does not involve credit card applications. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact Campusfundraiser.com at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campus-fundraiser.com.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. - Now Available. 1&2 bedroom apts. Leases begin June, July, Aug or Sept. 1 year lease. First come, first serve. Get them while they last - www.brandywine-apts.com stop by or call (413) 549-0600.

Large One Bedroom Apartment 665-9515. Take over my lease at the end of May with Fall option (9 or 12 month lease available).

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over our lease 3 BR w/upgrade in Puffton. Available June 1st. Call 549-1474 for more info.

AUTO FOR SALE

Maxima 1989. Original owner. 154000 miles. Good car Jim 545-5677.

89 Honda Accord $1500 OBO 259-0068.

COMPUTERS

We pay CASH for your used lap tops 413-584-8857.

Color Laptop $99 Pentium tower/ CD Rom $99 with color monitor $139. HURRY! 413-584-8857.

EMPLOYMENT

Experienced, yard worker 6.50/hr. References. 549-0415.

Camp Counselor wanted for Tennis, Gymnastics, Water Ski, Arts, and more! Gain valuable experience at award-winning camps, while having the summer of a lifetime. Apply on-line at www.campcounselor.com

PCA/ Babysitter wanted 256-5765.

EMPLOYMENT

Week cleaning. $6.50/hourly. Part-time references 549-0415.

Greenhouse Part-Full Time. Various shifts for one person. Daily production, afternoon & weekends chores, some on call. Mechanical aptitude necessary. Must live close to facility. For more details visit www.bioshelters.com and apply online or mail cover letter and resume to bioshelters, Inc. 500 Sunderland Road, Amherst, MA 01002. No Calls Please!

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individual, full and part time positions available immediately. Only those able to work the upcoming summer should apply. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413)584-4746.

SUMMER HELP
Cape Cod Ice seeks drivers and P/T 2nd Shift Supervisor in our Sandwich location. Interested candidates call 508-888-8390 for more info.

EMPLOYMENT

TOP BOYS SPORTS CAMP IN MAINE! Play and coach sports-have fun-make $$ Camp Cobbossee positions in: all team and individual sports, all water sports plus: camp, hike, rock climbing, ropes, ice hockey, roller hockey, art & crafts, secretaries, top salaries, excellent facilities, free room, board, laundry, travel allowance. Online application www.campcobbossee.com or call 800-473-6104

Summer Work! Student work program! Earn great summer income! $18.25 base-appt. Customer service and sales. Scholarships available. 732-2252. www.morelocations.com

Be the Campus Red Bull connection. Join our team and help build one of the world's leading brands, you'll have a blast while gaining invaluable marketing experience. You'll even earn a little extra spending cash. Think about it. It's a lot less dangerous than selling term papers! Apply at redbullcollege.com.

FOR SALE

King size bed $75 and other furniture 253-1140.

Desk for sale new wooden 4 drawer perfect condition call Meg 549-0072.

Furniture for sale call 549-2914. Table and chairs, breakfast bar, TV stand and more.

Mountain bike-99 Rocky Mountain fusion 19" excellent cond. See www.bikes.com with car rack, extras. $350. 585-0517.

HOUSE FOR RENT

Main St. 4 Bedroom house June 1st. Sublet w/Fall option. Large kitchen, & living room with porch. On bus route w/washer and dryer. 549-7859.

Hadley 5 bedroom plus. Newer home five minutes from UMASS. June occupancy $2600.00 month. 549-4270.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENT

Guitar-Cort Elec/Acoustic cut-away. Mint never played. With Fishman preamp and case. $350. 585-0517.

ROOM FOR RENT

1 bedroom in Alpine commons. Excellent roommates. Call Bryan 253-9499.

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 More needed to share 3 bdrm. Apt. N Amherst- townhouses $375 mo. , bus rte. June 1 – May 03. Needed ASAP Call Shannon. 549-9394 or 508-241-3183.

Need a place for fall sem. only? Share our 3 bdrm.! $375 mo, bus rte. Call Shannon ASAP! 549-9394 or 508-241-3183.

Graduating and moving to the Boston area. I am looking for a third roommate to share a 3 bedroom house in Arlington if interested call 253-7426.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female(s) to share 2 bedroom Brandywine Apt. starting June 1 . 549-1988.

SERVICES

Know your rights! Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

ST. JUDE

May the sacred heart of Jesus be loved and glorified. St. Jude-Powerful Intercessor-True relative of Jesus-Pray for us. M.

SUMMER SUBLET

One large bedroom available at Cliffside apts. Starting June 1 partly furnished 617-842-4657.

Nice 3 bedroom townhouse. Practically on campus. Call Joe 549-9441.

SUMMER SUBLET

Brandywine. 2 bdrm. Available June 1. Call 549-1988.

TO SUBLET

2 bedroom. Free heat and hot water, Fall option, 253-9629.

1 bedroom Brandywine Apt. Sublet available June 1 Fall option 549-7148.

2 bedrooms available in a Puffton 3 bedroom apt., 1 with fall option. Available 6/1 or end of May. 549-5837.

Sublet in Brandywine with possible fall option. Looking for 1-3 people to take over 2 bedroom. $225/month. Starting June 1st. 549-9178.

2 Bedroom apartment partially furnished available June 1st to sublet w/option to lease on bus route. 413-549-9612.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

2	CBS/3
3	NESN
4	Fox Sport NE
5	ITFS - 57
6	HSCN Movie Channel
7	WB / 27
8	HSCN Movie Channel
9	TV Guide Channel
10	FOX / 61
11	ABC / 40
12	NBC / 22
13	International Channel
14	UMATV
15	HSCN Info Channel
16	ESPN
17	ESPN-2
18	UVC-49
19	ESPN Classic
20	Court-TV Gavel
21	CNN
22	CNN-HL
23	Weather Channel
24	Learning Channel
25	History Channel
26	A & E
27	Discovery Health
28	Food Network
29	NASA
30	House & Garden TV
31	Travel Channel
32	Lifetime
33	CNN-1
34	Family TV
35	BET
36	UPN-38
37	USA
38	TNN
39	CMT-TV
40	CMT
41	VH-1
42	TNT
43	TBS
44	E! Entertainment
45	Sci-Fi Channel
46	Court TV
47	Nick at Nite
48	Comedy Central
49	Cartoon Network
50	Game Show Network
51	TV Land
52	FOX Family
53	Animation
54	Galavision
55	Telemundo
56	College TV News-6
57	C-SPAN
58	C-SPAN2
59	Bloomberg Television

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds Section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center basement. UMass.

Client: Date: Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run: Headline:

Total days x Words = x rate = PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Rates: Student rate: 3.00 cents per word. Non-student rate: 4.00 cents per word.
Student rate applies word per day. Non-student rate: 5 cents per word per day.

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 6, 2002

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Antiques Roadshow (N)		Masterpiece Theatre Innocents (N) (In Stereo)				Austin City Limits (In Stereo)
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	King	Yes, Dear	Raymond	Becker (N)	Honeymooners 50th Anniv.		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	King	Yes, Dear	Raymond	Becker (N)	Honeymooners 50th Anniv.		News	Late Show
WVIT	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	★★½ "Nothing Hill" (1999, Romance) Julia Roberts, Hugh Grant (In Stereo)						News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	7th Heaven (N) (In Stereo)		Angel "A New World" (N)				Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Fear Factor (In Stereo) (PA)		Third Watch (N) (In Stereo)				News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	7th Heaven (N) (In Stereo)		Angel "A New World" (N)		News	Horns Imp.	Blind Date	Blind Date
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Fear Factor (In Stereo) (PA)		Third Watch (N) (In Stereo)		Crossing Jordan (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	Boston Public (N) (In Stereo)		Ally McBeal (N) (In Stereo)		News		Raymond	Seinfeld
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Fear Factor (In Stereo) (PA)		Third Watch (N) (In Stereo)		Crossing Jordan (N)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Antiques Roadshow (N)		Masterpiece Theatre Innocents (N) (In Stereo)				Charlie Rose (N) (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	★★½ "Nothing Hill" (1999, Romance) Julia Roberts, Hugh Grant (In Stereo)						News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Frasier	Frasier	Hughleys	One on One	Parkers (N)	Girlfriends	News	Ent. Tonight	5th Wheel	Shipmates (N)
WTBS	72	Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Roseanne	★★½ "The Distinguished Gentleman" (1992) Eddie Murphy				★★★ "The American President" (1995) Michael Douglas
A&E	69	The View (In Stereo)		Law & Order Golden Years		Biography: Mel Ferrer		Search for Atlantis				Law & Order Rage" (In Stereo)
CNN	23	Moneyline		Crossfire		Live From... The Point		Larry King Live		News night		Crossfire	Moneyline
COM	16	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Geeks	★★½ "Kingpin" (1996, Comedy) Woody Harrelson, Randy Quaid				Com.-Presents	Com.-Presents	Daily Show	Sat. Night Live
DISC	21	Riddle of the Rays		Wild Style		Mega-Tsunamis		Hellire (N)		Supervolcanoes		Mega-Tsunamis
ESPN	33	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs Conference Semifinal Game 3 - Teams to Be Announced. (Live)						Baseball Tonight (N)		Sportscenter
LIFE	32	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait Marion Ross		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★½ "The Long Island Incident" (1998, Drama) Laura Mellad				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	35	MTV Special (In Stereo)		Direct Effect (In Stereo)		Prime Time Players (In Stereo)		Real World	Real World	Real World	MTV Special	Jackass	Rock
NICK	43	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb...	Told by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers		All In Family	All In Family
SCIFI	31	Chronic-le (In Stereo)		★★ "Alterego" (1997, Science Fiction) Annabella Sciorra, Michael Biehn (In Stereo)								Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	34	Speed Trips		Secrets of Forensic Science		Code Blue: Fire and Easy		Labor & Delivery		Ouch! "Human Resilience" (N)		Code Blue: Fire and Easy
TNT	45	NYPD Blue "final Man Talking"		Pretender "Murder 101"		NBA Basketball Playoffs Conference Semifinal - Teams to Be Announced. (Live)				Inside NBA		★★ "Iron Will" (1995) (PG)
USA	29	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG (In Stereo)		Nash Bridges (In Stereo)		★★★ "Arlington Road" (1999, Suspense) Jeff Bridges, Tim Robbins				JAG (In Stereo)
HBO	48	(6:30) ★★ "Tea at Palace" (2000)		★★★ "The Deal" (2000, Comedy)		Sam Neill. (In Stereo) PG-13		Band of Brothers (In Stereo)		★★ "Kingdom Come" (2001, Comedy/Drama) LL Cool J. PG
MAX	49	★★ "An Innocent Man" (1989, Drama) Tom Selleck. R				★★½ Swordfish" (2001) John Travolta. R		Set: Swordfish		★★ "The Darkest" (1996) Corbin Bernsen. R		Veronica
SHOW	46	★★ "Love Field" (1992, Drama) Michelle Pfeiffer. PG-13				★★★ "Return to Me" (2000, Romance) David Duchovny. PG				Queer as Folk (TVY) (In Stereo)		★★½ "The Ninth Gate" (1999)

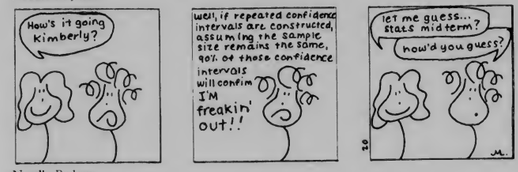
Adam and Eric By Ross Burach

Frolicking in the Ragpatch By Joey Russo and Frank Cassella



Highbrow By Aaron Eppy

Scarecrow By W. Bird

Noodle By Jacki

Shut the Duck Up By Seany McSean

Noodle By Jacki

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Quote of the Day

"What am I going to do with my life? You know, I didn't think college was actually going to end."

-The Brothers McMullen

Amherst Weather

Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday
High: 76 Low: 51	High: 78 Low: 48	High: 75 Low: 49

Horoscopes

TAURUS (April 20 – May 20) – Only after extreme reflection will you realize the answer.
GEMINI (May 21 – June 20) – Today is not the day to be assertive.
CANCER (June 21 – July 22) – Today is the day to push around a wimpy Gemini.
LEO (July 23 – Aug. 22) – The stars are unclear. Oh, wait. My eyes are closed.
VIRGO (Aug. 23 – Sept. 22) – Try as you might, you just can't get the radioactive spider to bite you.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 – Oct. 22) – Just because you have a good horoscope doesn't mean you should give me money. But it might help.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23 – Nov. 21) – While you may be able to say that webbed toes are common, you have a hard time explaining the gills.
SAGITARIUS (Nov. 22 – Dec. 21) – You will encounter Johnny Boosexed, the wanderer who spreads alcoholism wherever he goes.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 – Jan. 19) – The cosmos are speaking. Cosmically. Of course.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 – Feb. 18) – Venus is in the house of Saturn, but that's only 'cause Saturn needed a house sitter.
PISCES (Feb. 19 – March 20) – The planets are finally in alignment. Now it's time to make your move! Knight to queen's bishop three! Check!
ARIES (March 21 – April 19) – Only your razor sharp wit will keep you afloat today. Oh wait. This is you we're talking about. Man, you're done for.

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Garden Vegetable Soup

Chicken Nuggets

Chili Nachos

Broccoli-Cheese Casserole (vegetarian)

California Chili Nachos (vegan)

DINNER

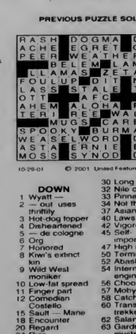
Garden Vegetable Soup

Chicken Mamou

Baked Ham with Raisin Sauce

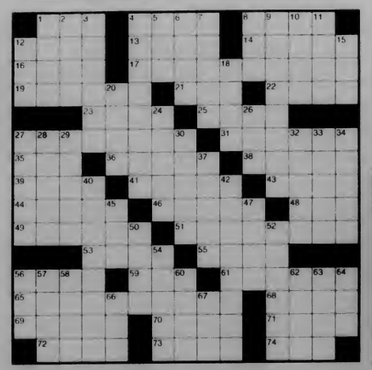
Six Bean Stew (vegan)

Today's Staff



Night Editor	Ken Campbell
Photo Editor	Richard Blake
Copy Desk	Mari Brady
Opinion Desk	Alicia Upano
Computer Staff	Mike Kulak, Shannon Farrington

NEW at DB Mart...
HOT STUFF PIZZA
Buy a Breakfast Sandwich
Get 2 FREE HASH BROWNS and a 12 oz COFFEE
Redeem this coupon at:
259 TRIANGLE ST.
AMHERST, MA
413-549-5606
1 per customer, not valid with other offers



ACROSS
1 "Auction" end
4 Fret on oars
8 Earth's satellite
12 Erie or Huron
13 Assuage (pain)
14 Earthenware pots
16 Baseball's Henshaw
17 Got in at the last moment
19 Positive aspect
21 Once named
22 Painted Pueblo ware
23 Denomination
25 Ricky Ricardo
27 Jungle knives
31 Alley hotshoe
35 Finish cupcakes
36 Steak and pork
38 Seashore
39 Drowsies off
41 Less damp
43 Coating of frost
44 Packing container
46 One-masted sailboat
48 Legal matter
49 Make lustrous
51 Sweet-scented flower
53 Actor Danza
55 Where pro is served
56 Waikiki locale
59 Smidgen
61 Distorted
65 Model's appointment
68 Ticket price
69 Makes docile
70 Mademoiselle's eye
71 Homely
72 "Pingy and —"
73 Air France destination
74 Bruce of kung fu

DOWN
1 Wyatt —
2 — out uses thrifty
3 Hot-dog topper
4 Disheartened
5 — de cologne
6 Org.
7 Honored
8 Kiwi's extinct kin
9 Wild West moniker
10 Low-fat spread
11 Finger part
12 Comedian Costello
15 Sault — Marie
18 Encounter
20 Regard
24 Rips
26 Kind of story
27 Chop fine
28 Oak product
29 Fragrant wood
30 Long pole
32 Nile city
33 Pinnacles
34 Not those
37 Asian capital
40 Laws
42 Vigorously
45 Self-importance
47 High mountain
50 Terminates
52 Abashed
54 Internet search engine
56 Choose
57 Mothy Dick toe
58 Catcher's base
60 Transvaal trekker
62 Salary
63 Gardner of mysteries
64 Susan of "L.A. Law"
66 WWII spy org.
67 Tanker cargo

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

10-29-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: ERIC SODERSTROM

UMass undefeated in ECAC

Minutemen crush Rutgers in preparation for NCAA tourney

By Matthew F. Sacco
COLLEGIAN STAFF

For nearly one whole year it stood tucked away in the corner of Greg Cannella's office, barely visible behind game tapes, scouting reports and some other mementos from last year's lacrosse season.

But somehow, early last week, it made its way from the seclusion of a tidy office corner out the door, through the Boyden Building hallways, down three flights of steps and into the dedicated UMass lacrosse locker room.

The carved wood award reads "2001 ECAC Lacrosse League Co-Champions" with an emphasis on "Co." It stood there on display near the locker room entrance, for every player to see as he walked by and to think about as he prepared for the final conference game against Rutgers, which would decide the fate of the unwanted prefix.

"We didn't want to be co-champs anymore," said senior captain Matt McLarland after his team dismantled the Scarlet Knights 21-9 to claim its first outright ECAC title. "We wanted to be champs alone."

With the victory, UMass finished the conference season undefeated (7-0) and made its run for a ninth seed in this weekend's NCAA Tournament first round. Last night the Minutemen were awarded the No. 8 seed and will face unseeded Fairfield (7-5) in a North Region game at Brown University.

UMass' rout over Rutgers had the overall record at 11-3 and it didn't hurt that Fairfield, which garnered them a national ranking, was Coach Ted Garvey's alma mater. The Stags will only have to take the squad down the Mass Pike for its first round game, as opposed to taking a flight to the University of Delaware for a south regional contest.

But on Saturday, tournament speculation was on the shelf and the Minutemen had only conference rival Rutgers on their mind, although it didn't look that way in the first half.

"We came out tight," McLarland said. "I personally wasn't happy with myself in picking up groundballs. But in the second half we were loose and we just had the ball more. Craig [Conn] did an awesome job winning faceoffs."

With the Minutemen clinging to a 7-4 halftime lead against overmatched Rutgers, Conn came out in the third quarter and won 11 of 14 draws as the Minutemen ripped the game open with an 11-goal stanza.

Senior Marc Morley, playing his last game on Garber Field, potted three of his six goals in the third frame while sophomore Kevin Glenz and freshmen Gene Tundo and Craig Conn each had a pair. UMass outshot the Knights 20-5 in the quarter and held an 18-6 lead entering the final 15 minutes.

The win marked the last home game for eight seniors including McLarland (7 groundballs), Morley, captain Dan Little, Dan Paccione (4 points), Paul Hutchen (2 GB's), Dusty Smith, A.J. Cappelli and Rob Schneider.

Morley led the Minuteman offense with his six goals while Kevin Leveille, Chris Fiore, Jeff Zwicki and Paccione had four points apiece. Rookie Bill Schell made six saves in the net.

UMass is in action again next Saturday when it takes on Fairfield in the first round of the NCAA tournament at Brown. The time of the game has yet to be announced.

UMass	21
Rutgers	9

The UMass men's lacrosse team raised banner to the rafters after the Minutemen defeated Rutgers to claim the ECAC title.

Emily Robustelli prepares to throw across the diamond for the 47-10 UMass softball team.

Softball breaks its record for most wins in a season; A-10's up next

By Andrew Merritt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The culmination of a hard-fought record-setting season came this weekend for the Massachusetts softball team, as it took the season series from Connecticut and swept the Fordham Rams in a three-game weekend series.

The Minutewomen got the ball rolling Friday, beating UConn 1-0. Sophomore Misha Franke and senior Ashley Bakken combined for back-to-back singles in the third inning, were moved along by a sacrifice bunt courtesy of junior Emily Robustelli and senior Teri Rooney finished up with a ground out to second base, scoring Franke.

That would be all the Minutewomen could put together on the scoreboard, and all they would need to, as senior Jen Hadley shut the Huskies out for her 20th win of the season. UMass had seven hits altogether, with doubles from Robustelli, senior Scooter Wheeler, junior Kaila Holtz and sophomore Jamie Cahalan.

"Lots of hits, no runs," Head Coach Elaine Sortino said. "We didn't finish. We didn't come up with the hits when we had the runners on base. We were a little too anxious, we didn't settle well at the plate. Our swings were huge in the beginning of the game, like we were swinging telephone poles."

Hadley's mastery on the mound came in hands for the Minutewomen. The senior hurler struck out 12 batters, walked none, and gave up two hits.

"I thought [Hadley] did a great job, on a not so great day to pitch a softball game."

That success continued into the weekend, as Hadley and Holtz teamed up to keep Fordham at bay. Holtz shined in the first game, striking out three, walking two, and scattering seven hits to take the 7-1 victory, her 21st of the season.

The offense produced early to score four runs in the first inning. Junior Brandi Cross singled to bring in Robustelli, and Cahalan broke the game open with a bases-clearing triple that brought in Cross and Wheeler. Junior Anna Povey returned the favor with a double to score Robustelli.

Cahalan continued to impress, bringing freshman K.C. Budrewicz in with a double in the third inning. Robustelli scored on a dropped third strike in the next frame, and Wheeler finished off the scoring with a double to bring Cross home.

UMass	6	7	13
Fordham	0	1	0

UMass	1
UConn	0

Innings ran high after a between-game ceremony for the seniors and their parents, but the Minutewomen showed no mercy in the second game.

However, it took a while for the offense to solve Fordham sophomore Jamie Giguere, who continued to fool the UMass bats after closing out the first game with a strikeout and one hit allowed in two innings. Giguere was only invincible for so long, however, as the Maroon and White exploded for five runs in the sixth inning.

Franke showed off her baserunning skills in stealing second, and then scored on an error by the Fordham third baseman to start the UMass rally. Teri Rooney hit an infield single, and freshman Hilary Puglia scored on the ensuing error, setting things up for Brandi Cross, who homered to right field.

Hadley retired the side in order in the seventh to finalize the victory, her 21st of the season. She allowed four hits, walked one, and struck out three to earn the win.

The Minutewomen ended the weekend and their regular season with an exclamation point Sunday, crushing the Rams 15-0. They started things early, scoring three runs in the first inning on a Wheeler home run, and Holtz followed with her own round tripper in the second as UMass plated five more to take the early 8-0 lead.

After Rooney hit an RBI single in the third, the Maroon and White notched four more runs in the fourth inning, on a double from freshman Pam Sulick and a triple from Ashley Bakken. It was the second triple of the weekend for Bakken, who wasn't expected to play after a hard collision at second base with a Fordham baserunner on Saturday.

"It was very exciting and I'm glad I got a chance to play," Bakken said. "It still hurt a little bit, but I think the adrenaline numbed it quite a bit, actually."

Hadley continued to dominate as well, earning her eighth shutout on two hits and five strikeouts.

"It's a great win to go into the Atlantic 10 Tournament with that," Hadley said. "It's always nice to have a good performance, and to shut them out in front of a great crowd, it was a great feeling."

Sortino also expressed her satisfaction with the job well done.

"This is probably the most balanced softball team I've ever had since I've been coaching here. We've got solid pitching, solid offense, we've got the ability to steal bases and to hit the long ball, and I think we've got a great defense."

Sunday's game was the last home contest for the four seniors – Bakken, Wheeler, Hadley and Rooney.

"There was definitely a lot of emotion," Rooney said. "I think that ending it all was just, wow, that was the hard part."

READ ABOUT THE SPRING CONCERT ARTS PAGE 5.
CAMPUS SAFETY CONCERNS ED/OP PAGE 4.
BRADY'S TOP PITCHER SPORTS PAGE 10.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
TUESDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE ONE HUNDRED AND THIRY-ONE ☆☆☆☆☆ 5.07.02

March on Whitmore

With many campus and area unions showing their support, the Resident Assistant Union and supporters rallied and marched to the Whitmore Administration Building in an effort to deliver their negotiation requests to the administration. This rally came a week after 35 supporters were arrested as part of protests held inside the Student Affairs office of Whitmore.

RSU hosts documentary on Gulf War conspiracy

By Janet Jock
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

The goal of the Radical Student Union documentary series is to provide information for those eager to learn about social and political issues of the U.S. and the world, hopefully increasing awareness of students at the University of Massachusetts. Every week, there is a different film presented in order to promote this purpose. The subject last Wednesday was the Gulf War.

According to the video, many researchers and officials believe that the United States anticipated and provoked the invasion of Iran by Hussein's army. The Gulf War is thought to have been a set-up by the U.S., with the purpose of defeating Iraq's troops, and ultimately forcing Hussein out of power.

According to the film, the CIA supported Hussein's party in Iraq during the 1950s and 1960s. It is not until 1972, when Hussein came into power and OPEC raised prices of oil from $3 to $22, that the U.S. began to shift its support from Iraq to Iran.

The U.S. then proceeded to block the Iraq coast before the United Nations could convene. Soon after, in a meeting of the United Nations, the U.S. made the decision that the Gulf crisis would only be settled by military means.

The question is, why would the United States deliberately antagonize and fail to intervene on affairs before the war that seemed to be easily predictable?

Ever since World War II, the U.S. wanted to possess the oil fields in Mecca.

"Oil is too important to be left to Arabs," stated a U.S. official.

It is because of the desire for control over the oil refineries, as well as the disapproval of Hussein's party, that the U.S. allowed the war to occur, and was the reason the U.S. intervened on the side of Iran when the inevitable transpired, the video asserted.

The last part of the video displayed clips of emaciated Iraqis, suffering from malnutrition due to lack of food, and leukemia because of the radioactive uranium ammunition used in the country during the war.

A large concern that was voiced was the use of depleted uranium shells, or Uranium-238, a radioactive and extremely toxic metal used in bombs and other ammunition during the Gulf War, and is still used in bomb testing around the world today. Many fatalities occurred in Iraq due to this reason, and approximately 200,000 U.S. soldiers who fought in the Gulf War also died within years of returning home from combat.

Today, Uranium bombs are still dropped over other countries with the purpose of testing, and 15 countries either contain this radioactive material or use it for ammunition. Since the metal remains radioactive for millions of years after being dropped, it is extremely dangerous and can be fatal years after its use.

The night ended with an open invitation for comments or discussion, however the audience did not take the opportunity to voice its opinion.

The Radical Student Union provides documentary screenings each week, usually showing the same film every night in the Campus Center on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday.

"Besides providing the public with information on U.S. policy and the world, the R.S.U. is also involved in the organization and support of UMass causes," explained Emily Gerwick, member of the organization. "We are currently working with the problem of budget cuts, as well the support of the RA Union."

The Radical Student Union holds meetings every Wednesday at 6 p.m. in the Campus Center. For more information, visit the R.S.U. website at www.umass.edu/rso/rsu or contact Neil at 253-0735 or neil_nugent@yahoo.com.

Community unites for mother of dead infant

By Melissa Hammel
COLLEGIAN STAFF

A small group of students and concerned University of Massachusetts community members gathered yesterday to discuss the issue of the dead infant found in James Dormitory on Thursday.

The group began its discussion addressing the issue that the student population did not know what type of distress that the woman involved in the incident was going through and did not know her motivations.

"She must have been experiencing trauma due to the incident," explained Maia Zink, a freshman Arts and Sciences major. "I can't imagine what it is going to be like if she decides to come back to school."

Lynette Bloise, a Mental Health Services employee, explained that it was possible for students to feel a number of ways about the incident.

"There are a number of different feelings; you may feel sad about the incident," she explained. "We begin to struggle with those feelings 'what could I have done?'"

Also addressed during the meeting was the fact that many people on campus already felt that the woman was guilty without even thinking about the issues that may be surrounding it.

"We don't know if this is going to turn out to be a criminal case, so I think people are being careful of what they say," Bloise explained. "We are going to have to filter all of this through our own lenses. We don't know her story, we can only guess and guess through our own experiences."

According to Bloise, many people feel that issues like these only happen to certain people and are therefore coming to conclusions based upon that fact.

"There is a possibility that this woman is responding to social influences," she explained. "There is a feeling that only poor women will

[turn to COMMUNITY | page 4]

Spring sensation

For Spring Concert coverage, turn to Arts

National Briefs

Hawaii

By Kelly Unten
Kaleo O Hawai'i, Hawai'i

(U-WIRE) HONOLULU – The University of Hawai'i-only college radio station, KTUH 90.3 FM, may be forced to stop streaming its music over the Internet after May 21, if new royalty and record keeping requirements are established by the government.

The Library of Congress is currently reviewing recommendations made by the Copyright Arbitration Royalty Panel concerning Webcasting of copyrighted material.

In 1998 Congress passed a law called the Digital Millennium Copyright Act, which allows the Recording Industry Association of America to charge royalties for material broadcast over the Internet. The Internet has traditionally been a refuge for independent radio because of the low cost requirements.

This marks the first time the RIAA has requested royalties from an broadcast of copyrighted material, either Webcast or on air.

"We've had a mutual relationship," said Lori Ann Sacki, general manager of KTUH. "They give us free music, we play it on air for them. It's like a commercial, right? It's like a three-minute commercial every time we play their song."

KTUH currently pays flat-rate yearly royalties to two organizations that represent songwriters: the Society of European Stage Authors and Composers (SESAC) and the American Society for Composers, Artists and Publishers (ASCAP). The royalties are $225 a year for ASCAP and $66 a year for SESAC.

Another restriction of the DMCA may potentially be more troublesome than the royalties to small radio stations such as KTUH. In order to qualify for a statutory license, which would permit them to do Webcasts, stations must comply with requirements that would limit the content aired.

For example, under the recommendations currently being considered, stations would not be able to play more than three songs from a single recording in any three-hour period, and no more than two songs from a single recording in a row.

Webcasts would not be allowed to be interactive, meaning that listeners could not contact the station to request that songs be played in the immediate future.

Stations would also have to document all the songs that are played and when they were played, as well as how many listeners the Webcast has at any given time.

"One of the major restrictions that the DMCA enforces is the logging of all listeners to the web feed," said Program Director of KTUH Shaun Lau. "They want us to track who went on, how long they where on, and where they are from. That is scary because you are violating the right to privacy."

"They also want us to announce in advance the music that we play. For KTUH, it is difficult because we give our DJs the freedom to play whatever they want whenever they want," said Lau.

Sacki said that KTUH has neither the time nor the money required to comply with the all the potential requirements of a Webcasting license.

KTUH's budget is $30,000 per year, but Lau said most of that goes to daily operations.

"I understand the charges for playing on the radio," said Lau, "and it makes sense to charge for a Web feed (since it is free now), but the bottom line is the recording industry wants to legally make the most money possible."

Said Lau, "It is all about which record company can make more money than the other. I believe in the music and I believe in the art. I don't think it is right for record labels to make lots of money off of another person's art."

"What is unique about KTUH is that we play what we want to play," said Lau.

"We play music that aren't ordinarily played on the radio. There are a lot of people who listen to us on the Internet and then they go out and buy the CDs. I get e-mails every week from every country imaginable, who listen to our station over the web and want to know who I played and where they can find them."

KTUH joined other educational and community radio stations across the nation in a day of silence on May 1, said Sacki.

"We are observing a day of silence, calling out May Day to raise awareness about the Digital Millennium Copyright Act's requirements in fees and content restrictions," said Sacki.

"(We) turned off our web feed for the whole day," said Lau. "People were calling our station and asking why we shut down over the Web."

Sacki said KTUH has been on the air since 1989 and on the web since 1998. "We were one of the first college stations to start streaming on the Web," said Sacki.

Students interested in learning more can visit the Save our Stream Website, at http://www.rice.edu/ch/sos.

Wisconsin

By Daniel J. Lehnherr
The Daily Cardinal, University of Wisconsin-Platteville

(U-WIRE) PLATTEVILLE, Wis. – Although it was Republican Tommy Thompson who was a fixture as Wisconsin governor since 1987, his departure to Washington, D.C., as Secretary of Health and Human Services has left this year's gubernatorial race wide open.

Citing displeasure with the career politicians, Libertarian candidate Ed Thompson, the younger brother of Tommy, wants to make a change as Wisconsin's top dog.

Championing personal liberties, Ed Thompson advocated common sense on government spending, questioned pay raises for the UW System Board of Regents and called for the legalization of marijuana. "My idea of governing is to govern least. He who governs least governs best," Thompson said of his Libertarian philosophy. "Our government has become so bloated. We are so over-regulated, overtaxed. I want to change that."

Refusing to hide behind political correctness, Thompson said he supports the legalization of marijuana for medicinal as well as recreational purposes.

"I think it should be legalized totally. I don't think anybody should be in jail for marijuana, period," Thompson said. "I firmly believe that doctors and patients know better than bureaucrats in Madison what's best for them."

Comparing the war on drugs to the failed prohibition period, Thompson said the war on drugs has caused an overflow of drug offenders in the court and prison systems. He said the state could benefit by taxing marijuana like tobacco and alcohol.

"I personally do not condonic the use of drugs," Thompson said. "But that doesn't mean that I think that we should incarcerate everybody who does.

"A dog sniffing for marijuana? I'd rather have it sniffing for bombs," Thompson said.

Thompson also wants to limit size of government, especially the prison system, and advocates cut backs in state government spending. He criticized state budget proposals that use tobacco settlement money to balance the budget.

Amid the budget crisis and proposed cuts to the UW System, Thompson questioned salary increases for the Board of Regents and other UW System expenditures that may result in tuition increases.

"As governor, the cuts will come from the top down, not the bottom up," Thompson said. "I think there are a lot of places they can cut before they start wrapping it to the students."

Thompson cited the environment as a high priority, and said he was the only candidate to come out against lowering the legal blood-alcohol limit to .08, saying ".10 is low enough."

Thompson criticized the governor, as well as Democrat and Republican leaders involved in the legislature's caucus scandal.

"I think Gov. Scott McCallum has not shown leadership," Thompson said, describing McCallum's governing style as "reactionary." In January, Thompson said of McCallum, "I think the one brain cell he has is lonesome."

Thompson said he was "the most apolitical person that ever walked the face of the Earth" until legal actions against video-gaming at his supper club forced him into the political arena where he witnessed injustice. Thompson was voted mayor of Tomah in 2000, quite to his brother Tommy's surprise.

"I'm just a common guy, just a common, ordinary hard-working small town businessman who definitely wants a change too," Thompson said. "Come Nov. 5, it won't be how much money you have, it's how many votes you get."

Texas

By Brittany Hooten
The Battalion (Texas A&M U.)

(U-WIRE) COLLEGE STATION, Texas – Texas A&M President Dr. Ray M. Bowen spoke to colleagues Wednesday as part of the Faculty Distinguished Achievement Awards Ceremony, congratulating faculty members on their scholarship this academic year and lamenting his fate as a "lame duck."

"This has been a magnificent year for this University," Bowen said.

Bowen will step down from the University's top post June 30 after an eight-year term that saw the end of Aggie Bonfire and the growth and development of Vision 2020.

During his final state of the University address, Bowen reflected on the progress A&M has made during the last year. He pointed out efforts that helped further enrich Texas A&M, such as the Distinguished Lecture Series, the Blinn Team Project that allows students on the waiting list for admission to co-enroll at A&M and Blinn College, and the celebration of Texas A&M's 125th anniversary.

He thanked staff members who have gone to schools to recruit minority students and said he has seen enormous progress in how the University is being viewed within the state.

Bowen also thanked the Bonfire 2002 Steering Committee and Student Body President Schuyler Houser for working hard to bring back Bonfire. On Feb. 4, Bowen ended the committee's work to rebuild Aggie Bonfire in Fall 2002, citing safety and financial concerns in putting a stop to the 90-year tradition. Twelve Aggies were killed and 27 injured when the 1999 Aggie Bonfire collapsed.

He said his biggest challenge this year has been dealing with becoming a "lame duck," and joked that frequently when walking into his office he had the impression he was not needed.

"It has been an honor to be your president," Bowen said.

He told faculty members he looked forward to being in the audience of the awards ceremony for many future years to come.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian, published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts' calendar semester, the Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life became the College Spirit in 1901, the Index Collegian in 1941 and then the Fri Bonds Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1984. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Sam Wilkinson Editor-in-Chief
Matthew E. Sacco Managing Editor
Amy Gargiuna Business Manager
Shimauli Dave Production Manager
Jake Lilien Diversity Editor
Mike Kulak Editorial Production Manager
Jason Smith Advertising Manager

Mike Delano Arts & Living Editor
Matthew Despres Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jennifer Eastwood Features Editor
Catherine Turner News Editor
Tibora Girczyc Blum Photography Editor
Eric Soderstrom Sports Editor
Brent Simiowski Finance Manager
Charlie Ieco Distribution Manager

Morgan Taylor Advertising Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Cara Murphy Assistant Finance Manager
Shawn Daugherty Assistant Business Manager
Megan Shannon Assistant Advertising Manager

HOUSING UMASS AMHERST SERVICES

Fall 2002 Housing Assignment Information

Housing Assignment Office
● 235 Whitmore Administration Building
● www.housing.umass.edu
413.545.2100

The following is important Housing Information for Fall 2002:

◆ The last day to submit a request for an assignment change or application is Friday, May 24, 2002.

◆ If you are eligible and wish to cancel your housing assignment, please call the Housing Assignment Office before May 31, 2002 to avoid a cancellation fee.

✔ There will be a $100.00 cancellation fee from June 3rd - June 28th.

✔ There will be a $200.00 cancellation fee from July 1st - July 31st.

✔ If you cancel after July 31st there is a $300.00 cancellation fee.

GRAPHICS
the Collegian is hiring for next semester

come talk to Shimauli, Mike or Morgan or call 545-1864
105 Campus Center Basement

EMS devices not the way to get in shape

By Joe Cannon
Collegian Correspondent

Looking to lose those extra inches around the waist without putting in the time? You are not alone. One of the most recent exercise fads on the market today is designed to help you do exactly that. The AbTronic, AbForce, and Ab Energizer are just a few electronic muscle stimulator (EMS) devices that have had a recent rise in popularity. These devices boast claims of a firmer stomach, a slimmer waist, and more defined abdominals with no exertion whatsoever. The big question is, do they work?

Prior to the recent rise in popularity of EMS devices for fitness, they had been used by professionals in the medical field. Doctors and chiropractors use much larger and more expensive devices to treat patients with spinal cord injuries and chronic back problems. The purpose is to strengthen muscles in the afflicted areas. Theoretically, this may lead a person to believe the miniaturized EMS devices could do the same thing. Yet, the products on TV may offer more then you bargain for.

EMS devices marketed for fitness will stimulate muscles. Unfortunately, they will not increase muscular size or cause fat loss alone. Most of these products are accompanied by an intense exercise and diet guide which must be followed strictly. Any results are going to be dependent on how well the individual follows these recommendations and not how much they use the product. Excess or improper use can be another major issue. All of the devices on the market today require the use of a gel, and limits are set on the amount of time they should be used. Without gel or exceeding the recommended time limit, the product is likely to deteriorate rapidly. Even worse, there have been substantial cases when people have developed burns and rashes from improper use. Furthermore, pregnant women and individuals with heart problems should never use EMS devices. So how can you get into shape?

There is no immediate way to get into excellent physical condition. Fitness should be a life-long goal rather then a quick, now and again activity. If time is an issue, your first priority should be reworking exercise into your schedule rather then looking for the quickest, newest fix. The benefits of a lifetime of fitness are endless.

■ community

continued from page 1

experience this and that they are teenagers."

Bloise explained that in some cases there were incidents in which women felt detached from their bodies and literally did not know what they were doing.

"Do we think about the possibility of the woman being afraid?" Bloise asked. "Sometimes people get so traumatized that they detach themselves from their bodies. I am here to tell you that there are a number of possibilities and this is what haunts us."

One student in attendance at the event expressed disbelief that no one could have known about the woman's pregnancy.

"There are some expectations but we don't know anything about her. We don't even know if she screamed," Bloise said. "People talk about resources such as abortion and adoption but are we getting out information about the resources? That is the big question."

During the discussion Bloise also gave out statistics regarding the number of children that die at birth per year.

According to statistics supplied by the National Committee on the Prevention of Child Abuse in Chicago, 1,000 infants die per year from abuse, and one-fourth of these die the day that they are born.

Bloise also supplied statistics stating that nine out of 10 males in their teens leave the women that they impregnate.

"This is a loss of a sense of security. It is a loss of the belief that this sort of stuff doesn't happen here," Bloise said. "There is no better cure than to talk about it."

She also passed out a list of tips that individuals could do in order to deal with the stress of the incident. These tips included keeping busy, talking to people, maintaining a normal schedule, spending time with others, keeping a journal, getting plenty of rest and eating well-balanced regular meals.

Rally up!
Billy the rat was an active participant in yesterday's Resident Assistant union support rally.

Last news meeting of the semester tonight at 5:30! Anyone interested in writing next year please come down!!!

ATTENTION UMASS SPORTS FANS!
UMass CLUB LACROSSE
Vs
Franklin Catamounts
Tuesday, May 7
Garber Field, 7 pm

Goten COOKING AT YOUR TABLE 413•665•3628 call for RSVP

Best! 2002 UMASS Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Let us know your picks for the UMASS BEST ISSUE

DEADLINE MAY 6
Please fill this out & send your answers either via campus-mail, or stop by the Collegian, 113 Campus Center basement

YOU HAVE YOUR REASONS FOR LIVING OFF CAMPUS... BRANDYWINE AMHERST 50 DO WE. BRANDYWINE APARTMENTS 549-0600

Unique UMass Best
Reason not to graduate:
Place to have sex:
Classroom:
D.C.:
D.C. dish:
Spring break place:
Magazine:
Way to gain Fresman 15:
Apartment complex:
Reason to miss class:
Reason to hand in a paper late:
Place to read the paper:
Place to study:

Best Arts & Entertainment
Place to hear live music:
Local band:
radio station:
Music store:
Pool hall:
Cheap date place:
Video store:
Internet site:

Best Shops & Services
Grocery store:
Florist:
Clothing store:
Gas station:
Bike shop:
Hair salon:
Place to workout:
Tanning salon:
Candy shop:
Liquor store:
Car repair place:

Best way to waste time
Amherst bar:
Northampton bar:
Beer:
Shot:
Drinking game:
Bartender:
Off Campus party place:
Frat party:
Nudie bar:
Porn shop:
Condom brand:

Best Food
Pizza place:
Sub shop:
Date restaurant:
Place to go when parents are paying:
Ice cream shop:
Chinese:
Italian:
Mexican:
Indian:
Japanese:
Breakfast (hangover cure):
Bagel shop:
Vegetarian:
Best Wings:
Northampton restaurant:
Coffee shop:

THE HARP "START YOUR OWN TRADITION"

Walk it! Bus it! NEW PUFFTON VILLAGE Bike it! Drive it!

SUPER STOP & SHOP
All the ingredients needed to be voted UMass Best!

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED/OP EDITOR: MATTHEW DESPRES

Power position abused:

Vice-principal wrong

On occasion obscure stories have a way of getting national attention. The Collegian offers the following editorial from the California State University - Long Beach newspaper, the Daily Forty-Niner, as an outside opinion. It is also an opinion that we could not more wholeheartedly agree with.

(U-WIRE) LONG BEACH, Calif. – Sometimes adults put in powerful positions over children can do the dumbest things. Rita Wilson, a vice-principal at Rancho Bernardo High School in suburban San Diego, placed a ban on skimpy underwear for female students.

At a school dance on April 26, Wilson took it upon herself to strictly impose her new policy. According to the Reuters news service, Wilson had girls lift up their skirts and dresses before they entered the dance to ensure that they were not wearing "inappropriate underwear." Even more appalling, is that Wilson had these students exposing themselves in full view of male students and teachers.

We are struggling to find the logic in Wilson's actions. In an attempt to impose her own personal, moral beliefs on underwear and what is appropriate for teen-agers, she did nothing more than objectify them and force them to act like nothing more than strippers.

Wilson has been suspended for the time being but parents are rightfully urging for Wilson to be fired immediately. We could not agree more with the parents.

Forcing girls to expose themselves to see if they are wearing thong underwear completely defeats the purpose of trying to ensure modest dressing. We can only imagine how humiliating the experience must have been for the girls involved.

Educators and administrators' job first and foremost is educating students. Their secondary job is ensuring the safety of the students. We do not know where a girl's underwear falls into this category, unless a girl decides to not wear pants to school.

The decision of what kind of clothing that a teenager wears is his or her own. The only person that should have veto power over a teen's clothing is his or her parents – not a teacher or administrators.

If clothing begins to become a problem on a school campus, then administrators must deal with the problem. But it is absurd to think that thong panties would become a problem of a magnitude that it requires nothing more than teens stripping for administrators.

High school officials should stick to their primary jobs and leave the decisions of what kind of clothing is right or appropriate to parents.

This U-wire represents the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

Do you want to be a columnist? Come down and talk to Dan or Matt or drop us a line at collegianeditorial@yahoo.com

Thomas Bean vs. the bean-counters

SHARON MAHONEY

If there was ever any doubt about the importance of funding state-supported higher education, one needs only to look at the example of Greenfield native Thomas W. Bean III, head of Verizon Communications' Energy and New Technologies division in upstate New York. Bean, now living in Concord, came home last night to accept the Distinguished Alumnus of the Year award from his alma mater – Greenfield Community College.

That's right, GCC. A "state school." A two-year institution, one of the poor stepchildren of the Massachusetts public university system, which is itself the cash-poor stepchild of a higher educational network that includes such luminaries as Harvard, M. I. T., Smith and Wellesley.

Despite the numerals after his name, Thomas Bean was not considered Ivy League material. In fact, after a high school career that included 62 suspensions and a repeated senior year, Bean seemed relieved that he graduated at all. Once out of high school, he followed the path of many working-class underachievers and enlisted in the army. It was during his three-year tour of duty that he got the idea of trying to earn a college degree. His school of choice was GCC, one of 15 community colleges in the Massachusetts higher education system, which also includes nine state colleges and five universities.

The instructors he met in 1968, his first year at the Greenfield Community College, were an antidote to his discouraging educational past. Bean credits them for the support that improved his study skills and self-confidence. The continuing education and professional development programs offered by GCC and the other community colleges attract large numbers of adult students like Bean; the presence of other "non-traditionals" must have been inspiring and empowering. The low tuition and flexible credit-transfer policies to other schools in the system enabled him to complete the two-year program and transfer to the University of Massachusetts, where he graduated magna cum laude with a four-year baccalaureate degree. He then went on to Northeastern University for his master's degree in engineering. All this from a man who hadn't even considered college until well after graduating high school.

Now, it is conceivable that one of our "world-class" private colleges and universities, of which our state is justifiably proud, might have accepted Bean into its freshman class, despite his marginal academic background. But would any of these elite institutions have awarded Bean, with his problematic high school record, the tens of thousands of dollars in scholarships he would have needed to cover their hefty tuition bills?

Would he have found the kind of assistance and support he needed at Harvard, M. I. T. or Boston University? Would they have stuck with this Army veteran until he found his natural aptitude for math, or offered the kind of individualized attention that eventually helped him identify an undiagnosed learning disability? Would the intensely competitive atmosphere of an Ivy League campus, with its surfeit of second and third-generation legacy students from wealthier, better-connected families and communities, have given the struggling kid from Greenfield the kind of sympathetic, one-on-one support he needed to discover his talents and confidence?

It's hard to say. What is certain is that the state university system gave back to Bean what a combination of learning disability, low motivation, and limited horizons had taken away – a chance to catch up and even exceed the achievements of many of his private-school peers.

Bean's brother John, the public works superintendent for the town of Greenfield, nominated his brother for the Distinguished Alumnus of the Year award at the college. Thomas, the former underachiever, received the award at GCC's Honors Convivium last night.

"I believe that GCC was pivotal in turning his life around," John said. "They gave him the chance that no other collegiate institution would." That includes Harvard, Tufts, and (are you listening, legislators?) Boston College and Suffolk University.

The world-class private schools lining the banks of the Charles and sitting atop the fill of Boston's Back Bay point to their distinguished alumni with justifiable pride. But somehow, I find the example of Thomas Bean, the working-class kid from Greenfield, a living example of the importance of our state college and university system. There are scores of Thomas Beans out there with talent waiting to be tapped, providing they aren't barred from developing it by tuition and fee hikes and decreased admissions. Let's not lower the horizons of future Thomas Beans by lowering our commitment to affordable higher education.

Sharon Mahoney is a Collegian columnist.

Information from The Daily Hampshire Gazette was used in this column.

THROWIN' THE BOOK AT HIM.

3 Boston Herald. Distributed by NEA, Inc.

Finally, some randomness

MELODY ZAGAMI

I was sweating like an Abercrombie & Fitch executive at a Chinese take-out counter when I realized that this is my second to last column and I didn't have a clue what to write about. After looking over previous columns, I saw that I've never really written a random column. You know, the ones where a columnist fills space with Jerome Miller-esque rants. So here are things that I've been losing precious sleep over.

I can't get my opening line right. I've tried to think of one but don't pay attention to the news. I don't buy newspapers online and drinking Natty Light. I've never listened to Watch MTV news breaks and 98 Rock's Danger Radio's Arnolds. AAA! The making of a column is tough. I apologize for affluent white suburban kids who received a new pair of T-shirts for the spring season (Abercrombie) around the entire Asian American community. Those poorly skewed shirts-eyed characters eating rice and burnout. So Abercrombie and Fitch pulled the shirts off the racks and now they're selling for $200 apiece on eBay.

I'm not that mad at a mass clothing chain manufacturer for shoddy tee-shirt bus them in bulk. I thought, A&F was thinking: Asians tend to not all have access to the same as white kids do, and I've never actually seen any Asians in Abercrombie and Fitch. Of course, I don't own any of their products. I can't afford one sock there, let alone a whole pair. I guess so they should know all about political correctness. They should have paid attention when Lane Bryant had to change its warm-up suit line that read "fat and proud" on the right sleeve.

Moving along. I'd like to address the M&M global campaign. You've seen the commercials. The M&Ms (they walk, they talk, they're candy!) are scouring the globe asking the enlightened people of all nations to pick their favorite new color (New M&M. Will it be blue? Will it be pink? Will it be purple? I hope I can't wait to see what the Ugandans pick, or the Kenyans. Those crazy Kenyans. I betcha they go with blue. Don't ask me why. I just have a hunch. Honestly, most of these countries don't even have staple crops, let alone bags of the big chocolate taste with the hard candy shell. I imagine generations from now, anthropologists will do all sorts of research with the M&M "pick your favorite color" campaign. "Here we are with Toto here's an aborigine. Toto, explain why you chose purple, and please don't answer with a series of clicks this time."

Seriously, do inhabitants of the Indonesian and Micronesian islands even receive M&Ms in their ports? Is the letter "M" in their alphabet? And who is the Mars Candy Co. to think that these people give a flying [insert expletive here] about what color M&Ms are? They have a lot of other stuff to worry about, like providing food for their families and going to the Starbucks we've established on their rice paddies.

Gas prices are high. I don't know the dynamics of the situation, only that it has something to do with availability and Middle Eastern relations and I'm sick of it. That is all.

When I first arrived here in the fall of 1998 my parents paid roughly $8,000 for tuition. That's including room and board. In-state tuition now costs $11,000 and will only rise in the future. That is a ridiculous rate of increase. You might as well just pay $25,000 and go somewhere warm. The Boston Globe Magazine ran a story this Sunday on how college tuition is intended payment for classroom learning, but that kids actually spend a greater amount of time involved in campus society than attending class. I'm amazed when I see stories like this in the media because what is so obviously the truth to our generation goes totally ignored by baby boomers. There were mentions of (gasp!) marijuana use on the Tufts campus and (yelp!) all-night ragers at fraternities with (are you sitting down) beer! A few exposes on Nightline and 60 Minutes about spring break drinking. They make it sound like we all live secret, horrible, live-at-our-parent's-expense and solely practice promiscuous sex and binge drinking. While that may be true, the media treats us as if we are some large, wild, pack of rare animals whom they know nothing about because they are all too scared to observe us in our natural environment.

On a better note, Star Wars: Episode II is arriving May 16. Oh man, I can't even wait. For the next two weeks I'm going to be right in front of the IMax chatting it up with fellow Lucasphiles about the new characters and complaining about that irksome Jar-Jar. After this comes Episode III and then, thankfully, I can die happy knowing the entire Jedi epic. . . I'm sorry. Did you think I was serious? People I'm sorry. I love Star Wars. I grew up with Star Wars and the whole constructed story is amazing, it really is. But get a freakin' life. You saw Episode I. I don't think I have to explain myself further. This is a master plan by George Lucas to put more money in his pocket and get some special effects awards for LucasFilm. The movie will be a series of cool explosions peppered with scenes of Natalie Portman and a teen-aged Anakin making kissy faces at each other. It looks like the perfect date movie if you're in junior high. Am I going to go see it? Well, of course I'm going to see it, but only so I can make fun of it.

Stay tuned 'til next week, when I rip on Trekkies.

Melody Zagami is a Collegian columnist.

Open Letter:

Campus safety

To the Higher-Ups of this-University-Who-Control-Everything-And-Monitor-Where- Our-Money-Goes:

It is in my opinion, as a freshman at UMass, that campus safety is something to be concerned about. Although the campus shuttles are now running at later hours on the weekends, it is not a sufficient replacement for a reliable escort service. There have been multiple rapes on campus recently, and it concerns me not only as a student, but also as a female student. There have been times when I've not gone to church on Sunday nights at the Newman Center because the walk is too long to make in the dark. I pay good money to attend this school, and you're telling me that I can't attend church and confirm my faith, not taking part in something that has always been a very big part of my life, because I don't have a ride down there and I'm afraid of being attacked or raped if I were to walk alone? I love exposes on Nightline and it should not be occurring at all.

Reassure me that the money that I give to you so I can get an education is going somewhere. Tell me that my money has value, tell me that the tuition increase next year means big changes around here, tell me that the escort service will return, that more campus police will be hired, that our library will buy new and updated books for student's research, that our dorms will cease to be in a state of disrepair, that majors will not be cut from the curriculum, that more classes will be added, or at least that no more will be eliminated. Make me believe that no more attacks or rapes will happen on campus, that more call boxes will be installed, and that there will be more campus police patrolling the grounds in the wee hours of the morning. Tell me that no student should ever feel unsafe.

But wait, you can't do any of that, can you? You can pride yourself on having a university that claims to be "excellence within your reach," but you can't account for the lack of campus safety? No student should ever have to feel unsafe on a college campus, but apparently you have definitely done your part to make that a reality for a lot of students. I know I'm not alone when I'm afraid to walk down from Sylvan to Southwest to visit a friend, or when I can't walk down to the Newman Center to go to church, or I find it an impossibility to trek down to the library at night to get some studying done for an exam the following day because I can't find a place to study in my suite due to distractions. I can't do any of that because I don't feel safe walking alone. I know very well that there could be a man waiting to attack me behind a tree, or a dark corner, or concealing himself behind a bush.

It's not fair. It's simply not fair. And granted, I may sound like a complaining two-year-old right now, but I want some answers. I want to know why you as the bigwigs of this place have not made any efforts whatsoever to fix this budget crisis we're in. Why you feel as though you can completely eliminate the escort service, cut classes, and eliminate majors and then not compensate. You're all a bunch of smart people, aren't you? Didn't you ever see this coming in previous years? Good economic times usually signify a recession, that's a basic principle of economics. An establishment like this should have been prepared for it. Maybe it does stem back to the lack of funding from the state, but whatever it is, I wonder why no one ever saw it coming. At least we could have been a little bit prepared for it when it finally hit this year.

I want changes and I want answers. I'm not the only one who seeks such things. Why should we be paying more money to go to a school that becomes more unsafe and less academically prestigious by the day? It doesn't make any sense, and students cannot do anything about it! What power do we have? Sure, we can all rally at the State House, but what good will that really do in the long run? We're just the little guinea pigs helplessly running around in our little playwheels that are spun round and round by the masters of our domain.

Erin Wallace
UMass student

Online: www.dailycollegian.com

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 5.07.02 ARTS EDITOR: MIKE DELANO

Dating the Macho man

Ask Elena

By Elena Panesis
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Hey Elena, have you ever dated a really macho type of guy? You know, the kind that sits around all day drinking beer and watching football on T.V. with the boys. You see, my boyfriend and I used to spend a lot of time together but lately he has been totally preoccupied by his buddies. How can I regain some of his attention without pushing him away completely?

– Lonely in Leach

I definitely know what you are up against, chica, considering that your boyfriend's pals are probably my neighbors. Sorry, but I am not a huge proponent of guys with beer guts that think it's cool to play wiffle ball and have wrestling matches on their lawn 24 hours a day complete with a "refreshments" table. These juveniles even play at three in the morning waking up the whole street with their animalistic chanting and howling that almost resembles a primal mating call.

Personally I have never been one for dating a real "man's man." Perhaps it's the fact that I have always preferred artists to athletes since words have always moved me more than sweaty bodies (or in your case, a professional beer pong competitor). Of course, I have male acquaintances and relatives that fit the wannabe-jock bill and they are usually a blast to hang with on Super Bowl Sunday or to spend an afternoon with at Fenway Park, but I have never entertained the thought of beginning a relationship with any of them.

In this case your man basically has no excuse, since he currently seems to be striving for a call from the Guinness Book of World Records that will dub him the world's champion hot dog eater and beer guzzler at the collegiate level. I understand the need for male bonding but it honestly sounds like this dude has no life or any aspirations worth admiring. Sure, he cares about his friends but as his girlfriend he should be showing you some of the time and affection that he spreads to his mates on a regular basis.

Take a look into your heart and think about the benefits versus the negatives of the relationship. Many people enjoy the security and comfort that a significant other can bring to the table, but that's when both people make a concerted effort to spend quality time together as a couple. Why should you have to fight with the frat boys for your man's attention or worry about annoying him to the point that he will turn away from you completely?

You should sit him down, taking into regard his emotions and discuss the situation at hand. Tell him that you understand that often in college we just want to chill with our buddies and that serious relationships can't be people down. However, express to him the deep hurt that you have felt as of late due to his unsupportive attitude and fixation on spending every waking hour with the boys.

If he refuses to change his wicked ways or yells, shouts,

Turn to ELENA, page 6

By Nick Pizzolato
COLLEGIAN STAFF

In previous years, the University of Massachusetts Spring Concert has had attendance that has been spotty at best.

However, it was obvious from Sunday's show that University Productions and Concerts had not only learned from its past mistakes, but damn well weren't going to let it happen again. Making students fear that they would not be allowed into the Mullins Center, let alone the floor of the concert, seemed a bit cruel, but it got the job done. The arena was abuzz from the first act to the last, and for the most part was enjoyed by all.

SCATTERED

What would you expect from the winner of the Southwest Battle of the Bands? A group of guys who individually wanted to be a rock star but combined couldn't hold the stage? Well, if you guessed that or made a predetermined decision on Scattered without even hearing them, you were dead wrong.

Taking the stage in the Mullins Center can't be an easy thing, but the quartet of Scattered, a punk band with pop undertones, took the stage with confidence and poise, with a small but strong group of followers in the first four rows. Their thirty-minute set was full of powerfully charged, punk songs that moved even those of us who never heard of them to tap our feet, bob our heads and hoot and holler at the band letting loose. They did nothing but impress and set the stage for a great night of music.

THE SUNSHINE FIX

Let's just say that after the rousing performance by Scattered, the self-described electric blues band from Athens, Georgia wasn't what the crowd ordered. No one was into their music as the crowd just waited for Guster, for whom The Sunshine Fix was opening.

GUSTER

From Somerville, Mass., the trio of Guster made those people in the half-full Mullins Center happy to be there. Opening their set with "What You Wish For" and cruising through the rest of the show with songs like "Bury Me," "X-Ray Eyes," "Parachute," "Airport Song," "Either Way" and closing with "Fa Fa," the three acoustic musicians played for a screaming group of fans with energy, appreciation and love.

Vocalist/guitarist Ryan Miller made a point of saying that last year they were booed off the stage while being pelted with objects from the crowd when they opened for hip-hop star Nelly at a similar

Turn to CONCERT, page 6

Carrot Top humors NoHo

By Jake D. Lewis
COLLEGIAN STAFF

CARROT TOP
Calvin Theatre
May 5

Carrot Top brought his irreverent brand of humor to Northampton's Calvin Theatre for the first time last Sunday, spoofing everything from rednecks to his very own 1-800-CALL-ATT commercials. The interactive show was sold out and the last stop of a long line of performances before returning home to Florida for a break.

After an opening montage of previously censored "America's Funniest Home Videos" clips, where animals were caught on camera humping everything from stuffed animals to humans, the gawky comedian bounded on stage and said, "I was walking down your main street here, and I was glad to see that I wasn't the only freak." After a few other local jabs, like calling Chicopee "Chicotrash" and accusing Holyoke police officers as having itchy trigger fingers, he delved into his trunks of goodies.

For those who have never seen Carrot Top perform before, his gimmick is bringing out homemade inventions that are hybrids of common objects and turned into something quite hilarious. As he was going through his "Redneck Trunk" (emblazoned with a Confederate flag to sell the point), he pulled out a plate strainer with dog dishes attached to the end, calling it "the redneck's way of washing china." There was also a wedding dress with a belt of beer cans, and a baby carrier attached to a portable food cooler.

Like any other comedian, Carrot Top has turned the tragedy of 9/11 into humor, parodying airport security and Osama bin Laden. Disappearing offstage for a moment, he reemerged with an enormous backpack, saying his delay for getting on the plane was that the security guards had to check it. He also joked at trying to store the enormous carry-on underneath his seat. He pulled out two miniscule suitcases, no bigger than a box of Altoids, and evoked laughter saying he couldn't fit everything into the gargantuan bag. In another trunk, he removed a toilet bowl, with Osama bin Laden's face on the bottom, telling the audience, "Now you can drop bombs on him all day!"

In addition to props, the rapid firing of special effects and music gave the show a fast-paced bite that was essential to its success. "I performed in Boston last night, and driving around that city is like this..." and then sounds of honking, screaming, and shooting blared over the speakers. "When I drove out here today, it was like this..." and then the theme song to "The Andy Griffith Show" came up.

Similarly, a joke like turning a country song about biscuits and potatoes into a version akin to Metallica could only have been done with fancy lighting and sound effects. The same went for parodying Michael Jackson's song "Bad," with huge fans blowing air up from underneath him on stage, as well as doing a medley of N'SYNC and Aerosmith's Super Bowl halftime show. In truth, the lighting/sound guy, whoever he was, deserved as much credit as Carrot Top for being on the ball with the speedy progression of the show.

There's nothing worse than a comic who goes on too long. Your face begins to hurt from the smiling, your jaw starts to ache from the laughing, and you start to get restless in the seats, no matter how funny the things are that the comedian is spouting off. Carrot Top left the audience wanting more after he culminated the show with his "Rock N' Roll Trunk," a Blue Man Group-esque finale. For a frantic five minutes, he assumed a number of famous identities and gave them a creative spin. At one moment, he was Ozzy Ozbourne babbling incoherently, and the next he was Ed Robertson of Barenaked Ladies taking gasps of air from an oxygen mask while singing a sped-up version of the song "One Week." Then the sound of a flat-line as he fell over and the lights went out to loud cheers and applause.

Carrot Top's in-your-face fun show is an experience like none other, and unlike many other comic acts, is appropriate for the whole family. For his good work, he should give himself a pat on the back. Now that sounds like something he could turn into one of his clever inventions.

They are shy no longer

By Kevin Monahan
COLLEGIAN STAFF

BELLE AND SEBASTIAN
Orpheum Theatre
May 4

BOSTON – Last Saturday night, the subdued manner of the press-shy Glasgow band Belle and Sebastian seemed almost non-existent. What took its place was an enthusiastic, vigorous eight-piece ensemble led by a very jittery lead vocalist, Front-man Stuart Murdoch could not stand still for one second of the band's performance. Whether he was jumping around, singing or switching from guitar to keyboards, Murdoch added a jolt of adrenaline to what most expected to be a subdued show.

Belle and Sebastian's studio recordings, for the most part, consist of sweet, breezy tunes that one would imagine being performed on a single acoustic guitar, with a small backing band. In fact, this band is practically a rock orchestra — complete with a few violins, a cello, keyboards, bass and drums and as many as three guitars on stage at once. Opening with a quiet harmonica piece courtesy of lead guitarist Stevie Jackson, the band immediately captured the attention of the near-capacity crowd. When Murdoch took stage, he graced the audience with plentiful onstage banter and an energy that electrified the performance.

"Seeing Other People," from their second LP, If You're Feeling Sinister was an early highlight, as was the title track from their 1998 release The Boy with the Arab Strap. But what seemed to get the greatest crowd appreciation was Murdoch's interaction with the audience. Murdoch engaged the crowd in silly conversation and Jackson invited audience members on stage to Turn to BELLE, page 6

Belle and Sebastian performed Saturday night.

Elena

continued from page 5

gives you the cold shoulder, etc., then he is definitely not worth crying over. Be honest and open with him and treat him the way that you would like to be treated and hopefully he will come around and see his faults. Yet, he may be too immature or simply not ready for a girlfriend. Since you are clearly a pretty advanced lady, I suggest you spend less time fretting over this one-dimensional guy and allot more of your schedule to engaging in conversations with friends that share your interests.

Perhaps, you are meant to end this relationship because there is an exotic man straight off the boat from Spain that could use a little help learning the English language and you would be the ideal tutor (sounds like the makings of a romance novel!). In any case, simply be honest to yourself and to others and you will find the happiness that you deserve!

Elena Panessis is a Collegian columnist

There's only one more 'Ask Elena left! Where did the semester go? This sassy senior is graduating so give her some love and drop her a note or question at askelena@yahoo.com

Belle

continued from page

dance during "The Wrong Girl," from 2000's Told Your Hands Child, You Walk Like a Peasant. Murdoch even invited a random girl onstage to sing lead vocals on a cover of the Pixies' "Gigantic" (of course Murdoch checked to see if Kim Deal was in the house first). The fact that she didn't know all the lyrics made the number all the more enjoyable. I like Dylan in the Movies' was a late treat as well.

Cellist/vocalist Isobel Campbell was also fun to watch during the band's set as her wide variety of facial expressions provided a running commentary on the evening's events. The band closed their set with "Legal Man" before returning for a one-song encore that rocked harder than anyone would think that Belle and Sebastian could. The only thing that the crowd could have hoped for was for the band to perform some material from their first album, Tigermilk. But no one seemed to mind the inclusion of a wealth of material from their yet-to-be-released in the U.S. album, Storytelling.

For a band that shuns group photos, rarely tours and specializes in cute, poppy and sometimes subdued tunes, Belle and Sebastian delivered a healthy dose of driving rock and shimmering personality. It is hard to imagine that anyone left the theater that night unsatisfied.

concert

continued from page 5

Guster rocked out with their Massachusetts roots Saturday night.

Ludacris' DJ got the crowd on its feet at the Mullins Center.

event last year. "We said to ourselves that we would never play one of these collegiate sponsored concerts again. So far, so good." They were not booed but embraced and cheered by a strong majority of the crowd.

THE ROOTS

There was a question among some students of whether or not The Roots should be appearing as the setup act for Ludacris. They are a successful hip-hop act, who since 1995 have been producing innovative and genre-blowing music. Those critics were silenced when they took the stage.

As soon as Guster left the stage and the MCs for the evening came out to throw out T-shirts and hype the crowd, people appeared as if from nowhere to get in optimum viewing position for the Legendary Funkdiation. Well as they appeared on a pitch black stage, the crowd erupted, as their rhythm and beats exploded through the arena, everyone moved trying to keep up with the nitro-like speed from rear Black Thought.

As the songs burst from the stage into the crowd, they enthralled those in attendance. Not a person was sitting throughout the building as The Roots played "Respond/React," "The Next Movement" and "What You Want" (to just name a few). Some were dancing, some were singing, and some were soaking in this awesome experience. While introducing the band, The Roots showed their versatility as they covered bits and pieces from Rage Against the Machine's "Sleep Now in the Fire," Rick James' "Super Freak" and The Beastie Boys' "Brass Monkey," among other songs. They were fantastic and without a doubt made those in the audience who didn't know who they were into fans. But the night wasn't over yet.

LUDACRIS

After 90 minutes of The Roots, the crowd (still jazzed) awaited the arrival of Ludacris and his brand of Dirty South style rap. As soon as he stepped on stage, all eyes were on him as he went through his list of hits off of his two studio albums and one indy release, allowing the audience's energy to feed him. Through "Roll Out," "Area Codes" and "Southern Hospitality" he jumped around stage stopping to give the crowd verbal support and get it psyched for the next song. For those in the audience, Ludacris may not have surpassed The Roots, but he matched them, bringing to an end a great night of music.

Graduation Parties
Your parents are paying...
Get a DJ
Hip-Hop Reggae
Chance R&B
Perspective
Entertainment Co. 413.883.1144
gemini Numark PYLE PRO

KNOW ANY SENIORS?
Did you ever just run up to one and give them a nice, big KISS?
Now's your chance to "Kiss" your favorite seniors goodbye!
$6.50 or 2 for $12.00
Tell your friends that you will miss them
Send them a 2002 mug or champagne glass filled with Hershey Kisses!
To order your Kiss today you can either
Stop by the STARS' table on the concourse
OR
go to www.umassalumni.com under the "Seniors" section
If you have any questions call the STARS office at 577-1390
(Have you bought your Commencement Ball tickets yet?)

BOSTON BARTENDERS SCHOOL of AMERICA
Bartenders Have More Spirit!
www.bostonbartender.com
Why not be a bartender?
• Only professional school in Western MA
• Hands-on training in real barr/tub setting
• National certification in alcohol awareness
• Lifetime refresher • ID Card • Resume
• Special UMass student discount
• Conveniently located in West Springfield
Call TODAY! (413) 747-9888

Eliminate
FEARS/ALLERGIES
In one session
Fear of flying, public speaking, exams, needles, elevators, heights allergies and other disturbances can be eliminated in one session
Order a free booklet at 413 374 8217

Changing Jobs or Retiring?
Call A.G. Edwards for alternatives on how you can receive and manage your distribution from your company's retirement plan
Marianne Sbadriani
91 Main St.
Greenfield, MA
800 445 3685
A.G. Edwards INVESTMENTS SINCE 1887

WANTED
STUDENTS WITH TRUCK OR BUS DRIVING EXPERIENCE WANTED FOR SUMMER WORK
EARN $110-$140 PER DAY
Working approximately 14 days in
One or both sessions available. Possibly some July work.
Call 1-888-949-5089

North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd., North Amherst, MA
www.northamherstmotors.com
549-RENT
OOPS!
• Cars • Mini Vans • Trucks • SUV's • Cargo Vans • 15 Passenger Vans • Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older • Direct Billing To Insurance Co • MHEC Rates
(On bus route)
POTTERS AUTO & TRUCK RENTALS

We're not like every other high-tech company. We're hiring.
No one told you the hardest part of being an engineer would be finding your first job. Of course, it's still possible to get the high-tech work you want by joining the U.S. Air Force. You can leverage your degree immediately and get hands-on experience with some of the most sophisticated technology on earth. To find out how to get your career off the ground, call 1-800-423-USAF or visit our Web site at airforce.com.
U.S. AIR FORCE

The Office of Alumni Relations
EARN FAST CASH!
The Office of Alumni Relations is now accepting applications for Alumni Weekend 2002. Must be available June 7, 8 and 9. Students needed to provide transportation, bellhop, host events and more. $6.75/hour. Meals will be provided during working hours and lodging is available. Call Lynn Zlotnick at 545-2317 for more information or stop by Memorial Hall.
Work all weekend.
We provide meals during working hours and lodging!

lax

continued from page 10

"We're going to meet right now and take a look at the tapes, then we're going to get up early tomorrow and get going," said Cannella just minutes after the Selection Show had ended. "We are just happy to be going to the [NCAA] Tournament. The players have worked real hard to get to this point. Now we have to focus our attention on being prepared to play a very solid Fairfield team."

Making his third trip to the NCAA Tournament since taking over the program prior to the 1995 season, Cannella is looking to up his playoff record of 1-2 and make a run better than the one in 1997 which featured an opening round victory against Hofstra, and a tough loss to Princeton, the team that went on to win the National Championship.

In order to do that, UMass must first take down Fairfield (7-5), which earned an automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament by capturing the Great Western Lacrosse League title with a 4-1 conference record. And the Minutemen, who have won all three of their previous meetings with Fairfield, are pretty familiar with their competition. Cannella took his troops to see the Stags play last week and both teams met up in two scrimmages during the fall.

Led by C.J. Kemp in goal, Fairfield follows with strong faceoff statistics and a high-powered offense. Its only glitch comes from its youth on defense, where UMass should be able to take advantage. If the Minutemen can do that, then they're off to Baltimore for a matchup with No. 1 Hopkins on the Bluejays' home turf.

But hollering for that game has to wait.

Freshman Gene Tundo leads UMass in assists.

Santos doubles up against St. Joe's

But Baseball splits with visiting Hawks

By Jesse Greenspan
COLLEGIAN STAFF

In softball, pitching both games of a doubleheader is a fairly common practice. But in baseball, it is nearly unheard of.

Still, Massachusetts baseball pitcher Jesse Santos did just that this past Saturday against St. Joseph's, picking up the, 4-2, eight-inning win in game one before falling in the second contest, 4-2.

"I've done that maybe once before," said UMass Head Coach Mike Stone, whose team won the series with a 15-6 victory over the Hawks on Sunday. "[Santos] had a good first inning, but a couple of things here and there gave them the opportunity to score three runs (in the second). After that, he got tired and we had to take him out."

Game one of the twinbill belonged to Santos (7-3), as the ace righthander went the distance, giving up a mere four hits and two runs. However, game two was not so kind to the senior from Chelmsford, as St. Joe's got to him for three runs in the second and consequently ended his outing.

In game three on Sunday, Santos started the game on the bench, and instead it was Eric Chown taking the hill for the Minutemen. The sophomore righthander held the Hawks in check to pick up his third victory of the season, and he got a lot of help from the UMass offense.

Overall on the day, the Maroon and White pounded out 15 runs and 12 hits, using a four-run third, a six-run fifth and a five-run ninth to take home the win and improve its record to 19-22 (8-13 Atlantic 10).

"The score indicates a crushing, but in the eighth it was 10-5 and they were threatening," Stone said. "The game was a lot closer than the score, but then we came out and scored five runs in the ninth to put the game away."

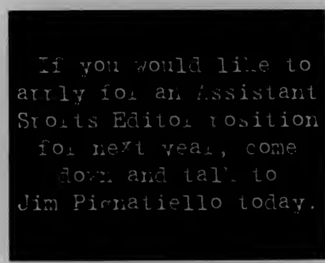
Catcher Tom Ellerbrook, who has struggled this year to a .194 batting average, was the surprise hitting star for UMass, pounding out three hits and four RBIs. The first of these base knocks came in the third, when his single to right scored Connell Clark to give his team the 1-0 lead.

Third baseman Aaron Senez also contributed to the Maroon and White cause, going 3-for-5 with three ribbies of his own.

"We left we were the better team throughout the whole weekend," Stone said, "and we bounced back and played a good ballgame [Sunday]."

In Saturday's first game, the two teams went into extra innings deadlocked at 2-2. However, Mike Kulak gave his team the 3-2 lead with a solo homer, and Adam Stojanowski added an insurance run by scoring from third on a passed ball.

When St. Joe's got up in the bottom half of the frame, Santos shut the door and retired the Hawks to end the contest.



Game two saw the Minutemen get out to a 1-0 lead in the first when Kulak doubled to start the game, and Senez drove him in two batters later. However, after plating three runs off Santos, St. Joseph's retook a lead it would never relinquish.

The game also saw the return of injured UMass hitting star Chris Morgan, who had sat out most of the last month. The junior catcher/DH singled in his one at bat Saturday, and then went 2-for-5 the following day.

Now, Morgan and his teammates take the field today against Siena looking to run its record one step closer to .500. Josh Kean leads the Saints (25-23) with a .417 average, while Jim Buckley (11 HR, 50 RBIs) and Ryan Finn (15 HR, 50 RBIs) have supplied the power in the lineup.

On the mound, closer Josh Courage has been the best pitcher on the staff, notching four saves on the year to go along with a 2.47 ERA.

"Every game is important," Stone said. "We want to at least enjoy a decent season and we're not at that point yet."

www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com

TAPESTRY Health
Affordable and Confidential
• Gyn Exams • Birth Control • Pregnancy Testing • Emergency Contraception • HIV/STD Testing • Quit Smoking
Bangs Center, 70 Boltwood Walk, Amherst
16 Center Street, Northmpton
(413) 586-2539 or
www.tapestryhealth.org

CASH FOR BOOKS
WE PAY TOP DOLLAR
Jeffery Amherst College Store
55 SOUTH PROSPECT ST. AMHERST
253-3870 253-7816

CINEMARK
The Best Seat in Town
CINEMARK AT HAMPSHIRE MALL
367 Russell St. 413-587-4233
Schedule for Friday 5/3 - Thursday 5/9
DIGITAL SURROUND SOUND IN ALL AUDITORIUMS
Purchase Tickets Online @ cinemark.com
SPIDERMAN (PG13) 12:15 4:15 7:30 10:15*
SPIDERMAN (PG13) 12:45 4:45 8:00 10:35*
SPIDERMAN (PG13) 1:15 5:15 8:30*
SCORPION KING (PG13) 12:35 4:50 7:45 10:25*
DUCES WILD (R) 12:55 4:25 7:05 9:45*
HOLLYWOOD ENDING (PG13) 12:20 4:30 7:15 10:00*
LIFE OR SOMETHING LIKE IT (PG13) 12:25 4:35 7:35 10:15*
JASON X (R) 12:50 5:00 7:55 10:10*
MURDER BY NUMBERS (R) 12:30 4:10 7:30 10:20
THE SCORPION KING (PG13) 12:35 4:50 7:45 10:25*
CHANGING LANES (R) 12:00 4:05 7:25 9:55
HIGH CRIMES (PG13) 12:05
PANIC ROOM (R) 7:40 10:30
THE ROOKIE (G) 12:25 4:00 7:10
ICE AGE (PG) 12:10 2:15 4:25
Select Shows 5/6-9
MUMBER BY NUMBERS doors open at 11:45am
•NO PASSES-NO SUPERSAVERS
Tickets & showtimes available at cinemark.com

The Internationally Award-Winning
Commencement Ball
Dinner, Dancing and Drinks (positive ID required)
Horse & Carriage Rides
A Night to Remember!
2002
Friday, May 24, 2002
7:00 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. Student Union
To purchase tickets ($35.00 per person):
* Order on-line at www.umassalumni.com
* Call the Alumni Office at 545-2317
* Stop by the STARS table in the Campus Center: May 1-3, 6-10, & 13-14
* Stop by Cap and Gown Distribution the week of May 20th
Commencement Ball is supported by:
UMass Alumni Association, Alumni Relations Office, The Massachusetts Daily Collegian, Student Government Association Programming Board, Campus Activities Office, College of Humanities and Fine Arts, College of Social and Behavioral Sciences, College of Natural Sciences and Mathematics, Auxiliary Services, and Greek Affairs
ALUMNI ASSOCIATION UMASS
Don't forget to make your pledge to the Senior Campaign!

Attention

Graduates of 2002
Rooms Go On Sale for Graduation 2002 Weekend (May 24 & 25)
on
Monday May 6, 2002 at 10am
• Reservations must be made for both Friday & Saturday night. The cost is $210.00
• Reservations for 3rd night, (Sunday, May 26th) can also be made for an additional $50.
Campus Center Hotel
Call 549-6000

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Fraternities * Sororities Clubs * Student Groups

Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with the easy CampusFundraiser.com three hour fundraising event. Does not involve credit card applications. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact CampusFundraiser.com at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.CampusFundraiser.com.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. - Now Available, 1&2 bedroom apts. Leases begin June, July, Aug or Sept. 1 year lease. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywine apts.com stop by or call (413) 549-0600.

1 bedroom Apt Brandywine summer with fall option 549-7279.

2 bedroom apartment summer sublet or new lease call 253-6778.

Large One Bedroom Apartment 665-9513. Take over my lease at the end of May with Fall option (6 or 12 month leases available)

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over our lease 5 BR w/upgrade in Puffton. Available June 1st. Call 549-1474 for more info.

2 bedroom Apt. Summer sublet or take over our lease. Rent negotiable call 549-7259.

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a new or used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

88 Mercury Grand Marquis. 107k runs looks great $1500 OBO. Tim 549-7033.

Chevy Lumina 1990. 163000 reliable must go. $1000 OBO. 896-5082.

Maxima 1989. Original owner. 154000 miles. Good car $m 545-5677.

89 Honda Accord $1500 OBO 259-0068.

COMPUTERS

We pay CASH for your used lap tops 413-584-8857.

Color Laptop $99 Pentium tower/ CD Rom $99 with color monitor $139. HURRY! 413-584-8857.

EMPLOYMENT

Make it Happen! Telephone Research Interviewers. Put your energy and talent to work with FMI. Due to increased staffing demand during the spring and summer months, we have exciting year-round positions available for dynamic individuals to join our team. Part-time flexible evening and weekend shifts, paid training. PVTA accessible. Hadley location. Call today! 888-423-5581

TEENAGE BICYCLE TOUR LEADERS NEEDED: Be a Teen Tour Leader this summer. Trips in USA, Canada, Europe. We need a 4-week time commitment, salary plus expenses paid. Student Hosteling Program, P.O. Box 419, CONWAY, MA 01341. 800-343-6152 www.bicycletrips.com.

Cushman Village general store prepare creative take-out deli foods and bakery items with customer service skills. Immediate FT/PT. Open 7 days with employment past summer available. 491 Pine St. Amherst 549-1955.

EMPLOYMENT

Camp Counselor wanted for Tennis, Gymnastics, Water Ski, Arts, and more! Gain valuable experience at award-winning camps, while having the summer of a lifetime. Apply on-line at www.pineforest.com

Greenhouse Part-Full Time. Various shifts for one person. Daily production, afternoon & weekends chores, some on call. Mechanical aptitude necessary. Must live close to facility. For more details visit www.bioshelters.com and apply online or mail cover letter and resume to bioshelters, Inc. 500 Sunderland Road, Amherst, MA 01002. No Calls Please!

Summer Work! Student work program! Earn great summer income! $18.25 base-appt. Customer service and sales. Scholarships available. 732-2252. www.morele-ation.com

SUMMER HELP Cape Cod Ice seeks drivers and P/T 2nd Shift Supervisor in our Sandwich location. Interested candidates call 508-888-8590 for more info.

EMPLOYMENT

Be the Campus Red Bull connection. Join our team and help build one of the world's leading brands, you'll have a blast while gaining invaluable marketing experience. You'll even earn a little extra spending cash. Think about it. It's a lot less dangerous than selling term papers! Apply at redbullcollege.com.

FOR SALE

Phone cards= money saved. I.D.Net/?GTLIMB

Furniture must sell! Couch, Futon, table, bed. Everything must go! Call 253-7250.

1987 Toyota MR2 great condition T-top $2000 OBO 413-575-5487. Chris.

Huge Lawn Sale! Lots of Good + Cheap stuff. 9 EdgeHill Place, Amherst. May 11.

Desk for sale new wooden 4 drawer perfect condition call Meg 549-0072.

Mountain bike-99 Rocky Mountain fusion 19" excellent cond. See www.bikes.com with car rack, extras. $350. 585-0517.

FOR SALE

Furniture for sale call 549-2914. Table and chairs, breakfast bar, TV stand and more

HOUSE FOR RENT

Main St. 4 Bedroom house June 1st. Sublet w/Fall option. Large kitchen, & living room with porch. On bus route w/washer and dryer. 549-7839.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENT

Guitar-Cort Elec/Acoustic cut-away. Mint never played. With Fishman preamp and case. $350. 585-0517.

ROOM FOR RENT

1 bedroom in Alpine commons. Excellent roommates. Call Bryan 253-9499.

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 More needed to share 3 bdrm. Apt. N Amherst-townhouses $375 mo. , bus rte. June 1 – May 05. Needed ASAP Call Shannon. 549-9594 or 508-241-3185.

2 roommates needed to share 2 bedroom apt. in Brandywine. On bus line. For fall semester, male or female (781) 585-4854.

Female(s) to share 2 bedroom Brandywine Apt. starting June 1 . 549-1988.

ROOMMATE WANTED

June-June. One bedroom available in a spacious three bedroom apartment. Great location, close to campus and uptown. $350. Call 549-3726.

Need a place for fall sem. only? Share our 3 bdrm.! $375 mo, bus rte. Call Shannon ASAP! 549-9594 or 508-241-3183.

Four roommates wanted to fill a house in the Center of Town for info call Rob (413) 519-0763.

Graduating and moving to the Boston area. I am looking for a third roommate to share a 3 bedroom house in Arlington if interested call 253-7426.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

SUMMER SUBLET

One large bedroom available at Cliffside apts. Starting June 1 partly furnished 617-842-4657.

Summer sublet, fall option, 2 bedrooms , private porch, yard, on bus route, Amherst, call 253-9707.

SUMMER SUBLET

1-2 of 3 bedrooms at Townhouses partially furnished call Lauren, 253-7250 or Erin, 546-3946.

Brandywine 2 BDRM will negotiate rent. Furnished, AC, bus route call 549-4110.

Nice 3 bedroom townhouse. Practically on campus. Call Joe 549-9441.

Brandywine. 2 bdrm. Available June 1. Call 549-1988.

TO SUBLET

2 bedroom. Free heat and hot water. Fall option, 253-9629.

2 person Apt. June-August on sunset Ave. 2 Mins. to campus.

1 bedroom Brandywine Apt. Sublet available June 1 Fall option 549-7148.

Sublet in Brandywine with possible fall option. Looking for 1-3 people to take over 2 bedroom. $225/month. Starting June 1st. 549-9178.

2 Bedroom apartment partially furnished available June 1st to sublet w/option to lease on bus route. 413-549-9612.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?

Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian 113 Campus Center Basement in UMass

Client _____ Date: _____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run _____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 1.
2. 2.
3. 3.
4. 4.
5. 5.
6. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Student rate - all copy must be typed or printed clearly. Non-student rate $5 cents word per day.

Headings

- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

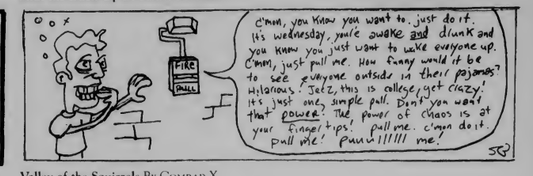
HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

2 CBS / 3
4 NBSN
5 Fox Sport NE
6 PBS / 57
7 HSCN Movie Channel WFB / 20
8 HSCN Movie Channel TV Guide Channel
9 FOX / 61
10 ABC / 40
11 NBC / 22
12 International Channel UMATV
13 HSCN Info Channel ESPN
14 ESPN 2
15 UVC-19
16 ESPN Classic Good vs Good
17 CNN
18 CNN HL
19 Weather Channel
20 Learning Channel
21 History Channel A & E
22 Discovery Health Food Network
23 NASA
24 Home & Garden TV Travel Channel
25 Lifetime
26 CNBC
27 Tech TV
28 BET
29 UPN-38
30 USA
31 TNN
32 MTV
33 CMT
34 VH-1
35 TNT
36 TBS
37 E! Entertainment
38 Sci-Fi Channel
39 Court TV
40 Nick at Nite
41 Comedy Central
42 Cartoon Network
43 Game Show Network
44 TV Land
45 FOX Family
46 Univision
47 Telemundo
48 College TV Network
49 C-SPAN
50 C-SPAN2
51 Bloomberg Television

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 7, 2002

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "Fire Wars" (N) (In Stereo)				World of National Geographic		Connecticut Journal
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Defending His Honor"		Guardian "Shelter" (In Stereo)		Judging Amy (N) (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Defending His Honor"		Guardian "Shelter" (In Stereo)		Judging Amy (N) (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WVIB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Leverne & Shirley		Favorite Stars: Then & Now		NYPD Blue "Oedipus Wrecked"		News	Nightline
WLVI		Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	Gilmore Girls "Help Wanted"		Smallville "Crush" (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Raymond
WHDH		News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Frasier "Don Juan in Hell"		Frasier (N)	Scrubs (N)	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	6	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Gilmore Girls "Help Wanted"		Smallville "Crush" (In Stereo)		News	Home Imp.	Blind Date	Blind Date
WVIT	10	News		NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood		Frasier "Don Juan in Hell"		Frasier (N)	Scrubs (N)	Dateline (In Stereo)	News
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	70s Show	That '80s	24 "6:00 P.M. - 7:00 P.M." (N)		News		Raymond	Seinfeld
WWLP	22	News		Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy	Frasier "Don Juan in Hell"		Frasier (N)	Scrubs (N)	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Nova "Fire Wars" (N) (In Stereo)				Test of Courage: Firefighter		Charlie Rose (N) (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Leverne & Shirley		Favorite Stars: Then & Now		NYPD Blue "Oedipus Wrecked"		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy	Frasier	Frasier	Buffy the Vampire Slayer		Roswell (N) (In Stereo)		News	Ent. Tonight	5th Wheel	Shipmates (N)
WTBS	72	Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	NBA Pregame	NBA Basketball Playoffs Conference Semifinal - Teams to Be Announced (Live)				Inside NBA		★★½ "Flatch Lives" (1989)
A&E	69	The View (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Monster"		Biography: Meredith Baxter		Columbo "How You See Him"				Law & Order Working Mom
CNN	20	Money line		Crossfire		Live From...	The Point	Larry King Live		Newsnight		Crossfire	Money line
COM	39	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Geeks	★★½ "Office Space" (1999, Comedy) Ron Livingston				Battlebots		Daily Show	Sat. Night Live
DISC	52	Ultimate Guide: Snakes		Cobras		New Detectives-Forensic				FBI Files "Deadly Stranger"		New Detectives-Forensic
ESPN	21	Sportscenter			Clemens	Stanley Cup Playoffs Conference Semifinal Game 3 - Teams to Be Announced (Live)						Sportscenter
LIFE	37	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★½ "Our Mother's Murder" (1999, Drama) Roxanna Hart				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	35	MTV Special (In Stereo)		Osbournes	Osbournes	Osbournes	Osbournes	Real World	Real World	Real World	Osbournes (N)	Jackass	Rock
NICK	28	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb	Fold by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers	All in Family	All in Family
SCIFI	45	Star Trek (In Stereo)		Journey to the Center of the Earth (1999, Science Fiction) Treat Williams, Jeremy Lond.n. (In Stereo)								Crowing Over	Crowing Over
TLC	42	Understanding Pyramids		Secrets of Law Enforcement		Tornado: Awesome Force		Monster Hunters (N)		Mezes & Labyrinths: Solving		Tornado: Awesome Force
TNT	29	NYPD Blue "Comedy Tonight"		Pretender "The Assassin"		Law & Order "Admissions"		Law & Order "Haven"		Charmed (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Admissions"
USA	62	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG (In Stereo)		Nash Bridges (In Stereo)		★★½ "SWAT" (1999, Drama) Nicolas Cage, Joaquin Phoenix				JAG (In Stereo)
HBO	60	Family Portrait	★★★ "X-Men" (2000, Science Fiction) Hugh Jackman. PG-13					★★½ "A Knight's Tale" (2001, Adventure) Heath Ledger. PG-13		Insomnia		Six Feet Under: The Secret
MAX	61	★★★ "Meet the Parents" (2000, Comedy) Robert De Niro. PG-13				★★½ "Kalamity" (1995, Science Fiction) Denzel Washington. R		★★½ "The Specialist" (1994, Drama) Sylvester Stallone. R				Queer as Folk (TV) (In Stereo)
SHOW	65	(6:30) ★★½ "The House of Mirth" (2000) Gillian Anderson. PG-13				★★½ "Dr. T & the Women" (2000, Comedy) Richard Gere. R				Chris Isaak: "Rat in the House"

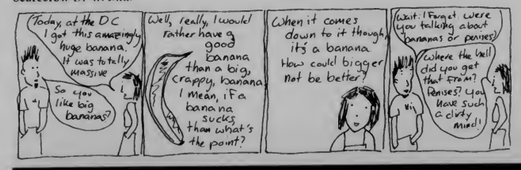
Adam and Eric By Ross Burach



Frolicking in the Ragpatch By Joey Russo and Frank Cassella

Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas

Shut the Duck Up By Seany McSean



Highbrow By Aaron Eppy

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Scarecrow By W. Bird

Noodle By Jacki

Quote of the Day

"Here we go now, here we go now. Peace! We outta here..."

-Adam Sandler, Deion Sanders and Tim Meadows on Saturday Night Live

Amherst Weather

Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 78 LOW: 51	HIGH: 73 LOW: 44	HIGH: 73 LOW: 47

Horoscopes

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — You slacker, what are you doing going to class, go get your sleep on!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) - Don't eat at the DC next week; there are professors about.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) - The best place to find your lost sneaker in under your bed.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) - Go to KFC and order your chicken extra crispy.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — You will talk to someone today. You will also be bored in class. You will also get pissed off at the horoscopes and burn your copy of the comics page.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 21) - Sure you think your friends are ganging up on you. That's because they don't like you and they're secretly trying to steal your fish.

SCORPIO (Oct. 22-Nov. 21) — Write a letter. Compose a song. Avoid Herter at all costs, damn trick stairways.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) - The perfect girlfriend would say, "you're so sexy when you're hungover."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Got a case of end of semester swipes? Call your friends and buy 20 dollars worth of fresh Bluewall cookies!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Put on a happy face...or at least take a shower, you look disgusting. And pray you find an unattractive girl like Anna Scott.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) - Remember kaleidoscopes can be deceiving.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Do you like stick figures? I thought so. You pervert.

Limbo by Bosco b. Brown

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Cuban Black Bean Soup

Cajun Lightning Chicken

Macaroni & Cheese (vegetarian)

Sesame Noodles with Pea Pods (vegan)

Vegetable Egg Rolls (vegetarian) (W Basics)

DINNER

Cuban Black Bean Soup

Seasoned Roast Pork

Tomato Basil Cod

Vegan Cutlets (vegan)

Black Bean Tofu Steak (vegan) (W Basics)

Le Commensal Entrée* (vegan)

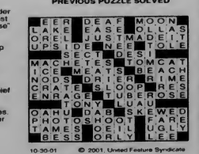
Today's Staff

Staff Editor	Eric Soderstrom
Photo Editor	Scott Eldridge II
Copy Chief	Andy Vogt
Production Supervisor	Jess May
Production Staff	Mike Kulak, Erika Earl

THE HARP IRISH PUB

Crossword not challenging enough?

TUESDAY NIGHT!! Team Pub Trivia win money and prizes 9-10:30pm call for details

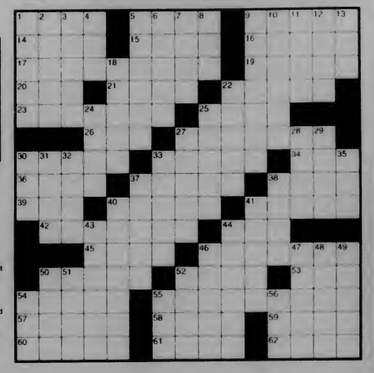


163 Sunderland Rd. Amherst, MA 548-6900

Start Your Own Tradition

ACROSS

1 Road rally
5 Wound reminder
9 Visit, as a ghost
14 "— Called Horse"
15 Cab
16 Ms. Wintrey
17 Old comic-strip hero
19 Type of boat
20 Skill — board
21 Disagreeable look
22 Acted like a thief
23 Brat
25 Put on weight
26 Reply to a ques.
27 Wakes up after surgery
30 Gulf
33 Weather warning
34 "Yo!"
36 Ode writer
37 Ice hockey locale
38 Bounder
39 He gives a hoot
40 Ostrich cousins
41 Hangs ten
42 Livelihood
44 Six-shooter
45 Bright fish
46 Customers
50 Added brandy
52 Whiskey measure
53 "I knew it!"
54 Prairie roamer
55 Winter sports gear
57 Mia Farrow movie
58 Seine tributary
59 Pierre's friends
60 Church council
61 Made haste
62 Swampy



PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

10-30-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate

DOWN

1 Indian royal
2 Entertain
3 Place for locks
4 MIT grad
5 Office workers
6 Louisiana native
7 Earth's line of rotation
8 Wheel part
9 Incapacitated
10 Cooks' attire
11 — River of Russia
12 Cathedral part
13 Quaker word
18 Cuts of meat
22 Mead's island
24 Continue
25 Hired thugs
27 Athletic-shoe part
28 Odin's son
29 Egg, in Arles
30 Gl address
31 Curtsies
32 Shrill bark
33 Not stale
35 "Certainly!"
37 Out in front
38 Ancient inscription
40 Aged, as cheese
41 Business wear
43 Baroque style
44 Looked radiant
46 Picked
47 Wynonna's mom
48 His and her
49 Brash
50 Sweet-scented flower
51 "C" — cat
52 Fabric sample
54 College degs
55 "Meyday!"
56 Radio enthusiast

DAILY COLLEGIAN

SPORTS

COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: ERIC SODERSTROM

Matt Hutchen and the rest of the Minutemen men's lacrosse team take a knee after the Selection Committee announces their fate.

Tourney selection board resurrects tough memories

Men's Lacrosse to face Fairfield in opening round

By Eric Soderstrom
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Paul Hutchen couldn't contain himself. It didn't matter that his Massachusetts men's lacrosse team had been guaranteed a spot in this year's NCAA Tournament. He wanted to see it become official.

"Yes!" screamed Hutchen, as his team's name appeared on the television inside The Hangar Sunday evening, marking UMass as the No. 8 seed in the tourney. "Yeah, baby!"

His teammates were rather raucous as well, but none seemed more energized than the fist-pumping Hutchen. This year, the Selection Committee couldn't take this away from him or any of the Minutemen.

Saturday at Brown University, UMass will face Fairfield in the first round of the NCAA Tournament. This year, the Minutemen have earned the chance to play for the National Championship. A new season has officially begun.

"Let's practice now," said Hutchen, as he walked out the door. "We're coming, Fairfield, and hell is coming with us."

It has been a long year since UMass, after going 12-2 with only single-goal losses to Georgetown and Syracuse, was snubbed from the postseason. Last year, the Minutemen sat at home when teams like Hofstra (UMass beat the Pride, 17-15, on Feb. 24, 2001) and Virginia (The Cavaliers finished the year 7-6) were playing for the title.

That memory began to fade this season when the Minutemen beat Georgetown, 16-13, on April 20 to capture the ECAC title and the conference's automatic bid to the tournament. But Sunday, when Duke (7-6) found the field of 12 and Hofstra (11-5) didn't, the committee's cold shoulder emerged again. Hofstra beat Duke, 14-6, on April 26 and only lost by a single goal to top seed Johns Hopkins. Duke split with third-seeded Virginia and won the ACC Championship. And even though the ACC doesn't receive an Automatic Qualifier, the committee most likely used their pseudo-title as basis for Duke's invite.

"I never makes any sense at all," said Matt McFarland, UMass' All-American defenseman, who also wasn't surprised with the Minutemen's No. 8 seeding. "You always expect at least one bad thing to happen."

Last year it was Hofstra coach John Danowski who called UMass coach Greg Cannella to offer consolation for the Minutemen's slight. Sunday, it was Cannella who dialed up Danowski with support. But after the call, Cannella's mind surely switched back to Saturday's game with Fairfield.

Turn to LAX, page 7

Matt Brady's All-Time Team

Despite little help, Johnson proved greatest hurler ever

This is part nine of a 10-part series portraying the 10 members of "Brady's All-Time Team" – a lineup consisting of the best Major League Baseball players ever.

His fastball is so fast you can't see 'em and he knows where he is throwing, because if he didn't then, would be dead bodies all over Idaho. – Joe Cantillon, on his first (this) seeing Walter Johnson

Credentials (all-time rank): 417 wins (2), 2.17 earned run average (8), 3509 strikeouts (8), 110 shutouts (1), 531 complete games (4), two-time winner of pitching's triple crown (1913, 1918)

The Argument: Lefty Grove is a guy who is often overlooked since his numbers are adversely affected by the era he played in. In the offensive times of the late '20s to the mid-'30s, Grove was by far the best pitcher, with his 31-4 season of 1931 being among the best campaigns ever. He had unbelievable stuff for his career with the A's, which was shortened both by injury and by the Great Depression. After he went to the Red Sox for the 1934 season, he got himself back together and posted five consecutive seasons with an ERA of 3.08 or below, despite the fact that he was well past his prime.

Christy Mathewson was more than a pitcher, he was, quite simply, a hero. But aside from the fact that he was one of the best all-around people to play Major League Baseball, he won 373 games in his career and had a career 2.13 ERA. In the 1905 World Series, he put together what might be the greatest postseason feat in the history of the games. Over the span of six days, he pitched three shutouts against the mighty Philadelphia A's, allowing 14 hits and one walk in his 27 innings of work.

I was ready to put Sandy Koufax in this fourth slot. And then I looked at him in comparison to Pedro Martinez. And Greg Maddux. And Tom Seaver. And Grover Cleveland Alexander. And Warren Spahn. And Bob Gibson. And my head started to hurt. There are so many guys to stick into this fourth slot, but for now, I think I have to stick with Koufax because of his sheer dominance over the last six years of his career including three pitching Triple Crowns. Had modern medicine been available, he might have gone on to be number one. But pencil in the other six guys I mentioned as honorable mention for the team.

What you didn't know: There's a lot to be learned about Walter Johnson, despite the fact that he is nearly universally recognized as the greatest pitcher in baseball history. That's partly because he pitched in the early part of the century, wrapping up his career in 1927. The other reason is that he played for the lowly Washington Senators, who rarely finished above the second division. Despite the lack of a team around him, Johnson still is second all-time in wins and carried the Senators to a World Series in 1924. Additionally, he lost 27 1-0 games, the most in history.

The lore of Johnson is probably the most interesting part of his persona. The finest story is that of a young batter, who having taken two Johnson strikes without moving the bat off his shoulder began to walk to the dugout. When umpire Bill Klem informed him that he had another strike left, the batter replied, "You can have it. It won't do me any good."

Twice in his career he performed an amazing feat. With the bases loaded and nobody out, he then proceeded to strike out the next three hitters on a total of nine pitches. That is a testament to the type of era that Johnson and other deadballers played in. Most of the time, they did not bear down fully unless they were in a dire situation. If a great pitcher's team was up by more than three runs, the pitcher would often take it easy, rather than the current ideology of the game, where numbers mean contracts and contracts are in direct correlation with money.

Johnson was one of the quietest men to ever play the game, and he was humble in every way, likely a direct result of his Midwestern upbringing. But his career was unparalleled in terms of dominance and in terms of the respect he got from his peers. He'll be the number one starter, and will likely not need to be relieved. Plus, he's a great guy to hit in the nine hole, with a career .235 average and 24 homers. Not bad at all for a pitcher.

Matt Brady is a Collegian columnist.

1.	Cobb	LF
2.	Wagner	SS
3.	Ruth	RF
4.	Mays	CF
5.	Gehrig	1B
6.	Schmidt	3B
7.	Alomar	2B
8.	Cochrane	C
9.	Johnson	P
10.	(5/09)	Man.

Best Of The Rest: Pitchers

1. Lefty Grove
2. Christy Mathewson
3. Sandy Koufax

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Walter Johnson made hitters quit after two strikes.

...GER HITS ...TH ...ERS ...AGE 5.

TIBI SAYS GOODBYE ED/OP PAGE 4. ...TS PAG...

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

WEDNESDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY TWO ☆☆☆☆☆ 5.08.02

Police issue a safety alert after report of rape

A female student reported that two men sexually assaulted her in John Quincy Adams Dormitory at around 6 a.m. on Sunday morning.

The woman stated that on her way back from the bathroom, two men hanging around in the hallway pushed her into her dorm room. Allegedly, one of them held her down while the other sexually assaulted her. The men fled the room when she began screaming, according to a University of Massachusetts police safety alert.

The student called a friend who in turn called UMass police. The victim was treated at Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton and released.

Police searched the area surrounding JQA and interviewed several potential witnesses.

The first suspect is reported to be a tall white male with dark hair. He is "Italian looking" and has a Boston accent.

The second suspect is a blonde male shorter than the first suspect. He was wearing light-colored pants during the time of the alleged assault.

UMPD spokesman Jim Lyons said police are actively investigating the case. Anyone with information on the incident is encouraged to contact UMass police through their anonymous tips hotline, 577-8477, or through their website, www.umass.edu/umpd.

More information will be released to the public as the police investigate, Lyons said.

The assault comes on the heels of another reported rape that took place outside of the Fine Arts Center on April 18. In that case, three men allegedly sexually assaulted a woman at around 10 p.m. That incident is still under investigation by UMass police.

Two students reported that they were assaulted outside of the "maze" near McGuirk Alumni Stadium on October 22.

The University provides several resources to help victims cope with sexual assault. The Everywoman's Center in Nelson House offers 24-hour counseling with a rape hotline at 545-0800. The UMass police department also offers a 24-hour hotline at 545-2677 that can be used as a steppingstone to refer victims who request help to counselors, officers, or other professionals.

-Dan Lamothe

JAMES W. HATTER/COLLEGIAN

Power to the people

Slam poet group Dead Prez performs in the Campus Center Auditorium as part of Black Pride Week.

U. Hawaii to train staffers in dealing with stalker cases

By Alicia Smith
Ka Leo O Hawai'i (U. Hawai'i)

(U-WIRE) HONOLULU – University of Hawaii officials and employees are receiving training to help those who have been sexually assaulted or are being stalked.

"The university takes issues of sexual assault and stalking very seriously," said Alan Yang, dean of student services. "The university provides support, prevention and response programs."

The university last fall sent several people to attend a seminar on the issue of stalking. The "Community at Large" event was sponsored by the state attorney general's office and funded by the Violence Against Women's office.

UH Security Capt. Donald Dawson, sex equity specialist Beverly McCleary, Christine Quemel, director of the Women's Center, and Allyson Tanoue, director of the Counseling Center, all received training on dealing with and preventing stalking.

"A mix of law enforcement, social service providers, prosecutors and corrections officers were in attendance to establish a collective support network for dealing with stalking," McCleary said.

Quemel said, "This is a start to coordinate a community response. Now more people, not only advocates, understand the indicators of stalking and responding appropriately."

Yang did not comment on the recent dorm rape but said, "The stalking workshop is an example of getting key university personnel training to prevent and respond to these incidents."

"Stalking is a serious problem across the country," Dawson said.

"National statistics indicate 13 percent of college women have or will experience stalking," McCleary said.

Dawson said local statistics may differ from national statistics partly because foreign students are more likely to feel embarrassed than local students and are less likely to report incidents.

Yang said, "I encourage students to report any suspicious incident right away. Students may be hesitant, and reporting is most important, in order for the university to provide proactive support and prevent future incidents."

The National Violence Against Women Survey defines stalking as "a course of conduct directed at a specific person that involves repeated visual, physical proximity, nonconsensual communication, or verbal, written or implied threats that cause a reasonable person fear."

In Hawaii harassment by stalking is a misdemeanor offense. Interstate stalking is a federal crime and is punishable by five years to life in prison, according to the Attorney General's Office.

Common harassment behavior includes sending unwanted letters and/or gifts, attempting to obtain private information about the victim from others, showing up uninvited to the victim's home or workplace, taking photos of or spying on the victim, cruelty to animals and intimidation of the victim or a witness.

Councils suggest library fee; alcohol changes

By S.J. Port
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The Faculty Senate will hear proposals to raise student fees in order to pay for library materials and changing alcohol policies at their regular meeting this Thursday.

Director of Libraries Margo Crist and Robert Rothstein, Chair of the Research Library Council will present an update of the library's situation and the steps their committees are taking to solidify its future to the Senate. The primary step in raising funds for the library, that the council is proposing is to add a library fee to student fees.

The Council's proposal suggests that if students at University of Massachusetts-Amherst were charged $50 a semester the library would receive $2.45 million in additional funds. The highest proposed fee would be $9 a credit per semester. If this fee were put into place the library would receive $4.62 million in additional resources.

According to the Council's statement, attaching library fees to students is accepted in ARL libraries at publicly supported institutions. In the University of Massachusetts system the Dartmouth and Boston campuses both have proposed fees for the upcoming semester.

The proposed fee for UMass-Dartmouth students would take effect in the spring of 2002, and would be $6 per credit, but with a maximum of $55 per semester. UMass-Boston's fee would take effect for the upcoming fall semester.

The council claims that state budget cuts devastated the library's research funding, causing the discontinuation of many publications subscriptions the library requires to maintain its reputation as a research library. The Educational and Reference Materials (ERM) line in the state fiscal year 2002 budget took a 64 percent cut, depleting the library resources for acquisitions by $3 million.

"At this budget level, no more books can be purchased for the remainder of the fiscal year. Over $1 million was cut from journal subscriptions and more must be cut to reach this dramatically lower level," the statement read. "The library's information resources are vital elements in the creation of new knowledge, in the teaching of students, and in the progress of scholarly research. A library is the possibility of new knowledge."

The Research Library Council suggested several ways within their statement to improve the budget situation through the University community.

"[RM is not reliable, and it is not predictable. Fluctuating funding is an unsuitable way to support a library. When journal subscriptions are canceled, gaps are created in the Library's collections, which are costly to fill later," the council stated.

They suggest developing a "mix of sources" including using a larger percent of the Campus General Operating Funds, a specified percentage of Research Trust Funds, and possibly a student fee dedicated exclusively to the library acquisitions budget.

Texas A&M already has in place a system of fees for the library which charges students six dollars per credit hour. The fees at Texas A&M have raised about $6.6 million per year. The University of Kansas also attaches a library fee to students costs, of one dollar per credit hour, which yields their library system $600,000 per year. Oklahoma State charges students $2.25 per credit hour, which nets the libraries just under $1.25 million per year.

"These data make it clear that student fees have to be pretty hefty if they are going to generate a substantial fraction of the library's needs," the report stated.

In addition the Health Council will present its annual report including a special report on their proposal for the establishment of a "Prevention of Alcohol Abuse Task Force (PAATF)."

The Faculty Senate's Health Council proposes that the Chancellor establish a task force of faculty, students, staff and administrators to conduct an assessment of the appropriateness of the current University alcohol policies and their effectiveness.

PAATF would be made of five faculty members (from various schools and colleges), the Vice Chancellor for Student affairs, the Chair of the Faculty Senate Health Council, the director of Health Services, the Chief of Police, two graduate students (nominated by the Graduate Student Senate), two undergraduate students (nominated by the Student Government Association) and two staff representatives.

The proposal would be accordance with the agreement of the Statewide College and University Coalition on Underage drinking and Problem Drinking. PAATF would be responsible for monitoring the implementation of new alcohol policies on campus, and the state of alcohol abuse by students. The group would work over the summer to identify the major problems within the University's alcohol policies, and for students on campus, making recommendations to the Faculty Senate upon the return to regular class session in September.

In addition, Jenny Spencer and Mary Deane Sorcinelli, co-chairs of the Ad Hoc Committee on Undergraduate Education concerning the status of the committee will address the Faculty Senate.

The Faculty Senate will meet Thursday, May 9, at 3:30 p.m. in Herter Hall 227.

Drinking legislation sparks U. of Illinois protest

By Dorothea Hunter & Whet Moser
CHICAGO MAROON (U. CHICAGO)

(U-WIRE) CHICAGO – The Student Government of University of Illinois (UIUC SG) is protesting a proposed revision to the Illinois Vehicle Code that it claims would infringe upon the constitutional rights of minors. The revision would allow the state to suspend or revoke an underage offender's driver's license without a hearing if caught buying, attempting to buy or consuming alcohol.

"House Bill 5941 is not only a clear breach of a young person's right to a fair trial, but it has further-reaching implications that go even so far as age discrimination," said Andrew Erskine, chairman of governmental affairs for the Illinois Student Government.

The Illinois House of Representatives unanimously passed House Bill 5941 April 2; it is currently in the state's Senate Rules Committee. The bill rapidly is gaining support there as well. "I think it's worth a try," Rep. Tom Berns, R-Urbana, Ill., told The Daily Illini. "It sends the message that if you do that, you're going to have your license revoked."

On April 23 a group of students went to the state capital in Springfield, Ill., to lobby against the passage of the bill. The UIUC SG is sponsoring a statewide petition against the bill. Protestors say the state is trying to control the numbers of underage drinkers by imposing severe punishments, but the bill is a direct violation of the right to due process as stated in the Fifth Amendment of the U.S. Constitution and the 14th Amendment of the Illinois state constitution.

Most think the suspension of driver's licenses is less lenient than fines and criminal penalties but argue it will lay too harsh a burden on students whose licenses are revoked – especially ones who live on large campuses where cars are essential to everyday student life.

As a result, protestors fear the amendment will encourage students to avoid bars and similarly controlled drinking atmospheres and push them into situations outside the reach of authorities.

"Although this bill attempts to deter underage drinking and promote alcohol safety, it will in fact increase unsafe drinking at locations that are not properly supervised," said Brian Colgan, chief of staff for Illinois Student Government.

The amendment is another step in the state's battle against underage drinking, which has resulted in high-profile incidents at Urbana-Champaign. Last March city and state police raided three campus-area bars the day after St. Patrick's Day and arrested 16 underage drinkers. Student Government representatives, however, say the state's focus on punitive measures and not health awareness put minors at risk.

"Underage people are going to drink no matter what the consequences," said J.D. Grom, director of public relations for the UIUC SG. "By creating a stiffer punishment the state government is decreasing the chances of underage people who need medical assistance from acquiring help."

U. Missouri braces for budget cuts

By Chase Davis
The Missourian (U. Missouri)

(U-WIRE) COLUMBIA, Mo. – There's a trick to taking a punch and tension is a big part of it.

And as Missouri lawmakers prepare to drive the hammer down later this week with their final approved budget, many University of Missouri departments are waiting in limbo – tense and anticipating a blow that either could glance off departmental operating budgets or knock the wind clean out of them.

"What makes people more uneasy than anything is the unknown," said Todd Coleman, executive director of the MU Alumni Association. "All we can do is wait."

The General Assembly constitutionally is required to pass a balanced budget by Friday, and Gov. Bob Holden is expected to approve it in full.

University of Missouri system appropriations are set to be cut by 10 percent, but Chancellor Richard Wallace also warned of a 15 percent cut last week, which could result in the layoff of 200 to 250 MU faculty and staff.

The extra cuts could come because of a more than $200 million state revenue shortfall. Legislators still are working to plug the new deficit, as MU departments await their decisions.

"The bottom line is that nobody wants to lay off people, but in some cases that looks like the inevitable," Coleman said.

Professor of biochemistry Gerald Hazelbauer said potential program cuts combined with staff loss could hurt the quality of student services in his department.

Infrastructure makes the term higher in higher education meaningful, he said. "One of the things that students appreciate is access and friendliness, and that first contact is usually a staff person."

He also said the long-term ache of heavy budget blows could drive other faculty and staff away from MU.

"Talented people always have other options," he said.

College of Arts and Science spokeswoman Nancy Moen said she hasn't had time to think about the severity of budget cuts. She and others in the department have been too busy working.

Private funding is so critical now, more than ever before," she said.

These days are filled from morning until night. It's just frantic now; it's so important.

She said her staff does not often discuss the effects of the cuts because they are busy working on fund raising.

"I think the staff here believes in this place as much as the faculty," she said.

Professor of law Dale Whitman said instead of feeling disdained about the budget situation, most faculty members he talks to feel "philosophical."

"People here have seen this sort of cycle several times in the past. I guess we're accustomed to it," he said.

He also said the law school has more maneuvering room than many other departments because it has a number of faculty leaving for reasons other than the budget. He said those positions probably will remain vacant temporarily to save money.

Apart from being concerned about job loss, other staff are concerned about upgrading services provided to faculty and students.

Mike Watson, associate director for computer services at MU, said revenue shortfalls leave some faculty with computers incapable of basic e-mail delivery.

But until the final decision comes down from Jefferson City, faculty and staff are forced to play the waiting game.

JAMES SCHAEFER/COLLEGIAN

Piece by piece
The new School of Management addition begins to take shape as it nears closer to completion.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar year. It is a student-run newspaper independent from the University of Massachusetts operating solely on general income and advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life. It is a non-profit corporation. The 32 years of Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1970. The Daily Collegian has been published daily since 1987 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1, 1991. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 9 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Sam Wilkinson Editor-in-Chief
Matthew F. Sacco Managing Editor
Amy Gargaruta Business Manager
Shimauli Dave Production Manager
Jake Lilien Diversity Editor
Mike Kulak Editorial Production Manager
Jason Smith Advertising Manager

Mike Delano Arts & Living Editor
Matthew Despres Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jennifer Eastwood Features Editor
Catherine Turner News Editor
Tibora Gireyze-Blum Photography Editor
Eric Soderstrom Sports Editor
Brent Siniawski Finance Manager
Charlie Jacco Distribution Manager

Morgan Taylor Advertising Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majcrowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Cara Murphy Assistant Finance Manager
Shawn Daugherty Assistant Business Manager
Megan Shannon Assistant Advertising Manager

WANTED
STUDENTS WITH TRUCK OR BUS DRIVING EXPERIENCE
WANTED FOR SUMMER WORK
EARN $110-$140 PER DAY
Working approximately 14 days in June and 12 days in August.
One or both sessions available. Possibly some July work.
Call 1-888-949-5089

www.dailycollegian.com

CASH FOR BOOKS
WE PAY TOP DOLLAR
Jeffery Amherst College Store
55 SOUTH PROSPECT ST. AMHERST
253-3870 253-7816

DRIVE AN EXOTIC CAR Private organization wishing to remain anonymous seeks drivers for fast-paced competitive project. Candidates must be young, energetic and willing to take risks. For more details and liability release, go to www.testdriveinfo.com.

HOUSING UMASS AMHERST SERVICES
Fall 2002 Housing Assignment Information
Housing Assignment Office
● 235 Whitmore Administration Building
● www.housing.umass.edu
413.545.2100
The following is important Housing Information for Fall 2002:
◆ The last day to submit a request for an assignment change or application is Friday, May 24, 2002.
◆ If you are eligible and wish to cancel your housing assignment, please call the Housing Assignment Office before May 31, 2002 to avoid a cancellation fee.
✔ There will be a $100.00 cancellation fee from June 3rd - June 28th.
✔ There will be a $200.00 cancellation fee from July 1st - July 31st.
✔ If you cancel after July 31st there is a $300.00 cancellation fee.

GEO ELECTIONS ARE NOW IN PROGRESS!
In these difficult times we have to be Strong and Stand Together...
VOTE for the UNITY Slate!

GEO President
x Heysoll Rodriguez-Soto

GEO Vice-President
x Vira Douangmany

Steering Committee Member At- Large
x Karina Barbalace
Only Mail In Ballots received in the P.O.Box by 4 PM May 10th will count!
Please mail yours in today!!!
No Ballot...
Lost Ballot...
Get a New Ballot!
Contact GEO Elections Committee Members:
mpo@cs.umass.edu
oliver@physics.umass.edu

JAMES SCHAEFER/COLLEGIAN

Sun bathing
A stone statue of cupid gets some rays outside the Renaissance study center.

Adjunct will sue Georgetown U.

By Amanda McGrath
The Hoya (Georgetown U.)

(U-WIRE) WASHINGTON – Professor Gina Park, an adjunct in the French department at Georgetown University, is filing an affirmative action complaint against the university. She is alleging discrimination against single mothers after her contract was not renewed for next semester. Park also said that the department has a "revolving door" policy toward its adjuncts that she believes hurts both the careers of the professors and the quality of undergraduate education.

Park, who has worked in the French department for seven years, said her contract was not renewed because emergencies involving her three children sometimes caused her to miss class. She said several attempts to reach a compromise of a one-semester extension of her contract were unsuccessful. Park said that because chair of the French department, Deborah Lesko-Baker, had not agreed to mediation services offered through the Office of Affirmative Action Programs, her next step was to pursue a formal complaint against the university.

"I hate to say that as it stands now and from what I feel right now, I'm ready to go full force with a complaint," Park said. She said she regretted that a compromise could not be reached.

Lesko-Baker would not comment on the matter. "It is not our practice to comment upon internal personnel issues," Lesko-Baker said via e-mail, citing "the importance of our maintaining appropriate procedures in this matter in fairness to all concerned."

In a letter dated March 12, Lesko-Baker said she would not reconsider her decision to terminate Park's position, reiterating the temporary conditions specified in her contract. "I would remind you that this department faces financial constraints and that you and I have discussed issues related to your performance on several occasions during your time in the department," Lesko-Baker said in the letter to Park.

According to Park, the performance issues to which Lesko-Baker refers primarily concern the occasional missed class or tardiness that Park said were the result of emergencies involving her three children, ages 11, 8 and 7.

Park said that to her knowledge, there were very few negative comments about her teaching performance. She said Lesko-Baker had reported to her that one student complained when Park's cell phone rang during class, but said her students had never complained directly to her and had been very supportive.

Chance Perspective Entertainment Co
Graduation Parties
Your Parents are Paying...
GET A DJ
HIP-HOP REGGAE R&B
413.883.1144
gemini Numark PYLE PRO

McMurphy's
featuring...
Live Music
THE GUITAR DUDES
every wednesday
NO COVER
positive ID required

Pregnant? Confused?
Making the best choice for your baby—and yourself
When you're pregnant, there are many decisions that need to be made. It can be a very confusing time. In order for you to make the best decision for you and your baby, it is important to learn about all the choices that are available.
Brightside for Families and Children's Adoption Resource Center can help. A resource for pregnant women for more than 100 years, we'll answer your questions and help you understand your options. You'll have the information, counseling and time you need to make your own decision.
We've helped thousands of women through difficult times and decisions. Call us if we can help you.
Brightside FOR FAMILIES & CHILDREN
Adoption Resource Center
2112 Riverdale Street, West Springfield, MA 01089 • 413-827-4258
Brightside for Families and Children is a member of the Sisters of Providence Health System and Catholic Health East, sponsored by the Sisters of Providence

Providence
School Of Continuing Education
Need to build credit?
Stick Around and Study
When: Summer School Session 1
May 28th-June14th
Summer School Session 2
June 24th-August 2nd
Time: 6:00 - 9:00pm
For Further Information call (401) 865-2487 or email ssilva@providence.edu check out our website: www.providence.edu/sce

Attention

Graduates of 2003
Rooms Go On Sale for Graduation 2003 Weekend (May 23 & 24)
on
Wednesday, May 14, 2002 at 10am
● Reservations must be made for both Friday & Saturday night. The cost is $250.00
● Reservations for 3rd night, (Sunday, May 25th) can also be made for an additional $55.
Campus Center Hotel
Call 549-6000

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM WRITING IN A TIMELY MANNER ABOUT THE ISSUES THAT MATTER TO STUDENTS ED/OP EDITOR: MATTHEW DESPRES

Safe haven laws should apply in Massachusetts

It seems like a logical idea.

One would assume that every state in the nation would implement safe haven laws. These laws by their nature are set up in order to save the lives of newborn infants by allowing their parents to drop them off in a safe place such as a hospital or a shelter rather than abandoning them.

These laws that have been taken up in some form in 40 states across the nation are designed to protect the lives of infants and prevent what could be a potentially lethal situation. This means that literally 90 percent of the population has laws that protect children.

So why are they absent in Massachusetts?

Through five proven cases of infant abandonment within the state in the last eight months the facts are on the side of a law that would assist in saving the lives of children.

There was a case that occurred in Connecticut in which two parents, not realizing that there was a lack of safe haven laws brought their newborn infant over state lines into Massachusetts and dropped the child off at a hospital. The state of Massachusetts then prosecuted them for abandoning the baby.

By prosecuting individuals for leaving their newborn child in the hands of a doctor or a police officer we as a state are sending the wrong message. We are creating a climate of fear that promotes infanticide rather than less dangerous behavior.

While many argue that the lack of laws encourages more responsibility in terms of setting up legitimate adoptions, however the only thing that it does is to limit options.

In a state where the climate surrounding the issue of abortion and of contraception can at times be heated, it seems that safe haven laws would give parents another option and option that may save lives.

It is in general better policy to give people within the state and in the country better resources in terms of dealing with situations that are potentially traumatic.

Through an increased amount of resources the state may be able to save lives and open up a variety of other options to parents in Massachusetts. Safe havens are a good idea.

Implementing a law of that type within this state is just good sense, the question shouldn't be why should Massachusetts adopt the law but instead why haven't we yet?

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

The long and winding road
Wilkinson prepares to wind down

SAM WILKINSON

I hate journalism. I hate its cold detached approach. I hate its refusal to judge. I have had the wrong job for three years. Yet, I love the Collegian.

And despite the love, I know that it's time to move on down the line.

I'd like to believe that I did some good work while I was here. I'd like to believe that I wrote some good stories, that I made a few good points, that I contributed to a few good newspapers. I'd like to believe that I did a good job.

Next year, I will be forgotten, and that is how it should be. Every year, some senior confuses his or her role and waits for accolades and remembrances that will never come. It won't be me.

When I was sixteen, Three Wells told me I could hang out at his newspaper, West Virginia University's Daily Athenaeum. When I was seventeen, Josh Green told me that I needed to write stories. "So simple that my grandmother would want to read them, and so good that she'd want to do something about it." So I've tried to do that. Three moved to Oregon to test kayaks after college, and Josh kept a gun in his boot from time to time. Both influenced me professionally, but in different ways. I owe them, but I can never repay them. I don't think they're waiting for the bills anyway.

I offended my share of people while I was here. I suppose that was by design – by which I mean that I meant to write the things I did. Rarely do.

I remember reading something the next day and going, "oops." People sometimes assumed I was just trying to rile the community up, and I was, but I wasn't lying when I wrote what I did.

And there are those that I never offended. The community members from WMUA who have stolen our radio station from us. The feminists who condescend to their younger sisters. The conservatives convinced that a revolution is coming. The liberals who feel the same way. There was more to do, but these uncompleted rants are not regrets. They are things that have passed me and entered the ether, where someone else is free to grab them.

> "Always do new things. If they don't work, then don't do them again, but at least know that they don't."

Of course, the community has made habit of offending me right back. I've been called a sexist by professors and students and former/current employees (maybe I'm most proud of being able to say that women not only have more than 50 percent of our newsroom's editorial positions, but that nine of the newspaper's 15 most important positions are held by women). Various campus character's have blustered on and on about the Collegian's patriarchy, and those people are stupid.

I want different memories on September 11, 2002. My memories of this past September 11 flip-flop: worst day of our lives, best work of our lives, and back again. I heard this quote from an ignorant person – "Isn't this great? We finally have our own JFK."

I will remember the truly talented people I worked with, too numerous to mention in totality here, but especially Lisa and Iaret (I-Bo?), Adam and Ryan too. I will remember those who did genuinely good work, take your breath away stuff, Eric especially, but also Rob and Dave. There are the friends of mine who will scatter into the wind in the coming weeks –

Jim and Jake and Jay and Jess and Cathy and Ken and more... and there are those who scattered before. Kathleen and Deb especially.

There are those closest to me, who will have to wait.

Of course, there is next year's Collegian. It will be the first in three years that I cannot change, alter, improve upon. I can only read. Frankly, I am excited for the possibility. Sacco is ready to steer the ship, if only he keeps his focus. Scott and Matt are two of the sharpest, smartest leaders the Collegian's newsroom has ever had, both destined to be far better than those of us who came before. There are exciting editors too.

There are other memories of my time here. Of students threatening takeovers. Of fights with critics. Of office baseball. Of broken computers. Of stress. Of pain. Of success. Of everything. And they are endless.

Finally, a sojourn. At the Daily Athenaeum, I propelled myself forward on two tenets – "Set a goal this week and meet it. Next week, set a higher goal and meet it. Continue." and "Every so often, relax and think about the good work you've done. Then remember that you're not getting paid to relax. Get back to work and work harder." They seem like cheesy statements, but they drove me then. Now? I leave those after me with only my office mantra. "Always do new things. If they don't work, then don't do them again, but at least know that they don't."

Sam Wilkinson is a Collegian Columnist.

ED/OP: the op of ed.

Roses from my friends

People wear masks of all types everyday all day. Some never take them off. Some change them every hour. People are different within every role they play in their lives.

When I'm in class, I'm shy and I hardly speak to anyone. My professors know me as my full name and my friends call me by a nickname. As much as I'd like to think I keep these worlds separate, they aren't. When I slip and accidentally write "Tihi" on the attendance sheet, confusing the professor, the once separate worlds collide. When I look at my friends at school, I catch myself before I call them by the name of a friend from home.

Why do we keep different faces on with different people? Maybe it is because we are trying to see the one that fits, or at least narrow it down.... Because you will never know you don't like something until you try it. We try on these different masks until we find the one that fits.

When I first arrived here I had my shy, scared mask on. I had left my family and my close circle of friends for a place that was foreign and for people that I didn't know. How will I ever like it here? Will I find friends similar to the ones that I had left on the West Coast? And now that I'm transferring, the same types of questions run through my head. Why do I want to put myself through this again? Will I be able to find friends at my new school that will compare to the ones I have at UMass?

Then one rainy afternoon walking back from Puffers Pond I realized that the characteristics that I had cherished in my hometown friends, I had found right here at school. I thought that I acted differently around my friends here at school and my friends at home. But then I realized that my two significant sets of close friends were very much similar. If both groups were to ever meet, it would be like a parallel universe colliding.

My Arcata (I'll put my hometown name in front of my hometown friends to differentiate) Terra is wise beyond her years, she is determined and driven, and not afraid to follow her heart. She is an active participant in what is occurring in my life at all points in time. She knows exactly what she wants to be and how she is going to achieve it. My friend Sarah too is confident of her goals and can achieve anything she puts her mind to. She will become an awesome geography teacher who travels the world scuba diving and exploring the underwater world.

Arcata Karis is loud, wild, hilarious, compassionate and can make me laugh on command, much like my first UMass friend Becky. Becky made me laugh at 5 a.m. practices and after 2K races. She has to be one of the most genuine people I have met, completely devoted to her friendships. She also took me home to do my laundry and enjoy the (equally hilarious) company of her mother.

Arcata Erin has a quiet, modest and shy exterior, but on the interior she is insanely talented, funny and continues to amaze me with her creations. Matt's presence reminds me of her. He constantly enlightens me with his musical and literary passions. I can't even begin to describe all of his talents. He is an immensely talented, yet modest writer and shares many of the same quirky interests as me.

Arcata Sarah is an unashamed, intelligent and opinionated woman. She can create something out of nothing and make it appear beautifully. Lauren emulates this in her strength, good attitude and passion for anything she puts her mind to. She is a dedicated athlete who knows how to push herself towards a common goal.

TIBORA GIRCZYC-BLUM

Last but not least, my friend Arcata Holly. She is adventurous, sparkling and loving. She has always been there for me, held me when I was falling down, listened when I had to tell someone something and believed in everything. Scott helped fill that void, by being everything she is but with way more Dylan. He calms me down when I'm upset, listens to my random rantings and laughs at my lame attempt at being funny.

We look for familiar characteristics to aid in the hardest transitions. When I transfer in the fall I'll be more apt to notice people that remind me of the ones I'm missing. I'll look for Scott's bouncing walk, Lauren's blonde curly poof and Jen's sarcasm; wit. I'll do a double take when I think I see little Sarah, or hear U2 or Pearl Jam and think that Matt can't be far away.

> "I'm not disappearing, and you will see me again; I'm just off on another adventure."

I realized that I have a different persona academically, but when it comes down to my personality, wherever I am it will stay the same.

As Tom Petty croons on his Wildflower CD "It's time to move on, time to get going /what lies ahead I have no way of knowing." This is where the sheer terror and excitement lie in my decision to leave. Not knowing what will happen in the future, but knowing what has happened in the past. I'll be alone, nervous, scared, and excited all at the same time. "Someday I'll find my peace of mind/I will share my wealth with all of human kind."

Maybe in my life I will traverse the country nomadically like Sal in On the Road, minus the womanizing, and violence. I'm not disappearing, and you will see me again; I'm just off on another adventure. I'll just keep asking myself, "What is that feeling when you're driving away from people and they recede on the plain till you see their specks dispersing? –it's the too huge world vaulting us, and it's good-by. But we lean forward to the next crazy venture beneath the skies."

Tibora Girczyc-Blum is a Collegian staff member.

"If you're gonna walk the earth, then walk it proud. And if you're gonna say the word, you got to say it loud."

Goodbye, part two:
Kevin signs off

"So empathy for the devil, keep that in mind. You buy the ticket, you take the ride. And I'll get a little heavier than you imagined, well then maybe there's no go to forced conscientious expansion. Tune in, freak out, get beat-up." – Hunter S. Thompson

If you were around during the Spring 00 semester, you may remember that I wrote a column very similar to this one. I won't be needed to [illegible] another [illegible] since it's a long story.

KEVIN MONAHAN

I'm really leaving this time. I've postponed graduating long enough and the University is sending me my degree whether I like it or not this time. Rather than go out quietly, I've decided to take another opportunity to reflect on my five-year – not counting the time I spent as a drop-out/ tenure at this institute of higher learning. When I said my goodbyes to the campus in '99, I was aware that I'd be spending at least one more semester here. I did not expect to leave my diploma hanging from a one-credit thread for over two years. (Don't ask why. I took a full semester for just one credit. It's complicated). But in the two-plus years I spent working in the private sector, I've seen what the workforce has to offer me, and it ain't pretty. I've explored the sleazy world of commissioned sales (?... If your cell phone doesn't work at home, just give us a call. We'll have a new tower put up outside your house within 24-hours. Really!"). I've worked as a school photographer (the worst job I've ever had. Don't do it!), a bank teller (a truly soul-crushing experience) and a telephone researcher. None of these jobs brought me even a fraction of the enjoyment that I got working as the Music Editor at the Collegian. I'd like to thank Mike D. for allowing me to write down here again. I almost forgot how much I enjoyed writing for Arts and it's something I hope to continue at another outlet. I also miss the old school Collegian crew. Bryan, Rob, Emily, Lama, Mike and Staces (even Marty K.) – I know there's no chance you're reading this, but I'd like to give you all a shout out anyway.

Being a full-time student again after a long absence from academia helped put things into perspective for me, although I don't really recommend it to anyone. I've wasted almost three years of my life hopping from job to job, but I view it as therapeutic. I now realize the benefits of being a full time student – and it's not just the discounted movie tickets! If you've got some time left at this school please take advantage of these benefits, something I didn't do for my first two years. Go abroad. This might be the only opportunity you will ever have to do so. Take it! There are so many programs; you can even go after you graduate. Look into it. Start an RSO. I did. I would have resurrected it this semester, but I've been far too busy. If there are any film students reading this, please bring back the Student Film Society. Hold some midnight screenings. Take some trips to NYC. Go to the Film Studies office in South College for information on how to do this or email me at Trauma_Sponge@yahoo.com. I know it's cliche, and every other goodbye column is telling you to do so, but get involved in something. I have so many fewer regrets than I would have otherwise because of it.

> "Being a full time student again after a long absence from academia helped put things into perspective for me..."

To the residents of Butterfield, please realize the legacy you have inherited, for better or worse. My two years in that dorm was the most cathartic experience of my life, and it would give me no greater pleasure than seeing the community that once thrived there reappear, stronger than ever. The University's "reprogramming" is nothing more than a fascist attempt to stifle one of the things that gave this campus a pulse. The destruction that caused its dissolution was nothing that doesn't happen in any given Southwest dorm over the course of a semester. Bring back the kitchen! Fly the Jolly Roger! Long live the Free State of Butterfield!

So ends my swan song as an undergrad, minus the bitchy tone of my previous column ("The Boy With the Thorn in His Side" May 12, 1999). I really want to thank everyone I've come into contact with that have touched my life in some way. Most of all I want to thank my beloved Anna, without whom I would have put a bullet in my head a long time ago. As I say my farewells to the University, I also say my farewells to the sleepy west of the woody east and the Valley full O'Pioneer. The end of 2002 will also see the end of my twenty-four years of living in Massachusetts, the last six and a half of which were spent in the Valley. I'll have at least another six months here to contemplate the sorrow and excitement of closing this chapter of my life.

Kevin Monahan was a Collegian staff member from Fall 1997-Fall 1999, and Spring 2002, and the Music Editor from Fall 1998-Spring 1999. And yes, he still thinks the Barenaked Ladies suck.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 5.08.02 ARTS EDITOR: MIKE DELANO

Spider-Man v. Superman

Gutter Culture with Christopher Scott Kenny

While watching Spider-Man this Friday, I couldn't help but think of Richard Donner's Superman film. For me, that is the movie to beat in regards to comic hero films. Don't let anyone fool you – Tim Burton's Batman might have been stylish, but it had some real storytelling issues.

It is Superman that rules the comic hero genre, if only for one reason: Christopher Reeve. The man was an absolute genius. He convinced me that Superman could hide behind goofy, horn-rimmed glasses, a nerds hairstyle and a posture that spoke to Clark's apparent lack of self-esteem. Reeve was phenomenal. His performance was so spectacular that he redefined Superman for a whole new generation. Rather than playing him as the prototypical Dudley Do-Right, he hooked into Superman's desires, angst and struggles in a way that decades of comic book writing could not achieve. Reeve owned Superman by the end of the movie.

It is with great pleasure that I say that Tobey Maguire does the same thing to Peter Parker. His understated presence, his nerdy-but-cool persona, perfectly suited the dweeby high schooler who would become part of New York's iconography. The role of Spider-Man was a tough one to nail because he is one of the most vibrant characters in comic book history, with elements of his personality that seemingly contradict each other. How do you marry the introverted, broody Peter Parker with the wisecracking, self-assured Spider-Man? How do you make that seem natural? Maguire pulls it off in a way that no one else could have. He was the absolute right actor for the role. By the end of the movie, he, like Reeve with Superman, owned Peter Parker.

Another strength of Superman, one that sets it apart from lesser movies of the genre, is the quality to transcend simple action-adventure. It tries to frame itself in different genres, most notably romance. The back and forth between Superman (and Clark) and Lois Lane were the most interesting parts of the film. Superman's first interview with Lois and their subsequent flight over the cityscape of Metropolis is one of the most memorable and romantic scenes in film history.

Similarly, Sam Raimi focuses on Peter's quest to get Mary Jane, "Like all stories worth telling," Peter says at the start of the movie, "it started with a girl." The movie is about the romance developing between Peter and Mary Jane just as much as it is about the struggle between Green Goblin and Spider-Man. This actually allows for character development not usually seen in other comic hero movies. The entire first half the movie seems to be devoted to Peter trying to get Mary Jane's attention. Even when he gets his powers, his first thoughts are on how he is going to utilize them to get her to notice him. All this humanizes Peter, making him the relatable everyman that is seen in the comics.

Of course Spider-Man has its problems. One of my main problems with the movie was Green Goblin. When I heard he was going to be the villain of the movie, I cringed a little bit. He seemed a little too ridiculous of a concept to be pulled off well in live action. They actually do a pretty good job but I felt like his motivation was was too vaguely defined. Also, one does not cast a creepy looking guy like Willem Dafoe in the role of the Goblin and not utilize his face. When in his full regalia, his head was completely covered, robbing Dafoe of any chance to use his scary face to its fullest potential. I felt that the costume should have worked around his face, giving him a mask or makeup that would have given him a chance to be more expressive. Dafoe is a great character actor and the costume that they gave him hindered his talents instead of enhancing them.

Many anal fan-boys were agitated with changes made in the movie. For instance, the film version has Peter spewing webs out of his wrists whereas the Spider-Man of the comics constructs web-shooters, a mechanism that shot webbing. This stuff didn't bother me too much. It didn't affect the spirit of the characters or the themes of the story.

But which is better, Superman or Spider-Man? Too close to call since Superman has its fair share of flaws (no movie is perfect). Both Superman and Spider-Man stand together as the best of this genre. But there are others just around the bend. The teaser trailer for Hulk, shown before the movie, blew my socks off. And Marvel is finally on the ball, promoting their books. It was nice to see ushers giving out free copies of Ultimate Spider-Man #1, one of the strongest Marvel books out right now and perhaps one of the best portrayals of Spider-Man ever written.

Sam Raimi is not the only filmmaker who is going to try his hand at web-head. Kevin Smith, the writer-director of Clerks and Chasing Amy, just signed a two-year exclusive contract with Marvel Comics. For that period of time, he will be writing Amazing Spider-Man. With a great movie and strong books, it is a great time to be a Spider-Man fan.

Christopher Scott Kenny is a Collegian Columnist.

COURTESY SONY PICTURES

Spiderman a comic book triumph.

*S*piderman *S*oars

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

SPIDER-MAN
Directed by Sam Raimi
Starring Tobey Maguire, Kirsten Dunst and Willem Dafoe
Playing at CineMark 12 in Hadley

Last summer's movie blowout kicked off with the bloated and gaseous The Mummy Returns, a movie that made one feel as though they were watching a videogame that someone else was playing. It set the tone for the summer that followed: one hollow, lumbering behemoth after another. These films – the Jurassic Park 3 and the Pearl Harbor – weren't designed to provide entertainment, but to dish out hype and devour money the opening weekend.

If Mummy Returns set the tone for the Bummer of 2001 (oops, Summer of 2001), then the hotly anticipated big screen version of Spider-Man gives hope for the coming crop of event spectaculars. Whereas Mummy was club-footed and unwieldy, Spider-Man is nimble and fleet. The Mummy Returns plods along, weighed down by its budget; Spider-Man leaps along like its titular character. Spider-Man is a dizzy and nifty bit of high-wire grace.

Spider-Man is Marvel's answer to DC Comics legends Superman and Batman. For those who have spent their lives in an isolation chamber, Spider-Man is the tale of Peter Parker, an awkward high schooler who is bitten by a genetically altered spider (in the comics, it was a radioactive spider) and develops strange spider-like powers. He can leap great distances, gains a powerful sixth sense and discovers he can shoot a sticky web from his wrist (another change from the comic, in which the web-slinger was mechanical not organic). After his beloved Uncle Ben is murdered, Parker decides to use his newfound powers by becoming the costumed crime fighter Spider-Man.

Meanwhile, Parker pines for his pretty, popular classmate Mary Jane Watson, the literal girl next door.

Directed by Sam Raimi with acrobatic panache, Spider-Man is slick and marvelous escapist entertainment. Raimi is best known as the director of the splatter Evil Dead films, those '80s cult classics in which he unleashed a plethora of cartoon-like ghouls in the woods and shot them in a frenzied blast of dazed energy. Raimi has gone "respectable" in recent years (The Gift, A Simple Plan) but here he returns to the world of zingy rubber band filmmaking. A lifelong fan of Spider-Man, Raimi has infectious joy in choreographing Spider-Man's swings and leaps through the Manhattan skyline.

One of the best scenes in all of Spider-Man is when Parker discovers his new talents. After his web shoots off in the school cafeteria, Parker heads out onto the street where he leaps over the tops of buildings and climbs up the sides of walls. Later, he decimates a pro-wrestler during a cage match. The Batman movies were directed with a portentous Gothic doom (until the crayoned-in kitsch of Batman and Robin), but Raimi crafts Spider-Man with the giddy, child-like joy of a comic fan. It is the first comic book movie that puts not just the comic book on screen, but also makes the viewer feel like part of the story.

There have been some complaints lodged against the movie's special effects, and truth be told, some of the FX do show their seams. Yet that is hardly a problem. The combination of good and bad effects – the seamless and the glaring – gives the movie a sense of hyper-reality, a Manhattan that could exist but is not quite right. The production design, which scrambles the geography of the Manhattan, only serves to heighten the dream-like, alien feel of the production.

Raimi's talents stretch to the casting of the movie. Tobey Maguire, the quizzical and earnest young actor from The Cider House Rules, is hardly the first actor that springs to mind when casting a big-budget summer action movie. But Maguire is an inspired choice for Peter Parker. His soft-voiced delivery matches Parker's mild-mannered nerd persona and he manages to capture Parker's torn allegiances between the hero and the human. He strikes plenty of sparks with Kirsten Dunst, as Mary Jane, culminating in a screen kiss that is likely to be remembered in the annals of screen kisses for years to come. The role of Mary Jane is really a nothing role, but Dunst, a vibrant and canny young actress, imbues it with life.

Spider-Man dazzles with its elastic elegance and giddy humor. If anything, it may usher in a new era of user-friendly blockbusters. It offers what every summer movie should be designed to offer: release, not hype.

One minute men Guided By Voices' newest CD

By Jesse Buday
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

GUIDED BY VOICES
Universal Truths and Cycles
Matador

Good news for all you Guided by Voices fans out there. They've got a new album, Universal Truths and Cycles. It's only been a year since their last record, Isolation Drills, came out and while that album was great this album is better. The Dayton, Ohio band has gone back to making records for the indie-rock giant Matador Records. For the past two records the band had a home with the major label TVT records, but they left TVT so that they could have their artistic control back. This means a return to the more "lo-fi" sounds of their previous records and a return to the classic GBV one-minute songs, gracefully sandwiched on the album between longer songs.

In his mid-thirties, lead singer and principal songwriter Robert Pollard, left his day job as a 4th grade teacher in order to go on tour and support his weekend project/band, Guided by Voices. The Mighty GBV, as their fans affectionately call them, started to gain fame in the early 90's independent music scene along with bands like Built to Spill, Modest Mouse and GBV's hometown Dayton peers, The Breeders. They made records on cheap equipment giving them their trademark, lo-fi sound. Buried beneath the basement-tape hiss laid some of the catchiest melody since the Beatles. Pollard possesses a talent for writing extremely short songs that carry along and lead to one melodic hook then end right after. It's a trap; it tapes you in and then disappears almost as soon as it started, leaving the listener craving more. At the height of their career, they released the classic album Alien Lanes, a 28-song collection that contains more hooks than a meat locker.

COURTESY OF ATTACK RECORDS

Ex-teacher rocks out with his crew.

On average, Pollard releases three to four records a year. Many bands, at some point in their career, release a CD of unreleased material that may contain some previously unheard songs, but is mostly comprised of "alternate takes" of released songs or live versions of songs. Song-writing factory Robert Pollard released Suitcase, a four disc, 100 song box-set of previously unheard GBV material (only recommended to hard-core fans). To top that collection's "coolness," Pollard gave a false band name to every song in the set.

Now at 44-years-old, Robert Pollard still rocks. Onstage, he can still drink you under the table with large amounts of Bud Lite. He'll chain-smoke more cigarettes than you would ever imagine consuming. He'll do jump kicks and twirl the microphone around like Roger Daltry from the Who.

New songs with titles like "The Weeping Bogeyman," "I love U," and "Factory of Raw Essentials" are a return to the minute long structure. Songs like "Pretty Bombs" and "From a Voice Plantation" represent growth in a 20-year-old band that is still looking to explore new territories. Songs like the title track "Universal Truths and Cycles" and "Christian Animation Torch Carriers" are among the best songs Robert Pollard has ever written.

So if your tired of listening to jam bands, Creed, funk-metal, whiny Emo boys, Britney Spears or any variation of the same, and you're ready to welcome a band that cranks out gorgeous pop melodies like Nike cranks out Air Jordans (or if you're just intrigued by the idea of a 44-year-old school teacher-turned-rockstar), for Pete's sake, buy a case of Bud Lite and check out Guided by Voices.

Universal Truths and Cycles comes out June 18th, and while you are eagerly waiting, check out 1994's Bee Thousand (Scat Records), 1995's Alien Lanes (Matador Records), and the darker record, 1996's Under the Bushes, Under the Stars (Matador Records).

Ben Affleck talks, Texas style, about new flick The Sum of All Fears

By Katy Rozelle
Daily Texan (U. Texas-Austin)

(U-WIRE) AUSTIN – It seems like everywhere you turn, Ben Affleck is there. Trying to control a film career that hasn't stopped skyrocketing since he and Matt Damon received an Academy Award and a Golden Globe for co-writing the Good Will Hunting screenplay in 1998, Affleck's face is always somewhere to be seen.

From Armageddon to Pearl Harbor and recently, in Changing Lanes opposite Samuel L. Jackson – it seems the offers just keep getting bigger. And this summer, Affleck has accepted the biggest offer so far. Following in the footsteps of Harrison Ford and Alec Baldwin, the young Hollywood hotshot will portray the latest incarnation of Jack Ryan in the screen adaptation of Tom Clancy's The Sum of All Fears. In fact, Jack Ryan might be one of the few screen personas as recognizable as Ben Affleck.

With Affleck starring as Ryan, The Sum of All Fears directed by Phil Alden Robinson (Field of Dreams) will be the fourth Clancy novel produced for the screen. The film has the daunting task of following the other Clancy box-office successes: The Hunt for Red October, which grossed over $188 million; Patriot Games, which grossed more than $175 million; and the Oscar-nominated Clear and Present Danger, which grossed $212 million. These worldwide box-office booms fall into a specific genre, the political thriller, a kind of movie that has only gotten better since Tom Clancy began making his impressive cinematic contributions. These films also watch the character of Jack Ryan and his activities in the U.S. government, once portrayed by Alec Baldwin and twice by Harrison Ford.

Talking to the Texan last week about his part in The Sum of All Fears, Affleck admits that the Jack Ryan character is extremely appealing. He elaborates, "If you're a kid, and you grow up in Boston, getting to play Jack Ryan is sort of like getting to play Hamlet. You know what I mean? It's something I think everybody wants to do."

Needless to say, audiences every where already have Shakespearean expectations for the young actor. However, Affleck's outlook on the situation is fairly relaxed and humble. In response to the global anticipation, he says, "If I did it the way Alec did it or the way Harrison did it, it would just be a pale imitation of Alec Baldwin, a pale imitation of Harrison Ford. And that's exactly what I didn't want to do. So it was hard, because those guys made so many great choices in terms of playing the role, but I had to go and find mine out."

While the Ryan character has been seen a few times before, The Sum of All Fears goes back to the past to look at the CIA analyst in his younger years.

"One of the nice things that I was really excited about," Affleck said, "was being able to play Jack Ryan kind of before he had all the answers, before he knew exactly what everybody was talking about, before he was kind of the man in the room. When he was the third guy from the left, standing two rows behind the guy who was important, and who you were supposed to be listening to. I thought that was an interesting dynamic for a movie to be following that character as he fights to try to hold his tongue in meetings."

And much like the younger Ryan, Affleck has had to learn to hold his tongue. One can only assume how many times he has been asked about succeeding actors as established as Baldwin and Ford. When asked whether or not he is ever tempted to change his answers and have a little fun with the press, Affleck laughed and said, "All the time. All the time. I am constantly tempted to be like, 'Nope. No. I don't really care about the Harrison Ford thing. Yeah, I saw Harrison Ford … and [we] went out and had a laugh and lit the stage on fire.' But there would be some people who really have no sense of humor, or take it seriously and print it and get it picked up. And then you have to write back in and say, 'No. I didn't cruise gay bars with Harrison Ford. It was a joke.'"

Affleck's sense of humor is one of his most noticeable qualities both on and off the screen. In The Sum of All Fears, he and Morgan Freeman share a charming chemistry while Ryan fumbles his way through learning how to work the system that Freeman's character, CIA director William Cabot, has already mastered. As in the fictional "Fears," Affleck was intimidated by his older co-star.

"I consider Morgan to be one of the greatest, if not the greatest, American actor," Affleck said. "He's one of my real top, top guys. … It changed my preparation, the way it might change your preparation if you were going to go out and play basketball with your friends or you were going to go out and play with Michael Jordan. You know you're never going to be Michael Jordan, but you want to be the very best that you can be when you're around guys who are that good. So, it certainly had me on my toes. I mean, I was respectful of Morgan, bordering on sort of reverential. Probably bordering on annoying, to him."

Published in 1991, The Sum of All Fears was on the New York Times best-seller list for six months. The book's plot suggests the terrifying idea of lost nuclear weapons falling into the hands of terrorists. When Paul Attanasio (Quiz Show) and David Fyne (The Firm) collaborated to write its transformation from novel to script, much consideration was given to the nationality of the terrorist group. Due to the recent terrorist attacks, there has been a considerable amount of hype about the touchy subject of a terrorist-driven plot. Surprisingly, the decision to switch the terrorists from Arab to neo-Fascist took place well before the events of Sept. 11.

Reflecting on the decision, Affleck said, "I do think, interestingly enough, that if they were Arab terrorists in this movie now, that it might sort of push it a little bit closer to feeling a little too raw, too close to what happened. Do you know what I mean? And it would raise a lot more questions, you know, that the movie wasn't really prepared to answer."

With a release date set for May 31, Affleck only has a moderate amount of time to breathe before The Sum of All Fears plasters his face all over the media once more. He confesses, "There's something really fun about being in a movie that's a big, flashy, thrill-ride type movie, and kind of seeing yourself in that. It's kind of like at those malls where you go and take your picture and stick in it the face of the pilot in the space shuttle or something like that. It's sort of that feeling, you know, multiplied exponentially, and it's fun."

After wrapping The Sum of All Fears, Affleck changed gears considerably, just finishing up production of Martin Brest's romantic comedy, Gigli, with Jennifer Lopez. Currently, Affleck is at work playing the lead in the big-screen adaptation of Daredevil. Keeping with the same career pattern that has served him well in the past by appearing in comedies such as Forces of Nature and Dogma and suspenseful thrillers like Reindeer Games and now The Sum of All Fears, the diversity of Affleck's onscreen characters is something he acknowledges to be part of his appeal.

"I think that a lot of times, actors spend their lives fooling themselves into thinking they really could be the people they play. You know what I mean? A lot of times, it gets actors into trouble because they start believing their own storylines, and it turns out they really couldn't be a professional hang glider or whatever it is they act as."

Fortunately, this actor seems to have his head firmly on his shoulders. While Affleck admits that he has enjoyed trying to identify with the characters he has played in the past, he knows the limitations of the imagination. Laughing with a hint of sarcasm, he confessed, "The character I played in Dogma probably would have been a stretch. No matter how long I live, I wouldn't end up being an angel."

Maybe not an angel, but it's no surprise that at the ripe age of 29, Affleck's success has been almost as prevalent as his exposure in the media. Angel or not, Ben Affleck is able to exude a relaxed charm, even though he's in the spotlight most of the time. And as the new Jack Ryan, Affleck may have just found cinematic heaven.

www.dailycollegian.com

CURRY Auto Group
www.curryhondamass.com
Low Price Guarantee on every New car at CURRY! See store for details.
HONDA
2002 Accord SE — power windows, power locks, tilt, cruise, alloy wheels and cd model # CG567 — $229/mo.*
2002 Civic LX cpe $169/mo.* — power windows, power locks, ac, cassette, model # EM315
12000 miles/36 months lease. $2495 due at signing. Accord requires 1,995 due at signing, includes first payment. Plus tax, reg and title fees.
Curry Honda • 767 Memorial Drive • Chicopee
ISUZU
0% Financing* & $1000 Rebate on Rodeos & Troopers
Every Rodeo & Trooper on Sale!
2002 Isuzu Rodeo S $19,499! pw pl, auto, ac, abs, #114085
* 0% Financing up to 48 months. Includes $1,000 rebate; credit approval by primary lender.
Curry Isuzu
767 Memorial Drive • Chicopee
SUBARU
2002 Legacy L ALL-WHEEL-DRIVE pw pl tilt, cruise, cassette $269*/mo.
12000 mile lease, 36 months, 995 due at signing includes first payment. Plus tax, reg and title fees.
CURRY- Voted #1 in the Country in customer service!
Curry Subaru • 767 Memorial Drive • Chicopee
877-GO-CURRY
Next to The Huke Lau, exit 5 Mass Pike • 593-1155
*Curry will pay you $1,000 if we cannot meet or beat your best deal on any in-stock, identical Honda, Isuzu or Subaru. Excludes trade in values

DEAN COLLEGE
SUMMER 2002
90 COURSES
IN 8 ACADEMIC FIELDS
AND MORE
• 3 separate summer sessions
• Day and evening courses
• Accelerated course schedules
• Transfer courses
• Students from other colleges welcome
• Non-credit computer courses available
Summer Sessions I and II open June 3rd
Summer Session II opens July 15th
VIEW COURSES AND REGISTER ONLINE NOW!
WWW.DEAN.EDU
FOR FURTHER INFORMATION OR A BROCHURE, CALL
1-877-TRY-DEAN
E-MAIL: SUMMER@DEAN.EDU
99 MAIN STREET, FRANKLIN, MA 02034
CONVENIENTLY LOCATED OFF RTE. 495
FREE PARKING AND (T) ACCESSIBLE
Dean COLLEGE

Why go Wireless?
Because Mom should never be more than a phone call away.
The whole family can stay in touch with the National Family SharePlan™
4000 Total Airtime Minutes NATIONWIDE Every month for LIFE!
300 shared Anytime minutes
3200 shared Night & Weekend minutes
500 Mobile to Mobile minutes (250 per line) to use to call any Verizon Wireless customer on the national mobile to mobile network
PLUS $20 one-time service credit for each new Family SharePlan™ secondary line!
All for only $55 monthly access for two lines when you sign up for one year and remain on the same plan. The America's Choice network covers over 250 million people in the U.S. Network not available in all areas
BUY ONE PHONE GET ONE FREE! With annual contract. Early termination fee and taxes apply.
Motorola V120 Digital Phone
HOLYOKE MALL (413) 533-2500
HADLEY 322 Russell Street (413) 587-3248
@Wireless www.shopatwireless.com
35 locations to meet all of your wireless needs. Call 1-800-613-2355 for details.
verizon wireless Authorized Retailer
Subject to Service Agreement & Calling Plan. Activation fee $30-35 per line. Early termination fee up to $175. Requires credit approval. Cannot combine with other offers. Usage rounded to next full minute. Unused allowances lost. Subject to taxes and other charges. All lines on account share primary line's allowance. Maximum of 3 & all lines must be on the same billing account. See calling plan. With 3200 Minute promotion, monthly allowance minutes may apply to peak airtime only. For Night & Weekend hours, see calling plan brochure. Geographic and other restrictions apply. Not available in all markets. ©2002 Verizon Wireless. New activation required. Phone model may vary. While supplies last. Limited time offer.

THRILL SEEKERS
We have a number of exotic cars that need to be test-driven by individuals who are willing to take risks. Great career opportunity for individuals 18+ with valid medical insurance. For more information go to www.testdriveinfo.com

CINEMARK
CINEMARK AT HAMPSHIRE MALL
182 Russell St. (Rt. 9) Hadley
Schedule for Friday 5/3 - Thursday 5/9
Purchase Tickets Online — cinemark.com
SPIDERMAN (PG13) 12:15 4:15 7:30 10:15*
SPIDERMAN (PG13) 12:45 4:45 8:00 10:35*
SPIDERMAN (PG13) 1:15 5:15 8:30*
SCORPION KING (PG13) 12:35 4:50 7:45 10:25*
DUCES WILD (R) 12:55 4:25 7:05 9:45*
HOLLYWOOD ENDING (PG13) 12:20 4:30 7:15 10:00*
LIFE OR SOMETHING LIKE IT (PG13) 12:25 4:35 7:35 10:15*
JASON X (R) 12:50 5:00 7:55 10:10*
MEMBER BY MIRACLE (R) 12:30 4:10 7:30 10:20
THE SCORPION KING (PG13) 12:35 4:50 7:45 10:25*
CHARLOTTE'S LAWS (R) 12:00 4:05 7:25 9:55
MEN CHANGE (PG13) 10:05
PANIC ROOM (R) 7:40 10:30
THE RINGER (R) 12:25 4:00 7:10
ICE AGE (PG) 12:10 2:15 4:25
Senior Movie - 5/9/02 MEMBER BY MIRACLE doors open at 11:45am
cinemark.com

Landscape students, looking for project supplies? Come to:
Valley Miniatures
YOUR SUPPLY HEADQUARTERS
-WE SELL-
-Scale Bassuood & Balsa
-Acrylic Sheets
-Brass Tubing
-Landscape Materials
-Glues
-Paints
-Dremel & X-acto Tools
-Architecture/Design Materials
584-5006
141 Damon Rd. - Northampton
OPEN: 9:30 -5:00 Mon.- Thurs. 9:30-4:00 Fri. & Sat.

University of Massachusetts Amherst

FINAL INSTRUCTIONS

FOR SENIORS ABOUT THE COMMENCEMENT CEREMONY

132nd Undergraduate Commencement Ceremony Sunday, May 26, 2002

PRE-COMMENCEMENT GENERAL INFORMATION:

- There is no Commencement rehearsal.
- Tickets are not required and there is no limit on the number of guests you may invite. There is no reserved seating. The stadium is uncovered. The ceremony will be held at the stadium, rain or shine.
- UNIVERSITY REGULATIONS PROHIBIT THE POSSESSION OR USE OF ALCOHOL AT THE STADIUM. NO GLASS OR METAL CONTAINERS WILL BE ALLOWED IN THE ASSEMBLY AREA OR ON THE FIELD. THIS POLICY WILL BE ENFORCED.
- Diplomas will be mailed after the grades have been received, recorded and processed by the Registrar's Office, and the diplomas have been engrossed, which is usually in early August. Inquiries may be made to the Registrar's Office, 545-6296.
- The Index (the yearbook) may be ordered by calling 545-0848.
- Commencement Videotapes may be ordered by calling 545-1283. Also, there will be a booth at the stadium where videos may be ordered.
- The University Club on campus will be open to the public and will serve gourmet meals from 12 noon to 4 p.m. It accepts MasterCard, Visa, Diner's Club, and Carte Blanche. Please call 545-2551 to make reservations as soon as possible.
- Disability Services: For mobility or hearing impaired guests, please call 545-0892. For guests who are unable to walk long distances, please park in Lot 25 near the Mullins Center. Shuttle buses will provide transit to and from the stadium. Wheel chairs are also accommodated.

COMMENCEMENT MORNING TIME SCHEDULE:

- 9:00-9:30 a.m.: Students should arrive at the assembly area, Yellow Lot #11, no later than 9:30 a.m., carrying your cap and gown.
- 9:30 a.m.: George Parks, Director of the Minuteman Marching Band, and Commencement Marshals will help graduates line up by school/college and guide the Processional onto the field.
- 10:00 a.m.: Faculty Processional to greet Degree Candidates
- 10:05 a.m.: Processional of Degree Candidates (see stadium plan)
- 10:25 a.m.: Platform Party Processional
- 11:45 a.m.: Recessional begins. Graduates exit through north gates #1 and #2.
- 12:00 noon: Ceremony ends - Alumni status begins!

WHAT TO DO AND WHERE TO GO WHEN YOU GET TO THE STADIUM:

- Go directly to the Graduate Assembly Area in Yellow Lot #11 north of the football stadium. Do not enter through the main gates of the stadium. Marshals will greet you and Professor George Parks will organize the Student Processional.
- Look for the signs for your college/school. If you are unsure of the school or college of your major, see "Gate Entrances by Degree Program/Major."

COMMENCEMENT DAY GENERAL INFORMATION:

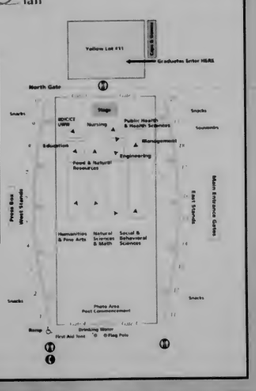
- Routes to campus/travel assistance: Please advise your guests to plan ahead to allow extra travel time to campus. Traffic is usually very heavy on major routes and in the greater Amherst area as early as 8:00 a.m., and delays are frequently encountered. (Commencements at Amherst College and Mount Holyoke are the same day at 10:00 a.m.) Encourage your guests to arrive by 9:00 a.m., park in the upper campus lots, and take the shuttle buses to the stadium. Seating at the stadium is "first-come-first-served."
- Parking and shuttle services: Police officers will direct you to designated parking lots. Beginning at 8:00 a.m., free shuttle buses will circle campus every 5-10 minutes, taking you and your guests to the stadium, and returning you to the lot after the ceremony.
- Snacks and souvenirs: Coffee, soft drinks, bottled water, donuts, bagels, and pastries are available at the refreshment stands on both sides of the stadium. Fresh-cut roses, bouquets of flowers, and balloons will be for sale inside and outside the stadium. Sweatshirts, T-shirts, baseball caps, seat cushions, teddy bears, banners, disposable cameras, and film are available at the tent on the east side. In addition, the University Store in the Campus Center will be open from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. with a complete supply of UMass clothing, gifts, and other merchandise.
- Food Services: Following Commencement, a Food Court adjacent to the stadium, will offer a variety of food for sale, including sandwiches, sushi rolls, salads, and hot and cold beverages. Reservations are not required.
- Post-Commencement Photo Area: After the ceremony, you are welcome to use the special photo area at the south end of the field under the scoreboard.
- Meeting arrangements: Arrange a meeting place for after the ceremony with family members prior to the start of the ceremony. You will exit the field through the north gates #1and #2.

www.umass.edu/commencement

REMEMBER...
University regulations prohibit the possession or use of alcohol at the stadium.

No glass or metal containers will be allowed in the assembly area on the field.

This policy will be enforced.



The Internationally Award-Winning Commencement Ball
www.umass.edu/commencement
Dinner, Dancing and Drinks (positive ID required)
Horse & Carriage Rides
A Night to Remember!
2002
Friday, May 24, 2002
7:00 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. Student Union
To purchase tickets ($35.00 per person):
* Order on-line at www.umassalumni.com
* Call the Alumni Office at 545-2317
* Stop by the STARS table in the Campus Center May 1-3, 6-10, & 13-14
* Stop by Cap and Gown Distribution the week of May 20th
Commencement Ball is supported by:
UMass Alumni Association, Alumni Relations Office, The Massachusetts Daily Collegian, Student Government Association Programming Board, Campus Activities Office, College of Humanities and Fine Arts, College of Social and Behavioral Sciences, College of Natural Sciences and Mathematics, Auxiliary Services, and Greek Affairs
Don't forget to make your pledge to the Senior Campaign!

GATE ENTRANCES BY DEGREE PROGRAM/MAJOR

Your guests may wish to know the gate you will enter and the location in which you will sit. From the Graduate Assembly Area, you will march into the stadium through the gate indicated and sit with the school or college of your major. Despite reasons may sit with either major.

Major	Gate	Major	Gate
Accounting	2	Interdisciplinary	3 or 4
Afro-American Studies (HFA)	4	Italian Studies (HFA)	4
Animal Science	1	Japanese Language & Lit (HFA)	4
Anthropology (SBS)	1	Journalism (HFA)	4
Apparel Marketing	1	Judaic Studies	4
Art Design (HFA)	4	Landscape Architecture	1
Art History (HFA)	4	Legal Studies	3
Astronomy (NSM)	4	Linguistics	4
Bachelor of General Studies/CL	1	Linguistics & Anthropology	4
BDIC	1	Linguistics & Chinese	4
Biochem/Molecular Bio (NSM)	4	Linguistics & German	4
Biology (NSM)	4	Linguistics & Japanese	4
Building Materials & Wood Tech	1	Linguistics & Philosophy	4
Chem Lit Engineering	2	Linguistics & Psychology	4
Chemistry	4	Linguistics & Russian	4
Chinese Language & Lit (HFA)	4	Management	2
Civil Engineering	2	Marketing	2
Classics (HFA)	4	Mathematics (NSM)	4
Classics & Philosophy (HFA)	4	Mechanical Engineering	2
Communication (SBS)	3	Medical Technology	1
Communication Disorders	2	Microbiology	4
Computer Science (NSM)	4	Middle Eastern Studies (HFA)	4
Comparative Literature (HFA)	4	Music (HFA)	4
Computer Systems Engineering	2	Natural Resource Studies	1
Continuing Education	1	Nursing	2
Dance (HFA)	4	Philosophy (HFA)	4
Earth Systems (NSM)	4	Physics (NSM)	4
Economics (SBS)	3	Plant & Soil Sciences	1
Education	1	Political Science (SBS)	3
Electrical Engineering	2	Portuguese (HFA)	4
English (HFA)	4	Psychology (SBS)	3
Environmental Design	1	Resource Economics	1
Environmental Sciences	1	Russian & Eastern European Studies	4
Exercise Science	2	Science (Interdepartmental)	4
Family & Consumer Sciences	1	Sociology (SBS)	3
Finance & Operations Management	2	Spanish (HFA)	4
Food Science	1	Sport Management	1
Forestry	1	STPEC (SBS)	3
French & Francophone Studies (HFA)	4	Studio Art (HFA)	4
Geography (NSM)	4	Theater (HFA)	4
Geology (NSM)	4	U P W	1
German (HFA)	4	Wildlife & Fisheries Conservation	1
History (HFA)	4	Women's Studies (HFA)	4
H R T A	1
Human Nutrition	1
Industrial Engineering	2	HFA = Humanities & Fine Arts
		NSM = Natural Sciences & Math
		SBS = Social & Behavioral Sciences

Stadium Plan

CONGRATULATIONS
FROM THE ENTIRE UNIVERSITY COMMUNITY
www.umass.edu/commencement

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Fraternities * Sororities Clubs * Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with the easy CampusFundraiser.com three hour fundraising event. Does not involve credit card applications. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact CampusFundraiser.com at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

Bus trip to New York-Commuter area gym! trip is sponsoring another trip. With free tickets to Conan Obrien & the daily show w/Jon Stewart on Thurs. May 16. Tickets for the trip are $5 for commuter undergrads, $20 for others. Sign up in Commuter Services Office 428 Student Union.

Top of the Campus, Incorporated (TOC, Inc.) will hold it's Annual Meeting in Campus Center 917, Wednesday, May 22, 2002 at 2:00 p.m.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. - Now Available. 1& 2 bedroom apts. Leases begin June, July, Aug or Sept. 1 year lease. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywine-apts.com Stop by or call (413) 549-0600.

Take over our lease. June 1st puffton 3 bdrm 549-5249.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

1 bedroom Apt Brandywine summer with fall option 549-7279.

2 bedroom apartment summer sublet or new lease call 253-6778.

Looking for a beautiful and cheap place to live this summer. Hurry and have a room in a 2 bedroom furnished apartment with a porch and backyard. Free facilities pay just $400 a month available this summer call 201-3145.

2 bedroom Apt. Summer sublet or take over our lease. Rent negotiable call 549-7259.

Large One Bedroom Apartment 665-9313. Take over my lease at the end of May with Fall option (6 or 12 month leases available).

Take over our lease 3 BR w/upgrade in Puffton. Available June 1st. Call 549-1474 for more info.

AUTO FOR SALE

88 Mercury Grand Marquis. 107k runs looks great $1500 OBO. Tim 549-7033.

Chevy Lumina 1990. 163000 reliable must go. $1000 OBO. 896-3082.

89 Honda Accord $1500 OBO 259-0068.

COMPUTERS

We pay CASH for your used laptops 413-584-8857.

Color Laptop $99 Pentium tower/ CD Rom $99 with color monitor $139. HURRY! 413-584-8857.

EMPLOYMENT

Make it Happen! Telephone Research Interviewers. Put your energy and talent to work with FMI. Due to increased staffing demand during the spring and summer months, we have exciting year-round positions available for dynamic individuals to join our team. Part-time flexible evening and weekend shifts- paid training, PVTA accessible, Hadley location. Call today! 888-423-5581.

Positions available: aerobics, aqua, and yoga instructors, personal trainers, lifeguards, and maintenance Hampshire Fitness Club 256-6446.

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individual, full and part time positions available immediately. Only those able to work the upcoming summer should apply. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413)584-4746.

SUMMER HELP Cape Cod Ice seeks drivers and P/T 2nd Shift Supervisor in our Sandwich location. Interested candidates call 508-888-8590 for more info.

EMPLOYMENT

Camp Counselor wanted for Tennis, Gymnastics, Water Ski, Arts, and more! Gain valuable experience at award-winning camps, while having the summer of a lifetime. Apply on-line at www.campcounselorjobs.com

Greenhouse Part-Full Time. Various shifts for one person. Daily production, afternoon & weekends chores, some on call. Mechanical aptitude necessary. Must live close to facility. For more details visit www.bigdeltagreenhouse.com and apply online or mail cover letter and resume to Bioshelters, Inc. 500 Sunderland Road, Amherst, MA 01002. No Calls Please!

Summer Work! Student work program! Earn great summer income! $18.25 base-appt. Customer service and sales. Scholarships available. 752-2252.

Cushman Village general store prepare creative take-out deli foods and bakery items with customer service skills. Immediate FT/PT Open 7 days with employment past summer available. 491 Pine St. Amherst 549-1955.

Be the Campus Red Bull connection. Join our team and help build one of the world's leading brands. you'll have a blast while gaining invaluable marketing experience. You'll even earn a little extra spending cash. Think about it. It's a lot less dangerous than selling term papers! Apply at redbullcollege.com.

FOR RENT

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning lease? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

FOR SALE

Phone cards= money saved. 1D.Net/?GTUMB

Furniture must sell! Couch, Futon, table, bed. Everything must go! Call 253-7250.

1987 Toyota MR2 great condition T-top $2000 OBO 413-575-5487. Chris.

Huge Lawn Sale! Lots of Good + Cheap stuff, 9 Edgehill Place, Amherst. May 11.

Desk for sale new wooden 4 drawer perfect condition call Meg 549-0072.

Furniture for sale call 549-2914. Table and chairs, breakfast bar, TV stand and more.

Mountain bike-99 Rocky Mountain fusion 19" excellent cond. See [illegible] with car rack, extras. $350. 585-0517.

HOUSE FOR RENT

Hadley 5 bedroom plus. Newer home five minutes from UMASS. June occupancy. 549-4270.

HOUSE FOR RENT

Main St. 4 Bedroom house June 1st. Sublet w/Fall option. Large kitchen, & living room with porch. On bus route w/washer and dryer. 549-7839.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENT

Guitar-Cort Elec/ Acoustic cutaway. Mint never played. With Fishman preamp and case. $350. 585-0517.

ROOM FOR RENT

One bedroom available in a four bedroom apartment. Includes heat, hot water, electricity, cable, A/C, DSL internet, and local phone. On the bus line in Amherst on route 9, available May 23 for $375/month. Call Matt at Alpine Commons # 253-9499.

1 bedroom in Alpine commons. Excellent roommates. Call Bryan 253-9499.

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 More needed to share 3 bdrm. Apt. N Amherst-townhouses $375 mo. , bus rte. June 1 - May 03. Needed ASAP Call Shannon. 549-9394 or 508-241-3183.

2 roommates needed to share 2 bedroom apt. in Brandywine. On bus line. For fall semester, male or female (781) 585-4854.

Female(s) to share 2 bedroom Brandywine Apt. starting June 1. 549-1988.

ROOMMATE WANTED

June-June. One bedroom available in a spacious three bedroom apartment. Great location, close to campus and uptown. $350. Call 549-3726.

Need a place for fall sem. only? Share our 3 bdrm.! $375 mo, bus rte. Call Shannon ASAP! 549-9394 or 508-241-3183.

Four roommates wanted to fill a house in the Center of Town for info call Rob (413)519-0763.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

SUMMER SUBLET

One large bedroom available at Cliffside apts. Starting June 1 partly furnished 617-842-4657.

Summer sublet, fall option. 2 bedrooms , private porch, yard, on bus route, Amherst, call 253-9707.

1-2 of 3 bedrooms at Townhouses partially furnished call Lauren, 253-7250 or Erin, 546-3946.

Sunset Apt. opening for summer! 2 bedrooms + Study room in basement for info please call (413) 549-5421.

Brandywine. Two bedroom. Furnished. A/C , by pool and bus stop. Call 549-8782.

SUMMER SUBLET

Brandywine 2 BDRM will negotiate rent. Furnished, AC, bus route call 549-4110.

Nice 3 bedroom townhouse. Practically on campus. Call Joe 549-9441.

Brandywine. 2 bdrm. Available June 1. Call 549-1988.

TO SUBLET

2 person Apt. June-August on sunset Ave. 2 Mins. to campus 549-4767.

1 bedroom Brandywine Apt. Sublet available June 1 Fall option 549-7148.

Sublet in Brandywine with possible fall option. Looking for 1-3 people to take over 2 bedroom, $225/month. Starting June 1st, 549-9178.

2 Bedroom apartment partially furnished available June 1st to sublet w/option to lease on bus route. 413-549-9612.

TRAVEL

Mexico/ Caribbean or Central America $300 round trip plus tax. Europe $169 one way plus tax. Other world wide destinations cheap. Book tickets on line www.airtech.com or (212) 219-7000.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

2 ..... CBS / 3
3 ..... NESN
4 ..... Fox Sport NE
5 ..... PBS / 57
6 ..... HSCN Movie Channel
7 ..... WB / 10
8 ..... HSCN Movie Channel
9 ..... TV Guide Channel
10 ..... FOX / 61
11 ..... ABC / 40
12 ..... NBC / 22
13 ..... International Channel
14 ..... UMATV
15 ..... HSCN InfoChannel
16 ..... ESPN
17 ..... ESPN 2
18 ..... UVC-19
19 ..... ESPN Classic
20 ..... Gavel-to-Gavel
21 ..... CNN
22 ..... CNN HL
23 ..... Weather Channel
24 ..... Learning Channel
25 ..... History Channel
26 ..... A & E
27 ..... Discovery Health
28 ..... Food Network
29 ..... NASA
30 ..... Home & Garden TV
31 ..... Travel Channel
32 ..... Lifetime
33 ..... CNBC
34 ..... Tech TV
35 ..... BET
36 ..... UPN-38
37 ..... USA
38 ..... TNN
39 ..... MTV
40 ..... CMT
41 ..... VH-1
42 ..... TNT
43 ..... TBS
44 ..... E! Entertainment
45 ..... Sci-Fi Channel
46 ..... Court TV
47 ..... Nick at Nite
48 ..... Comedy Central
49 ..... Cartoon Network
50 ..... Game Show Network
51 ..... TV Land
52 ..... FOX Family
53 ..... Univision
54 ..... Galavision
55 ..... Telemundo
56 ..... College TV Network
57 ..... C-SPAN
58 ..... C-SPAN2
61 ..... Bloomberg Television

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass

Client: _____ Date _____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra) _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m. 413-545-3500

Student rate: 20 cents/word per day - Non-student rate: 35cents/word per day

Headings

- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 8, 2002

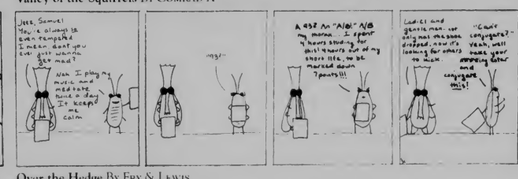
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	62	Clifford Red	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		America's First River: Moyers				Search for the First Human
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 (In Stereo)		48 Hours (N) (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 (In Stereo)		48 Hours (N) (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Ally Wife-Kids	According-Jim	Drew Carey	20/20 (N)			News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	Dawson's Creek	The Abby	Felicity The Power of the Ex	News			Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Ed (In Stereo)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Attorney Client"		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Sabrine-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Dawson's Creek	The Abby	Felicity The Power of the Ex	News		Home Imp.	Blind Date	Blind Date
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Ed (N) (In Stereo)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Attorney Client"		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	70s Show	Grounded-Life	Bernie Mac	Bernie Mac	News		Raymond	Seinfeld
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Ed (N) (In Stereo)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Attorney Client"		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		Search for the First Human		Akbalens: Creole		Charlie Rose (N) (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Friends	Frasier	Ally Wife-Kids	According-Jim	Drew Carey	20/20 (N)			News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Frasier	Frasier	Enterprise Fallen Hero" (N)		Enterprise "Desert Crossing"	News	Ent. Tonight		5th Wheel	Shipmates (N)
WTBS	25	Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Roseanne	Ripley's Believe It or Not!		★★½ "Cosby's Down Under" (1991, Wellen (PA) Tom Selleck				Ripley's Believe It or Not!
A&E	33	The View (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Angel" (In Stereo)		Biography: Florence Henderson		Detention Justice				American Justice: Alex Kelly	Law & Order "Performance"
CNN	20	Moneyline		Crossfire		Live From...	The Point	Larry King Live		Newsnight		Crossfire	Moneyline
COM	35	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Geeks	★★½ "Other People's Money" (1991, Drama) Danny DeVito				South Park	Insomniac	Daily Show	Seinfeld
DISC	23	Hippo Talk		Ocean Planet		What Really Happened		Eichmann (N)		Inside the KKK: Faces of Hate		What Really Happened
ESPN	21	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs	Conference Semifinal Game 4 -- Teams to Be Announced. (Live)					Major League Baseball		Teams to Be Announced. (Live)
LIFE	32	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Por		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★½ "Manitou' Search for the Nant Stalker" (1989, Drama)		Breaking It Down With Selena		Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	29	Hottest Stars Under 25		Direct Effect (In Stereo)		Prime Time Players (In Stereo)		Cribs	Cribs	Cheers	Cheers	Jackass	Rock
NICK	36	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb	Told by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers		All in Family	All in Family
SCIFI	59	Star Trek "Spock's Eye"		★½ "The Lost World" (1992, Adventure) John Rhys-Davies				★★½ "Return to the Lost World" (1993) John Rhys-Davies				Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	27	Understanding Bridges		Darting Capers		Behind the Jump With		Junkyard Wars "Buggies"		Panic Mechanics (N)		Behind the Jump With
TNT	26	NYPD Blue (In Stereo)		Pretender Mr. Lee" (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball Playoffs	Conference Semifinal -- Teams to Be Announced. (Live)					Inside NBA	★★ "The Golden Child" (1986)
USA	31	Walker, Texas Ranger (N)		JAG (In Stereo)		★★ "Lone Wolf McQuade" (1983, Adventure) Chuck Norris				★★ "The Delta Force" (1986, Adventure) Chuck Norris
HBO	45	(5:30) ★★ "Cats & Dogs" (2001)		★ "The In Crowd" (2000, Drama) Susan Ward PG-13				Sex and-City	Sex and-City	Six Feet Under	The Sopran	Bike Vinyl (In Stereo)
MAX	46	★★½ "Black Widow" (1987) Tebra Winger R		★★ "Assassins" (1995, Drama) Sylvester Stallone (In Stereo) R				★★½ "Swordfish" (2001) John Travolta R				Soul Food	Resurrection Blvd.
SHOW	45	4:45 "Fish"		★★★ "City Slickers II: The Legend of Curly's Gold" (1994) PG-13		★ "Highlander: Endgame" (2000) Adrian Paul R							"Lost Loops" R

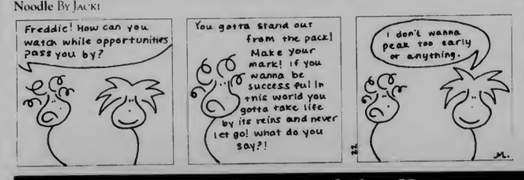
Adam and Eric By Ross Burach

Scarecrow By W. Bird

Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas



Shut the Duck Up By Seany McSean



Noodle By Jacki

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Noodle By Jacki

Over the Hedge By Fry & Lewis

Quote of the Day

"We do not remember days, we remember moments."

-Cesare Pavese

Amherst Weather

Wednesday	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 71 LOW: 41	HIGH: 66 LOW: 40	HIGH: 72 LOW: 35

Horoscopes

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Later today you will face a great crisis when the batteries in your remote stop working on the Lifetime channel. I see much Bea Arthur in your future.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – You will be presented with the answer to a great question today. Unfortunately, it will be too late, and the rascal Ben Stein will keep his money.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Some friendly advice will seem stupid at first, but once you get good and drunk it seems like a good idea.

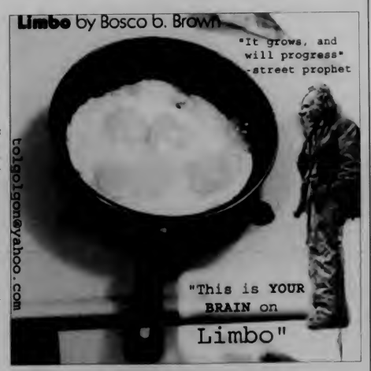
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Look on the bright side – having a beagle implanted in your chest is a great icebreaker.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Finding a new friendship is always the signal of a good day. Unfortunately, your new friend makes Hannibal Lector look stable. Hide the chianti.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 21) – Good things come to those who wait. In bed.

SCORPIO (Oct. 22-Nov. 21) – The stars reveal a new path to happiness to you during a time of great despair. Either that or your going to fail Physics. The stars, they can be real tricky sometimes.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – The cosmos today remind you to wear your nuclear boots and drip-dry gloves, because here she comes again.



CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Listen to the radio today – you're just another brick in the wall. And not a particularly bright one at that.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Today's going to be a great day for you. You're just in the zone today. Man, I wish I was you, you lucky bastard.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Cosmically speaking, living your life by a three line horoscope isn't logical. Instead, you should just pick your favorite horoscope and go with that one. I think you should pick Gemini – there aren't any of those really anyway.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – The stars are sending a very clear message: shake, shake, shake Senora, shake your body line!

Limbo by Bosco b. Brown

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Farmer's Market Soup

Sausage Cacciatore

Ravioli Alfredo (vegetarian)

Beans & Rice (vegan)

DINNER

Farmer's Market Soup

Chicken Cacciatore

London Broil

Native American Stew (vegan)

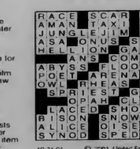
Vegetable Cacciatore (veg) (W Basics)

THE HARP IRISH PUB

TONIGHT

COME PARTY at THE HARP

in North Amherst



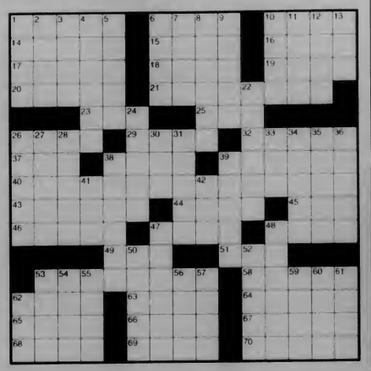
"START YOUR OWN TRADITION"

163 Sunderland Rd.
Amherst, MA 01002
548-6900

ACROSS

1 Governed
6 Mimic
10 Sugar source
14 Horse — oater
15 Tints
16 Singer Ed
17 Mistake
18 Unlucky time for Caesar
19 Bogarde of film
20 Pass, as a law
21 In detail
23 Recipe qty.
25 Zodiac sign
26 Filing aids
29 Slick
32 Unwritten tests
35 Rubbing cheer
38 Electrician's item
39 Type of type
40 Lucrative severance agreement
43 Off the mark
44 Rock back and forth
45 Chess pieces
46 Novelist Danielle
47 "Little Women" role
48 Took a cab
49 Ostrich cousin
51 Kimono sash
53 Like pre-college courses
58 Capsize
62 Forest male
63 "Help!" in Paris
64 Book part
65 Zeus' spouse
66 Salamander
67 British Museum's — Marbles
68 2001, e.g.
69 Food holder

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED



10-31-01

© 2001 United Feature Syndicate

70 Thrills, slangily

DOWN

1 Pajama coverer
2 Put hassled
3 "Stormy Weather" singer Danielle
4 Builds
5 Pub game
6 Gap filler
7 German import
8 Acutely
9 Edison
10 Commanded
11 Actor Jannings
12 Spooky
13 Impatient sound
21 Foot, slangily
24 Hammer
26 Livy's logs
27 Sooning
28 Contradict
30 Comic Kebbide
31 Rental agreement
33 Stadium cheer
34 Crockett's last stand
35 Was fond of 36 Backdrop
38 Chopped down
39 Boise locale
41 Pop singer Kiki
42 Can. region
47 Raw deal
48 Small wave
50 Intended
52 Train alternatives
53 Fr'ito
54 Irene of "Fame"
55 Thickening agent
56 Plains state
57 Chicago, e.g.
59 Token
60 Writer Bagnold
61 Walled bills
62 Tend

Today's Staff

Night Editor: Melissa Hammel
Photo Technician: James Schaffer
Copy Editor: Jim Pignatiello
Production Supervisor: Riki Alcid
Production Staff: Lizzy Nielsen, Cara Horowitz, Mike Kulak

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: ERIC SODERSTROM

Baseball falls hard to Siena

Saints show Minutemen they are holier than thou; leave Amherst with easy win

By Jesse Greenspun
COLLEGIAN STAFF

For a squad that needs to sweep Fordham this upcoming weekend to even have a chance for the postseason, the Massachusetts baseball team is not playing with any sense of urgency.

Siena	12
UMass	4

Yesterday at Earl Lorden Field in Amherst, the Minutemen were crushed by Siena in every facet of the game, dropping a 12-4 contest to fall to 19-23 on the year.

To make matters worse, Saints starter Brent Wengert came into the match-up with a 0-6 record and a 14.21 ERA. In the first inning, he lived up to his not-so-stellar reputation, walking Mike Kulak and Aaron Senez before Chris Morgan drove them home with a double to right-center. Jeff Altieri, the subsequent batter, lined a single to left to plate Morgan, but Derrick Durepo grounded into a 6-4-3 double play to end the threat.

From that point on, the game would belong to the Saints (26-23), as they tied the score off UMass starter Brian Hourigan in the third, and preceded to take a lead the following inning they would never relinquish.

In the top of the third, Hourigan recorded two quick outs before Siena third baseman Tony Cipolla was able to reach on an error. After a Ryan Finn walk, Jim Buckley knotted the score with a towering home run to left-center, and the Saints would pick up where they left off the following inning.

First baseman Matt Mueller began the fourth with a walk and advanced to second on Blake Hanan's chopped single down the third base line. Chris DelVecchio sacrificed them both over with a bunt, and 130-pound centerfielder Fausto Franco drove them home with a lined single off the glove of Senez at third.

That would be all for Hourigan, as he was replaced by Brandon White after giving up six runs (three earned) in 3.1 innings.

"I was not really happy [with my performance], especially since we got the three-run lead," Hourigan said. "The bats cooled off after that, but it is my job to keep the lead and I wasn't sharp enough to do that."

White did not fare much better than Hourigan, however, as he gave up a two-run homer to the first hitter he faced, Kevin Roberts. Overall, White would only pitch 1.1 innings, giving up a total of three runs in the process.

After the Saints scored two off White in the fifth, Julio Ramos came in for the Minutemen and settled things down for a while. The freshman from Lawrence pitched a solid 2.1 innings of shutout relief, but the UMass bats remained dormant and never did rally against Siena reliever Dale Szachewicz (five innings, one run).

In the bottom of the eighth, the Maroon and White finally put another run across when Senez hit a leadoff double and scored two batters later on Alteiri's sacrifice fly.

By that time, however, it was far too late, as Saints closer Josh Courage came in and pitched a 1-2-3 ninth to finish the game out.

"We knew today our focus wasn't what it should be," Hourigan said, "but the great thing about playing baseball everyday is that you can go right back out there and fix your mistakes."

Hourigan's words hold especially true this week, as the Minutemen travel to Central Connecticut for a 3 p.m. game today before returning home on Thursday for a clash with Harvard.

These two contests will serve as a preview to this weekend's series with Fordham, which UMass must sweep to even have a shot at the Atlantic 10 tournament on May 16-18. In order to qualify for the postseason, the Maroon and White must sweep the Rams and hope Temple loses three straight to St. Joseph's at the same time.

Mike Kulak and the baseball team swung and missed yesterday afternoon, falling to Siena 12-4 on Earl Lorden Field in Amherst.

NJ disrespected again; Kidd fails to gain MVP

The armpit of America just cannot get its hands on some deodorant – the sportswriters of America won't allow it to happen.

Yesterday, NBA league sources revealed that San Antonio Spurs superstar Tim Duncan will be named the Most Valuable Player of the 2001-02 NBA season next week.

Also on Monday, it was announced that Detroit Pistons head coach Rick Carlisle received the majority of the votes from the NBA writers and captured the Coach of Year Award.

In his first year as a head coach, Carlisle got a selfish star in Jerry Stackhouse to alter his game, resulting in a central division title. Duncan led his team with 25.5 points per game while leading his team in three other categories as well.

But Carlisle and Duncan deserve to take home their respective hardware. However, I believe a fan from the state that is known to many as simply the border between New York and Pennsylvania was robbed of the titles they rightfully earned.

New Jersey Nets point guard Jason Kidd and his head coach, Byron Scott, should be this year's MVP and Coach of the Year, without a doubt.

Yet it is no surprise that they were not chosen to get the nods. New Jersey just can't get any respect. Can you name another state that has as many humorous cliche attached to it?

Sports in New Jersey are perceived as a joke, as well. When the Devils won the Stanley Cup in 1995, the parade was held in the parking lot of the Meadowlands Sports Complex. They don't have their own football team; they rent out land so New York can have two. Even in their hometown newspapers like the Bergen Record, the Nets get their headlines on the inside cover rather than on the back page thanks in part to a team that calls Madison Square Garden its home.

I chomp the thoughts of Nets fans across the Garden State and even the non-sports fans of Dirty Jersey, power forward Kenyon Martin responded to the snubs of his teammates by saying in an interview with ESPN.com, "I guess we just don't count [in the voting]."

This has been the year the Nets have finally shown the NBA, the media and the fans that there is a quality organization being operated on the other side of the Hudson River.

After only winning a lousy 26 games last season, the Nets made a complete turnaround, going 52-30 this season. The two reasons for the surprising success were 1) Kidd and 2) Scott.

If you look at the actual definition of who the MVP award should go to, you will see it's the most valuable player in the league – not the player with the best stats.

Last year Stephan Marbury was running the point for New Jersey. He was traded to the Suns for Kidd over the summer and now Kidd is the main man for the Nets. The result was a 26-game turnaround from last year.

Not only did Kidd turn the losing ways in Jersey to winning ways, he sparked an excitement in Nets basketball. There has not been this much attention surrounding the Nets since UMass alum Julius Erving sported the Nets uniform. It is hard to put a value on a transformation like that but it can be placed upon Kidd. That is why he is the most valuable player of the league.

It took a year for the Nets squad to learn the run-and-gun, ferocious defensive coaching style of Scott, but they finally did. The Nets had the best record in the Eastern Conference and the fourth best home record in the league. No one, including Scott, expected this team to accomplish these feats in the regular season.

That is why Scott deserved to be Coach of the Year and not the third-leading vote getter. Yes, Carlisle made a similar turnaround in Detroit, but when it comes down to the raw numbers the Nets had a greater turnaround. Rick Adelman of the Sacramento Kings came in second in the voting and he deserved the award as well, but the Kings have built an arsenal that is hard to beat. It was expected that he wouldn't receive an award where the merit is given to the overachievers.

Kidd and Scott were modest in their reactions to the snubs but Kidd summed it up best when he said, "the big thing is, we are not done."

Glen Straub is a Collegian Columnist

Inside the NBA with Glen Straub

Spiders give UMass lethal bite

By Justin Pearson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

After losing nearly half of its goal-scoring production from 2001, the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team knew that it would struggle at the offensive end of the field in 2002. But after jumping out to a 6-2 start in the first month of the season all worries had seemed to disappear.

But as anybody involved with sports will tell you, it's how you finish the season that really matters, not how you start it.

For the second straight season, the Minutewomen head out of postseason play at the first hurdle, falling 9-5 to the University of Richmond in the Atlantic 10 semi-finals on Friday afternoon. The loss drops the Minutewomen to 8-8 overall and 5-3 in the conference, finishing 2-6 to close the campaign.

Richmond	9
UMass	5

A 5-0 Spiders run over the final 22 minutes of the first half broke a 2-2 deadlock and gave Richmond a 7-2 advantage at the break to put the game out of reach. Katie Dolan, the Spiders top scorer with 29 goals on the season, scored two of the five while Libby Berlacher, Alexis Brandolini and Polly Purcell each added solo tallies.

"We tried to keep our heads up and stay positive," said junior co-captain Jada Emery, who finished with a career-high 33 points to lead the Minutewomen. "We tried to pull together as a team because we've been in that position before and we felt that we could come back. I guess it just wasn't our day."

UMass attempted to get itself back into the game in the second half but could never put together any sort of sustained run. Following Dolan's third goal of the contest, the Minutewomen scored back-to-back goals for the first time to cut the Spider lead to 8-4. Juniors Emery and Lydia Robinson, the Maroon and White's top two goal-scorers, each tallied their first of the contest, beating Richmond goalie Kelly Johnson to offer UMass a glimmer of hope.

But with just more than five minutes left, Dolan struck again to make the score 9-4. Robinson added her second of the game shortly after but it was not enough, as the Minutewomen could get no closer, falling 9-5.

Sophomore Hope Zelinger and junior Lori Kain each scored first half equalizers, erasing Berlacher and Jennifer Cielewich tallies. But in the end UMass just did not have enough offensive firepower, mustering only 13 shots compared to Richmond's 32. A major factor in that one-sided figure was Richmond's 10-4 draw control advantage, giving them a distinct advantage in time of possession. All season long UMass has lacked a consistent draw winner, and that came back to bite the Minutewomen on Friday afternoon.

While there was no good news in Pittsburgh for the Minutewomen, two players did receive personal accolades following the tournament. Junior goalie Cyndi Doyle and sophomore defender Kristin St. Hilaire were named to the A-10 All-Conference team on Monday, marking the first time that each had been honored.

In her first full season as the Maroon and White's number one goalie, Doyle anchored the UMass backline, starting all 16 games and holding opponents to just 9.49 goals per contest. The Bridgewater, Vt. native had a career-high 17 saves during an 11-8 win over St. Bonaventure en route to 163 saves for the season, also a career-high.

While Doyle had a career year, St. Hilaire was just happy to get her college career started. After sitting out all of the 2001 season with a torn ACL, the sophomore from Mattydale, N.Y., stepped right into the Minutewomen's defensive setup, leading the team with 37 caused turnovers while turning the ball over just four times herself and collecting 32 groundballs.

RICHARD PEARCE/COLLEGIAN

The women's lax team fell to Richmond last Friday in the first round of the Atlantic 10 tournament.

ARTS IS ABSTRACTION
ARTS PAGE 5.
NOTES FROM ROB
ED/OP PAGE 4.
TOURNAMENT TIME
SPORTS PAGE 10.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
THURSDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY THREE ☆☆☆☆☆ 5.09.02

Molten Glass
The Northern River Glass Company heat glass to be molded into every thing from jewelry to vases in Shelburne Falls, Mass.

RA union demands accountability

By Daniel G. Lamothe
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Ten protesters sympathizing with the Resident Assistants' (RA) Union marched into Whitmore Administration Building yesterday morning just before noon with symbolic arrest warrants for Acting Chancellor Marcie Williams and Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs Javier Cevallos.

"We would like to impress upon the Chancellor that this includes a long list of laws that the University has broken in not negotiating with the RA Union," Graduate Employees Organization (GEO) President Leslie Edwards said while presenting employees in both administrators' offices with the warrants. The protesters said that they hoped Williams and Cevallos would "turn themselves in" or meet the RAs at the bargaining table.

The group, which included three UMass RAs and a combination of graduate students and members of other area unions, marched through the building peacefully, passing out flyers on their way. Neither Williams nor Cevallos was in their offices at the time, leaving the group with little to do other than drop off their "warrants" with office workers and leave.

"I think it's a good thing to bring awareness that the University is breaking laws," UMass RA and sophomore STEPC major Andres Gomez said. "They need to be held accountable and come and bargain with the RAs."

"Clearly it was symbolic," Edwards said. "We want to impress upon people that there are laws being broken and hopefully eventually the University will be called to task on it."

Several in the group were middle-aged men from area unions. "An attack on one of us is an attack on all of us," Frances Martin, president of the local chapter of the American Federation of State and County Municipal Employees, said. "We're the blue-collar workers," he said.

According to a list prepared by the RA Union (United Auto Workers Local 2322), the University is breaking at least three state, one international, and one local law in refusing to negotiate with their newly formed union. Local law in particular clearly states that, "Amherst Representative Town Meeting calls upon Amherst employers, public and private, to bargain collectively in a timely and good faith manner with the employee unions."

Whitmore Administration Building office workers had little to say after the protesters left. Workers in Williams' office had no comment. "I have no opinions," Donna Beauregard, a bookkeeper in the Vice-Chancellor of Student Affairs Office, said. "I'm just the messenger." Beauregard promised protesters to pass the "warrant" on to Cevallos.

Yesterday's symbolic presentation of the arrest is the latest in a line of protests that the RA Union and its sympathizers have staged. On April 29, protesters occupied Cevallos' office, leading to the arrest of 33 people. On April 16, RAs picketed in front of the home of Associate Provost Susan Pearson, setting up a mock "bargaining table" in the street outside her home. Protesters have also set up symbolic bargaining tables outside the Whitmore Administration Building alongside the ramp, complete with armchairs to pull up to the table.

Town seeks proposals for community preservation

Laura Kyser
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

Members of a town committee met on Wednesday to determine how a pot of money set aside for community preservation will be spent. They set a May 23 deadline for tentative proposals for projects.

Representatives from the Amherst Department of Leisure Services, the Amherst Housing Authority, and the Historical Society met from 7 to 8 p.m. last night at the Amherst Regional Middle School at what was supposed to be a public hearing. Only two of the 12 attendees were not connected to the Community Preservation Committee.

Last year Amherst voters passed the Community Preservation Act, a state law that allows communities to add a surcharge on property taxes to be used specifically for community housing, open space preservation, recreation, and historical preservation. The state provides additional funding for such communities.

Amherst residents voted to add a surcharge of 1 percent on property values over $100,000. With an undetermined additional sum from the state, the town will have between $100,000 and $200,000 to spend on community projects.

According to the law, a committee with representatives from each interest group must be set up to make a recommendation to Town Meeting on how to spend the money. Most members of the committee are committed to finding a project that combines multiple goals, such as renovating a historic building into affordable housing, said Peter Jessop of the Amherst Housing Authority, who facilitated the meeting.

"To be blunt, the first priority is soccer fields," Kathy Ford of Leisure Services said.

The proposed four new soccer fields off Potwine Street would cost about $250,000, Linda Chalfant, director of the Department of Leisure Services, said.

Twenty or more affordable housing advocates and a few University of Massachusetts students brainstormed project ideas at a housing meeting last Monday, Jessup said. A rental assistance fund would provide loans for the costs of first and last months' rent, security deposits, and finder's fees.

The money could also be used for new housing construction on the land owned by Amherst Housing Authority on Tamarack Drive.

Other project priorities for Leisure Services are a skateboard park and community facilities, such as a teen center.

"Parents have been pushing for a skateboarding park for a while now," said Ford.

A house that could be purchased and renovated as a community center would cost $500,000, Chalfant said.

Community Preservation funds might also be applied to helping UMass develop a possible new graduate student and community family housing near Fraternity Park by the yellow parking lot near Orchard Hill, Jessop said, although he is unsure of what the law allows.

Jessop said the housing brainstorm meeting was productive and suggested the other departments try a similar meeting. The housing representatives targeted housing advocates and tenants, what Jessop calls the Housing Authority's "constituency."

"I don't know if Leisure Services and the Historical Society really have constituencies," he said.

Leisure Services is putting together a survey sent out to residents chosen randomly from the town clerk's listing and from past participants in the department activities, Chalfant said. The survey asks about "facility uses and improvements," and will be a source for project ideas, she said.

They currently have 500 returned surveys, a response rate of 65 to 70 percent, she said.

The Historical Society doesn't have a constituency, but they do have project priorities, said Barry Thompson, the Historical Society representative to the committee. Currently, there is a group called, Friends of Wildwood Cemetery, and the historical society is thinking of starting Friends of West Cemetery, descendants of people buried in the cemetery, to help with reconstruction and research into the African-American part of the cemetery, he said.

"Over my dead body," Jessop joked.

"We don't want to be known as the cemetery committee, but we've been working on it for quite a while," Thompson said, smiling.

No one from the conservation department was present. Town Manager Barry Del Castillo said the conservation priority is to buy land to join chunks of conservation land.

Pulling out autumn orange knitting, Lisa Campbell, committee member at large, pressed the issue of how the committee is going to decide among the projects. "We have millions of wishes and only $100,000," she said.

"Are we going to save it for a bigger project next year or piddle it out in little drabs?" said Pam Rooney of the Planning Department.

"We need to decide how we're going to decide," said Campbell. "What's the advantage of waiting?"

The committee decided to have tentative proposals by May 23, with the responsibility of writing proposals to the departments, although the committee favors joining projects.

The departments "spent years determining their priorities, and we're coming from the outside," Rooney said.

BOWL WEEKEND AT ORCHARD HILL

Festival brings students together

By Jennifer Eastwood
COLLEGIAN STAFF

It's crunch time once again, and as the semester winds down, students face final papers, projects and tests. Stress always seems to run rampant throughout these times, but never fear, oh weary scholar, for there is still one checkbox left on the agenda before final grades are turned in and summer session commences. That's right; it's Bowl Weekend, and it's all happening in the center courtyard affectionately named the Bowl of Orchard Hill.

Bowl Weekend has been a free-of-charge tradition organized by the student-run Orchard Hill Area Government (OHAG) for many a year. This season's festivities begin on Friday, May 10 with the Bowl Dance from 7 to 11 p.m. The momentum carries over into Saturday, May 11 as Bowl Day kicks off at 10 a.m. with a barbeque, carnival and open microphone session. Fill the Hill, a concert featuring six bands, swings into full action by 3:45 p.m., entertaining onlookers until 11 p.m. with an outdoor movie, Clerks, projected on a 10 ft. by 14 ft. screen.

The activities for Bowl Weekend have been in the planning for the past four months and have ultimately amounted to approximately $14,000 in costs, but OHAG officers assure that both this time and money has been all well spent, confidently claiming that this year's Bowl Weekend will be the "best" to date.

Grand hopes, however, have no way of coming to pass without hard work, and as such, OHAG officers require the help of as many volunteering students as possible to oversee each of the planned activities. Last Tuesday, a meeting was held to organize the final plans for the weekend. Just over 40 students crowded into the base-floor classroom of the Field dormitory, each intent on finalizing the upcoming weekend's preparations.

The chalkboards lining one wall of the room became the focus point as chalk-drawn grids crisscrossed about the dusty green slate with headings such as "food," "cleanup crews," and "security" lining the top. Students were scattered about in clusters, as OHAG Governor Melika Bessaad, a sophomore pre-nursing and pre-med student, announced assertively, "Bowl weekend is going to kick ass this year."

Volunteers, she further explained, each get specially designed T-shirts (designed by artist Gary Menin, a sophomore legal studies major) when they arrive for their designated duties: OHAG officers dress in turquoise, security staff in yellow and Bowl Day volunteers in royal blue. But first, designated duties had to be assigned.

Friday night responsibilities will require student volunteers to become security guards, placing eight students on duty, two at each of the four check points, all night long. The student security guards will be responsible for regulating traffic into the Bowl and to assure that no bags, glass bottles, cans or open containers make their way into the area.

The following day will begin early for those volunteers who sign up for cleanup crew. Although OHAG officers have taken many a precaution in limiting what is allowed to enter the Bowl during the dance, including locking all dormitory doors on the Bowl-side and placing fencing around the perimeter of the central area, thus leaving only four guarded spots from which to enter and exit, they still foresee a need to pick up all trash (most especially if glass does somehow make its way into the area) from the ground early that next morning to ensure everyone's safety.

"There'll be lots of trash cans knocked over too," sophomore Mark Morrison, OHAG secretary, told the audience.

Bessaad explained immediately: The area is prone to receiving trash, because "the Bowl Dance will be happening at night, so that means we're going to have a lot of drunk people out there at one in the morning..."

"... a lot of drunk, angry people," added one of her colleagues.

By 9 a.m., OHAG officers expect the area well cleaned, as the setup crew will come in to get things ready for the day's barbeque and carnival games, including that of a Bungi run, a boxing ring, a jousting court and an obstacle course. The carnival attractions, all of which are returning favorites with the exception of the boxing ring, are rented from Bruce Smick Amusements, Inc., Morrison noted with pride in a later interview.

"He [Smick] does everything," Morrison explained. "The man could turn this place into a circus at any given point if we had the money."

The meeting pushed on, and one of the only remaining volunteer positions left to name was that of Green Room supervisors. The Green Room, the fancy name given to the base-floor classroom of the Webster dormitory for this particular occasion, will provide performing band members at Fill the Hill with a haven in which to retreat and relax. Bowl Day volunteers working these shifts will be slotted at various lengths from 3 to 9 p.m. and tasked with ensuring no stray wanders make there was into the room.

"The point is to keep everyone who's not in a band out," reaffirmed Lt. Governor Lisa Jollimore, a sophomore communication major.

Slowly as students shouted out their requests for positions, slots on the chalkboard began to fill with names. Finally, the bulk of volunteers retreated as they received confirmation on their duties, leaving only a remaining few speaking with OHAG officers.

Turn to BOWL DAY, page 5

PHOTOS OF BOWL DAY 2001 COURTESY OF ORCHARD HILL AREA GOVERNMENT. BOWL DAY T-SHIRT GRAPHIC DESIGN BY GARY MENIN. DESIGNED FOR BOWL DAY ORCHARD HILL AREA GOVERNMENT

DIVERSITY CALENDAR

FILMS

AMHERST – Copeland Fellow Fatima El-Tayeb will present her film Everything Will Be Fine, a black German lesbian comedy, at 6:00 p.m. on Thursday, May 9 in Amherst College's Morrill 4.

PERFORMANCES

SMITH – A Piece of My Heart will be performed in Theater 14 of Smith College's Mendenhall Center for the Performing Arts on Thursday, May 9, Friday, May 10, and Saturday, May 11, at 8:30 p.m. The play, written by Shirley Lauro, portrays the experiences of six American women who served in the Vietnam War. Tickets are $7, $4 for students, seniors, and children.

CELEBRATIONS

UMASS – An ALANA Barbeque will be held on the Metawampee Lawn on Wednesday, May 15, from 4:00 p.m. to 7:00 p.m. The event, which features food, games, and a performance by Concepto Latino, is free.

LECTURES/DISCUSSIONS

SOUTH HADLEY – A book signing and reception with author Joan Cocks will be held on Thursday, May 9, at 4 p.m. in Odyssey Bookshop. Cocks, a Politics Professor at Mount Holyoke, is the author of "Passion and Paradox: Intellectuals Confront the National Question." The bookshop is located at 9 College Street, South Hadley in the Village Commons.

Event of the week

UMASS – Crossing John at the Crossroads, a multi-media theater piece created by UMass Theater Professor Gil McCauley and composer Bill Lowe, will be performed at the Fine Arts Center's Rand Theater at 8:00 p.m. on Thursday, May 9, Friday, May 10 and Saturday, May 11. The piece, centered on a young man's search for wisdom, draws on multi-cultural influences and blends text, music, video and dance. Tickets are range from $4 to $7.

SOUTH HADLEY – Elizabeth Hartmann, Director of the Population and Development Program at Hampshire College, will read from her novel, "The Truth About Fire," on Thursday, May 9, at 7 p.m. in Odyssey Bookshop. The bookshop is located at 9 College Street, South Hadley, in the Village Commons.

SOUTH HADLEY – Author Marnie Mueller will read from her latest novel, "My Mother's Island," on Thursday, May 9, at 7:00 p.m. in Odyssey Bookshop. Mueller is the author of "The Climate of the Country." The bookshop is located at 9 College Street, South Hadley, in the Village Commons.

MOUNT HOLYOKE – Amina Mama will deliver a lecture, "Challenging Subjects: Gender, Power, and Identity in African Contexts," on Thursday, May 16, at 4:40 p.m. in the Five College Women's Studies Research Center. The Center is located at 83 College Street, South Hadley.

MOUNT HOLYOKE – Poets Anna Kirwan and Gary Metras will read selections from their poetry on Thursday, May 16, at 7:00 p.m. in Odyssey Bookshop. The bookshop is located at 9 College Street, South Hadley, in the Village Commons.

EXHIBITS

UMASS – "Boxes and Walls: The Oppression Experiment," an interactive art exhibit, will be held in room 168 of the Campus Center from 5:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. on Thursday, May 9. The exhibit details the oppression felt by minority groups. Admission is free.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts academic semesters. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Index Vitæ became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Bi-Weekly Collegian in 1946. The Collegian has been published daily since 1985, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1998. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Sam Wilkinson Editor-in-Chief
Matthew E. Sacco Managing Editor
Amy Gargiulo Business Manager
Shimauli Dave Production Manager
Jake Lilien Diversity Editor
Mike Kulak Editorial Production Manager
Jason Smith Advertising Manager

Mike Delano Arts & Living Editor
Matthew Despres Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jennifer Eastwood Features Editor
Catherine Turner News Editor
Tibora Greczyc-Blum Photography Editor
Eric Soderstrom Sports Editor
Brent Siniawski Finance Manager
Charlie Iacco Distribution Manager

Morgan Taylor Advertising Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Cara Murphy Assistant Finance Manager
Shawn Daugherty Assistant Business Manager
Megan Shannon Assistant Advertising Manager

Graduation Parties
Chance Perspective Entertainment Co
Do it Right... Get a DJ
Hip-Hop Reggae R&B
413.883.1144

College Self-Storage
Monthly/Annual Rentals
College Payment Plans
Minutes From Campus
Electronic Card Access
Security Fenced Perimeter
Multi-Size Units
Route 9, Belchertown
323-9792

The Internationally Award-Winning
Commencement Ball
Passes, Parking and Drinks (positive ID required)
Limo & Carriage Rides
A Night to Remember!
2002
Friday, May 24, 2002
7:00 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. Student Union
To purchase tickets ($35.00 per person):
* Order on-line at www.umassalumni.com
* Call the Alumni Office at 545-2317
* Stop by the STARS table in the Campus Center May 1-3, & 13-14
* Stop by Cap and Gown Distribution the week of May 20th
Commencement Ball is supported by:
UMass Alumni Association, Alumni Relations Office, The Massachusetts Daily Collegian, Student Government Association Programming Board, Campus Activities Office, College of Humanities and Fine Arts, College of Social and Behavioral Sciences, College of Natural Sciences and Mathematics, Auxiliary Services, and Greek Affairs
ALUMNI ASSOCIATION UMASS
Don't forget to make your pledge to the Senior Campaign!

www.dailycollegian.com

TO STUDENTS IN RESIDENCE HALLS:
BEFORE YOU LEAVE!

PLACE CINDER BLOCKS, METAL AND USEABLE WOOD OUTSIDE YOUR HALL AT DISPOSAL AREAS OR NEAR LARGE DUMPSTERS
PLACE FOOD (NON-PERISHABLE) AND CLOTHING (TIE SHOES TOGETHER) IN BINS LOCATED IN YOUR HALL LOBBY.

FOOD WILL BE DONATED TO LOCAL SOUP KITCHENS – CLOTHING TO GOODWILL AND FURNITURE TO LOCAL NON-PROFITS.
THANKS AND HAVE A GREAT SUMMER! THE OFFICE OF WASTE MANAGEMENT AND HOUSING RECYCLING

■ Bowl Day

continued from page 1

Thus, at about 9 p.m., three nights before the start of Bowl Weekend, plans were set in place. However, my journey into finding out about this infamous event was only at its midpoint.

Saftey, safety, safety. This is a prevalent concern for OHAG officers organizing Bowl Weekend, and as such, required quite a bit of planning. I learned at 1 sat in the OHAG office with its five officers surrounding me.

First up in the discussion was the topic of security for the Bowl Dance. Jollimore noted that last year, security was not as affective as they would have liked it to be, but this year things would be different. Never before, she pointed out, has the Bowl been fenced in for this occasion, as it will be on Friday night to ensure things stay in control.

In addition to the eight-at-a-time student security volunteers, officers from the University of Massachusetts Police Department (UMPD) will be out in force, as six officers will monitor the four entrance/exit check points that night as well.

Half of the Orchard Hill Resident Assistant (RA) staff (in other words, 12 individuals) will also be available during the dance, Jollimore further explained. Six of them will be on primary duty and thus supervising the peripheral edges of the Bowl and its massive cluster of dancers. The other six will be "on call," meaning that they will be continuously reachable by phone in case of emergencies. Lastly, two Emergency Medical Technicians (EMTs) will be standing by.

On Bowl Day, security will consist of five UMPD officers making rounds to cover the entire area, and four EMTs will be on site.

However, in light of the most recent rape attack on campus by the Fine Arts Center, OHAG officers raised the question as to whether additional security would be necessary.

Jollimore explained that she and the other officers discussed the question with the UMPD and feel confident that the above named security is a fair balance between taking the utmost safety measures and not closing in too heavily on students' free space.

"If you're coming from different areas on campus," Bessaod added as some safety advice for students, "make sure you walk home with someone else and not alone. Honestly, outside of the boundaries of Orchard Hill, we have no control."

Jollimore further noted that even though the UMPD officers' shifts end at 11 p.m., the trend is usually for them to stay until the Bowl has been sufficiently cleared.

"I think they'll stick around until the crowd disperses," she added.

However, it is this "dispersing" more so than any other element of the night that worries the officers, for no one is quite sure as of yet how the crowds will react to the dance ending at 11 p.m., the earliest time a Bowl Dance has ever concluded.

The reason behind this early close-up involves two main elements: an Amherst Town ordinance and Javier Cellavos's desire for UMass to be a "good neighbor."

An Amherst town law states that amplified music (such as music played at outdoor dances) must end at 11 p.m. In order to demonstrate to the community that UMass is a "good neighbor," Cellavos, the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs and Campus Life, sent a letter to all Living Area Government officers, including those in OHAG, stating that all such events, ranging from activities held during Southwest Week to the Bowl Dance, would have to comply with the regulation.

"While I am sympathetic to your wish to have events continue past 11 p.m. and appreciate your personal commitment to work with the community, I believe that as a campus we must adhere to the Town of Amherst by-law," Cellavos wrote in a brief Mar. 26 letter. "All amplified music must cease at 11 p.m."

This mandate has, to say the least, disappointed the OHAG officers, who each seem to have their own counter-argument on the matter.

"I think it's important to note that we're pretty closed in here at Orchard Hill, and the 'noise' would have to go through buildings and through a forest or across a parking lot and the street before it would reach any neighbors."

To the best of each officer's knowledge, no noise complaint has ever been filed due to this annual dance, causing genuine confusion among many of the officers, including Publicity coordinator Erika Gentuso, an undeclared sophomore.

"I can understand if it was a big issue, and people were complaining, but..." Gentuso trailed of with a look pointing out that indeed it was not an issue prior to this mandate, and thus she does not understand.

"Also," added Bessaod to the conversation, "each dorm sets quiet hours at midnight, so this rule is forcing students to be quiet even before that time."

"Right, and we as a University don't have to follow town laws, because it [UMass] is considered state land," Jollimore pointed out. "And I have concerns that people who don't live here may be a bit more willing to trash the place," for as she explained, visiting students usually do not perceive the Bowl as a part of a student's home and therefore something that should be preserved.

"Especially when you get a lot of drinking," Bessaod added. "But there's more to Bowl Weekend than just this talk."

Music is by far the definitive key to Bowl Weekend fun, and OHAG officers have activities lined up so that the music will practically be non-stop.

On Bowl Day, the open microphone session will include 30 amateur performances, mostly consisting of Orchard Hill residents. The Dance Team will also perform some of their routines at 2 p.m., and finally, Fill the Hill will bring regional talents Leftout, Scattered, Dxcadance, NBFB, Persun and Traveling Matt to rock the hill between Orchard Hill and Central.

OHAG officers had a innumerable ideas as to what acts would be like at the open microphone session.

"Fun," Morrison started off.

"A complete variety," Bessaod added.

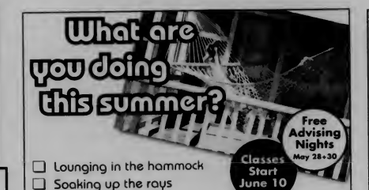
"We don't really screen the talent," Morrison continued.

"But the point is to add a nice personal touch to the day," Gentuso pointed out.

"The open mic is a chance for people to showcase their talents," Jollimore explained.

"It's just for fun," Bessaod said. "It's for the students, by the students."

Fill the Hill, on the other hand, consists of commissioned bands ranging in sound from punk rock to mellow and easy listening. However, the consensus among the officers was that both Traveling Matt, a returning favorite to Fill the Hill, and Scattered would incite the best audience reactions.



Among some of its noted performances, Scattered in particular had the honor of performing at the Spring Concert earlier this week, and Bessaod was adamant to note: "Just so you know, we found them first."

Thus, come rain or shine, within reason of course, Bowl Weekend will provide weary, frazzled college students with a break from the steady grind. Sure, finals are on the horizon, but come Friday, it's time to relax, spend some time with friends and enjoy one of the last weekends of the seinester.

Parking will be tight on the Hill, so those coming from near and far are advised to walk, carpool or take a bus.

DRIVE AN EXOTIC CAR Private organization wishing to remain anonymous seeks drivers for fast-paced competitive project. Candidates must be young, energetic and willing to take risks. For more details and liability release, go to www.testdriveinfo.com.

MATTRESSES FUTONS BEDS ETC... 253-2337
SLEEPY HOLLOW BED CO.
TO NORTHAMPTON
ROUTE 9
RT. 116 S
ROUTE 9
TO BELCHERTOWN

☐ Lounging in the hammock
☐ Soaking up the rays
☐ Watching reruns
☑ Improving yourself at Northeastern!

- Multiple campuses in and around Metropolitan Boston
- Ten-week, five-week, and four-week options
- Over 700 summer courses
- 33 online courses available
- Courses in Information Technology, Business, Health and Sciences, Liberal Arts, Criminal Justice, and more!

CONTACT US TODAY FOR MORE INFORMATION
617.373.2400 Ext. 91
www.oce.neu.edu/northeastern91
Northeastern UNIVERSITY

The Office of Alumni Relations
EARN FAST CASH!
The Office of Alumni Relations is now accepting applications for Alumni Weekend 2002. Must be available June 7, 8 and 9. Students needed to provide transportation, bellhop, host events and more. $6.75/hour. Meals will be provided during working hours and lodging is available. Call Lynn Zlotnick at 545-2317 for more information or stop by Memorial Hall.
Work all weekend.
We provide meals during working hours and lodging!

The Provost of the University of Massachusetts, Charlena Seymour, and the Phi Kappa Phi Chapter of this University are proud to announce the following new members invited from the Junior and Senior Classes as well as the Graduate School and approved by the Chapter in accordance with the laws of the National Society.

Phi Kappa Phi was founded in 1897 at the University of Maine and was originally named The Morrill Society, in honor of the sponsor of the Congressional act which provided for land-grant colleges and universities. In 1900 it was transformed into a national society by the Presidents of The University of Maine, The University of Tennessee, and Pennsylvania State University. The next Chapter to join was the University of Massachusetts Amherst, which remains the fourth-oldest Chapter in the United States. The society was renamed Phi Kappa Phi in 1900, from the initial letter of each Greek word forming its adopted motto: Philosopia Krateito Photon, "Let the Love of Learning Rule the World."

The Honor Society of Phi Kappa Phi

To be eligible for membership, Juniors and Seniors must have a GPA which places them in the top ten percent of their respective classes. Only two Graduate Students per program are nominated by their Graduate Directors.

The Phi Kappa Phi Initiation Ceremony was held in Mahar Auditorium, on Sunday, May 5th, 2002, with North-East Regional PKP Vice President Dr. Ronald Johnson of Old Dominion University as principal speaker.

President	Professor John R. Nelson, Jr.
Vice President	Acting Chancellor Marcellete Williams
Treasurer	Professor John A. Hunt
Secratary	Mary Norton
Vice President	Dean Thomas O'Brien, SOM
Honored Guest	Dean Linda Slakey, Commonwealth College

Graduate Students
Wendy H. Bergoffen
Patricia L. Gambanini
Meghan Elizabeth Griffith
Christian Guhl
Sarah Rachel Kelley
Shameem Nyla Khaliq
Vijaya R. Lakamraju
Bing Liang
Denise F. Lieberum
Yuko Matsuda
Constance Ann Parks
Molly Pasquale
Christine Dee Pollard
George F. Roberson
Taryn Michelle Scott
Osman Sabri Unsal
Laura Lynn Wright

Seniors
Betty Yessenia Alban
Tania Lisa Arell
Ryan S. Bartosz
Ruth D. Berrios
Sarah Elizabeth Blair
Michael S. Bloom
Tovah Eve Bodner
Jordyn Mane Boesch
Alexander Dowling Bogel
Michael F. Bresnahan
Rachel D. Britt-Little
Marta Maria Bulkiewicz
Jacqueline L. Cadman
Julie Erin Callahan
Elio Casarella
Colleen Elizabeth Chesarone
Kara Anne Childs
Anna Sioni Cohen-Cole
Joan E. Crowell
Sally A. Delaney-Dorman
Allyson D. DeLorenzo
Gerrit Dawson DeYoung
Carolyn Kim Dong
Katie Dube

Major
English American Studies
M.L.A.
Philosophy
Business Administraton
Plant and Soil Sciences
Education
Electrical and Computer Engineering
Hotel Restaurant and Travel Administration
Japanese
Japanese
Plant and Soil Sciences
Business Administration
Exercise Science: Biomechanics Geography
Journalism
Electrical and Computer Engineering
English

Major
Psychology
Civil Engineering
Environmental Science
UWW
Apparel Marketing
Theater
Dance
Animal Science: Pre-Medicine
English
Psychology
Art History
Psychology
History
Animal Science
Finance
Communication Disorders
Hotel, Restaurant, Travel Administration
Linguistics/ Anthropology
Music
Facilities Administration-UWW
Psychology
Psychology
Biology
English

Calthine A. DuBois
Kimberly A. Durand
Alison Carter Durham
Matthew James Frias
Torrey P. Fuller
Callie Jean Gaherty
Margaret O. Haines
Jennifer M. Herbert
Florence Michelle Anne-Marie Heuschen
Joseph B. Housley
Karen Rebecca Howard
Kenneth S. Irwin
Ji-Yin Kim
John A. Kostek
Ruu Kotani
Aaron Lanou
Alison Jean MacDonald
Shannon Maney
Christopher C. Manz
Jill M. Marna
Barrett Kyle Nordstrom
Kelly L. Parker
Jayna Rae Plasse
Melissa N. Pratt
Cory Andrea Proud
Amanda Marie Rork
Scott William Satank
Victoria Lee Shaffer
Arnold Fabian Skretta
Joel Andrew Southall
Claire E. Spencer
Brenna L. Stegelmann
Travis Taylor
Bnan Tremblay
Louise Marie Walsh
Timothy Michael Wall
David Francis Wenninger
Lindsey L. Woodworth
Jeanette Sandy Zissell

Juniors
Meredith L. Alexander
Melissa May Andrews
Tim Andrews

Anthropology
Comparative Literature
Communications
Economics-Mathematics
TWT
Journalism: Sociology
Sociology
Legal Studies
Anthropology
Comparative Literature
Psychology
UWW
Hotel, Restaurant, Travel Administration
Operations Management
Economics: BDIC
BDIC
Communication Disorders
Psychology/ Legal Studies
BDIC
Pre-Veterinary Linguistics
Exercise Science
Anthropology
English
Political Science: Women's Studies
Management
Sociology: Comparative Literature
Psychology
Legal Studies/ Social Thought
Biology
Natural Resource Economics
Communications
Political Science
History: Communications
Exercise Science
History
Legal Studies/ Political Science
Accounting
English

Major
Anthropology/ Legal Studies
Nursing/ Psychology
English/ Economics

Andrew J. Baj
Erica P. Baron
Samantha Louise Beaton
Shannon Eileen Beckley-Manor
Shaina Mei Bronstein
Danielle M. Brown
Steven J. Brujic
Andrew P. Caouette
Christine M. Capaldo
Katherine M. Carey
Jeffrey M. Cheng
Melissa Moran Consalvo
Brooke Elizabeth Daly
Kwame Edem Darkwa
Julia Eliane Deane
Raymond Anthony D'Eon, IV
Deborah L. Dill
Rachel A. Dinsman
Joanna M. Dixon
Brendan J. Donovan
Adam John Dupere
Lee Edwards
Tamara Severance Evanson
Meghan C. Farrell
Seth Steven Fisteland
Tania L. Fowler
Willow Ann George
Peter James Giannone
Shaun Matthew Gillis
Jeremy Goldstein
Emanuel Gomes
Kemba Renée Gray
William J. Growney
Colleen Hanlon
Karla A. Hubschwertin
Jonas Aquila Jacobson
Darren Butler Johnson
Ryan G. LaBranche
Rebecca E. Lattrell
Jonathan Laubinger
Mi Lin
Joseph A. Martiniuk
Erica Holly Mattison

Accounting
Social Thought and the Political Economy
Communications
Social Thought and the Political Economy
Plant and Soil Science
Communication Disorders
Political Science/ Legal Studies
English
Sociology/ Elementary Education
Biology
Finance
Music
Finance
Economics
English: Biology/ Pre-Med
Accounting
English
Political Engineering/ German
Psychology
Finance
Marketing
Psychology
UWW
Psychology
Sport Management
Spanish/ International Accounting
Psychology
Marketing
Exercise Science
English
Legal Studies
Hotel, Restaurant, Travel Administration
Theater
English
Geology
English
Sport Management
Political Science
Microbiology
Philosophy
Electrical Engineering
Plant and Soil Sciences
Psychology

Paul M. McLain
Patrick A. McCoy
Jaqueline McCreanor
Cody G. Milne
Kristina M. Niles
Sarah Jo O'Keefe
Raymond J. Ostendorf
Thalya C. Parrilla
Jonathan W. Parthum
Leslie Scott Perry
Sara E. Peterson
Kimberly Jean Rabon
Sean P. Reilly
Lesley Anne Ring
Timothy Michael Roberts
Russel John Rosinski
Jennifer L. Ross
Kathrine Ryan
Michael John Saltzman, Jr
Lisa L. Sandri
Christopher Sheehan
Corey Jean Shepard
Sean P. Sibley
Blake Alan Sigman
Katherine Lynn Smulligan
Eric E. Soderstrom
Kimberley A. Stanfield
Francis Conin Stone
Courtney W. Streeter
Jaclyn Ferne Sullivan
Beth Szymanski
Janine M. Tangney
Crystal Dawn Therrien
Kate Lauren Thompson
Frank P. Tiscione
Robin Vyleshwar
Cathy Watson
Michael G. Welch
Stephanie L. Wilson
Daniel E. Woolfrey
Kelly L. Wright
Joshua S. Youman
Alexander Max Zurflueh

Geology
Environmental Sciences
Finance
Exercise Science

Interior Design
Sociology: Spanish
Anthropology/ Environmental Studies
Computer Engineering
Biology: Biochemistry & Molecular Finance
Biology
Environmental Policy
Sociology
Operations Management
Building Materials: Wood Technology Spanish
Psychology
Journalism
Business: Marketing
Political Science3
Urban Forestry
English
Finance
Exercise Science
Journalism
Sociology
Economics
Economics
Sociology
Chemistry
English: Journalism
Exercise Science: Pre-Medical Legal Studies
Sport Management
Management
Biology
Communications
Journalism
Elementary Education
English
History
Finance

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM "WRITING IS A LONELY LIFE, BUT THE ONLY LIFE WORTH LIVING." —FLAUBERT ED/OP EDITOR: MATTHEW DESPRES

Encouraging positives:

Ideas exchanged healthy

During a year when hopes have spiraled downward — at this University, with budget cuts, and across the world, as the events of 9/11 forced us to reevaluate our place and future — there has been an alarming shortage of positive ideas and movements to grasp onto. While the country and the administration have taken to running us in circles, the students are finally stirring — backing their words with actions and their ideas with movement.

Tuesday night at the Campus Center auditorium put a face to student interest here at the University of Massachusetts. Highlighting the events of Black Pride Week, poet Saul Williams inspired a more than capacity room with his unique verse, and responses to the community that turned out. His handle on language is extraordinary, his messages reactionary and celebratory, bred out of both anger and hope. His banter between recitations flowed like poetry and the remaining audience hung on every word.

It was exactly what this campus needed.

It needed a motivation, a spark, an idea to act on that's not spoon-fed by the administrators. It needed to hear the truth of what's going on, not the polished, boiled-down version readily available at every turn. It needed to hear it in straight black and white. And it did, loud and clear.

Student group Project 2050 performed a remarkable spoken word/dance piece that highlighted the existing inequality in the United States through raw fact and personalized accounts. Rap group Dead Prez emphasized information over performance, detailing the gross injustices upon minorities in this country, as well as the specifics of what must be done to place power into equal hands.

Some students walked out during the lengthy evening, particularly as Dead Prez expanded on the realities of black culture and society.

What a shame.

Students here shouldn't be scared to hear the other side, the ins and outs that are bypassed in the classroom. Those that stayed heard a wealth of student opinions, leaving with a better picture of who constitutes the environment in which they live. That's not something that'll happen in most standard educational environments here. That's not something that the administration could ever possibly convey from the detached position they so often spout from.

This was students' both by and for.

We at The Collegian encourage more events such as this, where actual information is passed and passion is invoked. The University and classroom atmospheres have their places, but when this brand of knowledge is turned over to the hands of those with energy, ideas suddenly become concrete.

On Tuesday night, there were no empty protests or rallies. Rather, with knowledge and a masterful command of language, minds were spurred to think and act.

We hope it continues.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

You want a columnist spot? Get your keester down here before the end of the semester and talk to Dan or Matt. We'll let you know what you need to do to get a head start and land that ever elusive spot on the Ed/Op page.

Testimony of a Stranger

SHARON STAPLES

Still 25 cents short? Mother of God! I had been searching my book bag, inside and out, for the past ten minutes, only to celebrate a short-lived victory. All I wanted was a Dr. Pepper. I had to do the next best thing. I had to do what any broke college student in desperate need of a caffeine boost would resort to... it was time to beg.

"Never leave school," commented the 35 year-old undergrad that happened to cross my path at that exact moment, presenting herself as my first victim for robbery. As luck would have it, Donna didn't have any change on her, but she did have a lifelong story to share.

Fortunately, a journalism major, I thrive on storytelling and, though, my target for change was off - her need for an ear seemed to hit its mark. Yet, after revealing her regrets about dropping out of college when she was younger and expressing the hardships of picking it up again at this point in her life, her subject matter seemed to drift to mortgages, marriage and mayhem.

"Sorry, I don't know why I told you any of that," she added, after a good fifteen minute confessional. "I'm not," I responded. And I meant it. Ok, so I may have been dehydrated, drained and dumbfounded...but Donna (a pseudo-name, of course, as there were no formal introductions) taught me two important things that day.

1. Never undermine the value of a listening ear, most of the time it's what people need the most.

2. And, more importantly, never leave school, ever, ever.

All right, so there will come a day when we all must model our caps and gowns in the midst of those sands, rejoicing in a time of memory and achievement. But, until that day arrives, how foolish we would be to let these days pass us by and take them for granted.

Only in college can we sleep until noon, on an given day, without reason for an excuse. Only in college can we study abroad or go on a domestic exchange, with a fairly good chance that credit will transfer, while soaking up the Hawaiian sun or exploring the villas of Spain. Only in college can we enjoy the wonderfully unbalanced oxymoron of limited responsibility and unlimited opportunity. Only in college can we binge drink for three nights straight, skipping Friday obligations and trade wild tales of beer pong triumphs and funneling fun during 3pm brunch, with out being branded an alcoholic.

This innocent hunt for a refreshment loan left me chasing after much more: the meaning of my college years, thus far.

I didn't catch the chance to tell Donna my own version of college life. Partly because she needed to breathe, but mostly because she never asked. If she had, however, I would have told her that as a second-semester junior I have few regrets concerning my time here. I've made great friends, (the best in fact), attended fun parties, achieved decent grades, went away on spring breaks, studied abroad. And yes, I am still attempting to write some other interesting editorial pieces for The Collegian, even if only other week (though, apparently, I am the only columnist who has yet to receive hate mail - in fact - anymail at all!).

As you know though, college is as tough as it can be, too. From nose picking to hair twirling to whatever, how must find ways to entertain ourselves during the most boring of Gen Eds, the survival of the strongest, indeed. Not to mention that surviving two parties, plus and a half for pool feels like living in a constant dorm requires ultimate survival strategies. Year in, we forget, there is the cramming for exams, which many of us are doing now, and stressing over papers, which, in fact, can be detrimental to your health.

Don't believe me? University of Wisconsin psychologist Christopher Coe used stressed-out students in the midst of their final exams, as subjects to a study that concluded blood samples taken during exams indicated the reduced ability of killer cells to kill cancer cells. Let's not even bring up the decreased exercise time and self-medicating of comfort foods that we all experience during crunch time.

With the passing of every winter break and summer recess, each of us has confronted separation anxiety from the place that we have come to call home, facing the transition of resettling someplace else. The magic and heartbreak of friendships and romances become realized once they are temporarily chipped with distance, or perhaps without the luxury of being just a few doors down.

For those of you who are graduating, alumni weekend may offer you the next chance to rub elbows with your fellow classmates at the uptown bars. Of course, there will be those who will remain angst-ridden, a la present force in your lives. Those who share memories with you that cannot be broken by the miles, the circumstances or the changes that are a part of real life.

The college is quite the roller-coaster ride. An experience so easy to enjoy, yet equally troubling. But all in all, each of us, in some way, searching for ourselves in the midst of thousands who are growing alongside of us? But perhaps this is an ongoing scenario in life, at least, that's what I gathered from Dennis Leary's testimony. Regardless, it is the support and love from others as well as the confidence and courage we find within ourselves that help us make it through.

Congratulations, seniors, on a job well done!

Sharon Stapples is a Collegian columnist.

Farewell, my friends

ROB SCHULTZ

This is for all my friends.

Perhaps you think that it is a waste of your time and my words to publish a column where all I do is list my friends and tiny anecdotes about them as a way of thanking them for what they've done for me in four years of college. Perhaps you think that I give a damn. Perhaps you are mistaken.

Friends make college what it is. College without friends is like drinking alone — you still get what you set out for, but it isn't any fun getting there. A chance to single people you care about out for praise — even brief, inside-type comments like the ones below, cannot be passed up.

I have written columns for this paper for four years. I always pondered what issue I'd take up on my last regularly scheduled appearance. And here it is. Something that's really important to me. It may not matter.

So screw my readers.

This is for you, guys. Thanks. I'm sentimental. Much love.

Roach — Second only to the Berenstein Bears. Chains in coolness scale.

Mike D - It's OK that you work for an adult porn that night at 5:30 in the morning. You're still the man, even if the mullet is serious.

Bernie - Maybe I am a little biased, but I don't never said that you were.

SuePa - You're the best. Also your ass kicking skills are second to none.

Ken Steak- beers and M.V.S.U.I.

Martignetti — Independent research: I recently discovered that my ear is the asshole itself. Who knew?

Dedpriz — If it weren't for you, I'd never read anything good in the Collegian.

Jenn — Pass the whiskey and I'll take the cork horn, we're raising some hell tonight.

The 06' Lam Adams RA staff — Best cluster EVER. Hands down. (This means you too, Resnicow.)

Kurt — Possibly the smartest mark ever crafted.

Sam — Possibly the markiest smart ever made. Don't point, let the Lovable with cheese, though.

Tobias — Your head isn't that big. And stop talking all badass 'cos you big softy.

Ben — May the book never end.

Sarah — Thanks for living with me. Much appreciated.

Eric — I think of you as my friend.

Roberto — If there's ever a nuclear war, you would be a master of handling it. Calmly, reasonably and with a clear command of the phone. Until I could believe you could clear up any confusion.

Rose — Always there for me.

Thanks. Ya' some of you point out to me on a regular basis. I really don't deserve you. But that doesn't mean I won't miss you.

Rob Schultz is a Collegian Columnist.

H to the Pizzo in the Campus Center Basement

NICK PIZZOLATO

If I may add to what is already known by the rest of UMass red-septum-ites, you can get Coke and Diet Coke out my nostrils and mouth. The Pelican Three — soon to be known as "Mysterious Three" if I could go somewhere else — is still open, and it was fun to drink to excess (that is, for me, about 6 or 7 beers that can get me to 20 degrees Fahrenheit, which is the Pelican Three).

I've decided that I may as well go on my latest rant. 1) Mental rift between 2) Dressed up as Olivia Newton-John Halloween 3) Pistol basketball on the Putters shorts (you didn't get laughs) 4) The rule is all that I never can seem clear it: accompanying a passing three-on-three basketball with Kids Wanna Rock, Bobby Brown and Ronnell = Pre-Buzz Blizzard. I guess some things were never meant to happen. Just think of the Nick commercials that could have been. Pizzo vs. Pizza Time.

I don't care how many times I hear it: "A tough place to play" will ALWAYS be funny.

Being a member of the Communication department here at UMass, I was recently invited to the Communication Bar-B-Que, where we get to hobnob with all of our professors from the last few years. I'm not sure if I'm going to go. The determining factor will be if there's beer there. Not because I need alcohol to have a good time, but I would be worth it to challenge Sut Jhally to a game of beer pong. I think he's a natural. He's got the height, reach, and I'd just to like to see him try to psyche out his opponent during a critical shot.

I went to Syracuse, New York for the Sweet Sixteen back in March. It is a cold, depressing city, where hope enters but rarely leaves.

Cheers to Steve Lappas for making me believe in UMass Basketball. Jeers to Steve Lappas for taking away the beloved "Hey" song from the Hoops Band's list of songs they can play. Somehow "Soul Man" (as good as a song it is) just doesn't cut it. I implore you, bring back the "Hey" song.

Frat Parties: Ooo-era-ted (clap clap clappity clap).

A thing I miss from the dorms? The UMass Bootleg movie channel.

The R.S. Union needs to go to the campus pond, stick its head in and wait for death. And that's all I have to say about that.

How can the term "Canuck" be perceived as being a slur when a professional sports team has it as their name?

The UMass French Department: Tough place to play (see? Still funny).

Highlights of Wednesday nights: 1.) Guitar Dudes 2.) Pitchers 3.) Guitar Dudes 4.) Irish Car Bombs 5.) Guitar Dudes.

A question for the ages: How much wood would a woodchuck chuck, if a woodchuck could chuck wood?

In all honesty, you can't say "letter sucks," because he doesn't. However, you're more than welcome to say "Shane Spencer sucks."

"Name Our Show" was the most underrated WUCH show ever. The 1-3 time slot on Sunday afternoons is what killed it.

WUCH: tough place to play (I know you're laughing on the inside).

I won't be surprised that if in ten years this will be the University of Massachusetts School of Management and Engineering.

I mean it when I say UMass Basketball will be a force in the A-10 sooner than you think.

Since I'm on my UMass basketball kick, the funniest thing I saw at a game was "Lappas on a Stick" (credit to Brads for that one).

I am still afraid to go into the DuBois Library. I just have the feeling that it's going to fall on me.

I successfully joined the UMass Ski 'n' Board Club for the last three years and never skied once.

Canada: There are just too many jokes and not enough time, eh?

When I came here, I didn't drink.

"MediaBytes": the most underrated Arts & Living column ever.

I once told a kid I didn't want to sign his petition to advocate the halting of sweatshops. You should have seen the look on his face.

The Source: A tough place to play (c'mon tell me you're still laughing).

I love going uptown and seeing my teachers drinking. There is just something refreshing in knowing that I drink to get away from them, and they drink to get away from me.

While in Webster, I had three roommates. One was a kid who knew all the words to DMX, 2Pac, and Garth Brooks. The other really liked Kid Rock. And my last one was a Yankee fan. I had the biggest problem with the Yankee fan.

MassPIRG: you want to save the planet, yet you pass out thousands of flyers that eventually get tossed. Can we say "counter-productive?"

In the Collegian, the Peaceful Collegian, The Monster sleeps tonight.

"You know who else had pieces of flair? Nazis."

"Quiz the Pizz" - you like it, you love it, you want more of it.

The Ski Club playing Softball. Ok, now that was a bad idea.

Communication Department: Tough place to play (ok, you're right, it's just not funny anymore).

Nick Pizzolato is The Monster in the Basement.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

"WHAT'S THIS PIZZ?... ...IT'S A CRITIC'S DEFENSE... ...OKAY. LATER."

Pizz reflects...

Three short years ago, I wandered down here. For two reasons: 1) My parents were bugging me to and 2) I really wanted to write some movie reviews. So I came down to the first general meeting and after a rousing introduction by then-Editor-in-Chief Seth Koenig, I went to the Arts and Living department meeting and listened to the "Work for Arts & Living Speech" (which I don't think has ever changed) and decided that this was for me. I had the opportunity to review movies, review CDs, gain a spot on the Arts cover page and maybe even write a weekly column. And with that choice, I started my relationship with Arts & Living. But this being my last Arts cover page ever (sniff sniff, tear tear), I thought I would stroll down memory lane and think about my favorite Arts & Living moments.

BEING ANNOINTED TUBENOTES WRITER

I'll never forget where I was when Ryan Benharris, then author of the illustrious Tub Notes column, asked me to take the reigns. I was in my room doing work (and by work I think I was watching TV) when the phone rang. Ryan told me that he was unable to continue with Tube Notes and asked me to take over. I was ecstatic. Here I was, a writer who was only in his second semester as a Collegian writer, passing in stories about Superbowl commercials and movie reviews, and suddenly I'm being handed an Arts & Living institution (OK, more of a legacy). I was thrilled and for the next year, I did the best I could to live up to the history. With stories that included my feelings on VH1, "Junkyard Wars," and my public apology for the XFL. Tube Notes was the crowning jewel of my Arts career.

KEVIN SMITH INTERVIEW

"What's that," I asked?

Turn to REFLECT, page 6

A critic's defense

Don't get me wrong – Ocean's Eleven was a perfectly acceptable movie. On a ten-point scale, I'd give it a seven. But it's nothing more than that. It's not a particularly intelligent film and it certainly didn't bring anything to the world of cinema that hadn't been brought before.

Don't argue this point.

Critics are forever looking for great things: great movies, great albums, great songs, great books, great scripts, great characters, great whatever. These are the things that making being a critic worthwhile – there is a real limit on, even if only for camp, watching bad movies and listening to bad music (or looking at bad art or reading trashy novels or, again, whatever). There is a real feeling of satisfaction in participating in something artistic and coming away going, "wow, that was great!"

Which didn't happen at the end of Ocean's Eleven. I walked out of the theater going, "gosh, that was a perfectly acceptable viewing experience." Really. Every character from the movie, all of them appealing, was underutilized because there were so many of them. And as for the script, while they all might have been master criminals, it certainly was helpful that every single piece of the impressively inconceivable puzzle fell into place.

Don't argue about that, either.

Fundamentally, everybody is looking for great things: food, weather, sex, whatever. We wouldn't have words like "okay" and "decent" and "acceptable" and "adequate" if we weren't. We have to be able to describe that tension, middle ground that goes on forever between our two extremes: great and terrible.

There are some people who believe that critics are out to get their favorite bands, movies, books, paintings, whatever. Then they turn around and slam the [illegible]

Turn to CRITIC, page 6

MD sez adios

It might have been when I saw Jess, with frosting smeared under her eyes as makeshift war paint, hurling a massive piece of birthday cake at Mitch on the balcony while I was half passed out on the couch. Or when Shauna picked Soulkeeper off the shelf strictly because it had a cheesy holograph on the cover. Or when Sam and I realized that "Me Hulkamaniac" would be the greatest headline ever written, and the ultimate description of Ken's Hulk worship column for the Hulk Hogan coverpage. It could have been any of these or many other moments when I realized that I had the coolest job ever. I was magically being forced to hang out with the people I love and go about killing time in the name of "research" and getting paid for it.

Highlights:

—When there is a gap in the semester timeline for Thursday Arts cover pages, I search high and low for any ideas, most of which usually come the night before we print. Last October I asked distinguished Tube Notes and Under The Ring columnist Kurt Polesky for his input, and so was born the Hulk Hogan coverpage. From the man that brought you the "drinking" coverpage (and the ill-fated "masturbation" coverpage, never to see the light of day) a spread was assembled to exalt the Orange Goblin (so named for his unique skin tint). Controversial pictures, passionate reviews of Ice cinema Hogan and complete marking out by Ken Campbell ensued.

—For the Halloween coverpage, which usually involves at least one article on horror flicks, Editor-in-Chief Sam Wilkinson and I decided the only way to approach it was to make the entire page a shrine to the horror genre. Articles about horror film experts and novices and the art of watching horror films sober and inebriated were born from a Bud-Light-sponsored power hour featuring assorted

Design by Sam Wil[illegible]

critic

continued from page 5

choices ("How can you say the Backstreet Boys suck? They're way better than the Strokes!"). It's the same game though – the casual fan defending his or her choices is no different than the critic, save the critic has a place to publish. Ultimately, criticism is just a name game, from the three line reviews in The Village Voice to the pages and pages of literary criticism that English majors wade through. At its most base, it is just an opinion.

Duke Ellington once opined, "if it sounds good, it is good." He was right. Critics don't know any better than anyone else, regardless of what we want you to believe. If there is any reason that we wear our thoughts on our sleeves, the way we often to, it is because we have sifted through the sand to find ourselves a gem. The more we sift, the more we give ourselves the privilege to argue that something was "perfectly acceptable viewing" while suggesting that our opinion is fact. But it isn't.

Therein is the irony – this is just an opinion. There is no end to this story because there is no end to this argument, because everything fundamentally comes down to what we do and don't like. So, in summation, I liked Oyster's Haven. I just didn't think it was that great.

Sam Wilkinson is a Collegian staff member who would trade his West Virginian soul for a 24-hour Indian Restaurant.

MD

continued from page 5

Collegian staffers, while viewing Sorority Babes in Slime Ball Bowl-a-Rama.

—Another Tuesday night without a coverpage was brought back from the edge of sanity by alert Assistant Editor Shauna Billings who decided it was high time we dedicated a coverpage to women who kick ass. After a panel decided that boo-tay was a lar superior term than ass, the page found an anchor with Assistant Editor Julie Burrell's look at neglected female artists through history. Leave it to special guest arts writers Melissa Hammel and Mike Kulak and myself to contribute fan worship columns about Bjork and Buffy the Vampire Slayer.

—Physically sensing the upcoming release of a new Friday the 13th movie, Sam and I knew the only way to pay tribute was to dedicate a cover page to the legacy of Jason Voorhees. As Julie and Shauna shook their heads in disgust, we rounded up Collegian staffers for a marathon of all-nine Fridays the 13th movies. As the films were down out patience and sense of decency, a Lord of the Flies re-enactment in the Brandywine complex was avoided solely by the anaesthetizing effects of large quantities of Wings and Genesee Cream Ale.

It's been fun. Adios.

Mike Delano is a Collegian staff member who marks out for Buffy and metal, but marks out 10X harder for his Collegian peeps.

Massive Attack offer sparse, vital DVD

Robert del Naja, Grant Marshall and Andrew Vowles of Massive Attack

COURTESY JONAS ÅKERLUND

By Kevin Monahan
COLLEGIAN STAFF

MASSIVE ATTACK
Eleven Promos/DVD
Virgin

The title pretty much says it all. Eleven Promos. That's it. You'll find none of the frills that exploit the DVD medium here. No extras. No insert. No 5.1 DDS. Not even cover art; just the promo clips.

The absence of these does not make this disc any less essential for the Massive Attack fan. The PCM Stereo mix doesn't sound bad. You won't notice the difference unless you actually have a 5.1 system. If you really want the cover art, you can download several different inserts from the band's website (there's a link directly to this page for those with DVD ROM drives). And let's face it; no one buys a collection of music videos for the extras. They are just that — extras. We want the videos.

And videos we get, eleven of them (hence the DVD's title). An interesting variety of directors and the presence of the Bristol trio make this compilation a fine demonstration of the effectiveness of a music video. Core members Robert "3D" Del Naja, Grant "Daddy G" Marshall and Andrew "Mushroom" Vowles seem to have the natural acting abilities that few musicians possess. On the clip for "Angel," Marshall conveys a wealth of emotions through facial expressions alone. Del Naja masters the art of appearing as menacing as his vocals sound on the clips for "Risingson" and "Inertia Creeps." Also making welcome appearances are guest vocalists Shara Nelson ("Unfinished Sympathy"), Horace Andy ("Angel") and one-time honorary band member Adrian "Tricky Kid" Thaws ("Karmacoma," "Safe from Harm").

Director Baillie Walsh delivers competent but disappointing videos for "Safe from Harm" and "Unfinished Sympathy." The latter of which has the potential to be interesting, but ends up not doing the song justice. Thankfully, watching Nelson synch the lyrics while walking down a Los Angeles street make the clip worthwhile. The most visually stunning video comes courtesy of Stephane Sednaoui (director of Björk's "Big Time Sensuality") with "Sly." The swirling colors and lush photography offer the perfect compliment to the song. Jonathan Glazer, who joined the ranks of David Fincher and Spike Jonze last year with his feature film Sexy Beast, turns in the strangest clip of the lot with "Karmacoma." Glazer is a man who loves the kubrick references (see: his video for Blur's "The Universal"). He adds some Tarantino-inspired themes as well and some general creepiness for good measure. The shot of the three band members with Tricky is one of the memorable images of the video.

"Teardrop" takes the cake for disturbing images. Singing fetuses with the voice of Liz Frasier (of Cocteau Twins) might be a bit too much to handle, "Risingson" and "Inertia Creeps," the latter directed by The Wiz (The Smashing Pumpkins' "Stand Inside Your Love") offer similar claustrophobic settings, and a chance for Del Naja's looming presence, compounded with his rapping, to get under your skin. "Angel," shot in a parking garage near London's Paddington station offers a bizarre chase sequence which makes it easy to see why so many feature films used the song on its soundtracks (Ps. Go. Snatch).

Eleven Promos offers visual accompaniment to the best songs from Massive Attack's three innovative albums: Blue Lines (1991), Protection (1994) and Mezzanine (1998), and that's all it claims to offer. This DVD is as stripped down as it can possibly get. The lack of anything but the disc leaves you to focus on just the videos, and once you watch them you can see why leaving out anything unnecessary was a good idea.

reflect

continued from page 5

"Do you want to interview Kevin Smith?" asked Mike.

"Yeah I do." And with that I had possibly the greatest opportunity as a journalist, to interview a god among independent filmmakers. Kevin Smith, the writer/director of Clerks, Chasing Amy, Dogma, and most recently Jay and Silent Bob Strike Back, was going to do a phone interview and I would be on the other line. I was going to talk to Kevin Smith. And to boot, I got a free DVD of Jay and Bob to watch and ask questions about. OK, yeah, I only had fifteen minutes to pick his brain, but I got two questions in, and he laughed when I asked him who was harder to direct: Jason Mewes or the Monkey. Kevin Smith laughed at me. There is a hope for me yet.

COVER PAGES

The Thursday Arts cover page is definitely fun to work on; being down in the basement trying to bang out a story in time for a deadline. You'd be surprised at how much you can write when you're under pressure. Some of my favorites include: Arts-Crap, summarizing the mindless junk we get down here. Cultural Violence, based on the mind opening exhibit at the Fine Arts Center. The annual Grammy/Emmy/Oscar cover pages that I've had the honor to contributing to. The Drinking Page, it was controversial yes, but I like to think that it broke down walls.

I have loved everything about writing for Arts & Living since the first day I started, and the first day I saw my name in print. There are too many memories and not enough space to say everything I want. I had a blast, and thanks for reading my stuff.

Nick Pizzolato is a Collegian staff member who will gladly sing Tom Petty songs or bust out Eminem rhymes on command.

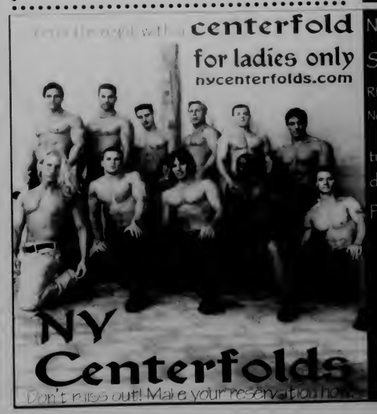
No more Buffy Quotes :(

THRILL SEEKERS

We have a number of exotic cars that need to be test-driven by individuals who are willing to take risks. Great career opportunity for individuals 18+ with valid medical insurance. For more information go to www.testdriveinfo.com

Paul Jacobs
LIGHT HAULING
• Insured • Reliable • Artwork • Offices • Students • Businesses • Residences
End of the Semester!!
Need to Move??
"PAULMAULS"
(413) 584-1136

TAPESTRY Health
Affordable and Confidential
• Gyn Exams • Birth Control • Pregnancy Testing • Emergency Contraception • HIV/STD Testing • Quit Smoking
Bangs Center, 70 Boltwood Walk, Amherst
16 Center Street, Northampton
(413) 586-2539 or
www.tapestryhealth.org



North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd. North Amherst, MA
www.northamherstmotors.com
549-RENT
OOPS!
POTTERS AUTO & TRUCK RENTALS
• Cars • Mini Vans • Trucks • SUV's • Cargo Vans • 15 Passenger Vans • Low Daily/Weekly Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older • Direct Billing to Insurance Co • MHEC Rates
(On bus route)

Rental Office
1040 N.Pleasant St. #410
Amherst, MA 01002
413.549.0145
NEW PUFFTON VILLAGE
Serving All Of Your Rental Needs

KNOW ANY SENIORS?
Did you ever just run up to one and give them a nice, big KISS?
Now's your chance to "Kiss" your favorite seniors goodbye!
$6.50 or 2 for $12.00
Tell your friends that you will miss them. Send them a 2002 mug or champagne glass filled with Hershey Kisses!
To order your Kiss today you can either...
Stop by the STARS' table on the concourse
OR
go to www.umassalumni.com under the "Seniors" section
If you have any questions, call the STARS office at 577-1390.
(Have you bought your Commencement Ball tickets yet?)

CINEMARK
The Best Seat in Town
CINEMARK AT HAMPSHIRE MALL
367 Russell St. 413-587-4233
Schedule for Friday 5/3 – Thursday 5/9
DIGITAL SURROUND SOUND IN ALL AUDITORIUMS
Purchase Tickets Online @ cinemark.com
SPIDERMAN (PG13) 1:45 4:45 8:00 10:35*
SPIDERMAN (PG13) 1:45 4:45 8:00 10:35*
SPIDERMAN (PG13) 1:15 5:15 8:30*
SCORPION KING (PG13) 12:25 4:50 7:45 10:25*
DUECES WILD (R) 12:55 4:25 7:05 9:45*
HOLLYWOOD ENDING (PG13) 12:20 4:30 7:15 10:00*
LIFE OR SOMETHING LIKE IT (PG13) 12:25 4:35 7:35 10:15*
JASON X (R) 12:50 5:00 7:55 10:10*
MURDER BY NUMBERS
THE SCORPION KING
CHANGING LANES (R)
HIGH CRIMES (PG13)
PANIC ROOM (R)
THE ROOKIE (PG)
ICE AGE (PG)
MURDER BY NUMBERS
doors open at 11:45am
+NO PASSES. NO SUPERSAVERS
Tickets & showtimes available at cinemark.com

Come Party at the Harp!!!
Voted Best New Bar/Club in the Valley!
THE HARP
THURSDAY
Alruda
Groove rock from the Cape
SATURDAY
U.N. Band
Valley regae/ roots stars
May Specials
BBC Maiboch • PaperCity Goats Peak Bock
$2.75/pint
Absolute Tonic $2.50
(413) 548-6900
163 Sunderland Rd. Amherst, MA
Just off the bus route next to Cowl's Lumber
"Start Your Own Tradition"

Now appearing at:
Seven O's
Rt. 11e Sunderland
Near Cliffside Apts.
time: 6-9 (Saturday)
date: May 11th
phone: 665-8788
tickets door: $10.00
advanced: $8.00
Floyd Patterson:
9 p.m.-1 a.m.

Matt Brady's All-Time Team

Mack was baseball's gentleman for many successful years

1.	Cobb	LF
2.	Wagner	SS
3.	Ruth	RF
4.	Mays	CF
5.	Gehrig	1B
6.	Schmidt	3B
7.	Alomar	2B
8.	Cochrane	C
9.	Johnson	P
10.	Mack	Man.

Best Of The Rest: Managers

1. John McGraw
2. Leo Durocher
3. Stanley Anderson

This is part 10 of a 10-part series portraying the 10 members of "Brady's All-Time Team" – a lineup consisting of the best Major League Baseball players ever.

"If you made a mistake, Connie never bawled you out on the bench or in front of anybody else. He'd get you along a few days later and then he'd say something like, 'Don't you think it would have been better if you'd made the play this way?' And you knew damn well it would have been better. No question about it." – Rube Bressler

Credentials: Most wins ever by a manager (3,731); won five World Series titles (1910, '11, '13, '29, '31); held manager's position for Philadelphia Athletics for 50 years

The Argument: I honestly think that John McGraw was the most skilled manager who ever lived. But he can't be the manager of this team because he and Ty Cobb would kill each other, not to mention the fact that he would bench Babe Ruth. After establishing himself as the master of smallball with the brawling Baltimore Orioles, McGraw left Ban Johnson's league after a feud and joined the New York Giants, where he served as manager for 31 years, winning 10 pennants and finishing second 11 times. But most legendary was his temper, as he would often yell at umpires and players alike. His baseball genius and camaraderie with Mack makes him the perfect guy to be in the third base coach's box.

Leo Durocher was the only manager who could give McGraw a run for his money in terms of temper. Leo "the Lip" was legendary for his adage that "nice guys finish last," and his unwavering desire to win is one of his most positive characteristics. He served as head coach for 24 years, most memorably with the Cubs and the Dodgers. His amazing memory and baseball sense makes him the ideal guy to be across the diamond from McGraw, coaching first.

So that leaves me with a bench coach to choose. At first I was pretty sure that Tommy Lasorda would be my guy, but after further review I needed someone less...like Tommy. So who better as bench coach than the guy who is third in all-time wins behind Mack and McGraw than Sparky Anderson? In his 26-year career with the Reds and the Tigers, he won 2,194 games, and was most known for his relationship with players and fans as a manager who was seemingly always happy. That will give Mack a relief from the competitive, fiery nature of McGraw and Durocher.

What you didn't know: Well, you probably didn't know that the winningest manager in Major League history was born Cornelius Alexander McGillicuddy in East Brookfield, Mass. Needless to say, he was eager to earn a nickname from an early age. He first gained fame in baseball as a player. While a young catcher playing for the Washington Statesmen, he was most renowned for being able to simulate the sound of the bat barely nicking the ball, so he could convince umpires that he had caught a foul tip.

When given the opportunity to be part owner of the Philadelphia A's in 1901, Mack made himself manager of the team, and promptly became known as the symbol of gentlemanly play in baseball for the next 50 years.

He insisted on managing every game in a suit and tie, as it was the only proper uniform, in his eyes, to be worn on the field. Unlike the rest of the American League, Mack insisted that his players be on their best behavior at all times, challenging the former "beer and whiskey" league's rowdyism. That stance may have come from an episode early in his playing career, when a hotel clerk refused to rent a room to him and his teammates unless they promised to keep their distance from the other guests.

So there you have it, Major League Baseball's all-time team as I see it. And Connie Mack's knowledge and personality make him the perfect man to keep the team unified. Who else could keep Ruth and Cobb separate? Who else could flawlessly mold the chemistry of middle infielders who played 80 years apart than a man who managed "Home Run" Baker and Jimmie Foxx and against Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth and Mickey Mantle? Plus, the team can use all the foulouts it can get.

Matt Brady is a Collegian columnist.

Connie Mack (left) was baseball's mastermind.

COURTESY BASEBALL HALL OF FAME

UMass

continued from page 10

going on? But now it's become a tradition where if he doesn't do that then you know there's something wrong."

Sure, it's somewhat revolting. But it's still UMass Lacrosse. The second McFarland's guts give way, and the resulting hysteria. That is UMass Lacrosse.

"When everybody else sees McFarland throw up we all get a little more excited, because we know how excited he is at that point and it's usually a good tradition to see happen," Smith says. "It let's everyone know that we're ready to go."

And when the Minutemen hit the field, it's not unusual for their opponents to become riddled with shame. Navy felt it this season when Smith rocketed a lefty shot from the right side of the field with force strong enough to send the ball back out of the netting. Penn State felt it when Chris Fiore slung a last-second shot through 11 players into the shell from over 30 yards out. Hartford felt it when Kevin Leveille faked its goalie three times and made him fall down. Rutgers felt it when Marc Morley caught the ball with his back to the cage and slung the ball through his legs and between the pipes. Syracuse felt it when Bill Schell stoned national point-leader Mike Powell from point blank range. Georgetown felt it when McFarland stick-checked Player of the Year candidate Steve Dusseau, who was on his way to the easy fourth quarter goal. And Stony Brook felt it when Dan Paccione netted a one-handed game-winner through the legs of its goalie. That is UMass Lacrosse.

Knowing well that they're rarely given the respect they deserve, the Minutemen play each game daring to prove that Massachusetts is the newest sanctuary of the lacrosse world. UMass Lacrosse might not get the big money players, the big money sponsors or have the big money moniker. But it doesn't want to.

"We like to use that as a little motivation," Smith says. "We like to think that when we go out we don't get all the bells and whistles that everybody else get. And we think that in a lot of ways it makes us tougher and makes us more of a group. We like to keep that chip on our shoulder to keep us on edge when we play other teams."

A year removed from its 2001 NCAA Tournament snubbing, UMass is prepared to make its fight for the crown. It's a battle that began on Feb. 23 with its, 12-11, overtime loss to Hofstra and one that continues Saturday at Brown with its first round matchup against Fairfield. No longer do the Minutemen dwell on the fate of last year's neglected 12-2 squad. It's in the back of everyone's mind, but that's not driving them anymore.

"In the beginning of the season that was an issue," says McFarland, who joins the rest of the UMass seniors in their first and last tournament appearance. "We kind of used that in the beginning to say let's get back at everything that happened to us. But now it's about this year."

This year, the Minutemen have come from behind three times in the final quarter and won. They went undefeated in the EAC and clinched the conference's automatic bid, taking their postseason chances out of the committee's grasp. They never wavered from the run-and-gun style that deteriorates opponents' will and never shied away from their rough, physical nature. They never stopped to question their character.

After its game with Penn State on March 30, in which UMass came back from being down 12-11 with 49 seconds left to win 13-12, Hutchen scribed the definition of UMass Lacrosse.

"It's a test of character," he screamed. "When you're down four goals and look at every guy on the bench and everyone knows you're going to come back. That's just unbelievable.

"This is why I wouldn't have gone to any other school but UMass."

midfield

continued from page 10

that to his understudies.

He memorizes tape and the tendencies of his opponents and he quizzes them on it. He knows the pole order – a basic ranking of the opponent's most dangerous midfielders – by heart and he makes sure he isn't the only one familiar with it. Walker has many times heard Hutchen's speech about the role he will inherit when No. 2 walks away from Amherst.

And his ability to mold this quad of lavaoldescents into a cohesive unit is nothing short of Napoleonic.

Walker is a scruffy-haired high school linebacker who just wanted to play a Division I sport, while Scott is a low-rung quarterback for Mark Whipple's UMass football team. Both Gervat and Garcia were basketball players and down-low defenseman in high school before making the transition to long pole midfield. Topping off this motley crew is Hutchen, who was an offensive lineman at Lake Forest High in Illinois.

"We are all different types of people from different backgrounds," Hutchen explains. "But on the field we're the same. We all play that balls to the wall style and..." he pauses for the right words, "we play as one."

That's why Gervat covered Hutchen's back when the senior lost his footing against Trevor Walker in the final minutes of the Georgetown game. And why Cannella gave Walker No. 33 for UMass great Tim Soudan and Hutchen No. 2 for the three All-Americans that wore it before hime.

That's why Stony Brook had no shot at scooping a groundball with the game tied late in the fourth quarter. And why Hutch and Walker just had to look at each other when Penn State took a four-goal lead and started talking garbage. That's why all four of Hutchen's proteges went silent and motionless when he took a vicious cross check to the cage last week against Rutgers. That's why Gervat and Garcia slouch in their seats and mumble their responses when asked about scholarships. And Hutchen pumps his fist and says he'd never play for any team besides UMass.

That's why they are a unit.

They aren't individuals; they are a sum of the parts. They are the beating heart of this team and next time you want to find out why UMass lacrosse is beating the odds. Don't listen to reporters or broadcasters. Tear up the scoresheet and the newspaper. Throw away the stats and the accolades. Turn off the television, tune out the radio, shut down the computer, find a roster and look for the names you don't know, look for the defensive midfield.

Paul Hutchen (left) says that Greg Scott (right) has "athleticism oozing from him."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

HOUSING UMASS AMHERST SERVICES

Fall 2002 Housing Assignment Information

Housing Assignment Office
● 235 Whitmore Administration Building
● www.housing.umass.edu
413.545.2100

The following is important Housing Information for Fall 2002:

◆ The last day to submit a request for an assignment change or application is Friday, May 24, 2002.

◆ If you are eligible and wish to cancel your housing assignment, please call the Housing Assignment Office before May 31, 2002 to avoid a cancellation fee.

✔ There will be a $100.00 cancellation fee from June 3rd - June 28th.

✔ There will be a $200.00 cancellation fee from July 1st - July 31st.

✔ If you cancel after July 31st there is a $300.00 cancellation fee.

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ACTIVITIES

World Wiffleball Tournament, medium pitch speed, 2-5 person teams $1000 cash for winners. Call for info (603) 425-6168.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Fraternities * Sororities Clubs * Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with the easy Campus-fundraiser.com three hour fundraising event. Does not involve credit card applications. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact Campus-fundraiser.com at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campus-fundraiser.com.

Bus trip to New York-Commuter area gym! trip is sponsoring another trip. With free tickets to Conan O'Brien & the daily show w/Jon Stewart on Thurs. May 16. Tickets for the trip are $5 for commuter undergrads, $20 for others. Sign up in Commuter Services Office 428 Student Union.

Top of the Campus, Incorporated (TOC, Inc.) will hold it's Annual Meeting in Campus Center 917, Wednesday, May 22, 2002 at 2:00 p.m.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. - Now Available: 1&2 Bedroom apts. Leases begin June, July, Aug or Sept. 1 year lease. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywine-apts.com stop by or call (413) 549-0600.

Take over our lease, June 1st pull ton 3 bdrm 549-5249.

Save $500 Off. Move-In Costs. Deluxe 2 bedroom apartments. FREE heat & hot water. Fully appliances Kitchens. Washers/ Dryers available. Pool, volleyball, basketball. Minutes from Umass. On free busline. Call Sugarloaf Estates today! 413-665-3856 Now leasing for summer & fall Email: sugarloaf_estates@msn.com - limited time offer.

1 bedroom Apt Brandywine summer with fall option 549-7279.

2 bedroom apartment summer sublet or new lease call 253-6778.

Looking for a beautiful and cheap place to live this summer? Hurry and have a room in a 2 bedroom furnished apartment with a porch and backyard. Free facilities. Pay just $400 a month, available this summer, call 210-5145.

2 bedroom Apt. Summer sublet or take over our lease. Rent negotiable call 549-7259.

Large One Bedroom Apartment 665-9315. Take over my lease at the end of May with Fall option (6 or 12 month leases available).

Take over our lease 3 BR w/upgrade in Puffton. Available June 1st. Call 549-1474 for more info.

AUTO FOR SALE

88 Mercury Marquis. 107k runs looks great $1500 OBO. Tim 548-7035.

1987 Toyota MR2 great condition T-top $2000 OBO 413-575-5487. Chris.

AUTO FOR SALE

Chevy Lumina 1990. 165000 reliable must go $1000 OBO. 896-3082.

89 Honda Accord $1500 OBO 259-0008.

COMPUTERS

We pay CASH for your used lap tops 413-584-8837

Color Laptop $99 Pentium tower/ CD Rom $99 with color monitor $159. HURRY! 413-584-8837

EMPLOYMENT

Make it Happen! Telephone Research Interviewers. Put your energy and talent to work with TMI. Due to increased staffing demand during the spring and summer months, we have openings year-round part-time available for dynamic individuals to join our team. Part time days, evening and weekend shifts, paid train. PVTA accessible. Hadley location. Call today! 888-425-5581.

Positions available: aerobics, aqua, and [illegible] instructors, personal trainers, lifeguards and maintenance. Hampton Tennis Club 256-1040.

Bartenders wanted. Make up to $2.50 an hr experience not necessary 800 585 4811 ext. 8001

Cushman Village general store preparer, cashier, take-out deli food and bakery items, sandwich artist, counter service staff. Immediate openings. Open 7 days a week. Employment [illegible] Cushman Village, 412 West St. Amherst, 549-1600.

EMPLOYMENT

SUMMER IN MAINE [illegible] Coed residential camp in Southern Maine seeks Staff for Tennis, Golf, Sailing, Waterski, Swimming, Lacrosse, Baseball, Softball, Basketball, Soccer, Field Hockey, Roller Hockey, Ice Hockey, Gymnastics, Dance, Aerobics, Ropes, Rock Climbing, Arts & Crafts, Pioneering, Nature, Video, Radio, Newspaper, Drama, Piano, Guitar, Secretarial, Kitchen, Maintenance, Counselors. Apply online at www.campwindsor.com or call 800-475-6104.

Moving. Local moving company [illegible] Call 549-0072.

Coca-Cola is now taking applications for [illegible] Apply in person at 100 Russell St. Hadley.

HENAGE BICYCLE TOUR LEADERS NEEDED [illegible] Long Distance Bicycle Tours [illegible] Call 888-754-2252 [illegible]

Greenhouse Part-Full time. Various shifts for one person. Daily production afternoon & weekend chores, some on call. Mechanical aptitude necessary. Must live close to facility. For more details visit [illegible] and apply online or mail cover letter and resume to: bioshelters, plus, 901 Sunderland Road Amherst, MA 01002 No Calls Please!

Summer Work! Student owned program! Earn great summer income! $15-25 base appt. Customer service and sales. Scholarships available. 866-752-2252

SUMMER HELP Cod fee seeks drivers and [illegible] Shift Supervisor in our Sandwich location. Interested candidates call 549-8568 for more info.

Be the Campus Red Bull connection Join our team and help build one of the world's leading brands. You'll have a blast while [illegible] valuable marketing experience. You'll receive a little extra spending cash! Think [illegible] It's a lot less dangerous than selling energy pupils! Apply at [illegible]

FOR SALE

Phone cards= money saved. I.D.Net/?GTLIMB

Furniture must sell! Couch, Futon, table, bed. Everything must go! Call 253-7250.

Cheap furniture for sale. Various pieces available & in great condition. Price is negotiable. Call 549-0454.

Huge Lawn Sale! Lots of Good + Cheap stuff, 9 Edge Hill Place, Amherst. May 11.

Desk for sale new wooden 4 drawer perfect condition call Meg 549-0072.

Furniture for sale call 549-2914. Table and chairs, breakfast bar, TV stand and more.

FURNITURE

Furniture for sale! Futon, bed, desk etc. Good condition good price. Call 253-7506.

HOUSE FOR RENT

Hadley 5 bedroom plus. Newer home five minutes from UMASS. June occupancy. 549-4270.

Main St. 4 Bedroom house June 1st. Sublet w/Fall option. Large kitchen, & living room with porch. On bus route w/washer and dryer. 549-7859.

ROOM FOR RENT

One bedroom available in a four bedroom apartment. Includes heat, hot water, electricity, cable, A/C, DSL internet, and local phone. On the bus line in Amherst on route 9, available May 25 for $575/month. Call Matt at Alpine Commons # 253-9499.

ROOM FOR RENT

1 bedroom in Alpine commons. Excellent roommates. Call Bryan 253-9499.

ROOMMATE WANTED

2 roommates needed to share 2 bedroom apt. in Brandywine. On bus line. For fall semester, male or female (781) 585-4854.

Four roommates wanted to fill a house in the Center of Town for info call Rob (413)519-0763.

Female(s) to share 2 bedroom Brandywine Apt. starting June 1. 549-1988.

SERVICES

Feeling ripped off? Your new car is a lemon; The warranty on your stereo just expired and it needs major repairs; you loaned a friend money and can't get it back or the dry cleaners ruined your favorite suit! Is ELSI giving you grief about your student loan? Are debt collectors knocking at your door? Contact the Student Legal Services Office at 922 Campus Center. 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

SUMMER SUBLET

One large bedroom available at Cliffside apts. Starting June 1 partly furnished 617-842-4657.

After fall option big 2 bedroom boulders heat/hot water $860 259-1306.

SUMMER SUBLET

Summer sublet, fall option, 2 bedrooms, private porch, yard, on bus route, Amherst, call 253-9707.

2 Rms Available June to July. A/C, utilities, phone, internet included $400/Mo 259-3781.

1-2 of 3 bedrooms at Townhouses partially furnished call Lauren, 253-7250 or Erin, 546-3946.

Sunset Apt. opening for summer! 2 bedrooms + Study room in basement for info please call (413) 549-5421.

Brandywine. Two bedroom. Furnished, A/C, by pool and bus stop. Call 549-8782.

Brandywine 2 BDRM will negotiate rent. Furnished, AC, bus route call 549-4110.

Nice 3 bedroom townhouse. Practically on campus. Call Joe 549-9441.

Brandywine. 2 bdrm. Available June 1. Call 549-1988.

TO SUBLET

2 person Apt. June-August on sunset Ave. 2 Mins. to campus 549-4110.

Sublet in Brandywine with possible fall option. Looking for 1-3 people to take over 2 bedroom, $225/month. Starting June 1st. 549-9178.

2 Bedroom apartment partially furnished available June 1st to sublet w/option to lease on bus route. 413-549-9612.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply, fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass.

Client: Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash
Date(s) to run: Headline:
Total days: Words: x rate = PAYMENT
Special Heading: Authorized signature:

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

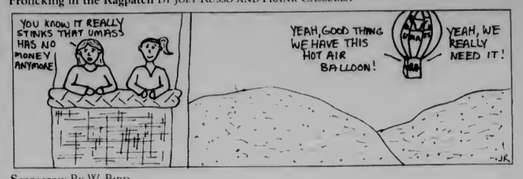
Use one letter or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m., 413-545-3500
Student rate: 20 cents/word per day. Non-student rate: 50 cents/word per day.

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

1 ..... CBS/4
2 ..... NESN
3 ..... Fox Sport NE
4 ..... CBS/57
5 ..... HSCN Movie Channel
6 ..... WB/33
7 ..... HSCN Movie Channel
8 ..... TV Dude Channel
9 ..... FOX/61
10 ..... ABC/40
11 ..... NBC/22
12 ..... International Channel
13 ..... UMATV
14 ..... HSCN Info Channel
15 ..... ESPN
16 ..... ESPN2
17 ..... UVC/19
18 ..... ESPN Classic
19 ..... Cinemax/Gravel
20 ..... CNN
21 ..... CNN/HL
22 ..... Weather Channel
23 ..... Learning Channel
24 ..... History Channel
25 ..... A & E
26 ..... Discovery Health
27 ..... Food Network
28 ..... NASA
29 ..... Home & Garden TV
30 ..... Travel Channel
31 ..... Lifetime
32 ..... CNN
33 ..... Tech TV
34 ..... BET
35 ..... UPN-38
36 ..... USA
37 ..... TNN
38 ..... MTV
39 ..... CMT
40 ..... VH-1
41 ..... TNT
42 ..... TBS
43 ..... E! Entertainment
44 ..... Sci-Fi Channel
45 ..... Court TV
46 ..... Nick at Nite
47 ..... Comedy Central
48 ..... Cartoon Network
49 ..... Game Show Network
50 ..... TV Land
51 ..... FOX Family
52 ..... Univision
53 ..... Telemundo
54 ..... College TV Network
55 ..... C-SPAN
56 ..... C-SPAN2
57 ..... Bloomberg Television



THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 9, 2002

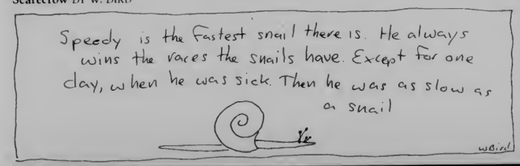
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	62	12	Clifford-Sm	Wishbone	Arthur	Mom hour With Jim Lahey		Frontline "Muslims" (N) (In Stereo)				This Old Hse.	Hometime
WFSB	3	3	News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	Survivor: Marquesas (N)		Globe Trekker "Morocco"				News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	Dr. Phil	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Survivor: Marquesas (N)	CSI: Crime Scene Investgtn.		Agency "Finale" (N)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	★★★ "Midnight Run" (1988, Comedy) Geena Davis (In Stereo)	CSI: Crime Scene Investgtn.		Agency "Finale" (N)		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	56	Nanny	Nanny	Friends	Raymond	Charmed "Hell Hath No Fury"	Charmed "Womb Raider" (N)		News		Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7	7	News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra	Friends (N)	Will & Grace	Will & Grace	ER "On the Beach" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX		20	Sabrina's Wch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Charmed "Hell Hath No Fury"	Charmed	Will & Grace	Will & Grace	ER "On the Beach" (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WVIT		30	News	NBC News	Extra	Hollywood	Friends (N)	Will & Grace	Will & Grace	ER "On the Beach" (In Stereo)		News	Raymond
WTIC	61	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	★★ "Star Wars: Episode I - The Phantom Menace" (1999, Science Fiction) Liam Neeson					News	Tonight Show
WWLP	61	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends (N)	Will & Grace	Will & Grace	ER "On the Beach" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	6	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lahey		This Old Hse.	Frontline "Muslims" (N) (In Stereo)				News	Nightline
WGGB	40	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	★★★ "Stuart Little" (1999, Comedy) Geena Davis (In Stereo)			Prime time Thursday		5th Wheel	Ship mates (N)
WSBK	38	38	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Frasier	Frasier	WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo) (N)			News	Ent. Tonight	★★★ "Crocodile Dundee" (1986) Paul Hogan
WTBS	72	72	Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Friends	Major League Baseball					Law & Order "Tabloid"
A&E	265	265	The Vice	Law & Order	Law & Order		Biography "Carolyn Jones"		"Prairie Lord Edgware Dies" (2000, Mystery) David Suchet			Crossfire	Money Line
CNN	200	23	Burden/Proof	Crossfire			Live From... The Point	Larry King Live		Newsnight		Daily Show	Sat. Night Live
COM	107	28	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show	Dweebs	★ "Woo" (1998, Comedy) Jada Pinkett Smith			South Park	Man Show	Daily Show
DISC	182	31	Mountain Rivals		Wild Discovery	Animal Planet	Medical Mysteries		Lightning Strikes			Medical Mysteries: Giants	Medical Mysteries
ESPN	206	33	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs		Conference Semifinal Game 4 - Teams to Be Announced (Live)					Baseball Tonight (N)	Sportscenter
LIFE	252	34	Golden Girls	Golden Girls		Intimate Portrait	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Stuffed and Taxed: The Shari Kearney Story" (1993) Melissa Gilbert			Women Docs
MTV	221	35	Movie Awards	Undressed	Direct Effect		Prime Time Players (In Stereo)	MTV Special (In Stereo)		WWF Tough	Celebrity	Jackass	Rock
NICK	171	36	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb	Toldy Ginger	Coby Show	Coby Show	Cheers	All in Family	All in Family
SCIFI	180	37	Star Trek				★★ "Prophecy II" (1998, Horror) Christopher Walken					Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	247	38	Trading Cards	Dating Game	Daring Capers		Medical Detect	Medical Detect	Gialog (N)			Medical Detect	Medical Detect
TNT	245	39	NYPD Blue		Pinkwater		NBA Basketball Playoffs Conference Semifinal - Teams to Be Announced. (Live)					NBA Basketball Playoffs	Conference Semi
USA	242	40	Walker, Texas Ranger				Ninth Bridges (In Stereo) (N)			UAG "Trophy Event" (In Stereo)		UAG (In Stereo)
HBO	301	51					★★★ "The Brothers" (2001) Morris Chestnut, R			Unfaithful	On the Record	Hookers: 5 Years Later
MAX	321	52					★★ "Sky" (2001, Action) Bryan Brown. Premiere. (In Stereo) R			★★½ "The Net" (1995, Suspense) Sandra Bullock. PG-13		Real People
SHOW	340	53	★★ "Phone"				"Warriors of Virtue" (1997, Fantasy) Mario Yamo			★★½ "The Gift" (2000, Suspense) Cate Blanchett. R

Adam and Eric By Ross Burach

Frolicking in the Ragpatch By Joey Russo and Frank Cassella

Noodle By Jacki

Scarecrow By W. Bird



Noodle By Jacki

Shut the Duck Up By Seany McSean

Scarecrow By W. Bird

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Quote of the Day

"Enough is enough and it's time for a change."

-Owen Hart

Amherst Weather

Thursday	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 59 LOW: 51	HIGH: 75 LOW: 37	HIGH: 70 LOW: 37

Horoscopes

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – In California, animals are banned from mating publicly within 1,500 feet of a tavern, school, or place of worship

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – In California, it is a misdemeanor to shoot at any kind of game from a moving vehicle, unless the target is a whale.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – In California, no vehicle without a driver may exceed 60 miles per hour.

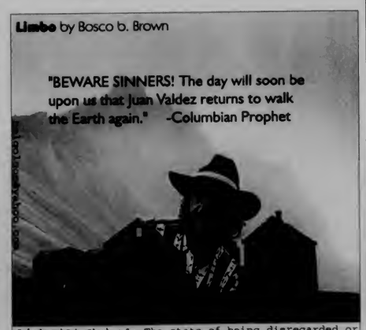
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – In California, many animals are illegal to own as pets, including snails, sloths, and elephants.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – In California, nobody is allowed to ride a bicycle in a swimming pool.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – In California, it is illegal for a man to beat his wife with a strap wider than 2 inches without her consent.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – In California, it is illegal to cry on the witness stand.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – In California, molesting butterflies can result in a $500 fine.



CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – In California, it is illegal for a secretary to be alone in a room with her boss.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – In California, one may not carry a lunch down the street between 11 and 1 o'clock.

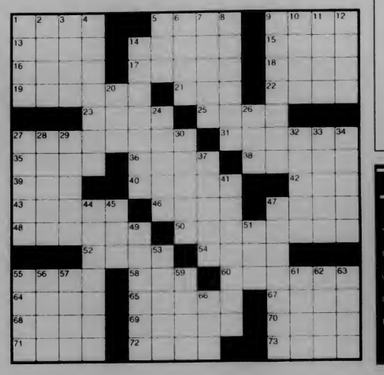
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – In California, persons classified as "ugly" may not walk down any street

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – In California, it is illegal to pile horse manure more than six feet high on a street corner.

Limbo by Bosco b. Brown

Limbo \Lim*bo\ n1: The state of being disregarded or forgotten. [syn: oblivion] 2: An imaginary place for Lost, silly, or neglected things.

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Great Beer Great Food Great Service
Amherst's original brewpub serving up fine handcrafted brews and lagers.
★
Featuring fabulous food and great live music!!
Thursday Karaoke w/ Cloud Nine Productions $2 cover
Saturday The Ally Live Roots Fusion $3 cover
Sunday Chris Kozak Quartet Jazz
34 N. Pleasant Street * Amherst
413-253-6400
WWW.AMHERSTBREWING.COM



ACROSS
1 Makes a dress
5 Like some profs
9 Ballpark figures
13 Outer garment
14 Select few
15 Hull part
16 Peruvian native
17 Long for 18 Golden Rule word
19 Actor Clooney
21 Tumbler's pad
22 Craving
23 Metric measure
25 Roller coaster cry
27 Picnic in the parking lot
30 Joan metal
35 Learn by —; memorize
36 Fish choice
38 Whinny
39 A Gershwin
40 Wading bird
42 Have a go at
43 Strongman of myth
46 Artist Magritte
47 Flower stalk
48 Couch
50 Pigeons' roost
52 PC screen image
54 — ants
55 Burst of laughter
56 "Alley —"
60 J.R.'s town
64 Science magazine
65 Singer Ross
67 Boning
68 Tea herb
69 Of the Far East
70 Napoleon's island
71 Mouse, to an owl
72 Auto mishap
73 Clean the furniture

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

R	U	L	E	D		S	A	K	I		B	E	E	T
O	P	E	R	A		H	U	E	S		J	A	M	E	S
B	O	N	E	H		I	D	E	S		D	I	R	K
E	N	A	C	T		M	I	N	U	T	E	L	Y
			T	I	S		E	L	E	O
L	A	B	S		O	I	L	Y		O	R	A	L	S
O	L	E		F	U	S	E		I	T	A	L	I	C
G	O	L	D	E	N	H	A	N	D	S	H	A	K	E
A	F	I	E	L	D		S	W	A	Y		M	E	N
S	T	E	E			B	E	T		O	D	D	L	E
			M	U			O	B	I
	A	C	A	D	E	M	I	C		U	P	S	E	T
S	T	A	G		A	M	O		S	P	I	N	E
H	E	R	A		N	E	W	T		E	L	G	I	N
Y	E	A	R		T	R	A	Y		S	E	N	D	S

11-1-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate

DOWN
1 Gulp (of liquor)
2 Ocean floor
3 Baylor University site
4 Flash
5 Pub brew
6 Land of Anna's king
7 Bedding for cows
8 Decade fractions
9 Banjo kin
10 Diner list
11 Canessies
12 Job opening
14 Mascara target
20 Rock band's gear
24 One in the —
26 Long time
27 Group of three
28 Largest Ariel
29 Austria's neighbor
30 Bunnylike
32 Lakelike
33 "Snowy" bird
34 Greeting-card feature
37 Benefactor
41 Reno resident
44 Know-how
45 NYSE regulator
47 Burned
49 Trinket
51 Epoch
53 Boom-box issue
55 Splendor
56 Arab VIP
57 Bancroft of films
59 Discomfort
61 Comic-strip mopper
62 Long white robes
63 Mattress support
66 "Unforgettable" singer

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Tomato Rice Soup

Chicken Pesto Pasta

Sloppy Joe

Vegan Sloppy Joe
Oney Ga (vegan)

Native American Stew (vegan) (W Basics)

DINNER

Tomato Rice Soup

BBQ Chicken Quarters

Seitan Bourguignon (vegan)

Falafel Burger with Sauce (vegan) (W Basics)

Today's Staff

Night Editor: Sam Wilkinson
Photo Editor: Tibora Greczyc-Blum
Copy Editor: Jess May
Production Assistant: Frank DiMeglio
Production Staff: Melissa Hammel, Andrea Mangini, Mike Kulak

DAILY COLLEGIAN

SPORTS

COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM SPORTS EDITOR: ERIC SODERSTROM

MINUTEMAN UMass LACROSSE

UMass Lacrosse NCAA TOURNAMENT PREVIEW

MINUTEMAN UMass LACROSSE

RICHARD F. GARBER FIELD

FAIRFIELD Stags

Record: 7-5 (4-1 Great Western Lacrosse League)
Coach: Ted Spencer (56-47, seventh year)
All-Time Series: 5-0, UMass
Key Players: A Matt Buecker (29 goals)
G C.J. Kemp (54.6 save%)
F/O Peter Vlahakis (61.3 face-off%)

Outlook: If game slows, Buecker scores, Kemp saves and Vlahakis draws then the Stags have a shot. But if this one starts going up and down the field, it's a blowout waiting to happen.

"We're very excited. We're happier going to Brown than Delaware (the other first round site). It's close to home and we've played UMass a number of times over the years. It's a good situation for us." – Ted Spencer, Head Coach

NCAA Tournament, First Round
Saturday @ Brown University
Approx. 3 p.m.

UMASS Minutemen

Record: 11-3 (5-0 Eastern College Athletic Conference)
Coach: Greg Cannella (63-43, eighth year)
Last Meeting: 3, 13-99, 15-6 UMass
Key Players: A Marc Morley (47 points)
M Kevin Laveille (31 goals)
D Matt McFarland (94 groundballs)

Outlook: The Minutemen need to play their game (see story left). The Stags are going to try and slow the game down to a crawl so UMass will need to run every chance it gets. An early lead will negate Fairfield's plan.

"It will help us if we can get out early in the game and get a couple goals on the board to try and prevent them from just holding the ball on us. Either way we're going to push the ball, play our own style." – Dusty Smith, Midfield

This is UMass Lacrosse...

By Eric Soderstrom
COLLEGIAN STAFF

These are the sights and sounds of UMass Lacrosse, and they begin inside the Minuteman locker room.

Justin Walker makes his march, tapping each of his teammates on the head. Tom Fallon has his fingers in war paint, set to apply the makeup that darkens his stare. Paul Hutchen is screaming, pacing back and forth to the rhythm of his chants. Don Little is silent, his thoughts fixated on the game. And Matt McFarland's stomach is riding the carousel from hell.

This is UMass Lacrosse.

"It usually seems to be different groups of people that like to do their own thing, hanging out with each other," says Dusty Smith, of the pregame gatherings. "But everybody understands that everybody's getting ready to the best of their ability in their own way. Then, when it's time to go, everyone is prepared to do it together."

Before taking the field every game, captains Little and McFarland bring the team together to offer what are supposed be classic words of inspiration. But that speech rarely takes full form.

"I always throw up," says McFarland, with a chuckle.

"When we bring it in, if [McFarland] steps aside and throws up then there's really nothing you have to say," Little says. "Because that says it all. He was my roommate for two years when I was a freshman and a sophomore. When we had our first game he came out and did that. I was kind of like, what is

Turn to UMASS, page 7

RICHARD F. GARBER FIELD

Dusty Smith and the UMass lacrosse team fought hard to make the NCAA Tournament.

The toughest section

Hutchen and Co. on the defensive

By Matthew F. Sacco
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Paul Hutchen glides out of Boyden 248, Massachusetts' lacrosse headquarters, and into the adjoining hallway. As he turns down the shaded path, defenseman Tom Fallon and captain Matt McFarland approach him. He offers a handshake and a fist pound to both of them. But the encounter is short-lived. Hutchen refuses to make eye contact with his teammates, his vision is captured by a man looming in the background.

"Hey!" yells Hutchen, as he points and freezes a young reporter in his tracks. "You. I know you man. You better start giving some love to the D-middies."

Understand that he is not crazy, he simply lives his life fired up. His tennis player build, eyeglasses, parted hair and tucked in shirt hardly reveal his personality. But Hutch is the kind of guy that pumps his fist when dinner is ready. And in this instance he's just watching out for his boys – the defensive midfield. Same as he did two weeks later when Hutch's favorite local sportswriter showed up in Greg Cannella's Boyden office for an interview with the head coach.

Hutchen happens to wander into the adjacent cubicle and as the unsuspecting journalist begins gathering his things and planning his exit, Hutch stops him with a firm hand on the shoulder, before casting his plea.

"Justin Walker, Greg Scott, Matt Garcia, Chris Gervat," he says as a finger unfurls from his clenched fist with each name he lists. "The ball does not clear itself!"

Hutch can at times be a little defensive about the defensive midfield. And it it's the last thing he does before he hangs up his No. 2 jersey for good, he's going to make sure that his boys get their due.

Face it – D-middies aren't exactly publicity nuggets. They aren't the ink-hogging glory boys of the sport and they rarely see the hardware, as it remains the only position in lacrosse without a designated postseason award. But that's just fine with these guys.

"That's going against everything being a D-middy is about," Hutchen exclaims. "It's not about recognition. It's not about stats and trophies. When you walk off the field all that counts is that your team and your coaches know. Because it doesn't matter what everybody else thinks because they don't know. The media doesn't know, the fans don't know, not even your parents know."

The job of a D-middy is thankless. Rarely are they scholarship players and they are often grudgingly converted high school superstars. They are supposed to be the weak link of the defense, but for tournament bound UMass, they are the catalysts for success.

"It's no coincidence that the years we've been really good, we've had great D-middies," assistant coach Andy Shay recalls. "This year it's the same deal."

The D-middies have been anything but a weak link, due in large part to the attitude they bring on a day-to-day basis.

"We're a bunch of scrappers, we play pissed," Hutchen says. "That's just us. We've seen as much trauma as anybody with not making the tournament last year and everything. It starts from coach Cannella on down through coach Shay and coach Mangan and all the players."

Turn to MIDFIELD, page 7

Hutch was forced to stand and watch his sophomore year, when he didn't get much playing time and teams like Penn State, Navy and Brown manhandled the Minutemen. But last year he worked his way onto the field and he brought with him a style and an attitude that has stood and is visible in practice and on game day.

"We don't believe any team is tougher than us," he says. "That was one of our goals this year. We even have drills to make us tougher."

Shay personally enjoys a set of drills aptly titled The Toughness Section. One specific measure, called Clear The Crease, amounts to a two-on-two – offense versus defense – melee for a groundball near the goal area.

"During some of these drills we do, the tougher guys really rise to the top," says a grinning Shay. "And guys like Paul [Hutchen], Greg Scott, the D-middies, they are good at it.

"They actually seem to enjoy it."

Not only do these practices make the team tougher, but when you put players together like that, in an all out battle for the ball, it bonds them. Which leads to the connection they share on the field.

When the ball crosses the midfield line into UMass' defensive half Hutch and his troops pounce like a well-laid ambush. They move in unison as if they are separate links on a chain and they cover each other's back like the Corleone Family.

You can credit that unity to Hutchen, the unquestionable Don of the D-middies. "We don't see ourselves as individuals," he says. "We are a unit."

And he has his stable of youngsters – freshmen Scott and Garcia and sophomores Walker and Gervat – that he is grooming to fill his shoes after his time in the maroon and white has passed. Hutch simply has a D-middy complex and he's glad to spread

Atlantic 10 disappearances abundant

Softball making conference foes run for cover

By Andy Vogt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

[illegible] in this week's Atlantic 10 Softball Championship stopped [illegible] successful regular season. But which it came time to play UMass all that success those squads had disappeared like Harry Houdini into a cup of Minuteman base hits and web gems.

Sporting an unblemished 21-0 record in A-10 play this season (48-10 overall), the No. 1 seeded Maroon and White will commence its quest today to garner an eighth consecutive conference championship against No. 4 seeded Rhode Island. And despite UMass' incredible dominance of the rest of the Atlantic 10 this year, coach Elaine Sortino's squad has not shied away from the task at hand.

"I think our team during the last two days has been really focused," said junior pitcher Karla Holtz, who yesterday added yet another award to her mantle after being named the Atlantic 10 Pitcher of the Year. "It's easy for any team that was successful during the regular season to [pull off track].

"We're going in fairly confident," added senior Brandi Cross. "We know what we have to do."

The Minutewomen throttled the Rams twice in their three-game set on April 13 and 14. Sophomore catcher Jamie Cabalan led the team with four hits, including a home run, and seven RBI on the weekend, as UMass cracked three longballs. Holtz dazzled the Rams with two shutouts, including a no-hitter in the final game, and senior hurler Jen Hadley pitched a gem in the other contest, scattering four hits and one run for the victory. On the weekend, the Maroon and White outscored URI 18-1.

The Rams enter the game with a record of 26-27 on the year, 12-9 in Atlantic 10 contests. They are led by All-Conference player Gwen Rask, who has been one of the most multi-faceted talents in the A-10 this year. Rask leads the conference in strikeouts (257), while posting an 18-10 record and a solid 2.16 ERA. But Rask doesn't shine simply on the mound; she also leads the Rams with a .354 batting average with four home runs.

Holtz wasn't the only Minutewoman to be recognized this week, as senior captain Teri Rosnes was named Atlantic 10 Player of the Year for her monstrous campaign. The Visalia, Calif. native leads the conference in numerous offensive categories, including batting average (.588), hits (69), and runs (45).

Still, the Minutewomen, just like Rodney Dangerfield, "can't get no respect" from the national softball community. Despite numerous awards, its incredible success, and its ongoing 33-game winning streak, the Maroon and White was unable to crack the Top-25 again this week. In fact, UMass actually dropped a spot in the poll, as it currently sits at No. 27 in the nation. For precisely this reason, the Minutewomen know they have to win this weekend's tourney to guarantee a spot in the NCAA tournament.

"We know the way to get to the regionals is to win [this] tournament," Cross said. She added that just like last year's UMass men's lacrosse team, bowing out in the conference tournament could mean being denied an at-large bid, which makes victory that much more important.

The Minutewomen would face either Temple or St. Joseph's in the double-elimination tourney on Friday, as the senior class looks to earn its fourth Atlantic 10 championship plaque in as many tries. The softball careers of Rosnes, Hadley, Ashley Bakken, and Scotter Wheeler will soon be coming to an end, so the team will be doing everything it can to make this last run a memorable one.

Because we've worked together for the last three years, we're in the same boat," Holtz said. "We want to give that to them."

GERALD INOCALLO/COLLEGIAN

The UMass softball team has won 30 straight games.

BLACKALICIOUS ROCKS AMHERST
A&E'S PAGE 5
STUDENT TEACHER SCANDAL
ED/OP PAGE 4
SOFTBALL LOOSES?
SPORTS PAGE 10

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN WEEKEND EDITION

FRIDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE ONE HUNDRED THIRTY FOUR ☆☆☆☆☆ 5.10.02

Time to negotiate with RAs, says faculty

By Ken Campbell
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The faculty at the University of Massachusetts urged the campus administration to bargain with the fledgling Resident Assistant union during a Faculty Senate meeting yesterday.

The resolution says the University is spending "precious funds and good will" fighting the first undergraduate union in the nation.

"We further urge the administration to move to enter into immediate discussions with RA representatives over issues arising from residence hall work," the motion stated. "We further urge the administration to refrain from further punitive actions against RAs and their student supporters fighting for the union recognition that is rightfully and legally theirs."

University officials declined to comment on the resolution.

History Professor Ron Story, the president of the UMass chapter of the Massachusetts Society of Professors, proposed the move.

"Feelings are running very high on this campus," Story said. "We're about to blow ourselves apart."

The RA union and its supporters have staged at least one action a week since the University's decided not to negotiate with the union on March 26. The University maintains that the Massachusetts Labor Relations Commission "misapplied" state law when it certified the union's March 5 ratification vote. The RAs decided 138-88 to join United Auto Workers Local 2322. The UAW also represents the Graduate Employee Organization on campus. Protests vary from setting up symbolic bargaining tables outside of University negotiator Susan Pearson's home to an April 29 Whitmore sit-in that resulted in 55 arrests.

"Whatever you think about whether student workers should organize or not, the fact is they did," Story said. He believes that the University should not be paying "private lawyers" to fight a battle UMass is "almost certainly going to lose."

Several senators felt the resolution would incite more extreme protests by removing the picketing code.

"I don't have any problem with the motion, but I think the [punitive action clause] throws out the picketing code," Brian O'Connor a Biology professor said. O'Connor said that interim Chancellor Marcellette Williams is the only official he has seen enforce the code.

Story disagreed, saying that the protest policy is a "useful thing."

Another senator suggested that the language of the motion meant "anyone can walk in off the street and take over buildings whenever they feel like it."

Turn to UNION, page 4

AMY C. DUFFEY/ COLLEGIAN

United Auto Workers Local 2322 President James Shaw (second from left) looks on as members of the RA union plan their next moves in the Campus Center just hours after the Faculty Senate voted to support them.

Artists speak on opression

By Scott Enright
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

A tightly packed Campus Center Auditorium witnessed hip-hop artists Dead Prez and spoken word poet Saul Williams come together last Tuesday to present the program Talk About It.

"What we are going to witness tonight is something that the press does not want you to see," Big-Ant head organizer for Tuesday evening's program said. "We are going to witness the intelligence of the hip-hop culture."

College poets, singers and high school youth group performers joined in to aid in the creation of a dialogue about the Black community's struggle to eliminate apartheid America.

Opening performer senior African-American Studies major Delicia Tuitt, presented an old gospel song called "I Don't Know About Tomorrow."

"I don't know about tomorrow, but I know who holds it in his hands," recited Tuitt as she explained the meaning behind the song and then dedicated it to her fellow graduating seniors.

Next a group of 10 high school students called 20/50 entered the stage one by one. The group presented the message that being dark skinned in an oppressive society is like being in prison.

"Prison is having a voice and not having it heard. Prison is being a strong woman of color in a society that tells her she is weak," the group said. "Prison is being taught to view the world through the eyes of people who hated you before you were even born. Prison is fear."

A standing ovation ended the youth group's performance and welcomed hip-hop artist Dead Prez.

Fists clenched and held high in the air, Dead Prez and the audience chanted in unison, "I am the revolutionary. I am the people. I am not a pig."

The evening progressed to a dialogue dealing with the fight against racism.

"This isn't hip-hop music; this is revolutionary culture," explained Dead Prez. "Apartheid still exists in America. It is just under a new name. There is still a class system, and we need everybody to bring the working class truth to the public."

He went on to explain the nature of oppression.

"What it boils down to is that there is the oppressor and there is the oppressed," he explained. "You gotta decide what you are going to align yourself with."

Immediately following the dialogue was a stream of college poets and a three-piece jazz hand accompaniment acting as the transition between Dead Prez and Saul Williams.

At 11:30 p.m. Williams took his place on stage and began speaking about hip-hop.

"I believe in the evolution of hip-hop," he said. "This is the music we are going to use to speak up against the language of oppression."

Williams recalled his first experiences listening to hip-hop artists such as Public Enemy and KRS One. He elaborated on the 1987-1992 period in which hip-hop first made him cry.

"I realized that I was a part of something like our parents were part of," Williams explained. "The Black Power Movement and the Civil Rights Movement of the 1960's."

He then led his audience back into the present by talking a little about his poetic style.

"Words call things into existence," he said. "I believe we can cast spells through what we say."

He recited a poem written about a pregnant woman, written one month before he found out he was going to be a father. Following the poem microphones were opened to the audience and a question and answer period was conducted.

When asked if he wanted to get his message about oppression out to a mainstream audience, Williams answered, "The mainstream is the ocean. Just because there are toxins poisoning it does not mean that you should swim."

Anthrax and epidemics the topic of Nass lecture

By Peter Preston
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Dr. Meryl Nass spoke on the problem of differentiating between a naturally occurring epidemic and an intentional use of a biological organism last Thursday at the University of Massachusetts.

The talk was sponsored by the Five College Culture, Health and Science Program and the Community Health Studies Department of UMass' School of Public Health and Health Sciences.

"It is very hard to determine an epidemic to be of intentional nature," Nass said. "Epidemics have been known to occur naturally, and they usually are pretty similar to those that are started by man."

Nass has worked in the field of bioterrorism for the past 15 years and is especially well known for developing a model for analyzing epidemics. It was Nass' work originally published by the group Physicians for Social Responsibility that documented the 1978-1980 anthrax epidemic that occurred during the Rhodesian civil war was due to biowarfare.

"The epidemic effected only black people and their cows," Nass said.

Nass claims the use of anthrax in the Rhodesian civil war was in part due to the South African Apartheid movement. The anthrax contamination has been proven to be a calculated attempt to rid Rhodesia of a large part of Rhodesia's black population.

"There isn't much difference between killing someone with a gun or by some other means," a South African scientist said about the use of biological weapons. Apartheid scientists allegedly contaminated livestock, water and cigarettes as a means of mass murder and assassination.

Nass is also a specialist on the topic of anthrax and vaccine research. For the past four years, she has been active in bringing the problems associated with the human anthrax vaccine to the public's attention. She has testified on bioterrorism, Gulf War Syndrome and anthrax vaccines for the three Congressional Committees and committees of the National Academy of Sciences.

In 1996, Nass helped prepare a detailed report for the Biological Weapons Convention Review Conference on how to investigate allegations of biological warfare.

According to Nass, however, due to the difficulty in proving anthrax warfare, there is more often then not "no arrest, no trial and no jail time."

Nass has made appearances on several television shows, including Tom Brokaw, Jim Lehrer NewsHour, CNN, "Hardball" with Chris Matthews and FOX News. She has also made numerous presentations on anthrax and anthrax vaccines to academic, professional, military and public groups.

Nass maintains a website devoted to issues related to anthrax vaccine.

The Five College Culture Health and Science Program is an interdisciplinary, interdivisional and intercampus certificate program for students that want to complement their major study with an interdisciplinary perspective on human health, disease and healing.

On the Net: Five College Culture Health and Science Program: http://www-unix.oit.umass.edu/~culhs/chs.html; Anthrax vaccine: http://www.anthraxvaccine.org.

Anthropology major chosen as student speaker

By Melissa Hammel
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Brandy L. Curtis was announced as the student speaker for the University of Massachusetts 132nd commencement ceremonies earlier this week.

A senior from Greenville, RI, Curtis is an anthropology major at the University and is minoring in Biology. She is a citizen scholar in the Commonwealth College and is also a Dean's List student and was chosen for the role of student speaker by a panel of faculty and students.

Her speech will center on the question "what now?" for the class of 2002, especially after the effects of Sept. 11. She will also address the challenges faced by the class.

She has also traveled academically, spending the 2001 school year in South Africa, and is completing her honors thesis on "Community Structure and Health: A case study at two clinics in the Eastern Cape province of South Africa."

Beyond schoolwork, Curtis remains involved in the Amherst community by volunteering her time to local organizations. She has completed over 500 hours of community service in her four years of college.

Currently, she is a volunteer for the Not Bread Alone soup kitchen in Amherst where she prepares, transports and serves food to those who need it, and she is also a teacher's assistant for Head Start.

Brandy L. Curtis and Kenneth R. Feinburg will be the speakers at this year's commencement ceremonies.

She also took part in the Alternative Spring Break during the 1999-2000 school year for which she was a course facilitator and core leader.

She has been involved in a number of aspects of campus activities, including being a member of the Not Ready for Bedtime Players, a group that performs skits regarding different aspects of sexuality and formerly mentored an 8-year-old girl in the Big Brother/Big Sister Program. She has also received the Student Leadership Award for her active participation in the UMass community.

Curtis also holds down two jobs, the first as a waitress at Judie's Restaurant and the second as an office assistant for the UMass Art's Council.

Following graduation Curtis will spend five months touring Europe and then plans to attend graduate school.

Kenneth R. Feinburg will be the principle speaker at graduation this year. He is a 1967 History alumni and received his J.D. from the New York University College of Law in 1970. He is nationally recognizable as an attorney and as the special master of the Sept. 11th Victim Compensation Fund. He is also well known in the area of mediation and alternative dispute resolution and has donated funds to establish the first endowed professorship in the College of Humanities and Fine Arts, titled the Kenneth Feinburg Professor of History. In addition he created the Feinburg Fund for excellence in History to provide for lectures, historical research and for faculty salaries.

Graduation will be held on Sunday May 26, at 10 a.m. in Warren P. McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

The ceremonies are open to the public. The University is expected to graduate approximately 4,000 students.

Campus Perspectives

By James Schaffer

"What was your favorite class here?"

Andrew Leanne
Sophomore
Marketing/MIS
"Writing because I can't because I have to do my homework."

Chuck Bueve
Junior
Biochem/Pre-Med
"Comm Health 260 because there's always a whole lot of sex things going on in there."

Katie Cristy
Sophomore
Biology
"Chemistry, because I like playing with test tubes with Kern."

Jon Cavallin
Sophomore
CMI
"Shellenback because the class is mostly all women."

Kern Bolow
Sophomore
Biology
"Chemistry, because I like playing with test tubes."

Aidan Kearney
Sophomore
Sports Management
"Drugs and Society because it hurts my feelings when other people injure bodies and minds by doing drugs."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts academic semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts and its divisions and is editorially independent of its divisions also. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life. It became the Collegian in 1906, the Massachusetts Collegian in 1914 and then the Daily Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 2, 1984. For ads or ad rates or any rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Sam Wilkinson Editor-in-Chief
Matthew F. Sacco Managing Editor
Amy Garganta Business Manager
Shimauli Dave Production Manager
Jake Lilien Diversity Editor
Mike Kulak Editorial Production Manager
Jason Smith Advertising Manager

Mike Delano Arts & Living Editor
Matthew Despres Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jennifer Eastwood Features Editor
Catherine Turner News Editor
Tibora Girczyc-Blum Photography Editor
Eric Soderstrom Sports Editor
Brett Siniawski Finance Manager
Charlie Jacco Distribution Manager

Morgan Taylor Advertising Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Cara Murphy Assistant Finance Manager
Shawn Dougherty Assistant Business Manager
Megan Shannon Assistant Advertising Manager

AS CFO OF A PRO BASEBALL TEAM YOU COULD:

PAY YOUR #1 STARTER $23,162.33 (PER OUT)

GIVE AWAY 15,000 BOBBLE HEAD DOLLS
(3 TIMES/SEASON)

RAKE IN $13.9 MILLION
IN NATIONAL TV REVENUE (PER YEAR)

HOW DO YOU GET A JOB LIKE THIS?

WWW.STARTHEREGOPLACES.COM/BIZ15
Go here and take the first step toward the career you want.

START HERE.
GO PLACES.
If you know business and accounting, you can get a job anywhere. Because the skills you learn in business – strategic and analytical thinking, communication, and leadership – are always in demand. In some of the coolest industries in the world. Even in pro sports.

American Institute of Certified Public Accountants

Math competition motivates students

By Peter Preston
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The winners of this year's annual mathematics competition at the University of Massachusetts were announced last week.

Computer Science major, David Gucwa, took 1st place. Electrical Engineering student Nicholas Richard came in at 2nd place, and Aditya Prasetyo, Computer Systems Engineering major, took 3rd place.

With prizes ranging from $100 to $1600, the competition has garnered many participants since its initiation.

"Over the past 16 years, the awards have grown appreciably in cash value and are now among the most attractive offered to undergraduates at the UMass campus," said Professor Henry Jacob, a competition committee member.

The competition was conceived in 1985 in response to declining interest in mathematics as a major at the University.

The competition is for freshman and sophomore students only and aims to create an interest that will carry the students through their college careers.

"The problems are more difficult than those encountered in normal course work, requiring imagination and strong technique to solve in the given time," Jacob said of the competition tests.

Scheduled in April it aims to coincide with Mathematics Awareness Week, the program was sponsored jointly by the American Mathematical Society, the Mathematical Association of America and the Society for Industrial and Applied Mathematics.

From 1986 through 1989, the first prize was PC equipment contributed by IBM, DEC and NEC. When all prizes were made cash awards in 1990, the number of student entrants jumped dramatically.

"Approximately 60 students competed this year on April 10," Jacob said.

Sponsors such as United Technologies (UTC), Electronic Data Systems (EDS) and the Mathematics/Statistics Department were for many years the principal supporters.

More recently, CSC, Aetna, Sun Life of Canada and Microsoft have co-sponsored the competitions.

The corporate sponsors this year included newcomer State Street Global Advisors and second-time sponsors Sun Life Financial and Solutions by Computer.

As expected, the winners have come from both freshman and sophomore classes with majors in engineering, computer science, physics, mathematics, biology and biochemistry.

The contest itself consisted of a two-hour, 10-problem test based on concepts from pre-calculus and the first two semesters of calculus. The problems are more difficult than those encountered in normal coursework and require imagination and strong technique to solve in the allotted time.

No contestant has ever received a perfect score. However, winners of the top three prizes have always demonstrated a high level of mathematical aptitude and originality.

Contest information and sample problems from previous competitions appear on the Mathematics department Web site early every spring semester.

On the Net: the Math department: http://www.math.umass.edu.

Faculty discuss possible library fee

By Ken Campbell
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Librarians say student fee increases at the University of Massachusetts are just one way of offsetting a $2.8 million budget cut.

The Dartmouth and Boston campuses have already proposed a library fee.

Library Director Margo Crist presented an update on the fiscal status of the library system to the Faculty Senate at their meeting on Thursday. The libraries stand to lose 15 percent of its staff and may cut anywhere from 12 to 20 hours of services.

The UMass library system is facing the cut if the state does not fund the Educational Reference Materials (ERM) line item. The House's Ways and Means budget proposal does not allocate any monies for books.

"This appropriation would result in the elimination of this program, leaving individual campuses to provide the funding needed to purchase library reference material," the House budget proposal stated.

UMass libraries got $4.4 million in ERM dollars in fiscal year 2001, and 1.5 million in 2002. The campus has contributed $1.6 million toward fiscal year 2003, but experts say cutbacks will jeopardize the University's reputation as a research campus.

Crist said that UMass was slipping in the rankings of American Research Libraries (ARL) based on the projections. With the projected 2003 figures, UMass lurks near the bottom in both the book dollars and overall categories. It will rank 107 out of 113 in staff and 99 out of 113 in journal monies. UMass is also falling behind its peer group of 21 schools, which includes the University of Connecticut, Ohio State University and Rutgers University. UMass is $6.4 million dollars below the peer median.

Jay Schafer, coordinator of the library's Collection Development department, said that the 2002 budget cuts meant a $1 million dollar loss in journal funds and $700,000 in book money.

"In October we cancelled all journals," Schafer said. "In December we stopped buying books."

Schafer also said that the collection was being reviewed to see which areas could be streamlined or trimmed. Crist said that projections for fiscal year 2003 paint a bleak picture, but the librarians remain hopeful.

"We don't want it to be all doom and gloom," Crist said. "We're still committed to be the best library we can be."

The student fee is an accepted, but "not widespread" practice at other ARL institutions, Crist said.

"There are quite a number of ARL schools that have a fee," Crist said. "The situation for the library is dire."

Several faculty members disliked the idea, saying it was a step down "the wrong road."

"This is going in the wrong direction," Roland Chilton, a Sociology professor, said.

"It's just one of a mix of ideas," reported Robert Rothstein, chair of the Faculty Senate's Research Library Council. Rothstein, a Comparative Literature professor, said media has blown the fee idea out of proportion.

"Raising student fees is not something any faculty member likes to do," Rothstein continued.

Representative Ellen Story (D-Amherst) has submitted an amendment to the House budget to add $11 million in total ERM to the Board of Education's budget.

Put the needle on the record

WMUA, the student radio station has a large collection of records of all types. But mostly the round kind.

■ union

continued from page 4

Leslie Edwards, president of GEO and one of the protesters arrested in the April 29 action, felt vindicated by the vote.

"I think that the motion was much stronger than expected," Edwards said. "Historically there have been disruptions and the answer is collective bargaining, because it is civil. That's all we're asking for."

As for O'Connor's fears that this will remove the picketing code, Edwards doesn't agree.

"People don't take over buildings for the heck of it," she said.

Matt Harp, an RA and union activist, was "elated" by the vote.

"I think this shows that people will stick up for what's right," Harp said. "I'm happy to have [the faculty] on our side."

Graduation Parties
Your parents are paying...
Get a DJ
Hip-Hop Reggae
Chance R&B
Perspective
Entertainment Co. 413.883.1144
gemini Numark DYLE PRO

CASH FOR BOOKS
WE PAY TOP DOLLAR
Jeffery Amherst College Store
55 SOUTH PROSPECT ST. AMHERST
253-3870 253-7816

Paul Jacobs
LIGHT HAULING
• Insured
• Reliable
• Artwork
• Offices
• Students
• Businesses
• Residences
End of the Semester!!
Need to Move??
"PAULHAUIS"
(413) 584-1136

Eliminate
FEARS/ALLERGIES
In one session
Fear of flying, public speaking, exams, needles, elevators, heights, allergies and other disturbances can be eliminated in one session
Order a free booklet at 413 374 8217

UMass Student Legal Services Office
CALL TODAY
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students
545-1995

Medical MD & Veterinary Degree Programs
Making World-Class Physicians & Veterinarians Today, For Tomorrow's World
- Programs to meet the needs of high school and college graduates
- More than a half century old well-recognized and established European medical and veterinary universities
- Programs recognized by the National Committee on Medical Education, Accreditation, and the U.S. Department of Education.
- 100% financial aid is available. The U.S. government provides subsidized loans to qualified students in our programs.
- Approved by New York Medical Education Board for clinical training in the state of New York. (A state with a high number of residency positions.)
- Medical and veterinary clinical clerkships/training in the USA.
- Smaller class size with traditional European tutorial style education.
- Programs offer opportunity to earn dual degrees – MD PhD, MD MBA, MD MSHA, MD MPHA, etc.
- Much safer campus environment, compared to many campuses in the USA, allowing retaining and strengthening of cultural identities.
- English language curriculum matches to major American medical and veterinary schools.
- An excellent opportunity for hands-on participation for extensive training and experience.
- Alumni holding very good positions all over the USA.

When it comes to medical & veterinary education, our programs set standards for excellence. With cooperation from European universities, Hope Medical Institute brings you a unique, unmatched opportunity at your doorstep.

APPLY NOW!
For the October 2002 Term
For more detailed information, please contact us at:
HOPE MEDICAL INSTITUTE
753 Thimble Shoals Blvd., Bldg 2B, Newport News, VA 23606-3575
PHONE: (757) 873-3333 * FAX: (757) 873-6661

...denim. ZANNA
Women's Clothing, Shoes & Accessories
Amherst Northampton Williamstown
www.zanna.com

...capris. ZANNA
Women's Clothing, Shoes & Accessories
Amherst Northampton Williamstown
www.zanna.com

...sandals. ZANNA
Women's Clothing, Shoes & Accessories
Amherst Northampton Williamstown
www.zanna.com

University Health Services
Summer Health Coverage
(enrollment is not automatic)
2002 Coverage Period:
June 1–August 31
(if enrolled by June 1st)
Student Family Plan: $708.00
Basic Health Plan: $195.00
577-5192
Visit the Patient Services Department located in the main lobby for enrollment
(Only UMass students with Basic and SHBP are eligible for the Student Family Plan)
Your Student Health Insurance Plan does not cover you for ROUTINE services at University Health Services

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED/OP EDITOR: MATTHEW DESPRES

Student-teacher scandal at Universities

It is likely that student-teacher relationships have been around as long as there have been teachers and students. American college students are all familiar with two very exaggerated stereotypes. One stereotype is the bimbo female student who ignores her studies and sleeps with her professors in order to receive good grades. The other stereotype is the lecherous, elderly professor who uses his position of authority to sleep with attractive students.

While there have surely been exploitative student-professor relationships in American universities in which one or both partners resemble one of the above-mentioned stereotypes, it is unfair to characterize all student-teacher relationships in this way. Some parents may cringe at the thought of their 18-year-old freshman son or daughter dating a middle-aged professor, but not all student-teacher relationships involve such a severe age difference. Many professors, after all, teach graduate students who are their age or older.

Nonetheless, many colleges have begun to crack down on these relationships. In some cases, the administration has banned them altogether, promising negative consequences for anyone faculty member "caught" dating a student.

CNN.com reports that Ohio's Wesleyan University has banned professors from dating their students. The ban was put into place after it was revealed that a teacher and a student had conducted a sexual relationship. The student was charged with stalking the professor, although charges were eventually dropped.

Professors at Wesleyan now face a reprimand or even termination from their job if it is revealed that they have entered a sexual relationship with a student. However, students in such situations will not be punished or otherwise held responsible.

Meanwhile at Duke University, a milder attempt at ending student-teacher relationships has been made. At Duke, professors are officially "discouraged" from dating students. If a professor decides to become involved with a student, they are required to let their superiors know about the relationship.

Duke's approach to these relationships makes more sense than the "zero tolerance" policy at Wesleyan. While the relationship that prompted the policy sounds like a regrettable one, there is no reason why professors should not be allowed to date students if – and only if – they remove themselves from a position of power over them.

Student-teacher relationships will always exist, despite whatever actions a university may take in attempts to ban them. An outright ban on all student-professor relationships will only increase the likelihood for exploitation, as both partners will be reluctant to report any cases of abuse to the proper authorities.

Duke University has taken the correct steps to end exploitative relationships among students and professors. By treating professors and students as adults, it is far less likely that a professor or a student will feel trapped in an abusive situation.

Information from CNN.com was used in this editorial.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

Confessions of a white male diversity editor

When I came down to The Collegian office for the first time, it was the first semester of my freshman year. In all honesty, I was just looking for something to do in my spare time. The News Editor hired me as a reporter, even though she thought I was stoned when she interviewed me. I wasn't – I guess my pupils are just naturally dilated. She later told me that she figured that even if I was a stoner, I was fairly coherent. (Thanks for the vote of confidence, Jill!)

I've taken a rather unorthodox career path since those days. After spending a year as a news reporter, I became the editor for the Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual and Transgender (GLBT) issues – a now-defunct position – at the beginning of my sophomore year. I went away for my junior year, and when I came back, I was given the position of Diversity Editor.

JAKE LILIEN

I may not seem like a typical candidate for Diversity Editor, considering that I'm a white male. I'm a minority in other ways, however, namely my religion and my sexuality. I'm not even entirely sure that being a minority is a prerequisite for this position, considering that the most important qualifications are a concern for diversity issues and the ability to write well. But I haven't quite had the balls to tell that to the countless people who have given me dirty or confused looks when I told them my job title.

In fact, whenever someone gives me that disapproving "but you're a white guy!" look, I'm unsure what to do. I have the option of describing to them at length my qualifications as the editor of the GLBT page and a news reporter or just screaming, "Gay Jew! Gay Jew! Gay Jew!" at the top of my lungs until they run away. But unless I wore a yarmulke and carried a purse with me wherever I went, I have a feeling that the disapproving stares would continue.

Well, I guess that doesn't really matter. I've had an awesome time as Diversity Editor, and I've learned a hell of a lot about reporting. Despite all of the monetary troubles UMass has had, there has always been an extraordinary lineup of speakers and events on our campus – and I get to cover a lot of them.

Now that I think about it, students here bitch and moan constantly about the crappy educations they receive, yet I never see much of a crowd when a world-renowned author or religious figure speaks on our campus. I'd like to think that I've helped promote these sorts of events by writing articles about them and by putting notices about them in the Cultural Events Calendar, but that may not be the case. (I'm aware that The Collegian is like most other papers, and most readers just ignore those sorts of articles when they flip to the horoscopes.) So be it. You all can die not knowing how cool Sindiwe Magona's lecture about South Africa was, for all I care.

"It's not always a pleasant job, but we do it damn well."

As a reporter, I've also learned a lot about the way the University is run, what sort of ideas are accepted and what ideas aren't. Before I get to the inevitable "thank you" portion of this article, I'd like to get on a soapbox for a second. I want to say that one of the biggest threats to diversity on this campus are the professors who are too busy trying to turn their students into a specific breed of social activists to do the actual job of educators. For the love of God, professors, (and I'm talking to you, Social Thought and Political Economy, Women's Studies and Communications faculty), deliver information impartially and let your students make up their own damned minds!

Okay, I'm off the soapbox now. There are about a thousand people I want to thank. Unfortunately, I can't do it individually, so I'm going to lump you into two huge categories.

First, to the staffers of the Collegian: Don't think for a second that I don't appreciate every bit of help that I've been given in my four years here. I will never forget the senior staff in 1998 who accepted me – an inexperienced, snot-nosed freshman – into their bizarre little cult and taught me how to write. I'll also never forget the current staff, who have handled the news year from hell with professionalism and intelligence and have put out a damned good paper day in and day out. We may be losing a lot people this year (Sam, why do you have to graduate early?) but I have confidence that next year will be just as good, if not better.

To the brothers of Alpha Phi Omega: I know I'm probably the last person in the world anyone would expect to see in a fraternity, even a progressive, co-ed, community-service oriented fraternity like APO. But from the second I met you guys, there was no doubt in my mind where I belonged. I'd like to thank all of you for the experiences we've had together. I cannot imagine my college experience without you.

I'm almost out of space now, so let me conclude by saying that I hope The Collegian continues its tradition. I have faith that we'll continue to print news objectively and by doing so irk the right and the left. It's not always a pleasant job, but we do it damn well.

Jake Lilien is a Collegian staff member.

write for ed/op

Notes from the Brett basement: Sugar and spice, and all things nice

I've been writing this for four years. Never thought it would actually come to this.

***

Here are the thank yous in no particular order.

Greg: Thanks for showing me this whole journalism thing. Sam, you took the chance on me. Thanks. Jim E. is like the guy I'd take a bullet for. No matter what. You ever need anything; a kidney, some D.P. Dough, Billy Joel tickets, you call me, you damn Yankee. Melissa and Jess: the two sisters I adopted. You guys are terrific. Words can't describe how much you two made my life happier. Now if only we were really related. Jaret: I still remember the rule of thirds. Rachel: You know how I feel. And that's a good thing. Benny: You want to be me now? I don't care what anyone says, Ryan – you are one of the best humans God put on this earth. Adam M.: This is the hard part. What can I say that I haven't said before? You're the older brother I always wanted. And you taught me everything. Smitty: Thanks for telling me to keep my head up. The view is a lot better. Despres: Thanks for putting up with me. And you deserved to win. Don't screw up my paper, or I'll be back. Remember, pica space! Julie: You're not a snob. Well, sometimes you have snobbish tendencies. And Ab-Fab sucks. Scott and Tibi: Thanks for the great pictures. Rob: Endless summers. Cold Bud Light in the Beer Fridge. Darts. Cookouts. Red Sox. The Spoke. Bubs. Fair enough. And tell Scott I have his 15 bucks. Jim P.: Finally I had someone to talk DVDs and Kevin Smith with. Damn. Take care, brother. Lizzy: Everyone else sucks at life. Brady: The best rack at The Collegian. Kulak: Fight the good fight. Celine sucks. Nessa and Bethany: You two were the best neighbors ever. Shauna: We need to do a power hour. Sarah: Prove me wrong. Mike D: Party HARD! Always. The coolest radical vegetarian I know. Mitch: It's me. It's me. It's KDC. And that's not a bad thing; it's a good thing. Thanks man, for the walks to Cumby's and the sound advice. Greatest day ever. Kurt: Flair sucks, you mark. Hulkamania 4 life. But you're a good friend. Bad gambler, good friend. Pizz: You are a huge mark. Elena: Stay sassy.

***

Why? Because I am that Goddamn good.

It's gonna be nice to be anonymous again. For a couple of months, anyway.

***

I only have 70 lines, not enough to list all the music quotes. So just listen to Hank Williams, Dr. Dre, Buddy Holly, Johnny Cash, DMX, Bob Dylan, Wilco, The Clancy Brothers, Liszt, Snoop Dogg, Dropkick Murphys, The Doors, Rolling Stones, Beatles, Nirvana, Waylon Jennings, Brahms, Eminem, Iron Maiden, Elvis, The Association, Left Banke, Otis Redding, The Temptations. I better stop now. You'll get the idea.

***

I'm notorious. And I'm ok with that. Could be worse. I could be nobody.

SOM: I'm sorry. But only a little bit. Don't let it go to your heads.

***

You people have no idea how much work goes into this paper. Oh, and to all of you people who came down saying, "You have to print this," bite me. I don't have to do anything. Oh, and coming down in the last weeks of school for clips is not cool. But it is, in fact, hilarious.

***

This is me officially burning my bridges with SGA.

"Things I won't miss about The Collegian*: Feeling like Dante every Monday: 'I'm not even supposed to be here today!'"*

What a waste of three years. I really wish I had gone with the paper in the beginning. And all the rumors about my corruption are more than likely true. But I never used student money for a vacation. I just told about it.

***

Shameless plugs: www.cosmicallyspeaking.com; www.ryanbenharris.com; and after July 4, www.crazyclem.com.

***

Things I won't miss about The Collegian:
Feeling like Dante every Monday: "I'm not even supposed to be here today!"
Rumplestiltskin.
Not seeing sunlight.
Cancerman.
Watching the train wreck.

***

Things I will miss:
Everything else.

***

And for those of you I left out, sorry. Oh, and one last bit of trivia: I tried to work in "sweet, sweet" or "gentle reader" in nearly every column, much to the chagrin of Jim. Hey, everyone needs a catchphrase.

Ken Campbell was a Collegian Columnist who tried his very best to do a good job.

Assaults on campus: UMass must act for students

How far is this going to go? How much longer will it be before something is done? I am sick and tired of hearing about assaults on this campus and everyone at the University should be tired of it as well.

Everyday I hear more stories and more rumors about people being attacked or assaulted while walking on campus. Just thinking that a young adult will leave their home, which they have grown up in, to attend a learning community and have to worry about getting mugged or raped walking home from a late class baffles my mind. How can we allow this to happen? It is important that news about these attacks is reported and that the students here at UMass know what is going on.

I don't know if I am stomach waking up to read another headline about a girl getting attacked on her way to the bathroom. Think about this people: the poor girl was trying to get to the bathroom.

YOUSEF MUNAYYER

What has this university come to when I have to worry about walking 35 feet to get to the bathroom in a dorm hallway? And this isn't the first time this has happened here at UMass. Where is the escort service? Answer: Not at Umass.

Why? Answer: It doesn't fit in the budget. I'm sorry but that answer smells like the local Hadley farm on a warm day. I can't take that for an answer even though that is what you might expect to hear from the administration. I just can't fathom that when putting together a new budget something like this was not anticipated. Oh sure, the bus schedule was extended a couple hours. Well, you try to tell that to someone who couldn't make it to a bus station and ran to the nearest call box that was, to top it all off, out of service.

Safety should be a priority. In fact, it should be so important to the administration here at UMass that columns like this should never have to be written.

The average college student should have to worry about how they are going to conclude the paper they have due this week, how to study for a test or how the schools lacrosse team is doing in the tournament, but never should a student have to worry about who is walking behind them as the sun is setting.

I want to know what it's going to take to get some changes around here. How many more people are going to be hurt? How many people are not going to sleep at night? How many people will have to deal with this for the rest of their lives? How long will it be till someone I know gets hurt? Well damn it, I am not waiting that long, and no one should have to.

This is ridiculous. Providing security for its constituents is the first and foremost priority of an administering body, be it the U.S. government for Americans, the town of Amherst for its citizens or the UMass administration for its students. But no. Instead we hear about how the administration is busy spending their time enforcing rules like the forbiddance of amplified music after 11 p.m. Maybe the administration and chief of police are too busy arresting members of the RA union. Gee, I'm glad to see that the administration is on their toes and hard at work.

I am not going to spend time going off on the disturbed people that are the actual perpetrators of the assaults that are happening. Although these people are about as valuable to society as pond scum, sorry, the mold that grows on pond scum, I still point the finger at administrators for these incidents. One cannot expect the University to get rid of all the idiots out there, but they have to be able to implement security measures that will help to prevent this sort of thing from happening. Hey, this isn't rocket science.

Many people have said that budget cuts are to blame. Fine, maybe indirectly, but if you are sitting down trying to decide what you're going to do with many millions fewer than the year before, would security be one of the line items you cross out? This was stupid. I'm sure some classes were saved due to this cut, but at the same time, students on this campus would be much happier if they lost the underwater-basket-weaving-101-type classes and were able to feel secure about walking to the room they sleep in.

What's the bottom-line? This has got to stop and this has got to stop now. The reason this is happening is because of faulty decision-making where it counts. This has to be corrected without delay. I don't care from where the security or the money comes. These things should not matter when it comes to the well being of a college student! And I'm not talking about making changes over the summer; things need to start happening today, now! Call boxes need to work, and the issues of assaults have to be dealt with and publicized to the students who as of today are not receiving proper warnings.

I'm not sure what it's going to take to get the administrations attention. I wonder just what it is they do in their offices all day. If it means students have to raise their voice and talk to the media, then so be it. If it takes someone from a major news network to come down and do a story on bad security at UMass, so be it. If it takes the calling for letters of resignation from the chief of police and deans of student affairs, then that's what has to be done. Soon some individuals are going to end up with egg on their face, and I'm willing to put money on the fact that they spend their time in Whitmore.

Yousef Munayyer is a Collegian Columnist.

"Don't you fear what you don't know; just let that be your room to grow."

visit us online @ www.dailycollegian.com

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS & LIVING Weekend Edition

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 5.10.02 ARTS EDITOR: MIKE DELANO

Why everything mainstream is the greatest

This is it, the last installment of "Tube Notes" this academic year, and the last one ever written by yours truly. This past year I've brought you timely news, expert critique, daring new show ideas and much more. This last addition will bring you more of that in rant-like format.

-First off, it was announced this week that Will Ferrell will be leaving Saturday Night Live (SNL) at the end of this current season on May 18. Like many of his SNL alumni, Ferrell is leaving the cast to pursue a full time career in movies. Ferrell, who might be the funniest member of the SNL cast, will likely have more success than the Norm Macdonalds and Tim Meadows of the world.

-Speaking of SNL, what the heck is so good about Jimmy Fallon anyway? His "kooky" demeanor reminds me of Adam Sandler on his worst day. Life after SNL for him will signal the death of his one-dimensional career.

-Afternoon talk shows are great, and I'm glad to see Oprah having more stories on three ways and less on Dr. Phil. Tuesday's episode featured a story on teenagers playing "a new, more raunchy type of spin the bottle." It is always amusing to hear all the high falutin' culture snobs make fun of the Springer-like talk shows, since they are so "trashy" as they put it. Of course, those people have no sense of humor, so what do you expect? They'd rather sit around watching films with subtitles, debate the merits of Goddard's avante-garde style or read the Communist manifesto instead of laughing.

-The Smurfs was a really good cartoon, and Gargamel is one heck of an evil guy. I mean, he wants to eat the Smurfs from what I remember. That is pretty badass.

-Bryant Gumble seems like a real ahole.

-There was some news last week that Bill Clinton might get his own talk show, but what about Al Gore? I'd watch that.

-Speaking of a good show, I'd like to see a "Real World" style show starring Al Gore, Cap'N Crunch, Bill Belichick, Jenny McCarthy and Saddam Hussein sharing an apartment in The Boulders.

-On the University of Connecticut's cable channel, there is a show called "I Did Your Mother." It is a Howard Stern-like, student-produced TV show that has come under fire at UCONN for its raunchy topics. Can you imagine a show like that here on UVC? I can't, but I sure can imagine the protests on the Student Union steps that it would bring. The Graduate Employee Organization could even get the United Auto Workers (UAW) to help them when they protest it. Sure, the UAW has nothing to do with the show, but they don't have anything to do with Resident Assistants either, so what's the difference?

-Dan Rather seems like a real moron.

-Frequently, I hear people say "MTV sucks." This is fine, but the reason why "it sucks" is amusing. The reason why, according to these culture geniuses, is because "they don't even play videos anymore, and all they play is Britney Spears and Backstreet Boys." In reality, these people are just pissed that whatever unpopular band or artist they like is rarely or never played on MTV. Guess what. The reason why MTV doesn't play Ani DeFranco, Michael Franti or "non-commercial" WMUA-style music is because most people don't like that kind of music. It more than two dozen people actually enjoyed that music, then MTV would play it. There is no conspiracy to hold down certain artists by MTV. They want to entertain their audience. Similar to the "MTV sucks" people, these individuals also hate the stuff that is played, and the fans of MTV hate the music that the "MTV sucks" people love. It just so happens that one group is much larger than the other.

MTV plays plenty of videos, and most of them are not teen pop acts. "TRL" is one show for Christ's sake! The other 23 hours of the day are not filled with "nothing but Britney Spears and Backstreet Boys." I wonder if the people that say these things even watch MTV at all. They deserve credit for at least trying new concepts in their shows instead of the usual run of the mill sitcoms, dramas and reality shows that all the other networks constantly put out.

Also, MTV has another channel, called MTV2. This channel plays nothing but videos 24 hours a day, with very little TRL-type videos in rotation. But for the music fans that look down upon popular music and are pissed that nobody likes their kind of music, that still isn't enough. To those people, I say keep listening to your bootlegged, imported, indie label music, and keep waiting for the day when the rest of the world cares. Oh by the way, as I write this, a "White Stripes" video just came on MTV. But I thought MTV just played "pop stuff." I guess the people that say that must be WRONG.

Kurt Polesky is a Collegian Staff Member.

Jurassic 5 invade amherst

COURTESY JURASSIC5.COM

BLACKALICIOUS

By Catherine Turner
COLLEGIAN STAFF

JURASSIC 5, BLACKALICIOUS
Amherst College
May 4

It was a Californian invasion last Saturday night when Jurassic 5 and Blackalicious arrived at Amherst College. Everything was perfect: long lines of fans decked out in stylish gear, two veteran hip-hop groups playin' a high-energy live show, perfect weather, a cool vibe in the room, break dancing, bumpin' and of course, mass sing-alongs with favorite songs. Yeah it was perfect. Except of course for the sound.

I really thought that Amherst College (AC) would have learned their lesson after they hosted the Beatnuts and displayed their supreme incompetence in sound. However, the J5 show proved once again that even though students pay $40,000 a year to go to that school, AC can't afford to buy a clue about how to run a good sounding show.

Scratch that. Instead of hiring people who actually know what they're doing in sound, (for example, any of the extremely talented people who do sound for the Fine Arts Center or the Mullins Center over here at UMass—you'll notice that the Roots sounded fantastic even though they were playing in a hockey arena) Amherst College should send one of their preppy little Lord Jeffs into their big silo full of money (imagine Scrooge McDuck diving into his big room of gold coins in Duck Tales and doing laps through his golden goblets and diamond necklaces) and pull out a wad o'hundreds and build themselves a REAL concert venue.

But back to the real story. Despite the lousy sound and the fact that the show was held in one of their like 10 "athletic facilities," or gyms, as we call them here at public school, and the sound was echoing off the back wall, making is so loud you couldn't very well decipher the specific lyrics of any of the artists, it was a good show. That's probably because J5 and Blackalicious are awesome groups.

Blackalicious just came out with their mainstream album Blazing Arrow. Even though they already released three other great CDs, including an EP titled A2G, this is their first major label debut. So far, so good. Blackalicious's frontman, Gift of Gab, blew the crowd away with song after song of intense articulations. Vintage tunes "Rock the Spot" and "Deception" were intertwined with some of their new cuts, such as "Make You Feel That Way" and "Sky is Falling."

Gift of Gab and his stage partner Lateef pushed the energy level so high that by the last part of their performance Gift of Gab was drenched in sweat and almost out of breath. The audience was hyped up, especially when, in the middle of their set, Gift of Gab put down the mic for a few minutes and let Beat Junkies DJ master Cut Chemist take center stage and hypnotize the crowd with his scratching skills.

The peak of the performance came when the whole crew put on white lab coats and plastic protective glasses and did some Cut Chemistry, and Gift of Gab recited his signature track, "Alphabet Aerobics." One of the backup singers held up a card with a letter on it as Gift of Gab went through the alphabet with increasing speed, every lyric beginning with the specific letter. Between his unique voice and his wordsmith genius, Gift of Gab and Blackalicious transported the Amherst crowd from New England to sunny LA with their West Coast, laid back hip-hop stylings.

And that was just the beginning of the show.

Jurassic 5 took the stage in front of a wild jungle full of hungry hip- hop animals. The crowd screamed, danced and knew every word to every song. They serenaded Chali 2na, Marc 7, Akil and Zaakir with their unison chants of such hits as "Quality Control," "W.O.E. is Me" and "Jurass Finish First" just as the MCs spoke them.

It was obvious that the members of J5, including DJ Nu-Mark and Cut Chemist, were having equally as much fun as their audience members. When they performed old school songs such as "Concrete Schoolyard" and "Jayou," they all had huge grins on their faces as they recited and danced around on the stage.

What they were most excited about, though, was performing some of their new, unreleased stuff. They played two different, all-new tracks that will supposedly be on their upcoming album due out in September (according to Akil). Though the crowd was unable to sing along, they still remained just as rowdy as they had been for the old favorites.

J5 combine harmonized vocals with old school flavor and some serious DJ prowess, thanks to their tight connection with the Beat Junkies. At one point during the show, Cut Chemist got out from behind the wheels of steel and proceeded to scratch from a turntable he had fastened around his neck. He looked like old school Flava Flav wearing a clock around his neck. It was so cool.

What makes J5 so cool, and therefore so fun to watch, is the fact that they're so different from any other group that's out there right now. Between solo rants, the four MCs vocally converge for choruses and conglomerate verses. The four guys stand up and face the crowd, their voices jumping around, yet perfectly aligned. They are indeed hip-hop professionals who have cooperative writing down to an art.

At the end of the show, J5 invited Blackalicious back on stage and members from the opening, local band Witness Protection Program to engage in a freestyle session. By the close, there was absolutely no need for any kind of encore because J5 had given the people what they wanted and had performed just about every one of their popular tunes. Show goers were left with a feeling of contentment and anticipation for the next J5 album.

Yes, the sound sucked, but after a while, it was hardly noticeable since the Californians were so entertaining. Good music, good show; good night.

Synthpop hits Cambridge this Sunday

The members of Freezepop...

...and Apoptygma Berzerk will be in Cambridge this Sunday

By Kevin Monahan
COLLEGIAN STAFF

What was once viewed as a brand of music made by a bunch of Euro-trash nerds now has one of the largest underground followings of any popular musical genre today. Blame Kraftwerk. Synthpop provides alternative music by the true definition of the word and not the mainstream mediocre rock that co-opted the term "alternative." Call it what you wish: techno-pop, EBM or electronica, the accessible qualities of this music carry a wide appeal. As the Summer Synthpop Invasion takes over ManRay in Cambridge this Sunday, audiences will get to see the different styles electronic music has to offer.

The largest gripe about synthpop tends to involve the lack of any real musical performance. "To be quite honest, I think going to electronic concerts is kind of boring," says Stephan Groth of Apoptygma Berzerk. "I think most of the concerts I go to with electronic acts is sort of like karaoke. I always thought that if you put out an album and people buy it, then they pay money for an entrance ticket, they want to see something different. I don't want to just play the CD, then sing on top of it when these people already bought the CD."

APB promises to give the crowd something more than a bunch of people playing with computers onstage. "It's important for me to have the whole live thing. We've got a drummer, a keyboard, guitars and my vocals. So, it is actually live...I try to keep the albums as electronic as possible and the shows as [close to] rock as possible." Groth also makes it clear that the songs that gave Apop a following won't be heavily altered because of the new instrumentation.

"It's a bit rougher, and there's a lot more energy in it. But the songs are the same. It's the same tempo, the same key. The melodies are the same."

APB is headlining the show accompanied by contemporary German techno pioneers Beborn Beton. Computorgirl is also on the bill. Project Sphere and Freezepop will provide local support. The Boston-based Freezepop gained notice around town by opening for Cibo Matto last year. The trio, consisting of Liz Enthusiasm, the Duke of Belgian Waffles and the other Sean T. Drinkwater, certainly chose an appropriate name for their brand of music — sweet, colorful and artificially flavored. Their EP Fashion Impression Function has just recently been released featuring a few remixes of songs that appeared on their LP Freezepop Forever, which was released last year.

Apop, which hails from Norway, isn't intimidated by presenting its distinctively European sound in front of an American audience.

"America is such a big country," said Groth. "There's no such thing as an American audience. The crowd in Florida is completely different from the crowd in Denver. The crowd in San Francisco is different from the crowd in New York. So it can't really be compared that way. A German crowd can't be compared to a Spanish crowd either."

But he does note one discernable difference: "American crowds seem more enthusiastic. They want a good time. In Europe we have so many bands touring all year. If you're in one of the big cities like Berlin or Paris, you'll have several electronic shows every week. You have to sit there and choose, 'Should I go see Iron of Coil or Depeche Mode?' There's so much going on they don't appreciate it as much. When European electronic acts come over here, people are really looking forward to it and having a good time."

The Summer Synthpop Invasion featuring Apoptygma Berzerk, Beborn Beton, Computorgirl, Freezepop and Project Sphere will be at ManRay nightclub in Cambridge on Sunday, May 12. Doors open at 7 p.m. Tickets are available by calling the venue at (617) 864-0400 or by visiting their Web site at www.manray-club.com.

Pixies, the pride of UMass

By Nika Martin
Collegian Staff

The Pixies Sing, UMass Style

Blasé songs and the same ol' same ol' were the height of my online experience during one afternoon a few months ago. I was searching for something interesting. Anything. It really didn't matter what. I don't so this often, but I do it enough that every three years or so I find something notable about which to brag. This was one of those days.

First, I attempted a random search using my beloved school name. This simple typing of "UMass," through much pointing and clicking action, brought me upon something that I had never expected: A song called "U-Mass," written by The Pixies in 1991.

The lead singers were both students at UMass Amherst and dropped out of school to form one of the most influential rock bands in the past 20 years. Being a Boston garage band, they made their way into mainstream rock and heavily influenced another famous band, Nirvana. And from The Pixies, sprung another amazing rock band, The Breeders.

The guys didn't have much experience playing instruments, but that didn't prove to be a big problem as they prepared an eight-song demo for the British record label, 4AD. Punk rock is notorious for its use of the four basic chords, an art that the members of The Pixies apparently mastered. Their screaming voices and sensational use of lyrics makes them one of the most well known punk bands in music history.

The lyrics to the song, "U-Mass," are more than interesting. They're also stereotypical, at times offensive and highly intriguing. They go as such:

"In the sleeps West of the woods East/Its a valley full Full o' pioneer/ We're not just kids To say the least/ We got ideas To us that's dear/ Like capitalism like communism/ Like lots of things You've heard about/ And rednecker They get us pissed/And stupid stuff It makes us shout/ Oh dance with me Oh don't he shy/ Oh kiss me cunt Oh kiss me cock/ Oh kiss the world Oh kiss the sky/ Oh kiss my ass Oh let it rock/ Of the April birds And the May bee/ Oh baby It's educational/University Of Massachusetts, please/ And here's the last five/ It's educational"

My favorite line is the first, with its reference to the Pioneer Valley. The song has a great intro and a classic drumbeat that'll keep your feet tapping, your head banging, and, if you're with friends, perhaps your body moshing.

Just as an aside, I would like to put a plug in for The Breeders, a group formed by two of the members of The Pixies, specifically Ed by the sweet sounding Kim Deal. Check out their song "Cannonball," which has been featured on many Ietta commercials. They have a great sound as well, and you are sure to recognize their music.

So from the "sleepy West to the Woody East," check out The Pixies and The Breeders online and "support your school."

MUSICAL CHEERS WITH NIKA MARTIN

Dancing's Still got it After All These Years

Shy girl meets tough guy. Tough guy turns shy girl into a daring, rebellious wild woman. Sound like a plan? Well, that is the basic plot of "Dirty Dancing," the best movie of all time. Yes, we could argue this point, but of course, you would be wrong if you disagreed.

Set in the year 1963, "Dirty Dancing" introduces Baby Houseman (Jennifer Grey), a seventeen-year-old Jewish girl who is vacationing in the Catskills with her parents and sister. At first, you could call her a goody-two-shoes with her main goals in life being to please her father, graduate from Mt. Holyoke and join the Peace Corps. But as Baby's boredom at Kellerman's lodge begins to grow, she decides to explore the area, only to stumble upon a wild after-hours staff party.

Now I'm not talking a "wild UMass-type party" here, I mean a party where people are actually dancing and not just stoned and drunk. Coming onto the scene in a below-the-knee length dress and holding a watermelon, Baby is introduced to Johnny Castle (played by the ever-handsome Patrick Swayze), one of the hotel staff entertainers. Soon Baby finds that there in an emergency situation with Johnny's dance partner, and she takes her place. That's when things really heat up. Baby goes from being a reserved little girl to an outgoing and bright character, not to mention an amazing dancer. And through it all, she and Johnny fall madly in love. But as usual, her parents come in between them and....oh wait! I can't tell you what happens...I guess you'll have to go rent it for yourself. Sorry!

Aside from being a great story, "Dirty Dancing" also has a phenomenal soundtrack, two in fact. The first is simply called "Dirty Dancing" and contains the Academy Award-winning song "(I've had) The Time of My Life." Moreover, you'll find lots of famous songs from the 1960's such as "Stay" and "In the Still of the Night." Also included are some rarely heard 1980's songs, which are actually pretty good.

The second soundtrack, titled "More Dirty Dancing," consists of every other instrumental song they included in the movie. This volume of the soundtrack is actually my favorite, because it contains the songs you can't get anywhere else. Listening to it will make you remember very specific parts of the movie. A good soundtrack will do that to a listener, and this is surely a must have.

So go to the video store and rent "Dirty Dancing," whether it's your first time or your 15th – it's a classic film that is sure to get your feet moving and your heart beating.

The Five College Area's Source for Discovering the Weekly Happenings of New England and Beyond

The Source

Compiled by Nick Pezolato — Send all submissions to collegiansource@yahoo.com

GALLERY EXHIBITIONS

UMASS – The University Gallery will display the exhibit The Culture of Violence. It is available for viewing between the hours of 11 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. during Tuesday through Friday and 2 to 5 p.m. on Sundays. Free and open to the public.

UMASS – What happens when you take a neglected space and make it into a walk-through exhibition? You have the exhibition Anhedonia, by UMass student Ellen Piangerelli. It's located in Goodell, and it will be on display from May 1-14.

UMASS – The Hampden Gallery will be showcasing the show "Material – Immaterial," a MFA thesis from May 12-16. There will be an opening reception from 4 to 6 p.m. All are welcome to come. The gallery hours are Monday through Thursday from 12 to 6 p.m. and Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m. it is sponsored by The University of Massachusetts Arts Council.

MUSIC

UMASS – The University Chorale, directed by L. Wayne Abercrombie, will present its annual spring concert on Sunday, May 12 at 4 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. The show will perform folk music from Across Europe and the United States. The Women's Choir will also perform, showcasing Japanese and German folk songs. Tickets are $10 for the general public and $5 for students, elders and children. All are welcome to attend.

UMASS – The UMass Jazz Ensemble I will be spoofing award shows, in an arrangement put together by an UMass undergraduate student. Other songs covered will include works from Rodgers and Hart, Michael Brecker and Gershwin. The event will be on May 14 and is open to all interested in attending. Tickets are $5 for students.

AMHERST COLLEGE – "An Eclectic Evening of Chamber Music" is a benefit concert for the Amherst Cinema Center that will take place on May 10 at Buckley Recital Hall. Amherst College at 8 p.m. featured performers include cellist Matt Haimovitz, violist Kathryn Lockwood, pianist Ursela Oleysky, violinist Joel Pitchon, soprano Paulina Stark, clarinetist Michael Sussman and violinist Charles. The program includes Dvorak's Piano Quintet in A major, Beethoven's Clarinet Trio, a selection of classical cabaret songs, and a new work by Northampton composer Luna Pearl Woolf. Tickets are $10 with a student ticket with valid ID. Tickets can be purchased in person, at the Amherst Cinema Center office, 30 Amity Street or reserved by phone at 413-256-1991.

THEATER

SMITH COLLEGE – The Smith College Theater Department presents A Piece of My Hart by Shirley Lauro and directed by Eilzabeth Schwan-Rosenwald '02, and starring four members of this year's graduating class. The play will run from May 16-18 at 8:30 p.m. in Theater 14 in the Mendenhall Center for the Performing Arts. Tickets are $7 for the general public and $4 for students and seniors.

FILM

UMASS – The Radical Student Union will be premiering the films Looking for Answers and Occupation. The films will run on three days, starting on Monday, May 13, and continuing on the 14 and 15 in the Campus Center (in a room to be announced at a later date). Answers is a film that tries to explain the hatred behind the worst terrorist attack in U.S. history. Occupation is a film about Harvard students, employees, and the communits, fighting the battle for a living wage. All are welcome as the shows are free and will begin at 7 p.m.

AUDITIONS

AMHERST – The Valley Light Opera will be holding auditions for its fall production of Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Yeomen of the Guard" on Saturday, May 11 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sunday, May 12 from 1 to 4 p.m. at the First Congregation Church on 165 Main St, Amherst. All voice parts are needed, and those interested in a principal role should prepare a solo number for that character. Those interested in the chorus should prepare one verse of a song, which displays their range and projection.

perhaps you should stop being so lazy...write for arts.

HOUSING UMASS AMHERST SERVICES

Fall 2002 Housing Assignment Information

Housing Assignment Office
● 235 Whitmore Administration Building
● www.housing.umass.edu
413.545.2100

The following is important Housing Information for Fall 2002:

◆ The last day to submit a request for an assignment change or application is Friday, May 24, 2002.

◆ If you are eligible and wish to cancel your housing assignment, please call the Housing Assignment Office before May 31, 2002 to avoid a cancellation fee.

✔ There will be a $100.00 cancellation fee from June 3rd - June 28th.

✔ There will be a $200.00 cancellation fee from July 1st - July 31st.

✔ If you cancel after July 31st there is a $300.00 cancellation fee.

BG JEAN-BLAKE/COLLEGIAN

Tourney Time!
The men's lacrosse team will take on Fairfield University Saturday in the first round of the NCAA Tournament.

Lowe

continued from page 10

that this is one of the toughest things to do in sports: giving credit to Dan Duquette and Joe Kerrigan. They saw that Lowe might not have the mentality to be a major league closer and made the decision to put him back in the starting rotation. Neither one was able to stay around to see the fruits of their decision, but they did pull the right trigger on Lowe in moving him to the starter's role.

Now this message is to those in Red Sox Nation: let's not jump overboard with this start (like I have to tell them). At 24-7, the Red Sox have the best record in baseball, and it seems as if Grady Little is pulling all the right triggers.

The calculations of Jimy Williams and Kerrigan has left for the baseball smarts of Little, who showed them last Saturday when he sent four pinch hitters to the plate in the ninth against Tampa Bay, including Shea Hillenbrand who hit a grand slam to win the game.

Nomar Garciaparra is healthy, Manny Ramirez is starting to turn things around and Johnny Damon has been a welcome sight at the top of the line-up. All of this being said, the Red Sox got off to a hot start last year and let it slip away. It's too early to tell how good this team really is.

The same can be said about Lowe. Although he is 5-1 on the young season, the season is only in May. A lot can happen from now until September when the true test comes.

However, when one gets confidence, it can take them anywhere, and as of right now Lowe has it – at least until the next game he loses. Then we'll see how the Red Sox fans feel about him.

David Rose is a Collegian Columnist.

Anyone interested in writing for Sports next year should come down to the Collegian and talk to Jim, Matt, or Glen.
And Eric...
but only if you have to.

UMass BRIEFS:

Men's Track

The University of Massachusetts men's track and field team finished in second-place with 137.50 points at the 2002 Verizon Atlantic 10 Championships, held last weekend at Sports Backers Stadium at the University of Richmond.

Leading the way for the Minutemen was junior Kwesi Frimpong-Boateng (Accra, Ghana) who won the 100M dash with a time of 10.71 seconds. Frimpong-Boateng also finished fifth in the 200M dash with a time of 22.18 seconds and ran the anchor leg of the 4x100M relay. In that event the Minutemen finished fourth with a time of 42.90 seconds, earning the team five points.

Sophomore John O'Neil (North Reading, Mass.) won the decathlon with 5796 points. Senior Erik Peterson (Seekonk, Mass.) placed third with 5610 points and junior Ken Scheider (Wood Ridge, N.J.) fourth with 4995 points. Overall the Minutemen secured 21 out of the 33 points available in the event. Scheider also placed second in the pole vault clearing 14'3.25".

In the 3000M steeplechase, senior Mike Pieck (Guilderland, N.Y.) placed third with a time of 9:20.83 garnering the Minutemen six points. The 4x800M relay team finished third with a time of 7:39.64. Sophomore Keith Toffling (Tyngsboro, Mass) finished third in the high jump clearing a height of 6'3.25", while freshman Mike Shaw (Reading, Mass.) finished tied for third in the pole vault clearing 13'3.50".

In the triple jump, freshman Henry Smith (Ellington, Conn.) finished fifth with a mark of 44'9.75". Junior Eric Uliano (Haverill, Mass) placed second in the shot put with a toss of 52'00.50" and fifth in the discus, clearing 142'10.00". Sophomore Jeff Jason (New Bedford, Mass.) finished third in the shot put with a toss of 49'6.25" and fourth in the discus, clearing 144'9.00". He also placed fourth in the hammer throw with a mark of 152'6.00.

Freshman Mike Antonio (Westboro, Mass) placed third in the javelin with a toss of 179'2.00" and earned the Minutemen six points.

The Minutemen return to action this Saturday, May 11, in Storrs, Conn. for the New England Championships.

Women's Track

The University of Massachusetts women's track and field team finished in second-place with 118 points at the 2002 Verizon Atlantic 10 Championships, held last weekend at Sports Backers Stadium at the University of Richmond.

Leading the way for the Minutewomen was sophomore Brandy Green (Fitchburg, Mass.) who won the pole vault clearing 11'5.75". Green also finished seventh in the finals of the 100M high hurdles with a time of 15.01 seconds. Teammate and senior co-captain Rhianna DaCruz (Pawtucket, R.I.) finished second in the pole vault clearing 10'11.75". She also placed second in the javelin with a mark of 138'8.00".

Freshman Christina Huff (Springfield, Mass.) placed second in the finals of the 100M dash with a season-best time of 12.22 seconds. She also placed third in the 200M dash with a season-best time of 25.35 seconds and ran the anchor leg of the 4x100M relay for UMass, that failed to score due to a false start. Huff also ran the anchor leg of the 4x400M relay guiding the Maroon and White to a sixth-place finish out of nine teams with a time of 3:55.22. On the day, Huff played a part in securing a team-high 14 points.

Sophomore Chante Soares (New Bedford, Mass.) finished second in the long jump with a mark of 17'11.75", while sophomore Shannon Jackson (Bridgewater, Mass.) finished second in the 400M intermediate hurdles with a time of 1:03.70 seconds. She also place ed fourth in the 100M high hurdles with a season-best time of 14.71 seconds. Junior Crystal Therrien (Fairfield, Mass.) finished second in the heptathlon with 4148 points.

In the women's hammer throw, freshman Crissy Bizon (Warwick, R.I.) won the event clearing 165'6.00". That mark is a new season-high for Bizon and also ranks second in school history. Teammates Neil Giffune (Foxboro, Mass) and Jen Iasiello (Barrington, R.I.) finished third and fourth respectively with throws of 147'11.00", and 147'3.00".

The Minutewomen return to action this Saturday, May 11, in Dedham, Mass. for the New England Championships.

– Courtesy UMass Media Relations

College Self-Storage
Monthly/Annual Rentals
College Payment Plans
Minutes From Campus
Electronic Card Access
Security Fenced Perimeter
Multi-Size Units
Route 9, Belchertown
323-9792

CASH FOR BOOKS
WE PAY TOP DOLLAR
Jeffery Amherst College Store
55 SOUTH PROSPECT ST. AMHERST
253-3870 253-7816

WANTED
STUDENTS WITH TRUCK OR BUS DRIVING EXPERIENCE WANTED FOR SUMMER WORK
EARN $110-$140 PER DAY
One or both sessions available. Possibly some July work.
Call 1-888-949-5089

Rental Office
1040 N.Pleasant St. #410
Amherst, MA 01002
413.549.0145
NEW PUFFTON VILLAGE
Serving All Of Your Rental Needs

DAILY COLLEGIAN CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ACTIVITIES

World Willleball Tournament, medium pitch speed, 2-5 person teams $1000 cash for winners. Call for info (603) 425-6168.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Top of the Campus, Incorporated (TOC, Inc.) will hold it's Annual Meeting in Campus Center 917, Wednesday, May 22, 2002 at 2:00 p.m.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. - Now Available, 1& 2 bedroom apts. Leases begin June, July, Aug or Sept. 1 year lease. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywine-apts.com stop by or call (413) 549-0600.

1 Bedroom apt. close to Amherst Center and campus. Take over lease June 1st. Fall option. Call 253-1180.

Save $500 Off. Move-In Costs. Deluxe 2 bedroom apartments. FREE heat & hot water. Fully applianced Kitchens. Washers/ Dryers available. Pool, volleyball, basketball. Minutes from Umass-On free busline. Call Sugarloaf Estates today! 413-665-3856 *Now leasing for summer & fall! Email: sugarloaf_estates@peoplepc.com * limited time offer.*

Take over our lease, June 1st pull ton 3 bdrm 549-5249

1 bedroom Apt Brandywine summer with fall option 549-7274

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 bedroom apartment summer sublet or new lease call 253-6778.

Looking for a beautiful and cheap place to live this summer? Hurry and have a room in a 2 bedroom furnished apartment with a porch and backyard. Free facilities. Pay just $400 a month, available this summer. call 210-5145.

2 bedroom Apt. Summer sublet or take over our lease. Rent negotiable call 549-7259.

Take over our lease 3 BR w/upgrade in Puffton. Available June 1st. Call 549-1474 for more info.

AUTO FOR SALE

88 Mercury Grand Marquis. 107k runs looks great $1500 OBO. Tim 548-7033.

1987 Toyota MR2 great condition T-top $2000 OBO 413-575-5487 Chris.

Chevy Lumina 1990. 165000 reliable must go. $1000 OBO. 896-5082.

89 Honda Accord $1500 OBO 259-0068.

COMPUTERS

We pay CASH for your used lap tops 413-584-8857.

Color Laptop $99 Pentium tower/ CD Rom $99 with color monitor $139. HURRY! 413-584-8857.

EMPLOYMENT

Activist Best Summer Job in Town. Sleep late, work outdoors, cool people, cool boss. Great issues! *protect out air and water *fight corporate polluters *defend public health *promote renewable energy. Earn $4,000-5,000 this summer. Call today, Start tomorrow. 413-584-9850.

Temporary help needed during finals. Work book buy back for the Textbook Annex May 16-24. applications available at the Annex.

Positions available: aerobics, aqua, and yoga instructors, personal trainers, lifeguards, and maintenance Hampshire Fitness Club 256-6446.

Cushman Village general store prepare creative take-out deli foods and bakery items with customer service skills. Immediate F.T./P.T. Open 7 days with employment past summer available. 491 Pine St. Amherst 549-4455.

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individual, full and part time positions available immediately. Only those able to work the upcoming summer should apply. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413)584-4746.

EMPLOYMENT

Bartenders wanted. Make up to $250 day. No experience necessary. 1-800-585-4810 ext. 4080.

Camp Counselor wanted for Tennis, Gymnastics, Water Ski, Arts, and more! Gain valuable experience at award-winning camps, while having the summer of a lifetime. Apply on-line at www.pinehirest.com

Greenhouse Part-Full Time. Various shifts for one person. Daily production, afternoon & weekends/ chores, some on call. Mechanical aptitude necessary. Must live close to facility. For more details visit www.bioshelters.com and apply online or mail cover letter and resume to bioshelters, Inc. 500 Sunderland Road, Amherst, MA 01002. No Calls Please!

Summer Work! Student work program! Earn great summer income! $8.25 base+appt. Customer service and sales. Scholarships available. 732-2252. www.CollegeStudents.com

SUMMER HELP. Cape Cod Ice seeks drivers and P/T 2nd Shift Supervisor in our Sandwich location. Interested candidates call 508-888-8590 for more info.

EMPLOYMENT

Be the Campus Red Bull connection. Join our team and help build one of the world's leading brands, you'll have a blast while gaining invaluable marketing experience. You'll even earn a little extra spending cash. Think about it. It's a lot less dangerous than selling term papers! Apply at redbullcollege.com.

FOR RENT

Thinking of Cape Cod this summer? South Dennis 3 bedroom, furnished 5/25-8/31. $6200.00 Call 508-862-0565.

FOR SALE

Queen bed with frame, Pull out couch, table, computer desk + bureau call Walt 549-4044

Furniture must sell! Couch, Futon, table, bed. Everything must go! Call 253-7250.

Cheap furniture for sale. Various pieces available & in great condition. Price is negotiable. Call 549-0454.

Huge Lawn Sale! Lots of Good + Cheap stuff. 9 EdgeHill Place, Amherst. May 11.

Desk for sale new wooden 4 drawer perfect condition call Meg 549-0072.

FOR SALE

Furniture for sale call 549-2914. Table and chairs, breakfast bar, TV stand and more.

FURNITURE

Furniture for sale! Futon, bed, desk etc. Good condition good price. Call 253-7506.

HOUSE FOR RENT

Hadley 5 bedroom plus. Newer home five minutes from UMASS. June occupancy. 549-4270.

Main St. 4 Bedroom house June 1st. Sublet w/Tall option. Large kitchen. & living room with porch. On bus route w/washer and dryer. 549-7859.

INSTRUCTIONS

Become an EMT. Sign up for summer and fall classes now. For information go to www.umass.edu/emts or call us at 545-1885.

ROOM FOR RENT

One bedroom available in a four bedroom apartment. Includes heat, hot water, electricity, cable, A/C, DSL internet, and local phone. On the bus line in Amherst on route 9, available May 25 for $375/month. Call Matt at Alpine Commons # 253-9499.

Spacious, Share House with fun couple in scenic Montague. $333. May 28-Aug 31, call 367-9822.

ROOM FOR RENT

1 bedroom in Alpine commons. Excellent roommates. Call Bryan 253-9499.

ROOMMATE WANTED

2 roommates needed to share 2 bedroom apt. in Brandywine. On bus line. For fall semester, male or female (781) 585-4854.

Four roommates wanted to fill a house in the Center of Town for info call Rob (413) 519-0763.

Female(s) to share 2 bedroom Brandywine Apt. starting June 1 . 549-1988.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

SUMMER SUBLET

1 Large bedroom on Main St. Amherst $300 O/B/O. Call Brianna 546-1578.

One large bedroom available at Cliffside apts. Starting June 1 partly furnished 617-842-4657.

Big 2 Bedroom Boulders. Fall option. Heat/Hot water $860 259-1306.

2 Rms Available June to July. A/C, utilities, phone, internet included $400/Mo 259-3781.

Nice 3 bedroom townhouse. Practically on campus. Call Joe 549-9441.

SUMMER SUBLET

Sunset Apt. opening for summer! 2 bedrooms + Study room in basement for info please call (413) 549-5421.

Brandywine. Two bedroom. Furnished. A/C , by pool and bus stop. Call 549-8782.

Brandywine 2 BDRM will negotiate rent. Furnished, AC, bus route call 549-4110.

Brandywine. 2 bdrm. Available June 1. Call 549-1988.

TO SUBLET

Brandywine Apt. 1 bedroom available. Looking for 1-2 people. Starting June 1st with possible fall option. Only $231/ month. 413-549-5359.

Subletters needed for 2 bedrooms in Cliffside. Everything included. $1275. Call Lauren 546-4074.

2 person Apt. June-August on sunset Ave. 2 Mins. to campus 549-4767.

Sublet in Brandywine with possible fall option. Looking for 1-3 people to take over 2 bedroom. $225/month. Starting June 1st. 549-9178.

2 Bedroom apartment partially furnished available June 1st to sublet w/option to lease on bus route. 413-549-9612.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

3	CBS/3
4	NESN
5	Fox Sport NE
6	PBS/57
7	HSCN Movie Channel
8	WB/20
9	HSCN Movie Channel
10	TV Guide Channel
11	FOX/61
12	ABC/40
13	NBC/22
14	International Channel
15	UMATV
16	HSCN Info Channel
17	ESPN
18	ESPN 2
19	UVC/19
20	ESPN Classic
21	Gavel-to-Gavel
22	CNN
23	CNN HL
24	Weather Channel
25	Learning Channel
26	History Channel
27	A & E
28	Discovery Health
29	Food Network
31	NASA
32	Home & Garden TV
33	Travel Channel
34	Lifetime
35	CNBC
36	Tech TV
37	BET
38	UPN-38
39	CMT
40	USA
41	MTV
42	CMT
43	VH-1
44	TNT
45	TBS
46	E! Entertainment
47	Sci-Fi Channel
48	Court TV
49	Nick at Nite
50	Comedy Central
51	Cartoon Network
52	Game Show Network
53	TV Land
54	FOX Family
55	Univision
56	Galavision
57	Telemundo
58	College TV Network
59	C-SPAN
60	C-SPAN2
61	Bloomberg Television

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass

Client:_____ Date:_____ Payment 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run:_____ Headline:_____

Total days_____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra):_____ Authorized signature:_____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 8:30am-4:00pm M-F 413-545-3500

Student rate: 50 cents/word per day Non-Student rate: 55cents/word per day

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 10, 2002

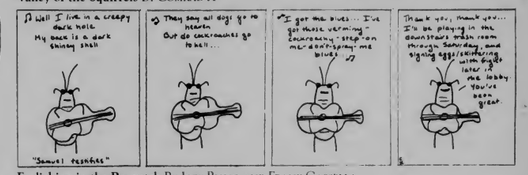
		C	5:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	14	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	News hour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Songs Herts: Queen of the Ice		Now With Bill Moyers (N)		World of National Geographic
WFSB	3	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	CSI: Crime Scene Investgtn.		Raymond	Raymond	48 Hours "Legends" (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	CSI: Crime Scene Investgtn.		Raymond	Raymond	48 Hours "Legends" (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Funniest Home Videos		Barbara Walters		20/20 (N)		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	56	Nanny		Just Shoot Me		Raymond		Reba (N)	Reba (N)	News		Friends	Raymond
WHDH	7	7	News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Providence "Out of Control"		Law & Order: Criminal Intent		Law & Order: Special Victims		News	Tonight Show
WTXX		15	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Sabrina-Witch	Raising Dad	Reba (N)	Reba (N)	Law & Order: Criminal Intent		Law & Order: Special Victims	Tonight Show
WVIT	8	30	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Providence "Out of Control"		Law & Order: Criminal Intent		Law & Order: Special Victims		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	11	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	Search for a Playboy Centerfold: Girl Next Door (In Stereo)				News		Raymond	Seinfeld
WWLP	61	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Providence "Out of Control"		Law & Order: Criminal Intent		Law & Order: Special Victims		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	57	BBC World	Business Rpt.	News hour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Now With Bill Moyers (N)		Blackadder	Red Green	Charlie Rose (N) (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Funniest Home Videos		Barbara Walters		20/20 (N)		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	38	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Frasier	Frasier	★★★ "Lethal Weapon 3" (1992, Drama) Mel Gibson, Danny Glover (In Stereo)				Blackadder	Red Green	★★★ "The Outlaw Josey Wales" (1976, Western)
WTBS	22		Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Friends	Major League Baseball. San Diego Padres at Atlanta Braves. (Live)						Law & Order (In Stereo)
A&E	44		Law & Order (In Stereo)				Biography: Elizabeth M.		★★ "No Mercy" (1986, Drama) Richard Gere, Kim Basinger				Crossfire	Moneyline
CNN	50	43	Moneyline		Crossfire		Amer. Stories	The Point	Larry King Live		Newsnight		Crossfire	Moneyline
COM	62	30	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Giants	Com.-Presents	Com.-Presents	Premium	Premium	Com.-Presents	Premium	Premium	Com.-Presents
DISC	26		Pelaparu: Monkeys		Tiny, Perfect Predators		Amer. Commando		The Real Miami Cops (N)		CIA: Spyfi (N)		American Commando
ESPN	49		Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs. Conference Semifinal Game 5 -- Teams to Be Announced. (Live)								Baseball Tonight (N)	Sportscenter
LIFE	56		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★★ "Small Sacrifices" (1989, Drama) Farrah Fawcett, John Shea
MTV	53		(4:30) MTV Special (In Stereo)		Real World	Real World	Ethan MTV (N)	MTV Special (In Stereo)
NICK	55		Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb	Chalk Zone	Oddparents	Invader Zim	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers
SCIFI	59		Star Trek (In Stereo)		Star Trek (In Stereo)		Strange World "Age of Reason"		Farscape "Beware of Dog"		Farscape (In Stereo)		Strange World "Age of Reason"
TLC	97	28	Understanding Asteroids		Manhunt International		Police Force	Day Watch	Sex, Dice & Vegas (N)		Sex, Dice & Vegas (N)		Police Force	Day Watch
TNT	54		NYPD Blue (In Stereo)		Pretender "Pilot" (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball Playoffs. Conference Semifinal -- Teams to Be Announced. (Live)				NBA Basketball		Playoffs: Conference Semi
USA	52		Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG (In Stereo)		Nash Bridges (In Stereo)		★★★ "Death Becomes Her" (1992, Comedy) Meryl Streep				Law & Order: Criminal Intent
HBO	65		★ "Joe Dirt" (2001, Comedy) David Spade. (In Stereo) 'PG-13'				★★★ "Bad Boys" (1995, Drama) Martin Lawrence 'R'				"Scandalous" (2000, Comedy) Cooper Van Dien 'PG'		★★ "Dude, Where's My Car?" (2000) 'PG-13'	Beat Sex Ever
MAX	66		(5:00) ★★★ "Tick Tock" (1999)		★½ "Crimewave" (1984) Christopher Lambert 'R'		★ "Freddy Got Fingered" (2001) Tom Green 'R'		★½ "Dude, Where's My Car?" (2000) 'PG-13'				Stargate SG-1	Jeremiah "Threat Horizon" (N)
SHOW	68		(5:00)		★½ "Rothrock" (1998) Matthew Lawrence 'NR'		★★★ "Scary Movie" (2000) Shawn Wayans 'R'		Soul Food					Red Shoe

Frolicking in the Ragpatch By Joey Russo and Frank Cassella

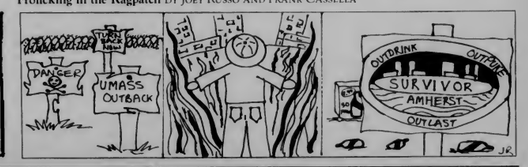
Scarecrow By W. Bird

Noodle By Jacki



Shut the Duck Up By Seany McSean

Scarecrow By W. Bird



Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas

Frolicking in the Ragpatch By Joey Russo and Frank Cassella

Quote of the Day

"...I wasn't yelling at you because you didn't understand me. I was yelling at you because you were making fun of me."

-Gerry Romano
a.k.a. "You guys want some cookies?", "Beatnik", "Weird", "Southern Yankee"

Amherst Weather

Friday	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 72 LOW: 38	HIGH: 67 LOW: 36	HIGH: 60 LOW: 37

Horoscopes

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You slacker, what are you doing going to class? Go get your sleep on!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Don't eat at the DC next week. There are professors about.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – The best place to find your lost sneaker in under your bed.

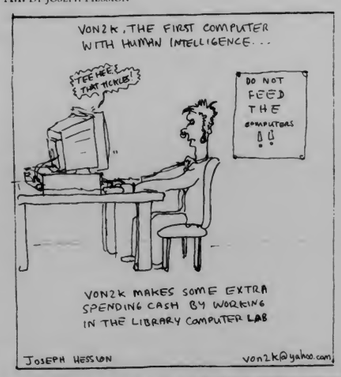
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Go to KFC and order your chicken extra crispy.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You will talk to someone today. You will also be bored in class. You will also get pissed off at the horoscopes and burn your copy of the comics page.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 21) – Sure you think your friends are ganging up on you. That's because they don't like you, and they're secretly trying to steal your fish.

SCORPIO (Oct. 22-Nov. 21) — Write a letter. Compose a song. Avoid Herter at all costs. Damn trick stairways.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – The perfect girlfriend would say, "You're so sexy when you're hungover."



CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Got a case of end of semester swipes? Call your friends and buy $20 worth of fresh Bluewall cookies!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Put on a happy face... or at least take a shower. You look disgusting.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Remember kaleidoscopes can be decieving.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Do you like stick figures? I thought so. You pervert.

A.I. By Joseph Hession

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

N.E. Clam Chowder

Roast Turkey

Onion Quiche

Greek Style Tofu (vegan)

DINNER

N.E. Clam Chowder

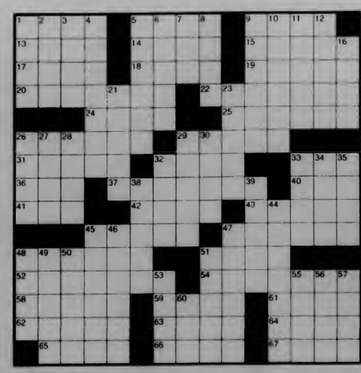
BBQ Salmon

Veal Madeline

Brazilian Black Beans (vegan)

Garden Chili (vegan) (W Basics)

NEW at DB Mart...
HOT STUFF PIZZA
Buy a Personal Pan Pizza
Get a FREE order of BREADSTICKS
Redeem this coupon at:
295 TRIANGLE ST
AMHERST, MA
413 549 5606
Limit one coupon per customer
Expires 5/31/02
Another's a Deal That Took Hot Stuff!



ACROSS
1 Extend over
5 Smear
9 Captain's place
13 Diva Gluck
14 Crafty move
15 Stew ingredient
17 Mongolian desert
18 Baseball's Tommie
19 Ogle
20 Type of cell or battery
22 Eye parts
24 Smell
25 Decorative stickers
26 Gift tie
29 Standpoint
31 Improvise
32 Coastal event
33 Move quickly
36 Doctor's payment
37 Set aside
40 — nutshell briefly
41 Shooting marble
42 Scrallion's kin
43 Suggests indirectly
45 Rock band Pink —
47 Dalmatian, sometimes
48 Realize
51 — Misbehavin' "
52 Business associate
54 Shy
58 Blackboard
59 Colorado natives
61 Mistreatment
62 Church official
63 Polite address
64 Coffee brewers
65 Urges
66 Mountain lion
67 Chair or sofa

DOWN
1 Droops
2 Scheme
3 Pulpit
4 Kenya's capital
5 Mythical monster
6 Ice-fishing tool
7 Exploit
8 Tavern fare
9 Teen-traveler's place
10 Attract
11 Tarzan's transport
12 Virtuous
16 Crime fee Eliot
21 Hacienda brick
23 Garden tool
26 Hide the rapids
27 Notion
28 Was windy
29 Pointed (a camera)
30 Mont. neighbor
32 Low card
33 Trace mineral
34 Gung-ho about
35 History
38 Single-handed
39 Mongol rulers
44 Narrow strip of land
45 Make plumper
46 Cruise ships
47 Marsh vapor
48 Arched recess
49 Keep score
50 Export and import
51 Nautical position
53 Kind of roast
55 Source of heat
56 Armbone
57 For fear that
60 Greek letter

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

B	O	R	E		S	P	C	A		E	M	B	E	D
I	G	O	R		T	R	O	D		S	E	E	D	Y
D	E	A		R	I	T	A		C	R	A	N	E
S	E	N	A	T	E	S		M	A	R	I	N	A	S
			I	R	A	M		P	R	O	N
S	H	R	I	E	K		R	E	D	W	O	O	D	S
P	I	E	C	E		R	E	N	O		S	C	A	T
O	N	A		S	A	I	L	O	R	S		E	V	A
I	D	L	E		P	L	U	S		C	H	A	I	R
L	U	M	B	E	R		E	D	D	I	E		N	O
			O	U	I	J	A		E	D	I	F	Y
S	P	A	N	G	L	E		L	A	N	A	I	M	E
H	E	N	I	E		A	W	R	Y		O	B	E	Y
E	A	T	E	N		R	E	E	L		W	O	R	E
A	R	I	S	E		L	E	S	S		S	U	M	S

11-5-01 ©2001 United Feature Syndicate

Today's Staff
Matthew F. Sacco
James Scheffer
Jennifer Eastwood
Pete "Public Enemy #2"
Mike "The Truth"
Shannon Farrington

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
WEEKEND EDITION
COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: ERIC SODERSTROM

The Doctor gives Lowe his respect

For those who know me and have seen what I write, this article might be a tough one to swallow. Yes, I have caved in and have decided to write an article that brings praise to those sometimes beloved, 95 percent-of-the-time-hated Boston Red Sox. Or should I say, I am going to write one about a pitcher who to this point is the surprise of the American League: Derek Lowe.

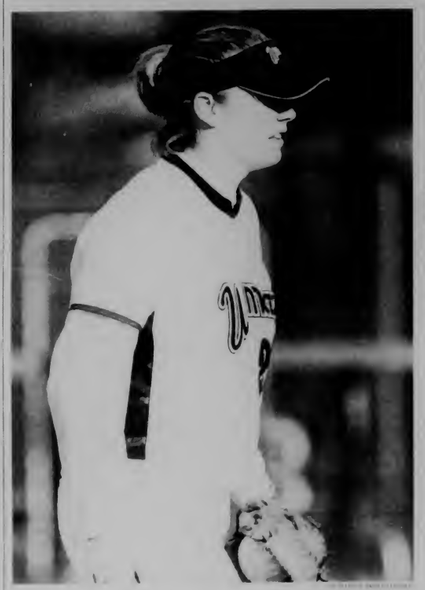
Last season at this time, Lowe had completed another woeful outing against Seattle that had moved his Earned Run Average to an even six, and he had more losses (five) than converted save opportunities (three). At this point, most Boston fans were civil, only asking for his head on a stick.

DAVID ROSE

As the season continued and the Red Sox's playoff hopes went down with the ship, the fans grew increasingly more tired of the soap opera known as "As the Fenway Turns." In particular, the fans groaned at Lowe's ineptitude in the bullpen as his bad outings left many Red Sox fans booing him as he left the mound.

By the end of last season, many considered Lowe a crybaby when he lost his closer's role to Ugueth Urbina. For those who called him a crybaby, they had some valid points: 10 losses, a 5.34 ERA from the closer's role and just 24 saves. It was at this point where the Red Sox told Lowe that they were going to try him in a starter's role again. At that moment, Red Sox fans must have felt cursed.

However, those same people who were condemning him last season are now giving him the praise that comes when you do well in a city like Boston.



I will admit that I was one of those people who did not feel he was suited for the closer's role. Yesterday, he showed that I was somewhat right. Unfortunate for hitters in the majors so far this year, Lowe as a starter is a 180-degree turn from last season.

After yesterday's brilliant performance against Oakland (Yeah, I know my team got it handed to them this week.), Lowe has five wins and has as many no-hitters as losses on the young season (one). In fact, his league-leading 2.15 ERA is almost a run and a half better than Pedro Martinez's is right now (3.49). All of this from a guy who was almost run out of town last year and now has been the Red Sox's best starter through the first month and a half.

Also, give credit to the Red Sox regime that just left. I know

Turn to LOWE, page 3

Win streak ends at A-10's

Kaila Holtz earned Atlantic 10 All-Star first-team after being named A-10 Pitcher of the Year. The loss ended the 19-game Minutewomen win streak.

Softball falls in game one of double-elimination tourney

By Andrew Merritt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Don't worry, esteemed reader. Your eyes are not failing you. You are not reading that score box wrong. Nor did we, your humble student newspaper, misprint the score box. The Massachusetts softball team dropped its opening round game with Rhode Island 1 – 0 yesterday at the Atlantic 10 Championships, their first loss in almost two months.

URI	1
UMass	0

The Rams brought in the deciding run in the second inning when Crissy Tindall singled home Kim Custance after Custance reached second on an error by sophomore Jamie Cahalan.

Junior Kaila Holtz kept the Rams at bay for the rest of the game, allowing four hits and two walks while striking out five.

Meanwhile, the Rams' Gwen Rack submitted a very impressive performance, giving up three hits and two walks and striking out 10.

"Rack did an incredible job today," UMass head coach Elaine Sortino said. "She totally dominated us all game."

UMass hits came from senior Teri Rooney, junior Brandi Cross and Cahalan. The Minutewomen were held to one hit until the sixth, when Rooney and Cross hit back-to-back singles.

"We were a little tight in the beginning of the game, but in the sixth inning we began to come around," Sortino said. "But it was just a little too late."

With Rooney and Cross on base, senior Scooter Wheeler, the team's resident power threat, came to the plate. Wheeler gave the ball a ride to centerfield, but it landed in Tindall's glove for the second out of the inning, advancing Rooney and Cross a base each. The possible rally died when Holtz grounded out to short to end the inning.

"It becomes a game of inches," Sortino said. "Scooter was only three inches away from putting it out, but that's the way it goes."

The loss puts the Minutewomen in the loser's bracket of the tournament. Today they face St. Joseph's, which dropped an extra-inning contest yesterday with Temple, 5-4.

"We were very disappointed with today's game," Sortino said. "It just took us a little time to get our stride."

And while this kink may not have been in the plans for the Minutewomen, Sortino is not changing the mantra of a team that won 32 games in a row and tied for the eighth-best streak in NCAA history.

"Right now we just have to take it one pitch at a time," Sortino said. "All we can do is play our game."

If the Minutewomen take tomorrow's contest with the Hawks, they'll face the loser of the first game between Temple and Rhode Island. The championships culminate Saturday with the title matchup. If they do reach the final, they'll have to win the first game to force a doubleheader for the title.

Currently ranked No. 27 in the nation by the National Fastpitch Coaches Association, UMass will almost certainly need to take the Atlantic 10 title after losing to an opponent that it outscored 18-1 in three regular season games.

Freshman duo shuts down Harvard

Scheller, Doherty silence Crimson bats

By Jim Pignatello
COLLEGIAN STAFF

With the immediate future firmly on the minds of everyone in the dugout, two freshmen pitchers gave the Massachusetts baseball team a reason to be excited about the distant future.

The Minutemen (20-24, 8-13 Atlantic 10) know they must sweep Fordham this weekend and have St. Joseph's sweep Temple in order to make the Atlantic 10 Tournament for the ninth straight year.

These three games at Earl Lorden Field (two Saturday, one Sunday) make up the biggest series of the 2002 season for the Maroon and White, but, for nine innings, Neil Scheller and Keith Doherty made everyone watching think about the next three years.

UMass	6
Harvard	3

The two rookies combined to scatter eight hits in nine innings. They pooled for eight strikeouts and gave up just three runs, all by Scheller in the first six innings.

Coming just one day after a brilliant relief performance by another freshman, Scott Ratliff, UMass Head Coach Mike Stone was quick to point out that he already felt that his hurlers were past the point of being labeled as rookies.

"I don't really look at them as freshman," Stone said.

"All three of them proved that they can pitch for us. Ratliff and Doherty – I don't consider those guys freshman in my mind. I have a lot of confidence in them. Scheller is earning that [too]."

UMass came back from a 2-1 deficit with a three-run inning in the bottom of the third to take the lead for good. Senior Aaron Senez golfed a 2-0 fastball to left with one out to begin the rally. Junior Jeff Altieri followed by reaching base on catcher's interference. Senez scored when the next batter, Matt Boulanger, drilled a hanging curveball to left for a double. Altieri and Boulanger came in when Curt Szado, the next batter, hit a bloop single to right.

Senez gave his team some breathing room in the fifth when he lined a base hit up the middle and then scored on an Altieri single, putting UMass up 5-2.

Doherty ran into some trouble on the mound in the next inning, giving up a leadoff double to Harvard senior Marc Hudon and then walked the next batter in senior John San Salvador. Hudon moved to third on a sacrifice and then scored on a wild pitch to cut the UMass lead to 5-3. Doherty fought back, however, and got out of the inning by retiring the next two batters to fly out and ground out, respectively.

Stone's crew got the run back in the bottom half of the inning when senior Connell Clark reached on an infield single. The freshman moved to second on a Mike Athas sacrifice, stole third on the next pitch and then raced home on a wild pitch by the next batter.

The scoring for both teams would end there as Doherty came in for the final three innings and was nearly unhittable. Harvard's Ryan Tsujikawa and T.L. Sevier matched Doherty for the final two innings, giving up just two hits and zero runs.

The back-to-back combination of Senez and Altieri was a highlight of UMass' office. The tandem went a combined 3-for-7 at the plate and scored four of the team's six runs.

A weekend sweep of Fordham is a must if the Minutemen are to have any chance at making the A-10 Tournament. Coach Stone's team hasn't missed the playoffs since 1995 (when this Maroon and White went 9-11 in the A-10, 18-21 overall).

No player wants to be on a team that broke up that sort of streak, so getting his players up for the game shouldn't be a problem, according to Stone.

"We are playing for a chance to play in post season play," he said. "It is something we have done the last eight years. If I have to say something that is going to trigger some motivation in them, then there's a problem, a major one."

When asked if coaching this type of must-sweep series are tougher than the rest, Stone admitted, "I very day this year has been a tough day to coach."

The Rams are playing their own struggles this season, going 4-37 in the A-10 (11-35 overall). Fordham comes into the weekend after being swept by St. Bonaventure in last weekend's series. The Bonnies outscored the Rams 21-13 over the weekend.

Junior infielder Tim Boyle leads the Rams in batting with an average of .385. The Mamaroneck, N.Y. native has struck out just 11 times in 188 at-bats this season. Classmate Robert Kingsbury is the team's top power hitter. He has hit 12 homeruns and 40 runs batted in to go with a .358 average.

The team's top pitcher has been sophomore Shawn Seales. The 6-foot-4 righty is 2-5 in 17 appearances with a team-best 3.84 earned run average.

UMass will counter with the combination of senior Jesse Santos and sophomore Eric Chown in Saturday's doubleheader. Santos has been a legitimate A-10 first-team candidate all season, going 7-3 with a 3.37 ERA while striking out 57 batters in 75 innings.

Stone didn't deny the possibility of using Santos to start game two after going the distance in game one of the doubleheader, as he did last weekend when Santos pitched all eight innings of the first game's win and then pitched the first two innings of second game's defeat. Santos was the pitcher of record in both games. History bodes well for the Minutemen as they have met up with Fordham 19 times since 1996 and lead the all-time series 17-2.

However, as Stone was quick to point out after yesterday's victory, "We are gonna be in for a battle all weekend."

RICHARD BLAKE/COLLEGIAN

Keith Doherty threw three shutout innings against Harvard yesterday to earn his second save of the season.

NOT AS HIGH
LAST CALL FOR LOHNES AND KEN. ED/OP PAGE 4.
A-10 SPORTS

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
MONDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY FIVE ☆☆☆☆☆ 5.13.02

Senior dies in accident

Joshua P. Snyder was killed yesterday in an automobile accident on East Hadley Road. He was a senior in the Stockbridge School in Landscape Architecture and was slated to graduate in two weeks.

The Amherst Police Department received several 911 calls reporting the accident at approximately 12:15 a.m. yesterday. Officers on the scene determined that two vehicles had been involved in the incident. The vehicle that Snyder was driving struck a telephone pole when it then left the roadway and flipped onto its side trapping one individual inside. The police responded to the incident with an ambulance and the jaws of life.

Both Snyder and his 19-year-old brother Noah were taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital. Noah did not sustain any serious injuries.

The Amherst and State Police Departments are still investigating the details of the accident.

Information from the Berkshire Eagle was used in this article.

-Melissa Hammel

British marines destroy terrorist guns

BRITISH MINISTRY OF DEFENCE

British marines of the 45 Commando Group on a mountain patrol in Kosovo. The unit's mountain warfare experience was one of the reasons they were chosen by the Ministry of Defence to conduct Operation Snipe, a search and clear mission in the mountains of southeast Afghanistan.

By Ken Campbell
COLLEGIAN STAFF

British Royal Marines destroyed four caves filled with terrorist munitions in southeast Afghanistan last Friday, according to CNN.

The Atlanta-based news service reported that "more than 20 truckloads" of weaponry and explosives within the caves were detonated by elements of the Royal Marines' 45 Commando Group. The marines have been conducting Operation Snipe in the mountainous southeast.

CNN reported that the explosion sent dirt 1000 feet into the air and a 50-foot gout of flame erupted from one of the caves. Explosions caused by rockets and mortars continued to rock the area an hour after the initial detonation, according to CNN.

The caves were discovered by a reconnaissance patrol. A large arms cache was discovered within.

"A major cave network used as a terrorist arms cache has been discovered in the area of operations, and is the subject of a careful investigation," the British Ministry of Defence said. "As at 10 May, weapons and munitions discovered included over 100 mortars of various calibers, over 100 recoilless anti-tank guns, several hundred rocket-propelled grenades, 200 anti-personnel mines, hundreds of artillery rounds and rockets, and many thousands of small-arms and light anti-aircraft ammunition."

The mission, according the Ministry, is to search and clear the area for al Qaeda or Taliban troops or supplies.

"Some 1,000 personnel from 45 Commando Group have been deployed on the operation, along with local Afghan forces, supported by RAF Chinook helicopters of 27 Squadron. The area in question, in the south east of the country, has not previously been investigated by coalition forces," the Ministry said. "The aim is to search the area, to clear and destroy any terrorist infrastructure located there, and render it safe for humanitarian operations."

Operation Snipe started on May 2. The 45 Commando Group has been in Afghanistan since April. British Secretary of State for Defence Geoff Hoon told Parliament the elite troops would be sent on March 18. The 45 Commando Group is based in Arbroath, Scotland, and is part of the 3 Commando Brigade. It is one of three Commando units in the brigade.

On the Net: The 45 Commando Group: http://www.royal-navy.mod.uk/static/pages/2070.html; The British Ministry of Defence: http://www.mod.uk; Operation Snipe: http://www.operations.mod.uk/veritas/snipe.htm

Information from CNN.com was used in this article.

Vandalism tops UMass police log

By Melissa Hammel
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Assault, battery and vandalism were just some of the issues that the University of Massachusetts Police Department dealt with this week.

There was an attempted stabbing in front of the stage at the Mullins Center last Sunday at approximately 9:15 p.m. during the Spring Concert. William Finn, 21 of Plymouth, was arrested on the charges of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, disorderly conduct and resisting arrest.

Police also had two additional arrests that night. Hong Tuyen, 20, who was arrested for driving with a suspended license and 23-year-old Brandon Carter, who was arrested at the Mullins Center for disorderly conduct.

A 20-year-old was also taken into protective custody following a liquor law violation.

One week ago last Monday, the police arrived on the scene following a complaint regarding both noise and alcohol. Police arrested 18-year-old Brian Colt Paris of Hinsdale on the charges of assault and battery and disorderly conduct and 19-year-old Mark Chancy of Medford for disorderly conduct.

Tuesday saw another arrest, when 19-year-old Edward Bloniarz of Southampton was pulled over by the UMPD for operating a motor vehicle with a revoked license and operating a motor vehicle without an inspection sticker.

There was an incident of annoying behavior in Crampton Dormitory on Wednesday at approximately 9:30 p.m. when police had the report of someone shooting paint balls at the side of a building and hitting a window on the west side. An officer arrived to the scene and found that the area had quieted.

The UMPD received a larceny call on Thursday. That occurred at approximately 1:15 p.m. when a student called from Morrill Science Center to report that he had left his backpack on a chair when he left to use the restroom and when he came back it was gone. The individual was advised to fill out a report.

The police also received a call complaining that there were several skateboarders on the west side of the Campus Center near the University Store. An officer warned

Turn to POLICE, page 3

Undergraduates recieve Fulbrights for research

By Catherine Turner
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Two undergraduates from the sciences have received Fulbright grants for cancer research.

Carolyn Dong and Helena Horak will be venturing to opposite hemispheres. Dong will be spending a year at the University of Queensland in Brisbane, Australia, conducting research on a gene that may affect the vascularization of tumors. She will be working under the direction of Peter Koopman, professor at the University's Institute for Molecular Bioscience.

Dong has also been accepted into Harvard University's Ph.D. program in biomedical sciences and will matriculate there after her year in Australia has been completed. Currently, she is a Biology major and has a minor in Art.

"I want to gain a more global perspective," Dong said in a press release. "I'd like to expand my experiences and gear my research toward biomedical sciences. The effects of tumor formation can be devastating. If I am able to provide even a little insight into this area of science and medicine, I will feel my time in Australia has been worthwhile."

While Dong will be studying down under, Horak will be on the continent of Asia, researching genetic comparisons between esophageal and gastric tumors in a region of China where people are 20 times more likely to develop digestive tract cancers than anywhere else in the world.

Horak will be working at the Microarray Facility of the Genome Institute of Singapore at the National University of Singapore. Edison Liu, the institute's executive director, will be overseeing her project. Right now she is finishing up a double major in Biochemistry and biology, and a double minor in chemistry and anthropology.

"I'm really excited. I've always wanted to study abroad, and I never got the chance to do it because of playing tennis," Horak said. The institute that I'm going to is very international. I just think it's good to have different perspectives, and I just wanted the experience of being somewhere else. The work I do here I look at genes one at a time and in Singapore I'll be looking at a thousand genes at once, and I think looking at thousands of genes at once you can get a better perspective of what's going on, genes don't

Turn to FULBRIGHT, page 3

TIM WU/COLLEGIAN STAFF

Business is peachy

Earth Foods Cafe does a brisk business in fruit

INTERNATIONAL BRIEFS

Asia

By Jana Marx
THE NEWS-RECORD (U. CINCINNATI)

(U-WIRE) CINCINNATI – With China's entrance into the World Trade Organization and Asian economic development creating increased awareness in the United States, universities nationwide are introducing students to the myriad of issues surrounding international relations with East Asia.

The University of Cincinnati's McMicken College of Arts and Sciences is preparing for this merging world by enhancing resources, faculty and campus dialogues in the Asian studies department.

A&S Dean Karen Gould expects to spread interest in Asian studies on campus by bringing the curriculum into classes outside the program.

"I'd like to see a strengthening in Asian studies curriculum and faculty across colleges," Gould said. "(Asian studies) is growing nationally. Here it is not as strong as it should be."

Shortly after Gould became dean of A&S, she began looking for a new director of Asian studies.

Gould hired Dinshaw Mistry, current research and adjunct professor at Harvard University, as the new director at the end of April. He begins his career at UC during fall quarter, and will also work with the Department of Political Science.

"This hire is a critical one," said Gould. "He has a strong background in foreign policy and administrative policy."

Mistry has a long line of publications in the fields of politics and Asian relations. He taught at the Brookings Institute, Georgetown University and Harvard.

Mistry comes to UC with hopes of expansion.

"When the position was offered, it looked like a very promising position in terms of developing Asian studies," said Mistry.

"My goal would be to make Asian studies a strong major, to be competitive with other programs (in other universities)."

Gould expects Mistry to expand a working knowledge of Asian studies to other colleges and departments.

"He will help build bridges to other colleges because they all have ties to international relations," said Gould.

The spreading of Asian studies into other fields of study at UC has already begun with a relationship developed between the Asian Studies Program and the Department of Political Science.

Thomas Moore, a UC professor of political science, tries to expose his students to current affairs in international economic relations.

He has spent this quarter familiarizing his students with economic panels discussing East Asia.

Earlier in the quarter, Moore invited students studying political science to the World Affairs Council downtown that focused on China and the WTO. Moore was a panelist at the conference.

Moore also invited students to a panel Wednesday of which he was again a member.

Experts in East Asian economic relations from the U.S. State Department, the Korean Embassy, Nagoya University in Japan and the Korea Economic Institute visited UC on Wednesday, joining the panels discussing regional economic cooperation in East Asia.

The panel, open to all UC students, faculty and staff, offered expert analysis on areas of economic interest, such as China's entrance into the WTO and Korea's growing role in the world economy.

UC's Japanese and American Student Society, Political Science Graduate Student Association and the Korea Economic Institute sponsored the event, which lasted from 11 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. in the Faculty Club.

Panel experts described China's entrance into the WTO as a watershed moment in international economic relations.

Takashi Kubota, professor of international business and transaction law at Nagoya University's graduate school, spoke about the impact that China's huge market has on Japanese economic dimensions.

Patricia Scroggs of the U.S. State Department and Caroline Cooper, director for Congressional Affairs and Trade Policy for KEI, questioned how China will integrate with the rest of the world and what that will look like, citing these as imperative issues in the economic world.

The integration of regions through global marketing seems to be the driving force behind the fortifying of the Asian studies department at UC. Experts say for college graduates, having the ability to understand and relate to the Asian market is becoming a cutting-edge tool upon entering the job market.

That is why Mistry wants to emphasize a curriculum based on Asian studies in other departments on campus.

"I want to make use of faculty resources and give students developed courses related to Asia, and develop the program with the political science department," said Mistry. "(It is) important to get students a knowledge of Asian politics."

China

By Jennifer Graham
THE STANFORD DAILY (STANFORD U.)

(U-WIRE) STANFORD, Calif. – Students, faculty and community members spilled out of McCaw Hall at the Frances C. Arrillaga Alumni Center on Monday afternoon to hear former U.S. President Jimmy Carter speak about his involvement with China both during and after his term, as well as the current state of U.S.-China relations.

In the inaugural Oksenberg Lecture, created to honor China scholar and former political science Prof. Michel Oksenberg, Carter discussed the politics leading up to the 1979 normalization of U.S. relations with China, the progress the Chinese government has made in the years since his presidency and his contemporary concerns about the region, including Taiwan, Tibet and restrictions on worship.

Russell Hancock, director of the Shorenstein Forum for Asia-Pacific Studies, which sponsored the talk, began the event by proclaiming to a crowd of hundreds, "This looks like Carter country."

Asia/Pacific Research Center Director Andrew Walder followed Hancock's remarks on the creation of the lecture with a brief biography of Oksenberg's life and an explanation of his role in shaping U.S. relations with China.

University President John Hennessy introduced Carter, who served as U.S. president from 1977 to 1981, by offering a history of the 39th president's life and stressing his work on ensuring social justice and human rights, as well as his effort to procure peace in the Middle East and other regions.

Hennessy described Carter as the "perfect choice" to deliver the first Oksenberg lecture because of his history with China and relationship with Oksenberg, who served in the National Security Council during Carter's presidency.

"As one who has long admired his moral leadership and continued engagement in world affairs, I'm looking forward to his remarks today," Hennessy said.

After easing the crowd into his talk with a joke he made when traveling in Japan, Carter spoke of Oksenberg's legacy, stating that he "to some degree changed the life of every citizen of China."

Carter went on to discuss his personal history with China, describing his time in the Navy and his memory of when Taiwan broke away from mainland China and the People's Republic of China was created.

Carter then explained the inner workings of his administration's treatment of China, stating that once the People's Republic of China came into being, there was an "altercation between China experts, like Mike Oksenberg, and others in the U.S. government." He said the government operated on the premise that the Chinese communists were only in power by force, an assumption that paved the way for McCarthyism in the United States.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Sam Wilkinson Editor-in-Chief
Matthew F. Sacco Managing Editor
Amy Garganta Business Manager
Shimauli Dave Production Manager
Jake Lilien Diversity Editor
Mike Kulak Editorial Production Manager
Jason Smith Advertising Manager

Mike Delano Arts & Living Editor
Matthew Despres Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jennifer Eastwood Features Editor
Catherine Turner News Editor
Tibora Girczyc-Blum Photography Editor
Eric Soderstrom Sports Editor
Brent Siniawski Finance Manager
Charlie Jacco Distribution Manager

Morgan Taylor Advertising Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Cara Murphy Assistant Finance Manager
Shawn Daugherty Assistant Business Manager
Megan Shannon Assistant Advertising Manager

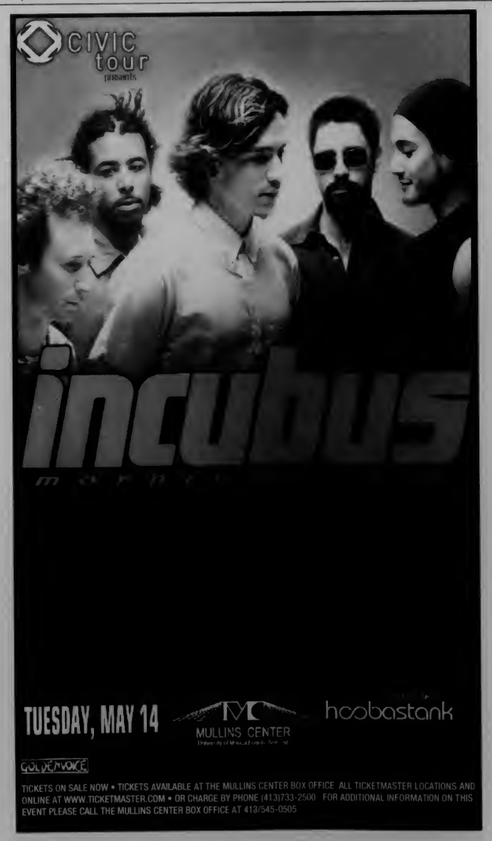
TO STUDENTS IN RESIDENCE HALLS:

BEFORE YOU LEAVE!



PLACE CINDER BLOCKS, METAL AND USEABLE WOOD OUTSIDE YOUR HALL AT DISPOSAL AREAS OR NEAR LARGE DUMPSTERS

PLACE FOOD (NON-PERISHABLE) AND CLOTHING (TIE SHOES TOGETHER) IN BINS LOCATED IN YOUR HALL LOBBY.

FOOD WILL BE DONATED TO LOCAL SOUP KITCHENS – CLOTHING TO GOODWILL AND FURNITURE TO LOCAL NON-PROFITS.

THANKS AND HAVE A GREAT SUMMER! THE OFFICE OF WASTE MANAGEMENT AND HOUSING RECYCLING

Farm fresh

The Farmer's Market, held during the summer months in Amherst center, offers its customers a variety of different wares.

■ Fulbright

continued from page 1

act alone."

The two women have also been busy during the last couple of years building up a collection of honors and experience. Dong, 22, has two honors research fellowships at Commonwealth College, and she is a junior fellow in the Biology Department. She also won a senior leadership award this semester.

Horak, 21, has been working with a biology professor, and last summer she won a National Institute of Health Biomedical Research Fellowship. In addition to being involved in community service projects and being on the All-USA College Academic team, she is co-captain of the UMass tennis team.

Both Dong and Horak applied for their Fulbright grants through the Office of National Scholarship Advisement, under the direction of Susan Whitbourne.

■ police

continued from page 1

the individuals to leave and that if they returned they would be trespassing. The individuals cleared the area. In a similar call, the police were called to Greenough Dormitory for a report that approximately 12 people were screaming and yelling on the west side of the building at 12:52 a.m. The parties were playing kick ball and were asked to keep quiet.

On Friday, a caller reported that there were approximately seven to eight males in front of McNamara Dormitory making a lot of noise. The officer reported that the males remaining dispersed upon his arrival and the area was quiet. The police were also in the Southwest living area for two calls at John Adams Dormitory. They were called in at approximately 2:00 a.m. following a fight between two friends, before both individuals went back to their rooms. There were also fireworks observed outside of the building at 3:03 a.m.

Why is news so cool? The world may never know.

ANTHONY'S
HI-ENERGY ADULT ENTERTAINMENT AND MORE!!
DON'T MISS
AMATEUR NIGHT!!
ANTHONY'S STYLE!!
THURS. MAY 30
HOSTED BY COMEDIAN RODDY THOMAS
CONTESTANTS CALL 413/532-8888
ONLY 18+ CLUB AROUND!
$500 - 1ST PLACE PRIZE
CASH PRIZES FOR 2ND & 3RD
500 NEW LUDLOW RD. SOUTH HADLEY
413/532-3621

AS SENIOR VP OF FINANCIAL PLANNING AT A MAJOR MOVIE STUDIO YOU COULD:

O.K. A $93 MILLION BUDGET

HIRE 7,500 EXTRAS

RENT 273 PALM TREES
(AND 1 BIG FAN TO MAKE THEM SWAY)

HOW DO YOU GET A JOB LIKE THIS?

WWW.STARTHEREGOPLACES.COM/BIZ15
Go here and take the first step toward the career you want.

START HERE. GO PLACES.
If you know business and accounting, you can get a job anywhere. Because the skills you learn in business – strategic and analytical thinking, communication, and leadership – are always in demand. In some of the coolest industries in the world. Even in the movies.

American Institute of Certified Public Accountants

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM WRITING IS A DOG'S LIFE, BUT ONLY WHEN YOU'RE NOT WORKING ON EDITORIALS ED/OP EDITOR: MATTHEW DESPRES

Bootlegs won't deter fans from film

So what is up for one more reason why the Internet is one of the most questionable sources for entertainment available? Well here's one that we have certainly seen rear its ugly head before.

Over a week before the scheduled movie premiers of the new Star Wars prequel, Episode II: Attack of the Clones, the Los Angeles Times has reported that two bootleg versions of the movie are accessible for download via the World Wide Web.

The LA Times confirmed that the different forms of the film are being distributed over Internet Relay Chat (IRC). Apparently IRC is mainly a platform for user-to-user communication but can also be used for trading files.

The newspaper also reported that evidence suggests that both available bootlegs were recorded using a mounted video camera during a private screening of the movie. It appears that the private screenings from which these bootlegs were excavated, are part of a massive promotional campaign to further hype the film.

Episode II, which is already one of the most hyped movies of all time, has the potential to draw an unprecedented audience for these pirated versions, but that isn't what worries the movie studio.

They are more concerned with the potential hit to video and DVD sales they could endure as these bootlegs become more and more accessible. But isn't there a more important issue at stake here.

Having pirated versions of this film floating around the Internet can damage more than just finances. Star Wars is an anthology that started long before the invention of the Internet, but the purveyors of the World Wide Web seem hellbent on corrupting a series that began before the bulk of the web using population was even coherent.

As the Internet becomes more advanced on a daily basis, its ability to ruin movies advances as well. And it isn't just Star Wars that is a victim, although it is the most visible. Bootlegs of other recent blockbusters such as Spider-Man and Lord of the Rings: The Fellowship of the Ring have also been popping up.

The fact is that bootlegs ruin the allure and the anticipation of movies. Most moviegoers couldn't care less if the mega-corporate movie studios lose money on DVD sales or at the ticket booth, but you better believe they'll start a ruckus if a web-geek teams up with a minimum wage ticket-ripper to rip-off a highly anticipated film and fill their own pockets with the profits – especially with a movie like Star Wars.

When Episode II opens on Wednesday, the theaters won't be filled to the brim with 13-18 year-olds (the movies target audience) – they'll be dashings of middle aged people and grandparents who are taking their sons, daughters, grandsons and granddaughters to see the next installment of a movie anthology that they grew up with.

And as much as online movie pirates are trying to ruin that experience and make a buck in the process, it won't happen. For the same reason negative reviews from Roger Ebert or the New York Times won't deter fans from going to form their own opinion of the movie, neither will bootleg films.

Information from MSN.com and the Los Angeles Times was used in this editorial.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

"Some shine when the day is new, but fade when the day is through...but you look like gold" - Ben Harper

Notes from the Basement:
Lohnes gets in his last licks

BRIAN LOHNES

Well kids, it's been a long, strange trip from home to my basement. Does that underprint necessarily?

When I was a kid I was crushed by Jody Reed baseball card for a Jose Canseco rookie card. Without a doubt friend-after we came home from the Hall of Fame. The kid – more apt to get me to cry is him. Oh, and back, but a trade is a trade. You have the card, and I still hate to the kid.

I knew a guy one time who told me that his uncle used to catch stray cats in a have-a-heart trap and then throw the cat and the trap in a 55 gallon drum full of water. Listen, I don't like cats, but that guy is seriously going to hell. And it is going to be cat hell, not a feral place to be.

I am responsible for all of the crappy weather we have been going through lately – sorry about that.

Music does this sound for a band. Javier Cevallos and all of the people in his office go and occupy GEO headquarters in the Campus Center. That would be sweet.

One time in high school after my friend Chris got caught drinking he opened his lunch bag up and turned pale, whiter. We asked what was wrong and he slowly reached into his bag and pulled out an O'Douls. That could have been the funniest thing ever.

Why do judges have to wear a gown? We never went over that in the intro to legal studies class I took.

I think we should make up for the budget cuts by repossessing all of the luxury SUVs the people from Jersey drive around in. We could at least cut the problem in half.

Better yet – let's just put some massive tax on the people from Jersey and don't let them leave until they pay it.

I think that it is great that the media is now freaking out over "The Osbournes." The news broadcasts are now starting to do the "Who are we obsessed with the Osbournes and how is this leading to the erosion and destruction of the American family values system" type of shows. This marks the exact moment when the show will start becoming uncool.

I am so happy that UMass spent millions of dollars a couple of years back to have the lobby build at the Fine Arts Center. I've walked through it three times.

Sam Wilkinson has halls the size of church halls. This is his world, we're just living in it. Seriously Sam, wherever you go, kick ass for the rest of us.

I just stopped writing and put on pants. I don't want anyone to call the cops on me again.

The Hanger is the best bar here. Why? Because you can go there and actually drink the beer you bought for less than uptown prices and have a conversation and food. Plus, average folk like me can go there and not feel like as ass.

Greatest band ever? Presidents of the United States of America. I own everything they have done. Ok, it's not that great an accomplishment.

Finally... I implore someone at graduation to do something REALLY disruptive. Preferably during the presentations of the honorary degrees, or at some other boring time. That's my last request from you UMass – please don't let me down.

Brian Lohnes was a Collegian Columnist.

> "...Javier Cevallos and all of the people in his office go and occupy GEO headquarters in the Campus Center. That would be sweet."

We were but stones, your light made us stars:
This is all I am, it's everything...

MATTHEW DESPRES

"I'm wishing you all well..."

Today, I consider myself the luckiest man in the world. I'm not graduating.

I've dealt with the reality of it, accepted the future of it, and come to see it as a blessing: an opportunity to make up for time misspent. Quite a few of my friends are, though, in one way or another, leaving this place before I get to take my final bow and exit stage left. That, as it is for most, if not all of you, is the hardest part. The very thing that sets down your pen, frustrates your attention and keeps your mind lingering at night. To those of you thumbing your way out of this great big valley, on to bigger and better things, I remain in your debt.

Jedi: I never anticipated the extent to which our friendship would grow, and could never place a value on the appreciation I have for it. Tough times are soothed by old friends, and you're the best anyone could ask for. At the end of the day, at 22, 40 or 100, we're just two kids from Saugus, guitars in hand with our dreams on our sleeves. I'll carry every bit of these four years with me for as long as I live, because although the road is far from its end, this is, of course, where it began.

Becca: no words can do true justice for what you've done, though in both quiet and awkward ways I've searched four years for them. Know that every time I pick up my pen to write it's because you were not only there, but because you have continued to be. Thank you.

Tibi: it's seldom that any friendship forms with the immediate and comforting sense that it's been there for quite some time. Your talent is trumped only by the greatness in you as a person, and I can't place a value on the inspiration I've drawn from the passion you have for your own art. Though your time here was far too short, I admire your decision to go see what the rest of this world has to offer; undoubtedly, it will be they who ultimately benefit from you. My best, always.

Laurie: Iowa and Bill will have you soon enough, but for the past four years, we've been the lucky ones to have you in Amherst, The Big J, and college in general, will be a markedly emptier place without you doing what you did best: simply being around. Thanks.

Mike D.: It's been an absolute honor and privilege to live alongside you for these past few years. We've got our friendship and Saugus to keep us going; there ain't nothing you can't do. All my best buddy.

Sam, Lohnes, Ken, Schulze, Mike D., Julie, Catherine, Jake and every other friend at this newspaper who will soon be parting ways. There was probably a remarkable lack of hanging out, spending time together away from the office, but know that I grew as a person and writer by being in the proximity of you all. Everyone. You are remarkable columnists, editors, thinkers, guides when I needed help getting home and, above all, people. The only thing that makes any job worth waking up for are the people you'll find once you get there. I've woken up to most all of you for the better part of fours years, and despite any of the empty complaining that sometimes slips out, this job has been what's kept me going, what has kept me here, what has kept me afloat when it could have otherwise been easy to walk away. Thank you, thank you, thank you.

* * *

There's only so much one can say, I suppose, without sounding redundant. Feelings so personal and concealed are the most difficult to give face to. To color for other people to understand.

Though I'm not graduating, and still have friends both new and old that are remaining, I'm faced with the idea that, for the first time, pieces of me will soon scatter with each of these people. I'm certain I'll hold onto those that they've given me, and hope it works similarly when turned around. No matter how much we pretend to maintain the ultimate confidence, us, the Great College Students, there will come a time when the collective guard we've spent four years raising suddenly falls and we'll understand that raw nerves still exist. That the friends we have known for years can still move us in new and positive ways. It's new for me, and I guarantee the same for each of you in a similar position out there.

When it comes to be my time next year, there will undoubtedly be more thoughts to express and newfound wisdoms to convey. Because, though for some of us the end of college is imminent, the learning process continues far past the boundaries of this University and the qualifications printed on its degrees. Because it's human to learn, to want to learn from those around you, and it never stops.

I'll leave you all with this, because at the end of any day, Jack says it best:

"What is that feeling when you're driving away from people and they recede on the plain till you see their specks dispersing? – it's the too-huge world vaulting us, and it's good-by. But we lean forward to the next crazy venture beneath the skies."

Matthew Despres, a Collegian Columnist, thanks you all.

What have we learned, Ken Campbell?
A columnist bids his farewell

KEN CAMPBELL

Charlie Brown: I'm depressed, Linus. I need an encouraging word to cheer me up.

Linus: Happiness lies in our destiny like a cloudless sky before the storms of tomorrow destroy the dreams of yesterday and last week.

I've started this column so many times this semester. I've never finished it, because finishing it meant that I had nothing else to say, and I don't feel that way. I have a lot to say. Whether anyone wants to hear it is irrelevant, because I am leaving the University.

I was a pre-frosh, looking at the Campus Center and hearing how the newspaper had its offices there. I thought it would be cool to be a columnist. As I read the paper everyday – The Collegian never had a bigger fan – I wanted to see my opinions there, out there for all to see. I wasn't pleased to be a face in the crowd. That's not in me. I'm selfish, and I'm shallow, and want all of you to know exactly what I think. And every letter I got, every call, every time someone said, "You suck," or "Nice job," it fed the fire.

The Student Government Association put me on the front page of The Collegian several times, but I always wanted page four. I finally got it my senior year. Nothing feels better than meeting your goals, even if they are as simple as writing diatribes, satire, rants, raves and thought pieces. I've had that space for a year. I've been threatened, praised, derided and awarded. In all that time I never really talked about what I was doing at the University. So what have I learned?

I learned that 75 percent of my college education had nothing to do with classes. I was always book smart. This place taught me life. The classroom is only the beginning. Professors like Story, Pelz, Shipley, McFarland, Richards and DiMarco made that part intriguing, fascinating, and fun. And hopefully they understand that I did like and respect their classes, and when I wasn't there, it's because I was learning alternatively.

I learned how to get the story. No matter what. No sacrifice is too great, no hardship too much to endure. The story is the thing. And that means clarity, brevity and accuracy. It means that I have to watch people die, see friends arrested, and sit with a bunch of vultures in rooms and secretly hope the worst about other human beings because that's my job. I have a duty to tell the public the facts. Truth is subjective. The facts speak for themselves.

I learned that "a few drinks with the guys" is fine, but drinking with deities isn't cool.

College has taught me something I never thought I'd ever learn: I like me.

What else did I learn in college? I found out that you could care too much. I learned I want to be Citizen Kane. I found out that what I think isn't necessarily important. Sometimes letting someone make his or her own mistakes is a blessing. I learned that Yoda was wrong. I can't protect everyone. I can't be everything, and I can't do everything. But I can try.

I learned there are few joys as great in this world as making someone else laugh. I found that family is what you make of it, and you can go home again. It's just really weird. I learned I loved that damned dog more than I thought. I learned that Goonies are good enough. I learned that I need theme/entrance music. (I'm thinking "Notorious") I learned that "Tough place to play", "Good show by you", and "Cosmically speaking" are all acceptable non-sequiturs. I learned to keep my head held high, because the view is a lot better.

I learned that being a storyteller is a really fun job. I love knowing everything just before anyone else does. That's a power that doesn't weight uncomfortably. I like that responsibility. It is a comfortable duty to inform the public clearly and quickly. That's what I want to do for the rest of my life. I want to be that reporter, the one that gets the scoop and does it better than anyone else. There's another reason I want to keep up the whole writing thing: it's immortality. No matter how hard they try to erase it, there is a record of my thoughts and memories that will live on forever. That's comforting for someone who once said I wanted to be buried so I could leave a lasting impression on this earth.

> "...story-tellers never die; we just fade away."

Anyone who wants to know what I thought at a certain time can go digging through the archives. You can look me up on LEXIS-NEXIS. I've been printed all over the place – yahoo.com, PBS, college newspapers from coast to coast. There's proof I'm alive. I can't find anything about my father. I've found one reference of my grandfather. I can't think of anything sadder than that. So I hope I'll get to keep being a storyteller, if for no other reason than to have someone miss me when I go.

I have the opportunity to work with a bunch of great storytellers. They are hard working people who put their life's blood into keeping this paper running. Now the time has come for me to leave them. But I'm not too worried. It's the natural order of things.

Besides: storytellers never die; we just fade away.

Ken Campbell was a Collegian Columnist. I hate that "was." But I'll live.

ed*op

www...

dailycollegian...

com...

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 5.22.02 ARTS EDITOR: MIKE DELANO

Change has done her good, not great

By Jake D. Lewis
COLLEGIAN STAFF

SHERYL CROW
C'mon, C'mon
A&M Records

SHERYL CROW

Sheryl Crow, soaking up the sun and what have you.

Sheryl Crow's best CD was her debut, Tuesday Night Music Club, and in the past nine years she hasn't done anything nearly as impressive. Her fourth studio album, C'mon C'mon is, at the very least, an improvement from the second and third CDs she churned out. It brings back some of the unique flavor that Crow originally burst onto the scene with, yet at times it's more of the same old thing we've heard before from her, more pop than rock. She shakes things up a bit and throws a few loops so the minor disappointments can be somewhat overlooked with the surprises she has in store.

Crow, let us recall, was the voice that practically reinvented the genre of women in rock n' roll. Before her there were very few, if any, lady rockers on the scene, let alone in the public eye. She has, probably unconsciously, stirred young women to pick up the guitar and make a voice for themselves, many with little success, but nonetheless, with more of a chance than before. In the past few years, however, Crow's career has turned into the hokey musical offspring that she helped spawn, and her distinctive sound has become lost in the crowd. C'mon C'mon is a step in the right direction toward getting that individuality back.

The debut single from C'mon C'mon is a beach bum's theme song. "Soak Up the Sun," but sounds strikingly similar, especially in the opening vamp and guitar riffs, to "A Change Will Do You Good," from 1996's self-titled CD. Its Americana rock flavor is warmly welcomed, and her lyrics give the song a flavor of care-free coolness: "I'm gonna soak up the sun/I got my 45 on so/I can rock on." Its got a certain appeal that's especially prevalent for the coming summertime season where it will certainly be plentifully played on the radio and on mix tapes on the way to the beach.

Conversely, it's also the perfect example of a song that will be the catalyst for frustration when you get into your no-air-conditioning car after leaving it out in the sun for a while and it comes on the radio. Crow's vocals, which almost come across like she's whining, don't help. This song will get old fast, very fast, and hopefully I'm not the only one who will realize that.

Crow calls on some of her friends to help her out on some

Turn to CROW, page 8

Boy held back, Alaskan metal

Q-Tip

Badly Drawn Boy

36 Crazyfists

ABOUT A BOY
Original Soundtrack by Badly Drawn Boy
XL Recordings

Badly Drawn Boy's debut, The Hour of the Bewilderbeast, was a critically praised emotive exploration. Boy might be sad, but at least it sounds good. Like any artist though, Boy (Damon Gough) has bills to pay.

Thus we get About a Boy, his soundtrack for the upcoming movie of the same name. Based on a Nick Hornsby novel of the same title, Gough's songs rise and fall, some far better than others. He is obviously constrained by the movie itself. His songs have to attach to the adventures of Hugh Grant's irresponsible Londonite. If the premise sounds boring, that's because it is.

It doesn't stop Gough from cobbling together some fine songs, most notably "Above You, Below Me." With Spanish guitars, jazzy drums and rolling synthesizers, Gough throws everything he has into the track and it comes out smooth as silk. Although lyrically a set-up for Grant's first date (we can guess anyway, as the movie has yet to be released), Boy is merciless. For a pop song, "Me" is downright symphonic.

And "S.P.A.T." is similarly adventurous. As adventurous as anything he did on Bewilderbeast, Gough doesn't even have to sing on the soundtrack's tenth track. Gough's music tends toward casserole – it seems like he's willing to throw anything in, including faded guitars, disco beats and a tuba.

The album isn't all flash. "Silent Sigh" is a tremendously monotonous letdown, as is "Walking out of Stride." Clearly chained by the movie itself, Boy sounds suspiciously like a romantic comedy. Gough just doesn't seem comfortable unless he's experimenting. The soundtrack for About a Boy isn't the place for his rampant musical research.

So will the album shines, Badly Drawn Boy will make better music when he's telling his stories, not those of some dumb movie. (Sam Wilkinson)

36 CRAZYFISTS
Bitterness the Star
Roadrunner

As lazy as it is to immediately plunk a band into a category right from the start, ignoring what the musicians likely perceive as their own original and completely unclassifiable sound, Alaska's 36 Crazyfists don't make too much of an effort to smash the walls of their little subgenre. They fit rather neatly into the easily recognized but hard-to-explain class of sleek punk/metal/emo hybrids like GlassJaw, Recover and Waterdown. The patent for this stuff was written with the Deftones' Adrenaline and nearly perfected with their 1997 drop Around the Fur. Like the Deftones, 36 Crazyfists omits any punk pretentiousness or preaching and sticks to existential crises and girl trouble, but with only a shred of the former band's grace and creativity.

The recipe is hammering metal riffs, Fieldy basslines and scream/sing vocals, and if it sounds familiar it's because it really, really is. So with this familiar ground comes the predictable good and bad. The bands in this genre have a way of crafting one or two excellent songs amidst an album of undefined spurts that generally add up to a big mess with little potential. The gloom is laid on pretty thick throughout, and at some point adding up "how the fuck does it feel?" with "get the fuck out" under titles like "Slit Wrist Theory" tends to make the appropriately titled Bitterness the Star wear on the listener.

But they do get their one good song, and it's "Turns to Ashes." The lyrics are an unexceptional rant of ambiguous anxiety, but Brock Lindow's wobbly vocal delivers is interesting for three minutes, at least. There are plenty of other melodic choruses, screamed codas and bland riffage to be found on the album, but it sounds purposeful and damn near inspired for this one song, so (STRICTLY for those predisposed to this style) skip the rest and put "Ashes" on repeat. (Michael Delano)

Q-TIP
Kamaal the Abstract
Arista Records

Woah.

Is Q-Tip's newest album Kamaal the Abstract jazzy hip-hop? Is it the Roots pushed ever closer to Miles Davis?

Maybe it's both.

Originally of A Tribe Called Quest, Q-Tip's first solo album explored the outer-realms of traditional hip-hop. Kamaal is no different. Some of the songs just aren't hip-hop – no rhymes, no hooks, nothing. Instead, they are jazzy pop songs. Most notable amongst these is the album's fifth song "Barely in Love." Like some sort of hybrid mix of a lounge song on uppers, "Love" is an incredible song. Q-Tip could easily sing this in a crushed velvet jacket, and he'd lose no face.

Which isn't to say that he's totally abandoned his roots – "Feelin'" starts out like a Tribe song. But once his verse is finished, Q-Tip takes the music all over the place, specifically seeming to jazzify the hooks to challenge the traditional notions of song. "Heels" is most certainly a funk song, thick with sound and distortion. "Even If It Is So," is a gem if undefined – there's scat-singing and rhymes, both on a piano and subtle bass beat.

It seems possible that Q-Tip is no longer interested in any of hip-hop's traditions. There seem to be three schools of hip-hop. There are those interested in the money associated with performance (hello, Ludacris). There are those who are interested in getting back to the music's roots. And there are those who are interested in pushing forward, seemingly desperate to break down the definitions that rein in hip-hop.

If Q-Tip is looking to lead that third group (while being joined by Del, Dan the Automator, Outkast, etc.), then Kamaal the Abstract was certainly the place to start. (Sam Wilkinson)

NORAH JONES
Come Away With Me
Blue Note Records

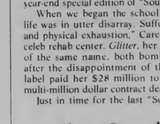
When you listen to a singer, you can usually tell something about how they look from the sound of their voice. All of that is out the window with Norah Jones. The daughter of sitar player Ravi Shankar, the New York based singer doesn't look like she sounds. The slim woman on the cover just doesn't match the honey and smoke voice. It's ok though. You get over it as you are utterly taken away with her debut album, Come Away With Me.

It's a quiet kind of music, one that isn't intrusive but still alluring. It's the soundtrack to a peaceful Sunday morning, with a distinctive, simple lineup that proves you don't need to be complex to be deep. It's jazz, it's light blues, it's whatever you want it to be, baby. It's tough to tell if her piano is accompanying her or the other way around on her version of Hank Williams' "Cold Cold Heart." And then there's her stuff, like the title track "Come Away With Me," which just completely melts even the coldest heart. "Nightingale" calls to a lost love, and "The Long Day Is Over" (co-written with guitarist Jesse Harris) is amazing. This is what jazz is supposed to do. You just nod your head, let the music flow over you, and just say, "yeah," because you get it, really get it.

"Don't Know Why" is a great opening track. It books the listener immediately and sets the tone for the rest of the album, which doesn't let up. It's all good, it's sung sweet and smoky and it's completely Blue Note. It's not surprising the jazz powerhouse signed the 22-year-old. Oh, and the video is doing well on the MTV and VH1 polls, despite being unlike everything else being played by the two stations.

Other gems on the disc are "Lonestar," "Feeling the Same Way," written by bassist Lee Alexander, and a cover of the old standby "The Nearness of You." Overall, a great debut. This is definitely one artist to watch. (Ken Campbell)

Turn to OTHERS, page 8



significant O others

Sounding Off signs off

Over the past year "Sounding Off" has sounded off on the trends, the hits and misses and the downright weird in the world of pop culture. It's time for a year-end special edition of "Sounding Off."

When we began the school year, Mariah Carey's life was in utter disarray. Suffering from "emotional and physical exhaustion," Carey was admitted into a celeb rehab center. Glitter, her movie and soundtrack of the same name, both bombed. And in January, after the disappointment of the album, her record label paid her $28 million to walk away from her multi-million dollar contract deal with Virgin.

Just in time for the last "Sounding Off" column, however, Carey, 32, has found herself a new home. After months of searching for a new label the sultry songbird has signed a new deal with Island/Def Jam that includes her own label. Terms of the new deal were not disclosed, though the Hollywood Reporter quotes insiders who say the deal gives Carey $20 million for three albums with an option for a fourth. That fee is what she was to earn for each album under her multi-disc Virgin contract. Owned by parent company Universal, the new contract may entail Carey to a number of other deals including print, TV, film and online ventures.

But Carey may not be in the clear yet. After the disastrous Glitter, she got some good notices when Wayne's World (in which she and Mira Sorvino play waitresses at a mob-run eatery) screened at January's Sundance Film Festival, but that film is bypassing theaters and going straight to HBO this fall – not a ringing endorsement.

As far as her music career goes, remember that in the late '90s Carey had alienated her core audience by adding rappers and remixes into her songs. There's no question that Carey can make a comeback, it's just a matter of whether she's smart enough to do it right. While drippy balladry and '80s retro have served Carey well, it would behoove the soulstress to focus her talents on more authentic soul. With her newly signed deal with hip-hop heavy label Def Jam, that probably won't be the case. It is already rumored that Carey will record an entire hip-hop album and possible duets with pals and Def Jam labelmates Jay-Z and Ja Rule shouldn't surprise anyone.

One of the big questions in pop last year was whether Michael Jackson could make a comeback. Although the answer may appear to be negative, it's actually a yes. Much like his storied life, the explanation is a bizarre one. The poorly reviewed Invincible sold 5 million copies worldwide in less than three months, an astonishing figure even by Jackson's standards. But after a successful launch, Invincible suddenly became invisible. The situation is unusual for the self-proclaimed King of Pop, whose records have always enjoyed two-years worth of promotion and the release of several tracks. So what are the reasons behind the abrupt halt in the promotion of the album? And on a broader spectrum, where are all the theme parks he planned to open? Where's the Poe film he planned to star in? And what happened to his Sept. 11 charity single, "What More Can I Give"?

Jackson's fans have accused Sony of deliberately sabotaging the promotional campaign of the singer's latest album in order to financially suffocate him. In 1995, Jackson was said to have negotiated a loan with the record label as an advance on forthcoming sales of Invincible. Jackson merged his ATV Music catalogue (bought in 1985 and including 251 Beatles' songs) with Sony Music's Sony Music Publishing catalogue to become ATV/Sony Music Publishing. His fans now claim that Sony Music is pressuring Jackson to refund the loan, and simultaneously strangling his main source of income through non-promotion of the album. Sony is hoping to lay claim to Jackson's valuable share of ATV/Sony Music Publishing if Jackson is unable to repay the loan.

In April, Rolling Stone published a meticulously researched article questioning whether Jackson is indeed going broke. The article affirms that there is a financial problem between the Gloved One and Sony. The story states that "some in the music industry believe that Jackson may be on the verge of turning over the rest of his holding in ATV/Sony to Sony in order to repay a reported $200 million loan." Jackson's lawyer vehemently denies the rumor.

But Jackson's financial troubles and lack of support from Sony Music are partly to blame in his failure to follow through on planned projects. If Jackson wants to move forward the glove will have to come off.

Another big question led this column to ask the inevitable question: is teen pop over? Although the craze is dying a slow death, readers had plenty more to say. After being picked up by the UWire, www.collegeclub.com posted the article on their website and online readers sounded off on their own. The article drew so much interest it racked up sixteen pages of readers' comments. "I don't think it will ever go away, it will be like a small cancer in our society, turning kids into mindless zombies," wrote one teen-pop hater.

Most posters agreed that teen pop will always be with us. "Teen pop will never go away, it's here to stay. As long as there are teenagers (that will buy the music), there will be teen pop. It's all about what sells," wrote one poster. Indeed, but the phenomenon of the late '90s surely isn't what it used to be.

I now leave you with this prognosis from another poster: "Oh, and Britney? She'll end up in porn...no question about it."

Nikolas Markantonatos is a Collegian Columnist.

Audiovent has a one-way ticket to famesville

By Elena Panesis
Collegian Staff

What do Linkin Park, Incubus and Hoobastank all have in common? All three bands hail from Calabasas, Calif. and have recently rocked both the alternative and mainstream airwaves, posing the question, "what is in the water down there?" Remarkably this flowing talent pool does not end there, as seen in the performance of another band native from this West Coast suburb Thursday night at the Hampton Beach Casino Ballroom. Audiovent, currently a band little-known outside the Golden State, set the stage for Bush with an electrifying and energetic show featuring their aptly named single "The Energy" that is beginning to receive airtime on the main-stream and alternative rock stations.

Don't let their youth fool you. These early twenty-somethings have actually been playing together for more than nine years and also have been influenced by artists before their time, including Jimi Hendrix, Led Zeppelin and the Beatles. Moreover, do not make assumptions based on their last names, as Jason Boyd (vocals), Ben Einziger (guitars), Paul Fried (bass) and Jamin Wilcox (drums) do have family ties as the famous trumpet brothers of Brandon Boyd and Dave Einziger), but have a distinct sound that is all their own, fusing elements of classic rock with bands of the early 90s such as Soundgarden, Pearl Jam and Alice in Chains.

"People who are unintelligent about music will try to find links, connections," commented Wilcox. "But if you're intelligent and you know music well then you're smart enough to hear the differences."

Einziger agreed. "It's important for everyone to know that we have our own identity and for us to establish our own credibility as a band. We're not trying to cop off their success. We just try to keep ourselves separate."

Their debut with Atlantic Records, Dirty Sexy Rockstar Party set for release on June 4, will not only establish them as credible but immensely talented, with the passionate lyrics and melodic vocals of Boyd combined with Einziger's intense riffs and the unique rhythmic style of Fried/Wilcox.

Tracks like the supercharged "Gravity" and "The Energy" juxtaposed with the elusive yet strikingly personal lyrics of slower paced songs "Underwater Silence" and "When I Drown" display the group's diversity.

"My favorite tracks are probably our first single 'The Energy' and a song called 'Underwater Silence,'" said Boyd. "They're really meaningful to me and were written with a lot of passion and heart."

That fervor elated the sold-out Hampton crowd as Audiovent burst onto the stage. Boyd's charisma was infectious, from his powerful vocals and fiery onstage antics (cooled down with a bottle of water over his head) to his playful interaction with the audience. By the end of the set the Bush fans were more than receptive to the exhilarating newcomers and many flocked to meet them at the merchant booth following the concert.

Off-stage, the band spends much of its time in close quarters touring the country in a small, equipment-packed van, making them prone to illness and exhaustion.

"We're roughing it right now," laughed Fried. "We're paying our dues but we're rock-and-roll dudes and we know how to have fun."

The close-knit band members, who have been pals since middle school, entertain themselves with activities such as wrestling matches, playing the X box and even singing four-part harmony Christmas carols.

In fact, these charming, affable individuals will not forget their Calabasas roots when fame inevitably comes knocking on their door. Characterized by a down to earth persona and a fun-loving sense of humor, Audiovent will surely wow the critics both musically and personally.

Yet, for the time being they seem more than satisfied by life's little luxuries.

"That's the same way I felt about Ziploc bags when those things first came out," stated Boyd on passion. "I love Ziploc bags."

Tehani Schneider contributed to this article.

Audiovent, aka the little brothers of Inkubus.

Life moves you in many directions.

Take AT&T along with you ...
and arrive with up to 4 hours of calling on us!

It's time to plan your next move—who you'll room with, what classes you'll take ... how you'll stay in touch with all your friends. Ask for AT&T when you sign up for phone service and then add the AT&T College Plan.

Here's what you get with the AT&T College Plan:

- All direct-dialed domestic calls are just 7¢ a minute, all the time, including state-to-state, in-state long distance, and local toll calls* — all for a low monthly fee of $3.95
- Up to 4 hours of calling on us — just for signing up
  - 2 hours off your AT&T Long Distance bills: up to 30 minutes a month for four months†
  - PLUS a 2 hour prepaid AT&T Phone Card, with up to 120 minutes of domestic calling††

call 1877-COLLEGE x18734
click att.com/college/4hours

AT&T

*Customers must have or select AT&T as their local toll carrier to receive 7¢ rate on local toll calls. 11.5% Universal Connectivity Charge applies. In-state connection fee applies to subscribers in certain states. State charges may also apply. For more details about these charges or to learn if in-state connection fee applies in your state, call 1 800 333.5256. You must be an AT&T Residential Long Distance Subscriber to receive the AT&T College Plan rates, subject to billing availability. Enrollment expires 12/31/02. †30 free minutes of domestic direct-dialed long distance and local toll calls will be credited each month against qualifying usage on their bill for the first full 4 months of service after all discounts and credits are applied. Unused minutes cannot be carried over. Qualifying calls do not include conference calls, AT&T Calling Card, Directory Assistance, Operator-Handled calls, 700 or 900 number services, or mobile, marine, or cellular services. In addition, monthly recurring charges, nonrecurring charges, and taxes are also excluded. 30 free minutes offer expires 12/31/02. ††A surcharge of 2 U.S. minutes applies to calls made from pay phones. Minutes are based on domestic calling. International rates vary and are subject to change. Cards are not returnable or exchangeable unless defective. Safeguard your AT&T Phone Card and PIN. You will be responsible for loss, theft or unauthorized use. Services provided by AT&T Corp., service in AK provided by AT&T Alascom. For AT&T Phone Card rates and surcharges, call Customer Service 24 hours a day, 7 days a week at 1 800 361.4470.
© 2002 AT&T. All Rights Reserved.

TAPESTRY Health
Affordable and Confidential

- Gyn Exams
- Birth Control
- Pregnancy Testing
- Emergency Contraception
- HIV/STD Testing
- Quit Smoking

Bangs Center, 70 Boltwood Walk, Amherst
16 Center Street, Northampton
(413) 586-2539 or
www.tapestryhealth.org

Paul Jacobs
LIGHT HAULING

- Insured
- Reliable
- Artwork
- Offices
- Students
- Businesses
- Residences

End of the Semester!!
Need to Move??

(413) 584-1136

What are you going to wear for the post graduation parties, once the gown comes off???

If you're having a fashion emergency then stop into Taylor Men on Main Street in Northampton. During the month of May show a valid student I.D. or this Ad and receive 20% off your entire purchase. Hurry in for the best solution.

FEATURING:
Ken Cole
4 YOU
BC Ethic
Lucky Brand & more...

Taylor Men
150 Main St.
Thornes Marketplace
2nd floor
Northampton, MA 01060
(413)585-0130

University Health Services
Summer Health Coverage
(enrollment is not automatic)

2002 Coverage Period:
June 1–August 31
(if enrolled by June 1st)

Student Family Plan: $708.00
Basic Health Plan: $195.00

577-5192

Visit the Patient Services Department located in the main lobby for enrollment

(Only UMass students with Basic and SHBP are eligible for the Student Family Plan)

Your Student Health Insurance Plan does not cover you for ROUTINE services at University Health Services

THE BEST OF UMASS 2002

the results are in and here is what you voted...

BEST FOOD

Chinese Food
1. Panda East
2. Amherst Chinese
3. Teapot

Italian Food
1. Pasta e Basta
2. La Cucina di Pinocchio
3. Spaghetti Freddies

Pizza
1. Antonio's
2. Bertucci's
3. Delano's

Best Date Restaurant
1. Carmelina's
2. Judie's
3. Spoleto

Cheap Date Place
1. Burger King
2. Antonio's
3. Wendy's

Ice Cream Parlor
1. Bart's
2. Friendly's
3. Pete's Drive-In

When Parents Pay
1. Judie's
2. Monkey Bar
3. Carmelina's

Indian Restaurant
1. India Palace
2. India House
3. New India

Northampton Restaurant
1. Fitzwilly's
2. Teapot
3. Cha Cha Cha

Best Vegetarian
1. Earthfoods
2. Bueno y Sano
3. Fire and Water

Japanese Restaurant
1. Goten
2. House of Teriyaki
3. Ichiban

Bagel Shop
1. Brueggers
2. People's Market
3. Dunkin' Donuts

Breakfast Place
1. Newman Center
2. Nancy Jane's
3. Daisy's

Best Wings
1. Hangar
2. Rafters
3. Chili's

Sub Shop
1. The Sub
2. Subway
3. La Cucina di Pinocchio

Mexican Restaurant
1. Bueno y Sano
2. Cha Cha Cha
3. La Vera Cruzana

BEST WAY TO WASTE TIME

Amherst Bar
1. McMurphy's
2. Amherst Brewing Company
3. The Harp

Northampton Bar
1. Diva's
2. City Cafe
3. Tunnel

Nudie Bar
1. Mardi Gras
2. Anthony's
3. Castaways

Bartender
1. Jen at McMurphy's
2. Jason at Delanos
3. Tobias at the Harp

Beer
1. Bud Lite
2. Busch Lite
3. Samuel Adams

Shot
1. Tequila
2. Money Shot
3. Kamikazee

Drinking Game
1. Beruit/Beer Pong
2. Flip cups
3. Aho*e

BEST SHOPS & SERVICES

Grocery Store
1. Big Y
2. Stop & Shop
3. Atkins Farm

Coffee Shop
1. Rao's
2. People's Market
3. Dunkin' Donuts

Tanning Salon
1. Oasis
2. Hair East
3. Tan Quick

Florist
1. Atkins Farm
2. Knowles Flower Shop
3. Always in Bloom

Gas Station
1. Mobil
2. Cumberland Farms
3. Exxon

Clothing Store
1. Old Navy
2. H & M
3. Zanna

Car Repair Place
1. North Amherst Motors
2. College Street Motors
3. Kevin's Auto Repair

Hair Salon
1. Regency
2. Amherst Barbers
3. Bucci

Bike Shop
1. Bike Co-op
2. Laughing Dog
3. Competitive Edge

Place to Work Out
1. Boyden Gym
2. Kids Sports/Kinetics
3. Hampshire Fitness

Liquor Store
1. Liquors 44
2. Spirit Haus
3. Big Guy

BEST ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Video Store
1. Video to Go
2. Blockbuster
3. DVDen

Music Store
1. Newbury Comics
2. Mystery Train
3. Media Play

Pool Hall
1. Mike's Billiards
2. Upstairs at ABC
3. The Hangar

Place to Hear Live Music
1. McMurphy's
2. Pearl Street
3. Mullins Center

Unique UMass Best

Reason Not to Graduate
1. Alcohol
2. Going Abroad
3. Lousy Economy/No Jobs

Place to Have Sex
1. Roommate's Bed
2. Library
3. Shower

Classroom
1. Mahar
2. Thompson 102
3. Bartlett 65

D.C.
1. Worcester
2. Hampshire
3. Berkshire

D.C. Dish
1. Chicken Fingers
2. Breakfast Sandwiches
3. Potato Bar

Spring Break Place
1. Cancun
2. Jamaica
3. Hawaii

Magazine
1. Cosmopolitan
2. Sports Illustrated
3. Maxim

Way to Gain Freshman 15
1. Beer
2. Antonio's
3. D.C. Food

Reason to Miss Class
1. Hungover
2. Nice Weather
3. Overslept

Reason to Hand in a Paper Late
1. Went out the night before
2. Illness
3. Didn't do it yet

Place to Read Paper
1. Class
2. Bluewall
3. Cape Cod Lounge

Place to Study
1. Library
2. Rao's
3. Bus

Internet Site
1. google.com
2. candystand.com
3. theonion.com

Apartment Complex
1. Puffton Village
2. Townhouses
3. Brandywine Apartments

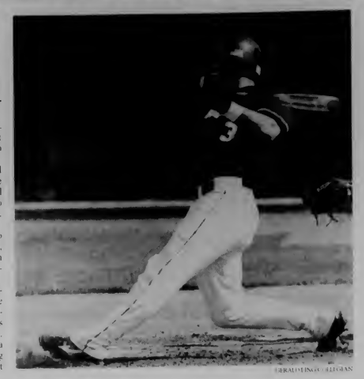
CONGRATULATIONS!

CAPLETON
Reggae
CP Records

[illegible]'s Chances are probably not [illegible] things would hold in store for me [illegible] a seventy four minute mix [illegible] Jamaican reggae star. The album [illegible] and the name implies the artist [illegible] influence in the reggae community [illegible] abroad. Having never really liked [illegible] to an album and listen to it [illegible] and with at least downloading [illegible] I [illegible] to understand because [illegible] of Jamaican English [illegible] peaceful message sup[illegible] Artist "and and people and [illegible] the mothers of the earth." Practically each of the nineteen songs on Still Blazin has a unique sound except for a couple, which have slow drums and Capleton slowly speaking over the music.

However, the rest of the songs demonstrate his powerful, almost frighteningly so, voice, which he alters according to the music it is accompanying. "Mashing up the Earth" is about African land destruction, and carries on a melodic chorus that no one can resist signing along with. "I Will Survive" is beautiful as well, and not the Gloria Gaynor song you might be thinking of. "In Your Eyes" exhibits beautiful use of trumpets and I can easily imagine this song being used in a "romantic" scene in a movie. In "Whoa New Way," Capleton's voice takes on a Busta Rhymes sound, which is interesting. The majority of the album is uplifting reggae music, but the songs that are more serious and melodic give it a powerful sound which is undeniable. So get ready for those late summer nights, fire up the tiki torches and the BBQ, put on Still Blazin, sit back and watch the moths get down with the music. (Anna Anselm)

[illegible] example of Crow going to the complete other end of the musical spectrum from where she started nine years ago: it has gone from being close to hard rock instead of her usual pop antics, her voice filling up with angst and emotion.



The album closer "Weather Channel," is perhaps the biggest curve ball that Crow can throw at the listener using none of the above that she has done so far. Reminiscent of musician like Elliot Smith, it's a dark, brooding song with only a lone acoustic guitar accompanying Crow. The song oozes darkness and sadness apparent in its melody and lyrics. "Just a pill to make me happy. I know it may not fix the hinges, but at least the door has stopped its creaking." Crow gives the listener a hint of her more vulnerable side, the first time in a long time, if ever, and one only hopes for more future opportunities like this in the near future.

There are some good things in store for the listener with Sheryl Crow's new CD C'mon, C'mon, as well as a fair amount of straightforward and indifferent pop like before. Having cranked out some lackluster works in the late 90s, perhaps in an effort to stay in the public eye. C'mon, C'mon has much more concentration and aim, even if it does veer off the path at certain times.

Minutemen miss A-10s

Baseball out of playoffs for first time since 1993

By Jesse Greenspan
COLLEGIAN STAFF

GERALD LINGS / COLLEGIAN

Aaron Senez led UMass in batting with a .377 average in 2002. The senior finished out his career as a Minuteman with two hits in yesterday's 4-1 win over Fordham.

A number of things had to go right for the Massachusetts baseball team to qualify for the postseason.

For one thing, the Minutemen would have had to sweep Fordham in three separate contests this past weekend, all the while watching the scoreboard to see if Temple was being swept by St. Joseph's.

Only then would UMass be able to earn an Atlantic 10 Tournament birth, but the Maroon and White's postseason hopes would be squashed rather quickly.

In game one of Saturday's doubleheader, Fordham spanked ace righthander Jesse Santos in his final collegiate outing, getting to him for 14 hits and seven earned runs in its 9-4 victory. Meanwhile, the Owls had just finished a 3-2 squeaker over the Hawks, making the series with the Rams a moot point for the Minutemen.

With nothing on the line, UMass fell 6-4 in the second game of the twinbill as well, before coming back on Sunday to defeat Fordham 4-1 on senior day to run its final record to 21-26 (9-15 A-10).

"We went in trying to sweep and it just didn't work out the first day," senior pitcher Brian Hourigan said, who finished the year with a team-leading 2.95 ERA. "A lot of young guys got a lot of experience, though, so we should be better next year."

"It is always disappointing [to not make the A-10 tourney]," senior outfielder Mike Kulak added. "But this was one of the closest teams I have ever been a part of. Down in Florida [at the beginning of the year] we needed a few wins going into Richmond... and maybe that would have changed things."

On Saturday, the Maroon and White got out to a good start, scoring a run in the first when Cullan Maunus singled and came around to score on two consecutive errors. However, the 1-0 lead would be short-lived, as the Rams got to Santos in the top of the third.

With runners on first and second and one out, Tim Boyle knocked the first of his four hits on the day into right field, scoring Kevin Brush, who had led off the inning with a single. One batter latter, top Ram slugger Bobby Kingsbury lined a single to center to plate another run, and the final tally of the inning came on Kurt Thomas' RBI groundout to the right side.

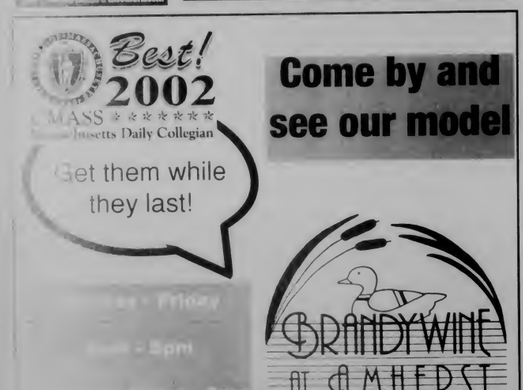
In the bottom of the inning, the Minutemen were able to knot things up on three singles, a wild pitch and a Chris Morgan sacrifice fly to deep center. However, Fordham would take the lead for good in the fourth, touching Santos for four runs on three hits, an error, a walk and a sac fly.

UMass mounted a rally in the fifth when Ram starter Derek Hucke walked Morgan and fell Altieri with two outs. Morgan came around to score on a single to center by Cornell Clark, but that would be all the damage the Minutemen could accomplish, as Curt Szado (2-for-3) struck out looking to end the threat.

The Minutemen looked like they would at least be able to salvage a split of the twinbill in game two, rocking Fordham starter John Baco for four runs in the first. However, that would be all the offense UMass would generate, as the Rams gradually took back the lead with three runs in the fourth, one in the fifth and a pair in the seventh.

Aaron Senez and Morgan once again led the Maroon and White lineup from the three and four holes, going a combined 4-for-6 with two runs scored and an RBI.

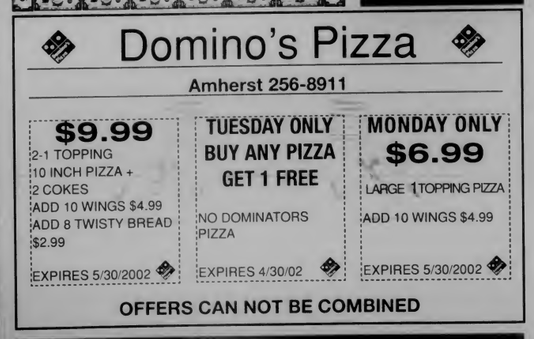
Sunday's senior day saw Senez, Kulak, Santos, Clark and Hourigan end as UMass' four runs in the sixth was all the offense it would need. Ironically, the player of the game for the Minutemen on Senior Day was freshman lefty Keith Doherty, who shut down the Rams on only three hits and one run through his seven innings of work.



Meanwhile, Senez and Mike Athas were the hitting stars of the day, going 2-for-2 and 2-for-3 respectively. Szado also contributed to the cause, driving in the first run of the game in the sixth with a base hit.

"I think it ended well," Hourigan said. "It was nice for the seniors to end things with a win."

Richmond, George Washington, Dayton, Xavier, St. Bonaventure and Temple will all participate in the A-10 championship from May 16-18. The finals of the tourney take place the following weekend.



Collegian Sports:
WHERE WRITERS NEVER LOSE AND LOSERS NEVER WRITE.

UMass BRIEFS:

Football

Junior defensive lineman Ian Dyche recorded seven tackles, including a sack for 11 yards, to lead an impressive showing by the defense in the University of Massachusetts spring football game on Saturday afternoon at Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium. The defense held the offense to just one touchdown on the day, while allowing only 307 yards of total offense on 94 plays.

The only touchdown of the game came late in the second quarter, when redshirt freshman quarterback Scott Ratliff hit senior wide receiver Adonis Kinsey with a 14-yard scoring pass, to conclude a 12-play, 80-yard drive. No other offensive possession generated more than 43 yards, with only one other drive advancing past the defense's 30-yard line.

Defensively, sophomore linebacker Larry Cabrelli made a game high eight tackles with a sack for seven yards, while redshirt freshman defensive back Lamarr Monterio had seven tackles and a pass breakup. Junior defensive back Ryan McHugh recorded six tackles with an interception, and junior defensive lineman Valdamar Brower totaled five tackles with two sacks and a forced fumble.

Ratliff led the offense by completing nine of 16 passes for 111 yards and a score, while sophomore quarterback Matt Guice hit on 12 of 22 passes for 108 yards. Kinsey led all receivers with five catches for 70 yards and a touchdown, while sophomore tight end Eugene Sigmund had three receptions for 18 yards. Redshirt freshman tailback Raunny Rosario led the ground game with 17 carries for 91 yards, and junior tailback Calvin Hunter added 14 carries for 25 yards.

The Minutemen open the 2002 campaign with a home date against Central Connecticut State on Sept. 7 at McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

Women's crew

The UMass women's crew team's Varsity 8 boat captured the 2002 Dad Vail Regatta title on the Schuylkill River near Philadelphia Saturday.

The Minutewomen beat Villanova and Boston College to claim the title at one of crew's biggest collegiate races. The UMass boat included cosswain Megan Mastropolo, Sarah Pollman, Lea Jakobsen, Colleen Banfield, Lauren Cromwell, Katie O'Brien, Elizabeth Robb, Hayley McGrath and Anna Falucci.

In the junior varsity 8 race, UMass came in second to Boston College, while the freshman 4 boat finished third in its race.

The Minutewomen close out their 2002 season on Sunday, May 12, at the Avaya Collegiate Rowing Championships to be held on Mercer Lake in West Windsor, N.J.

—Courtesy Media Relations

■ lacrosse

continued from page 12

GERALD LINGS / COLLEGIAN

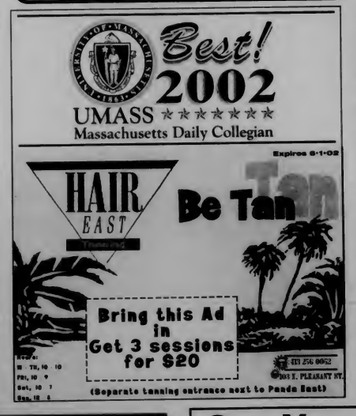
Jeff Zywicki scored one of the Maroon and White's 17 goals on Saturday. The team set a new UMass record for most goals in an NCAA Tournament game.

the 2001 bracket. This year, UMass forced lacrosse's demigods to seed them by earning the ECAC's Automatic Qualifier. And the committee responded by giving the Minutemen the No. 8 seed.

UMass replied with 17 goals against Fairfield, including 15 straight at one point. Were the Minutemen poised to make an offensive proclamation, given their lack of respect nationally?

"I don't think offensively we were really trying to make a statement on anybody," said midfielder Dusty Smith. "I think we just kept doing the things that we do. I don't think you can really slow down at any point in the game and start playing differently. Throughout the playoffs you have to keep playing your game and you can't take a quarter off just to say that you're up by a couple goals and that will be fine to win."

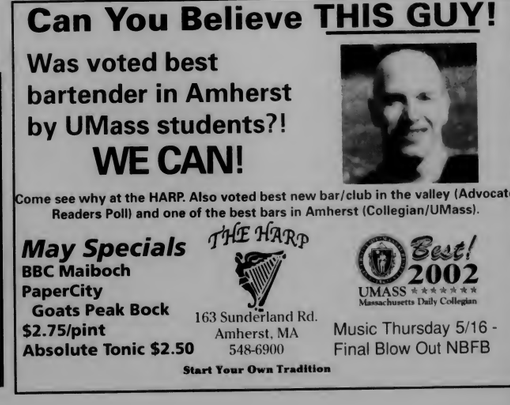
His coach, Greg Cannella, agreed.



"I think our challenge each week is to try and play the best of our ability, at the highest level we can, on both sides of the ball, regardless of who we play," he said.

It's that mentality which Cannella has instilled in all of his players, and it's why there was hardly a celebration after Saturday's opening round victory. This team does not fear history, and thrives on proving everyone wrong. It's something they've done all year.

"We look at these games as business trips," senior attackman Don Little said. "And we know that this season is three games from being complete."



DAILY COLLEGIAN

CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ACTIVITIES

World Wiffleball Tournament, medium pitch speed, 2-5 person teams $1000 cash for winners. Call for info (603) 425-6168.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Fraternities * Sororities Clubs * Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with the easy CampusFundraiser.com three hour fundraising event. Does not involve credit card applications. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact CampusFundraiser.com at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com.

Bus trip to New York-Commuter area gunnt trip is sponsoring another trip. With free tickets to Conan Obrien & the daily show w/Jon Stewart on Thurs. May 16. Tikkets for the trip are $5 for commuter undergrads, $20 for others. Sign up in Commuter Services Office 428 Student Union

Top of the Campus, Incorporated (TOC, Inc.) will hold it's Annual Meeting in Campus Center 917 Wednesday, May 22, 2002 at 2:00 p.m.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 Bedroom apt. avail. In Amherst Center! Lease starts June but negotiable for summer rent. Great location, hardwood floors, spacious. Call Kate 256-4317 or Lincoln real estate 253-7879 ASAP

Take over our lease, June 1st puff ton 3 bdrm 549-5249

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Brandywine Apts. - Now Available, 1&2 bedroom apts. Leases begin June, July, Aug or Sept. 1 year lease. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywine-apts.com stop by or call (413)549-0600.

1 Bedroom apt. close to Amherst Center and campus. Take over lease June 1st. Fall option. Call 253-1180.

Save $500 Off. Move-In Costs. Deluxe 2 bedroom apartments. FREE heat & hot water. Fully applianced Kitchens. Washers/ Dryers available. Pool, volleyball, basketball. Minutes from Umass-On free busline. Call Sugarloaf Estates today! 413-665-3856. Now leasing for summer & fall Email: sugarloaf.estate@magiclogic.com limited time offer.

1 bedroom Apt Brandywine summer with fall option 549-7279.

2 bedroom apartment summer sublet or new lease call 253-6778.

Looking for a beautiful and cheap place to live this summer? Hurry and have a room in a 2 bedroom furnished apartment with a porch and backyard. Free facilities. Pay just $400 a month, available this summer, call 210-3145.

2 bedroom Apt. Summer sublet or take over our lease. Rent negotiable call 549-7239.

AUTO FOR SALE

88 Mercury Grand Marquis. 107k runs looks great $1300 OBO. Tim 548-7033.

Chevy Lumina 1990. 165000 reliable must go. $1000 OBO. 896-3082.

AUTO FOR SALE

89 Honda Accord $1500 OBO 259-0068.

COMPUTERS

We pay CASH for your used lap tops 413-584-8857.

Color Laptop $99 Pentium tower/ CD Rom $99 with color monitor $139. HURRY! 413-584-8857.

EMPLOYMENT

Activist Best Summer Job in Town. Sleep late, work outdoors, cool people, cool boss. Great issues! *protect out air and water *fight corporate polluters *defend public health *promote renewable energy Earn $4,000-5,000 this summer. Call today, Start tomorrow. 413-584-9830.

STAFFING NOW, INC. Your Answer to Summer Employment! STAFFING NOW, INC. has positions that allow you to get your foot in the door of some of the areas most prominent companies. We have full time, part time, short term, long term, temporary assignments as well as temp-hire positions available in: Administrative Support Data Entry/ Customer Service Reception/ Front Office Support Medical Office Support STAFFING NOW, INC offers holiday/ vacation pay, medical insurance & direct deposit. Call today for immediate consideration, or visit our web site at: www.staffingnow.com STAFFING NOW, INC. 126 Northampton Street, Suite G Easthampton, MA 01027 413-529-7100.

EMPLOYMENT

Handyman, landscaper, housecleaner needed. June 1- Sept. 1, 9 hr wkly. $8.00/hr. Car needed. 549-1578.

TOP BOYS SPORTS CAMP IN MAINE! Play and coach sports-have fun-make $$ Camp Cobbossee positions in: all team and individual sports, all water sports plus: camp, hike, rock climbing, ropes, ice hockey, roller hockey, art & crafts, secretaries, lup salaries, excellent facilities, free room, board, laundry, travel allowance. Online application www.campcobbossee.com or call 800-473-6104.

Positions available: aerobics, aqua, and yoga instructors, personal trainers, lifeguards, and maintenance Hampshire Fitness Club 256-6446.

Bartenders wanted. Make up to $250 day. No experience necessary. 1-800-585-4810 ext. 4080.

Cushman Village general store prepare creative takeout deli foods and bakery items with customer service skills. Immediate F.T./P.T. Open 7 days with employment past summer available. 491 Pine St. Amherst 549-1953.

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individual, full and part time positions available immediately. Only those able to work the upcoming summer should apply. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413)584-4746.

Camp Counselor wanted for Tennis, Gymnastics, Water Ski, Arts, and more! Gain valuable experience at award-winning camps, while having the summer of a lifetime. Apply on-line at www.gocamping.com

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Work! Student work program! Earn great summer income! $18.25 base-appt. Customer service and sales. Scholarships available. 732-2252. www.mercks-alumni.com

Temporary help needed during finals. Work book bus back for the Textbook Annex May 16-24, applications available at the Annex.

FOR RENT

3 bedroom townhouse practically on campus, rent negotiable Joe 549-9441.

Thinking of Cape Cod this summer? South Dennis 3 bedroom, furnished 5/25-8/31. $6200.00 Call 508-862-0565.

FOR SALE

Moving off campus? Must sell desks, bureaus, beds, lamps, etc. Cheap. Call 259-9990.

Microfridge $150 or B/O great condition call 546-5410.

Queen bed with frame, Pull out couch, table, computer desk + bureau call Walt 549-4044.

Panasonic Stereo. 5 Disk dual cassette. Remote $150 OBO 253-1819.

Dorm Fridge and Microwave great condition call 546-5045.

Furniture must sell! Couch, Futon, table, bed. Everything must go! Call 253-7250.

Cheap furniture for sale. Various pieces available & in great condition. Price is negotiable. Call 549-0454.

Desk for sale new wooden 4 drawer perfect condition call Meg 549-0072.

FURNITURE

Furniture for sale! Futon, bed, desk etc. Good condition good price. Call 253-7306.

HOUSE FOR RENT

Northampton –4 bedroom for September $1200 per month plus. Near lock park. No pets. Skibiski Real Estate 586-1827.

Hadley 5 bedroom plus. Newer home five minutes from UMASS. June occupancy. 549-4270.

Main St. 4 Bedroom house June 1st. Sublet w/Fall option. Large kitchen, & living room with porch. On bus route w/washer and dryer. 549-7839.

INSTRUCTIONS

Become an EMT. Sign up for summer and fall classes now. For information go to www.umass.edu/ems or call us at 545-1885.

ROOM FOR RENT

Large room in private home, shared home. Call 367-9286. Rent is $500 plus utilities available June 1.

One bedroom available in a four bedroom apartment. Includes heat, hot water, electricity, cable, A/C, DSL internet, and local phone. On the bus line in Amherst on route 9, available May 25 for $375/month. Call Matt at Alpine Commons # 253-9499.

Spacious, Share House with fun couple in scenic Montague, $533. May 28-Aug 31. call 367-9822.

1 bedroom in Alpine commons. Excellent roommates. Call Bryan 253-9499.

ROOMMATE WANTED

2 roommates needed to share 2 bedroom apt. in Brandywine. On bus line. For fall semester, male or female (781) 585-4854.

Four roommates wanted to fill a house in the Center of Town for info call Rob (413) 519-0763.

Female(s) to share 2 bedroom Brandywine Apt. starting June 1. 549-1988.

SERVICES

Know your rights! Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Feeling ripped off? Your new car is a lemon: The warranty on your stereo just expired and it needs major repairs; you loaned a friend money and can't get it back or the dry cleaners ruined your favorite suit! Is ELSI giving you grief about your student loan? Are debt collectors knocking at your door? Contact the Student Legal Services Office at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

SUMMER SUBLET

Easy going person(s) needed for 2 bedroom home -one available June 1st on bus line. Porch yard, good deal, near townhouses. Call Rachel - 61014 or Deanna -62664.

2 Rooms available on Phillips St. off Frat Run, for June, July, and August. Call 549-4038.

2 bedrooms in a Puffton 3 bedroom. Available 6/1 or end of May, summer w/fall option, cheap rent A/C on bus line 549-9837.

SUMMER SUBLET

1 Large bedroom on Main St. Amherst $300 O/B/O. Call Brianna 546-1578.

One large bedroom available at Cliffside apts. Starting June 1 partly furnished 617-842-4657.

Big 2 Bedroom Boulders. Fall option. Heat/Hot water $860 259-1306.

2 Rms Available June to July. A/C, utilities, phone, internet included $400/Mo 259-3781.

Sunset Apt. opening for summer! 2 bedrooms + Study room in basement for info please call (413) 549-5421.

Brandywine. Two bedroom. Furnished. A/C , by pool and bus stop. Call 549-8782.

Nice 3 bedroom townhouse. Practically on campus. Call Joe 549-9441.

Brandywine. 2 bdrm. Available June 1. Call 549-1988.

TO SUBLET

Brandywine Apt. 1 bedroom available. Looking for 1-2 people. Starting June 1st with possible fall option. Only $231/ month. 413-549-5359.

Subletters needed for 2 bedrooms in Cliffside. Everything included. $1275. Call Lauren 546-4074.

2 person Apt. June-August on sunset Ave. 2 Mins. to campus 549-4767.

Sublet in Brandywine with possible fall option. Looking for 1-3 people to take over 2 bedroom. $225/month. Starting June 1st. 549-9178.

2 Bedroom apartment partially furnished available June 1st to sublet w/option to lease on bus route. 413-549-9612.

HSCN

Housing Services Cable Network

1. CBS / 3
2. NESN
3. Fox Sports NE
4. PBS / 57
5. HSCN Movie Channel
6. WB / 20
7. HSCN Movie Channel
8. TV Guide Channel
9. FOX / 61
10. ABC / 40
11. NBC / 22
12. International Channel
13. UMATV
14. HSCN Info Channel
15. ESPN
16. ESPN 2
17. LIVE / 19
18. ESPN Classic
19. Gavel-to-Gavel
20. CNN
21. CNN HL
22. Weather Channel
23. Learning Channel
24. History Channel
25. A & E
26. Discovery Health
27. Food Network
28. NASA
29. Home & Garden TV
30. Travel Channel
31. Lifetime
32. CNBC
33. Tech TV
34. BET
35. UPN-38
36. USA
37. TNN
38. MTV
39. CMT
40. VH-1
41. TNT
42. TBS
43. E! Entertainment
44. Sci-Fi Channel
45. Court TV
46. Nick at Nite
47. Comedy Central
48. Cartoon Network
49. Game Show Network
50. TV Land
51. FOX Family
52. Univision
53. Telefutura
54. Telemundo
55. College TV Network
56. C-SPAN
57. C-SPAN2
58. Bloomberg Television

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian 113 Campus Center Basement - UMass!

Client:_____ Date:_____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run:_____ Headline:_____

Total days _____ x Words = _____ x rate _____ = PAYMENT

Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

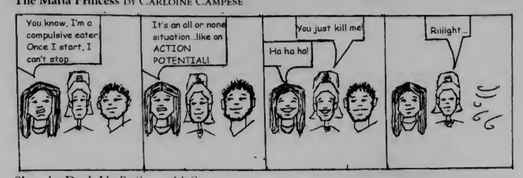
Deadlines are noon, 2 days before publication. Ads are non-refundable. Ads with special characters, words, or formatting will be charged double the regular rate. Ads are subject to approval and may be edited for length, clarity, and format. The Daily Collegian reserves the right to refuse any ad for any reason.

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 13, 2002

C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
2	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	News hour With Jim Lehrer		Antiques Roadshow (N)		Masterpiece Theatre "The Road From Coorain" (N) (In Stereo)		Austin City Limits (In Stereo)
3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	King	Yes, Dear	Raymond	Becker (N)	Mary Tyler Moore Reunion		News	Late Show
4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	King	Yes, Dear	Raymond	Becker (N)	Mary Tyler Moore Reunion		News	Late Show
5	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Dinotopia (N) (In Stereo) (Part 2 of 3)				TV Guide's 50 Best		News	Nightline
6	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	7th Heaven "Holy War" (N)		Angel "Benediction" (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Raymond
7	News	Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond		Third Watch "Blackout" (N)		Crossing Jordan (N)		News	Tonight Show
8	News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Fear Factor "Championships"		Angel "Benediction" (In Stereo)		News	Home Imp.	Blind Date	Blind Date
9	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	7th Heaven "Holy War" (N)		Third Watch "Blackout" (N)		Crossing Jordan (N)		News	Tonight Show
10	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Fear Factor "Championships"		Third Watch "Blackout" (N)		News		Raymond	Seinfeld
11	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	Boston Public (N) (In Stereo)		Ally McBeal "Alfie" (N)		News		News	Tonight Show
12	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Fear Factor "Championships"		Third Watch "Blackout" (N)		Crossing Jordan (N)		Charlie Rose (N) (In Stereo)
13	World News	Business Rpt.	News hour With Jim Lehrer		Antiques Roadshow (N)		Masterpiece Theatre "The Road From Coorain" (N) (In Stereo)		TV Guide's 50 Best		News	Nightline
14	News	ABC News	Seinfeld		Dinotopia (N) (In Stereo) (Part 2 of 3)						5th Wheel	Shipmates
15	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Chasis	Frasier	Hughleys	One on One	Puritans (N)	Girlfriends (N)	News	Ent. Tonight	Major League Baseball: Atlanta Braves at San Francisco Giants
16	Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Roseanne	★½ "Problem Child" (1990, Comedy) John Ritter, Michael Oliver						Law & Order "Consultation"
17	The View (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Aftershock"		Biography: Paul Anka		Las Vegas: The Money and the Power (N)		News night		Crossfire	Moneyline
18	Money Ins		Crossfire		Live From...		Larry King Live				Daily Show	Sat. Night Live
19	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Geels	Let's Bowl	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Com.-Presents	Com.-Presents	Golden Girls	Golden Girls
20	Mountain Lion Hunter		Grizzlies-Canadian Rockies		Building the Impossible: Seven Wonders of the Ancient World		Island of the Pygmy Mammoth		Baseball Tonight (N)		Sportscenter
21	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs Conference Semifinal Game 6 - Teams to be Announced. (Live)				Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"A Crime of Passion" (1999, Drama) Tracey Gold		Golden Girls	Golden Girls
22	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait (In Stereo)				Real World	Real World	Real World	Movie Awards	Jacksea	Rock
23	MTV Special (In Stereo)		Direct Effect (In Stereo)				MTV Special (In Stereo)				All In Family	All In Family
24	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb	Told by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers	Star Wars Fan Film Awards
25	Star Trek (In Stereo)		Star Trek "Spectre of the Gun"		Outer Limits "Judgment Day"		The Stand (In Stereo) (Part 1 of 4)				Star Wars Fan Film Awards
26	Secret World of Roi		Supernat Prisons		Code Blue: Crossroads		Maternity Ward "Baby Boom"		Child's World: Facts of Life (N)		Code Blue: Crossroads
27	NYPD Blue (In Stereo)		Pretender (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball Playoffs Conference Semifinal - Teams to Be Announced. (Live)				Inside NBA		★★★ "New York City" (1991)
28	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "Acid of Terror" (In Stereo)		Nash Bridges "Mystery Dance"		★½ "Skyjacked" (1994, Science Fiction) Kurt Russell, James Spader				JAG (In Stereo)
29							Band of Brothers (In Stereo)		The Gathering Storm" (2002, Drama) Albert Finney (In Stereo)
30	(4:30) "Maverick"		★★★ "Never Say Never Again" (1983, Adventure) Sean Connery. (In Stereo) "PG"				★★½ "Sweet November" (2001, Romance) Keanu Reeves. "PG-13"		★★½ "Virtuosity" (1995, Science Fiction) Denzel Washington. "R"
31	(4:30)		★ "Crow: Wicked Prayer II" (2000) Robin Dunne. "R"								★★½ "Addicted" (1999) "R"
32	(4:00) "House"		★½ "Bollywood" (1998) Matthew Lawrence. "NR"				★★★ "Save the Last Dance" (2001, Drama) Julia Stiles. "PG-13"		Queer as Folk (N) (In Stereo)		★★½ "Addicted" (1999) "R"

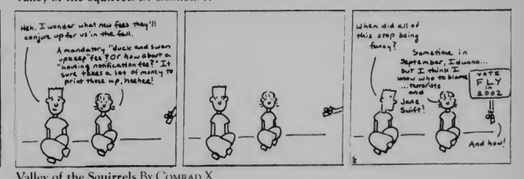
NEW at DB Mart...
HOT STUFF PIZZA
Buy a Breakfast Sandwich
Get 2 FREE HASH BROWNS and a 12 oz COFFEE
Redeem this coupon at:
259 TRIANGLE ST. AMHERST, MA 413-549-5606
1 per customer per visit - dine in



Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas

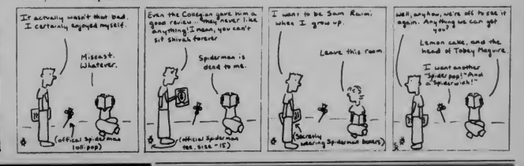
The Torques By Ken Fredette

The Mafia Princess By Carloine Campese



The Torques By Ken Fredette

Shut the Duck Up By Seany McSean



Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

UMass Hysteria By Eric Nycz

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Quote of the Day

"I think I did pretty well under the circumstances."

-Citizen Kane

Amherst Weather

Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 53 LOW: 39	HIGH: 53 LOW: 36	HIGH: 62 LOW: 36

Horoscopes

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – There are only so many ways to say it, but in any language you're just cool.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Hurry on your way today, for trouble is afoot.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – The best place to find your lost sneaker in under your bed. Just look behind the stash.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Go to KFC and order your chicken extra crispy.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Something will happen today. Or not. Hey, they can't all be good.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 21) – An interested friend is really a Communist infiltrator.

SCORPIO (Oct. 22-Nov. 21) – While funny at first, hearing the other children scream at the sight of your poison-tipped tail is getting old.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – What the hell is a Sagittarius, anyway?

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Got a case of end of semester swipes? Call your friends and buy $20 worth of fresh Bluewall cookies!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Put on a happy face... Hannibal.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Remember kaleidoscopes can be deceiving.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Go ahead, have another.

A.I. By Joseph Hession

ACROSS
1 Extend over
5 Smear
9 Captain's place
13 Diva Gluck
14 Crafty move
15 Stew ingredient
17 Mongolian desert
18 Baseball's Tommie
19 Ogle
20 Type of cell or battery
22 Eye parts
24 Smell
25 Decorative stickers
26 Gift tie
29 Standpoint
31 Improvise
32 Coastal event
33 Move quickly
36 Doctor's payment
37 Set aside
40 — nutshell: briefly
41 Shooting marble
42 Scallion's kin
43 Suggests indirectly
45 Rock band Pink —
47 Dalmatian, sometimes
48 Realize
51 "— Misbehavin' "
52 Business associate
54 Shy
58 Blackboard
59 Colorado natives
61 Marathoner's unit
62 Church official
63 Polite address
64 Coffee brewers
65 Urges
66 Mountain lion
67 Chair or sofa

DOWN
1 Droops
2 Scheme
3 Pulpit
4 Kenya's capital
5 Mythical monster
6 Ice-fishing tool
7 Exploit
8 Tavern fare
9 Teen-traveler's place
10 Attract
11 Tarzan's transport
12 Virtuous
16 Crime fee Eliot
21 Hacienda brick
23 Garden tool
26 Ride the rapids
27 Notion
28 Was windy
29 Pointed (a camera)
30 Mont. neighbor
32 Low card
33 Trace mineral
34 Gung-ho about
35 History
38 Single-handed
39 Mongol rulers
44 Narrow strip of land
45 Make plumper
46 Cruise ships
47 Marsh vapor
48 Arched recess
49 Keep score
50 Export and import
51 Nautical position
53 Kind of roast
55 Source of heat
56 Armbone
57 For fear that
60 Greek letter

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

B	O	R	E		S	P	C	A		E	M	B	E	D
I	G	O	R		T	R	O	D		S	E	E	D	Y
D	E	A	R		R	I	T	A		C	R	A	N	E
S	E	N	A	T	E	S		M	A	R	I	N	A	S
			T	R	A	M	P		I	R	O	N
S	H	R	I	E	K		R	E	D	W	O	O	D	S
P	I	E	C	E		R	E	N	O		S	C	A	T
O	N	A		S	A	I	L	O	R	S		E	V	A
I	D	L	E		P	L	U	S		C	H	A	I	R
L	U	M	B	E	R	E	D		V	I	A	N	D	S
		O	U	I		E	D	I	F	Y
S	P	A	N	G	L	E		A	N	I	M	A	T	E
H	E	N	I	E		A	W	R	Y		O	B	E	Y
E	A	T	E	N		R	I	S	E		M	O	R	E
A	R	I	S	E		L	E	S	S		S	U	M	S

11-3-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Italian Minestrone

Chicken Nuggets

Sweet Potato Quesadilla

Le Commensal Entrée (vegan)

DINNER

Italian Minestrone

Moroccan Lamb Stew

Chicken Margarita

Six Bean Stew (vegan)

Roasted Vegetable Wrap (veg) (W Basics)

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Ken Campbell
Photo Technician	Richard Blake
Copy Editor	Jesse Greenspan
Production Supervisor	Alicia Upano
Publication Staff	Shannon Farrington, Mike Kulak

DAILY COLLEGIAN

SPORTS

COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: ERIC SODERSTROM

In two games pitched at the Atlantic 10 Tournament, Jen Hadley gave up just one run on three hits. The senior hurler earned wins in both appearances to improve her record to 24-5

Rhode Island revenge

After loss, UMass wins four straight to capture A-10s

By Andy Vogt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Thursday's loss to Rhode Island could have potentially resulted in disaster for the Massachusetts softball team. But looking back on the 1-0 contest that broke the team's 33-game winning streak, it might have been a blessing in disguise.

"I think it was a maturity check, to be able to handle all the difficulties," Head Coach Elaine Sortino said about the game.

The Minutewomen left little doubt that they were up to the task of handling difficulty, as they rebounded to reel off four straight victories and capture their eighth consecutive Atlantic 10 Championship. The title was made all the more sweet by knocking off the Rams twice on Saturday to win the double-elimination tournament.

"We were being chased by Rhode Island, and what we needed to do was chase [our opponent]," Sortino said. She added that winning the conference tournament was vital in making the next step to the NCAA Regionals.

"If we couldn't handle this, we wouldn't belong there," Sortino said.

The Minutewomen came into Saturday's twin bill from the loser's bracket with a task they were not able to meet on Thursday: solve the Rams' All-Atlantic 10 pitcher Gwen Rack. Rack dazzled the Maroon and White in the first round, tossing a three-hit shutout in her team's win. But she was more than mortal on Saturday, as UMass pounded her for five runs on eight hits in the opener, as it staved off elimination with a 6-1 win.

Kaila Holtz provided the heroics in the game, but it was not on the mound where the Atlantic 10 Pitcher of the Year shined. With the bases loaded in the bottom of the third inning, the junior from British Columbia smashed a double to the left field fence to clear the sacks and give the Minutewomen a 3-1 advantage, a lead they would not relinquish.

Emily Robustelli and Teri Rooney each had RBI base hits in the bottom of the fourth to give UMass a 5-1 lead, and picked up an uncarned run in the fifth to finish off the scoring, setting up the second and deciding game. Senior Jen Hadley was not about to end her career without another A-10 title as she improved her record to 24-5, scattering three hits while striking out four Ram hitters.

It was the same story in the nightcap, as the Minutewomen again trashed Rack, this time to the tune of ten hits on seven runs. The game remained scoreless until the third inning, when junior Brandi Cross blooped in a single to right to score Robustelli, and Holtz added an RBI single later in the inning to stake UMass to a 2-0 lead.

Defensive miscues again continued to plague URI, as the Minutewomen took advantage of two Ram errors to plate four runs in the fourth inning. Ashley Bakken, Robustelli and Cross all drove in UMass baserunners in the inning, and Robustelli took advantage of a passed ball to give UMass a 6-0 lead. It would end the game early in the next inning, as sophomore Jamie Cahalan scored on the sixth Rhode Island error of the day, and Robustelli lined an RBI single to invoke the mercy rule and give the Minutewomen the title. Holtz again dazzled the Rams, as she fired a one-hit shutout with three strikeouts to lead her team to victory.

There definitely was a change in the way UMass performed on Friday and Saturday, as they entered the last two days of the tournament with a new attitude.

"I thought we were tight [against URI]," Sortino said. "We didn't have the looseness to adjust." But when Saturday rolled around, the 23rd-year coach said that URI was a team that looked "scared."

UMass reached the last day of play by knocking off St. Joseph's and Temple by scores of 4-0 and 3-0, respectively. The tandem of Hadley and Holtz each threw two-hitters for UMass, and Cross and Robustelli again were the offensive sparks that propelled the Minutewomen to victory.

"When they came out against Temple and St. Joe's, I felt like we were okay with what we needed to do," Sortino said.

The Maroon and White will now be moving on to the NCAA Regional Tournament, which will be held at a site announced late yesterday evening. The location was not available at press time, but the team's first game is tentatively scheduled for this Thursday. With only one day of practice before the Minutewomen have to fly out, little time is left for preparation. But judging by the way it responded this weekend, the team should be just fine.

UMass runs away with victory

Fifteen-straight goals lead to first round win

By Matthew F. Sacco
COLLEGIAN STAFF

PROVIDENCE, R.I. – Forgive No. 8 seeded Massachusetts for coming out a little tight in its first round NCAA Tournament game against unseeded Fairfield. Consider that the only person in the locker room that had ever been to a Division I post-season before was Head Coach Greg Cannella and it's easy to see why the Minutemen needed a quarter or two to shake off the nerves.

But as the second half commenced, UMass hit its groove hard and Fairfield just didn't have the legs to keep up.

The Minutemen used a 15-goal run to turn a 2-2 contest into a 17-4 laugher, and advanced to the quarterfinals of the NCAA Tournament for the first time since 1997. The win marked the fourth tournament victory in the program's history, and the margin of victory is the fifth largest in NCAA history.

Without a doubt, the senior class led the way for UMass on the afternoon. Midfielder Don Little had a game-high four goals and five points, but he was not alone on the scoresheet. Fellow seniors Dan Paccione, Mac Morley and Dusty Smith combined for seven goals and 10 points while captain Matt McFarland held 30-goal scorer Matt Buecker to just one tally, a fourth-quarter goal that made the score 17-3.

The Stags, making their first tournament appearance, actually kept the game within reach for the first half by winning face-offs, controlling the ball and slowing the pace of the game to a crawl. And it didn't hurt that UMass played sloppy and C.J. Kemp was stifling in the goal.

"In all the games we've played this year we faced that," Cannella said. "We try to play up tempo as much as we can, and teams are gonna try to slow it down on you and control the tempo of the game."

Fairfield controlled the ball for much of the first half while Kemp held the UMass offense at bay with six saves. UMass helped the cause with four unforced turnovers, including an errant pass at the start of a one minute extra man opportunity.

But a different UMass squad came out of the locker room after halftime. Passes were suddenly on target and Cannella's squad started to make Kemp look very mortal.

After scoring the last four goals of the first half, UMass used seven different goal scorers on an 11-0 run and pushed a 6-2 halftime lead to a 17-2 blowout. Little scored all four of his goal-laden, that-span, including a quick stick tally off a Gene Tundo assist to start the streak.

Sophomore Kevin Glenz ended the run with an in-close tally at 6:16 of the fourth quarter. Tundo beat his man behind the cage and found Glenz dashing in from the point for a quick stick and the goal. Buecker scored less than two minutes later to end a 38-minute plus scoring drought for the Stags.

Fairfield managed only one shot on goal over that span, and none in the third quarter. During UMass' domination of the second half it cleared the ball nine times on 12 chances, scooped up 27 groundballs to the Stags 16 and out shot its opponent 24-12.

Although freshman goaltender Bill Schell was rarely tested after the first half, he made a number of key stops when the game was still close, including an aggressive play to rob Fairfield's Trox Bamann of a goal that would have given his team its only lead of the day.

"He battled us out on a couple situations in the first half that their offense made some good plays and got some shots near the crease," Dusty Smith said of the freshman goalie. "He really set the tone for us. His first saves might have been some of the more important plays of the day. It got us a lot of confidence and we kept pushing on from there."

Schell finished with eight saves in the game and four goals allowed.

RICHARD BLAKE/COLLEGIAN

Don Little scored a season-high four goals and added an assist in Saturday's first round NCAA Tournament victory over Fairfield.

No. 1 comes next for Lax

By Eric Soderstrom
COLLEGIAN STAFF

PROVIDENCE, R.I. – When Matt McFarland walked off the grass of Brown Stadium Saturday, blood poured from his right knee. But that wound, leaking underneath the tongue of his earth-hidden cleats, wasn't of any bother.

Just seconds removed from his team's 17-4 destruction of Fairfield in the first round of the NCAA Tournament, McFarland was too taken by the prospect of next week's quarterfinal matchup with top-ranked Johns Hopkins. He's been thinking about it ever since he first picked up a lacrosse stick.

"That's the ultimate game to play," said McFarland, UMass' 6-foot-3-inch, 210 pound All-American defenseman. "There's nothing better. It's like when you think about lacrosse when you're younger, it's Johns Hopkins."

Seeded No. 1, the Blue Jays have qualified for the tournament in all 30 years of bracket existence and are the proud owners of seven National Championships. Tied with Syracuse for tops in titles, Hopkins has the luxury of beginning the quest for No. 8 on its home turf in Baltimore, Md. But for McFarland, that just makes it more exciting.

"It's like the best opportunity in the world," said the senior, who is also of acquaintance with several of the Hopkins players. "To play the No. 1 team at their field with nothing to lose, it's going to be fun."

Sunday's noon faceoff at Homewood Field, where over 10,000 spectators are expected to show, will commence the biggest game any UMass team has been scheduled for this year. And it's probably the most important game the UMass lacrosse program has ever planned for.

Including Saturday's Stag dismantling, the Minutemen have only four tournament victories to its credit. Their first came in 1986, when UMass beat New Hampshire before falling to Johns Hopkins in the Quarterfinal round. And their second came in 1989, topping Cornell, but again losing to the Blue Jays in their next step. The Minutemen have never qualified for the National Semifinal game, their best attempt coming in an 11-9 loss to Princeton five years ago.

Last year, some critics said UMass had the talent to compete for a National Championship. But the NCAA Men's Lacrosse Committee didn't fit the 12-2 Minutemen into

Turn to LACROSSE, page 9

WORRYING ABOUT WILCO? ARTS PAGE 5. SENIORS SAY GOODBYE ED/OP PAGE 4. SOFTBALL TOURNAMENT PREVIEW SPORTS PAGE 12

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

TUESDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY SIX ☆☆☆☆☆ 5.14.02

Renaissance Center

By Julie Wurzel
Collegian Staff

IN A TIME of budget cuts, union struggles with the administration and increasing disillusionment with the University of Massachusetts, it seems there isn't much to write home about. However, from a quiet corner of campus, the unassuming voice of the Renaissance Center asks for your attention.

If you've never been to the Renaissance Center before, you're in good company. It's not hard to miss, tucked away on a hill above campus with only a modest white sign advertising its existence. And if you've never heard of it before, there's a reason – the Massachusetts Center for Renaissance Studies, as it's officially called, was founded just two years ago. It's a unique place – in easy walking distance from campus (just around the corner from Silvan, on East Pleasant Street) but secluded enough to make it seem a million miles away.

The Center's many functions include acting as a specialized library, hosting concerts of Renaissance music and Renaissance-related lectures and holding classes. Its main purpose is to be a resource for students and scholars, and its collection brings together over 16,000 manuscripts and rare books on a wide breadth of topics for students of almost any subject.

"It's not just for the English department," said Arthur Kinney, the Center's director. "We have everything from English literature to engineering."

For instance, the Center just recently acquired a scientific text written by Francis Bacon, the essayist and scientist who is credited with inventing the scientific method.

The staff at the Center welcomes all students to visit and use the collection, whether they're in need of just a bit of information about the Renaissance, doing a paper on Shakespeare or working on a thesis.

"This doesn't have to be a high-minded scholarly thing," said Greg Bak, the Center's curator and librarian, who can help students navigate the collection, put together a bibliography or decide on a paper topic. He suggested their resources could be used for any basic research.

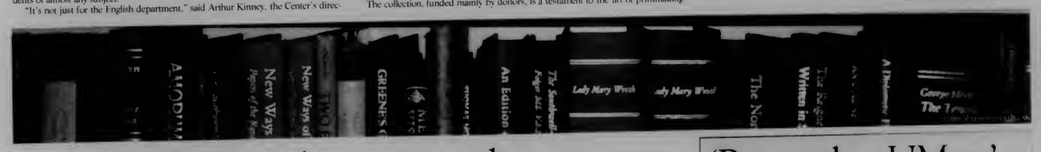
"We like to see new faces coming into the center," Bak said. "I always love to show off our rare books."

Indeed, the staff at the Center is proud of the collection. One of Bak's favorite books to show off is a 1598 edition of Sir Philip Sidney's Arcadia. Sidney, who served Queen Elizabeth and died in her service, wrote Arcadia as a satirical pastoral concerning love, sex and politics. This edition was once owned by William Wordsworth, whose name is still clearly visible on the first page.

The collection, funded mainly by donors, is a testament to the art of printmaking as well as the art of writing, for "making a book was a large undertaking in the Early Modern period," Bak said.

The Early Modern period is often used interchangeably with the term Renaissance for the period from 1500-1700. The books, many of which are still in their original binding, are often in delicate condition and shelved in a climate-controlled library.

However, Bak stressed, "Our collection is a working collection – not a museum collection," so the most important thing about these books is their accessibility, not necessarily their value as artifacts.



Because of the Center's non-circulating collection policy, the books will always be on the shelf, something that anyone who hasn't been able to find a book in the W.E.B. DuBois library would surely appreciate.

The working collection is an important tool in doing Renaissance research.

"You know you're dealing with ideas of the period, not a historian's idea," explained Bak.

In fact, everywhere you look in the Center, ideas – manifested in the form of books, artifacts and manuscripts from the Renaissance – surround you. Pages of man-

Turn to RENAISSANCE, page 2

ISOM looks to welcome new departments

By S.J. Port
COLLEGIAN STAFF

The Academic Matters Council, the Graduate Council, the Program and Budget Council, and Vice Chancellor Charlena M. Seymour support the transfer of the Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration and the Sport Studies departments to the Isenberg School of Management.

Both departments are currently part of the College of Food and Natural Resources.

The Faculty Senate will vote on Thursday at its regular meeting whether or not to approve the transfer. The faculty of both departments and the colleges involved support the transfer.

"Support for the transfer is very strong, with unanimous votes of the faculty in both departments," Seymour wrote in a memo to Ernest May, the Faculty Senate Secretary. "The vote of the faculty is ISOM was 90 percent in favor, ad in CFNR 96 percent in favor."

According to the report by the Academic Matters Council the transfer will not adversely affect any faculty or students involved in the transferring departments. The budgets for both HRTA and Sport Management will be transferred from the College of Food and Natural Resources to ISOM so that no strain is put on the existing resources of ISOM.

Currently, HRTA and Sport Management are part of the Division of Applied Management in the CFNR. If the transfer is approved, ISOM will gain the use of the Division of Applied Management designation.

According to the report, the proposal to transfer the departments is something that has been suggested several times in the past decade but has never occurred for various unlisted reasons.

If the proposal is approved by Faculty Senate, work will begin to integrate the two departments into ISOM. The HRTA and Sport Management departments will remain in their current facilities.

In order to maintain the "unique identities" of the two departments, ISOM will be split into two divisions. The first division, The Division of Management, will be comprised of the existing ISOM departments; while the second division, the Division of Applied Management will consist solely of HRTA and Sport Management. The existing ISOM dean will remain in tact to oversee both divisions. However, the Division of Applied Management will have its own Associate Dean.

A committee of faculty will be assigned to review issues of accreditation that arise for ISOM due to the transfer.

The Applied Management departments will retain their respective admissions standards for all their programs, as well as maintaining their current curricula.

Faculty who chose to leave as a result of the transfer will be replaced immediately as the Academic Council views the faculty as essential to each department's quality.

"Re-assignment of faculty or teaching assistants will seriously impair each department's ability to meet the needs of it's students much less maintain such quality and stature," states the report.

According to the Council's report, the present teaching loads of faculty members in the different departments vary, with Sports Managements faculty being the heaviest. If the proposal is passed, ISOM will work to bring the teaching loads of the Sports Management faculty into line with the other department's faculty, as well as address the salary anomalies between the faculty of ISOM faculty and the faculty of the Division of Applied Management departments within two years.

The report of the Academic Matters Council, the Graduate Council, and the Program and Budget Council states that it does not foresee the transfer of the departments to be injurious to either.

"The Academic Matters Council has no reason to believe that transferring either department to the ISOM increases or decreases its access to resources," the report reads. "Using the welfare of current and future program students as the criterion for our judgment, we support implementing the transfer plan."

The 607th meeting of the Faculty Senate will be held on May 16 at 3:30 p.m. in the Isenberg School of Management Auditorium, Room 116.

'Remember UMass'

By Daniel G. Lamothe
COLLEGIAN STAFF

While the end of the school year is rapidly approaching, the Student Center for Education Research (SCERA) at the University of Massachusetts wants to make it clear that the work to "Save UMass" is not done.

"We've opened the lines of communication with our legislators," said Kerry Mulcahy, Director of SCERA. "We've shown that UMass is important to us. We want to thank student for the effort that they've already put in, but the job isn't done."

According to Mulcahy, "outpouring of support from our campus has been incredible." She said that over 5,000 letters have been sent to legislators in Boston and that over 1,000 students attended the Save UMass rally held April 25 on the Statehouse steps.

"All of our efforts thus far have had a very positive impact in the statehouse. We are proving that we are a force to be reckoned with and we must continue to show that," Mulcahy said.

SCERA plans to keep pushing legislators to "remember UMass." They gave several viable options for the general student body to do so, including contacting legislators over the phone and visiting them in their office both in Boston and in their home districts.

"I think the work that SCERA has thus far has been effective," said Hannah Fatemi, Secretary of University Policy for the Student Government Association (SGA). "The students need to realize the power of their voices. If we keep advocating against the budget cuts, our voices will be heard."

According to Mulcahy, the state budget will be passed in late June. This leaves another month after the end of semester, time that SCERA feels needs to be used to continue advocating UMass to legislators. "We still have another month to make a bigger impact," she said.

There are several ways for stu-

Turn to SCERA, page 3

The reading room in the Renaissance Center offers a comfortable atmosphere for those researching the archives

■ Renaissance

continued from page 1

uscripts and books (including such diverse examples of book art as a page from a 1400 edition of the Koran) hang on almost every wall, with Renaissance maps filling the remaining space. The Renaissance pervades even the bathroom.

"I've got Renaissance things in all of the bathrooms," said Kinney with a smile, opening the door to a small bathroom where 16th and 17th century maps hung on the walls. "It's something I'm proud of – it's quirky."

Beyond books written or printed during the Renaissance, the Center has more recently published books that include transcripts of rare books, criticism of Early Modern texts and histories of the period. The collection also has facsimiles of books that the Center wouldn't be able to afford, such as Shakespeare's first folio and the first edition of Edmund Spenser's Faerie Queen. The facsimiles act as an expansion and complement to the rare collection.

They also have movies, CDs, DVDs and any other media they can acquire relating to the Renaissance, including anything from an episode of "Star Trek" to 10 Things I Hate About You.

Recently, the Renaissance Center obtained a 19th century hand press on a long-term loan from Amherst College. Although made and used later than the Renaissance, the press is based on the same principles as a Renaissance press. Bak said the Center's goal is to have it working within the next year to demonstrate how books of the time period were then assembled.

The Center has only been around for two years, but the house where it is located has a more extensive history. According to Kinney, the house, built in 1948-1949, and the 28 acres surrounding it were originally owned by Janet and Winthrop Dakin.

Kinney related the story of how the young couple met on the hill where the Center stands and subsequently bought the land. They also purchased hundreds of acres of land around Amherst and donated it to the town, under the stipulation that it never be developed. UMass purchased part of that property in 1954, and years later in 1994, Janet Dakin, who was, incidentally, the younger sister of the playwright Thornton Wilder, willed the remaining land to the University.

Chancellor David K. Scott then decided that the building and the land should become a center for the study of the Renaissance. After a few years of repairs and renovations, the Dakin house was transformed to what it is today.

Even with all of the aesthetic qualities of the house, the beauty of the surrounding land, its gardens and the scripted literary art inside, the staff is pragmatic in their message to the campus.

"We want everyone to know about us and know the resources we offer," said Bak. "We would just like people to come here."

***

To connect to the Renaissance Center's catalog, go to the University's main library catalog; select "Other Searches;" then select "Renaissance Center Catalog."

On the Net: Renaissance Center; http://www.umass.edu/renaissance.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts academic semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life became the Collegian Signal in 1907, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Daily Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500, weekdays 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Sam Wilkinson Editor-in-Chief
Matthew F. Sacco Managing Editor
Amy Garganta Business Manager
Shimauli Dave Production Manager
Jake Lilien Diversity Editor
Mike Kulak Editorial Production Manager
Jason Smith Advertising Manager

Mike Delano Arts & Living Editor
Matthew Despres Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jennifer Eastwood Features Editor
Catherine Turner News Editor
Tibora Girczyc-Blum Photography Editor
Eric Soderstrom Sports Editor
Brent Siniawski Finance Manager
Charlie Jacco Distribution Manager

Morgan Taylor Advertising Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Puppas Classified Advertising
Cora Murphy Assistant Finance Manager
Shawn Daugherty Assistant Business Manager
Megan Shannon Assistant Advertising Manager

BOSTON BARTENDERS SCHOOL of AMERICA

Bartenders Have More Spirit!
www.bostonbartender.com
Why not be a bartender?
• Only professional school in Western MA
• Hands-on training in real bar/club setting
• National certification in alcohol awareness
• Lifetime refresher • ID Card • Resume
• Special UMass student discount
• Conveniently located in West Springfield
Call TODAY! (413) 747-9888

Eliminate
FEARS/ALLERGIES
In one session
Fear of flying, public speaking, exams, needles, elevators, heights, allergies and other disturbances can be eliminated in one session
Order a free booklet at 413 374 8217

Paul Jacobs
LIGHT HAULING
• Insured
• Reliable
• Artwork
• Offices
• Students
• Businesses
• Residences
End of the Semester!!
Need to Move??
(413) 584-1136

ISRAEL AND THE UNITED STATES SHARE A COMMITMENT TO FREEDOM AND DEMOCRACY.

In Israel's vibrant democracy, governments change in response to the will of her citizens – unlike the governments of her neighbors. All Israeli citizens – Jews, Christians, Muslims and others – vote and can serve in the parliament. In recognition of these shared values, the U.S. House of Representatives and Senate recently passed resolutions declaring their solidarity with Israel.

We support Israel in her continuing quest for peace.

WHEREVER WE STAND, WE STAND WITH ISRAEL.

Hillel

American Israel Public Affairs Committee ◆ Anti-Defamation League ◆ birthright israel ◆ Caravan for Democracy ◆ Committee for Accuracy in Middle East Reporting in America ◆ Hamagshimim ◆ Jewish Agency for Israel ◆ Jewish Council for Public Affairs ◆ Jewish National Fund ◆ Kesher/Union of American Hebrew Congregations ◆ KOACH - The United Synagogue of Conservative Judaism ◆ USD/Hagshama of the World Zionist Organization

Brought to you by Hillel: The Foundation for Jewish Campus Life with the support of the Charles and Lynn Schusterman Family Foundation.

To learn more about Israel and to take action, go to www.hillel.org.

Penis enlargements not a good idea

CHRISTOPHER THEBERGE

The Internet is flooded with websites promoting penis enlargement devices, pills, and techniques. A late night television ad with a Penthouse Pet suggesting that women "really want a bigger man" is shown quite frequently. Penis enlargement products range in price from about $30 to over $1000. But are you really getting what you pay for?

A product called Longitude proposes that men ingest two capsules per day and just wait. After one to three weeks, you are supposed to increase the thickness of your penis. During weeks four through eight, the user should expect to gain thickness in the erect and flaccid state. Week nine, it is promised that you will be both thicker and longer. There is a supposed 30-day money back guarantee if you are unsatisfied with the product. One of the marketing schemes that Longitude uses is the fact that all of its ingredients are natural and completely safe. The ingredients are as follows: Zinc, 300 Yohimbe, Maca, Catuaba, Muira Puama, Oyster Meat, L-Arginine, Oat Straw, Nettle Leaf, Cayenne, Pumpkin Seed, Sarsaparilla, Orchic Substance, Licorice Root, Astragalus, Tribulus, Boron, and Ginseng.

After reviewing all of the literature on Longitude's ingredients, one conclusion could be made: There is no substantial evidence that suggests this product actually works. The majority of studies done on each of the ingredients, excluding zinc, arginine, and ginseng, have been conducted on laboratory animals, particularly rats. In addition, only one or two studies were related to sexual function. It appears that Longitude may work by stimulating erection, not growth. One way to offset this is to claim exactly what the product says it does: increase penis size 1", 2", even 3". Your penis will most likely increase to that size from the flaccid state. This is a clever way to market the product because the company is not lying to the consumer, only misleading them. Considering that the product takes at least 60 days to exert its full effects, the 30-day money back guarantee doesn't even apply here. Plus, the fact that you are going to be monitoring your penis size more may lead you to actually see results that are not even there.

Another product marketed to consumers is the Dr. Joel Kaplan vacuum system. The advertisement suggests that it has been FDA approved for penis enlargement. Don't be fooled. The FDA approval is only for its use as an aid to cure erectile dysfunction (not being able to get an erection). This claim has misled consumers thinking that it is proven to increase penis growth. You may experience short-term growth because you are sucking more blood into the penis. However, this may be a risky thing to do.

As of now, the only guaranteed way to increase the size of your penis is through cosmetic surgery, followed by stretching exercises. The downside to this is the risk of damage to the nerves surrounding the area resulting in loss of erectile function, or even worse, an oddly shaped penis. The surgery is quite costly, and is still considered in the experimental stage.

Good research has not been conducted in the area of penis enlargement techniques. As of now, there are no supplements that one can take to actually increase penis growth per se. Viagra is available for men who lack the ability to achieve and sustain an erection. Most supplements marketed as penis enlargement enhancers use the same principle. The only difference is that they use herbal extracts that have been used in Third World countries for the same thing. The results are not as significant and may pose a threat to health, given the lack of FDA regulation. Aphrodisiacs and stimulants are added to supplements in hopes of increasing libido and producing a harder and firmer erection.

Although some products on the market may show short-term benefits in regards to penis enlargement, there is no quick fix to the problem that many men encounter everyday. Research has shown that the average penis size in the flaccid state is 3.9 inches. Erect state averages between five and seven inches. One of the concerns that men have is that the size of their penis in the flaccid state is too small. Showering with other men in the locker room can lead to embarrassment and the feeling of inadequacy.

One of the main reasons why companies selling these devices are not shut down is because of the sensitivity of the issue. They understand that someone is not going to argue that they were "ripped off." This would lead to media attention, and hence the stigmatism of trying to enhance their penis size. The Federal Trade Commission would be the first place to go if you were to submit a complaint. As of now, no complaints have been filed.

Advertisment of penis enlargement devices will continue to plague the American market. What you must be aware of is the fact that nothing, besides surgery, will permanently increase the size of your penis. Surgery has many dangers associated with it, and the risks far exceed the benefits. Despite what people say, most likely the size of your penis is adequate for your partner. Don't waste your money, or risk injuring yourself for something of this magnitude. Be Healthy!

Christopher Theberge is a Collegian correspondent.

Rainy days

With drought warnings still in place, rain has been a constant presence during the past few days.

■ SCERA

continued from page 1

dents to keep up with information on the state budget as it comes out. In addition to following it in the news, students have the option to look at the Save UMass website, www.saveumass.org, which is updated as developments on the budget crisis come up. The SCERA office will also have people available to answer questions at 545-0355.

Above all, SCERA is putting out a plea to UMass students. "Please keep up the effort, we want a UMass to come back to," Mulcahy said. "Make your legislators work for you."

With last week's 134-24 vote in the statehouse to raise taxes, the budget crisis has eased somewhat. An additional $1.06 billion is now available to the Commonwealth and its programs. Unfortunately, there still is another one million dollar shortfall.

"We've got more than $2 billion in requests, and we've restored a billion," House Ways and Means Committee Chairman John H. Rogers (D-Norwood) told the Boston Globe. "We're still going to have to say no to members, to the tune of a billion dollars, simply because the money is just not there."

www.dailycollegian.com

Life moves you in many directions.

Take AT&T along with you ...
and arrive with up to 4 hours of calling on us!

It's time to plan your next move—who you'll room with, what classes you'll take ... how you'll stay in touch with all your friends. Ask for AT&T when you sign up for phone service and then add the AT&T College Plan.

Here's what you get with the AT&T College Plan:
• All direct-dialed domestic calls are just 7¢ a minute, all the time, including state-to-state, in-state long distance, and local toll calls' — all for a low monthly fee" of $3.95
• Up to 4 hours of calling on us — just for signing up
- 2 hours off your AT&T Long Distance bills: up to 30 minutes a month for four months'
- PLUS a 2 hour prepaid AT&T Phone Card: with up to 120 minutes of domestic calling''

call 1877-COLLEGE x18734
click att.com/college/4hours

AT&T

'Customers must have or select AT&T as their local toll carrier to receive 7¢ rate on local toll calls. ''$1.5% Universal Connectivity Charge applies. In-state connection fee applies to subscribers in certain states. State charges may also apply. For more details about these charges or to learn if in-state connection fee applies in your state, call 1 800 333 5236. You must be an AT&T Residential Long Distance Subscriber to receive the AT&T College Plan rates, subject to billing availability. Enrollment expires 12/31/02. 30 free minutes of domestic direct-dialed long distance and local toll calls will be credited each month against qualifying usage on their bill for the first full 4 months of service after all discounts and credits are applied. Unused minutes cannot be carried over. Qualifying calls do not include conference calls, AT&T Calling Card, Directory Assistance, Operator-Handled calls, 700 or 900 number services, or mobile, marine, or cellular services. In addition, monthly recurring charges, non-recurring charges, and taxes are also excluded. 30 free minutes offer expires 12/31/02. "A surcharge of 2 U.S. minutes applies to calls made from pay phones. Minutes are based on domestic calling. International rates vary and are subject to change. Cards are not returnable or exchangeable unless defective. Safeguard your AT&T Phone Card and PIN. You will be responsible for loss, theft or unauthorized use. Services provided by AT&T Corp., service in AK provided by AT&T Alascom. For AT&T Phone Card rates and surcharges, call Customer Service 24 hours a day, 7 days a week at 1 800 361 4470.
© 2002 AT&T. All Rights Reserved.

North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd. North Amherst, MA
www.northamherstmotors.com
549-RENT
OOPS!

POTTERS
AUTO & TRUCK RENTALS
• Cars • Mini Vans
• Trucks • SUV's
• Cargo Vans
• 15 Passenger Vans
• Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older
• Direct Billing To Insurance Co
• MHEC Rates
(On bus route)

What are you going to wear for the post graduation parties, once the gown comes off???

If you're having a fashion emergency then stop into Taylor Men on Main Street in Northampton. During the month of May show a valid student I.D. or this Ad and receive 20% off your entire purchase. Hurry in for the best solution.

FEATURING:
Ken Cole
4 YOU
BC Ethic
Lucky Brand & more...

Taylor Men
150 Main St.
Thornes Marketplace
2nd floor
Northampton, MA 01060
(413)585-0130

000 FOR A YEAR.
"UNBELIEVABLE BUT TRUE!"
0 DOWN 0 INTEREST 0 PAYMENTS FOR AN ENTIRE YEAR*
ZERO PAYMENTS FOR AN ENTIRE YEAR ON NEW 2001 AND 2002 MITSUBISHIS*
AREA'S EXCLUSIVE MITSUBISHI DEALER WILL NOT BE UNDERSOLD!
New! 2002 Galant — 1.9% for 60 months — $55* A week
New! 2002 Eclipse — 1.9% for 60 months — $56* A week
New 2002 Lancer ES — $55* A week
New 2002 Diamante — $75* A week
Montero Sport 4x4 New 2002 — 0.0% for 36 Months, 0.9% for 48 Months, 1.9% for 60 Months
New 2002 Montero XLS — 0.0% for 36 Months, 0.9% for 48 Months, 1.9% for 60 Months
2001 GALANT ES $12,995
2001 MIRAGE $9,995
2001 DIAMANTE $19,995
HOUSER MITSUBISHI
841 East Columbus Ave. Springfield, MA (413) 733-3175
OPEN SUNDAY 12-4
Just Minutes From Everywhere
CARFAX
Visit our web site - www.mitsubishicars.com - family owned & operated since 1927

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ED/OP EDITOR: MATTHEW DESPRES

Looking beyond UMass

Budget tight statewide

While nobody is going to deny that UMass and its faculty, staff, and students have taken huge hits this year thanks to the budget crunch, perhaps we should look beyond our University to see who else in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts is struggling.

The House Ways and Means Committee has voted to cut $25 million in funding for methadone clinics in Massachusetts, clinics used to wean heroin users off of the drug. At the same time, heroin use in Boston has doubled during the past six years.

That's a bad trend, and eliminating help programs like methadone clinics will be a detriment to the fight against drugs in Massachusetts. "The shift to heroin in recent years has been dramatic," said James O'Connell, president of Healthcare for the Homeless. "It's the worst it's ever been. It's a huge problem and methadone is the most effective way to treat it."

Lawmakers in favor of cutting the methadone clinics' funding argue that there are other ways to fight heroin use. "It's not that I don't feel for these people," State Representative Cheryl Rivers of Springfield said. "But there are programs that are drug-free that work and that work better than just giving people another drug."

But is there? And even if there is, don't methadone clinics have a place in the struggle against heroin anyway? "When these people want these drugs, they're going to get it – the addiction is that great," Lt. Frank Armstrong of the Boston Police Drug Control Division said. "What is the better good: the hundreds go to methadone clinics or that they're about town scurrying for more drugs?"

And this is where the same old issue pops up. There isn't enough money to go around. So what does get cut?

UMass as a community has wailed about the impending budget cuts since day one. It's a reasonable reaction, considering the amount of money the University stands to lose and the amount of lives that budget cuts could impact here on campus.

But we're not the only ones. While we can and should be concerned with our academic futures here at the UMass, we need to remember that the budget is going to be cut statewide and that nearly every major program stands to take some kind of hit.

It won't always be pretty. It's easy to put University childcare and other such examples up as poster-children for our state budget cuts, but we need to remember that the budget cuts are just that – they're STATE budget cuts. The potential cut of a methadone clinic effects the lives of Massachusetts residents just as much as the cut of some of our programs affect us. We're all taking our hits.

This doesn't make it any easier to swallow when our own lives change thanks to a lack of funding, though. It shouldn't. There's no reason we shouldn't continue to push our legislators and remind them that UMass needs funding. It's in our best interests to.

But we need to have some understanding when we don't get all that we ask for. Budget crunches affect us all, and all parties involved in the end will sacrifice something.

Information from the Hampshire Gazette was used in this editorial.

Staff editorials represent the majority opinion of The Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian

Get out of my way

I'm no Mike Messaros.

This is the fact of my college journalism career.

Allow me to explain.

Messaros was a senior columnist for the Collegian when I was a freshman. He was astounding. His words were loose, playful, full of punch. He could write 800 words about a car getting towed from the porn shop's parking lot and it could be read over and over again, never getting old. His writing was the shit. I only vaguely knew him as a person – a couple of brushes at the Collegian office, a few pleasantries at parties – but he was my column-writing idol. And I was never as good as he was.

I knew it, too. I knew it all along. Because I was good. I think I even had a few flashes of brilliance in my time here, spread out over the four years. It was because I was good that I couldn't forget that I wasn't great. People would compliment me – professors before class, random drunk girls in bars (love you, sweeties), other students in my journalism classes, and I would appreciate it, bask in the praise. But I could never forget that it was all a sham. So what if I was the best columnist now. If Mike Messaros was still in college, he'd be getting the praise and I'd be a number two, and I knew it. No matter how good I was, there was always that someone better.

And so, this is my wisdom for the students of UMass that I leave behind: None of you are Mike Messaros. No matter how cool you are, no matter how smart you are, no matter how much you can lift, no matter how punk you are, no matter how long your dong is, there will always be someone cooler, smarter, stronger, harder-core and better-hung than you. Always.

And it doesn't matter. Not being the best doesn't mean you can't kick ass all over the world. Live up to the full of your potential. It's OK. Rock out with your cock out. Someone's gotta do it, after all. Just don't forget the humility. If you're the best English student at UMass, that's cool. Congratulations. There's probably a better one at Amherst College.

As for me? Well, I've got a double-major degree in journalism and history, a high GPA, excellent internship and college media experience and the extreme willingness to work. So I'm sticking with my job at the mall toy store.

I'm having them transfer me to California. Why? Because I'm sick to frickin death of Massachusetts. My life story already reads born in Quincy, grew up in Plymouth, went to college in Amherst. Do I really want to add "lived in Abington until he died?" Or Conway, Great Barrington, Barnstable, Carver, Hamilton, Dedham or any other of the dead-end deathtraps of Massachusetts?

Hell no. I was raised a South Shore hick who would leave Plymouth County maybe three times in a year – for vacation in New Hampshire, maybe the circus at the Garden and to visit a relative in Ashland – but I have no desire to finish my life that way. That's what the rest of my family did. Black sheep as always, I suppose.

So I'm hooking up a toy store job in Sacramento and once my lease runs out in August, I'm going to throw my crap in the back of the Corolla and head out. Once I get there and I'm settled I'll try to get a newspaper job – I really am a very qualified and competent reporter – and see what happens.

I figure that if I'm miserable and I hate it, I can always come back. New England is always going to be here. It's a rock. However, it's better to go, hate it and come back than it is to never leave and have to live with the what-ifs for the rest of my days.

So that's it. Saying goodbye to the place where I've lived for my entire life and all the people that I care about to go to a place I've never been and where I don't know a soul so I can maybe get a job.

It's so goddamn exciting.

It's true that I'm not Mike Messaros. And I never will be. I do have something else going for me, though.

I'm Rob Schulze. If I'm not great, I'm damn good.

So screw you. And get out of my way.

Rob Schulze was a Collegian Columnist.

Julie says goodbye

JULIE BURRELL

Ah, it's that time of year again, when the Collegian dissolves into the kind of solipsistic rants that I'm about to go on. So to conserve room, I'll just launch into nonsensical shout-outs and arcane references.

Well, I did my best not to graduate on time, but here I am, graduation impending. Dum, dum, dum...

Mikey D. – you're my main Arts editor and one of my most favorite people. And one of the funniest I've ever met.

Shauna B. – even though I'm Mike's main assistant, I still wish I could write as well as you. Keep up the sass.

To the new Arts staff – good luck. Though I'll probably miss it, I don't envy you a bit. Best wishes.

Oh Ken, just because I like good wine, opera and an occasional polo match doesn't mean I'm a snob. And if you do nothing else, keep being old-timey.

3K – Most Spartan apartment ever. But the towels are an interior designer's dream. Mitchum, I swear, I really like Iron Maiden. You rock that plaid, Kurt, we can't agree on much...or anything. Hey, it's off Broadway.

Conan – nine years I've been nothing but faithful to you. And you repay me by getting married to another woman?

Valley – for the love of Christ, stop taking yourselves so damn seriously.

I can't believe I missed the Belle and Sebastian show. Aw, man.

Rau's – the joy you've brought me these past years is incomparable. We only have a few months left together, and I plan to spend every last cent I should be saving on your sweet, sweet coffee.

Hey, Theatre Guild – First off, you're in America, we spell it theatER. Secondly, get over it, I'm graduating.

Totes, lates, probs. I think y'all know what I'm talking about.

Blackie, Stripey – I wish you guys could read.

English majors, get over yourselves, you ain't that smart.

Stewbs, baby, darlin', I love you.

Sam – even though I thought you were a huge jerk when I first met you, I've never had as much fun fighting with anyone. What can I say here, really? You're an incredible writer. And you've made it worth saying here. I'll miss editing you.

Former 7th floor folks – you're the first and best friends I made here. Thank you. Amanda, don't worry, we'll be friends 4eva, and I'll even write that with permanent purple marker on my Trapper Keeper. You will be part of my very best memories. Em, that goes for you too. Some of the best times I've ever had were hanging out with you on the balcony.

The Girlz – what else can I do but invoke the words of Jay-Z? – I love [the] girlz, girlz, girlz, girlz. And to my oldest girlzfriends: Lyzz, hey hey what can I say? I'm glad we reunited. Joj, you are my favorite English classmate ever and absolutely the coolest person I met in college. The corresponding Boyz – you guys are the best.

"I wish I had a fitting quote to insert here." – Julie Burrell

Julie Burrell is a soon-to-be-unemployed Collegian staff member.

The Pizz Monster says peace

Good lord, I'm going to graduate. I always knew I was going to graduate, but I just can't believe that in a little over a week, I'll be standing out in the center of McGuirk Stadium, with the hundreds of other Communication majors and the thousands of other students during the 152 commencement services. And as my parents and I sit under the hot sun (or pouring rain) and listen to commencement speaker Kenneth Feinberg talk about our future after UMass, I know that I'm going to become reminiscent of the past four years here at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.

I can't help but think about how much my time at UMass has changed me. I poke a lot of fun at UMass, and in total honesty, have been aggravated at the way this university is run. But administration aside, I've grown since my arrival in the fall of 1998, and I like to think for the better.

UMass has become part of my personality. The people, the attitude, the essence has been knitted with me, and that is something that I'll never outgrow or escape. I wouldn't be who I am now without UMass, and especially without the people who have made UMass important to me. Chances are that if you knew me and I called you friend, you influenced me. You changed me. You inspired me.

NICK PIZZOLATO

When I moved to 710 Webster in mid-September from the small town of Wareham, Mass., it's pretty much safe to say I was out of my element. I sat on my bed that first night, wondering what I had done. I had no television, my computer had no speakers, and I hadn't yet been introduced to Instant Messenger, so I as there alone and scared. I already wanted to go home. What was I doing here? I wasn't ready for college. I was barely out of high school. How would I survive on my own, at this city of a college? However, the next day that all changed.

I met Matt, who turned out to be the first in a long list of friends that not only made my life at UMass enjoyable but also memorable. After him came Tim, Chris, J.T., Jen, Kristen, Abbey, Steve, Dave, Kate, Rob and Keith. These people freshman year introduced me to UMass, the UMass that I would call home. And they were the reason that I looked forward to waking up every morning.

With Matt, Tim, Dave, and Steve, I played hours of N64's "Goldeneye." Rob and Keith showered me with different types of hip-hop and rap to the point where I was going out to buy Dre and Snoop's first album. We all cheered together as Mark McGwire hit home run number 70. The next year, the Sox beat the Indians to go to the ALCS and I ran out into the bowl on more than one occasion to join the ruckus that expanded from Orchard Hill. We watched Matt's St. Louis Rams defeat the Titans, in what was at the time the best Superbowl ever, as we were sold on the idea of getting Pizza Hut's Big New Yorker Pizza because Spike Lee told us to. And the next year we endured four hours of pre-game just to see Lee Cube perform. Yes, I'd like to forget that Tequila Night ever happened, but that first year was nothing but good, allowing me to crack the shell that small town life had given me.

The next year, not only did we still have the core group, but added Margaret and Erin, who when combined with Elizabeth and Chris formed the giggle girls, a troupe that is still together today, stronger than ever. I met Dan, Jack and Matt, three guys that gave me if nothing else stimulating conversation for the next three years. And Nason, you rock, you woman of the night. I also joined the ski club. For what reason I'm not sure, but I've never regretted that decision. Three years, and I never skied. I will miss everything about the club, the people, the events, and the ski sale. Laura, Jack, Joe, Jorge Cortez, Karrissa, Aaron, and Bryan: you all are great people and I won't forget you.

And then came probably the most important thing to happen to me while at UMass. I worked up the courage to walk through the business office and into the newsroom and ask to write for Arts. That first fall semester I wrote my first column, and I loved it. I loved everything from thinking about what to write, to writing it, to reading it in the paper. And if anything, The Collegian has made me into a better writer, thinker, and person. All of you guys were there for me whenever I needed you, especially on September 11. I'm proud to be a Collegian staff member, and honored that I could be one.

Ryan, you got me hooked, so hooked that I never left. Thanks for the inspiration, the encouragement, and the opportunities that you offered me. Mike, thanks for the energetic "Hey Buddy" when I ever I walked over to the Arts corner. Shauna, thanks for always reminding me of my nickname when entering the room. Despres, the Pizz thinks you're awesome, despite your questionable heritage. Your love of L2 makes up for your love of maple leaves. You've got a great mind and sense of humor. Le spidre du garcon. The monster is happy. Scott, the youngest Dylan aficionado I've ever known, but it works for you. Sam, you're the type of Ed/Op writer I wanted to be. Ken, Kurt, and Jim, for the last time we all know I'm a mark, but thanks for reminding me. I'm buying DJ Suds' first release whenever it comes out, and I still won't be worthy. Collegian Sports, if I hadn't attached myself to Arts, I'd be there. I've already taken your catch phrases like "Yo" and "Yeah (insert word here)." Sacco, the reason why Staten Island is cool. I can only hope I'll be on some All-Brady Team at some point.

Guys, you made my four years enjoyable and memorable. All of you made me who I am. Thank you. Thank you so very much.

Nick Pizzolato was a Collegian staff member and loved every minute of it.

It's about time

DAN KRECHMER

As I write my second and last article for The Collegian, I can't help but want to try and impart all that I have learned from my years here unto those who remain. I would love to share my knowledge on what bars to go to, where to live off-campus, what classes not to take, and how to try and make the most out of what you got. The college experience for me has altered my original self so dramatically that I am a completely different and better person now graduating.

The things that I have gone through here with my friends, classes, parties, etc., ultimately have defined whom I am because of how I react. I then become somebody in response to the world around me.

I think the biggest part of college is the people you know and the experiences you share. The most fun I have is when I'm hanging out with my boys, beer in hand and laughing at our own stupidity. As I look back, I want to try and remember the best things that have happened to me, and say that I have no regrets. I did the best I could with what was handed to me. I guess what I'm trying to say is that this has been the best time of my life, especially the past couple of years, and it's important to hold on to that. I know there are same that may not share the same view as me, but I'd hope that most of us graduates come out of here having much more good than bad things to tell about. I say this with the sense that it is also up to me, to you, or whomever, to take away the most that you can. College is what you make of it.

It is an environment like none other. We exist in this subculture of almost no responsibility, and very little idea of what real life is like. It's an experience we all go through and have to cherish for the rest of our lives. I may be a little melodramatic here, but I am trying to get my point across. The friends you make in college and the lives that you share mold who you are. I have become a better person because of who I know and what I've done and not done, and I've learned some real valuable lessons. For me to bring a sense of closure, I'm going have to do the standard thing in most senior articles (exactly what you'd expect, Troy) and give some shout outs to the people that have had an impact on my life.

Mr. Camelmuts, this is the second time we've roomed together and you still have yet to disappoint. You know everything there is to know, and I think if we didn't have your wisdom, we would be worse off. You take the cracks like a true champ, because you know it's well deserved, especially since the birthday incident. Ghetto flava, yeah C, I'm talking to you. Seriously, where would your ass be right now if it wasn't part of the big 1-8 TH. I think we've had F. nuff of that body, so roll out. I had gone in for an appointment the other day, and the doctor said I needed a backiotomy. Gentlemen, seriously, good job and making this apartment work out very well.

How bout the red headed chick and the tall broad? And that insane girl? I think we pretty much proved our point in that scenario. Ladies, please, we'd like out futon back in normal working condition....Sarah, I don't care if you had to pull splinters out of your teeth, fix that sh. Caitlin, really... don't ever change, and I'm still waiting for the culmination of this war. Troy, you and the SHF seemed to cap off this semester quite well. It was a dirty, dirty job, but somebody had to do it. And how bout I mention HFC. I mean seriously, we're definitely HFC's most valuable customers, and I'd like to give us some commendation on the level of commitment we've shown. I'm rather impressed, and I think we did a very good job, and I thank you because you helped me out more than you can imagine. J, I don't think I would have visited the Gras as many times as I do if you weren't around and I'm sure N.C. is gonna treat us three quite nicely in the following months. M. Hill, you're a fun little bottle rocket, always looking to wow us with some philosophical wisdom.

The lovely ladies of 58 are staples in the THs. Jill and Melissa, you girls are fantastic and can surely out-drink and outlast anyone I know. It has been my pleasure to play beer pong and borrow anything and everything from you. Oh, and to those intimidators in 25 TH: you guys just hang tight. Keep sitting on your porch, smokin' your butts, and writing anonymous letters.

Allyssa and Alyssa, I've known you guys for way too many years. You guys are my little buddies. Allyssa, I'm impressed with you being there when a lot of other people would have given up a long time ago.

Missy, you're crazy and you know it. That's why I love ya. Ever since the Coke can, I'll never get on your bad side again (not intentionally, that is.)

Thomas, what can I say. We've seen hell and high water and yet we still come out on top. You're probably the most random kid I know, but that's what you live for and you make the best out of every situation. You're a great friend to have and I'm glad to see we have matured and become the people we are today.

Farkas, what should I say... "I KNOW!!!" I enjoy the extremeness and I think I'll keep it round for a while. And your partner in crime, Stanley, that kid's a destructive menace. You need to keep his hands tied at all times and only talk to him if there's a sport involved. Please, please, Jeff, next time keep the bathroom clean.

Megan, you helped me grow and learn about myself and the people around me. I am glad we're able to maintain a normal friendship even though now you've moved onto bigger and better things. When you own the world later on in life, just keep me in mind.

Denise, you've been my friend. For what reason, I'm not sure. Ever since Lauryn Hill, I think you've had some magnetic attraction to me, and you can't get away, no matter how hard I try. I guess you're the smartest girl I know, and someday, eventually I'll be able to measure up.

Blee, I've known you since high school. Yet to this day, we are still the same two jackasses that rifle stupidity back and forth to one another. Not to mention your cohorts, Jimbo, I don't know where to begin with you, and Darryl, who always helped me appreciate the smaller things in life when I rolled over to the sandlot.

Chadwick, I don't have any clue what to write. You're an enigma, I don't know what force is keeping us in communication, oh wait...I know it's more of the organic kind. But I digress, you were my hallmate, then my roommate, and always a pain in the ass. But you couldn't really pull a Chad if you weren't such the hassle. All I need you to do is read a book, you illiterate son of a bitch, and step up your vocab. Eventually you will have as many as four people working directly underneath you.

As I part, I can't forget to mention The Collegian. I've worked here for four years now, and it has been the best job I've had. The best of the best work down here, and one would be lucky to try and snag a job. You all have really made college that much better, and I sincerely would like to thank you guys. I think college is made up of a chain of experiences all tied to one another. Cancun for spring break is insane. Go with your boys and bug out. When the Minutemen play at Mohegan Sun, take a ride up with 12 of your closest friends and represent ZooMass like it's your business. Enjoy the spring weekends, get your homework done early or not at all, have keg races, and drink yourself to oblivion. And by all means, go up to McMurphy's on Wednesday nights. The bartenders are great, and the free live music in unbeatable. Have a few drinks and sing your heart out – keep the weekly "hey song" a tradition. Not to be cliché, but as the DMB puts it so eloquently... life is short but sweet for certain. So go do something that you're afraid of and enjoy yourself. I'm out. Peace.

Dan Krechmer was a Collegian staff member.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 5.14.02 ARTS EDITOR: MIKE DELANO

Sassy one signs off

ASK ELENA

I love talking to myself and I do it pretty regularly. In fact, I never get lonely on road trips because I'm a great conversationalist even when I have to ask the questions and provide the answers. Hey, sometimes you have to be your own best friend! On that note, for my last edition of "Ask Elena" I have chosen to ask myself one lighthearted yet serious question, "What people and moments (in no particular order) have made my senior year??"

Moving to Southwest – After three years of chugging Mountain Dew like the Commonwealth College kid that I am (that one is for you, Wilkinson), it was time to try my hand at a new area and a new job. Working as a CDA (Community Development Assistant or Super RA) rocked and challenged my world! Thanks to the Patt/Mack staff, all the CDAs, my two awesome advisors Kathy and Lisa, Patt/Mack House Council and all the Community Leaders and Assistants! And to Web/Dick: I missed you this year! Thanks to Timmy, especially, I would still be a lost little puppy trying to do room inventories without you!

The Duchess and The Temptress (a.k.a. Shauna and Tehani) – Where do I begin? You two sassy ladies are both absolutely amazing! We've experienced so much together: Wed. night McMurphy's, the Bahamas, frappacinos, driving in the Malibu, Sit Down Diner, shaking it to booty music, The Players, Terry, McCrae...can I have another ten million lines, please? I may just need that many to explain just how much you both mean to me. Not to sound sappy but sometimes I sit back and marvel at how lucky I am to have found two friends that understand me the way that you do! You guys are so stellar! Watch out Beantown, because we will be causing a ruckus in our apartment September 2002! P.S. Your hair's like Waow!

The Monarch Mark – You truly are the king! Thanks for listening to me whine and for helping out with the very first edition of this column. I'll never forget our Pokemon adventures at Fire and Water, Mount Pollux or driving to the beach (how did we end up at Yale again?) Don't ever change or ever think that you will get rid of me even when you do move to California and trade in the Acura for a Jag!

Ryan "Benny" – God knows you gave me some sweet shout outs last year, so it's about time I mentioned you! You are one of the most talented and genuine people that I have ever met! Thank you so much for everything from being my co-RA last year to this year helping me through some tough times via our numerous phone conversations. Sometimes just hearing your voice made my world a much friendlier place. Don't forget me when you marry Nelly Furtado and replace Robin as the new drummer of Bush. No matter where life takes me, I can count on the fact that we

Turn to ADIOS ELENA, page 6

Just in case you didn't feel like showing up

By Kevin Monahan
COLLEGIAN STAFF

APOPTYGMA BERZERK
ManRay Nightclub
May 12

CAMBRIDGE – The celebration of synthpop taking place at ManRay on Sunday demonstrated that electronic music has something to offer besides the repetitive "thump-thump-thump" beats and computer generated noise. When combined with catchy lyrics and a personality to go with the performance, electronica assists in taking the new wave pop formula developed in the 80s to the next logical step.

Project Sphere began the show with an almost mellow, swirly, gothy set that did not seem fitting to the "Summer Synthpop Invasion" as the event was billed. The electronic element to their music was downplayed thanks to the presence of a live rhythm section. However, their atmospheric quality served as a good warm-up to the higher energy acts that were to follow.

If there was any act that stuck out like a sore thumb, it had to be Freezepop. Their brightly colored stage presence and bubble-gum pop was welcomed with a mixed reception from the predominantly black-attired crowd. A few of the "hardcore goths" (who, if truly hardcore, would not be seen at an event billed as a "synthpop invasion") retreated to the other dance floor to do impressions of trees. Freezepop's set was slightly disappointing due to the fact that they were missing a member (the Other Sean), thereby limiting their repertoire of songs to some of their more lackluster material ("T.D.I." "Summer Boy"). Still, Liz Enthusiasm and the Duke did the best they could with what they had, and their lack of pretense was quite refreshing. But for those who had seen the band before, it was obvious that it was not at the top of its form, and it served as a poor introduction for those who haven't.

Computergirl performed an extremely short set, consisting of ambient, trance-type techno. Computergirl, the project of Benedicte Sveinsson, marked the introduction of the Europeans (like Apop, Computergirl hails from Norway), and it was an introduction that was over far too soon. Although I liked what I heard, I didn't quite hear enough of it to form a solid opinion.

Beborn Beton was next, theatricality laid on thickly. Their heavy accents declared, "Ve are Beborn Beton from Germany." (Yeah, no kidding!) Costume and make-up was a key element of front-man Stefan Netschio's expressionistic/futuristic appearance, and his highly dramatic vocal performance took one's mind off the fact that the "band" is a just couple guys with pre-programmed synths. Their songs, such as "Poison," are brilliant examples of the wonder of pop structure. The aggressive delivery, heavy on the beats per minute, kept the crowd moving throughout. Beborn Beton was one of the most pleasant surprises of the evening.

Of all the bands performing, Apoptygma Berzerk present the closest thing to organic music that synthpop can offer. Live drums and a guitar joined the synthesizer onstage, and their presence was more than welcome after over an hour of electronic percussion (Project Sphere was the only other band to use acoustic drums). The dreadlocked guitarist riled up the crowd by teaching them to clap like trained seals as vocalist Stephan Groth took stage. Groth is Apoptygma Berzerk in much the same way that Trent Reznor is Nine Inch Nails. The musicians onstage were there to turn the one-man band into a more entertaining stage show. APB's earlier work tended to be more aggressive, goth/industrial influenced EBM, which is a hard thing to shake off, hence the gloomy-looking crowd. Groth did not shy away from this during an interview before the show. "That's the scene that I come from, that I grew up in. Apop were never goth at all in my ears, but it all depends on your definition." (Although he will admit the cover of 7 is very goth).

Lately their work has shifted toward a more new-wave inspired trance-y techno pop. However, when performed with a live band, even the later material came across with all the energy of their early self. Groth's live vocals on "Kathy's Song" sounded a lot less like Neil Tennant's (of Pet Shop Boys) than they did on the Welcome to Earth album. Groth goes on to talk about the alleged disparity between the early and current versions of Apop. "I've always been doing synth-pop; sometimes more dance-y, sometimes trance-ish and sometimes a bit more rock-ish. I think I've been doing the same thing all the way...I haven't felt the need to do much aggressive music lately. I'm getting older."

Apop's talent lies in crafting catchy, dance floor friendly pop songs, and they delivered them in abundance. "Until The End of the World" and "Eclipse" are prime examples of these. APB also played a good deal of material from their less than spectacular, but still pretty decent release, Harmonizer. Their earlier gothic material kept the audience happy with songs like "Deep Red" (accompanied with projected visuals reminiscent of the Dario Argento film of the same title) and "Love Never Dies" (which, if they heard it, most would recognize as the techno song that samples "O Fortuna"). They played a two-song encore featuring "Non-Stop Violence," a harsh criticism of war and mainstream media's fascination with it, and the bitter early single "Bitch."

Groth commented on the difficulties that a European electronic act faces in the United States. "America has always been the rock-and-roll country. It seems that if an electronic band wants to become popular in America, they've got to have a rock, guitar based element to them. If you look at some of the band that become famous here, like the Chemical Brothers, Prodigy or Nine Inch Nails it's very guitar-based music even though it's electronic. In Europe you can get away with being purely electronic but not in the States."

It's hard to argue that Apop's set was closest to a rock act than any of the other bands performing Sunday night. The rock element gave the band an energy and positive vibe that was lacking in the preceding performances. Even the goths were smiling.

COURTESY OF ANARCHY

Apoptygma Bezerk expands on traditional synth pop structures

COURTESY OF AMG/RCA

Wilco as "it" band of the moment with their latest Yankee Hotel Foxtrot

Rivers' beard not fooling anyone

WEEZER
maladroit
Interscope

Dear Rivers Cuomo,

Saw your photo on the cover of Pulse. Growing a beard, huh?

Funny that you would be – your music is too. Desperate to show that you've matured, that you're beyond longing for Kiss posters in your garage, that you're not the cultural critique of the "(The Sweater Song)." That ooo-eeo-ooo, you're not like Buddy Holly, you've got the beard and your new album, maladroit.

Unfortunately, it's going to take more than the beard and maladroit's distortion to convince me that you're going anywhere.

After all, just because you turn the volume up on your recordings, you're still making geek rock. Just because you fuzz out the guitars that much more, you're still making simple rock songs. And just because you desperately add unnecessary guitar solos to your albums, they're still powerpop albums.

maladroit has its highlights, notably its second and third songs.

"dope nose" and "keep fishin'" are balls-to-the-wall singles, even with the distortion and excessive solos. Same with "possibilities" and "love explosion." Sometimes, it seems like you just can't help yourself, and no matter how much you try to redefine yourself, you're still coming back to "Buddy Holly" and its infectious sound. Unfortunately, when you stray from what you're best at, we get "american gigolo," a tremendously awful opener that starts maladroit off at the worst possible point. "burndt jamb" doesn't improve on the situation, milking your voice for its very worst. On "slave" your attempt to rock out sounds unbelievably overdone.

Shave the beard Rivers, and remember your roots – you're a geek who rocks. Do that well and everybody's happy. Don't, and we'll be happy to move along.

Sincerely, (Sam Wilkinson)

UNCLE TUPELO
89/93: An Anthology
Columbia/Legacy

WILCO
Yankee Hotel Foxtrot
Nonesuch

significant others

Uncle Tupelo has been hailed as the harbingers of alt-country, that most amorphous of terms given to music that seems slower and folkier than most. It is a lazy title and hardly accurate — a few wailing guitar chords stretched does not country make.

Which isn't to say that Tupelo wasn't a fantastic band. It certainly was and on 89/93: An Anthology, there's plenty of evidence. From the folk-rock of "I Got Drunk" (I poured me a shot/ and thought about all the things that I haven't got/ and I drank that down/ and I poured me some more/ kept drinkin' and pourin' til I felt the floor...) to the depressed haunt of "Black Eye," Tupelo's craft was unparalleled. "Moonshiner" sighs harmonicas and simple chords, betraying the song's truest sadness. Is that Neil Young or is it a young Bruce Springsteen or is it the aforementioned alt-country? It was almost as if Jeff Tweedy and Jay Farrar

Turn to OTHERS, page 6

Ciao! from Style File

So, this is it – the last edition of Style File as UMass knows it. It's been an interesting two years. I've tested Water Bras, extolled the wonders of fleece, dissected male fashion and finally taught people how to pronounce haute couture. For the most part, it's been fun. But then of course there are the occasional fashion haters. (No love).

There was that kid at the Honors office that looked me up and down on one of the many days I was sporting a sweatshirt and sneakers and said, "You're Shauna Billings? I expected you to look different." And there were my super fans at Collegeclub.com who said that I was mocking Speedos and thongs just because I'm jealous of those with good bodies who can actually shake it. (Right. Shake away in a Speedo for all I care, just don't do it anywhere near me when I'm trying to eat my lunch.) Forget presidential elections or abortion stances, people really start getting heated up when the local college fashion writer starts raging on cargo pants or platform shoes.

So I've got a few quick things to say.

– The following items should hereby be banned from all summer wardrobes from 1991 on – culottes, skorts and clip-on sunglasses.

– Much love to the UMass German department for having loyal Style File fans.

– Bad idea – Buying that gold leopard print tube top.

– Worse idea – Wearing that tube top, back in the day, to Delta Upsilon.

– Worst idea – Keeping said tube top in my closet because I just might wear it again – you know, someday. Maybe for my Gram's 80th birthday.

– Best fashion invention ever – Flip-flops.

– Did anyone else ever notice that different colleges have different styles? UMass chicas wear black pants and mid-riff baring tank tops on the weekends. Providence College ladies wear rugby shirts and jeans. Down on Spring Break there was a contingent of girls wearing sweatpants at the clubs. Is it too late to transfer?

– For anyone who ever wondered how the hell I'm qualified to write this column, it's simple. I was the only one who ever went down to the Collegian to write fashion. So shut it.

Yes, the rumors that I went through a period of time in high school when I only wore plaid ball gown skirts, hippie shirts, holiday-themed socks and clogs are true. Yes, I still had friends.

– Best jewelry EVER – "The Guy" in the Campus Center. My last paycheck is going all to him.

– Perms. Bad idea. Possibly even a worse idea than the tube top.

– Could somebody just make 80s fashions go away forever? It would be a huge service to the world. It could even cause world hunger to go away.

– The IN look for this May is every-zing black. Gucci's showing mortarboard caps and tassels, and Cynthia Rowley's models are strutting that "I'm-in-a-fabric-coated-paper-graduation-gown-and-damn-I-look-hot" style. Congratulations seniors!!!!

Goodbye UMass! Thanks for reading. And I swear to God, if I come back next year to visit and y'all are wearing culottes and clip-on sunglasses, heads will roll.

Shauna Billings was a Collegian columnist and is a fashion diva.

Adios Elena

continued from page 5

will always be friends! Thanks so much for everything!

Adam Martignetti "Some other Romeo" – Sometimes living in a single gets lonely, so thanks for being one of my weekend roomies (thanks Tehani too)! The futon a.k.a. "little slice of heaven" says you better visit her again in the Boston apartment, May 24th – It should be a blast and we definitely have to pre-game it with a little "Ours" though we won't be dancing alone. Cosmically speaking, you are perfection!

Collegian Crew – Mikey D (an aviation expert)! Someday you and Bjork will live happily ever after! The Strokes, Providence, DMB and 3k. What a trip! Kurt, you are the bomb! Always remember McMurphy, 2pether and "the Marty walk." Muchas gracias to Vogt for feeding me (I owe you dinner), and being the best beat partner ever! Dave Rose, I am buying you a massage parlor. Ken, I love the CD! You are a war hero in my mind! Sports staff: stay cool and always remember my legacy as the last and greatest men's tennis reporter ever.

Ohill Gang – Jen, Jenn, Jacki, Laura, Kyla (you used to live there), Mellisa (Baker is not your real home) and more...I wish I could have spent more time with you all this year! But we've had some great times just the same, especially hockey games and frat parties. I'll be back to visit you youngun's next year so keep in touch even though I'm officially an old lady (just kidding!).

Readers and Questioners – If you are reading this column right now then you have made my first Congrats! Writing this column and reading and answering your questions have been one of the most positive experiences of my college career. I do have a word of warning for the person that takes over as the new "Ann Landers of UMass:" I am just as good at asking questions as I am at answering them. Be prepared!

To all those I wish I could have mentioned – Sorry if I missed you but lines are limited. Who knows how many Collegian columns I would need to recognize all the people that have made me the woman that I am today. Hot damn, that's a lot of paper!

Well that's the conclusion of this massive column that is basically the senior column that I forget to sign up for (oops). In a few short days I will be 22, graduating and ready to take on the world! So good luck to everyone and if you see me anytime in the future, please feel free to ask away. I will always be an advice columnist at heart.

Elena Patsouris was an extremely sassy Collegian columnist.

Nova searching, finding on South

By Jake D. Lewis
COLLEGIAN STAFF

HEATHER NOVA
South
V2

Heather Nova is one of those artists who no one can exactly explain how they've heard of her. Her new album South will hopefully bring Nova into the spotlight where everyone will know her name. The songs are energetic and intelligent, and even though this is her third album, it is the one that will hopefully skyrocket her to big-time stardom.

The first track is appropriately called "Welcome," and has Nova singing in her lower-register with breathy back-up singers and is a mix between an all-out rock song and a techno-pop song. Just like the title indicates, it gets the album off to an agreeable start, making one look forward to whatever else Nova has in store in her world contained on South. She then slows things down with "If I Saw You in the Movies," but loses none of the effervescent cheer and optimism of the previous song. With a pulsating syncopation and changing keys, the song definitely has a sense of urgent sexuality, especially as Nova's voice is distilled like she's speaking through a telephone. The simple musical progression sways like a reggae tune, and continues into the next song "Talk to Me." Pleadingly, Nova sings about a rocky relationship: "Talk to me/ Even though we've been down/ So long." Its simplicity is refreshing: when so many artists are trying to write the most poetic lyrics known to man, Nova gets down to business and speaks the honest truth, which is a perfect match for the straightforward musical structure.

"Heaven Sent" is a song in search of a direction. No matter how many times the refrain is repeated, it doesn't hold firmly. Nonetheless, at the very least, it's not a rip-off of Nova's contemporaries in the female rock world. If anything, the song has a 198's feel to it, with its minor key composition, and this makes the song good enough for the three minutes it plays for.

The debut single "Like Lovers Do" sounds a lot like Nova's hit "Four Leaf Clover" from her previous CD Siren. With a steady drum-beat and electric guitar vamps similar to The Cranberries' "Dream," "Like Lovers Do" has an unusual charm and appeal to it. This song could really kick into high gear if it were sped up. In its current form, it's closer to a dreamy ballad and there are already enough of those on the disc. "I'm No Angel," on the other hand, picks up on this idea and races along at a brisk pace, pulling the listener along for the exciting ride.

An answer to this thought comes in the form of "Virus of the Mind," as Nova speaks for most of the song, only switching to a singsong "do do do" in the hook. Listening to "Virus of the Mind," you can't help but get a smile across your face. Not in a long time has there been a song so cheery and sugary about a rather pessimistic subject. But it's no matter, for as much as the song references Suzanne Vega's "Tom's Diner," Nova's sweet, twangy voice makes the song linger long in your mind.

"When Someone Turns You On" is suitably titled because with South, Nova has given proof that there is still hope for pop-rock nowadays. Not only does her sultry voice lull you into her absorbing melodies, but the tunes themselves are pleasingly refreshing. The final song, however, "Just Been Born," is the closest Nova comes to tapping into the depth hidden in this CD. As a performer, Nova has finally been born into the mainstream with her latest album. Now that she's headed South, it will be interesting to see which direction she goes next, but wherever it is, she will be welcomed.

COURTESY OF SIRE RECORDS

Heather Nova makes a bid for the mainstream with South.

others

continued from page 5

were blissfully cruising their beery Mid-American emotions and gave us albums to prove it.

It didn't last. Peaking on March 16-22, 1992, Tupelo craved new directions, splintering after its one major release Anodyne. Farrar went on to Son Volt, a praised if uneven band that has sputtered in recent years. Tweedy started up with Wilco, lacking a cohesive vision. Wilco has championed two brilliant albums (Mermaid Avenue, Volumes One and Two – both collections of Woody Guthrie songs retooled and performed with Brit songster Billy Bragg) without ever succeeding on personal merit.

Until now, anyway. Yankee Hotel Foxtrot is a brilliant musical adventure: subtlety spiced folk music. David Fricke from Rolling Stone tried his best to ruin the album, all but describing it as a Highway 61 Revisted for the last five years. It isn't – "I Am Trying To Break Your Heart" is mean.

"Radio Cure" is unnerving. "Heavy Metal Drummer" is a folky-pop song.

Tweedy's never sounded better, the lyrics he began to write at the end of his stint with Tupelo shine on their own. Musically, he's driven Wilco into stripped down guitars and simple melodies that are lush compared to his former band's.

Wilco longs for innocence in today's world: older critics want Wilco to take them to their youths. Not quite Tupelo, and never trying to be, Wilco has finally defined itself. Yankee Hotel Foxtrot gives Tweedy's talent a new jump-off point. Instead of trying to build on Tupelo, his new job is building on Hotel. As it should be. (Sam Wilkinson)

Chance Perspective Entertainment Co.
Graduation Parties
Your Parents are Paying...
GET A DJ
HIP-HOP REGGAE R&B
413.883.1144
gemini Numark DYLE PRO

UMass Student Legal Services Office
CALL TODAY
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students
545-1995

ACTIVISTS NEEDED TODAY!
SEATTLE, WA
• FREE lodging
• FREE local transportation
• Collect signatures for state healthcare initiative
CALL NOW! (425) 783-0270

CINEMARK
The Best Seat in Town
CINEMARK AT HAMPSHIRE MALL
367 Russell St. 413-587-4233
Schedule for Friday 5/10 - Thursday 5/15
DIGITAL SURROUND SOUND IN ALL AUDITORIUMS
Purchase Tickets Online @ cinemark.com
MR. ACTWPOL (R) 12:20 4:20 7:20 10:30*
THE NEW GUY (PG13) 12:10 4:25 7:40 10:10*
SPIDERMAN (PG13) 12:15 12:45 1:15 4:15 4:45 5:15 7:30 8:00 8:30 10:15 10:35*
DEUCES WILD (R) 12:55 4:25 7:05 9:45*
HOLLYWOOD ENDING (PG13) 12:30 4:30 7:15 10:00*
LIFE OR SOMETHING LIKE IT (PG13) 12:20 4:30 7:35 10:15
MURDER BY NUMBERS (R) 12:15 4:10 7:30 10:20
THE SCORPION KING (PG13) 12:35 4:50 7:45 10:25
CHANGING LANES (R) 12:00 4:05 7:25 9:55
THE ROOKIE (G) 12:25 4:00 7:10 10:05
Senior Movie 5/16/02
HOLLYWOOD ENDING doors open at 11:45am
*NO PASSES-NO SUPERSAVERS
Tickets & showtimes available at cinemark.com

CASH FOR BOOKS
WE PAY TOP DOLLAR
Jeffery Amherst College Store
55 SOUTH PROSPECT ST. AMHERST
253-3870 253-7816

weezer
maladroit
Available at For The Record

apply now for the new, expanded
CRIMINAL JUSTICE PROGRAM
Criminal Justice Concentration
Department of Sociology
Earn a Certificate in Criminal Justice Studies
For students who plan a career in some aspect of the criminal justice system: police officers, probation and parole officers, paralegals, public and private criminal attorneys, district attorneys, judges, etc.
Applications are now being taken for the program. Begins this summer.
Online Courses offered this summer:
SOC 241 Criminology
SOC 345 Juvenile Delinquency
SOC 395A Probation and Parole
SOC 395J Criminal Violence in America
SOC 497C Domestic and Transnational Organized Crime
For more information, and to apply to the program, contact Prof. Anthony Harris, Sociology Department, Thompson 524, 545-0475.
To register for courses, go to www.umass.edu/contined or the Division of Continuing Education Registration Office, 358 N. Pleasant St.
Courses are open to everyone.

Matt Brady's All-Time Team Final thoughts

1.	Cobb	LF
2.	Wagner	SS
3.	Ruth	RF
4.	Mays	CF
5.	Gehrig	1B
6.	Schmidt	3B
7.	Alomar	2B
8.	Cochrane	C
9.	Johnson	P
10.	Mack	Man.

All-time greatest? The Babe.

This is part 11 of a 10-part series portraying the 10 members of "Brady's All-Time Team" – a lineup consisting of the best Major League Baseball players ever.

"The one constant through all the years, Ray, has been baseball. America has rolled by like an army of steamrollers. It's been erased like a blackboard, rebuilt, and erased again. But baseball has marked the time. This field, this game, is a part of our past, Ray. It reminds us of all that once was good, and that could be again." – Terrence Mann, Field of Dreams

As I was standing in Seven-O's last Wednesday I was approached by a college student who I had never seen before.

"What about Ted Williams?" he asked.

"What about him? Best hitter ever," I replied.

"But he's not good enough to make your team?"

That's why I wrote this series – to get the campus talking. I had no idea what kind of impact it would have. I figured that a few people would read the stories and maybe learn a little. And certainly I'd be faced with some people who didn't like my choices – like the guy who thought Wade Boggs belonged as one of my choices at third, the person who didn't "buy" that Mickey Cochrane was a better catcher than Johnny Bench and the former Collegian columnist who wrote in with an all-time team of his own.

It's things like this that remind me why I consider baseball to still be the national pastime. While hockey is my favorite sport, there's just something about baseball that makes it special – the way that history judges players in baseball more than in any other sport. There is no corollary in another sport to a baseball argument like whether Omar Vizquel and Roberto Alomar is the best middle infield in history. Baseball leaves time for discussion – during the game, between games and between season – that just isn't quite present in any other sport.

Baseball is the one sport where people still talk about those who played at the turn of the century. Every other sports league was formed in the middle part of the century – Major League Baseball's structure has been basically the same since 1903. Ty Cobb, baseball's first superstar, preceded the premier superstars of other sports by almost 40 years.

But the thing that makes baseball a sport that spans generations is statistics. We know within a good portion of accuracy what hitter had a better year statistically – Babe Ruth in 1921 or Barry Bonds in 2001. But the differences in eras means that there is no definitive answer to the questions we pose. And therein lie the arguments that this series has spawned – arguments that can never really be solved.

A lot of people have asked what the toughest decisions about the team were. Keeping both Hank Aaron and Ted Williams off the team was incredibly difficult, but with the multitude of talent in the outfield, it was a choice that had to be made. The Jimmie Foxx-Lou Gehrig debate is one that will rage on for years. I still am not convinced of my decision of Cochrane over Bench. I'm pretty sure about Roberto Alomar at second, but many people don't agree.

Who is the best player of all time? Ruth, no question. That should give you baseball fans something to argue about with your friend while watching a baseball game from your easy chair on a sticky evening this summer.

Matt Brady is a Collegian columnist.

SCOTT LEHRICH/COLLEGIAN

Matt Brady, the king of smallball.

Discounted Office Supplies
Campus Design & Copy
Now offering super discounted prices on school and office supplies:
3-Ring Notebooks
Notepads
Spiral Notebooks
File Folders
Other School and Office Supplies
CD&C also offers other services:
5 cent copies
Recycled paper
Several paper colors and textures
Double-sided copies
Transparentcies
Resumes
Campus Design & Copy
403 Student Union
phone: 413.545.2271
fax: 413.545.0210
cdcopy@stuaf.umass.edu
http://www.umass.edu/cdcopy

The Internationally Award-Winning Commencement Ball
Dinner, Dancing and Drinks (positive ID required)
Horse & Carriage Rides
A Night to Remember!
2002
Friday, May 24, 2002
7:00 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. Student Union
To purchase tickets ($35.00 per person):
* Order on-line at www.umassalumni.com
* Call the Alumni Office at 545-2317
* Stop by the STARS table in the Campus Center : May 1-3, 6-10, & 13-14
* Stop by Cap and Gown Distribution the week of May 20th
Commencement Ball is supported by:
UMass Alumni Association, Alumni Relations Office, The Massachusetts Daily Collegian, Student Government Association Programming Board, Campus Activities Office, College of Humanities and Fine Arts, College of Social and Behavioral Sciences, College of Natural Sciences and Mathematics, Auxiliary Services, and Greek Affairs
Don't forget to make your pledge to the Senior Campaign!

Keep Thinking
Think of sun, think of fun, think of earning UMass credits while you work and play -think of doing this while at home!
ONLINE COURSES – UMass Summer Session 2002
June 3 – July 11
COM HL 601 – Principles of Community Health
ENV DES 353 – Landform Fundamentals for Designers
HRTA 100 – Intro to Hotel, Restaurant, & Travel Administration
JOURN 393M – Wired Reporting: Using the World Wide Web as a Journalistic Tool
JOURN 492M – Magazine Writing
MKTG 301 – Fundamentals of Marketing
NURSE 605— Advanced Health Assessment
NURSE 616 – Advanced Pathophysiology and Pharmacological Implications for Children and Youth
PHIL 164 – Medical Ethics (AT)
PUB HL 690R— Legal and Regulatory Basis for Public Health
SOC 241 - Criminology
June 3 – July 26
EDUC 615W – Electricity and Magnetism for Teachers
June 3 – July 28
PSYCH 100 – Elementary Psychology (SB)
SOM 797S— Business Workout Strategies
June 3 – July 31
SOM 630 – Accounting for Decision Making and Reporting II
SOM 640— Financial Analysis and Decisions
SOM 660 – Marketing Management
June 3 – August 9
ACCTG 221 – Introduction to Accounting I
June 3 – August 21
NURSE 312 – Cultural Diversity in Health Studies
NURSE 397A - Writing in Nursing
NURSE 415 – Community Focus in Nursing
NURSE 610 – Primary Health Care: Children, Adolescents, and Young Adults
NURSE 698Q— Practicum: Primary Health Care Problems of Children and Youth
WFCON 597O – Watershed Science and Management
June 10 – July 18
SOC 395J— Criminal Violence in America
July 1-31
SOM 797J
– Business Forecasting
July 1
– September 27
HRTA 150 - Food Production Management
HRTA 250 – Food Service Management
July 10 – August 16
SOC 345 – Gangs and Delinquency
July 15 – August 21
EDUC 692M
– Using Technology to Solve Problems in Schools
ENGL 132 – Man and Woman in Literature (AL D)
MKTG 437— International Marketing
NRC 290P – Plant Sampling and Identification
PUB HL 690A – Research Methods
SOC 395A – Probation and Parole
SOC 497C – Domestic and Transnational Organized Crime
WFCON 564 – Wildlife Habitat Ecology and Management
August 1-16
PSYCH 191F
– Power Up for Student Success
UMass Amherst Summer Session 2002
PLUS, hundreds of on-campus courses
Division of Continuing Education
413-545-0107
contined@admin.umass.edu
www.umass.edu/contined/

DAILY COLLEGIAN

CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ACTIVITIES

World Willfieball Tournament, medium pitch speed, 2-3 person teams $1000 cash for winners. Call for info (603) 425-6168.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Fraternities • Sororities Clubs • Student Groups Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with the easy CampusFundraiser.com three hour fundraising event. Does not involve credit card applications. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact CampusFundraiser.com at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.CampusFundraiser.com.

Bus trip to New York-Commuter area gumt trip is sponsoring another trip. With free tickets to Conan Obrien & the daily show w/Jon Stewart on Thurs. May 16. Tickets for the trip are $5 for commuter undergrads. $20 for others. Sign up in Commuter Services Office 428 Student Union.

Top of the Campus, Incorporated (TOC, Inc.) will hold it's Annual Meeting in Campus Center 917, Wednesday, May 22, 2002 at 2:00 p.m.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Want to sublet your apartment? List it for free with Commuter Services, 428 Student Union. 545-0865. You can also list it on line @ [illegible]

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 Bedroom apt. avail. In Amherst Center! Lease starts June but negotiable for summer rent. Great location, hardwood floors, spacious. Call Kate 256-4517 or Lincoln real estate 253-7879 ASAP.

Brandywine Apts. - Now Available: 1&2 bedroom apts. Leases begin June, July, Aug or Sept. 1 year lease. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywine-apts.com stop by or call (413) 549-0600.

1 Bedroom apt. close to Amherst Center and campus. Take over lease June 1st. Fall option. Call 253-1180.

Save $500 Off. Move-In Costs. Deluxe 2 bedroom apartments. FREE heat & hot water. Fully appliances Kitchens. Washers/ Dryers available. Pool, volleyball, basketball. Minutes from Umass-On free busline. Call Sugarloaf Estates today! 413-665-3856. Now leasing for summer & fall Email: sugarloaf@crocker.com for limited time offer.

Take over our lease. June 1st pull ton 3 bdrm 549-5249.

1 bedroom Apt Brandywine summer with fall option 549-7279.

Looking for a beautiful and cheap place to live this summer? Hurry and have a room in a 2 bedroom furnished apartment with a porch and backyard. Free facilities. Pay just $400 a month, available this summer: call 210-5145.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 bedroom apartment summer sublet or new lease call 253-6778.

AUTO FOR SALE

88 Mercury Grand Marquis. 107k runs looks great $1300 OBO. Tim 548-7033.

Chevy Lumina 1990. 163000 reliable must go. $1000 OBO. 896-3082.

89 Honda Accord $1500 OBO 259-0068.

CHILD CARE

Babysitter needed for 2 children. Boy 7 1/2 , girl 5 who has Cerebral palsy and uses a walker. Must be a good swimmer. Approximately 10 hrs per week flexible $10.00 hr.

COMPUTERS

We pay CASH for your used laptops 413-584-8857

Color Laptop $99 Pentium tower/ CD Rom $99 with color monitor $139. HURRY! 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

TEENAGE BICYCLE TOUR LEADERS NEEDED. Be a Teen Tour Leader this summer. Trips in USA Canada, Europe. We need a 4-week time commitment, salary plus expenses paid. Student Hosteling Program, P.O. Box 419, CONWAY, MA 01341 800-343-6132 www.bicycletour.com

EMPLOYMENT

Activist Best Summer Job in Town. Sleep late, work outdoors, cool people, cool boss. Great issues! *protect out air and water *fight corporate polluters *defend public health *promote renewable energy Earn $4,000-5,000 this summer. Call today, Start tomorrow. 413-584-9830.

Handyman, landscaper, housecleaner needed. June 1- Sept. 1, 9 hr wkly. $8.00/hr. Car needed. 549-1578.

Positions available: aerobics, aqua, and yoga instructors, personal trainers, lifeguards, and maintenance Hampshire Fitness Club 256-6446.

Bartenders wanted. Make up to $250 day. No experience necessary. 1-800-585-4810 ext. 4080.

Cushman Village general store prepare creative take-out deli foods and bakery items with customer service skills. Immediate F.T./P.T. Open 7 days with employment past summer available. 491 Pine St. Amherst 549-1933.

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individual, full and part time positions available immediately. Only those able to work the upcoming summer should apply. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413)584-4746.

EMPLOYMENT

Camp Counselor wanted for Tennis, Gymnastics, Water Ski, Arts, and more! Gain valuable experience at award-winning camps, while having the summer of a lifetime. Apply on-line at www.pmforest.com

Summer Work! Student work program! Earn great summer income! $18.25 base-appt. Customer service and sales. Scholarships available. 732-2252. www.murrlocations.com

FOR RENT

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning lease? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

3 bedroom townhouse practically on campus. rent negotiable Joe 549-9441.

Thinking of Cape Cod this summer? South Dennis 3 bedroom, furnished 5/25-8/31, $595.00 Call 508-862-0565.

FOR SALE

Furniture must sell! Couch, Futon, table, bed. Everything must go! Call 253-7250.

Moving off campus? Must sell desks, bureaus, beds, lamps, etc. Cheap. Call 259-9990.

Microfridge $150 or B/O. great condition call 546-5410.

FOR SALE

Queen bed with frame, Pull out couch, table, computer desk + bureau call Walt 549-4044.

Panasonic Stereo. 5 Disk dual cassette, Remote $150 OBO 253-1819.

Dorm Fridge and Microwave great condition call 546-5045.

Cheap furniture for sale. Various pieces available & in great condition. Price is negotiable. Call 549-0454.

Desk for sale new wooden 4 drawer perfect condition call Meg 549-0072.

FURNITURE

Furniture for sale! Futon, bed, desk etc. Good condition good price. Call 253-7506.

HOUSE FOR RENT

Northampton -4 bedroom for September $1200 per month plus. Near look park. No pets. Skibiski Real Estate 586-1827.

Hadley 5 bedroom plus. Newer home five minutes from UMASS. June occupancy. 549-4270.

Main St. 4 Bedroom house June 1st. Sublet w/Fall option. Large kitchen. & living room with porch. On bus route w/washer and dryer. 549-7859.

INSTRUCTION

Become an EMT. Sign up for summer and fall classes now. For information go to www.umass.edu/ems or call us at 545-1885.

LOST AND FOUND

Lost green passport if found call 546-5325.

MOTORCYCLE

'86 SUZ GSXR1100, 91 motor w/15 K Mi., 17" rims, new tire, V & H swing arm, 43 mm inverted forks. Price reduced $3400 to 3 k. 253-7216.

ROOM FOR RENT

Large room in private home, shared home. Call 367-9286. Rent is $300 plus utilities available June 1.

One bedroom available in a four bedroom apartment. Includes heat, hot water, electricity, cable, A/C, DSL internet, and local phone. On the bus line in Amherst on route 9, available May 25 for $375/month. Call Matt at Alpine Commons # 253-9499.

Spacious, Share House with fun couple in scenic Montague. $333, May 28- Aug 31, call 367-9822.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Four roommates wanted to fill a house in the Center of Town for info call Rob (413)519-0763.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

SUMMER SUBLET

2 bedrooms in a Puffton 3 bedroom. Available 6/1 or end of May, summer w/fall option, cheap rent A/C on bus line 549-5857.

SUMMER SUBLET

2 Rooms available on Phillips St. off Frat Row, for June, July, and August. Call 549-4038.

1 Large bedroom on Main St. Amherst $500 O/B/O. Call Brianna 546-1578.

One large bedroom available at Cliffside apts. Starting June 1 partly furnished 617-842-4657.

Big 2 Bedroom Boulders. Fall option. Heat/Hot water $860 259-1506.

2 Rms Available June to July, A/C, utilities, phone, internet included $400/Mo 259-3781.

Sunset Apt. opening for summer! 2 bedrooms + Study room in basement for info please call (413) 549-3421.

Brandywine. Two bedroom. Furnished. A/C . by pool and bus stop. Call 549-8782.

Nice 3 bedroom town house. Practically on campus. Call Joe 549-9441.

TO SUBLET

Brandywine Apt. 1 bedroom available. Looking for 1-2 people. Starting June 1st with possible fall option. Only $231/ month 413-549-3559.

Sublet ers needed for 2 bedrooms in Cliffside. Everything included. $1275 Call Lauren 546-4074.

2 person Apt. June-August on sunset Ave. 2 Mins. to campus 549-4767

2 Bedroom apartment partially furnished available June 1st to sublet w/option to lease on bus route. 413-549-9612.

HSCN

Housing Services Cable Network

2	CBS/4
3	NESN
4	Fox Sport NE
5	PBS/ 57
6	HSCN Movie Channel WFXT/25
7	HSCN Movie Channel
8	TV Guide Channel
9	FOX / 61
10	ABC / 40
11	NBC / 22
12	International Channel
13	UMATV
14	HSCN Info Channel
15	ESPN
16	ESPN 2
17	UVC-19
18	ESPN Classic
19	Classic Gravel
20	CNN
21	CNN HL
22	Weather Channel
23	Learning Channel
24	History Channel
25	A & E
26	Discovery Health
27	Food Network
28	NASA
29	Home & Garden TV
30	Travel Channel
31	Lifetime
32	CNBC
33	Tech TV
34	BET
35	UPN-38
36	USA
37	TNN
38	MTV
39	VH-1
40	TNT
41	TBS
42	E! Entertainment
43	Sci-Fi Channel
44	Court TV
45	Nick at Nite
46	Comedy Central
47	Cartoon Network
48	Game Show Network
49	TV Land
50	POS Family
51	Univision
52	Colorvision
53	Telemundo
54	College TV Network
55	C-SPAN
56	C-SPAN2
57	Bloomberg Television

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass.

Client _____ Date: _____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash

Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____

Total days _____ x Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT

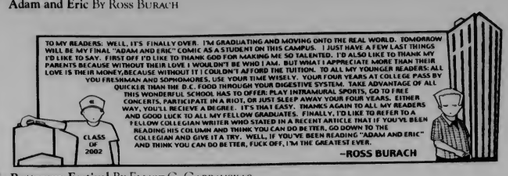
Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

ADVERTISING COPY

1.		1.
2.		2.
3.		3.
4.		4.
5.		5.
6.		6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Questions? Call us at (413) 545-3500



Student rate: $5 for 10 words or less, $0.50 cents for each word after 10 per day

Headings
- Activities
- Announcements
- Apartment for Rent
- Auto for Sale
- For Sale
- Lost & Found
- Happy Birthday
- Room for Rent
- Instruction
- Room Wanted
- Services
- Summer Sublet
- To Sublet
- Travel
- Wanted
- Wanted to Rent
- Employment
- Entertainment

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 14, 2002

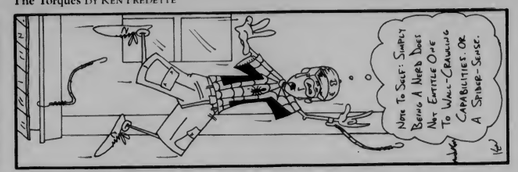
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDN	2	12	Clifford-Raid	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer			Evolution (In Stereo) (Part 1 of 4)				To Be Announced
WFSB	3	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight		Guardian "Chinese Wall" (N)		Judging Amy (N) (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight		Guardian "Chinese Wall" (N)		Judging Amy (N) (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle		Dinotopia (N) (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 3)		NYPD Blue (In Stereo) (PA)		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	56	Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond		Gilmore Girls (N) (In Stereo)		Smallville "Obituary" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WHDH	7	7	News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)		NBC's Funniest Outtakes		Frasier (N)	Scrubs (N)	Dateline (In Stereo)	Blind Date
WTXX		25	Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me		Gilmore Girls (N) (In Stereo)		Smallville "Obituary" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WVIT		30	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood		NBC's Funniest Outtakes		Frasier (N)	Scrubs (N)	Dateline (In Stereo)	Raymond
WTIC	8	11	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond		70s Show	70s Show	24 11:00PM - 12:00PM (N)		News	Seinfeld
WWLP	9	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!		NBC's Funniest Outtakes		Frasier (N)	Scrubs (N)	Dateline (In Stereo)	Tonight Show
WGBY	10	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer			Scientific American Frontiers		Evolution (In Stereo) (Part 1 of 4)			Charlie Rose (N) (In Stereo)
WGGB	11	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier		Scientific American Frontiers				NYPD Blue (In Stereo) (PA)	News
WSBK	12		Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Cheers	Frasier		Dinotopia (N) (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 3)				5th Wheel	Shipmates
WIBS	22		Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	NBA Pregame		NBA Basketball Playoffs: College of Picture				News	Inside NBA
A&E	13		The View (In Stereo)	Law & Order "Cult"				Biography: Raymond Burr		Columbo "Any Old Port in a Storm"		Law & Order "Faith to Commit"
CNN	14	20	Moneyline	Crossfire				Live From...		Larry King Live		Newsnight	Crossfire
COM	15	16	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show	Exodus		★★★ "Coming to America" (1988) Comedy Eddie Murphy. Arsenio Hall				Battlebots	Daily Show
DISC	16	42	Castles of Clay		Raccoon: 2nd Story Mammals			New Detectives-Forensic		New Detectives-Forensic		FBI Files "Moving Target"	New Detectives-Forensic
ESPN	17		Sportscenter			Mario Lemieux		Stanley Cup Playoffs Conference Semifinal Game 7 Teams to Be Announced. (Live)					Sportscenter
LIFE	18		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait			Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		"A Murder on Shooter Mountain" (1996 Mystery) Michelle Lee		Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	19		MTV Special	Making Video	Direct Effect (In Stereo)			MTV Special (In Stereo)		Real World	Real World	Real World	Osbournes
NICK	20		Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats		Spongeb Told by Ginger		Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers
SCIFI	21		Star Trek "Day of the Dove"		Star Trek "Bread and Circuses"			Outer Limits (In Stereo)		The Stand (In Stereo) (Part 2 of 4)
TLC	24	24	History of the Bathing Suit		Tales From the Tower			World's Worst Drivers		Unmasked: Exposing Secrets		Saving Is Believing: Strange
TNT	23		NYPD Blue "A Box of Wendy"		Pretender "Countdown"			Law & Order (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Stiff" (In Stereo)		Charmed "Womb Raider" (N)	Law & Order
USA	26		Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "Angels 30" (In Stereo)			Nash Bridges "Shoot the Moon"		★★½ "Star Trek Generations" (1994, Science Fiction) Patrick Stewart		Premiere	JAG (In Stereo)
HBO	28		(4:35)		★★ "Cats & Dogs" (2001)			Spirit: Stallion		★★½ "Dr. Dolittle 2" (2001) Eddie Murphy. PG		Real Sports (N)	Six Feet Under (In Stereo)
MAX	29		(4:20)		★½ "The Second Arrival"			★★ "The Fisher King" (1991, Drama) Mel Gibson, Heath Ledger. (In Stereo)		On Set: Driven		Soul Food	Chris Isaak (In Stereo)
SHOW	45		★★★ "Rush Hour" (1998, Comedy) Jackie Chan					★ "Dracula 2000" (2000) Christopher Plummer		★½ "Vertical Limit" (2000, Action) Chris O'Donnell. PG-13			Queer as Folk (N) (In Stereo)

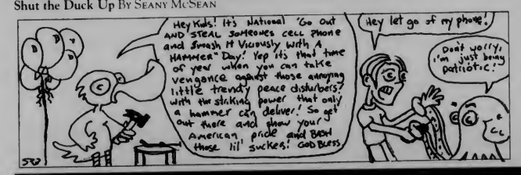
Adam and Eric By Ross Burach



The Torques By Ken Fredette

Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas

The Torques By Ken Fredette



Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas

The Torques By Ken Fredette

Shut the Duck Up By Seany McSean

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Quote of the Day

"D-D-D-D Do you have it? G.U.T.S." -G.U.T.S., Nickelodeon

Amherst Weather

Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 58 LOW: 38	HIGH: 65 LOW: 42	HIGH: 74 LOW: 47

Horoscopes

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Someone in your inner circle may object to your methods or motives quite suddenly today. Does this promise that a major rift is on its way? Just throw him off the island, Survivor style.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) The closer you are to home today the stronger and more confident you will feel. If you find yourself far away, it's a good day for a phone call. Remember to call 1-800-collect!

CANCER (June 21-July 22) - You will discover today that your interests are similar to the interests of someone you've been avoiding. The last to, you may get along well! But you probably won't because you have hangover paranoia and won't get along with anyone today.

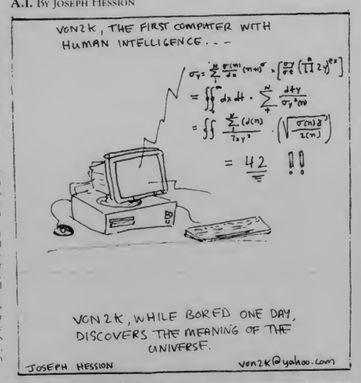
LEO (July 23-Aug 22) Your warm and sensitive side is likely to be revealed today through a chain of unusual and unsuspected circumstances. It's because you obligated to be nice to the kid whose eyebrows you shaved off this weekend when he passed out drunk.

VIRGO (Aug 23-Sept 21) - Despite what you have been saying all week long, luck is indeed a factor today. You'll have a brush with destiny before the day is out. Don't fear the reaper.

LIBRA (Sept 22-Oct 23) Someone is likely to surprise you today by being right there for you, supplying your wants and needs in abundance. Take advantage of this!

SCORPIO (Oct 24-Nov. 21) You'll find yourself in a new if not unexpected situation today which requires you to solve routine problems in highly imaginative, creative way. That dream you had about forgetting to put pants on and going to class is really a way of telling you not to forget to wear pants to class.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You're being a little too possessive today. Is it because you cannot admit that your emotions are getting the better of you? Yes it is. You really need to leave that stuffed animal at home.



CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Someone may be trying to keep you emotionally off-center today in order to further his or her own personal agenda. Keep your wits about you and don't listen to that crazy guy in your biology class.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Both people and situations are likely to prove far more forgiving than you may expect. You won't have to be as defensive as you have been recently. But beware of that sketchy guy on your floor.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — Don't look too far back today, or you'll find yourself getting lost in a fog of memories that do not directly relate to your present life. Remember when that boy who sat behind you in your third grade class pulled your hair? Let it go!

ARIES (March 21-April 19) - Love is in the air - but very likely not in your heart. Someone may have a hard time getting you to respond in an anxious fashion today. But that's alright, because you have someone else in mind.

A.I. By Joseph Hession

THE HARP
IRISH PUB
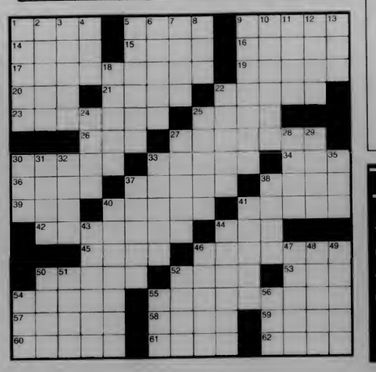
TRIVIA NIGHT TONIGHT!! and every Tuesday at the Harp all summer long!
163 Sunderland Rd.
Amherst, MA
548-6900
Start Your Own Tradition



ACROSS
1 Road rally
5 Wound reminder
9 Visit as a ghost
14 "— Called Horse"
15 Cab
16 Ms. Winfrey
17 Old comic-strip hero
19 Type of boat
20 Stiff — board
21 Disagreeable task
22 Acted like a thief
23 Brat
25 Put on weight
26 Reply to a ques.
27 Wakes up after surgery
30 Gull
33 Weather warning
34 "Yo!"
36 Ode writer
37 Ice hockey locale
38 Bounder
39 He gives a hoot
40 Ostrich cousins
41 Hangs ten
42 Liveliest
44 Six-shooter
45 Bright fish
46 Customers
50 Added brandy
52 Whiskey measure
53 "I knew it!"
54 Prairie roamer
57 Winter sports gear
57 Mia Farrow movie
58 Seine tributary
59 Pierre's friends
60 Church council
61 Made haste
62 Swampy

DOWN
1 Indian royal
2 Entertain
3 Place for locks
4 MIT grad
5 Office workers
6 Louisiana native
7 Earth's line of rotation
8 Wheel part
9 Incapacitated
10 Cooks' attire
11 — River of Russia
12 Cathedral part
13 Quaker word
18 Cuts of meat
22 Mead's island
24 Continue
25 Hired thugs
27 Athletic-shoe part
28 Odin's son
29 Egg. in Arles
30 GI address
31 Curtsies
32 Shrill bark
33 Not stale
35 "Certainly!"
37 Out in front
38 Ancient inscription
40 Aged, as cheese
41 Business wear
43 Baroque style
44 Looked radiant
46 Picked
47 Wynonna's mom
48 His and her
49 Brash
50 Sweet-scented flower
51 "C" — cat
52 Fabric sample
54 College degs.
55 "Mayday!"
56 Radio enthusiast

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

F	E	E	R		D	E	A	F		M	O	O	N
L	A	K	E		E	A	S	E		O	L	L	A	S
O	R	E	L		J	U	S	T		M	A	D	E	I	T
U	P	S	I	D	E		D	O	W	N		T	O	L	E
		S	E	C			D	E	S	I
M	A	C	H	E	T	E	S		T	O	M	C	A	T
I	C	E		M	E	A	T	S		B	E	A	C	H
N	O	D	S		O	R	I	E	R		R	I	M	E
C	R	A	T	E		S	L	O	O	P		R	E	S
E	N	R	A	G	E		T	U	B	E	R	O	S	E
		T	O	N	Y		L	U	A	U
O	A	H	U		D	A	B		S	K	E	W	E	D
P	H	O	T	O	S	H	O	O	T		F	A	R	E
T	A	M	E	S		O	E	L		U	G	L	Y
B	E	S	S		O	R	L	Y		L	E	E

10-30-01 © 2001, United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH
Yankee Corn Chowder
Beef Ragout
Hungarian Noodle Bake (vegetarian)
Ginger Black Beans (vegan)

DINNER
Yankee Corn Chowder
Chicken Pot Pie
Tomato Basil Cod
Le Commensal Entrée (vegan)

Today's Staff

News Editor	Eric Soderstrom
Photo Editor	Scott Eldridge II
Arts Editor	Andy Vogt
Production Supervisor	Jess May
Production Staff	Mike Kulak, Erika Earl

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: ERIC SODERSTROM

Softball prepares for postseason

By Andrew Merritt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

It all comes down to this. Three months of workouts, practices, travel and Atlantic 10 neat perfection, all leading up to the NCAA tournament for the Massachusetts softball team.

The squad heads down to Lafayette, La. to square off with the Lady Cajuns of the University of Louisiana at Lafayette in regional tournament action. The Minutewomen head into the contest ranked fourth in their regional bracket, with the Lady Cajuns seeded third.

Lafayette went 49-11 in regular season play this year, and 15-1 in Sun Belt Conference action. As the first-seed in the conference tournament, the Cajuns rolled through to the finals and took their third consecutive conference title. Senior hurler Melissa Coronado shined in the final, shutting out the Lady Raiders of Middle Tennessee on one hit and faced just 22 batters, one more than the minimum for a perfect game.

Ranked 19th in the final National Fastpitch Coaches Association poll, Lafayette is a solid all-around team, with pitching from Coronado, and significant offensive contributors like Becky McMurtry (.402, 74 hits, 54 runs), Jerie Alexander (.354, 75 hits, 48 runs), and Alana Addison (.322, 58 hits, 44 runs).

Meanwhile the Minutewomen head into a regional as certain underdogs, but not as a team that doesn't belong there. They racked up 32 wins this season, and swept the Atlantic 10 regular season with a record of 21-0. UMass is also coming off an Atlantic 10 championship, its eighth consecutive conference title.

"We're excited, and we see it as a big challenge," junior Kaila Holtz said. "But this past weekend at the A-10 tournament we overcame a big challenge."

The Maroon and White took the championship with two wins against host Rhode Island, which had shocked the Atlantic 10 softball world by beating UMass in the first round. The tandem of senior Jen Hadley and Holtz held the Rams to one run for the two-game set, and the Massachusetts offense solved Rhode Island star pitcher Gwen Rack, posting six runs in the first game, and eight more in the second.

The Minutewomen finished the season ranked 27th in the NCA poll, and proved they can play with the big guns of softball early in the season, when they traveled to Arizona, Georgia, and Florida to take on such luminaries as Texas, Stanford, and Arizona. UMass put up a good fight against defending national champion Arizona, ranked second in the nation this year, before the Wildcats scored in extra innings for the 1-0 victory.

"We've proven when we played against Arizona and Stanford that we can compete with the best in the country," Holtz said. "We recognize that we're underdogs, and we'll be facing the No. 3 and 4 teams in the country. And it's going to be hot and humid, and we play in weather that's colder and drier."

Provided the Maroon and White advances through the bracket it could face Louisiana State, ranked No. 3 in the nation. As if the regional bracket weren't impressive enough with LSU headlining, the No. 4 Arizona State Sun Devils are also competing in Lafayette.

But UMass has become a team of resiliency and depth. After the upset loss to Rhode Island, the Minutewomen were facing a very early exit from the Atlantic 10 tournament, and rebounded to show who the real power is in the conference.

And while the team has been known for its impeccable defense and stellar pitching, the offense has come on like wildfire in the last month of the season. In the first game of the championship doubleheader Saturday, Holtz herself made a big splash, knocking in three of UMass' six runs with a two-out bases loaded double to left field.

"When someone isn't having their greatest day, others have to step up," Holtz said. "We know that when we work together offensively and defensively, we can put big numbers up on the board.

2002 NCAA Softball Tournament Preview

RAGIN CAJUN

NCAA Tournament Regional
Thursday @ Lafayette, La.
Approx. 5 p.m.

University of Louisiana at Lafayette Lady Ragin' Cajuns

Record: 49-11, Sun Belt Conference Champion
Coach: Stefni Whitton-Lotief
Key Players: 3B Becky McMurtry (.405 BA, 14 HR, 53 RBI)
SS Alana Addison (.323 BA, 13 HR, 50 RBI)
P Melissa Coronado (14-2, 1.61 ERA, 6 shutouts)

Outlook: The Cajuns' strength this year has definitely been in their hitting, as they have blasted an impressive 72 home runs as a team with a batting average hovering around .300. They'll have to jump all over the Minutewomen at the plate, as their pitching is not nearly as strong. Having the regional at their home field, where they have posted a 25-1 record this year, will be an added bonus.

"We've faced everybody and we know we can beat them. If we play tight defense, the offense is there. We have to put everything together." – Becky McMurty, Third Base

UMASS Minutewomen

Record: Record 32-11, Atlantic 10 Conference Champs
Coach: Elaine Sortino (383-208-5, 2nd season)
Key Players: CF Jen Rooney (.385 BA, 7 HR, 36 RBI)
3B Nicole Wilcox (.360 BA, 7 HR, 40 RBI)
P Kaila Holtz (20-6, 1.82 ERA, 0 saves)
P Jen Hadley (12-6, 2.15 ERA, 1 save)

Outlook: With its loss to Rhode Island in the Atlantic 10 tournament, UMass proved it was not invincible. But it's the focus it needs for this regional. Dominant pitching has helped the Minutewomen all season, and if Hadley and Holtz can shut down the Maroon and White will likely be celebrating Sunday in Baton Rouge.

"We know that they'll come at us. How it can be difficult for them." – Kaila Holtz, Pitcher

Adrianne Haslet-Davis of the Vice Ten Rooney and the UMass softball team head South this week to begin the NCAA Tournament

PHOTO BY KATE COLLIGAN

Not a classic anecdote

Today is the day/For dancing and for singing/The birds in the trees and all/The bells are ringing/The sun in the sky/Is bright as bright as second light/Is bright oh God I hope I'm alright/Cause I'm gonna cry
– Travis, "Slide Show"

Ever since I arrived at The Collegian back in September of 2000, I have looked to this moment with much trepidation. This, my senior column, will be my final chance to connect with you, the readers, as a member of this institution. Should this be humorous or strike a serious note? Should I thank my friends and family or slam the administration for all the problems that currently exist on this campus? All of this has been done before and therefore I will take an entirely different route.

I am simply going to offer an open plea to the entire UMass community. I ask all of you who will be back here next fall to help get this University back to what made it great, and I don't just mean academically. The world that existed when we all arrived here this past September is gone, replaced by a world of terrorism, budget cuts, GEO and RA unions. While these are things that we are forced to deal with on a day-to-day basis, they do not need to be the things that define our University and our generation. And they do not need to change the things that we do as college students.

College is supposed to be a time during which we find who we are and what we want to be, and I agree with that wholeheartedly. But it is also a time to see and experience new things, and most importantly, have fun. For most of us college is our first chance to live away from home and truly discover ourselves.

Do this. Find who you really are. Try different things, things that you never would have done during your pre-college years. Through this you will be able to grow as an individual. Let yourself be vulnerable to all the magical things out there that this world has to offer because if you don't open yourself up to them, if you build a wall and hide behind it, you will never see all that there is to see. Your options, even in the small town of Amherst, are endless.

Stay up all night doing nothing at all with your mates, skip a class so that you can lounge on the Southwest horseshoe or spend a Friday afternoon on the outdoor patio at Amherst Brewing Company and just watch the people walking by. This, to me, is what college is all about.

While it is true that none of this will help your GPA or get you a better grade on that history paper, it will make you a more well-rounded person who can more easily adapt to the post-collegiate years. But the truth is that outside of college none of that will matter. Nobody in the outside world will care that you got a 4.0 as an English major at UMass, but they will care that you acquired social skills along with a quality education.

These social skills will make you a success in the "real world." If you can't orally communicate with people easily and without hesitation, then you are not going to make it. And these are not skills that you can learn in any textbook or in any class. You can't learn these sitting hunched over your computer Instant Messaging all of your friends. You can only gain social skills through social interaction, through going out and meeting people.

So I implore all of you, for your own good, close those books, walk away from your computer and go out. It doesn't have to be the weekend for you to go out and have fun. Head to McMurphy's on Wednesday for the Guitar Dudes, go to Northampton on a Monday evening for dinner at one of its numerous bistros, watch a Tuesday night Sox game at Charlie's while sipping a Grateful Dead. It will make you a better person I guarantee it.

My fours years of college have been easily the best years of my life. I have gone from being a wide-eyed and naive 18-year old to a wiser and more mature 22-year old who actually knows what he wants to do with his life. And I have no class or professor to single out for helping me see the light. All I did was try and have the best time that I possibly could and let the pieces fall into places. That to me is what UMass should be about.

Finally, let me say thank you to everybody out there who is reading this and hopefully taking it to heart. To my friends, family and loyal readers (if I have any,) I thank you as well. Without any of you, I know that I would not be the person that I am today. The journey to this point has been long, eventful and full of ups and downs. But most importantly it has been the time of my life. Again I implore all of you to simply, at all times, have fun. Because to me, that is (or was) what college is all about. Cheers.

Justin Pearson was a Collegian columnist and is finally happy to have his picture in the paper. If any of you see him at McMurphy's on Wednesday night or any other night for that matter, feel free to buy him a drink. He'll thank you for it. But ladies, bad news, he's taken.

Justin Pearson (top) wants you to enjoy your time in Amherst as much as he did. So drop the paper and go slam a six-pack. (Matthew F. Sacco (left) and Eric Soderstrom are positive Mr. Pearson will be the President of HFA in 5 years.)

Murder by numbers LA ARTS PAGE 5.
CATHERINE SAYS GOODBYE ED/OP PAGE 4.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY
COLLEGIAN
Graduation Issue Inside
WEDNESDAY ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE ONE HUNDRED THIRTY SEVEN ☆☆☆☆☆ 5.15.02

2001-2002

This year was a time of turmoil and tragedy; a time of unity, solidarity, patriotism and terrorism. It was a time of constant change, of money woes, of new administration stepping up, of old administration taking flight. Most of all, it was a time for our generation. A time we will never, can never forget, one that we will be able to tell our grandchildren about. We here at the Collegian have witnessed and reported the events of this time for you, and we have selected five stories that we feel represent the landmarks of this time.

- Andrew Merritt

Top five stories of the year

U.S. NAVY PHOTO BY PHOTOGRAPHER'S MATE 3RD CLASS ANDREA D. ROSE/FEMA NEWS PHOTO

1. Campus connects in wake of Sept. 11

The University of Massachusetts, as well as much of the nation, was halted on Sept. 11, 2001 to watch or listen to the almost unbelievable scenes that unfolded before them on television screens and radio stations.

Some people, worried about friends or families, reached for phones, left only to the hope of hearing those they knew were unharmed in the terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon as well as the hijackings and destruction of four commercial airliners. Others were frozen in time, wondering who could commit such acts, and what would happen as a result.

In response, the University held special events to honor those who had been affected by the devastation. Mass e-mails were sent out to everyone on campus, informing students and faculty that the University and all its services would be there to help them through this emotional time. Letters were sent to student's homes, and donations were given to assist both those who helped in the rescue efforts and who had suffered losses.

On the evening of the attacks, the campus came together to help each other through one of the most devastating pieces of news in U.S. history during a candlelit vigil held on the lawn in front of the Student Union Building. Since that night, various activities on campus continued to keep students, faculty and community members in close touch, providing ways for them to help out their fellow citizens.

During President Bush's appointed National Day of Remembrance on Sept. 14, the UMass Community Remembrance service was held at 3 p.m. near the Campus Pond. Campus officials, administrative staff, religious figures, students and musical groups each provided their condolences.

The following Monday, Sept. 17, the American Red Cross held an all-day blood drive in Campus Center Auditorium, drawing approximately 100

Turn to 9/11 page 3

JAMES SCHAFER/COLLEGIAN

RAs united in undergrad union.

2. First undergraduate union stirs campus

Resident Assistants at the University of Massachusetts garnered national attention when they became the first undergraduate labor union on March 5.

The RAs and Community Development Assistants voted 138-88 to be represented for collective bargaining purposes by Local 2322 of the United Auto Workers.

UMass has vowed to fight the Massachusetts Labor Relations Commission's certification of the union, saying the board "misapplied" state law.

The administration's refusal to negotiate with the union led to protests and demonstrations in the weeks after the March 5 vote. Protesters occupied the chancellor's office, the news office and Housing Director Michael Gilbert's office on April 8.

A week later, RAs picketed Susan Pearson's home. Pearson, the associate provost, is the University's chief negotiator. The protests reached a climatic note with an April 29 sit-in by supporters of the RA union. A group of 15 supporters occupied Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Javier Cevallos' Whitmore office. After being removed by police, other activists blocked in a police bus. A total of 35 people were arrested that day.

The union toned down its activities, instead focusing on support rallies and symbolic bargaining tables outside of the Whitmore Administration Building.

- Ken Campbell

THE COLLEGIAN/BRIAN COLLIGAN

Students stormed the State House

3. Budget cuts hit home hard

The University of Massachusetts faced unprecedented budget cuts in the past academic year.

The cuts were rumored in the fall, and a $495 fee increase in December 2001 was implemented with the intention to offset a predicted cut. The $15 million cut in January took UMass by surprise, forcing the campus to layoff 95 employees and make sweeping cutbacks in services. The full-day classrooms were among the first on the block, but were saved by the Graduate Employee Organization and negotiation with the University. The campus Escort Service was reduced, and all hiring searches were frozen.

The faculty, upset that parts of the student fee increase were going to athletics, requested a $2 million cut to athletics, eyeing the football program as ripe for such a reduction. After seven smaller sports programs were cut, and a defensive coordinator for the football team was hired, the Faculty Senate condemned the athletic department.

The budget cuts set off large-scale demonstrations on the Amherst campus and at the State House. Letter writing campaigns and other activities, organized under a coalition calling itself "Save UMass," made headlines statewide by flooding legislators with postcards, notes and anecdotes. One professor remarked he wished the activist spirit toward the school's budget were a yearly occurrence.

The efforts seemed to be for naught, as the House budget annualized a $29 million cut to the University system and refused to fund the Educational Reference Materials (ERM) line item. Rep. Ellen Story (D-Amherst) amended the budget to fund ERM. The House will pass the state's budget sometime this summer, according to timetables. It then moves on to the Senate for debate before being approved or vetoed by the governor.

- Ken Campbell

UMPD seek info

The University of Massachusetts Police Department is still looking for information regarding the sexual assault that took place on April 8 at the Fine Arts Center.

According to Jim Lyons the spokesman for the UMPD, the victim stated in her report that she had been aware of people passing by during the incident and police are looking for any individuals that may have been around.

The police are also investigating an incident that occurred early Sunday morning at approximately 12 a.m. Lyons explained that two women were walking to the parking garage when one woman was grabbed by a male from behind. The police apprehended the male suspect but are still looking for the woman involved in the incident.

Anyone with any information regarding either of these incidents can call the UMPD at 545-0893.

In connection with the recent sexual violence on campus, the Everywoman's Center is holding an event on Thursday at noon on the Student Union steps to speak out against sexual violence.

-Melissa Hammel

University looks toward outreach for recruitment

By Denise Nuñez
COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

Outreach, a University of Massachusetts recruitment effort, is a form of early college awareness that starts with students at middle schools and follows them through high school.

It includes staff members, students, admissions counselors and parents, who talk to students about the prep courses they need in order to get accepted at UMass. Students and staff members provide tours of the University, as well as share their experiences on campus.

"The University actively wants to achieve two goals: access and diversity. If we have any hope of achieving these goals it has to start before 11 grade," Joe Marshall, the Dean of Enrollment Services, said. "The rational of outreach is to fill in where the counselors and or the families are either unable or unwilling to provide that assistance."

The four different areas in outreach are academic preparation, parental education, financing an education, and exposing prospective students to the university enrollment goals.

"I did three things. I created a permanent position to oversee the development of the outreach program for Enrollment Services," Marshall said. "I reassigned four admissions recruiters to outreach and expanded their recruitment function to include outreach. I also started a grant from the Board of Higher Education that allowed us to create a foundation for outreach. So far, the program has managed to pursue its goals, in spite the fact that budgets have been shrinking over the last four years."

Exploring issues in the area of Outreach and recruitment is about introducing students to various duties and responsibilities, as well as making them familiar with the decision making process of college admissions at the universities.

"It is significant that in over 22 years of experience, I haven't seen a more effective method of engaging students, parents, community members, teachers, parents and counselors in meaningful conversations about college admissions for disadvantage students," Director Jose Beu said.

A class that goes in depth with outreach is called Home Town High and it trains a group of students to go back to their hometown high school to talk to juniors and seniors about their own experience at UMass-Amherst. However, the program continues to face obstacles despite its success.

"We need more support from the University, particularly from admissions, academic support programs, faculty and more important our student body," John P. Ellsworth, assistant director, said. "It's more than a job, it is a service to the students and to the community in general. I see the whole idea of Outreach as creating, enhancing, and supporting college awareness not just in schools but in our community [as well]. I have learned a lot from our staff and students, especially our Native American community. I believe they have one of the most effective approaches to educate our children, which can best be described by the saying: it takes a whole village to raise a child.

"It is beneficial because as a university we expect students to meet certain requirements in order to get accepted into our programs. However, we assume that everyone knows what the requirements are. This is where the Outreach program fills in the gap by exposing the students, parents, schools, and the community to the information at several stages of the student development," Ellsworth said.

There are plans to improve Outreach and expand its project to include the entire Commonwealth of Massachusetts and all of its institutions of higher education.

"The consequence of not doing Outreach is that we will continue to struggle to achieve our access and diversity goals," Joe Marshall said.

Staff members and proponents of the project are eager to share their enthusiasm and excitement for the program.

"I'd like to do more community base work with families and other community members. Outreach is a community based education project. I feel powerful, responsible and good when I talk to high school kids about college," staff member Carlos Peña said.

"I became Outreach staff because I wanted to help younger kids become aware of college and also give them another alternative other than doing drugs," Nickaya Foster, an Outreach staff member, said.

SGA says safety main concern for next year

By Kristin Shrewsbury
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Newly elected Speaker Daniel Saunders and Associate Speaker Matt Pelnar took over the reigns of the Student Government Association Senate at their closing meeting of the semester.

The Senate met for its last meeting on May 8, discussing what is to come of the Senate for the up and coming fall 2002 semester. Issues surround safety were one of the major topics discused by Senators as they looked at the future safety of students on the University of Massachusetts-Amherst campus.

"One main thing that I want to work on a Senate safety committee because that's really important," Pelnar said. "Dan met with chief of police Barbara O'Connor and they were really receptive and they know there's a problem on campus and that they need to be fixed."

Saunders explained that the proposed committee would look at safety issues on campus, such as call boxes, lighting problem areas and getting safety issues publicized to the UMass community.

"The Safety committee will hopefully make sure that all the call boxes are working, make recommendations as to where call boxes should be placed, check lights to make sure that they are working, and look into having more self defense classes for students," Saunders said. "A few senators have already expressed an interest in putting this committee together this year, and those who are selected will be very involved with Student Housing and with UMass Security."

The Senate had a Safety Committee in the 1999-2000 academic year.

Other area's that the Senate is looking to improve for next semester is that involving diversity within the SGA. Members also explained the need to have the Diversity Committee more involved within the Senate as well. Pelnar explained that he felt that by having more communication between the cabinet and the Senate committee's groups will be able to work more closely with one another next year.

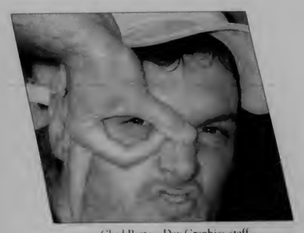
"Another thing we want to work on is diversity, because the Diversity Secretary and committee weren't really functioning within the SGA this semester," Pelnar said. "Also the AUANA (African Latin Asian Native American) seats weren't really taken and only one person from the AUANA caucus was still involved with the Senate at the end. It's important to have these groups working within the Senate to give us ideas and impute."

Members of the Senate also passed a final motion of the year, which, was the restructuring of Title Five of the SGA Constitution. Title Five, an ongoing debate within the Senate, was revamped, distinguishing housing districts as well as combining the two off-campus housing districts, on-campus non residential and commuter, to just commuter Senators.

Elena Pancsis- Arts Writer
Most likely to stay sissy.

Jake Lillien- Diversity Editor
Most likely to actually make it.

Nick Pizzolatto- Arts Writer
Most likely to be the third guitar dude.



Amy Garganta- Business Manager
Most likely to disappear on her European vacation in search of that hot Russian stripper.

Brent Siniawski- Finance Manager
Most likely to make us proud, then deny he ever knew us.

Sam Wilkinson- Editor-in-Chief
Most likely to publish a New York Times best seller entitled "Why I Am Always Right."

Chad Portas- Day Graphics staff
Most likely to redesign the world.

Mike McCormick-Night Graphics staff
Most likely to become a weather man.

Dan Krechmer- Ad Rep
Most likely to lose his liquor in a pitcher uptown.

Frankie Bones- Night Graphics staff
Most likely to blackout.

Kurt Polesky- Arts Writer
Most likely to build an altar in worship of Vince Russo.

Erin Renner- Human Resources Manager
Most likely to give the City of Love a run for its money.

■ 9/11

continued from page 1

people to donate, and this marked only the first in a long series of such events. In addition, collection sites for special funds helping those devastated in the destruction were set up at various sites on campus.

Despite the fact that the specific incident of terror is over, the United States may very well be feeling the ripples of the devastating attack for many years to come. The way that the world deals with terrorists and the way that America handles the safety of both its people and its country have face many changes in recent months, ranging from government attacks on the Taliban to tighter airport security. The country is now left to only speculate at the extent to which this tragedy will continue to affect the world in the years to follow.

- Jennifer Eastwood

4. New chancellor chosen to enhance finances

Students at the University of Massachusetts will soon be used to seeing a new face among their administrators with the addition of Dr. John V. Lombardi as the new chancellor for the campus.

Lombardi was the former president of the University of Florida and will officially become chancellor on July 1, taking over the position from current interim Chancellor Marcellette Williams. He was chosen for the position from a pool of over 100 applicants and from three finalists including Elizabeth D. Capaldi, provost at the State University of New York at Buffalo and William E. Hogan II, a member of the University of Minnesota Board of Regents. All three held meetings with the campus expressing their views on a variety of issues.

The former president is well known for his abilities to fundraise and is credited with increasing the student enrollment at the University of Florida as well as increasing the incoming revenue. With the University facing a current budget crisis, the ability to raise funds for the school was a pivotal issue.

The appointment to chancellor was not without its controversies. Lombardi faced sanctions in his former job, for he called his boss an Oreo: "Black on the outside and white on the inside."

Although he held a strong verbal stance in support of diversity on campus, some students and members of the community expressed concern about his appointment.

The process for finding a chancellor began last July by a 21-member committee made up of members of the Board of Trustees, alumni and administrators. The final decision for the chancellor position was passed by the Board of Trustee and had the support of University President William Bulger.

- Melissa Hammel

5. Save UMass rally carries the call

Several thousand willing students, dedicated faculty, administrators and parents attended the rally to save public higher education on April 25.

The rally, organized by Save UMass, brought the voice of those affected by state budget cuts to the steps of Massachusetts's legislature and into the State House. Students represented each of the University of Massachusetts campuses as well as several other state and community colleges. In addition, faculty and some administrators joined students' efforts, showing pride in their school by wearing school colors and clothing and waving their message on signs.

To rectify the damage done to UMass' reputation by students who trampled flowers around the State House at a similar rally in 1989, students this time brought flowers to their representatives.

Save UMass organizers tried to organize meetings with students' representatives in their offices following the rally on the steps. However, upon arrival within the State House, activists were told that all representatives were in caucus that day due to the release of the House Ways and Means budget recommendation and would therefore not be available for discussion. Rally attendees instead voiced their concerns to the legislative aids ready and waiting in their respective representatives' offices.

Representative Ellen Story (D-Amherst) said that the timing of the rally was perfect since it occurred at the time of the budget's release.

"This is an unusually good one [rally]," said Story. "There are lots of posters, lots of people, lots of noise. The more representative hear from people back home, the better."

Students gave up class time and their personal time to attend the rally for various reasons. For some, it was yet another chance to support UMass and public higher education. For many, it was a singular opportunity to devote a day to a cause close to them.

The battle to save UMass and public higher education continues.

- S.J. Port

Budget cuts affected even the smallest members of the UMass community.

News desk noteables

Catherine

Philly with Adam White. Times Sq. for the first time. Northampton escapades with Bret. Westpoint. It's WestREN. Brenden. Common. Big Fkin sandwich. Oh My, Lemur! The MAN. Ed Lover dance. "Hey Prime Minister, in this country we drive on the right side of the road!" We not to be. CONNECTICUT BLOWS GOATS. So does central Pennsylvania. Anishah. Riding the bull in Hotlanta, the daiquiri shacks on Bourbon Street. Penn state. Superfluous nipples. I'm 21! Shawna. Parties at 76. Walking with Dinosaurs. Gia with Angie. Catching frogs with Dan. Plymouth Thanksgivings at Ant & Ang's. Van Meter. The Spoke with Tim. Smitty. Mauser. Kobo. Ryan: the old school. David Rose. Nomar. Dead Prez. The Dan Bern Night. Orgazzam. Shoulder vagina. Lupus with Mikey D. Sweat Pant parties. Heartbreaker. Downhilling in Stowe. Gigantor. This is the Marty show, it's not the T-Mar show. Ken Avery: torso boy. Little Lauren mud fighting. You got butta pecan? GIRL. Shout out to the fam in Iowa City: Alpha Bitch. Omega. Rent. Topdog. Cape Cod train bridge. Love Otter, cuddle fish. Outkast. Talib. Xenos. Tom Roberts. Ally Spokemy's media and politics class. Bionic Sean. Freestylin'. Aquarium. Making out under the apple trees.

Turn to NOTES page 4

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Sam Wilkinson Editor-in-Chief
Matthew F. Sacco Managing Editor
Amy Garganta Business Manager
Shimauli Dave Production Manager
Jake Lilien Diversity Editor
Mike Kulak Editorial Production Manager
Jason Smith Advertising Manager

Mike Delano Arts & Living Editor
Matthew Despres Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jennifer Eastwood Features Editor
Catherine Turner News Editor
Tibora Ginzye-Blum Photography Editor
Eric Soderstrom Sports Editor
Brent Siniawski Finance Manager
Charlie Iacco Distribution Manager

Morgan Taylor Advertising Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Jessica May Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Cara Murphy Assistant Finance Manager
Shawn Daugherty Assistant Business Manager
Megan Shannon Assistant Advertising Manager

AS SENIOR VP OF FINANCIAL PLANNING AT A MAJOR MOVIE STUDIO YOU COULD:

O.K. A $93 MILLION BUDGET

HIRE 7,500 EXTRAS

RENT 273 PALM TREES
(AND 1 BIG FAN TO MAKE THEM SWAY)

HOW DO YOU GET A JOB LIKE THIS?

WWW.STARTHEREGOPLACES.COM/BIZ15
Go here and take the first step toward the career you want.

American Institute of Certified Public Accountants

START HERE.
GO PLACES.
If you know business and accounting, you can get a job anywhere. Because the skills you learn in business – strategic and analytical thinking, communication, and leadership – are always in demand. In some of the coolest industries in the world. Even in the movies.

LDSS changes its policy toward ADHD

By Janet Jock
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts-Amherst Learning Disabilities Support Services (LDSS) program has changed its policy regarding Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD) and the accommodations students with the disorder receive.

Due to recent budget cuts and changes in state mental health policies this fall ADHD student cases will be transferred from the Psychological Disabilities Services (PDS) department to LDSS. Until now students with ADHD have been enrolled with the PDS because the state of Massachusetts considers ADHD a mental disorder not a learning disorder.

There are three departments that provide services for students with disabilities, the LDSS, which is the largest, the PDS, or psychological disability service, and the DS, disability services. Students needing special accommodations due to ADHD or ADD, who have once been provided for by PDS, will be transferred to LDSS as of June 1. This leaves LDSS with over 100 additional students to accommodate and even less time to provide the best services possible.

Budget cuts, according to Kregg Strehorn, director of LDSS have already forced LDSS to reduce the amount of time and accommodations provided for those students with disabilities. A large portion of the cuts has affected proctoring and tutoring, two of the largest services offered.

Students are admitted into the University of Massachusetts-Amherst without involvement of any disability service provider. Once admitted into UMass, the student must provide LDSS with a formal psycho-educational assessment. Once they do this they meet with a case manager who informs them of the services they are eligible for.

Proctoring is a service that allows a student with a disability to be provided with necessary accommodations in order to perform to their highest potential on an exam. Many students express a need for this service due to difficulty with reading rate, reading comprehension skill, distractibility, memory, processing speed, and difficulty in written output. A student with such a learning disability may need extended time, use of a computer, having the exam read to them, or just quiet space. Fifty percent of all proctoring is provided during finals, and ninety percent of the proctoring involves giving the student extended time (usually time and a half, or double time) to take the exam.

Not only do the proctoring services benefit the students greatly," noted Kregg Strehorn, director of LDSS. "They also benefit professors who may not have the time to provide this assistance."

Another large cut that has been made in this program concerns the amount of tutoring services provided. Tutoring has been cut in half since last year.

"Since the students are accommodated at a first come, first serve basis, many of them have to wait for services or to speak with a counselor," Strehorn said. "The most important message I want to send out is that we are not abandoning anyone. Despite the cuts, we are doing our best to provide the best accommodations for those with learning disabilities. We are still providing proctoring services during finals, where is seems to be most needed."

Although in the fall LDSS will not be offering regular proctoring hours, they will be offering assistance with one on one exams that may need careful attention, and as many proctoring hours as possible during final exams.

On the Net: The LDSS website: http://www.umass.edu/ldss.

CRAVE SPEED? Great opportunity for skilled drivers in fast paced competitive field. We are looking for risk-takers who work well under pressure. Knowledge of CPR a plus. For salary details and medical liability waiver, please go to www.testdriveinfo.com.

notes

continued from page 3

PCB, VCD, Sheila BBQin' in Hartford, CMummy on the Mic, Minnesota Pride, Faulkner is a network of insanity, Rocky, 8 papers in 6 days, Video Games on the VM hill.

Melissa, thanks for being a great colleague and a good friend. I am privileged to have had you as a partner. Ken, I wish you nothing but the best. Whatever you do, you'll do it well. Sam, it's been real. Kulak: what would Scooby Do? Chieffallen: keep shining. Megan, when you run for president, I'll vote for you. Tibi: West Coast represent. Kick aSS Scott. SJ: I told you so. I hate the Collegian. Good Luck everybody!

–Catherine Turner

Jennifer

For me, this marks the end of an era as I make the transition into the Arts and Living department. It's a transition that, even as I review over my notes for my new department, still has yet to fully sink in.

I first came to the Collegian the day before classes started my freshman year and met the only two staffers humming around the newsroom at the moment: Adam M. and Sam.

"So what are you interested in writing?" I can still hear Adam asking me in his friendly, inquisitive manner he always presented to prospective writers.

"News." I answered assuredly.

News. Of course, news. I mean, if one wants to be a journalist in this world, they write news and nothing but news, right? Well, as it turns out, not so right actually.

Thus far at this University, one of the most influential things I've learned is that journalism can in fact be much more than emotionlessly covering protests and departmental updates. Features, and that includes the ever-appreciative support of Melissa and Sarah, has helped realize this. Low and behold, it turns out I actually can describe the world around me, all the people in it and their lives and not keep my adjectives out of the descriptions after all.

Features also helped me rekindle my long lost love from high school yearbook: graphic design. This, of course, would not have been possible without the master of graphic magic, Mike Kulak, and for that I thank him.

And so now, I bid my days in the news department farewell. I dilter like Catherine, Melissa and even Ken at points, have made the journey well worth it.

Yes, it's the end of an era, as the majority of my courage will mostly be concentrated in Arts now. To some degree, endings are always sad. However, for me, it's more of a dawn of a new beginning, and the future looks bright.

-Jennifer Eastwood

Melissa

This is hard to do. I wished forever that I would get a chance to write down some of the memories that I accumulated from working in news for so long, but this is going to end up being more of a thank-you.

To my current counterparts: Ken, I really don't know what to say and I doubt I can be as articulate as I would like to be. I am going to miss editing in shifts, ice cream breaks, your blood vessels bursting and my panic attacks. There is no one better to play good cop/bad cop with. You are more family than my real family sometimes and I always wanted a brother. Catherine, I can't really imagine the Collegian without you. It has been wonderful working both with you and for you. You always make me laugh and you are destined for good things.

To those who came before me: Adam M. and Ryan, I have always wanted to say goodbye to you in print. I thought it was only fitting. The two of you taught me everything that I know. Ryan, there is something to be said for meeting someone for the first time and feeling as though they will be your friend for life, I trust in that. Your positive attitude alone taught me so much. Adam, what can I say? It seems so strange that in the beginning I would ever doubt your skills, I still spend my time gleaning advice from you about what to do with my news stories. Thank you for being my mentor, my friend and for your constant unflagging support. Adam W. I am grateful beyond words for everything that I learned from you from how to write a news story, to how to edit and everything else in between. Much love always, but you know that.

To the new class: Jen, I am privileged to belong to a little club called features with you. In so many ways I feel like we are on the same page. You are incredibly talented and a wonderful friend, the possibilities for you are limitless. SJ: there is no one better to crash a meeting with than you. You are a reporter in every sense of the word and in my opinion that is the nicest compliment one news writer can give to another. Rachel: I love your honesty, and I am convinced you are going to kick butt and take names next year. You are right, in a lot of ways life is like taking a shot, you just have to jump in and do it.

As for the rest of news staff, I have loved feeling like I make a difference. I love police news and faculty senate. I love feeling like I know what is going on in the world. Some people have a calling; this is mine.

–Melissa Hammel

SJP

Ken and Rob were the first people I met upon arriving in the hovel that is the basement "office" where the Collegian is pasted together night after indesinent night. Ken and Rob are two of the more demented, unhinged, and vibrant characters here in the newsroom, and yet amazingly I was sucked in.

As it is the Collegian, I learned quickly to mock my peers with jests of appreciation and respect, or occasionally pure disgust. However, it was the incandescent smile Catherine flashed me, after hearing me berate (sarcastically) our comrades, that let me know she knew I was game for the challenge of tampering with the controversial belligerency of the newsroom. Through her mentoring and friendship she taught me how and how not to handle the gossip, the yelling, and the passion that courses through the newsroom-thank you.

Rob may have left shortly after my arrival, but Ken has stayed to haunt us. His daily tirades of continuous vexing about stupid this, and stupid that have proven to me that he is the intrinsic polemic reporter legend speaks of. Ken's dearth of people's skills makes him a bitter pill to swallow, but his love for the art of news writing, and the story have made him an incredible pedagogue. Ken, I will prove you wrong – thank you. (I really should have pushed you out of the car onto the Mass. Pike-but I would have lost the chance to learn-and for that reason alone, I let you live.)

It was the rampant arguments about hockey rising from the always-boisterous sports department that first drew me to their corner, and our weekly CSHL games that kept me going back for laughs. Any of you seen that damned puck?

Melissa and Jen, whether you are in news or not, I will continue to rely on your assistance, advice, and experience…and I implore each of your to continue to write for news next year, especially you, Melissa.

Merritt, my suspect, my shoulder is here for you, as yours has been all through the trails and tribulations of this year-and this is just our beginning.

Kulak, Tibi, Scott, Despres, Jess, your friendships make it easy to come to work, and hard to leave. (Tibi, Scott, Despres-This summer: the Cape.)

When I do go home at the end of the night my heart lifts, and my mind clears as I return to the arms of my girls-the extended family who let me vent, bitch, bemoan, cry, and laugh, enabling me sleep and start again. One sister, one love-Caitlin, Jess, Melissa, Maggie, Kelly, Lauren, Allison, Geo, and the girl I could not do it without-Anne Marie.

At the end of this, my first year with the Collegian, I've committed myself deeper to the lunacy that is daily college journalism, and I'm happy with my choice. Many spend their time in college socializing and attending classes, never dedicating themselves to anything more, just because something appealed to them. Those pitiable slubs will never appreciate how being involved in a newspaper that covers a campus of 30,000-plus people's activities enhances everything else I do here at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst.

We love although, we live because: I may not always like the Collegian, but I do love it. Come visit me next year, write for news, and enjoy, maybe you'll get a CSHL jersey of your very own.

–S.J. Port

Ken

I don't really have any misty-eyed memories, or even pleasant notes, or am other sentimental, nostalgic claptrap about my time in the news department. Truth be told, many of the days this year it felt like I was walking a razor's edge and I couldn't think of many reasons not to lose my balance. I worked with Melissa, my one bright spot, who knew what she was doing. Because of her it didn't feel like I was doing all the work. Instead it felt as if we were doing all the work. Together we ran this department. Screw that, together we were the department. So many of my memories are clouded by immense feelings of stress and frustration at the utter lack of caring to be found in the department.

My memories are actually snippets from stories I covered. The cold rain outside Whitmore, watching kids getting arrested. The crowded room waiting to see what the DA has to say. The heavy, quiet air of a memorial service. The utter chaos and excitement of a riot. The free food of a catered lecture.

Those are the good memories. The bad ones are things like popping a small blood vessel in my right eye while reading what could possibly be the worst lead ever. I was never a teacher, always a perfectionist. Hopefully, with people like Rachel in place, Melissa won't feel totally alone. She won't be the only one who knows what she's doing. Good luck and my love to both of them.

– Ken Campbell

ACTIVISTS NEEDED TODAY!
SEATTLE, WA
• FREE lodging
• FREE local transportation
• Collect signatures for state healthcare initiative
CALL NOW! (425) 783-0270

ECAMPUS.COM ANNOUNCES:
CASH BACK
For Your Used Textbooks
ecampus.com is paying top dollar for your used textbooks... just follow these easy steps to sell on-line...
STEP 1: Go to www.ecampus.com. Click on the BUYBACKS tab at the top of the screen...
STEP 2: Enter the ISBN number(s) for the books you want to sell...
STEP 3: Print out the FREE postage label and just drop your books in the mail...
STEP 4: Relax and wait for your CHECK to arrive in the mail.
ecampus.com
Books and Stuff. Cheap.
Call toll free 1.877.ecampus Really

CASH FOR BOOKS
WE PAY TOP DOLLAR
Jeffery Amherst College Store
55 SOUTH PROSPECT ST. AMHERST
253-3870 253-7816

NEWS ON THE ROCKS

DEAN COLLEGE
SUMMER 2002
90 COURSES
IN 8 ACADEMIC FIELDS
AND MORE
• 3 SEPARATE SUMMER SESSIONS
• DAY AND EVENING COURSES
• ACCELERATED COURSE SCHEDULES
• TRANSFER COURSES
• STUDENTS FROM OTHER COLLEGES WELCOME
• NON-CREDIT COMPUTER COURSES AVAILABLE
SUMMER SESSIONS I AND III OPEN JUNE 3RD
SUMMER SESSION II OPENS JULY 15TH
VIEW COURSES AND REGISTER ONLINE NOW!
WWW.DEAN.EDU
FOR FURTHER INFORMATION OR A BROCHURE, CALL
1-877-TRY-DEAN
E-MAIL: SUMMER@DEAN.EDU
99 MAIN STREET, FRANKLIN, MA 02038
CONVENIENTLY LOCATED OFF RTE. 495
FREE PARKING AND ACCESSIBLE
Dean COLLEGE

DAILY COLLEGIAN
EDITORIAL/OPINION
COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM ARTICLES IN 3,000 WORDS OR LESS ARE THE MOST LIKELY TO BE PUBLISHED ED/OP EDITOR: MATTHEW DESPRES

College students rake in too much debt

Sam Wilkinson

(U- The Columbia Chronicle (Columbia College) (U-WIRE) CHICAGO) — The semester is coming to an end, but college students' credit card limits have not. The saying goes that people learn from their mistakes. However, college students, seem to keep making them by filling out the numerous credit card applications available on campus.

Americans love their plastic. The average person carries about nine credit cards with a total balance of thousands of dollars, according to consumer advocate groups.

The trend of having four-plus credit cards is common among the college population. Yet even if the average person has a full-time job to pay off some of that debt, most college students can barely make the minimum payments.

Today, 18-year-olds can get a credit cards as soon as they set foot on a college campus-even if they don't have a job. No one seems to think there is anything wrong with this.

The freshman year in college sets the tone for a money-spending fiesta. Students start by charging only the "emergency" expenses such as books or tuition, but often they blindly slip into the "but I really deserve this vacation" mode.

In just a couple of years, students can end up with as much as $10,000 or more in credit card debt. That's why it's hard to believe that colleges still have profitable financial agreements with banks that issue credit cards to students.

Some colleges and universities receive fees for allowing credit card companies to push their cards on campus.

It is exasperating to note just how many times an academic institution can profit from students – from the obvious tuition hikes and class and book fees to the alleged monopoly contracts that are common between colleges and lenders. Such business contracts bring colleges a percentage of every purchase students make with their credit cards.

Here at Columbia College, the Alumni Association offers MBNA American Bank credit card to both alumni and anyone else from the college community who is interested. Every time an account is opened, the association receives a one-dollar fee and also a donation of 0.5 percent on a cardholder's purchases. The cardholder receives a fixed rate of 12.15 percent.

It is difficult to say whether academic institutions are really concerned with students accumulating large debt by charging another slice of pizza or new clothes. However, one thing is clear: A student who can only make the minimum credit card payment is ultimately a lender's money tree.

It may be hard to believe, but the numbers speak for themselves: A student with a credit card balance of $5,000 on a card with an 18 to 20 annual percentage rate who pays the minimum 3 percent monthly payment would take about 15 years to pay off their debt. In addition, that student would end up paying double the initial amount.

What's obviously a problem here is the lack of education. Students can receive counseling on their net lives, drugs and alcohol, but little is done to teach students about debt management.

Though colleges can't stop students from obtaining credit cards, it is good to see that some colleges are beginning to realize how important it is to teach students about their finances.

In fact, next year, Columbia's Alumni Association plans to organize seminars to educate students on how to manage their finances. Until then, students should probably pass up the free bottle of soda or T-shirt that comes with a credit card application at the campus table.

Unless represent the majority opinion of the Collegian editorial board.

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

Off he goes: Sam says farewell

To Julie. I wouldn't have entered the contest without you. I wouldn't have seen plays without you. I wouldn't have succeeded without you. You suggest that you don't matter to me – I wish I could make you know otherwise. So here's to creative away messages, savage reviews, brilliant insights, developmental editing, critical thought, sweet smiles, spreading freckles, conspiring patriarchies, Saturday mornings, vegetable dumplings, driving around, mocha-almond fappa-cappa-fegiafar-cinos, unbelievable tolerance and a wonderful person.

And if you don't believe that, you can kiss it.

I have paid a great deal of money to go to the University of Massachusetts and the things I leave treasuring the most came free of charge. Man, that'd be a great Hallmark Card.

Did you hear that Mike? Tell your Mom that it's Hallmark Card makin' time!

But don't tell her about the race riots at Dartmouth. Don't tell her about the wig, or you, the Bud Light, the 98 and the Great Southern Trendkill, or the – hey wait, is it time to order? You can tell her about the radical sect of vegetarianism that allows for wings and the Classic Triple (long live Dave), but nothing else. Tell her about the funky recipes that inside us want to write better. Tell her about the friend who forever rolled with it. Most of all Mikey I-yes, tell her that her baby boy is never getting confused for Horace Hogan.

You know what I'm talking about, don't you Mitch the killer? Next time we go gambling, we'd probably better try the "don't lose a ton of money at the table" strategy. And we're going tonight, right? Probably the only friend I ever had who small talks over things like the desire to fight, the relative simplicity of super algebra, the hidden tracks on Iron Maiden's fifteenth studio release, Idi Amin, etc. Sometimes though, I wish you'd get to the point. Anyway, to beers and Hair.

If…woo…If…woo…Truck Pole Sky! "No guys, it's Kurt Polesky."

You've waved away waiters, you've sounded like O'Reilly, you've marked out for Sut, you've chopped strangers in a bar, you've defined bozark, you've wrestled in the backyard, and you've made the jokes. Those endless jokes. ("Hey, I'm speaking yes, but given the opportunity she announced that she'd happily oversee the executions of third-world dictators. Semi brutal? It is, but she's honest. Studying politics, where it is easy to get lost in the abstraction of theory, I die made a point to remind her classes that the leaders we study are real and the pain they often cause is very real. It is, perhaps, the second most important lesson I ever learned in a class.

The first? That I'm no political scientist. For as much as I love these five professors, I could not then, and I cannot now, write academic papers to save my life. They push me past the point of excruciating boredom and I find myself staring blankly at the screen as I attempt to craft the "A" paper. I've never gotten one. In a world where the active political scientist is forever publishing I can't even get an A. Further damning me is this: instead of working on my independent study for Brigham, or my final for Edie, I've spent my time on this. I owe those two something around forty pages of written work and this is my production. Not good times. Bad times. It might seem backhanded, but I thank them for letting me know that I'm not as interested in this business as I thought. Better that I figure it out now.

The sweet blue hills of West Virginia are calling me home. Thanks to Jack at the New India Restaurant for the food, to Charlie Matty and Maureen for the work. To my parents for me. To Alex with love. To Bobbi with love.

Finally, to you. For reading. Even though you seemed to hate it.

Sam Wilkinson was a Collegian columnist.

CHECK OUT SENIOR SHAUNA BILLING COLUMN ON DAILY COLLEGIAN DOT COM

Catherine Turner

Doing it for my dad:
The Catherine you never knew

I am originally from the great state of Minnesota. I spent my freshman year of college at the University of Iowa before transferring out here. When I left the Midwest I had no idea just how much my life would change. I arrived at UMass so psyched to be in a different part of the country, with new people to meet and places to see. That first semester here was crazy go nuts. However, as high as I was on life during the fall, when I returned to Minneapolis for winter break, all the happiness that I had experienced totally vanished.

Three days after I stepped off the plane, my dad was dead. Early Christmas morning he was murdered. My sister and I had spent Christmas Eve with him at his house the night before. He was supposed to come over to my mom's for Christmas dinner the next afternoon. After he didn't show, and our calls went unanswered, my mom and I went to his house to see what was up. When we arrived, the front door was open. The water in the kitchen was on, and I found my dad face down in a pool of his own blood. We didn't know it at the time, but he had been bludgeoned to death with a metal die stamp.

I can still picture his body and feel the panic in my stomach that I felt that day. I was the one to discover his body. I was the one to call 911, and I was the one to feel for an absent pulse.

The cops came and homicide detectives were called to the scene. Within a few days we learned that they had a suspect in custody. Meanwhile, we had a memorial service and tried to deal with the confusion, sadness and anger that accompanies death. At the end of winter break I came back to UMass. When I got back, everything was different. It was cold. It had stopped being fun.

Within the next year, I had to testify in three separate trials. First in front of a Grand Jury during spring break. Then in the fall I went home for the official murder trial. My mom, sister and I all testified. I also sat through most of the testimony given by the cops, the blood spatter experts and relatives of the killer. After two weeks of sitting in court, we waited for the jury to reach a verdict. They came back hung, 11 to 1. The judge declared it a mistrial. In Minnesota, murder cases have to be unanimous. We had another trial the next January. It was at that time that we finally heard the verdict we wanted: the murderer was found guilty of murder in the first degree. A year after my dad was killed, we all breathed a sigh of relief and felt like there was finally closure. However, locking up the killer for life still didn't fill the void of losing my dad.

During the entire process, I stayed in school, and did pretty well too. I kept working at the Collegian and hanging out with my friends. However, the innocence and joy that I felt when I first stepped foot in Amherst had disappeared. I remember looking around and thinking how pretty most people's problems were, and how little anything really mattered. I cried all the time. I had terrible nightmares that bad things would happen to my family and me. I was no longer a regular college student. It was hard to concentrate on good grades or social activities when every day I was consumed with grief and fear.

It's been over two years now since my dad was murdered. I'm beginning to feel like myself again. The nightmares have pretty much all stopped, and I'm not susceptible to random bouts of bawling anymore, although I'm still completely heartbroken over losing my dad. He was such an amazing man, with whom I was very close. Ten days until graduation and my peers are preparing to march in commencement in front of their proud parents. I'm not going to walk. I had always planned on having my dad there when I graduated. Now he won't be there May 26, nor will he be there when I enter law school in the fall, graduate from law school, get married, or have children. I've have been unfairly cheated out of a father, and because of that, all of life's exciting and happy moments are tainted with sorrow. I know he's proud of me, wherever he is, but I would still give anything to see him and hear his voice.

Despite the gruesome, random and senseless crime that I witnessed, I stayed at UMass. I could have taken a semester off. I could have left for good. But I stayed because I knew that my dad would have wanted me to stay and get through school. And I stayed because my friends made it easier for me to get by. UMass is a great place when you get past the budget cuts, the decrepit state of the facilities and buildings, and the "Yankees Suck" chants. Even though now I'm ready to leave, I'm glad that I stuck it out here. I'm sure I'll miss it.

I could never have gotten through the grief and trauma without Dr. S.

Dean Vanin, though we've probably been on opposing sides the last couple of semesters, I truly appreciate you taking the time to make sure that I didn't just disappear into the crowd.

Dr. Jensen, I know you've kept your eye on me for a while now. You are an amazing professor who deserves the "Teacher of the Universe" award. Thank you for your guidance, your patience and your friendship.

Adam White, to us and describe our friendship in mere words would be insulting it. Thank you. The world is our oyster.

Dan, Ang, Bret, and Brenden, you people made everything more exciting, thanks for the adventures.

I emur, I hope the mum doesn't keep you down in Arizona, and to the entire Collegian staff, we really do an amazing job. Thanks for a great experience. I wish you all the best.

My family may be small, but we're strong. I love you. You sparkle like jewels.

Finally, Sean, you're the only one who really knows what I went through. I am so completely in love with you. You're not just in my life, you are my life. Thank you. I can't wait to go to Oregon. You're DINO-mite.

CMumm has now put down the mic.

Catherine "CMumm" Turner was a Collegian Staff member.

Letter to the editor:
Contemplating campus assaults

To the Editor:

I can't get over thinking about what I was doing at that moment. I'd gone to the Jurassic 5 concert at Amherst College the night before, gotten drunk with my buddies, had a blast. Early Sunday morning, sometime between 6 and 7, I got up to take an aspirin and drink some water. According to the police report and the articles in the Collegian, right around that same time, a woman in JQA was raped in her own bedroom while walking back from the shower. This brutal incident occurred in a building that I could see across campus from my own dorm room window. Just like the September 11th attacks, I have a difficult time forgetting what exactly I was doing, how I was carrying on with my own self-absorbed life, when such a despicable thing took place.

So many questions…

According to fairly solid rumors that I've come across, one of the men held her down and assaulted her while the other sent bizarre messages to the girl's friends over her computer. Was the rape based purely on unrestrained sexual urges or some sort of horrific Nietzchean power experiment like Raskolnikov killing the old pawn-broker? Was this girl pre-selected for some sort of fetishistic feature or was she simply in the wrong place at the wrong time? Were the rapists drunk? Stoned? Blitzed out of their minds on some perverse assortment of psychotic drugs? Did anyone hear the rape occurring? Did they have a moral crisis about how to react? Was it any of their business? Did the victim know her attackers? Was she staring into the face of someone she'd once trusted, now scared and hurting and betrayed?

I can't imagine that rape of this magnitude, this one or any other, is based on some guy who wants to have sex. There has to be more behind it, an urge for power and control. They must know that what they are doing is wrong. Even if the two men were drunk beyond coherency, they had to have been able to see, through the haze of alcohol, the pain they were causing. How could such forceful violence be pleasurable? This is not sex, or making love, it is pure assault and battery, an exercise in dominance.

Johnny Cash sang "I shot a man in Reno just to watch him die," a nihilistic outlook on the nature of violence and death. I can't help but wonder if the rapists had some sort of darker intellectual motive that drove them to attack this young woman or if it was simply to kill her spirit? To be even more pessimistic, I wonder if they did it purely "for the hell of it." I have a hard time believing they woke up and decided to rape a girl that day.

I'm saddened when I think that I co-exist with people who are capable of inflicting this kind of pain on somebody; and even more saddened when I remember that this sort of thing happens everywhere, every day. For each case like this that becomes publicized, there must be countless incidents that are swept under the rug and go on to secretly torment their victims. Until we can attain open dialogue on both the nature and motives of rape, it will continue to happen. It looks like the attackers in this particular incident will get away with it. We can only hope that, like Raskolnikov, they are driven to madness by the memory of their actions.

Jason Clemence and Wayne Pacileo UMass

"And he still gets his love, he just gives it away. The love he receives is the love that is saved. And sometimes IS seen a strange spot in the sky. A human being that was given to fly. I'm flying, oh. High flying, oh."

-Ed Vedder

WWW.DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM 5.15.02 ARTS EDITOR: MIKE DELANO

Woody A's H Ending

By Jake D. Lewis
COLLEGIAN STAFF

HOLLYWOOD ENDING
Starring Woody Allen, Tea Leoni, Debra Messing and Treat Williams
Directed by Woody Allen
Playing at Cinemark

The new Woody Allen film, Hollywood Ending, is a delight compared to other movies nowadays that call themselves comedies, but nonetheless lacks some of the beloved, biting commentary by one of the most neurotic men in Hollywood.

Here, like so many times before, we have the 60-something New Yorker lusting after a younger woman, while at the same time bumping into Seinfeldian problems left and right. "Bumping" would be the right word, too, because much of the humor that takes place in the film can be seen with a bit more panache in a movie by, say, the late Chris Farley, who practically perfected the art of walking into things and falling from tall heights.

Allen's character, Val Waxman, is a film director who goes psychosomatically blind while shooting the movie that will supposedly get him back on the A-List of Hollywood big shots, but he keeps the secret to himself and one or two others so he won't lose the gig. And while slapstick humor suits Woody well (notably Take the Money and Run), as much as we want to credit him with originality of the concept, there's the nagging at the back of our minds that this is all too familiar. The funniest moments are given away in the previews, but if you haven't seen them, then you are in luck. For others, though, the gags are too few and far between, and too

Turn to HOLLYWOOD page 7

Brandy- brand new

By Nikolas Markantonatos
COLLEGIAN STAFF

BRANDY
Full Moon
Atlantic

Care for some Brandy?

No, not that kind of Brandy. I mean singer Brandy Norwood, or simply Brandy as she's known to her fans.

Twenty-three year old Brandy is best known as a chart-topping sensation, but she has also made a name for herself as the star of the UPN sitcom "Moesha" (1996-2001) along with the 1997 teleplay Cinderella. In 2001, "Moesha" was abruptly cancelled from UPN's prime-time lineup. But the termination turned out to be a blessing in disguise. Without any projects to keep her occupied, she finally had time to herself. During this time Brandy went through a period of growth and self-evolution. Sadly she also suffered from an eating disorder that led to a collapse and a brief hospital stay.

We now find a newly married Brandy who is awaiting the birth of her first child. And this isn't the girl who's sitting up in her room arguing that the boys is hers. This transformation provided her with the name of the album—a complete 360-degree progression of change in her life that has helped her go full circle. This time she's singing about grown-up betrayal.

The Grammy Award winner returns with a stronger voice and more mature material. Although she tends to sing in the lower register, she shows she can kick it up a few notches on song, like "I Thought." A collection of futuristic, staccato and electronic rhythms accompanies the deeper vocals and heavier subject matter.

Producer Rodney Jerkins is at the helm of Full Moon, and rightly so. Jerkins became one of the biggest names in the business after crafting "The Boy is Mine," Brandy's duet with fellow R&B star Monica. The single hit No. 1 and stayed there for a staggering 13 weeks. This time Jerkins dresses Brandy's hoarser vocals in gritty, aggressive outfits completed by his signature bass-heavy production. If you like the first single "What About Us," you'll love the rest of the album.

"Can We," similar to "What About Us," is a slinky little concoction with a sharp edge and witty production value. The best part of the song is its ending as the oscillating beat trickles down until it finally fades out. "Apart" employs an airy groove over Brandy's soft vocals for a tight construction.

She wants to let you know that you can count on her in the fast-paced, jubilant "All in Me." A duet with her brother (who hasn't reached the success his older sis has) works well as his deep voice meshes with her lower voice on "Die Without You."

On "When You Touch Me" Brandy flips between her scratchy and soft voice using both to their fullest effect. "I'm coming to see you... I'm losing all self control/ Feels like I'm letting go/ And I'm loving every minute." Growl, this girl's on the prowl!

For all her hard work, poor Brandy's vocals could be anyone's. Brandy's smooth vocal style is still her strong suit. Many tracks are faceless filler that do little to differentiate her from the growing crop of R&B stars. The second half of the album is filled with mushy R&B balladry. "Love Wouldn't Count Me Out" "He Is" "Come a Little Closer" and "WOW" are schmaltzy, interchangeable tracks.

By the time Brandy takes us on her circular rotation, the creation becomes a bit banal and the album seems to have suffered from overproduction. The fact that the album clocks in at a lengthy (especially for an R&B album) hour and thirteen minutes doesn't help.

New Guy old news

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

THE NEW GUY
Directed by Ed Dexter
Starring DJ Qualls, Eddie Griffin and Eliza Dushku
Playing at CineMark 12, Hadley

Is there a more desperate act for a comedy then to parade out a string of celebrity cameos? Whenever a movie trots out one has-been actor or B-list music star after another, it seems as though the filmmakers are making a tacit acknowledgment of the general uselessness of the movie. The big, show stopping moment when yet another star is shoehorned into the plot at hand only serves to enhance the fact that the movie has little to no plot to begin with. The atrocious new teen comedy The New Guy pads out it's meager storyline with one celebrity cameo after another, but this time it doesn't even give its celebrities anything to do.

To describe The New Guy as chintzy is to give it too much credit to begin with. The movie is not just rickety, but ready to be leveled. There's no story to speak of, no characters and no jokes. Comedies routinely get called unfunny, but this one doesn't even seem to be making the attempt at humor. After 20 minutes, the filmmakers stop giving a damn. The audience did that 15 minutes earlier.

DJ Qualls, the lanky young nerd from Road Trip, stars as Dizzy, a lanky young nerd (I guess Qualls avoided typecasting) who becomes a laughingstock at his high school after a librarian breaks a part of his anatomy I'm sure no male would ever want broken. Determined to rectify his lowly status, Dizzy gets himself expelled and takes coolness lessons from Luther (Eddie Griffin, acting once again like a cut rate Chris Tucker), a convict the teen met during his brief stay in prison. Sporting a new a spiky, badly-dyed hairdo, Dizzy reinvents himself as Gil and enrolls at a new school that happens to be one of those hopeless high schools where the football team hasn't won since the "last Bush was in office." Dizzy, applying his lessons in the mystique of cool, transforms himself into the most popular guy at school and turns the school's fortunes around.

The New Guy, as in all recent comedies aimed at teenagers, hinges its humor on crude jokes. Qualls falls off roofs and crashes into cars, his father gets a flaming marshmallow in his eye and Vanilla Ice, looking in sore need of attention, shows up as a bruiser at a record store. But for all the injuries, there is rare a laugh. The big slapstick moments are badly staged; they are more laborious to watch then they probably ever were to set up. The only funny thing about The New Guy is how it fits into the microcosm of the teen movie universe. The stories are becoming increasingly assembly line and decreasingly funny (even the title is generic). It's gotten to the point where even the parody movie is as devoid of interest as the "real" films.

Qualls has a certain geeky charm that makes the character of Dizzy more palatable then the rest of the movie, which smells like a fish living dead in the sun. For proof that hell can have cold days, The New Guy manages to rob both Eliza Dushku and Zooey Deschanel of their personalities. (Dushku gets cast in a nothing love interest role that has all the depth of wallpaper; Deschanel plays the pretty best friend, and comes off as a pod person version of herself.) But Griffin is the one who most embarrasses himself. He gave a genuine performance in the otherwise forgettable Foolish, but now he continuously lives and minces in movies like Double Take.

Columbia Pictures shelved The New Guy for a couple of years before tossing it out into theaters. The dust on the movie has now gotten so thick that asthmatics are forewarned to stay away from the movie theater. Actually, everyone is forewarned to stay away, unless they have the burning desire to waste money.

COMING SOON TO A COMMENCEMENT CEREMONEY NEAR YOU.... OUR ARTS SENIORS

Mike Delano

Nick Lizzalato

Erena Panesis

The Artsy Bunch

Shauna Billings

Sam Wilkinson

Kurt Polesky

Julie Burrell

Kevin Monahan

Missing Joe is a power pop favorite

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

MISSING JOE
Highway Songs
Catapult

Power pop is a funny thing. This strange breed of music, mixing sunny melodies with pouncing guitars, has an odd affliction that seems to strike throughout the entire genre rather than the individual artists. It's noticeable when you press STOP on the CD player after listening to a power pop album in its entirety. Even if every single song on the album is a stunner, the album itself becomes hard to listen to. Your attention drifts; songs go in one ear out the other... it takes a few listens to actual get to appreciate the record. It's as if the tracks, as good as they are separate, can't support each other. The album illustrates the old maxim that the whole is less than the sum of its parts.

And so it goes with the Boston-based Missing Joe. Not that their new CD Highway Songs is bad. Nor is it a big complaint that it is all but impossible to stay with Highway Songs for its entire (albeit brief) running time. It is just an oddity that afflicts it. All it means is that instead of listening to in length, one will just end up skipping around and switching around with other CDs to avoid boredom with the album.

Missing Joe is a band for the kinds of music fans who like Fastball, Everclear, Goo Goo Dolls and the Verve Pipe. It's meant to be listened to while sitting on the porch with friends sipping lemonade, or while taking a carefree drive in the car with the windows down or the top rolled back. There is just enough edge in the music (thanks to the guitars and drums) and intelligence in the lyrics to keep the songs on Highway Songs from turning into the kind of forgettable, flyweight novelties that become popular on Memorial Day and permanently burn out by Labor Day.

From the kickoff track "Headphones" to the penultimate "Candy" (the last song, "Fold It In A Letter," is the only dud on the album) the album is a shimmery joy to listen to. The songs do sound sort of similar to a lot of the songs that MTV and the WB anonymously use as background music (in fact, four of the tracks will be used on a new MTV show called "Sorority Life"). But the familiarity is welcoming, like a pair of old tennis shoes, rather than wearying, like a desperate musical act trying to catch someone else's lightning in a bottle.

Songs lift high in the air to touch the skies, before swooping down to earth with a rootsy twang. The mid-tempo "Headphones" is a radio friendly hit with Matt Rafal's raspy vocals entwined with the twirling mild-rock instrumentation. The lyrics "you're in my headphones/ down my backbone" is meant to represent romantic longing but could easily apply to the music. The Americana-tinged "Just One Song" is at a piece with Train's poppier tracks, like "She's On Fire," and could accurately predict the coming good fortunes of the band ("Just one song/ and everything will could change"). "California Angels" is another mid-tempo, hint-of-roots number, and it comes complete with a hopeful chorus that recalls the best sing-a-longs of Cracker.

Since their inception in 1996, Missing Joe has been gaining fans. They have played with bands like Luscious Jackson, Third Eye Blind, Live, 311 and Better Than Ezra. The professionalism that comes with sharing the stage with more popular acts certainly shows on Highway Songs. They have now acquired one new fan. In a short time, they will manage to break out of New England and become national favorites.

■ hollywood

continued from page 6

old hat to work as well as they might have back when Woody was at the top of his game.

What works in Hollywood Ending is the self-reflexive nature that Woody takes in clearly poking fun at himself. He knows best of anyone that his past few movies have been duds (Small Time Crooks, Curse of the Jade Scorpion), and he is trying to right that wrong with this movie. When Val tells his agent, Al (Mark Rydell) that he has gone blind and that he can't shoot the movie now, Al exclaims "Have you seen some of the pictures out there nowadays?" This is the Woody audiences know and love, the one who doesn't stoop for the easy laugh, found in physical comedy, but turns the butt of the joke on himself, his peers and partially on society.

The wide array of talents that Woody gets to star in his movies (with remarkably low salaries too) here consists of the much underrated Tea Leoni as Allen's ex-wife Ellie who gets him the job and Will and Grace's Debra Messing, who plays the twenty-something air headed girlfriend of Val. Tiffani Theissan also makes an appearance as a young actress who wants to sleep with Val. She seduces the blind auteur to her dressing room, where he mistakenly thinks her large breasts are throw pillows.

As Woody gets older, these relationships he has with much younger women becomes less and less comical. Exactly why would anyone want to be with him in the first place? He's paranoid (at one point he says he has a fear of a disease that only trees get), he's irritable, and he's... well... old. It's hard to see why any smart woman, like Leoni's Ellie, would marry this codger in the first place. And even if she is a ditz, Messing's character would be more prone in reality to say "As if!" instead of "What a hunk." It's not like the ladies can claim the Anna Nicole Smith defense that he's rich; he lives in quaint apartment/basement of a small brownstone. Evidence of Val's sweet side only shines through at the end of the film when he is cured and lays eyes upon his wife again: "Husbands should go blind more often." More of this and less of the angst-ridden former personality would perhaps make Allen's character more three-dimensional and less backneyed.

At film's end, Allen forsakes New York City, the place that gave his career life. Instead, he decides to go to France where his art can be appreciated, ending his Hollywood life for a new beginning elsewhere.

"I'm not a player, I just crush a lot." Big Pun, R.I.P. Arts misses you. And you will all miss Mike Delano too.

www.dailycollegian.com

FRUGAL FRIDAY!
JOIN US IN OUR CELEBRATION
FRIDAY, MAY 17TH
ONE DAY ONLY!
BUY 1 CLOTHING ITEM
and get an item of equal or lesser value
50% OFF!
University of Massachusetts UMASS UNIVERSITY STORE
Campus Center • Phone: (413) 545-2619
www.umass.bkstr.com

FIND LIFE'S DIRECTION IN THE
PEACE CORPS
PEACE CORPS
international experience, adventures & life-long learning with programs in:
Business Agriculture Environment
Education Health Community Development
SENIORS, IT'S NOT TOO LATE-
Be overseas at the end of summer.
JUNIORS, IT'S NOT TOO EARLY -
Increase chances for a preferred assignment.
Contact the UMass Peace Corps Representative:
Office: Room 112, Stockbridge Hall, 545-2105
E-mail: peacecorps@fnr.umass.edu
Website: www.peacecorps.gov
MAKE POSITIVE CHANGES IN THE WORLD
& Make Positive Changes in YOURSELF

Murder by Numbers is a big zero

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

MURDER BY NUMBERS
Directed by Barbet Schroeder
Starring Sandra Bullock and Ryan Gosling

It's getting hard to be shocked or surprised by anything that occurs in a serial killer movie nowadays. Murder has been [illegible] tragedy and sadness; it is [illegible] for movies to turn murder into a puzzle box mystery where life isn't the most important thing at stake – it's simply the last piece of the puzzle. But it's not just the humanity that has been thrown away. Hollywood's insistence at turning every successful formula into [illegible] has resulted in thrillers being [illegible] then thrills.

The latest stab at the genre is Murder by Numbers, a logy suspense drama [illegible] of the one thing that is most central to it's existence: suspense.

Week after week, the cookie-cutter TV series CSI (Crime Scene Investigation) [illegible] investigator's attempts to solve [illegible] death into a public guess, with the viewers invited to see how the CSI team assemble the puzzle from the [illegible] of puzzle pieces. The result is [illegible] and entrancing mystery, the kind that a ball hearted film like Murder by Numbers can't even measure up to.

The movie pretends to let Sandra Bullock, the princess of warm-and-[illegible] romantic comedies, show some [illegible] while Bullock does a good job, the role is nothing but a dark-toned [illegible] of previous Bullock roles. She plays Cassie Mayweather, a tough-as-nails homicide detective, nicknamed "the hyena" because of her extreme ballsiness (female hyenas have mock penises). Her dark and terrible secret leads her to bed and dismiss almost every male that crosses her path, with the newest victim being her gentlemanly new partner (Ben Chaplin, playing a cipher).

The troubles of Cassie are intercut with her (slightly) more interesting new case. A woman was found dead in the woods, and all the evidence points to a drug-dealing, porn-addicted high school janitor. But Cassie has a funny hunch about a popular, kings-of-the-school teen named Richard (the terrific and haunting young actor Ryan Gosling). The movie makes it clear that the janitor is innocent and that Richard did commit the murder, along with introverted brainiac Justin (Michael Pitt, an equal to Gosling). The two enemies at school, secret friends in private meet at a rotting cliffside shack where the swill absinthe, talk philosophy and plot a "perfect" murder. The kids would've gotten away too if Cassie just didn't have that hunch. It isn't long before Cassie's bosses are kicking her off the case and someone goes spilling over that cliff.

The screenwriter, Tom Gaston, is an obvious student of Silence of the Lambs, Seven and just about every other serial killer movie that has ever existed. He knows full well how to follow the same rutted road as the hundred thousand films before it. If one thing about Murder By Numbers is surprising to anyone in the theater, than they are not the least bit versed in movies.

If Numbers is numbing to listen to and watch, but at least the acting keeps it from derailing completely. Bullock, relishing the chance to be someone other than Julia Roberts' alter ego, gives a good, solid performance as the tormented Cassie. She shows a fire lacking in fluff like Miss Congeniality, and is only shackled by the demands of her character.

Gosling and Pitt are two of the most buzzed about young actors in Tinseltown (thanks to appearances in respective acclaimed indies The Believer and Hedwig and the Angry Inch) and give the movie's two best performances. Gosling, who looks like a skinnier version of the young Sean Penn, alternates between charm and menace, and sometimes manages to combine the two. The baby-faced Pitt exactly resembles the kind of sweet, brainy innocent that can get lured to the dark side by a more dynamic personality.

Since Bullock is also the executive producer (which is beginning to seem more and more like a matinee idol perk than an actual job description), it is possible that she and Warner Bros grafted on the "Cassie's catharsis" subplot as a means for audiences to remember that this is indeed a Sandra Bullock movie. Schroeder and Gayton should have fought to shed the whole damn therapeutic storyline, as well as the police procedural aspect of the story. They may have been left with a riveting drama about amorality, about the influences of culture and peer pressure on the young, beautiful and aimless. It may not have been as commercially successful, but it would have been a lot interesting to watch. Instead, audiences have been left with nothing but moviemaking by numbers.

COURTESY CASTLE ROCK ENTERTAINMENT

Sandra Bullock gets tricky in Murder By Numbers. Wanna [illegible] who's a fibre? Julie Burrell.

BOO!!!!!! Scared ya... oh wait, no this movie doesn't. The [illegible] really scary thing is that Shauna Billings is graduating

Stephen Kellogg gets Lucky

COURTESY OF KELLOGG

Local boy Stephen Kellogg makes good. How's that for newsy sounding.

By Nikolas J. Outchcunis
COLLEGIAN STAFF

If you missed Stephen Kellogg's third album South of Stephen, that's quite unfortunate. If you miss his new record Lucky 11, that's a damn shame.

This 26-year-old singer/songwriter from Northampton has come a long way since his 1995 demo tape, Invest in Us. Seven years and four albums later, this folk rocker has come around full circle and is threatening to break into the national spotlight with his unparalleled songwriting ability and tremendoush beautiful vocals.

Produced by Dave Chalfant (formerly of the Nields), Lucky 11 is a perfect blend of acoustic rock, soothing harmonies and soulfelt lyrics crafted deep within the heart of Kellogg himself. The first track on the album, "Anthem of Our Discovery" hits hard with a steady rock groove, sweet bass line and a catchy chorus. Track two moves quickly into the third cut "Guitar & Tambourine," a rocking love ballad laced with intricate guitar licks and beautiful backing vocals: "I remember how you looked as you lay sleeping/Baby I would stay awake just to hear you breathing/If you were the guitar, can't you see I was the tambourine/I've accepted who you are, could you do the same of me..."

Harmonica-driven "Days" just makes you feel good about being alive. In spite of all the heartache that weights us down from day to day, this song reminds us that "when the good day comes, you've got to do as the good das demands." This refreshingly optimistic tune goes well with the rest of the album and shows us that there is more to life broken hearts and rainy days.

Upbeat and thought-provoking "Pre-disposition" captures the typical struggle between man and alcoholism but skillfully tells that it can be overcome with strong willpower. "Whatever you heard prior/You can only live your life like a person you'd admire/You can learn it in a bottle, learn it in dream/That the way you see yourself is the way you need to be..."

Kellogg breaks new ground with track nine entitled "Uninspired Gambling" where a distinctive horn section tastefully adds to an already infectious tune. Fan favorite "Such a Way" comes in at track eleven and brings new meaning to the words "love ballad." Quite possibly the most moving song on the record, "Such a Way" gets back to basics as Kellogg shows us his soul with a guitar and a real life love story set to music. If this is any indication of what's to come, it won't be long before Stephen Kellogg finds his way into CD players across the nation.

■ misty-eyed's

continued from page 12

Yo, like one time I was in the, you know, the Laundromat, and like I was like, you know, that time in the, well, washing, because, like the clothes in the, the, the, the, the... Detergent. Y'all busted.

Remember... First Dave Gorman sighting. English Accent. Chick in the pink sweater. Bird jersey. Looking up the cheerleader's skirt, caught on the Megatron. Off-campus NC State party. "Yes, I'm British. (4 hours)." "Hey, have you met Eric, the other kid from England?" Whitney. Justin, I think she loved you, too. "Pop" serenade. Leather pants chick. "Catch her!" Rose: "Yes, they're really from England." "Have you ever heard of Wu-Tang?" Waffle House. Waffle House. Waffle House. Are you Dave Gorman? First New York cab ride. Westbeth Theatre. Red afro, hold the show. Giving Dave Gorman the UMass shirt. Nadine's Restaurant. Shooting the isht with Dave Gorman, for 5 hours. Mel. Getting kicked out of Nadine's. Ten minutes late for my Law test.

The first game of the second pitch, before the last throw of the first inning, minus the wind speed of the first game's velocity, rounded to the nearest Sortino. Merritt, you officially defined "skilled untapped talent."

First Philly weekend. Taking one for the team. Hitting on the TGIFriday's Waiter. Nomar dead. Pietro's Pizza. Martignetti word count: 0. Expensive jerseys. Cosmo quiz. Columbus discovered America (Thrice). Illegal breakfast. Jim making the rookie mistake at Jim's Steaks. Suds on ESPN2. Pulled over. Rose not talking. Rose still not talking. Rose never talking.

Xavier. Sacco oversleeping. Free rental insurance. English waiter. Sitting next to Cal. Cell block. Montgomery Inn Ribs in Kentucky, with the elders. Police at the hotel. Waffle House.

Second Philly weekend. Demars' video camera. Used-condom smelling elevator. Black nude contest. "Rose has been up for the last 30 minutes." Jamie Foxx special. Wuttuwuttawuttawuttawuttaway.....ooohnaahnahh, Africa. A-10 Media Game. Fifty-foot rainbow in Rose's face. Undefeated. Exemption for life. Rose vs. Suds Round 1. On to Navy. Rose vs. Suds Round 2. Demars ordering a burger at Waffle House.

Penn State. There's two O's in "Manooku Subaru" boys! Never laughed harder. Sacco's crying again. Ruby Tuesday's. The biggest menus this here side of life. Hot chick brackets. Aubrey going nuts in the press box.

Brady's first Denino's slice. Brady's first chairs experience. Not old enough (23). Voice throwing. "Yeah, because I've been thyming the whole time. Wooood!"

Everyone in the balcony stand up. They're not ready. Oh, don't play No. 6 again. That songs sucks. It's like blaa... Gettysburg. On time. Put some pants on! (Pants). Wentworth. Don't jump!

Junkyard's. Dunkin' Donuts: two egg n' cheese's on sesame; two poppy toasted with cream cheese. Denino's. Bagels. Subway, Antonio's. Bueno.

Georgetown. Almost killed the bus driver. Patriot protesters. Fastest way to get to G-Town? HA! Suds jumping out and getting parking space. Café Japone. Awful. Suds and Sacco, same ID, same bouncer. Knockboot's exit chick. Knockboot's fake-guido ex-boyfriend. McPlurry's. Okay, at the same time. Metro at Foggy Bottom.

Doot doot. The whiff. Gone. She's tall. He's tall. Holy Isht!!! (Hot chick in the crappy minivan). Are you talking about the first guy or the second guy? The first. With the stuff? Yeah, with the stuff. What about the thing? The thing. No, the third guy. There's a third guy. Yeah. He's the reason the second guy pulled out and stepped on your face. Bob's Big Boy. Seconds? Yeah. Thirds? Yeah. Fourths? No. Except for Rose and his 13 biscuits.

Toronto. Sleeping in car. Sucked. SUUUPERMAN! Death to Merritt. Prediction Lists. YEAH NUMBER FIVE! Waitress 1. Marry me. Waitress 2. Marry Sacco. Charlie Brown. Karaoke. Brady solo. Merritt's sneakers. RUFF! RUFF! Yeah Raptors Flag. Don't mess with Philly. Vermont blizzard.

Vogt's one fat smoker chick. Kflan's kick of destruction. What's at stake here? Delaware bridge. Straites. Air guitar. Waffle House manager talking isht about IHOP. 58 seconds! 46 seconds! B.C.'s death. Central. Conn., great shrimp. HandSJPthePack. It's perpendicular. Cmunny blazin'. Muppet dicks. Orgazzum. DJ Goods. Brooklyn's Finest. Dan and Adam, always in rare form. Tom and Paul, ny brothers. Testes. Michelle. "Real World" dates. Finding me dead in the hallway. Sara, my name is Sara. Serendipity acting sessions with Chris. Notting Hill ones to come. Lizzy throwin' out the Oscars on WMUA. Anna Scott, McMurphy's premiere. Really badly.

And that's not even half of it. May the force be with you.

(To the Graduates. Justin: Thank you for teaching me what's important. The way you live life has taught me a lot. It's what saved me first semester, and I'll never forget it. I know, James Bond never had to put up with this shit. Catherine: You're nuts, and that's why I love you. I will never stop trying to figure you out, or hating Hartford. I promise I will not release an album if you're not on it. Sam: Thanks for saving this paper. I know it killed you, but no one else could have done it. You've been a good friend. Rose: Please remember me when you're broadcasting the NBA Finals. I'll want to call and argue with you. And, Delano: When you figure out the password, please let me know.) Go Celtics!!!!!

misty-eyed's

continued from page 9

Ken, the Undertaker sucks. Get over it. God I hate you. What? Did you think I would finally be nice to you when you were about to graduate? Yeah, right.

Strates, your passion for the Boston sports scene is tremendous and (usually) appreciated. NOW GET OUT OF MY NEWSROOM!

Lizzy, on the otherhand, can stay, now that she has joined us. Run, Lizzy, run for your life!

Despres, if it wasn't for you, ya...ya...ya. Well, if it wasn't for me, you wouldn't have a job!

Jesse "Jew-bacca" Greenspan
(Assistant Sports Editor)

After two and a half years this is my last night working for sports at The Collegian. That doesn't mean the Greenspan tradition is done, though. Look for more bird columns when I come back from Arizona next spring.

Let me first say thanks to all the people that helped me with my writing down here, past and present.

To the ski, women's hoop, men's hoop, baseball, softball, women's lax, and especially the field hockey team – thanks.

When I covered skiing my freshman year, the coach left at the end of the season. When I covered men's hoop sophomore year, Bruiser was fired at the end of the season. When I covered women's hoop this year, Joanne O'Brien was fired at the end of the season. Good luck to whichever team I cover next winter.

Sacco: When the revolution comes we will obviously be on opposite sides. Until then, though, it has been a pleasure working with you.

Suds: If I ever hit it with another man, it will undoubtedly be you. And if you come back next spring with a sweet Irish accent, that will make you even sexier.

Glen and Eric: The Christian man can't keep a Jew (or half Jew) down forever. Shalom.

Catherine: You are everything I could have asked for in a friend and roommate. When I come visit you I will see what this Minnesota pride is all about. Viva C-Mamm.

All you other Collegian punks are all right, too.

Melissa: You don't work down here, but I wanted to give you a Collegian shout out anyway. Don't forget how much you mean to me. Siempre sere tu hombrero.

Maybe next semester I'll write a guest column – Span in Sand. And for all my readers out there (all two of you) some love mail would be nice every now and then. My self-confidence still hasn't recovered since a bunch of Republicans told me how worthless I was after my affirmative action ed/op.

Well, that is about it for me. Paz.

Matthew F. "Spotwalker" Sacco

STATEN ISLAND, Shaolin – Busted...One fat smoker chick...bowl dance...Waffle House...Denino's, in crust we trust...bagels...23 for guys, 12 for girls...Delaware bridge, JP...Strates in the back...doin the air guitar...good god hide the women and children...HBC...cuz we're awesome...Roots sweatshirt...hand the puck...after nuclear winter subsided...hit with a guided missile...yeah 27...free golf...grilled cheese...cheese omelet, rye toast, pancakes, grilled bagel with cream cheese...lemur...dinosaurs everywhere...pod race sound effects...use the force...straw...subway...antonio...it's a race...who had coconut...garbage can...seeds in the water jug...Toronto waitresses...Charlie Brown...big fuckin sandwich...drunk wrestling...the toaster doesn't work...foot dot...the whiff...gone...she's tall, he's tall...I sht on your face and call you ron!!!!...ooooh $-it, thot chick in the crapps minivan!...what's she doin...are you talking about the first guy or the second guy?...the stuff...the thing...there's a third guy?...just pull out and step on her face...weekend eating of a lifetime...Bob's Big Boy, seconds, thirds...Clyde's...that's an awesome restaurant, you ever been to that restaurant, I've heard great things about that restaurant...I don't like that dorm, it just doesn't do it for me, its-got good structure-but...Is this planned or...Wentworth crowd...tour not ready...Got that good hair. I'm a victim brother, even my conditioning has been conditioned...Toronto...sleeping in the car, worst night ever...death to Merritt...SLUUPPHERRIAN...prediction lists. YEAH NUMBER FIVE!...yeah IR...don't mess with Philly...Vermont and Canada, worst ride ever...changing catholic school girls...there's two O's in Mitsuoka Subaru boys...what is it shitbead.com...is that shithead number one or shithead number two...the chairs...you got your anthrax, can't forget the cipro...suds bein negative, we're gonna make it to Gettysburg, Roots...?uest Love, its cold out, you better recognize...peer pressure to buy Star Wars, Spider Man...I hate number 9 he keeps givin me lip...Hockey Hall of Fame...busted at Wrentham outlets...golfing with Zang and Papa Suds in freezing at 6 in the morn...Serendipity...Ruby Tuesday's, gigantomenus...dissed at MacMurphy's...guitar dudes...Pimple...we got no pain...Rose is denied at Denny's...Thundering Terd...just pretend they're naked, its perpendicular...late night Tiger...that's incredible, then don't eat it...welcome to the island of pain, population that guy...knockboot...D.C...pregame dunks...chick bracketology...detergent...she's a one seed...his wife...God...if a pigs gunna cross the rocks mountains its gonna take a while...f*ck Syracuse, I wouldn't play for any team besides UMass...tournes...hey look Fairfield's dead...Navy's battleship pressbox...DeMars' Tiger...Mrica...the comforter...gym membership...McFlurry...almost killed the bus driver...putrid protestors...fastest way to get to G-town? HA!...Suds jumping out and getting parking space...Cafe Japone, awful...Suds and Sacco, same ID, same bouncer...knockboot's evil chick, fake-guido ex-boyfriend...okay, at the same time, Metro at Foggy Bottom...bark for the Raptors flag...Hartford, in a lacrosse game...I have seen enough, get me outta here...Regan, Lizzy, Rose, Brady, what a hotel room...umm, its like, so, what im sayin is, femine think...aaaahhh, yeah that's it, its like boom...yeah cuz we're goin to Maine...just need one more ticket...Is this Russia...the Dali Lama himself, flowing robes, grace, bald, striking...so I got that goin for me, which is nice...Bethpage, the Open...watched every shot of the masters...Old Barns...Sacco's up 27...golf in the projects on Victory...Rod's, ordered a Guinness...on the beach planning the sports section...this here side of life...D'Iais in Belmar, count 'em...Vance's metachelorine level is through the roof...but Larry, Larry cried...creative writing...ruined the Ryder Cup...Pedro...look how he has grown, I'm so proud...sorry, wrong button...talented rookie...late night Dunks...I've seen the Wall Street Journal lady more times than some of my friends...the chick car...one hot smoker chick...got the finger from the guy on the shoulder on the way to the cape...Sabres fans suck...Lauryn Hill, Lauryn Hill...playin the Roots goin through Philly...Halloween...thugged out...the police...Mary J. number six is awful...the famous jump shot...Rose = Weeks...bubble hockey, air hockey...Vogt's Hurricanes hat...Foot hates losing...Hmo...karaoke in Toronto...Suds signin a record deal...MI at the Fleet center...Cinnabon...four freshmen uptown...club sidekwalk...Brady's waitress obsession...Mert's CD store obsession...Roots store...Original Six...Junkyard Dogs baby...CSHL...all nighter...annihilating Campbell...Vogt falls on girls...Sacco almost kills Brady...the famous jumping goal...Regan is comfortable with his sexuality...or so it seems, or so we're led to believe...my 21st B-day, Charlie'...Turner: drrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrrnnnnnnnk...saw Stuart Scott...here's the picture, the devil is out of the picture...so your motto is no pain huh?...BC dad!...wanna beat up the BC fan that gave us the finger...give im regards to your lacrosse team...Sacco's three keys to the game...beat the f--k...don't get beat the f--k...and bang the f--k...watching Tin Cup in traffic, worst ending ever...cuz I've been rhyming the whole time, ooh...Brades stop throwing your voice...flesh shots...you're not invited...don't sell the farm Ray...we've got a very unspecific voice here...winnin' as in better than losin'...how'd we ever win eight...lollygaggers...don't get busted.

Justin "Nomar-D2" Pearson

This is it, the end, ain't no sunshine once I'm gone so this is going to have to be vicious. Justin's Misty Eyes, look in the top shelf they're not there. They're above it...way above it!

Philly trip uno, Girls Just Wanna Have Fun, thanks Kelly Nigh I am now forever scared, but the whole women's soccer team will get a shout out when I make it big on DanceTV.

No really, we're English. Have you met that other English kid, Eric? Whitwoo and Jersey girl. Have you ever heard of Wu-Tang? Suds, I think she loves me. Suds, I'm sick and tired of all these people all they talk about, what's the deal with this Pop-life and when's it gonna fade out? Check it out, it's the Guess chic, wasn't she wearing that sweater yesterday. Magic jersey or Bird shorts, is it really a question? Buy the sneakers from her, she wants a piece. You got busted on the jumbotron...at least she was hot. Leather pants, follow her. We're the most popular Englishmen in North Carolina. It's 3am but not to late for waffle house. Brady, what are grits...are you really supposed to eat that?

Dave Gorman. This is what he looks like, and this is what he sounds like. "Hello, my name is Dave Gorman." Stop F'in asking if I'm Dave Gorman can you read my pin, it clearly states that I am NOT Dave Gorman so stop asking already. Oh, Nadine's with Dave, Judy, Mel and Sudsy, it's not soon to be forgotten. What do ya say, one more cup of coffee, you got five hours until the test. We'll make it. Suds one day, when we're both unemployed and in need of some kicks we'll go find other Justin Pearson's...it could be fun.

Suds, wanna go gamble, oh wait you're 12. At least the food was good. Eat it F*cker! Sacco, he's a BC kid, go kick his @$$. Is the announcer guy dead or his he just drooling over the dance team?

Philly 2— I'm sick, don't talk to me. Ha-Ha Goods, you got pulled over. Christopher Columbus will never be the same again and we're all the worse for hearing that. CANNON-BALL, CANNON-BALL. Wanna watch 'Notting Hill again? Mitchell and Hess. I'm cold and hungry lets just eat. The Jim's Steaks deuce, Rose, Rose, Rose...is he ever gonna talk again? I'm getting scared now.

The Cellblock, just wipe it off your hand and drink. At least the fat chic didn't accost me. Why are the cops at our hotel, So where's this party at? How can you forget the name of the street, he said in four seconds ago. Now this is the ghetto, I'm sitting next to Cal and the hottest cheerleader in the A-10 is right in front of me. Suh-weet. I don't care we're getting ribs in Kentucky. Fast Bridgewater...it's the Vikings right. Anna Scott I really want to talk to you.

Rose, don't fight Mauser, he's our friend.

Philly 3— Why's it smell like condoms in here? Come on Rose just join in, you know you'll love it. DeMars, get me a copy of that film. Rose really, I thought you were done with that omelet. My bad. McGinn's to Signatures, worked once gotta try it again.

Collegian softball, we didn't lose...we just ran out of time. Base hit Rose, all we need is a base...F#%$

Jorma, Coach Rudy, Barnes, and Lappas, thanks for the help. Jandle, good luck in the future...England-Argentina, one fly...or so it seems, or so we're led to believe...my 21st B-day, ticket PLEASE. See what you can do with that, I'll get back to you.

Merritt, keep the tradition alive...first off make sure that someone shows you what that tradition is. I would but me outie.

Smitty, well you used to be cool.

Vogt, get the hell out of my house and my column.

Pig, you're in charge next year so show 'em how to do it, and keep women's soccer there just isn't a better beat.

KFlan and Shattuck, do you two work here or is that just a distant memory. Well done though. One of you wanted me and one of you made out with me, but who is who?

Greenspan, are you high?

Suds go piss and I'll pour you another Guinny, you better pour me one in Galway.

Sacco and Brady keep the tradition alive, it may have been last year but I have one word for you, appledick. Still a classic.

Rose you kept me from drinking by myself on so many nights and I can't thank you enough for it. Hey, guess what, we're graduating.

Everyone else, space is limited so here it goes Anna, Jenny, Colleen Sara, Matt, Sherpa, Derek, Pete, Clown, Sam, Cmunny, Regan, DeMars, Stratus, Jess B, the women's soccer team and the rest of you all, thank you and good luck. Cheers! Dinner's on me. It'll be pukka.

Wednesday night, McMurph's, do you need to ask? Rose is buying.

While you might not understand all this and regret reading it forever, I, on the other hand, will not, and be forever grateful that you came and spent the night reading my ramblings.

Matt "Brady Wan Kenobi" Brady

Three years down, two to go. It's scary how fast these times have gone, but knowing there are so many great things to come makes it easy to get excited for the future. First off, I have to send my shoutouts to those who have to move on to the real world – y'all better be in touch.

Sam – When I first met you I thought you were the scariest guy I'd ever met. But as time wore on, your love for the paper and dedication taught me a lot about what I should be as a leader down in the basement. And we did make up the best coaching staff in intramural softball history. I'm sure some newspaper will be glad to hire you to piss everyone off – I'd hate to see your best talent wasted.

Ken – Even though I barely knew you until late last year, the night-copy bond brought us together. Days at the grad lounge were a good time, though not plentiful enough. Thanks for being my translator and keeping me alive on my 21st. And need I say more than, "Are the kids asleep?"

Nomar – There were not enough nights to get uptown this year, but we definitely made the best of them. And guitar dudes will always be here waiting for you next year. There wasn't the number of trips this year that we had last year, but NC State will always remain one of the most hilarious experiences in my life. And there was no way you were getting the futon to yourself. You're a great friend and you best be making some trips here if you're not overseas.

Rose – What can I say? You were the second person I met down here in the basement and you are in a lot of ways my mentor. That scares the hell out of me, but if I get to be as good of a broadcaster as you are, I'll be a lucky man. Too many trips to mention all the specifics, but the beef stew, Tiger in Delaware and Waffle House at State were among the highlights. Everyone knows you'll be successful in the work world and that you will be up here a ton next year – at least you better be.

What a year it was. I logged more miles this year than most people do in three, and the memories will take me twice as far. First semester it was Trod Buggs, my first trip over the Del. Mem. Bridge, painful U-Turns, snorting at Nowa, being from Clayton, a nightmarish Boston weekend, the 6 a.m. trip to Turley and so many hockey trips. Want anything from Montreal? Vermont – best press conference ever. Physicality is, and ever will be, my favorite word to use in interviews. I HATE

Turn to MISTY EYED'S page 12

Keep Thinking

Think of sun, think of fun, think of earning UMass credits while you work and play –think of doing this while at home!

ONLINE COURSES – UMass Summer Session 2002

June 3 – July 11
COMHLTH 601 – Principles of Community Health
ENVDES 353 – Landform: Fundamentals for Designers
HRTA 100 – Intro to Hotel, Restaurant, & Travel Administration
JOURN 393M – Wired Reporting: Using the World Wide Web as a Journalistic Tool
JOURN 492M – Magazine Writing
MKTG 301 – Fundamentals of Marketing
NURSE 605— Advanced Health Assessment
NURSE 616 – Advanced Pathophysiology and Pharmacological Implications for Children and Youth
PHIL 164 – Medical Ethics (AT)
PUB HL 690R— Legal and Regulatory Basis for Public Health
SOC 241 - Criminology

June 3 – July 26
EDUC 615W – Electricity and Magnetism for Teachers

June 3 – July 28
PSYCH 100 – Elementary Psychology (SB)
SOM 797S— Business Workout Strategies

June 3 – July 31
SOM 630 – Accounting for Decision Making and Reporting II
SOM 640— Financial Analysis and Decisions
SOM 660 – Marketing Management

June 3 – August 9
ACCTG 221 – Introduction to Accounting I

June 3 – August 21
NURSE 312 – Cultural Diversity in Health Studies
NURSE 397A - Writing in Nursing
NURSE 415 – Community Focus in Nursing
NURSE 610 – Primary Health Care: Children, Adolescents, and Young Adults
NURSE 698Q— Practicum: Primary Health Care Problems of Children and Youth
WFCON 597O – Watershed Science and Management

June 10 – July 18
SOC 395J— Criminal Violence in America

July 1-31
SOM 797J
– Business Forecasting

July 1 – September 27
HRTA 150 - Food Production Management
HRTA 250 – Food Service Management

July 10 – August 16
SOC 345 – Gangs and Delinquency

July 15 – August 21
EDUC 692M
– Using Technology to Solve Problems in Schools
ENGL 132 – Man and Woman in Literature (ALD)
MKTG 437— International Marketing
NRC 290P – Plant Sampling and Identification
PUB HL 690A – Research Methods
SOC 395A – Probation and Parole
SOC 497C – Domestic and Transnational Organized Crime
WFCON 564 – Wildlife Habitat Ecology and Management

August 1-16
PSYCH 191F
– Power Up for Student Success

UMass Amherst Summer Session 2002
PLUS, hundreds of on-campus courses

Division of Continuing Education
413-545-0107
contined@admin.umass.edu
www.umass.edu/contined/

Get Cash for your Books

No matter where you bought them, we'll buy them back for up to 66%*.

PLUS PLAY the efollett.com CASH SWEEPSTAKES and PRIZE GIVEAWAY

You could win $10,000 cash and other cool instant prizes!
Laptop • Mountain Bike • Digital Camera

Free 1 POUND bag of Jolly Rancher® Fruit Chews when you sell back your books

University of Massachusetts UMASS UNIVERSITY STORE
Campus Center • Phone: (413) 545-2619

UNIVERSITY STORE'S Textbook Annex UMASS AMHERST

www.umass.bkstr.com

Additional Buyback Locations:

May 16–24 (weekdays only)
10am–5pm
Hampden & Worcester Dining Commons

*current market value applies.
while supplies last, no purchase necessary.

efollett NEW & USED COLLEGE TEXTBOOKS .com

misty-eyed's

continued from page 10

Lowell, but not as much as Toot hates losing. BROTHA!!!

And then there was winter break. Troy – how do we get up there? No interviews on game day? Cheese for Smythe. That was incredible. Best broadcast ever. Toronto – oh my lord. Supahman! The suffixgin. Hoops waitress is still mine. Karaoke clutchness. Broken Gatorades. The empty threat. Can we go by the school? Have they heard of plows?

Second semester – wrong button. All fired up that you had to rewrite your story. Worst period ever – lucky you didn't see it. Applehee's in Maine. Clyde's. It's like an IHOP. Exit 80 in Maryland. Prehistoric press box. Check the bible – can we get a GPS system? It's still a perfect season in my mind. Guys in helmets are sexy – yeah, right. Magical floating shoulder. Wet behind the ears DD rookie becomes poised veteran. McMurphy's aplenty.

It will be a rough semester with one-third of the three amigos gone, but we'll survive. Peace till next year.

David "Lando" Rose

9/11– That day and the weeks afterward changed my life forever.

That day, for the first day in a long time, I left completely out of control of what was happening, just standing there watching, just like everybody else, the horror of what happened to The World Trade Center in New York. Those memories will last a lifetime with me and the rest of the people who witnessed it. It was then that everything took its proper place, including sports.

It is just a game. I was one that always took sports too seriously, but now I look at it as just a game, a game to cause a couple of hours of diversion from the worries of the world that you might have. The trip to Delaware the following is something that I will never ever forget. The drive through New York, the lasting image of the smoke still floating from what was the WTC. It was a trip with Matt Brady, Matt Sacco, Eric Soderstom and Matt Feato from WMUA and while nothing significant happened on the trip, I found that it was a trip that I would have once taken for granted, but now I would take every trip as is and enjoy it.

So to Suds and Sacco, there's one O in much luv, boys!

To Brady. We are going to find that Waffle House in Utica at some point in my lifetime. We will find that Waffle House.

Pignatiello- The Philadelphia trip will be the last time there will be eight people in a hotel room, I can appreciate trips, but not that.

Yo Jar Jar. Get me a Chicken Whopper, its 50 cents off. Cluck Cluck. Good Luck.

To Khan. I am going to see you run a marathon one day. Good luck with everything. We got one more McMurphy's run left.

Pearson- Trips with cheesesteaks and Philly diners at 3 o'clock in da morning. Hell's ya. We did not start off the same, but we ended up in the same place- McMurphy's Wednesday nights. Did you think I meant this whole graduating thing?

9/11 taught me a lot on how to appreciate people, even if you sometimes want to punch them in the face. It taught be to let my emotions flow and go at life with everything I got.

So me having this shout be titled as a "misty-eyed" column would be wrong. I have already cried all the tears that I had.

Family first, everything else second.

I'll c u when I c u.

Andy "C3PVogt" Vogt

So I went to Bangor this year. To watch our hockey team get destroyed. And I also went to... yep, visit Bangor.

I guess this is going to be much shorter than originally planned. But in the 15 minutes I'm taking to write this, I'll say whatever's on my mind (albeit not that much).

Sept. 11 proved how special this place truly is. The way everyone bonded together amidst incredible tragedy amazed me. If any senile old cynics could see what occurred on that day, they'd stop lamenting about how little our future holds. While I might not have written anything for that issue, I was proud to be a journalist on that day.

Suds, this paper and the sports section would have gone to "isht" without your hard work this year. You've also made me a much better writer (whatever that means), and for that I thank you.

Sacco, I don't think you know what you've gotten yourself into having me as a roommate next year. Thanks for a worthwhile, argument-filled year.

Greenspan, the only person more negative than me here at The Collegian, good luck in the land of Wildcats, your wit will be sorely missed.

Brades, my only travel partner this year, thanks for not kicking me out of your car, and for a lot of good laughs this year.

Nomar and Rose, good luck with whatever life leads you next year, you've both been worthwhile assets to our esteemed publication.

Pig, you've made great strides since you've been here, and even with big shoes to fill, I know you'll do a fine job next year.

Clown, Merritt, Katie, and the rest of the staff, we've had a great year at the paper, and I know with all of us coming back, we'll have another one to come.

Here's to Collegian Street Hockey, a future of Werner-Warner-Winer, busted, "yeah, t'fill in the blank\" Star Wars, Lord of the Rings, Spider-Man and 6-1 UMassacre. We wuz robbed. Go Hurricanes.

And if there are any skinny, good-looking types out there, please call 545-0719. Non-smokers preferred. That is all.

Andy "Meri Windu" Merritt

So many places to begin. So many stories to tell. I'll get the sentimental crap out of the way first. I'll start with Suds. I remember vividly the first day I came down to The Collegian, bright eyed and naïve. And then I met you. And I thought I might be in the wrong place, if the sports editor acts like that. But, as time went on, I learned that you are actually one of the coolest people I've ever met, and the place in your heart that this newspaper resides in is very big. Send my love to the Emerald Isle.

Sacco - First words you ever said about me— after I had told Suds that I want to be a sports-writer—was "oh great, another one." But I've learned a lot from you, and you're still the first writer I ever read when I got to campus. And I'm still taking credit for "Partners in Twine."

Nomar and Rose, you guys are eternally cool, and I don't think we understand how much we'll miss you next year.

Brady, what can I say? I wouldn't be a member of the Collegian staff if not for you. And even if I was, I would still be asking really dumb questions to coaches too.

Goodbye to Sam Wilkinson who, besides being the best manager UMassacre has ever seen or ever will see, throws the meanest curveball in the hallway outside our offices I've ever seen.

Alright, now for the fun stuff. First of all, CANADA! I know I ought to go in chronological order, but the Canada trip is just way too important. Can't believe that I crossed the border into Canada at 1 in the morning. I also can't believe that I slept in the UAV, in a church parking lot, the first night/morning I was in the country. And then, Superman. From the hockey games, to Milwaukee's, to the Beer Store, my memories of the trip are so vivid, I'm forced to think of at least one of them every day.

I'd also like to thank Russ Yarworth, who coached my first beat, men's water polo. Yeah, that men's water polo. If it weren't for an understanding guy like Russ, I probably would've been too discouraged to stay at this paper. But anyone who can endure two months of questions like, "So, Iona. What do you think of them?" deserves an award, and a team! Someday, we will again be able to put the stupid freshman on a Water Polo beat. I have faith.

Also, someone get a record book. I want to know what the record is for "number of times being fired", because I'm pretty sure I broke it. If I tried to list all the catchphrases from NHL 2002 here, well, we'd lose our entire readership. So I'll just end with a few. Sacco- "Hit the annihilate button." "Then don't eat it!"

And finally, "Yeah Stull!"

Katie "Qui Flan Jinn" Landers

Hmmm. Misty eyes. I feel like I just wrote them. Missed you boys a lot this semester, but believe it or not there are classes here at UMass. I just found out. Figured I better start going if I want to lead a somewhat productive life. Thanks for men's soccer. I appreciated that. Too bad I caught that plague and missed half the season. It was worth the first three weeks and the last two. I kind of fell off Men's gym, but I'm sure they didn't miss me. I only made it to free lunch twice in two semesters. Poor showing by me. Only made it to the UConn basketball game this year. Another poor showing by me. Not sure how I feel about the new set up in the office, but hey I guess I'm not down there enough to complain. Next semester I'll be back.

+Sacco, good job by you jumping in last October. Thanks for movie night and sucking it up with chick flicks. Thanks for the 'Bee when I was in a bad mood. And for listening to me bitch. But not for making fun of me. I guess I'll let it slide. As long as it doesn't involve bees. Ha ha. I've got Minuteman pride somewhere in my heart. Eagles are my second love. Nomar, I know you'll rock English Soccer at some point. I hope you get to move to England and live out that dream. I think you might actually be British and switched at birth. You were always great for a drink at McMurphy's. You better come up next year and take me to Charlie's. We'll have to get a drink after the Sox at some point (Crank 'n Hagen?) Don't forget we made out. You owe me. Well, maybe not. Maybe it's your due for last year's misty eye. Brady, I think if there was stock in the market you would definitely need to buy some. Rose, who will run the pool next year? I'm still pretty impressed with my showing in the NCAA tourney. I don't drink as much as you think I do. I'm pretty tame. I've worked (kinda) at the Collegian for four semesters. I don't think I've ever met this Merritt character. Go figure. My bad. I'll practice my crane kick this summer. Eagles on the war path.

Nick "Pizzo the Hutt" Pizzolatto
2002 Honorary Sports Member

I know, I know. What the hell is the Pizz doing here in sports? Deal with it. I wrote Third and 48, that makes me qualified, dammit. If Arts and Living was my home than, Sports was the next-door neighbor I never left alone.

Collegian people are the best people, and since I continue to have undying love for this basement/pit/cellar/hole that is the Collegian office, I'm going to continue to give shout outs. If you don't like it too bad.

PLAYOFFS???!!!! Are you kidding me????!! UMassacre, I never had so much fun or was a part of team with a phenomenal winning percentage. We kicked arse, and we loved every minute of it. Can we say conspiracy?

Third and 48, funny on so many levels.

Vogt, you like the Canes? WHAT? Looks like the jokes on me. Keep it up kid, you rock.

Cancerman...go see a doctor.

Sacco, "Yeah catchphrases." Good luck next year at the helm.

Jim, yeah movie list. Discussions of the Sox, fantasy baseball, movies, HSX, warm up catcher, wrestling, and Simmons, what more could I ask for in a sports comrade. Thanks man. I won't try to be too much of a mark from now on.

Suds, YO. Forshizzle. Have fun on the emerald isle, and you are not the next Dan Shaugnessy. P.S. BC will die a horrible death, and when that happens, I will have no knowledge of your whereabouts.

Ken, angry? Nah, Grizzled? Nope. A Bad-Ass motha...hell yeah. There is no one I'd rather spout off Eminem lyrics with.

Brady, There is only one Pudge...Pudge Fisk keep that in mind for the Brady's Snubbed All-Time Team. Good luck managing UMassacare next year, it'll be a rebuilding year, but small ball rules. Base hits, base hits.

Oooh. Ole. Ole. Ole....Ole. Ole.

Honored I could play in the Collegian Hockey League. That which does not kill me makes me stronger. The monster has found his second home, in net.

Tihi, Goddess of the photo department.

Coach, you went 24-50 last season what's with all this play-off talk? Well we made some key trades, and we've got the funk. Collegian Sports, whup de de, the funk's on ye, keep that funk alive.

Jedi Shout outs:
Elenia "Ask E-Leia" Panesis,
Glen "Straubulba" Straub and Regan "Jar-Jar" McKendry.

lacrosse

continued from page 14

UMass, the nation's second-ranked offense, will have a lot to contend with a solid Hopkins defense. Senior P.J. DiConza who has the strength and speed to play both long stick midfielder and close defense, is the leader of this group. If he stays at close defense, he'll likely shadow leading scorer Marc Morley (50 points). But if Blue Jay coach Dave Pietramala moves him to the pole, he could see time against any of Cannella's top three middies – Kevin Leveille (45 points), Chris Fiore (41 points) and Don Little (25 points).

Both teams are going to force the issue and play their style, the winner will hinge on which team is most successful at it. If UMass runs and guns but doesn't convert, it won't do any good and likewise if Hopkins gains possession and is sloppy with the ball.

"I think if the score gets closer to our average, around 13 or 14 goals, it benefits us," Cannella said. "But I think they're going to try to keep it down to eight or nine."

000 FOR A YEAR. "UNBELIEVABLE BUT TRUE!"
0 DOWN 0 INTEREST 0 PAYMENTS FOR AN ENTIRE YEAR*
ZERO PAYMENTS FOR AN ENTIRE YEAR ON NEW 2001 AND 2002 MITSUBISHIS*
AREA'S EXCLUSIVE MITSUBISHI DEALER WILL NOT BE UNDERSOLD!
New! 2002 Galant — 1.9% for 60 months — $55* A week
New! 2002 Eclipse — 1.9% for 60 months — $56* A week
New 2002 Lancer ES — 0.0% for 36 Months, 0.9% for 48 Months, 1.9% for 60 Months — $55* A week
New 2002 Diamante — Lease for up to $300/mo on Special APR 0.0% for 60 months!! — $75* A week
New 2002 Montero Sport 4x4 — 0.0% for 36 Months, 0.9% for 48 Months, 1.9% for 60 Months
New 2002 Montero XLS — 0.0% for 36 Months, 0.9% for 48 Months, 1.9% for 60 Months
2001 GALANT ES $12,995 — 2001 MIRAGE $9,995 — 2001 DIAMANTE $19,995
HUGE SELECTION OF PRE-OWNED MASTERPIECES
HOUSER MITSUBISHI
881 East Columbus Ave. Spfld. MA (413) 733-5175
OPEN SUNDAY 12-4
Visit our web site @www.mitsuhouse.cjb.net • Family owned & operated since 1927

Landscape students, looking for project supplies? Come to:
Valley Miniatures
YOUR SUPPLY HEADQUARTERS
-WE SELL-
-Scale Basswood & Balsa
-Acrylic Sheets
-Brass Tubing
-Landscape Materials
-Glues
-Paints
-Dremel & X-acto Tools
-Architecture/Design Materials
584-5006
141 Damon Rd. - Northampton
OPEN: 9:30 -5:00 Mon.- Thurs. 9:30-4:00 Fri. & Sat.

University Health Services
Summer Health Coverage
(enrollment is not automatic)
2002 Coverage Period: June 1–August 31
(if enrolled by June 1st)
Student Family Plan: $708.00
Basic Health Plan: $195.00
577-5192
Visit the Patient Services Department located in the main lobby for enrollment
(Only UMass students with Basic and SHBP are eligible for the Student Family Plan)
Your Student Health Insurance Plan does not cover you for ROUTINE services at University Health Services

CINEMARK
The Best Seat In Town
CINEMARK AT HAMPSHIRE MALL 8
367 Russell St. 413-587-4233
Schedule for Friday 5/10 - Thursday 5/15
DIGITAL SURROUND SOUND IN ALL AUDITORIUMS
Purchase Tickets Online @ cinemark.com
THE ATTACHE (R) 12:20 4:20 7:20 10:30*
THE NEW GUY (PG13) 12:10 4:25 7:40 10:10*
SPIDERMAN (PG13) 12:15 12:45 1:15 4:15 4:45 5:15 7:30 8:00 8:30 10:15 10:35*
DEUCES WILD (R) 12:55 4:25 7:05 9:45*
HOLLYWOOD ENDING (PG13) 12:30 4:30 7:15 10:00*
LIFE OR SOMETHING LIKE IT (PG13) 12:20 4:35 7:35 10:15
MURDER BY NUMBERS (R) 12:15 4:10 7:30 10:20
THE SCORPION KING (PG13) 12:25 4:50 7:45 10:25
CRASHING LANES (R) 12:00 4:05 7:25 9:55
THE ROOKIE (G) 12:25 4:00 7:10 10:05
Senior Movie: 5/16/02
HOLLYWOOD ENDING doors open at 11:45am
• NO PASSES NO SUPERSAVERS
Tickets & showtimes available at cinemark.com

Amherst Merchants Association presents...
AMHERST INDOOR DAYS & COMMUNITY FAIR
• SIDEWALK SALES
• INDOOR SALES
• SUPER SALES
• FANTASTIC FOOD
THURSDAY, FRIDAY & SATURDAY
MAY 16, 17 & 18
PARTICIPATING BUSINESSES
Always in Bloom
Silverscape Design
The Mercantile
Souper Bowl
Jeffery Amherst Bookshop
Zanna
Alfredo's Photographic Gallery
Barts
Lots for Littles
Oxford Bleu
The Black Sheep
Valley Books
Hastings
On Site Seated Massaar By Talya Solomon, Lisa Berkowitz DOWNTOWN

congratulations!
Yankee Candle Congratulates the UMass Class of 2002!
Please accept this coupon as our gift to you and your family.
Visit our Flagship Store in South Deerfield between now and June 30th to enjoy spectacular savings! And be sure to visit our new Home Store, opening June 1st.
Now that final exams are over, relax and escape to the magic of Yankee Candle!
YANKEE CANDLE company
South Deerfield, MA • I-91N Exit 24, I-91S Exit 25 (Rts. 5 & 10)
Open Daily 9:30am to 6pm • tel 877.636.7707 • www.yankeecandle.com
Receive a FREE $10 Gift Card* with your purchase of $50 or more!
Offer valid through June 30, 2002. This coupon can be redeemed at the Yankee Candle Flagship Store only. May not be combined with any other coupon. Other in-store specials, including our popular Fragrance of the Month, may be applied towards your purchase. Free gift card redeemable upon next purchase. Coupon not valid on catalog or website purchases. Yankee Candle employees are not eligible.
Coupon code: UMG02
*Our gift cards can be used for purchases in any Yankee Candle store, on our website or from our catalog.
YANKEE CANDLE company

DAILY COLLEGIAN
CLASSIFIED
113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ACTIVITIES

World Wiffleball Tournament, medium pitch speed, 2-5 person teams $1000 cash for winners. Call for info (603) 425-6168.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Fraternities * Sororities Clubs * Student Groups
Earn $1,000-$2,000 this semester with the easy Campusfundraiser.com three hour fundraising event. Does not involve credit card applications. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact Campusfundraiser.com at (888) 923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com.

Bus trip to New York-Commuter arca gumt trip is sponsoring another trip. With free tickets to Conan Obrien & the daily show w/Jon Stewart on Thurs. May 16. Tickets for the trip are $5 for commuter undergrads. $20 for others. Sign up in Commuter Services Office 428 Student Union.

Top of the Campus, Incorporated (TOC, Inc.) will hold it's Annual Meeting in Campus Center 917, Wednesday, May 22, 2002 at 2:00 p.m.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 bedroom apartment summer sublet or new lease call 253-6778.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Want to sublet your apartment? List it for free with Commuter Services, 428 Student Union, 545-0865. You can also list it on line @ www.cshrc.org

2 Bedroom apt. avail. In Amherst Center! Lease starts June but negotiable for summer rent. Great location, hardwood floors, spacious. Call Kate 256-4517 or Lincoln real estate 253-7879 ASAP.

Brandywine Apts. - Now Available, 1&2 bedroom apts. Leases begin June, July, Aug or Sept. 1 year lease. First come, first serve. Get them while they last. www.brandywine-apts.com stop by or call (413) 549-0600.

Save $500 Off. Move-In Costs. Deluxe 2 bedroom apartments. FREE heat & hot water. Fully appliances Kitchens. Washers/Dryers available. Pool, volleyball, basketball. Minutes from Umass. On free busline. Call Sugarloaf Estates today! 413-665-5856. Now leasing for summer & fall Email: rugarloaf_estates@capen-square.com. limited time offer.

Looking for a beautiful and cheap place to live this summer? Hurry and have a room in a 2 bedroom furnished apartment with a porch and backyard. Free facilities. Pay just $400 a month. available this summer. call 210-5145.

Take over our lease, June 1st puff ton 3 bdrm 549-5249.

AUTO FOR SALE

88 Mercury Grand Marquis. 107k runs looks great $1300 OBO. Tim 548-7033.

Chevy Lumina 1990. 163000 reliable must go. $1000 OBO. 896-3082.

89 Honda Accord $1500 OBO 259-0068.

CHILD CARE

Babysitter needed for 2 children. Boy 7 1/2 , girl 5 who has Cerebral palsy and uses a walker. Must be a good swimmer. Approximately 10 hrs per week flexible. $10.00 hr. 253-0779.

COMPUTERS

Color Laptop $99 Pentium tower/ CD Rom $99 with color monitor $139. HURRY! 413-584-8857.

We pay CASH for your used lap tops 413-584-8857.

EMPLOYMENT

Camp Counselor wanted for Tennis, Gymnastics, Water Ski, Arts, and more! Gain valuable experience at award-winning camps, while having the summer of a lifetime. Apply on-line at www.pinsforest.com

EMPLOYMENT

Cushman Village general store prepare creative take-out deli foods and bakery items with customer service skills. Immediate FT/PT. Open 7 days with employment past summer available. 491 Pine St. Amherst 549-1953.

Activist Best Summer Job in Town. Sleep late, work outdoors, cool people, cool boss. Great issues! *protect out air and water *fight corporate polluters *defend public health *promote renewable energy Earn $4,000-5,000 this summer. Call today. Start tomorrow. 413-584-9850.

Positions available: aerobics, aqua, and yoga instructors, personal trainers, lifeguards, and maintenance Hampshire Fitness Club 256-6446.

Bartenders wanted. Make up to $250 day. No experience necessary. 1-800-585-4810 ext. 4080.

Moving: Local moving company looking for self motivated individual, full and part time positions available immediately. Only those able to work the upcoming summer should apply. Raises commensurate with performance. Potential for tips. Good attitudes are a must. Call (413)584-4746.

EMPLOYMENT

Handyman, landscaper, housecleaner needed. June 1- Sept. 1, 9 hr wkly. $8.00/hr Car needed. 549-1578.

Summer Work! Student work program! Earn great summer income! $18.25 base-appt. Customer service and sales. Scholarships available. 732-2252. www.interdecorations.com

FOR RENT

3 bedroom townhouse practically on campus, rent negotiable Joe 549-9441.

Thinking of Cape Cod this summer? South Dennis 5 bedroom, furnished 5/25-8/31. $5950.00 Call 508-862-0565.

FOR SALE

Moving off campus? Must sell desks, bureaus, beds, lamps, etc. Cheap. Call 259-9990.

Microfridge $150 or B/O, great condition call 546-5410.

Queen bed with frame, Pull out couch, table, computer desk + bureau call Walt 549-4044.

Panasonic Stereo. 3 Disk dual cassette, Remote $150 OBO 253-1819.

Dorm Fridge and Microwave great condition call 546-5045.

FOR SALE

Cheap furniture for sale. Various pieces available & in great condition. Price is negotiable. Call 549-0454.

Desk for sale new wooden 4 drawer perfect condition call Meg 549-0072.

FURNITURE

Furniture for sale! Futon, bed, desk etc. Good condition good price. Call 253-7506.

HOUSE FOR RENT

Hadley 5 bedroom plus. Newer home five minutes from UMASS. June occupancy. 549-4270.

Main St. 4 Bedroom house June 1st, Sublet w/Fall option. Large kitchen, & living room with porch. On bus route w/washer and dryer. 549-7859.

INSTRUCTIONS

Become an EMT. Sign up for summer and fall classes now. For information go to www.umass.edu/ems or call us at 545-1885.

LOST AND FOUND

Lost green passport if found call 546-5325

MOTORCYCLES

'86 SUZ GSXR1100, 91 motor w/15 K Mi., 17" rims, new tire, V & H swing arm, 45 mm inverted forks. Price reduced $3400 to 3 k. 253-7216.

ROOM FOR RENT

Large room in private home, shared home. Call 367-9286. Rent is $300 plus utilities available June 1.

One bedroom available in a four bedroom apartment. Includes heat, hot water, electricity, cable, A/C, DSL internet, and local phone. On the bus line in Amherst on route 9 available May 25 for $575/month. Call Matt at Alpine Commons # 253-9499

ROOMMATE WANTED

Four roommates wanted to fill a house in the Center of Town for info call Rob (413) 519-0763.

SUMMER SUBLET

2 bedroom apartment. 2-3 people. Walking distance to campus and Amherst Center. 549-8258.

2 Rooms available on Phillips St. off Frat Row, for June, July, and August. Call 549-4038.

2 bedrooms in a Pufton 3 bedroom. Available 6/1 or end of May, summer w/fall option, cheap rent A/C on bus line 549-5857.

1 Large bedroom on Main St. Amherst $500 O/B/O. Call Brianna 546-1578.

One large bedroom available at Cliffside apts. Starting June 1 partly furnished 617-842-4657.

SUMMER SUBLET

Big 2 Bedroom Boulders. Fall option. Heat/Hot water $860 259-1506.

2 Rms Available June to July. A/C, utilities, phone, internet included $400/Mo 259-5781

Brandywine. Two bedroom. Furnished. A/C. By pool and bus stop. Call 549-8782.

Nice 3 bedroom townhouse. Practically on campus. Call Joe 549-9441

TO SUBLET

Brandywine Apt. 1 bedroom available. Looking for 1-2 people. Starting June 1st with possible fall option. Only $231 month. 413-549-5559.

Subletters needed for 2 bedrooms in Cliffside. Everything included. $1275. Call Lauren 546-4074

2 Bedroom apartment partially furnished available June 1st to sublet w/option to lease on bus route 413-549-6012.

TRAVEL

Mexico/ Caribbean or Central America $500 round trip plus tax. Europe $169 one way plus tax. Other world wide destinations cheap. Book tickets on line www.airtech.com or (212) 219-7000.

HSCN
Housing Services Cable Network

1	CBS / 3
4	NBC4
5	Fox Sports NE
6	PBS / 57
7	HSCN Movie Channel
8	WB / 20
9	HSCN Movie Channel
10	TV Guide Channel
11	FOX / 61
12	ABC / 40
13	NBC / 22
14	International Channel
15	UMATV
16	HSCN Info Channel
17	ESPN
18	ESPN 2
19	LIVE-19
20	ESPN Classic
21	Good Guy Channel
22	CNN
23	CNN HL
24	Weather Channel
25	Learning Channel
26	Hse-ey Channel
27	A & E
28	Discovery Health
29	Food Network
30	NESN
31	Home & Garden TV
32	Travel Channel
33	Lifetime
34	CNN
35	Tech TV
36	BET
37	UPN-38
38	USA
39	TNN
40	MTV
41	CMT
42	VH-1
43	TNT
44	TBS
45	E! Entertainment
46	Sci-Fi Channel
47	Court TV
48	Nick at Nite
49	Comedy Central
50	Cartoon Network
51	Game Show Network
52	TV Land
53	FOX Family
54	Animal Planet
55	Cubevision
56	Telemundo
57	College TV Network
58	C-SPAN
59	C-SPAN2
60	Bloomberg Television
61

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING WORKS!

Want to place an advertisement in the Classifieds section?
Simply fill in the information below and stop by at the The Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center Basement, UMass

Client: _____ Date: _____ Payment: 2 days in advance by Visa, MC, check or cash
Date(s) to run: _____ Headline: _____
Total days _____ x _____ Words = _____ x rate _____ = _____ PAYMENT
Special Heading ($2.50 extra): _____ Authorized signature: _____

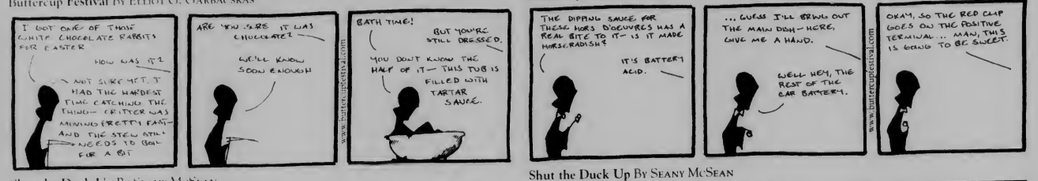
ADVERTISING COPY

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

Insert one character, space, or punctuation mark per box - use capital letters where they apply

Open 9:30 am - 4:00 pm M-F
Student rate: 20 cents/word per day. Non-student rate: 50 cents/word per day

Headings
Announcements
Announcements
Apartment for Rent
Auto for Sale
For Sale
Lost & Found
Happy Birthday
Rooms for Rent
Rooms for Sale
Roommates Wanted
Summer Sublet
To Sublet
Travel
Volunteer
Wanted to Buy
Employment
Entertainment



WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — MAY 15, 2002

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Clifford-Red	Business Rpt.	News hour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		America's First River: Moyen				In the Life
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 Fellow Pit Stop (Sequestered) (In Stereo)				News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Amazing Race 2 Fellow Pit Stop (Sequestered) (In Stereo)				News	Late Show
WGVB	6	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	My Wife Kicks	Accoding Jim	Drew Carey	Primetime Special Edition (In			News	NightLine
WLVI	56	Nanny	Just Shoot Me	Friends	Raymond	Dawson's Creek (Swan Song)		Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (In				News	Raymond
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Hollywood	Extra (N)	Ed Tender (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order Deception (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX		Sabrina-Witch	Fresh Prince	Friends	Just Shoot Me	Dawson's Creek (Swan Song)		Felicity "Spin the Bottle" (N)		News	Home Imp.	Blind Date	Blind Date
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Hollywood	Ed Tender (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order Deception (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Raymond	Maggie's Secrets		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order Deception (N)		Bernie Mac	Raymond
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Ed Tender (N)		West Wing (N) (In Stereo)		Law & Order Deception (N)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	News hour With Jim Lehrer		American Family (In Stereo)		National Geographic		Alaskans: Cradle		Charlie Rose
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	My Wife Kicks	Accoding Jim	Drew Carey	Primetime Special Edition			News	NightLine
WSBK	38	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Cheers	Frasier	Enterprise (N) (In Stereo)		Enterprise Shadows of Doubt	News		Ent. Tonight	5th Wheel	Shipmates
WTBS	72	Cosby Show	Roseanne	Friends	Roseanne	Ripley's Believe It or Not!		★★ "Fire Down Below" (1997, Drama) (PG) Steven Seagal				Ripley's Believe It or Not!
A&E	15	The View (In Stereo)		Law & Order	Soft Lederose (In)	Biography Frank Gifford		American Justice: Serial Killers		American Justice: Mercenaries		Law & Order
CNN	29	Moneyline		Crossfire		Live From... (N)		News night				Crossfire	Moneyline
COM	49	Saturday Night Live (In Stereo)		Daily Show (N)	Clerks	★★ "Pacific" (1998, Satire) Edward Furlong, Christina Ricci (R)		South Park		Insomniac		Daily Show	Sat. Night Live
DISC	32	White-Tailed Deer		Mountain Goat's Story		Devil's Island		Blackbeard's Treasure		Beneath Alcatraz		Devil's Island
ESPN	31	Sportscenter		Stanley Cup Playoffs Conference Semifinal Game 7 Teams to be Announced (Live)				Major League Baseball Teams to be Announced (Live)
LIFE	62	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		★★½ "A Woman Scorned: The Betty Broderick Story" (1992)				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	35	5:30 MTV Special (In Stereo)		Direct Effect (In Stereo)		UrbanAD2	Fight Rights	MTV Special (In Stereo)		J. Lo Movie	Making Video	Jackass	Rock
NICK	36	Rocket Power	Rocket Power	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Spongeb	Told by Ginger	Cosby Show	Cosby Show	Cheers	Cheers	All in Family	All in Family
SCIFI	86	Star Trek (In Stereo)		Star Trek (In Stereo)		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		The Stand (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 6)				Crossing Over	Crossing Over
TLC	28	World of Hawaii		Tales From the Tower		Monster Trucks		Junkyard Wars (Power Boat)		Extreme Survival (In Stereo)		Monster Trucks
TNT	26	NYPD Blue Twin Peaks (R)		Pretender (PG) (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball Playoffs Conference Semifinal Teams to be Announced (Live)				Inside NBA		Charles Outlaw (Pg-13)
USA	33	Walker, Texas Ranger		JAG "The Black Ice" (In Stereo)		★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley (R)						★★ "Species" (1995, Science Fiction) Ben Kingsley (R)
HBO	42	(5:45) ★½ "Alice in Earth" (2002) Clint Eastwood		★★½ "Forrest Gump" (1994, Comedy-Drama) Tom Hanks (In Stereo) (PG-13)				★ "Dr. Seuss' How the Grinch Stole Christmas" (2000, Fantasy) Jim Carrey (PG)
MAX	43	(5:45) ★½ "All the Pretty Horses" (2000)			Set Enough	★½ "Me, Myself & Irene" (2000, Comedy) Jim Carrey (R)						Soul Food (R) (In Stereo)
SHOW	45	★½ "Once Upon a Crime" (1992, Comedy) John Candy (PG)				★★½ "Fire Up" (2000, Suspense) Cate Blanchett (R)						Resurrection Blvd.

Adam and Eric By Ross Burach

Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas

Shut the Duck Up By Seany McSean

UMass Hysteria By Eric Nycz

Quote of the Day

"... Look, I know how tough it is for you to say goodbye,so i'll say it. Maybe you're right, maybe we will see each other again, but just in case we don't, I want you to know how much you've meant to me."

-Hawkeye, M*A*S*H

Amherst Weather

Wednesday	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 60 LOW: 40	HIGH: 75 LOW: 54	HIGH: 67 LOW: 48

Horoscopes

TAURUS (April 20- May 20) Today you will face a number of difficulties with your friends and family, but you will persevere.

GEMINI (May 21- June 20) This is a day you are to home today, so more helpless you will feel. Determination will help you in all kinds of problems. Do your work first and party later.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You will have to deal with a matter that has been coming for quite awhile. Just get over it and get it over with.

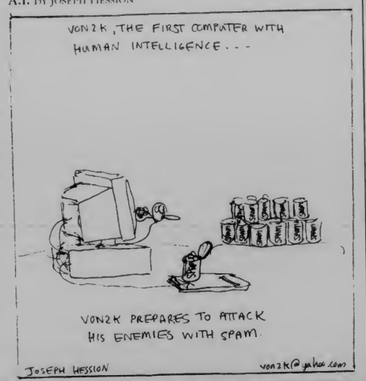
LEO (July 23- Aug. 23) Today your nurturing side will come out. You are called on to comfort a friend in need. Be prepared to shed shoulder — or tears.

VIRGO (Aug 24- Sept. 23) That someone you have been chasing after will be thrown onto your path today. Don't let your emotions get the better of you.

LIBRA (Sept. 24-Oct. 23) It may seem like a bad day today, but it will get better. Just try to look on the bright side. Some one with similar interests to yours will be there to pick you up.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24- Nov. 21) Try to spend some time with your friends today. Some of them may begin to feel neglected and today is the day to remind them of their importance in your life.

SAGATTARIUS (Nov. 22- Dec. 21) You are going to run into someone that you haven't seen in a while that you had strong feelings for in the past. Don't let the old animosities you still carry prevent you from having a good day.



CAPRICORN (Dec. 22- Jan. 19) Focus on your school work today. Although it may seem like a daunting task, school is almost over.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20- Feb. 18) Today is your lucky day. Someone you know will surprise you with an announcement.

PISCES (Feb. 19- March 20) While you feel like you are not getting anything accomplished today this is not the case. Take a deep breath at some point and stop to smell the roses.

ARIES (March 21- April 19) Don't dwell on the past, it will get you down.

A.I. By Joseph Hession

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

LUNCH

Vegetable Tortellini Soup

Fiesta Rice & Cheese (vegetarian)

Falafel Pocket Sandwich (vegan)

Pasta Bar
Meat Lasagna

DINNER

Vegetable Tortellini Soup

Roast Turkey

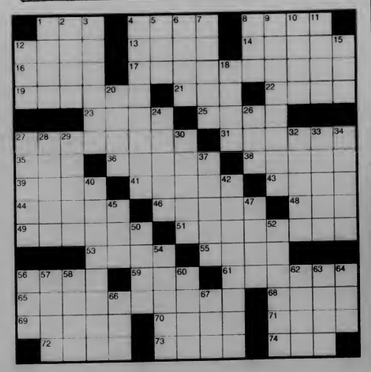
Thai Seitan (vegan)

Pasta Bar
Meat Lasagna

Today's Staff

Melissa Hammel
Tibora Gircyce-Blum
Jim Pignatiello
Dr. Alcid
Lizzy Nielsen, Cara Horowitz

THE HARP
IRISH PUB
TONIGHT
COME PARTY at THE HARP
in North Amherst
"START YOUR OWN TRADITION"
163 Sunderland Rd.
Amherst, MA 01002
548-6900



ACROSS
1 Auction' end
4 Fell on — ears
8 Earth's satellite
12 Erie or Huron
13 Assuage (pain)
14 Earthenware pots
16 Baseball's Hershiser
17 Got in at the last moment
19 Positive aspect
21 Once named
22 Painted tinware
23 Denomination
25 Ricky Ricardo
27 Jungle knives
31 Alley habitue
35 Finish cupcakes
36 Steak and pork
38 Seashore
39 Drowses off
41 Less damp
43 Coating of frost
44 Packing container
46 One-masted sailboat
48 Legal matter
49 Make furious
51 Sweet-scented flower
53 Actor Danza
55 Where pox is served
56 Waikiki locale
59 Smidgen
61 Distorted
65 Model's appointment
68 Ticket price
69 Makes docile
70 Mademoiselle's eye
71 Homely
72 "Porgy and —"
73 Air France destination
74 Bruce of kung fu

DOWN
1 Wyatt —
2 — out uses thriftily
3 Hot-dog topper
4 Disheartened
5 — de cologne
6 Org.
7 Honored
8 Kiwi's extinct kin
9 Wild West moniker
10 Low-fat spread
11 Finger part
12 Comedian Costello
15 Sault — Marie
18 Encounter
20 Regard
24 Rips
26 Kind of story
27 Chop fine
28 Oak product
29 Fragrant wood
30 Long pole
32 Nile city
33 Pinnacles
34 Not those
37 Asian capital
40 Laws
42 Vigorously
45 Self-importance
47 High mountain
50 Terminates
52 Abashed
54 Internet search engine
56 Choose
57 Moby Dick foe
58 Catcher's base
60 Transvaal tsetse
62 Salary
63 Gardner of mysteries
64 Susan of "L.A. Law"
66 WWII spy org.
67 Tanker cargo

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

R	A	S	H		D	O	G	M	A		D	R	A	W
A	C	H	E		E	G	R	E	T		O	I	S	E
P	E	E	R		W	E	A	T	H	E	R	M	A	P
			B	E	L	E	M		L	A	M	E	N	T
	L	A	M	A	S		P	E	A
P	O	U	L	T		D	I	T		N	O	O	K
L	A	S	S		I	S	A	L	E		T	I	D	E
O	T	T		A	F	C			L	I	E
A	H	E	M		A	L	O	H	A		P	E	O	N
T	E	R	I		R	E	E		W	A	L	R	U	S
		M	U	G	S		C	A	R	E	S	S
S	P	O	O	K	Y		B	U	R	M	A
W	E	A	S	E	L	W	O	R	D		D	I	M	E
A	S	T	A		E	R	N	I	E		E	R	O	S
M	O	S	S		S	Y	N	O	D		D	A	M	P

10/29/01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate

Morgan Taylor- Day Graphics Supervisor
Most likely to boost your ego with the sincerest of compliments.

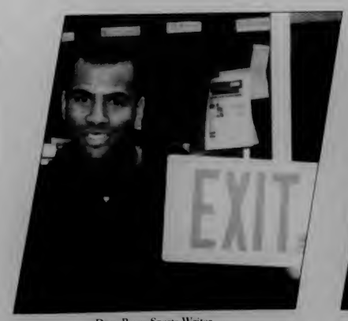
Kevin Monahan- Arts Writer
Most likely to come back for a third tour of duty.

Shimauli Dave- Production Manager
Most likely to assure you that it is all going to work out, babe.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Relatives 2002

Justin Pearson-Sports Writer
Most likely to have a show on the Food Network with a fake English accent.



Ken Campbell- Assistant News Editor/Columnist
Most likely to be Hemingway. For better or worse

Mike Delano-Arts Editor
Most likely to have the best rock mullet

Julie Burrell-Assistant Arts Editor
Most likely to know about art you have never heard of.

Shauna Billings-Assistant Arts Editor
Most likely to call the fashion police on you.

Dave Rose- Sports Writer
Most likely to host Sports Center.

riki "Sanchez" Alcid- Night Graphics Supervisor
Most likely to become the next member of Menudo.

Catherine Turner- News Editor
Most likely to end up running the Twins while sipping Dom P with Common in a Brooklyn rooftop hot tub.

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: ERIC SODERSTROM

MINUTEMAN UMass LACROSSE

UMass Lacrosse NCAA TOURNAMENT PREVIEW

MINUTEMAN UMass LACROSSE

RICHARD F. GARBER FIELD

JOHNS HOPKINS Blue Jays

Record: 11-1 (Independent)
Coach: Dave Pietramala's (19-5, second year)
All-Time Series: 3-0, Hopkins
Key Players: A Bobby Benson (26 goals)
M Adam Doneger (20 points)
M Kevin Boland (29 points)

Outlook: Take Fairfield's ball control offense, multiply the talent level 100-fold and you've got Hopkins. It has All-America caliber players at every position, plus it will be playing on its home field in front of at least 10,000 of its own fans. The Jays are the number one seed; they have experience, depth, talent and great coaching. UMass needs to play near perfect to win.

"It's a new season. When the whistle blows, seedings and rankings won't mean a thing." – Dave Pietramala, Head Coach

NCAA Tournament, Quarterfinals
Sunday @ Johns Hopkins
Noon

UMASS Minutemen

Record: 12-3 (5-0 Eastern College Athletic Conference)
Coach: Greg Cannella (64-43, eighth year)
Last Meeting: 5/21/89, 9-4 Hopkins
Key Players: A Marc Morley (37 goals)
M Kevin Leveille (45 points)
D Matt McFarland (99 groundballs)

Outlook: UMass needs to get out early in this game. It will have a severe disadvantage on face-offs. If the Minutemen can score a few goals in the first, get comfortable and get a lead, then they can force Hopkins to play a run game that it's not used to. This will have to be a repeat performance of the Georgetown game in which the Minutemen bolted to an 8-2 lead in the first quarter.

"Right now we believe that we can beat anybody if we play our game." – Dusty Smith, Midfield

For continuing coverage throughout the NCAA Men's Lacrosse Tournament, please log on to www.dailycollegian.com

Hopkins in the way of history

By Matthew F. Sacco
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Matt McFarland is sitting in the UMass lacrosse office, shooting the breeze and browsing through game tape with assistant coach Andy Shay. Marc Morley is there too, occasionally addressing what he sees on the screen, but mostly concerned with what he's going to have for dinner.

If it seems like these guys are a little relaxed, especially with top-ranked Johns Hopkins looming in an NCAA quarterfinal game this Sunday, it should. Because as McFarland commented after the Minutemen's first round dismantling of Fairfield, they've "got nothing to lose."

So what if Greg Cannella has to bring his team south to Baltimore, to face maybe the most complete team in the nation, in front of over 10,000 of their fans, on their field. In only their fourth ever quarterfinal appearance, UMass has nothing to lose and everything to gain.

The Minutemen are only two years removed from two consecutive losing seasons, while this is their first tourney appearance in five years and they are seeking a first Final Four appearance.

So what if UMass falls, that doesn't change anything. But if it wins, if it overcomes the odds and defeats the top team in the country against adverse conditions, then everything changes. Respect and legitimacy flood to the program, notoriety comes with an appearance on ESPN and the lax community may gain a new household name. But that's looking too far ahead.

There is still the matter of defeating No. 1 Johns Hopkins, a task easier said than done.

"I think we'll have to play close to a perfect game," Cannella said.

What this game boils down to is a match-up of two very contrasting styles. Both teams have similar talent levels with Hopkins holding the edge on blue-chip players and UMass owning the patent on depth. The winner will likely be the team that forces its game plan on the other.

The Blue Jays are without a doubt the best ball control team in the country. They possess the talent and athletic ability to run-and-gun so when a team like this slows the game down the result can become a foregone conclusion.

The catalyst for the Jays on offense is junior converted midfielder Adam Doneger. Doneger has 16 goals on the year, and his 6-foot-2, 215 pound frame are a load to handle up the middle, especially when he uses the dodge to create space and unleash his cannon shot.

Helping Doneger on attack is one of the top units in the country. Although they don't sport the gaudy numbers of a Syracuse or a Virginia, they are just as dangerous and even harder to get the ball from.

The leader of the group is senior Bobby Benson. Benson is another big body at 6-foot-4 and he leads the team with 26 goals and 37 points. Joining him on attack are freshman Peter LeSueur and sophomore Conor Ford who have 21 and 30 points respectively.

This is an ice-cold unit that makes very few mistakes with the ball and relies on frustrating its opponents into mental miscues. The key to neutralizing it lies in Benson.

"We can't let him have a big day," McFarland said. "I think if we limit him we've got a good shot."

Turn to HOPKINS, page 12

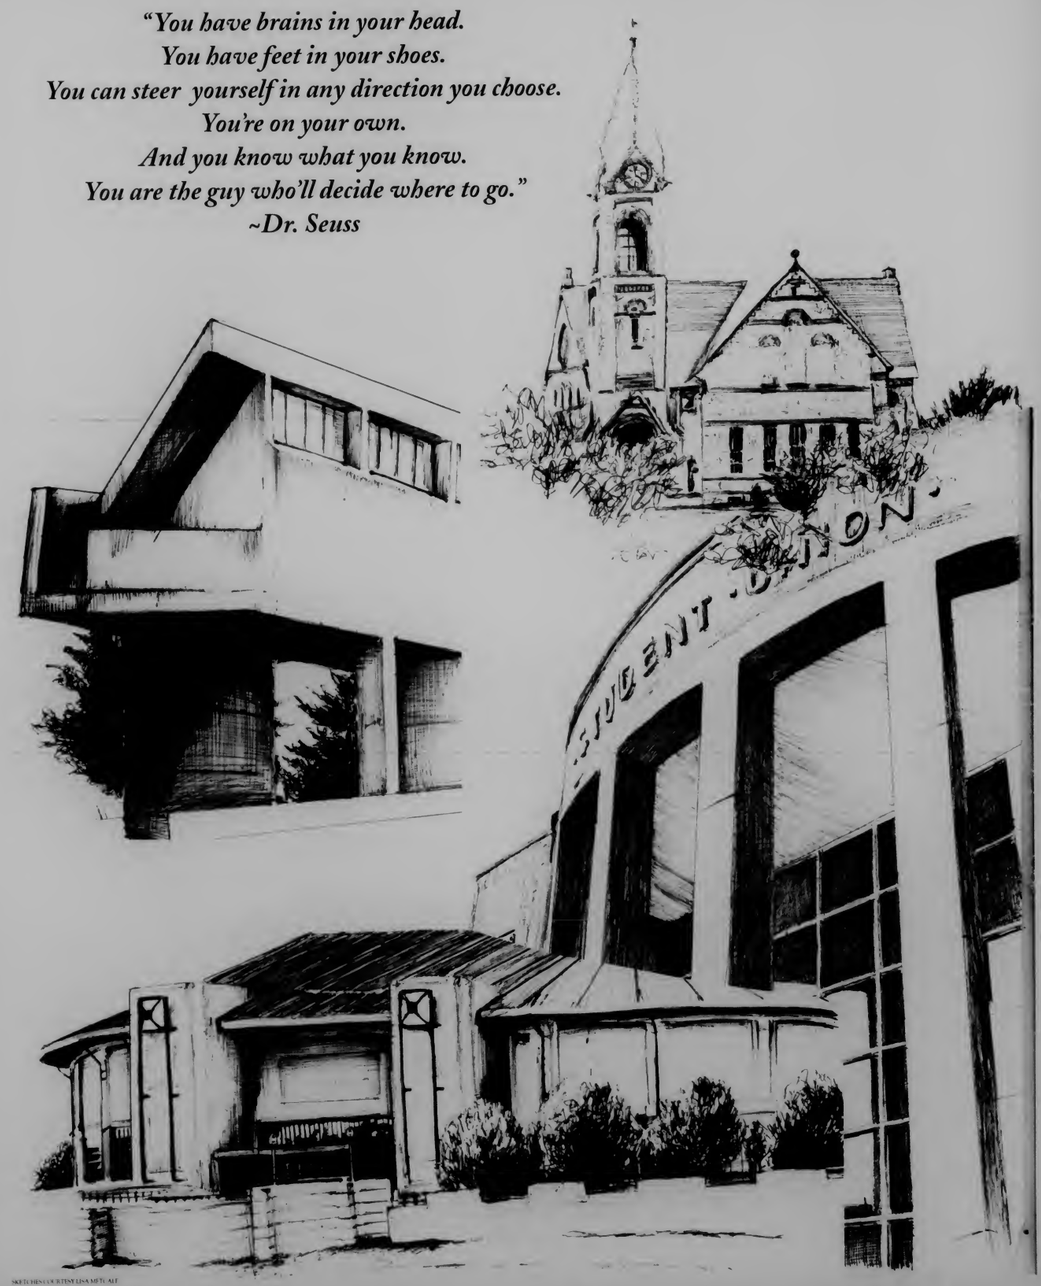
Chris Fiore (No. 21) was UMass' fourth 30-goal scorer this season. DAN SANTELLAN/COLLEGIAN

Once you start down the Sports path, forever will it dominate your destiny.

EDITOR'S Danupon Center [illegible] is my pleasure to introduce you to the final installment of Misty-Eyed Memories. If you don't read the Collegian or don't know who the hell writes the Sports don't bother reading on. Why? Because you're not special. You tried, but you fell by the farm. And your indebted-ness level is nonexistent.

Eric "Yoda-strom" Soderstrom
(Sports Editor)

I've never known such an addiction. Whether or not I haven't left the basement of the Campus Center for three years. And it's something I'm quite proud of. But next semester, I will be moving. And that hurts. I can't even begin to explain how much this rag means to me. I couldn't even begin to begin. So I won't.



To my staff, I ask only a few things. Write and work with the passion I know you all hold for this section. And don't leave until your soul forces you out. Promise me, that when it's time to write your final column, you won't be able to. And when you leave, you'll remember the ones from which you learned. Suds go Bragh. But I'll be back for one last hurrah. Pig, it's yours.

"Do or do not, there is no try."

Turn to MISTY EYED'S page 9

DAILY COLLEGIAN
GRADUATION
WWW.DAILYCOLLEGIAN.COM UMass COMMENCEMENT 2002

"You have brains in your head.
You have feet in your shoes.
You can steer yourself in any direction you choose.
You're on your own.
And you know what you know.
You are the guy who'll decide where to go."
~Dr. Seuss

SKETCHING COURTESY LISA METCALF

Brian C. Bovino "Droops"

Thank you for all your hard work. You are the best! I am so very proud of you. I love you.
Mom

Anne Reagan

You are our shining star!
Congratulations, Annie!
We love you!
Love,
Mom, Dad, Cai and Marg

Anthony & Angela Ruggiero

Congratulations Anthony and Angela! We're so proud of both of you! We wish you both continued success and happiness!
Love always,
Mom and Dad

Frank DiMeglio, Jr.

On this special day we want to tell you how proud we are of you. We love you so much.
Love,
Mom, Dad and Jen

Kristen M. Ablondi

You did it! Now go take on the world. We are so very proud of you.
Love,
Mom, Dad and John

Peter J. Bratton

Congratulations! All the hard work has paid off. We're so proud of you!
Love, Mom, Dad, Dan and Erin

Maria Likakis

You made it! We are so proud of you! We love you! Love, Mom, Dad, Eileen, George, Chrissy, Brian, Julianna, and Michael

Bonnie Swart

We are proud of you and wish you success in the future.
From your family,
Mom, Bob, Dad, Derek, Grandparents, Aunts, Uncles and Cousins

Andrea Zizzo

What a great accomplishment! We are so proud of you.
Congratulations!
We love you.
Love,
Mom, Dad,
Michael, Mac, and Elmo

Patricia Ann O'Roark

Congratulations, Patty!
I am very proud of you.
Love, Mom

Robert E. Roswell

You've enjoyed your college years. We've enjoyed your accomplishments. We couldn't ask for more. We're so very proud.
Love,
Mom and Dad

Nicholas Urbanek

Congratulations!
You did it. We're so very proud of you.

Love you so much-
Thom, Mom,
Nicole, Papa
and the rest of the family

Amanda Pavlick

Congratulations Amanda and Danielle!
Amanda Pavlick, UMass 2002 and cousin Danielle Wittern, Hamilton College 2002.
With much love,
Laura and Jim

Hannah McArdle

Congratulations Hannah! We just hope the next place has a craft center to match the one at UMass!
All our love,
your family

Nicholas Plouffe

"If you can DREAM it, you can DO it" - Walt Disney
We are proud of your accomplishments!
We love you,
Mom and Dad

Elisa Ofria

You started young preparing for your degree in Communications. We are so proud of you.
Love,
Mom, Ian and Susan

Brent Siniawski

I knew you could do it.
I'm so proud of all your accomplishments.
May God Bless.

Love Dad.

Erica Servello

Congratulations Erica!
We are so proud of you.
Savor the moment!

Love, Mom and Dad.

Erin C. Burke

We are so proud of all you have accomplished. We are truly blessed to be your parents. We love you very much.
Mom and Dad

Linda Choute

You did it.
I'm proud of your accomplishments. You are the best. I love you.
Love, Mom

John Christopher Patrick Mullen

We are so proud of you. We Love you and know God will always Bless you as you begin another new adventure.
Congratulations, you are the Joy of our lives.

Love,
Mom, Dad, and all your family

Erin Cooke

You have always been an original! We are so proud of you! Follow your dreams, reach for the stars (or mountain tops!)
We love you,
Dad and Mom

Elena Maria Penisis

Lainie, you did it with style! We had no doubt you would. We are so proud of you!
Love,
Ma, Dad, Evan and Cali

Allison Christie

We are so proud of you!
Now onto the next chapter.
All our love,
Mom, Dad,
Jessica and Steve

Chioma Uchendu

You did it! We are proud of your accomplishments.
Best Wishes-
We love you!
Daddy, Mommy
and brothers

Jennifer Joy Barrelle

UMass Class of 2002,
You did it honey! We are so proud of you.
You're the Best. We Love you "589"

Mom & Dad
XXX000

Jeremy Richard Caron

Jeremy-
You've been a blessing since the day you were born.
Congratulations on your latest academic achievement.
Here's to Graduate School!
Love, Mom and Dad

Joel Andrew Southall

You are carved in the palm of God's hand and in the palm of your hearts. We are so proud.
Love,
Mom and Dad

Melissa Mallah

Should I have known the awards to be so great I would have had many more like you. Congratulations and God bless you!

Love Mom

Kristy Steeves

We are so proud of you!
It seems like yesterday.

Love, Mom, Pat, Kary, Daniel, Nicholas, Alexander, Kathleen & Dieter

Joseph Quintero

Dear Joseph:
All the family is very proud of you.
Congratulations and happiness is all we wish you.
Mom and Dad

Kristin Lynch

Congratulations!
You've made us so proud-
If you get the chance...
dance!
Love,
Mom and Dad

Patrice Bernadel

We wish you luck at the start of this new beginning. we are proud of your accomplishments!

Love Mom & dad

Corey David Laverdiere

Hey "Sport", you've "managed" to graduate!
We're so proud of your accomplishments.
Love,
Mom, Dad and Al

Sarah Cook

Congratulations!
and Yeah!
Graduation Day
We love you lots,

Momma-Toe-N
and all your family.

Leeann Wieczorek

U-Mass Class of 2002!
Congratulations
"Leeann Mary" did it!
The whole family is very proud of you.
Good Job!
Love,
The Family

Steven R. Wheeler

Congratulations!
You've made us so proud-
If you get the chance...
dance!
Love,
Mom and Dad

Kelly Davis

Have we told you how great you are lately?
Love,
Mom, Dad,
Erin, Katie and Poochie

Sarah Mishayev

Dearest Sarah,
To the brightest star in the sky, our Sarah. You have made a milestone for a bright future,
all our love,
your wonderful family

Tara Marie Rukstalis

Congratulations, You Did It!

We are so very proud of you!

As you go forward in life always follow your dreams, and remember how much you are loved at home.

Love always, Mom, Dad, and Wendy

Kim Stankiewicz

Congratulations Kim!
We are so proud of you!
Love,
Mom, Dad, Chris and all of the four legged pets

Kyle Johnson

Celebrate!
Celebrate into your future.
Congratulations Kyle-
we are so proud of you.
All our love,
Dad, Mom and Chris

Nicholas M. Ricciardi

You've reached the major star-keep going you'll have it all. We're so proud of you.
Love you,
Dad, Mom, Gie and Sofia

Deborah Liebman

"Two roads diverged in a wood, and you...
You took the one less traveled by,
And that has made all the difference."

Congratulations!

Mom, Dad, Matt and Grandma

Victoria A. Houle

Congratulations! We are so proud of you
We wish you a bright and happy future.
We Love You!

Love,
Mom & Dad

Michael Callahan

Congratulations! We are proud of your accomplishments.

Love,
Mom & Dad

Erin Prastine

Congratulations and Good Luck as you continue to follow your dreams. We are so very proud of you!
Love,
Dad, Mom and Steph

Rachel Leah Edelman

Good Job Rachel! We are very proud of you.
We wish you the best of Luck at Harvard University Masters Program

Love,
Mom & Dad & Andrea

Erin Renner

"When you build bridges you can keep crossing them"
-Rick Pitino

We love you Erin!
Mom, Dad, and Sylvia

Alicia Bottini

Absolutely outstanding!!!
We love you.

Love,
Mom, Dad, and Joe

Nicole Jenkins

Hallelujah!

You did it! Congratulations,
I'm so proud of you Honey!

Love, Mommy

Meghan B. Sharry

Meg, We are so very proud. You are a wonderful young woman. The door is wide open to you.

Love,
Mom, Dad, Mike, Kev, Mam,
Grandparents & Pete

Jeffry Deckenback

Jeffry, it's been a joy to see you grow into the fine man you're becoming. We're so proud of you.
Love, Mom and Dad

Amanda Lane

Way to go Amanda!
Two degrees in four years.
We are so very proud of you.
Love,
Mom, Dad and Ryan

Rose Malfucci

"Wow, what an idea for a thesis. I'll start now!"

Congratulations and Good Luck!
Love, Mom, Dad + Kate

Jennifer Marie Menin

"Never underestimate your ability to do good. Congratulations on a job well done! We're so proud of you and love you very much"

Love Mom, Dad & GJ

Jordana Cammarata

Congratulations Jordy, we are very proud of your successes in the 3 S's:
Socializing, Snowboarding, and Studying.
We never dreamed that academic life would take you from New Jersey, to Massachusetts, to Vietnam, and back.
We love you! Don't ever change!
Mom and Steve

Susan Forte

Sue-
Congrats on your degree and playing in the University bands. Now get a job.
Love,
Mom, Dad, Terri-Umass'93, Grampy, Helen and Carol

Eleanor J. Cash

Ellie, Wishing you the best life has to offer and continued success. We are so very proud.
Love,
Mom, Dad,
Carey, Andrea

Michelle Steffen

Congratulations on your achievement! We are so proud!!
Thank you for being you.
Our love and respect,
Mom and Dad

Meredith Somerville

Congratulations Meredith!
We are proud of all your accomplishments. All your hard work has paid off.
Love,
Mom, Dad and Heather

Joe Condon

We are very proud of your accomplishments!! You did a great job!
Love, Mom and Dad

Mary DeBoise

Your worked so hard to reach your goals. We are real proud of you. We love you.
Love,
Grandma, Wanda
Theya, and Elijah

Megan Regis Powers

Megan-
We are so proud of you!
Love,
Mom, Dad, Andy, Ali, Vanessa and Reed

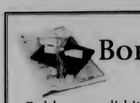
Jennifer Sarah Morris

Hats off to Jen Morris. You are our star and we love you just the way you are!!!
Mom, Dad, Deb, David and Sparky

Deborah Katzman

Congratulations Deb Katzman!
Love,
Mom

Nicole Patton



Words cannot express how proud I am of you. Keep your head in the sky. I know you will because that's you.

I Love You
-Mom

Daniel G. Kallenber Jr.

We are proud of your accomplishments. Best of luck in law school.
We love you!
Love,
Mom, Dad, Brian and "Holly"

Bobby Windheim

Bobby, you did it! We are so proud of you. Hope you enjoyed your college years at UMass. We know you are a hard worker. Good luck in the future. Rachel & John really look up to you.
Lots of Love,
Mom, Dad, Rachel and John

Denise Gaudreault

You Did it! We are so proud of you and all you've accomplished. We love you very much.
Love,
Mom and Dad

Amy Garganta

You've come a long way, Baby! We're all so proud of you. A bright future is ahead of you now.
Love,
Mom, Dad, and Mark

Jeffrey Messinger

Congratulations! Another Milestone Achieved. We're beaming with pride as our family has a Mechanical Engineer. Our best wishes in all your future endeavors.

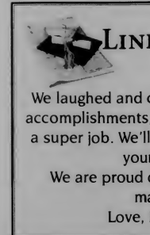
We love You, Mom & Dad

Shannon C. Doherty

Congratulations Shannon. Times have been tough but you continued to succeed in your goals!

-Your family and your dad above are cheering your success.

Jonathan Charles Galenski



We are so very proud of you and graduation from the School of Management. We love you so much.
Love,
Mom, Dad,
Justin and Lauren

Ryan Hayward

Four years of learning
- a lifetime of memories!
Congratulations, We are so very proud of you.

Love Mom, Dad, & Brad

Linda Ozgopoyan

We laughed and cried with you for all your accomplishments, but you and only you did a super job. We'll always be there to share your next goals.
We are proud of you and love you no matter what.
Love, Mom and Alex

Reneé K. Sarmento

You're the best daughter. We've always been proud of you!
Love,
Mom and Dad

Lauren Keris

Follow your dreams...Aim for the stars!

All our Love
Mom & Dad

Ryan Conradi

You are awesome! Congratulations on all your accomplishments. We are proud of you today and always.
Love, Mom and Dad

Shannon Quirk

Congratulations Shannon! You've come a long way baby! You're the best, we love you.
Love,
Mom, Dad,
James and Sean

Brent Siniawski

We are so proud of your achievments and successes. The best is yet to come! Much happiness with all our love,
Mom and Michael

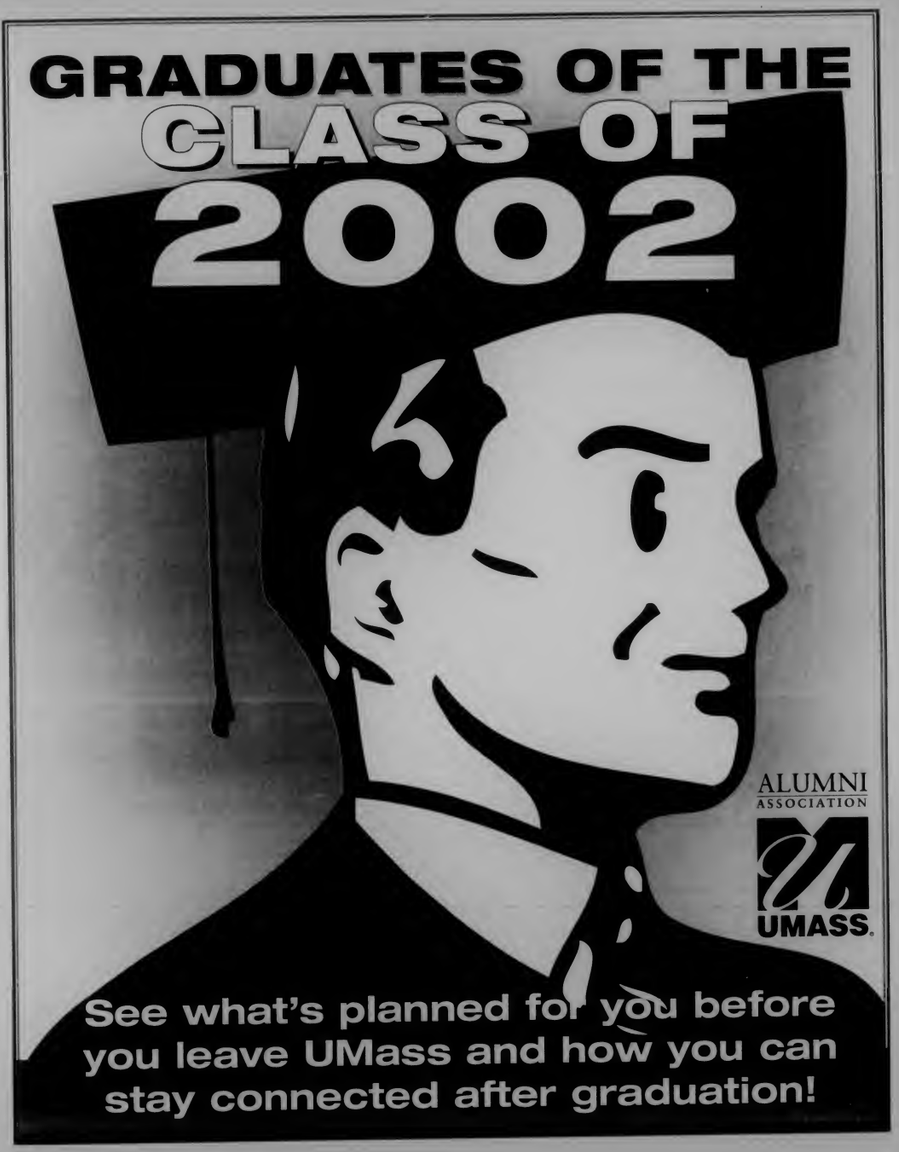
Kristen Steele Baily

Congratulations on your achievements!

Kudrat Kahlon

Hey Good Lookin'

Best wishes for the brightest future!



Congratulations!!!

love
ShImAuLi

Congratulations from all of us to all of you!

GRADUATES OF THE CLASS OF 2002

ALUMNI ASSOCIATION
UMASS

See what's planned for you before you leave UMass and how you can stay connected after graduation!

Free membership
Free email service
Connection to UMass

For more information, stop by the Alumni Association table at Cap and Gown distribution in the Textbook Annex from May 6 - May 24 or visit us on the Web at umassalumni.com

Congratulations to the Class of 2002!

ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

UMASS

You were. You are. UMASS.

Support the Class of 2002 Senior Campaign

A strong library is essential for an excellent University and affects every area of campus. Since the founding of the University, the UMass community has realized the importance of the library and worked to ensure its quality by raising private funds to support it. In fact, in the 1880's alumni "friends" ambitiously organized to raise funds needed to build the first library on campus which was located in the Old Chapel. Annual contributions continued through the years, and gifts from students, faculty, alumni, and parents have been used to purchase new materials, preserve the old, and provide instructional facilities and programs. These generous friends provide support that adds a margin of excellence to the Library's collections and facilities.

The Class of 2002 is proud to be continuing this tradition of giving back by designating their Senior Gift to the campus Libraries. For more information please email annualfund@admin.umass.edu or visit www.umass.edu/commencement

Stay Connected no matter where you are with a UMass Regional Alumni Club

Now that you are graduating, you can still do things with other UMass alumni and stay involved with UMass wherever you are. Regional Alumni Clubs around the country are looking for active volunteers to help aumni stay connected to the University. For more information, or to contact the Regional Alumni Club Leader in the area to which you are relocating, visit www.umassalumni.com and click the "Regional Clubs" link.

Earn Fast Cash!

The Alumni Relations Office is now accepting applications for Alumni Weekend 2002. Must be available June 7, 8 and 9. Students needed to provide transportation, bellhop, host events and more. $6.75/hour. Meals will be provided during working hours and lodging is available. Call Lynn Zlotnick at 545-2317 for more information or stop by Memorial Hall.

Work all weekend
We provide meals during working hours and lodging!

ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

UMASS

Your UMass Alumni Association wants to wish everyone good luck on their final exams and to do that, your Alumni Association will once again be handing out .

Free Water and Candy
W.E.B. DuBois Library Lobby

Thursday, May 16th from 2-4 p.m. and 6-8 p.m.
Friday, May 17th from 2-4 p.m.

We wish you good luck on your Finals!

Mark your calendars now...

October	5	Oozefest	Start getting ready for the mud! Alumni teams are welcome.
	12	Homecoming	Welcome back your alumni friends.
November	2	Family Day	Clean your room!

Just because you are graduating doesn't mean that you stop supporting UMass.

The UMass budget has been cut twice this year and declining state revenues could further jeopardize the University. Your voice in support of UMass is critical. Join UMass alumni, parents, friends and other students in an all-out effort of support and advocacy. Please act now. You know that UMass adds value to the Commonwealth and education is the best investment the state can make. Please contact your elected officials and make UMass visible in your workplace and in your community. Show your support for your University. Visit www.umass.edu/actnow for more information on how you can get involved.

- Visit, Call, Write your Massachusetts State Legislators
- Register to Vote
- If you see UMass in the News, Respond
- Keep informed
- Attend a UMass Event
- Close the Loop - Tell us how you support UMass. Email us at alumni@admin.umass.edu or call us at 545-2317

Act NOW! on behalf of the University of Massachusetts

Important Websites:

Advocacy Programs -- www.umass.edu/ambassadors
Alumni Association -- www.umassalumni.com
Find Your Legislator -- www.secstate.wa.gov/maps/search_form.php
Legislator Directory -- www.state.ma.us/legis/memmenu.htm
@UMASS -- www.umassalumni.com/newsletter

Thank you for helping to build a stronger UMass.

The Internationally Award-Winning
Commencement Ball

Dessert, Dancing and Drinks
(Positive ID required)

Carriage Rides

A Night to Remember!

2002

Friday, May 24, 2002
7:00 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. Student Union

To purchase tickets ($35.00 per person):
* Order on-line at www.umassalumni.com
* Call the Alumni Office at 545-2317
* Stop by the STARS table in the Campus Center : May 1-3, 6-10, & 13-14
* Stop by Cap and Gown Distribution the week of May 20th

Commencement Ball is supported by:
UMass Alumni Association, Alumni Relations Office, The Massachusetts Daily Collegian, Student Government Association Programming Board, Campus Activities Office, College of Humanities and Fine Arts, College of Social and Behavioral Sciences, College of Natural Sciences and Mathematics, Auxiliary Services, and Greek Affairs

ALUMNI ASSOCIATION UMASS

Don't forget to make your pledge to the Senior Campaign!

Let your Senior friends know you will miss them!
Give them a card and your choice of glasses filled with Hershey Kisses to say Goodbye!
Only $6.50 each or 2 for $12.

You can order online at umassalumni.com or stop by the STARS table on the Campus Center Concourse during May.

AT THE SPRING CONCERT

FIND YOUR VOICE
Ed/Op page 4.

SOFTBALL

OLYMPIC DREAM
Sports page 12

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY

COLLEGIAN

SUMMER ☆☆☆☆☆ ISSUE ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY EIGHT ☆☆☆☆☆ ORIENTATION

TOP TEN STORIES

2001-2002 was a time of turmoil and tragedy. Of unity, solidarity, patriotism and terrorism. It was a time of constant change, of money woes, of a new administration stepping up and old administration taking flight. Most of all, it was a time for our generation. A time we will never, can never forget, one that we will be able to tell our grandchildren about. We here at the Collegian have witnessed and reported the events of this time for you, and we have selected ten stories that we feel represent the landmarks of this time.

- Andrew Merritt

Right to Left: The images that made a nation standstill on Sept. 11; students rally on the State House steps to save UMass; faulty callboxes on the "rape trail" leave students concerned for their safety.

Campus connects in wake of Sept. 11

The University of Massachusetts, as well as much of the nation, was halted on Sept. 11, 2001 to watch or listen to the almost unbelievable scenes that unfolded before them on television screens and radio stations.

Some people, worried about friends or families, reached for phones, left only to the hope of hearing those they knew were unharmed in the terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon as well as the hijackings and destruction of four commercial airliners. Others were frozen in time, wondering who could commit such acts, and what would happen as a result.

In response, the University held special events to honor those who had been affected by the devastation. Mass e-mails were sent out to everyone on campus, informing students and faculty that the University and all its services would be there to help them through this emotional time. Letters were sent to student's homes, and donations were given to assist both those who helped in the rescue efforts and who had suffered losses.

On the evening of the attacks, students on campus came together to help each other through one of the most devastating pieces of news in U.S. history with a candlelit vigil held on the lawn in front of the Student Union Building. Since that night, various activities on campus continued to keep students, faculty and community members in close touch, providing ways for them to help out their fellow citizens.

During President Bush's appointed National Day of Remembrance on Sept. 14, the UMass Community Remembrance service was held at 3 p.m. near the Campus Pond. Campus officials, administrative staff, religious figures, students and musical groups each provided their condolences.

The following Monday, Sept. 17, the American Red Cross held an all-day blood drive in Campus Center Auditorium, drawing approximately 100 people to donate, and this marked only the first in a long series of such events. In addition, collection sites for special funds helping those devastated in the destruction were set up at various sites on campus.

Despite the fact that the specific incident of terror is over, the United States may very well be feeling the ripples of the devastating attack for years to come. The way that the world deals with terrorists and the way that America handles the safety of both its people and its country have face many changes in recent months, ranging from government attacks on the Taliban to tighter airport security. The country is now left to only speculate at the extent to which this tragedy will continue to affect the world in the years to follow.

- Jennifer Eastwood

Budget cuts hit home

The University of Massachusetts faced unprecedented budget cuts in the academic year of 2001-2002.

A $495 fee increase was implemented in December 2001 to offset a predicted budget cut. Following the $15 million cut in January, 95 campus employees were laid off and sweeping cutbacks were made in services offered. The full-day classrooms were among the first on the block, but were saved by the Graduate Employee Organization and negotiation with the University. The campus Escort Service was reduced, and all hiring searches were frozen.

The faculty, upset that parts of the student fee increase were going to athletics, requested a $2 million cut to athletics. After seven sports programs were cut, and a defensive coordinator for the football team was hired, the Faculty Senate condemned the athletic department.

The budget cuts set off large-scale demonstrations on the Amherst campus and at the State House. Letter writing campaigns and other activities, organized under a coalition calling itself "Save UMass," made headlines statewide by flooding legislators with postcards, notes and anecdotes. One professor remarked he wished the activist spirit toward the school's budget were a yearly occurrence.

The efforts seemed to be for naught, as the House budget annualized a $29 million cut to the University system and refused to fund the Educational Reference Materials (ERM) line item. Rep. Ellen Story (D-Amherst) amended the budget to fund ERM. The House will pass the state's budget sometime this summer, according to timetables. It then moves on to the Senate for debate before being approved or vetoed by the governor.

- Ken Campbell

First undergraduate union stirs campus

Resident Assistants at the University of Massachusetts garnered national attention when they became the first undergraduate labor union on March 5.

The RAs and Community Development Assistants voted 138-88 to be represented for collective bargaining purposes by Local 2322 of the United Auto Workers.

UMass has vowed to fight the Massachusetts Labor Relations Commission's certification of the union, saying the board "misapplied" state law.

The administration's refusal to negotiate with the union led to protests and demonstrations in the weeks after the March 5 vote. Protesters occupied the chancellor's office, the news office and Housing Director Michael Gilbert's office on April 8.

A week later, RAs picketed Susan Pearson's home. Pearson, the associate provost, is the University's chief negotiator. The protests reached a climatic note with an April 29 sit-in by supporters of the RA union. A group of 15 supporters occupied Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Javier Cevallos' Whitmore office. After being removed by police, other activists blocked in a police bus. A total of 35 people were arrested that day.

The union has since toned down its activities, instead focusing on support rallies and symbolic bargaining tables outside of the Whitmore Administration Building.

- Ken Campbell

New chancellor chosen to enhance finances

Students at the University of Massachusetts will soon be seeing a new face among their administrators with the addition of Dr. John V. Lombardi as the new chancellor for the campus.

Lombardi was the former president of the University of Florida and will officially become chancellor on July 1, taking over the position from current interim Chancellor Marcellette Williams. He was chosen for the position from a pool of over 100 applicants and from three finalists including Elizabeth D. Capaldi, provost at the State University of New York at Buffalo and William E. Hogan II, a member of the University of Minnesota Board of Regents. All three held open meetings with the entire campus expressing their views on a variety of issues.

The former president is well known for his abilities to fundraise and is credited with increasing the student enrollment at the University of Florida as well as increasing the incoming revenue. With the University facing a current budget crisis, the ability to raise funds for the school was a pivotal issue.

The appointment to chancellor was not without its controversies. Lombardi faced sanctions in his former job because he had called his boss an Oreo: "Black on the outside and white on the inside."

Although he held a strong verbal stance in support of diversity on campus, some students and members of the community expressed concern about his appointment.

The process for finding a chancellor began last July by a 21-member committee made up of members of the Board of Trustees, alumni and administrators. The final decision for the

Turn to TOP TEN page 4

Right to Left: RA union supporters take over Whitmore; the RA union is announced; state police investigate the death of a baby found in the James dormitory.

Campus Perspectives

by Jeff Swartz

"What's your reaction to the budget cuts?"

Melina Mon '04 HRTA

"I'm not sure about getting financial aid, and whether or not I can even afford to pay tuition next year. Save UMass!"

Jay Bagge '03 Communications

"This is our education and this is our future; we need to fight for it."

Tracey Samuels '05 Communication Disorders

"I think it's really unfair to the students, especially the freshmen. This is our future, if it slowly disintegrates there will be nothing left."

Nicole Marinaro '05 Communications Disorders

"The budget cuts need to stop. If they don't stop here then they will eventually effect everyone on every campus across the state, and eventually the country."

Chris Carlozzi '03 Political Scientee

"I think if the University used the money on appropriate things, not like childcare and useless social programs, then there wouldn't be much of a financial crunch."

Roberto Delgado '02 Communication

"I think any effort to generate any consciousness, of the subtlety of the issue of all the budget cuts, is necessary."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003
• (413) 545-3500 •
• Fax (413) 545-1592 •
• http://www.dailycollegian.com •

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts' academic year. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenue generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded as the Index in 1890. It became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Daily Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 9:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Matthew F. Sacco Editor-in-Chief
Scott Eldridge II Managing Editor
Shawn Daugherty Business Manager
Mike Kulak Production Manager
Matthew Despres Night Supervisor
Ruth E. Sund Advertising Production Manager
Erica Hidalgo Advertising Manager

Jennifer Eastwood Arts & Living Editor
Jamie Lee Editorial/Opinion Editor
S.I. Port News Editor
James Schaffer Photography Editor
Jim Pignatiello Sports Editor
Cara Murphy Finance Manager
Jack Faulis Distribution Manager

Shannon Farrington Editorial Production Manager
Jolene Rousseau Layout Manager
Charlie Higgins Graphics Advisor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marry Pappas Classified Advertising
Greg Stamm Assistant Finance Manager
John Collmer Assistant Business Manager
Sara Bajoras Assistant Advertising Manager

Welcome Freshman!!

OCMP Off Campus Meal Plan

Bringing you the best of UMass and beyond!

www.OCMPAmherst.com 1-888-211-6267

ATKINS FARMS

Country Market ...where the apple is just the beginning!

Rte. 116 & Bay Road, South Amherst, MA
(413) 253-9528 • (800) 594-9537

Looking For Something To Do?
Atkins Farms Has Something For Everyone!

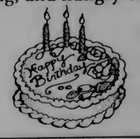
Farm Fresh Produce
Country Bakery
Meat Market
Deli & Lunches
Specialty Foods
Homemade Fudge



Full Service Florist
Fruit & Gift Baskets
Gift Department
Take-Out Food
Ice Cream Bar
Specialty Cheeses

A unique country market nestled in one of the oldest apple orchards in New England. Atkins is just a five minute drive south from UMass on Route 116. You'll enjoy a unique shopping experience where old time service is an everyday treat. Sample some of New England's favorite foods or pick up a country gift as a keepsake.

Attention Parents!!
Student Special Care Packages
Great idea for parents far away from their busy, hard working, and hungry college student.

Birthday Cakes
Flowers, Balloons
Snack Paks
Get Well Paks
Mix & Match Paks
& many more!

Call for our brochure
(413)253-9528 or
1-800-594-9537
www.atkinsfarms.com
Deliveries Mon-Sat

■ top ten

continued from page 1

SCOTT ELDRIDGE II/COLLEGIAN

Speaches on the State House steps unified students and administrators in the fight to save public higher education.

chancellor position was passed by the Board of Trustee and had the support of University President William Bulger.

- Melissa Hammel

Save UMass rally carries the call

Several thousand willing students, dedicated faculty, administrators and parents attended the rally to save public higher education on April 25.

The rally, organized by Save UMass, brought the voice of those affected by state budget cuts to the steps of Massachusetts's legislature and into the State House. Students represented each of the University of Massachusetts campuses as well as several other state and community colleges. In addition, faculty and some administrators joined students' efforts, showing pride in their school by wearing school colors and clothing and waving their message on signs.

To rectify the damage done to UMass' reputation by students who trampled flowers around the State House at a similar rally in 1989, students this time brought flowers to their representatives.

Save UMass organizers tried to organize meetings with students' representatives in their offices following the rally on the steps. However, upon arrival within the State House, activists were told that all representatives were in caucus that day due to the release of the House Ways and Means budget recommendation and would therefore not be available for discussion. Rally attendees instead voiced their concerns to the legislative aides ready and waiting in their respective representatives' offices.

Representative Ellen Story (D-Amherst) said that the timing of the rally was perfect since it occurred at the time of the budget's release.

"This is an unusually good one [rally]," said Story. "There are lots of posters, lots of people, lots of noise. The more representative hear from people back home, the better."

Students gave up class time and their personal time to attend the rally for various reasons. For some, it was yet another chance to support UMass and public higher education. For many, it was a singular opportunity to devote a day to a cause close to them.

The battle to save UMass and public higher education continues.

S.I. Port

Baby found dead in James dormitory

Authorities have yet to determine the cause of death for the baby found in a William James dormitory trash receptacle area by a maintainer.

Northwestern District Attorney Elizabeth D. Scheibel explained that the investigation concerning what happened to the nine pound three ounce Caucasian boy is still ongoing. The mother of the child is described as a 19-year old University of Massachusetts freshman from Massachusetts. The father is not a UMass student, but is from the hometown of the woman.

The identities of both are being withheld due to privacy issues.

"First we need to determine, obviously, whether a crime has been committed," Scheibel said.

The maintenance worker discovered the child at approximately 7:20 a.m. Thursday. The preliminary autopsy results have not clarified the time of the child's birth or death.

Scheibel said police had interviewed the mother. Information from the mother's statement was used to obtain a search warrant for the mother's dorm room and the second-floor bathroom of the all-female dormitory.

"Evidence was obtained, and was taken as a result of that search," said Scheibel.

Scheibel confirmed rumors that the mother had denied the pregnancy to dorm mates.

Campus police were called after the discovery and state police were brought in afterward. Interviews pointed police toward the young woman, who was "thought to be pregnant." The mother was taken to an area hospital for medical attention. Information regarding the condition of the mother has not been released.

The DA's office would not speculate on possible charges, if any, against the woman until the autopsy results are final and the investigation is complete. If the child was stillborn, the charge, according to Scheibel, will not be murder.

At a meeting for residents of James dormitory following the discovery, students discussed their view of the event and how it had thus affected them.

One resident broke into tears as she described her confusion and astonishment as she emerged from her room across from the bathroom to find police blocking her from entering the bathroom to take a shower.

Other residents spoke to the importance of creating a more educated atmosphere, especially in an all-female dorm such as James, on how to find help if a resident did become pregnant.

The meeting became a forum for residents to ask for help and discuss the emotions surrounding the incident, but advisors and administrators running the meeting halted debate over how the issue was handled by the mother.

- S.I. Port

Sexual Assault and Rape

Several sexual assaults and rapes have been reported on the University of Massachusetts – Amherst campus during the academic year. Two offenses were reported in October, as well as three more in the spring semester.

Two individuals reported assaults in an isolated area near the McGuirk Alumni Stadium known as "the maze" on October 22. The victims of the assault reported it to the University of Massachusetts Police Department and three suspects were apprehended later that night.

Outside Dickinson dormitory, an assault was reported on March 29. At 12:45 p.m. it was reported that three men accosted a woman after trying to engage her in conversation. The men reportedly forced her against a wall of the building, and left after about a minute, when a passing car startled them.

Outside the Fine Arts Center an assault occurred on April 18 at approximately 10:00 p.m. The attack is still under investigation by the UMPD. The woman assaulted reported three attackers to the police.

The most recent assault occurred within the John Quincy Adams dormitory on May 5 at 6:00 a.m. In this instance, it was reported that three men pushed the victim into her room as she returned from the bathroom. The woman also reported that one man held her down while another sexually assaulted her. She was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton, and the UMPD are still investigating.

The recent assaults are not the first in the University's history. In 1999 there were four reports of rapes on the campus. The first of these occurred on Nov. 2, when a student reported a rape between 5:30 and 6:30 a.m. A second rape was reported one week later and occurred in broad daylight near the campus pond. The third reported in 1999 also occurred near the campus pond, at 9:30 p.m. Additionally, there was one false report that same semester.

- Melissa Hammel and Scott Eldridge II

Protest leads to 35 arrests

A protest against the refusal by the University of Massachusetts – Amherst to negotiate with the newly formed Resident Assistants' (RA) union led to 35 arrests at the Whitmore Administration Building on April 29.

Fifteen students entered the Student Affairs office early in the morning and remained there in protest of what they claim is an illegal action by the University in their refusal to go to the bargaining table with the newly formed union. The University maintains that the union is not legal because undergraduates do not have the right to unionize.

The 15 students remained in Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs Javier Cevallos's office with their arms linked, until 2:30 p.m. when they were arrested. The administration closed down the building at 1:00 p.m.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Bob Marcum surveying McGuirk Alumni Stadium

While the protesting students were in the office they were read the University picketing code and informed that if they did not leave, assistance from the University of Massachusetts Police Department would be sought.

When the "Whitmore 15" were led out onto a bus to be booked at the Mullins Center, four additional women linked arms, broke through the police barricade, and were immediately arrested.

Police also arrested 15 other individuals after they blocked off the bus and refused to move out of the way.

All 35 individuals were charged with disorderly conduct in a roadway and for resisting arrest some others were also arrested on the charges of trespassing. There were arraigned in Northampton the following day and will be represented in court by lawyers for the United Auto Workers local 2322.

The RA's that took part in the protest and were arrested were fired from their positions and are facing suspension from school pending their trials. The students from Hampshire College that took part in the protest as well as one other individual have been banned from campus.

- Melissa Hammel and Daniel G. Lamothe

Seven Athletic Programs Cut

The budget crisis cost the University of Massachusetts – Amherst seven athletic teams. The Athletic Department cut Men's and Women's Water Polo, Men's and Women's Gymnastics, Men's Tennis and Indoor Track, and Women's Volleyball.

The cuts affected approximately 136 athletes, ten coaches, and will save the University an estimated $1.1 million dollars.

According to a University press release, team success played a smaller role in the cuts than other factors, most importantly financial burden on the Department. Explanations for the team's being eliminated ranged from cost with Men's Indoor Track and Field, to few successful seasons with Women's Volleyball, to a lack of general interest in Men's and Women's Water polo.

The cuts came despite the Faculty Senate's recommendation to cut the annual sports budget between one and two million dollars not by cutting programs, but by making the biggest sports hold the brunt of the financial responsibility for the Department.

Basketball, hockey and football completely escaped the cuts.

According to Athletic Director Bob Marcum, the University has a responsibility to maintain the three biggest sports. "As a member of each conference, we have to adhere to the rules of the conference in terms of financial support and scholarship," he said.

Marcum also said that there were "no surprises" as to which teams got cut.

"With Water polo, we don't even have a decent facility on campus. And when you talk about going to Little Rock, Arkansas, for the Eastern Championships, you need to think about what money is being spent there," he said.

General reactions to the cuts were negative.

"It's really hard to believe that someone could take your dream and everything you worked for, and just throw it out the window," Colleen Wasson, a Women's Water Polo player, said.

- Daniel G. Lamothe

Marcum retires

After nearly a decade as University of Massachusetts – Amherst Athletic Director, Bob Marcum, has decided to take advantage of the Commonwealth's early retirement program.

"We've had a great run, but I've been thinking about making this move," Marcum said. "With a new Chancellor [John Lombardi] on board, it just seemed that the timing was right."

Marcum led the UMass athletic program to 70 NCAA Tournament appearances including a Final Four for men's basketball in 1996 and a Division I-AA National Championship for football in 1998. However, under his supervision, UMass football did not make the move to the I-A division and facilities have not been upgraded.

During Marcum's tenure, UMass teams have won over 60 percent of their games. Men's basketball annually plays nationally televised games, the hockey program has been reinstated and the Men's Lacrosse program has made it to their 14th NCAA tournament. Field Hockey is a regular contender for the NCAA Tournament, softball is a regular member of the College World Series and both Water Polo and Gymnastics teams are nationally ranked on an annual basis.

"What Bob Marcum has been able to achieve for nearly a decade can be summarized with one word: excellence," UMass President William M. Bulger said.

Marcum has put the plans in motion for the completion of two new facilities on campus, including the soccer/softball complex that is expected to be completed this summer and a new student recreation center. Marcum will not be around to see his plans come to fruition.

Interim Chancellor Marcellette G. Williams noted that a director will be appointed on a temporary basis.

- Matthew F. Sacco

Rape suspect

Suspect is a white male between the ages of 30-35, approximatley 6' tall with a thin build. He is thought to have dark brown eyes and a 6-8" long dark brown ponytail. Suspect has "obvious bags" under his eyes, and is believed to be of Hispanic or Mediterranean complexion. His right right ear is peirced with a silver stud that spikes in the back. At the time of assualt he was wearing a white T-shirt and khaki cargo shorts.

The victim was assaulted by three men at the northwest corner of the Fine Arts Center. Victim stated that a passerby witnessed the assualt but did not intervene, assist or report to UMPD. Both other assailants are white males with blond crew cut hair, and were wearing t-shirts and shorts.

Student robbed at gunpoint in JQA

By Janet Jock
COLLEGIAN STAFF

A student reported that he had been robbed at gunpoint in his room in John Quincy Adams Dorm on Saturday, May 4, at 4:30 a.m.

The student admitted the two persons to his room after they asked to purchase marijuana. His roommate was absent at the time of the robbery.

"I didn't know who they were, but I knew what they were looking for so I let them in," stated the victim.

"Once I let them in, I noticed the women dropped a small handgun on the floor. That is when I began to freak out. I told her to leave and she said it wasn't loaded. She was acting all friendly, and continued to ask me if she could hang out for awhile."

The victim's neighbor upon hearing the commotion came into the room to see what was going on. The neighbor remained in the room, seated on the bed during the attack.

The culprits began to collect drugs from the student without paying, while he told them to back off.

"When I tried to stop them from stealing, the women pulled a gun on my chest. At that point there was nothing else I could do," the victim said.

When they saw he was not going to resist, the offenders left the room and ran down the hall with the student's drugs. The victim then called the UMass Police, to report the crime, and the threat of a gun being on campus.

According to the victim, the two offenders are a Black man believed to have been between 25-35 years old, and a Black woman, estimated to be between 20-30 years old. The male is estimated to be about 6'5", 200 lbs., with close-cropped black hair. The female has a light complexion and is around 4'8", 100 lbs., uncombed black hair and extensive facial acne. At the time of the robbery, the woman was wearing a red oversized windbreaker, red baseball cap facing backwards and blue jeans. The public safety alert stated that the second perpetrator is of undetermined gender, but the victim said he believes it was a woman.

Anyone with knowledge of this incident may contact the UMass Police Detective Bureau at 545-0893 or e-mail umpdmail@admin.umass.edu. For anonymous information, contact the TIPS line at 577-8477, or the Anonymous Witness from UMPD web site at www.umass.edu/umpd.

#1 three years in a row!

Best! 2002

UMASS ★★★★★★★

Massachusetts Daily Collegian

103 N. Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA 01001
(413)256-8923 • 256-8924

DAILY COLLEGIAN

EDITORIAL/OPINION

COLLEGIANEDITORIAL@YAHOO.COM WRITING IS A DOUBLE-EDGED SWORD. IT CAN CUT BOTH WAYS. ED/OP EDITOR: JAMIE LOO

Student activities good place to start

So you've finally made it.

Four long years of hard work in high school has led you to continue your education at the University of Massachusetts.

It's a time to celebrate, but not to stop working. The college experience is very different from high school, both academically and socially. It's a time to start over again as you move away from your friends and family into a completely different environment. In high school you probably realized that most of your education didn't take place in the classroom but outside of it, through student clubs, friends, teammates and other experiences. These experiences were priceless to your education and have shaped who you are as a person.

College is a place to continue your education in all aspects. In the five-college area we're privileged to take classes with very distinguished professors and intellectuals. Academically, it's a great opportunity to expand your horizons both within your major and other disciplines. Going to college also offers a variety of extracurricular activities to suit almost any interest. On a campus of more than 17,000 undergraduates, these activities help to make the campus just a little bit smaller. Student organizations are a great way to get involved on campus and to meet different people. Actively participating in these organizations is also an irreplaceable learning experience. It's an education that cannot be obtained in a lecture hall or from a book, but rather from interaction and friendships forged with your peers.

The college newspaper is a great place to get this experience.

We at The Collegian have seen an exciting year of campus and world news. From 4,000 students at a September 11 vigil, to 35 students being arrested at the Whitmore Administration Building, our dedicated team of reporters has been there bringing the news to UMass. The voice of the student body is echoed throughout our pages as a testament to the vibrant student life here on campus. We wouldn't be able to do our job without students getting involved in various activities on campus.

The Collegian is the voice of the student body and this paper wouldn't be able to function on a daily basis without a variety of students working on it. The Collegian has something for everyone and encourages students from all majors and all walks of life to be a part of our staff. The Collegian is always looking for writers in all of our departments, but we need more than just writers to keep the newspaper going. We need photographers, financial managers, comic artists, graphics staff and much more. We are a flexible organization where you can choose to be extremely involved in the day to day process or just stop by with a story every now and then. Every member of our staff is a valuable contributor to the newspaper and to the UMass community as a whole.

We at The Collegian sincerely hope that you will consider joining our staff. Our office in the Campus Center basement is always open and we hope to see you in September.

- Jamie Loo, Editorial/Opinion Editor

THE VIEWS AND OPINIONS EXPRESSED ON THIS PAGE ARE THOSE OF THE INDIVIDUAL WRITERS AND DO NOT NECESSARILY REPRESENT THE VIEWS OF The Collegian.

RA union takes the low road

ROB SCHULTZ

Are these people getting bad advice, or are they simply stupid?

I'm talking about the Resident Assistant union, which made some news earlier this week by occupying some University offices for short periods of time. This was done to protest the University's decision late last month not to bargain with the organization, even though the Labor Relations Board had ratified the election in which the RAs voted overwhelmingly to unionize. UMass' position was that the board had made a mistake in interpreting the laws regarding unionization. This meant they weren't going to deal with the union until everything got straightened out, probably by going to court.

So, basically, the RAs won fair and square and UMass didn't like it, so they figured they'd just ignore the union until they could figure out a way to make it go away.

So far, so good for the union, I'd say. It would require a complete ignorance of American history to think that an employer hostile to organized labor would just roll over and embrace a new union after one setback, however large. They still had the upper hand in the struggle, what with the elections, the ratification by the Labor Board and all the press across the country backing them up. If they were right, UMass could stall all it wanted, but the victory would still eventually go to the RAs.

Then, on Monday, the organized dorm peacekeepers went and did quite possibly the stupidest thing they could possibly have done.

In quick succession, the offices of the Chancellor, the UMass News Office, Director of Housing Services Michael Gilbert and Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs Javier Cevallos were occupied by protesting union members. They did the typical cliché protest stuff – chanting, holding signs, etc. – and after a while they were chased from each location by the threat of cops or by cops themselves.

And, in doing so, they completely lost the high ground in their struggle.

You see, I never liked the idea of the RA union. I was in a union for years (United Food and Commercial Workers) and I was an RA for a while, and I really don't think that one has much to do with the other. Still, despite my opposition to the RA union, I had to hand it to them that they had won the fight fair and square. They stuck with their guns and got UMass right where they wanted them, holding on to the position of the underdog idealists the entire time. It was grudging, but they'd earned my respect.

"They say that UMass is playing dirty, so they gang-bang administrators in their offices. Where's the logic?"

So it blew my mind when I heard that they had gone and pulled a stunt like this. It really takes effort to make UMass look good these days, but these guys and gals pulled it off.

You see, the RAs point was that UMass was breaking the law by not bargaining with them after they'd been ratified, and that UMass was playing the union-buster by trying to appeal the decision. These occupations were their response.

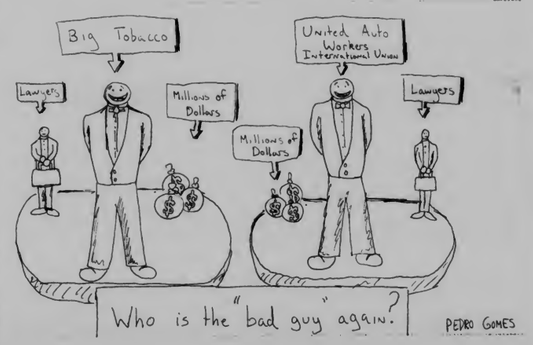
Stupidity.

They accused UMass of breaking the law, and, because that's a terrible terrible thing, they could only respond by breaking the law. They say that UMass is playing dirty, so they gangbang administrators in their offices. Where's the logic?

Pat Colvario, a pro-union RA, was quoted in Tuesday's Collegian as saying "We've done everything legal up to this point."

My question is, what changed your mind? As far as I can see, playing by the rules had gotten the union pretty damn far, into territory that no one had charted before. And now you're just whiny bitches who think that harassment will get you what you want. You copped your enemy's tactics, only on a more extreme level, and got covered in the same mud.

UMass will take the union to court and stall as much as possible; chalk that up to entirely understandable (and anticipated) reality. I don't think that's such a horror; it certainly doesn't make Javier Cevallos some Pinkerton thug with a Tommy gun executing hapless union heroes left and right. If the union is legal and legit, as thus far the courts have deemed it to be, than after all the proceedings are over with that fact will stand, and UMass will be out of options.



That isn't good enough, though. I sense some desperation; some of the union pioneers are seniors and juniors, and they don't want victory in the future, they want it now, goddamn it. I can understand that; it must be immeasurably frustrating to have worked so hard and gotten so close but not be able to see the final victory in your time here.

These tactics, though, are just discrediting the union and making its cause a joke. If the organizers of the union are serious about their goals and not out for personal glory and gratification, they'll think twice before doing something so asinine and ineffective as occupying University offices to try and get what they want.

You've already needlessly tainted your image. Smarten up or get some better advice.

Rob Schultze is a Collegian Columnist.

INTERESTED IN WRITING FOR THE COLLEGIAN? COME DOWN TO THE CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT AND TALK TO JAMIE OR REGAN!

I just can't understand

SAM WILKINSON

At 9:00 a.m. on the morning of 9/11, my biggest concern was getting over the Coolidge Bridge to pick up my friend Julie for classes. There was too much traffic and the police were looking the other way when errant drivers made dangerous mistakes. On the back roads, there was log literally snaking along the ground through the trees that broke the trail.

At 9:15 a.m. I was stuck in traffic with Julie and I turned to take her to Bartlett so she wouldn't be late.

At 9:20 a.m. I came running out of the math a back door and was told that two planes had been steered into the World Trade Center towers.

I remember when I and some teenage and Waco burned to the ground. After some desperate, utterly ignorant news coverage, some repeated and ongoing attempts to hire David Koresh's teaching Texas compound the hardest hitting after an assault on it. I remember sitting with my friend, Zach and calmly watching the confusion and panic going to the experts talk about the devastation.

Then on a clear morning, I went to Zack and Celia's and the news on when they met up at the dorm. Then there'd been an explosion in Oklahoma. They'd rather it be Islamic and she was concerned, so we sat watching coverage of a building that was half gone. I thought there was a building and we could see through the gaping jaws the twisted metal that covered people – those People would run by the cameras bleeding, injured, screaming. And silently, this building set gone.

"I cannot fathom that this is happening. I cannot understand it. I cannot understand what I keep hearing and desperately trying to read about."

Yesterday morning at the Collegian office, every one of our employees sat around the television, staring in a mute horror. I went to class and students, staff and faculty surrounded every television I passed, watching stunned. This couldn't be happening. And it couldn't get worse than the footage I'd seen before class: a second plane, suddenly hitting the tower and a horrible explosion. I went to my class and professor John Brigham was subdued. He lectured for a few minutes about right, and then said he wouldn't go on. He kept making allusions to the trash and the people who would steer planes into buildings." He dismissed us early, but before he did, the girl next to me innocently raised her hand and asked what had happened.

"The World Trade Center has been blown up," he said.

"In Boston?"

No, in New York.

She seemed relieved for a minute because it wasn't Boston. Just for a minute though, because the professor said she shouldn't be relieved, and then she wasn't. She didn't seem to realize the gravity of her innocence at the news. She hadn't seen the television, she hadn't heard the news; she just didn't know. I was angry because our professor gave her the impression the World Trade Center had actually been blown up. I didn't know it actually would collapse. And our professor was clearly shaken.

As I write this, it is 10:32 a.m. The Pentagon and State Departments have been hit and one of the two World Trade Center towers is literally gone. And now the second tower is gone. It just came over the news and this is what I heard, but didn't see:

"We saw people in buildings, looking up at the explosion, and suddenly, two people jumped as the building started shaking and then a third person, and then the building collapsed."

This is happening so quickly. There was fog this morning. There was traffic and fog and I was late and frustrated and just wanted to have a slow day. I can't even begin to comprehend how many people are dead right now that wanted the same thing.

I cannot fathom that this is happening. I cannot understand it. I cannot understand what I keep hearing and desperately trying to read about. I click www.cnn.com a thousand times because I want an explanation that isn't going to be there.

I keep seeing video on the television. I saw the plane hit the building. I saw the first explosion. I saw the second plane, suddenly hitting the tower and a horrible explosion. I went to my class and professor John Brigham was subdued. He lectured for a few minutes about right, and then said he wouldn't go on. He kept making allusions to the trash and the people who would steer planes into buildings." He dismissed us

Sam Wilkinson is a Collegian Columnist.

www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com

It's time to deal with budget cuts

DAN LAMOTHE

"There will not be a diminution of quality at the Amherst campus," Billy Bob Bulger said. Famous last words? One can only hope.

Right now, there are a lot of angry people in the once happy World-o' UMass. Everybody's bitching about something, bar none. And really, that makes a lot of sense – there is a lot to be upset about. Our bus Billy couldn't be more wrong about the quality of life on this campus declining, and he damn well knows it.

The music department lost half their staff. The escort service has been eliminated. The security staff will most likely be reduced. Many classes in the fall will be gone. Much of the staff will be gone. Daycare is on its way out. The roll call goes on – at this point, all y'all with a pulse on this blessed campus know the nitty gritty.

What has irritated me so far about all of the budget cuts is the way that the student body has reacted to it. Don't get me wrong – I hate the way that the rug has been pulled out from under us financially and educationally just like everyone else. It's been said before, and I'll say it again: we're getting the shaft. People need to be reasonable, though. Please?

Moan about stuff that makes sense, ok guys? "Why doesn't SOM just share their money for that addition with everyone else?" I'd like to smack my head every time I hear something like this. SOM's money is SOM's money because some dude named Isenberg (hence, Isenberg School of Management) donated it for the expressed purpose of building an addition for them. Why should UMass turn the money down because it has a specific project assigned to it? As a campus we should take the money where we can get it, for whatever we can get it for.

Budget cuts affect us all differently. Different things are going to tick each of us off. Escort service? I didn't care.

"...when people screw with our futures, we tend to take it personally."

I'm a big enough guy, and I'm not afraid of walking around this place at night. I'll never need that thing in my life, I reasoned. Waste of time and money for the University, I thought. It never occurred to me that someone might actually use the thing until the backlash hit and I spent an entire week sorting through letters to the editor at the Collegian written by individuals angry about losing the service. It obviously ticked someone off. It just wasn't me.

Rumblings have it that, at the very least, the foreign language requirement will be dropped soon due to a lack of staffing in the departments. Does it personally affect me? Nope. Not much rather take the nine credits of Spanish I would have been taking and take something else instead. If the language departments are revamped, though, someone's going to upset, and they've got a legitimate reason to be. There will be people outside of a foreign language major who are going to want to get into those classes, and they're most likely not going to be able to anymore.

The bottom line is we're being selfish. That's not unexpected – when people screw with our futures, we tend to take it personally. We tend to think of our own first. It also, however, doesn't make it right. The UMass student body as a whole is getting screwed – each and every one of us is facing higher fees with fewer classes and services offered. We're all losing out. All of us. Deal with it.

Crying in your beer and pointing fingers at other departments and places that lost less than yours are not going to help anything. It's ok to be upset with the administration. It's ok to be upset with the state government. It is not ok to be upset with fellow students in different majors who have no more control over the whole crappy process than we ourselves do.

The student body needs to band together instead of bickering among itself. Try to see where other groups on campus are coming from when they voice their concerns. They're probably as important as your own. There shouldn't be an "us" versus "them" mentality between different groups of students on this campus.

The cuts scare the bejeezus out of everyone here, because no one really knows what's next to go except for good ol' Billy and his buddies. We've all got that same dark cloud hanging over our heads – no student, group or major is any different than another.

Things are going to suck around here for a while. Get used to it. Stick together, guys. It'll be tough for UMass to make it through if we don't.

Dan Lamothe is a Collegian Columnist.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

ARTS&LIVING

COLLEGIANARTS@YAHOO.COM SUMMER ORIENTATION ISSUE ARTS EDITOR: JENNIFER EASTWOOD

STORY BY
Nick Pizzolato
Collegian Staff

Ludacris rocks Mullins

nOthing in life is free- you pay fOr heat, electricity, fOod and even water (earth's mOst abundant resOurce)- upon arriving at the university Of massachusetts, we all knOw that things dOn't get any cheaper, but just skyrOcket in price- books, nOte books, pens, d-p- dough and the little tuitiOn increase awaiting all Of you incOming students- but fOrget about all that, because---

...we here at UMass can enjoy one last free thing made available to us. No, I'm not talking about the free cases of Red Bull or LAZER 98.3's bottle openers. I'm speaking of the one and only UMass Spring Concert, held this year on May 5.

Students have always looked forward to the show, not only because it allows us to swarm the floor of the Mullins Center with 2,000 other undergrads, but also because the word "free" precedes it. And in the four years I have been here, the free aspect has made the trip down to the House that Calipari Built well worth it.

In the last three years, The Mighty Mighty Bosstones have traveled from Boston to soothe our punk souls from the radio hell that is Western Mass. KRS-1 has passed on his positive hip-hop message. Red and Meth dished out some rhymes for the masses. The Long Beach Dub All-Stars performed new songs and ones from their Sublime roots for those in attendance. Bernie Man showed us what reggae was all about, and although Teck 9 never showed, Cypress Hill, Lil' Kim and Uncle Kracker performed in front of the students who escaped the confines of their dorm room for one show.

This year, University Productions and Concerts, the group responsible for putting the show together, followed up last year's poorly attended and criticized show with perhaps the strongest line-up of stage presence since the 1999 concert. Opening acts included the UMass Battle of the Bands winner Scattered as well as opener The Sunshine Fix. The three headliners were diverse and popular acts, as the self-proclaimed "wuss rock" band Guster, hip-hoppers The "Legendary" Roots, and one of the newest faces in mainstream rap music today, Atlanta representative Ludacris took the stage.

In previous years, the UMass Spring Concert has had attendance that has been spotty at best. However, it was obvious from this year's show that University Productions and Concerts had not only learned from its past mistakes, but damn well weren't going to let it happen again. Making students fear that they would not be allowed into the Mullins Center, let alone the floor of the concert, seemed a bit cruel, but it got the job done. The arena was abuzz from the first act to the last and, for the most part, was enjoyed by all.

SCATTERED

What would you expect from the winner of the Southwest Battle of the Bands? A group of guys who individually wanted to be a rock star but combined couldn't hold the stage? Well, if you guessed that or made a predetermined decision on Scattered without even hearing them, you were dead wrong.

Taking the stage in the Mullins Center can't be an easy thing, but the quartet of Scattered, a punk band with pop undertones, took the stage with confidence and poise, with a small but strong group of followers in the first four rows. Their 30-minute set was full of powerfully charged punk songs that moved even those of us who never heard of them to tap our feet, bob our heads and hoot and holler at the band letting loose. They did nothing but impress and set the stage for a great night of music.

THE SUNSHINE FIX

Let's just say that after the rousing performance by Scattered, the self-described electric blues band from Athens, Georgia wasn't what the crowd ordered. No one was into their music as the crowd just waited for Guster, for whom The Sunshine Fix was opening.

GUSTER

From Somerville, Mass., the trio of Guster made those in the half-filled Mullins Center happy to be there. Opening their set with "What You Wish For" and cruising through the rest of the show with songs like "Bury Me," "X-Ray Eyes," "Parachute," "Airport Song," "Either Way" and closing with "Fa Fa," the three acoustic musicians played for a screaming group of fans with energy, appreciation and love.

Turn to CONCERT, page 8

Spider-Man spins its comic book magic on big screen

By Johnny Donaldson
COLLEGIAN STAFF

SPIDER-MAN
Directed by Sam Raimi
Starring Tobey Maguire, Kirsten Dunst and Willem Dafoe

Last summer's movie blowout season kicked off with the bloated and gaseous The Mummy Returns, a movie that made one feel as though they were watching a videogame that someone else was playing. It set the tone for the summer that followed: one hollow, lumbering behemoth after another. These films – the Jurassic Park 3's and the Pearl Harbor's – weren't designed to provide entertainment, but instead to dish out hype and devour money the opening weekend.

If The Mummy Returns set the tone for the bummer of 2001 toops, summer of 2001), then the hotly anticipated big screen version of Spider-Man gives hope for the coming crop of event spectaculars. Whereas Mummy was club-footed and unwieldy, Spider-Man is nimble and fleet. The Mummy Returns plods along, weighed down by its budget; Spider-Man leaps along like its titular character and is a dizzy and rifts bit of high-wire grace.

Spider-Man is Marvel's answer to DC Comics legends Superman and Batman. For those who have spent their lives in an isolation chamber, Spider-Man is the tale of Peter Parker, an awkward high-school student who is bitten by a genetically altered spider (in the comics, it was a radioactive spider) and develops strange spider-like powers. Following the bite, Parker can leap great distances, gains a powerful sixth sense and discovers he can shoot a sticky web from his wrist (another change from the comic, in which the web-slinger was mechanical, not organic). Following his beloved Uncle Ben's murder, Parker decides to use his newfound powers by becoming the costumed crime fighter Spider-Man, while meanwhile pining for his pretty, popular classmate Mary Jane Watson, the literal girl next door.

Directed by Sam Raimi with acrobatic panache, Spider-Man is slick and marvelous escapist entertainment. Raimi is best known as the director of the splattery Evil Dead films, those '80s cult classics in which he unleashed a plethora of cartoon-like ghouls in the woods and shot them in a frenzied blast of dazed energy. Raimi has gone "respectable" in recent years (The Gift, A Simple Plan) but here he returns to the world of zingy rubber band filmmaking. A lifelong fan of Spider-Man, Raimi displays infectious joy in choreographing Spider-Man's swings and leaps through the Manhattan skyline.

One of the best scenes in all of Spider-Man is when Parker discovers his new talents. After his web shoots off in the school cafeteria, Parker heads out onto the street where he leaps over the tops of buildings and climbs up the sides of walls. Later, he decimates a pro-wrestler during a cage match. The Batman movies were directed with a portentous Gothic doom (until the cravoned-in kitsch of Batman and Robin), but Raimi crafts Spider-Man with the giddy, child-like joy of a comic fan. It is the first comic book movie that puts not just the comic book on screen, but also makes the viewer feel like part of the story.

There have been some complaints lodged against the movie's special effects, and truth be told, some of the FX do show their seams. Yet that is hardly a problem. The combination of good and bad effects – the seamless and the glaring – gives the movie a sense of hyper-reality, a Manhattan that could exist but is not quite right. The production design, which scrambles the geography of Manhattan, only serves to heighten the film's dream-like, alien feel.

Raimi's talents stretch to the casting of the movie as well. Tobey Maguire, the quizzical and earnest young actor from The Cider House Rules, is hardly the first actor that springs to mind when casting a big-budget summer action movie. But Maguire is an inspired choice for Peter Parker. His soft-voiced delivery matches Parker's mild-mannered nerd persona, and he manages to capture Parker's torn allegiances between the hero and the human. Maguire strikes plenty of sparks with Kirsten Dunst, who plays Mary Jane, culminating in a screen kiss that is likely to be remembered in the annals of screen kisses for years to come. The role of Mary Jane is really a nothing role, but Dunst, a vibrant, canny young actress, imbues it with life.

Spider-Man dazzles with its classic elegance and giddy humor. If anything, it may usher in a new era of user-friendly blockbusters. It offers what every summer movie should be designed to offer: release, not hype.

COURTESY ZADE ROSENTHAL

COURTESY COLUMBIA PICTURES

COURTESY ZADE ROSENTHAL

Daytime television talk shows hanging in the balance - will they survive?

By Nikolas Markantonatos
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Is the daytime talk show dead?

Both Rosie O'Donnell and Oprah Winfrey have announced their retirement (O'Donnell at the end of this season; Winfrey in 2006) and their competition is plummeting in the Nielsen ratings. Ratings for both the "The Jerry Springer Show" and "Montel" have slid 25 percent since last year, and "The Sally Jesse Raphael Show" (down 20 percent) was recently canceled.

This drastic dip in popularity may be attributed to tacky and overused formulas. In the mid-to-late '90s talk shows flourished in the ratings due to airings of boot camps for unruly teens as well as makeover, reunion and "Who's Your Daddy?" themed talk-fests.

Queen of Talk Winfrey was even surpassed in the ratings when, in 1998, Springer enjoyed phenomenal ratings when his violent and potty-mouthed guests sent fists and chairs flying. But after a few months, the formula seemed old and tired.

Raphael's show, the longest-running of its genre after nearly two decades on the air, sunk to ninth in the ratings among talk shows this season, after being third only to Winfrey and Springer three years ago. The show seemed to suffer from the aforementioned prototype and producers had tried to give the show a makeover of its own in the past year. Building a new set and giving viewers a peek behind the scenes failed to arrest the slide.

Queen of Nice O'Donnell faced slumping ratings after her once riveting antics became predictable. Caroline Rhea is ready to take O'Donnell's throne after she leaves this year.

Over the last few years, few new talk shows have stood the test of time despite high-profile hosts (Ivanla, Queen Latifah, Donny and Marie, Dr. Laura, Roseanne) and plenty of buzz.

Is there hope for this dying genre?

Unoriginal programming isn't the only culprit in the sinking ratings. The genre has been suffering, in part, due to cable and satellite TV, which offers more viewing choices than ever before. Even so, thoughtful conversations instead of chair tosses may be preferred over the same old beaten to death subjects.

In addition, the post-9/11 world in which we now live doesn't have the same appetite for swinging matches on daytime slots, so it's not a huge surprise that this fall's slate of talk shows is a lot more upbeat and grown up. Rob Nelson, who founded the Gen X political action group Lead...Or Leave and hosted the Fox News Channel's "Full Nelson," will emphasize social issues and encourage reflective dialogue.

Another chatfest with a similar format will be hosted by crime stopper John Walsh ("America's Most Wanted"). A daytime variety show from Wayne Brady ("Whose Line Is It Anyway," "The Wayne Brady Show") is also in the works.

Comedian Ellen Degeneres has also signed on to host a daytime talk show. Degeneres, whose self-titled sitcom "The Ellen Show" is on hiatus in prime time, is developing an hour-long talk-variety program à la "The Rosie O'Donnell Show." The as-yet-untitled program will launch in syndication in the fall of 2003 if her struggling sitcom is not renewed.

Rhea, a "Sabrina the Teenage Witch" star, may face an uphill climb. In fact, Rhea's first bid at a daytime talk show fizzled in the pilot stage last year. Even though Rhea, who lacks the charm of O'Donnell, is inheriting an established show, the same doesn't hold true for Rosie's timeslots. Although schedulers aren't set yet, in some locations she will probably be running in a late night slot instead of Rosie's late morning period. Moreover, Rhea must deal with huge expectations, which her predecessor never faced: "The Rosie O'Donnell Show" replaced Carnie Wilson's flop talker in 1996, so expectations were very low.

The leader of this pack is psychologist Dr. Phil McGraw, who has the biggest chance of giving this dying genre a shot in the arm. Best known for dispensing advice on love on "Oprah" every Tuesday (spiking the ratings roughly 20 percent), McGraw is ready to make his tough-talk a five-day-a-week deal. But will two books on the top of the New York Times bestseller list and Oprah's stamp of approval guarantee success when McGraw stands on his own? If none of the eight talk shows premiering succeed, daytime talk may go black.

Nikolas Markantonatos
COLLEGIAN STAFF

ASHANTI
Ashanti
Def Jam

Savvy production value and a hint of mystery, cool and beauty made Aaliyah one of the brightest and best R&B stars of the past decade. When she passed away last year it was only inevitable that a flock of stars would emerge trying to emulate the R&B star.

Tweet didn't meet the high expectations and neither does the latest Aaliyah wannabe, Ashanti. If there is a problem with the R&B genre today, it's that there is a severe lack of originality and constant reliance on sampling. Ashanti's self-titled debut isn't a bad album. In fact, it's actually quite good, but makes little progress in the originality department.

Ashanti, 18, not only copies Aaliyah but also the queen of hip-hop Mary J. Blige and newcomer Alicia Keys. All are fine singers and great role models to look up to, but Ashanti needs to find her own voice. It doesn't help that the album's breakout hit "Foolish," is built around J.J. DeBarge's keyboard sample from "Stay With Me," a sample made famous by the Notorious B.I.G. on his signature "One More Chance."

The album is so easy to describe only because the world has already heard this sound before. It seems that the Murder Inc. formula has fully captured the pop world. Ashanti shamelessly delivers more of the same hit proven formula that has been well oiled and perfected by label head Irv Gotti on recent hits like Ja Rule's "Always On Time" and J. Lo's "I'm Real" (both of which featured Ashanti).

Acoustic guitarwork catapults "Rescue" as the standout track, and the mid-tempo "Scared" leaves the listener wondering why Ashanti didn't employ innovation on the rest of the album. Her voice is soft and sweet but rarely rises above a whisper, accentuating the abundant sampling on the album. The lyrics aren't anything to crow about either. Ashanti penned all 12 cuts, but all deal with the old, overused relationship issues. The album's liberal use of annoying interludes – five in all – is its other big shortcoming.

At least the album doesn't suffer from the slow, dripp ballads prevalent on most R&B albums. With cuts like "Happy," "Baby," "Leaving" and "Voodoo," Ashanti is an album that's easy to get into. The rubbery bass threads a booby instrumental backdrop that runs through most of the tracks and her vocals are layered with ample harmonies to keep the beat moving throughout the entire record.

Even the laid back and subtle vocals found on "Call" and "Movies" work well without bogging down the album with soggy lyrics and dry instrumentation.

Again, Ashanti is a great R&B album but if you're looking for originality, you came to the wrong place. Nevertheless, the album will undoubtedly keep itself nailed to the playlists of R&B, rhythm crossover and mainstream Top 40 outlets for months to come.

Where to live on campus?

SOUTHWEST

For many of students, Southwest may be the most sought after living area on campus. Some call it rowdy and noisy. Others swear that it offers the social value and the bustle of a city.

Either way, the Southwest living area is one of a kind.

That said, if you are not looking for a place with a variety of different people, Southwest is not the place to live. Situated out near the Athletic Fields, the living area offers up both 22-story towers and specialized low-rises.

The living area is where you will find two of the all women's dormitories on campus as well as a specialized dormitory that caters to undeclared majors.

"The best part about living in Southwest is that there are three dining commons within walking distance, and you don't have to walk up a hill to get home," said Kim Robbins, a junior management major.

Southwest is high on diversity and low, a lot of times, on community. Although not true of all of the dormitories, it follows the rule that it is harder to have a sense of community in a building you are sharing with hundreds of people. Likely, you will not ever be able to meet all of them.

The general rule for Southwest is that if you are looking for a place that has the feel of a busy city both day and night, it is a good place to go.

-Melissa Hammel

NORTHEAST

The Northeast living area is one of those places that remains unknown and unexplored to many students on campus. Many students, both underclassmen and upperclassmen, know very little about Northeast. But it is a living area distinct from all others.

The first highlight of Northeast lies in its proximity. It is directly next to Worcester Dining Hall and requires the shortest walk in terms of getting to classes. Northeast is one of those living areas in which you can roll out of bed five minutes before your class and make it there on time.

"The location here is a big thing," Kristen Wilczynski, a junior Psychology major, explained. "The language floor is here, so you can speak any language you want. It is quiet, but it is also fun."

The surroundings within the living area also make it worthwhile. There is a giant open quad in between the dormitories that allows for volleyball when the weather is good, giving students a place to just sit and hang out.

Northeast is also smaller, allowing a better chance to get to know everyone both on your floor and in the building. With dormitories set up according to specific interests and groups, such as international students, you are likely to meet new, interesting people in Northeast.

If you are looking for a place that feels like home and is nearby to all of the things you need, then Northeast may be the place for you.

-Melissa Hammel

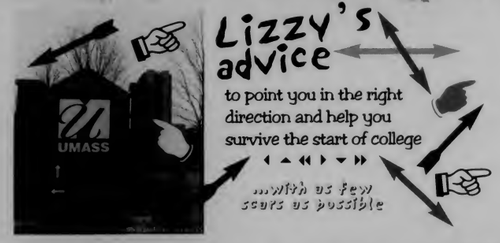
CENTRAL

Central living area is the campus cultural center, featuring something in

Turn to DORMS, page 8

Thank You UMass!

You Like us...
you Really, Really Like Us!!!!



WELCOME INCOMING FRESHMEN!

YOU'LL Really, Really Like Us Too!

Voted in the 2002 Collegian Poll:

Best Place: To go when Parents are Paying

For many of you incoming freshmen, gone are the days of having your own enormous room. You now live in a 10 x 12 foot white cinderblock cell with slate gray floor tiles. Gone is the soft, spacious bed that you spent your high school years in. Enter the sagging extra-long twin sized mattress with the tarnished metal frame that now becomes your place of slumber. You now share a bathroom with 40 other people, and it will be a long time before you feel the cold, smooth tiles of a shower under your feet, as you are now required to wear shoes in the shower. Did I forget to mention you don't have your own room? Yes, this prison-like space is home to you and someone else. Someone you most likely have never met before. But fear not, for here are some simple guidelines that may just help you survive your first week on a college campus, and with some luck, maybe even your first month.

IF YOU HAVEN'T USED IT IN THE LAST TWO MONTHS, YOU PROBABLY DON'T NEED IT.

I know when packing those red snakeskin boots you got on clearance at Parade of Shoes, you're sure it's best to have them in case a proper occasion comes along – regardless of the fact they have been gathering dust in your closet since the height of the New Kids on the Block. I don't care how much you feel you need all 540 CDs in your collection, I can guarantee it's not necessary, and it will take up too much precious space in the back of your mom's SUV. Instead, conserve space, both in the vehicle transporting your stuff and in the room that you'll be sharing with another person by packing only what you need, and if you leave something at home that you absolutely can't live without, just ask your parents to mail it to you. Most parents of freshmen love to send mail, and most freshmen love to get it, so it works out both ways.

RESIDENT ASSISTANTS: NOT JUST THERE TO GET YOU IN TROUBLE.

RAs love to help freshmen. They love to feel like they are needed. They are hired because they have extensive knowledge of whatever college or university you are attending. Yes, they are dorm monitors and will bust you if they see you with a Natty Ice, but they also know where your classes are and where to go should you decide that biochemistry isn't the right major. Don't be afraid to approach your RA with personal problems such as homesickness or roommate conflicts. They've been there too, and they can definitely use their mediation skills to help you and can almost always speak from experience when it comes to being in a difficult situation as a freshman.

OPEN YOUR HEART AND MIND.

Disregard anything you ever learned about first impressions. I know of a situation where a pop music princess from a family in suburbia ended up rooming with a girl from the inner city who was far more into alternative rock than N'SYNC and Britney Spears. What happened? Despite iffy first impressions, the two became best friends. Don't automatically judge your roommate or anyone else by what you first learn about them. There is so much more to a person than that, and these are the people with whom you are going to spend a significant portion of your life, so its better to cut them a break (or two, or three).

YOU DON'T GET AN ALLOWANCE ANYMORE.

As much as your parents try to convince some of you who are leaving home to concentrate on school and hold off on getting a job for a semester, they aren't around anymore to bounce you some money when you want to go to the movies. Those trips to the local pizza place and other expenses on the weekends add up, without even considering the price of books. What seemed like the large sum of money you made waiting tables over the summer ends up not being a lot at all. Instead of applying for credit cards, find an on campus job that only requires 10 or 15 hours a week. Most on-campus offices are always looking for people to run errands or answer phones. Worst-case scenario, you're washing dishes for 10 hours a week in the cafeteria. Regardless, at minimum wage, that's another weekly money source that can keep you away from credit cards and in movies and beverages. Just be sure to get on this right at the beginning of the semester. It lessens your chances of ending up in the cafeterias scrubbing dried up eggs off of pots.

Getting athletes foot in the showers is not an urban ledged.

Bathrooms are awful places in college, for there are no little paper cups to wash your mouth out and nowhere to hang your towel. Instead of sharing a sink, toilet and shower with your sister, you're sharing it with roughly 40 or 50 other people. Make sure you invest in a bathrobe and wear flip-flops in the bathroom and in the shower at all times. People throw up on that floor as well as do all kinds of other gross things, and keeping their germs away from your feet is a good idea. Invest in a shower caddy, because carrying your shampoo, conditioner, body wash, shaving cream, razors, toothbrushes and toothpaste on the seven-mile walk to a morning shower can get a little tricky.

There are so many words of wisdom that can be shared about one's first experience in higher education. Most lessons must be learned by, yes, messing up first. I can only hope that as incoming freshmen, you take from these words and hopefully make the pain and suffering of freshman year a little duller. The biggest words of advice I can offer? Have fun. Enjoy these years where you're mostly on your own without the responsibility of a full-time job or such. But don't forget those shower shoes.

Lizzy Nielsen is a Collegian staff member.

SURVIVAL 101

- A Large Selection of Used Books that Saves You 25%*
- Pens, Pencils, Highlighters
- Binders, Spirals, Filler Paper, and Folders
- Diskettes and Mousepads
- Dictionaries, Study Guides, and Writing Guides
- Calculators and Batteries
- Key Tags and Lanyards
- Imprinted T-shirts and Sweatshirts
- Hats, Shorts, and Backpacks
- Mugs, Plastic Tumblers, and Decals
- And More!

University of Massachusetts
UMASS UNIVERSITY STORE

Campus Center • Phone: (413) 545-2619

www.umass.bkstr.com

Order your textbooks online at efollett.com

*over the cost of new.

concert

continued from page 5

The band Guster performed at the Spring Concert this year.

Vocalist/guitarist Ryan Miller made a point of saying that last year they were booed off the stage while being pelted with objects from the crowd when they opened for hip-hop star Nelly at a similar event.

"We said to ourselves that we would never play one of these collegiate-sponsored concerts again," they said. "So far, so good."

They were not booed but embraced and cheered by a strong majority of the crowd.

THE ROOTS

There was a question among some students of whether or not The Roots should be appearing as the set-up act for Ludacris. They are a successful hip-hop act that, since 1995, has been producing innovative and genre-blowing music. Those critics were silenced when they took the spotlight.

As soon as Guster left the stage and the MCs for the evening appeared to throw T-shirts out to the audience and hype the crowd, people appeared out of front nowhere to get in optimum viewing positions for the Legendary Foundation. As they appeared on a pitch-black stage, the crowd erupted. As the band's rhymes and beats exploded through the arena, everyone moved, trying to keep up with the mic-like speed of front man Black Thought.

As the songs burst from the stage into the crowd, enthralling those in attendance, not one person was sitting throughout the building as The Roots played songs like "Respond/React," "The Next Movement" and "What You Want" (to just name a few). Some were dancing, some were singing, some were soaking in this awesome experience.

While introducing the band, The Roots showed their versatility as they covered bits and pieces from Rage Against the Machine's "Sleep Now in the Fire," Rick James' "Super Freak" and The Beastie Boys' "Brass Monkey," among other songs. They were fantastic, and without a doubt made those in the audience who didn't know who they were into fans. But the night wasn't over yet.

LUDACRIS

After 90 minutes of The Roots, the crowd (still jazzed) awaited the arrival of Ludacris and his brand of Dirty South style rap. As soon as he stepped on stage, all eyes were on him as he went through the list of hits from his two studio albums and one indie release and fed off the audience's energy.

Through "Roll Out," "Area Codes" and "Southern Hospitality," he jumped around stage, stopping to give the crowd verbal support and getting the audience psyched for the next song. For onlookers, Ludacris may not have surpassed The Roots, but he matched them, bringing to an end a great night of music.

So to future UMass students, it doesn't matter if you're residents of Southwest or Orchard Hill, the one thing you are promised free of charge here among all the hidden debts of college life is the UMass Spring Concert. Who will they have next year? Who knows, but it will definitely be worth seeing.

dorms

continued from page 6

terms of music and entertainment literally everyday. In parts of upper Central, one can walk by and hear the music of practicing student bands seeping from the open windows. The living area also hosts events such as Fill the Hill, which provides the student local music scene an opportunity to showcase their talents for their peers.

The living area is a friendly place with a variety of different contrasts from one individual dormitory to another. While places in lower Central provide students with more peace and quiet, dormitories like Van Meter (with the largest amount of students residing on the whole campus) can bustle with activity and provide for a crowd of different faces.

"The people here are pretty down to earth," Katharine Panessidi, a Resident Assistant in the Brett/Brook cluster, explained. "I have lived in Sylvan and Southwest; I like this the best."

One of the major drawbacks of the Central living area is the hill to reach the upper portion of the living area. Entirely too icy in the wintertime, the hill allows for exercise if nothing more.

If you are looking for a living area with tons of contrasts and consistent excitement, Central might be your place. With the inclusion of both music and art, it is a living area that is like no other.

- Melissa Hammel

SYLVAN

Sylvan, the newest addition to University housing, was originally built in order to accommodate upper classmen, but in recent years it has become primarily freshman.

Sylvan is located near Totman Gym on the north and eastern side of campus. It is set in a very woodsy, serene and suburban environment. Sylvan is one of the quieter areas on campus, as it is set away from most everything else on main campus.

Each of the three buildings in Sylvan contains 64 suites. The suite consist of two beds, desks, a sofa, three doubles and two singles. Students also receive their own private lounge and bathroom, only required to share them with their suitemates. And yes, students are not responsible for cleaning their own bathrooms.

Sylvan also offers the Sylvan Snack Bar, a student run eatery establishment located in the basement of McNamara. It is open late into the night, so when the studying munchies kick in after the dining halls are long closed, students have somewhere to go for some snacks. For those who would rather not venture out of their room, the Sylvan Snack Bar also delivers. Sylvan also offers a wellness floor for those who wish to live in an alcohol and drug free environment as well as the Sylvan Cultural Center, located in Cashin.

"Everybody knows everybody in Sylvan," says Gisel Barreto, a senior Communications major. "It's crazy but not as crazy as the west."

- Tara Nielsen

ORCHARD HILL

Set atop a woodland hillside is Orchard Hill, a quaint four-building living area positioned around a circular, sometimes grassy area known as the Bowl. Approximately 2,400 students live in this area each semester, making it a smaller area where the concept of community is overstressed.

"It's quiet when you need it to be, so you can get your work done, but I've never had to leave to have fun," said Lisa Jollimore, the 11 Coordinator of the Orchard Hill Area Government (OHAG) and a sophomore communication major. "It's the best of both worlds."

The building layout is designed so that 35 rooms are on each floor.

"So it really gets you to know your hallmates," said Melika Bessaud, OHAG Governor and a sophomore pre-nursing and pre-med student.

The special features for the rooms include wall hung wooden shelves as well as two cubby closing/changing areas.

"So you don't have to change in front of your roommate," sophomore Mark Morrison, OHAG secretary, said with a smile.

It's also quite a picturesque area on campus.

"The Hill is beautiful in the spring time," said Bessaud. "It's almost like a back yard."

As for trudging up the Hill each day to and from the center of campus, Bessaud explained, "You get used to it. Plus it's make-it away from the center of campus], so you feel like you're going home."

Students of Orchard Hill tend to be very active in campus activities as well. For example, Orchard Hill has the highest voting rate of any of the other areas on campus and has a disproportional amount of members involved in the Student Government Association.

"Really it's a place where most people can make a difference," Morrison added.

One of the main criticisms of the area however is it's lack of diversity, but as Bessaud pointed out, "There isn't a hell of a lot of diversity, but what you don't see in terms of ethnicity you get in terms of personality."

- Jennifer Eastwood

like what you see? come write for arts & living in the fall

Best! 2002 UMASS Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Voted "Best Hotdog & Best Burger" by Valley Advocate
Classic Road Side Dinning
PETE'S DRIVE-IN
Burger / Dogs
Fish / Chicken
Shakes / Soft Serve
287 Russell Street
Route 9, Hadley
585-0241
Pete's Drive-In
www.petesdrivein.com
OCMP & Major Credit Cards Accepted

Hardy

continued from page 12

catch, as he has with any inaccurate passes thrown his way.

The old Hardy maybe would have pulled up for a ball not headed for the numbers. But the new DeShon thinks lay out instead of let up and there's no sacrifice not worth making for the good of the catch.

While the Marshall game (four catches, 90 yards, one TD and a new attitude) was the hinge on the doorway to success, Hardy began moving his personal chains at the halfway point of last season.

On Nov. 7, 2000, the Minutemen stood at 2-2 with a road game against upstart Northeastern on the horizon. After the Huskies Andy Alsup returned the opening kickoff to paydirt, the negativity snowballed and superstar wideout Adrian Zullo collapsed to the Parsons Field turf with a season-ending injury.

As the door slammed shut on one star's season, the window of opportunity opened wide for a budding flanker just waiting for a chance.

The golden hands of DeShon Hardy will make him a prime target for the Maroon and White offense next year.

Hardy stepped through, dusting the Huskies for six receptions and 49 yards in a 21-16 UMass victory. He ended the year as the team's leading receiver with 27 catches, a far cry from the trio of balls he grabbed in his rookie campaign.

"All the injuries we had were bad," Hardy remembers. "But it gave me a chance to step in and show people what I could do."

Not content with his explosive performance, Hardy set his sights even higher – somewhere near the best receiver in the Atlantic 10.

His rigorous summer workouts and his spring session relationship with projected starting quarterback and redshirt freshman Matt Guice were a testament to his innovative quest.

"He worked extremely hard in the summer," Whipple remembers.

"Matt and I have been working together for awhile," Hardy says. "We stayed up here over the summer and we worked on our routes and our timing."

Thanks to their maturing relationship as QB and receiver, the Guice-Hardy hook up was one of the few bright spots in a 3-8 season. At times this year he was the only option for a young QB still growing into his role, and that suits Hardy just fine.

"I knew I had to step up this year and make some plays," Hardy says. "I always tell Matt to look for me because I can keep the chains moving."

If not for Hardy, the chains could have fallen dormant for a struggling UMass offense. He accounted for over a third of the Minutemen's wide receiver production (41 of 122 catches), not to mention his 95 yards on punt returns, but his breakout season began with a poorly thrown pass.

"That play that he made at Marshall, going up for the ball between two defenders like that, it was just unbelievable," Guice remembers. "From that point on he's just been making plays."

Hardy has been Whipple's own personal pocketknife this year. Whenever he is looking for a big gain on a special play, he calls on number 9.

"Coach gave me number 9 because," Hardy says. "I do a lot of different things, like Peter Warrick."

Warrick, a do-it-all flanker of Seminole fame has nothing on Hardy in terms of versatility. The Cincinnati Bengals second year receiver was lethal at returning punts and catching TDs at Florida State, but the similarities end there – just ask Rhode Island.

The 15th-ranked Rams marched into McGuirk Stadium with playoff aspirations, but Whipple effectively crushed those dreams with a Luciferinspired play call.

On first and goal, with the Minutemen up 7-0, Whipple split backup quarterback Kelly Seibert wide right and dropped (former high school QB) No. 9 behind center. Hardy took the snap, faked the pitch, and cut hard six yards.

A quarterback he is not, but a playmaker he most certainly is. Hardy returns, runs and catches, but his effect can't be measured by stats – it's more visible in the game plan.

"Coach always told me I'm better with the ball in my hands," Hardy says. "I can make plays when I've got the rock, so he tries to get me the ball as much as possible."

With the mantra of go-to-guy clearly placed on his shoulders he has effectively shed his middle tier status and comparisons to other players. Hardy is a special case. He is a game-breaker with multi pronged talents and a hunger to be number one. He isn't like Peter Warrick, he isn't like anybody. Just ask him.

"Nah, I'm the real DeShon Hardy."

Canada

continued from page 12

them, hearing me whacking the ball against the back of the house," Holtz laughs. "But I did it religiously, day after day."

With her softball potential blossoming, a decision had to be made in giving up other aspects of her athletic career. Although lettering in volleyball and hoops as well during high school, Holtz knew that those two sports weren't what held the Golden Ticket for her.

"I loved volleyball and basketball, but I knew I had more of a future in softball," she recalls. "Softball was always my main priority."

It was this priority that caused her to send a profile and videotape to Sortino in the spring of her junior year of high school. Holtz did the same for every other Top 25 squad in the nation. Exactly one of 25 responded to Holtz's queries. The other 24 are probably wishing they had given her tape a second glance.

"I saw a big strong kid who looked like she's physically going to be capable," remembers Sortino about Holtz's video. "Then when I talked to her, I was just so impressed. She was so incredibly mature, and wanting to pitch at the Division I level in this country."

The 24th-year coach flew out to Vancouver to see her recruit, and during the mere 36-hour stay, she experienced one of the "greatest trips of [her] life," Sortino says.

"She got no sleep all weekend," Holtz recalls.

Holtz went from unheralded and unrecruited by the Division I community to earning a spot on one of the East's most renowned programs. But coming in, the young freshman had the tough task of replacing a certain pitcher named Danielle "Harry" Henderson, who just happens to have achieved any and all things in the softball world (including the National Player of the Year Award and a gold medal at the Sydney Olympics). But Holtz didn't have to try to emulate one of the game's most successful players in history.

"You have a Danielle Henderson once in a lifetime," says Sortino about her former Honda Award winner. "I think the pressure for Kaila was the pressure of the winning tradition of the program."

But if she felt any sort of heat, it wasn't reflected on the mound and on the stats sheet. As a freshman, Holtz led the team in almost every pitching category imaginable. And she also hit .355 with 24 RBI. But being the new girl on campus didn't have much significance, she maintains.

"When you're a freshman, you really don't know anything about positioning or jostling for a starting spot, you just go and work your butt off," Holtz says.

As a junior this past year, Holtz, an Exercise Science major, shared staff ace duties with 2001 Atlantic 10 Pitcher of the Year Jen Hadley. And like a fine wine, Holtz has improved with age. Heading into the NCAA tournament, she posted an astounding 0.87 ERA and a 23-6 record (with 13 shutouts), guiding the Minutewomen to their eighth straight Atlantic 10 championship and garnering the same award her teammate Hadley captured last season. Using her previous summer experience, she was able to become even more dominant.

"Playing for her national team has given her more confidence; she came back this fall throwing the ball harder than I've ever seen," says Henderson, now an assistant under Sortino. "You can see that in terms of teams that she's pitched against this year, like Arizona and Stanford."

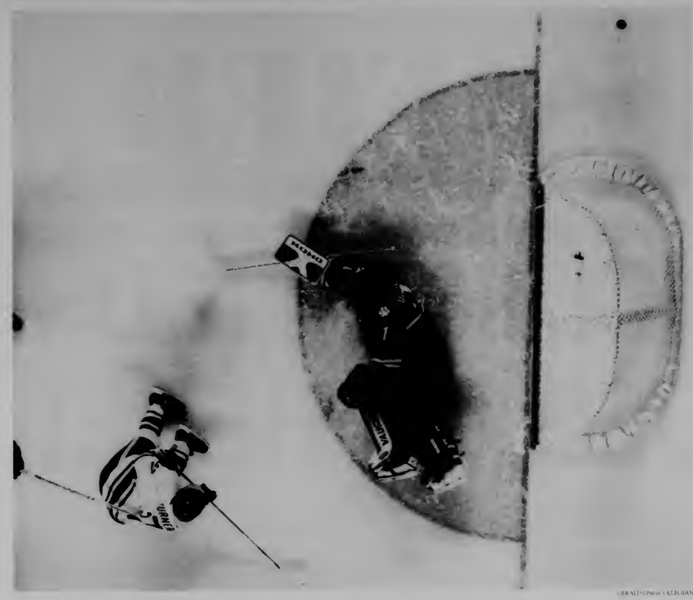
"She's not a ball-thrower any more, she throws each pitch with a purpose," states her backstop Jamie Cahalan. "Not surprisingly, she has been able to develop a special relationship with her pitcher. Cahalan has caught all of Holtz's games, but they're also roommates.

Still, don't think for one second that the battery mates are two of a kind.

"My closest relationship is with Jamie because we work every day together, and for us to be on the same page is so important," Holtz says. "[But] we're very different people. I'm extremely type-A personality, and she's a little more laid back," she laughs.

"We're dynamically different, complete opposites," Cahalan concurs.

For now, Holtz's mind is now set on this season, and making it to the College World Series. But down the line, she'll be looking to earn a spot on her homeland's team in the 2004 Summer Olympics.



"I think I have a really good shot because I work with people like coach Sortino and Harry every day," Holtz says. "They know what it takes to make a great pitcher, and they know how to get that out of me."

She isn't the only one with visions of Athens.

"My greatest dream as a coach would be Danielle Henderson pitching for the United States, and Kaila Holtz pitching for Canada, and I can sit in the middle," Sortino smiles.

The 2004 Olympics might be halfway around the world and two years away, but for Kaila Holtz, it's right around the corner.

DO SOMETHING THAT MATTERS!
Clean Water Action is seeking well-spoken, outgoing people to do grassroots organizing, fundraising and environmental education. Will train, must have good energy!
$345 wk + bonus
Call CWA 413-584-9830
www.daily collegian.com

It was a tough year to score for the Minutemen, as Tim Turner puts this puck wide of Northeastern's Kent Gibson.

Hockey needs more offense

By Matthew F. Sacco
COLLEGIAN STAFF

CHESTNUT HILL, Mass. – "How many?"

The question posed by Massachusetts Head Coach Don Cahoon was painful enough. But the answer, tentatively offered by Assistant Coach Bill Gilligan, was much, much worse.

"Four and two at Providence, four on Northeastern," Gilligan responds, enlisting the aid of the remaining coaching staff. "Zero and two against Lowell, only one on Maine then…there's tonight."

"So that makes…"

Thirteen.

Just 13 goals in its first six Hockey East games. That type of statistic would cultivate gray hair and cold sweats in any coach. But what is most disturbing for Cahoon is that those lucky 13 represent his team's most torrid offensive pace of the season. Needless to say, it was all downhill from that night.

That night was a somber bus ride home from a four-nil setback against Boston College on the first of December. But as the UMass bench leader and his staff of crack-mathematicians painfully dialed up his squad's offensive numbers, they couldn't have known how much worse the future would be.

"Before the season I knew that there would be peaks and valleys but I didn't expect it to be such a struggle," says Cahoon with a grimace. "One way or another we are going to have to start scoring."

It's not that other teams don't have trouble lighting the lamp, because they do and if you ask most coaches they would say that one of their primary concerns is scoring talent. But in Toot Cahoon's world, that concern has taken somewhat of a Homeric twist.

"It's been our Achilles' heel, our fatal flaw," he says. "We just don't finish plays."

Point taken.

It seems increasingly likely that we've hit the dead puck era in Amherst. Four goals in a tie and a loss against the worst defensive team in the conference (Merrimack) wouldn't cut it in bubble hockey, let alone in Hockey East.

But that was before New Hampshire left skid marks in the UMass goal crease with eleven goals in two contests.

"[UMass] plays hard for 60 minutes, they just don't score," said coach Dick Umile after his Wildcats outscored the Minutemen 11-2 in a pair of games. "I mean no disrespect to the present players, but once the talent level increases, and it is rising, I won't want to play these guys."

As Umile noted, help is on the way, but the UMass faithful will have to wait for the likes of Stephen Werner and Steve Jacobs to show up – two recruits with an upside and, hopefully, a soft pair of hands.

"We've tried to recruit with the knowledge that we need more kids who can finish," Cahoon remarks. "Right now we just don't have a lot of guys putting up big numbers."

Next year's freshman class, if nothing else, has the potential to keep goal judges busy.

Werner represents the first UMass recruit from the United States National Team Development Program. Just playing on the Under-18 squad denotes one of the top 25 to 30 high school age players in the nation.

But Werner, a native of Chevy Chase, Md., is one of the leading scorers (16 points in 25 games) on the team and is listed in the top 100 of draft-eligible North American skaters by the National Hockey League's central scouting service.

Jacobs, a power forward type from Cushing Academy in Massachusetts, is also on the NHL's draft list, as is teammate Marvin Degon, whose signing will give Cahoon some offensive punch from the blueline.

Factor in Austin Prep scoring machine Chris Capraro (40 points, fourth in Eastern Mass.) who is rumored to be headed for Amherst and you have a class bent on addressing one need – scoring.

It will be a year before this potential-laden class hits Amherst, but for now the Pioneer Valley does not lie devoid of talent. Maybe that's what makes this offensive implosion so disconcerting.

"We have guys who can score right now who just haven't stepped up for us this year," notes Cahoon. "For one reason or another, depending upon the situation, they just aren't scoring."

In analyzing the UMass roster the most obvious trend is that there is no trend. Some players aren't taking enough shots like Peter Trovato (14 shots in 24 games, less than five defensemen).

Other guys just haven't been able to mesh with their linemates (i.e. freshman Tim Vitek, who has played on four different lines and managed only two goals in 23 contests).

Thomas Pock, a forward with considerable talent, was KO'd by the injury bug while leading the team in scoring earlier in the season, only to return after seven missed games.

Then there are the elite few who just can't buy a goal, or a stroke of luck for that matter.

"I don't think its lack of talent," Tim Turner muses. "These guys all came from high school and junior teams where they lit up the place. But some guys are just snake bitten right now."

Jimmy Callahan (two goals in 22 games) banged more iron than Hephaestus, while senior forward Darcy King (one goal, 22 games) wouldn't know a lucky bounce if one dropped the gloves and tried to pick a fight with him.

"I think guys are just getting too excited when they get a scoring chance," Turner says. "It's like, 'oh no here we go again.'"

It's not like there aren't some positives, because there are a few…very few. Greg Mauldin, who Cahoon says "has shown signs of becoming a consistent goalscorer," has eight goals in his rookie season – good for second on the team.

And "Timmy [Turner] will get his goals because he works for them." The junior is tops on the roster with 10. But compare UMass' scoring leaders with that of other teams and don't be surprised if you feel a cringe coming on.

Consider that Turner and Mauldin are tied for the team scoring lead with 18 points and there is no other team in Hockey East that has a leader lower than 21 – that being Lowell's Ed McGrane.

Doesn't sound so bad? Well take into account that at this point in the season, the other eight Hockey East teams average almost ten players with ten points or more, while UMass sports just six with double-figure point totals.

At present, the Minutemen simply do not have the talent to keep up with a league bent on offensive explosion. UMass can hold its own going chance for chance with most teams in the league, but in terms of conversion rate, it's not even close.

"We consistently waste the type of chances that I'm convinced other teams would finish," Cahoon exclaims. "We just aren't at a talent level with other teams in the conference."

The offense took a major hit when disgruntled Colorado Avalanche draftee Scott Horvath bolted for Toronto St. Michaels of the Quebec Major Junior League.

Horvath, a 6-foot-3-inch forward with big time skills, had trouble staying in the lineup due to streaky play and differing views. Nonetheless, Horvath was a talent and has exhibited that with five points in five games with the Majors. Unfortunately he could not bring that skill to the UMass roster on a regular basis.

Another loss was forward Brad Nizwantoski who was excused from the team after posting three points in 12 contests. The junior was arrested after allegedly threatening his ex-girlfriend with a weapon.

The University released a response statement at the time of the incident, while any UMass officials surrounding the situation, including the players and coaching staff, have politely refused comment.

From a hockey standpoint, the loss of Nizwantoski and Horvath – two big front liners with soft hands – has dealt an unexpected but major blow to the offense's production in recent weeks.

"It has certainly affected the team," Cahoon says of their departure. "And it definitely hurts our depth and offensive punch."

To combat a dwindling forward roster, Cahoon has signed his second mid-season recruit in as many years. Josh Hanson, a forward from the Texas Tornado of the North American Hockey League, is expected to see regular game shifts almost immediately.

"He is an in-state kid with good offensive instincts," Cahoon says of his newest scoring threat. "He needs to improve his skating but I think he'll be a solid addition to our program."

Hanson led the Tornado (first place in the NAHL's West Division) with 16 goals and 38 points in 31 games. So if anything, he's a player that knows his way around the net. As for his lead-footed shortcomings, those can be remedied in time.

The Medford, Mass. native will likely be a productive second or third line forward, but one player does not solve the problem.

The fact is that the majority of UMass' forwards need some sort of deep therapy to correct this scoring lockdown. Well Toot Cahoon is no shrink, so a myriad of focused drills and exercises will have to do the trick.

"We've done a lot of things in practice the last couple weeks," Turner says. "All types of scoring drills and just handling the puck around the net. Like we'd have a defenseman take a point shot then bang in the rebound or something like that."

"It's definitely not a lack of effort."

Turner speaks the truth. Because if goal scoring ran parallel to sweat, then UMass would be set. The lack falls somewhere between ability and luck.

As the Minutemen stand nose to nose with the stretch run – and three points out of the final playoff spot – it comes down to score or go home.

"We are going to have to be a little more responsible in our own end," Cahoon says. "But when it comes down to it, we have to find a way to score goals."

If they don't, then there will be a lot more somber bus rides and painful number crunching.

Illusion in the box score ends hoops season

By Eric Soderstrom
COLLEGIAN STAFF

PHILADELPHIA – UMass men's basketball coach Steve Lappas understands the mayhem of March, the month of implausible outcomes. Still, his team's 63-59 overtime loss to Xavier March 2 in the quarterfinals of the Atlantic 10 Tournament just didn't seem right.

"If someone tells you before the game you're going to outrebound the other team, they're going to shoot 29 percent and you're going to have nine more baskets, I'm thinking it's like a 10-point win, easy," said Lappas, shaking his head in disbelief. "But lose? That's ridiculous."

UMass shot 48-9 percent to Xavier's 29.8, hit 23 shots to the Musketeers' 14 and outrebounded them 33-28. The Minutemen beat Xavier in almost every statistical category. Well, every one not under official control.

The Musketeers were awarded 43 free throw attempts, 33 of which found the bottom of the net. UMass finished the game 7-for-11 from the charity stripe.

"I've never seen a stat sheet like this in my entire career," Lappas said. "Here's my quote: I don't know how that happens."

The numbers were almost as baffling as Eric Williams' desperation heave that tied the game at 52-52 with not even a second left in regulation. After a broken play, Shannon Crooks drove into the lane and lofted a floater that caromed off the back of the rim. But Xavier's David West tipped the ball accidentally out to Williams – situated about five feet behind the right arc – who tossed up the prayer.

"I just let it fly and it went in," Williams said. "I thought we were going to take it after that shot went in. Because we worked hard all year and I thought that was going to pay off at the end of the season."

Twenty seconds into the extra period, West finished off a baseline drive to give Xavier a 54-52 advantage. His two free throws with 1:52 remaining put the Musketeers up 60-52, pretty much sealing the deal. Micah Brand (15 points) completed a three-point play with 55 seconds to go and Crooks (16 points) followed with a jumper 25 seconds later to cut the lead to 64-57, but those hoops came too late.

"We did everything right," said Anthony Anderson, his first college season now completed. "We outrebounded them, we out-shot them, we did everything we had to do. But near the end and going into overtime, West started getting off. He just showed why he's the Player of the Year."

Shutout in the first half by UMass' box-and-one defense, West scored all of his 14 points in the final 25 minutes, including eight in overtime. His biggest hoop, however, didn't come without controversy.

With 2:42 to go in the second half and the scored knotted at 48-48, West nailed a leaner coming across the lane just as the shot-clock buzzer sounded. But the replay showed clearly that West still had his hands on the ball after the horn.

"The clock went off before the ball even left his hands," Kitwana Rhynner said. "It was definitely a shot clock violation, because I was defending him. I saw it."

Lappas agreed.

"That was the basket of the game, probably," he said. "And I thought that was a violation. How about that?"

That shot gave Xavier its first lead since going up 35-33 thanks to a baseline jumper from West at the 15:27 mark. After a David Young free throw, UMass answered with 10 straight points, the last hoop a Rhynner lay-up on the right side to bring the score to 43-36 with 10:35 remaining. Xavier outscored the Minutemen 16-6 in the next 10:19 before Williams' buzzer-beater.

UMass opened the game on an 8-4 run capped by an Anderson trey with 15:25 to go. The Minutemen kept the lead the entire first half and after a Brennan Martin long-ranger, they led 28-15 with just over two minutes to play. Xavier finished the first stanza on a 6-0 run but UMass still held a 28-21 lead midway.

"We just wanted another crack at Xavier and we definitely got that chance, we came out with fire in our eyes," said Crooks, who led UMass with 15 points and didn't turn the ball over for the second straight game. "But we've got a lot of young guys and we haven't really played in an overtime game. So that was a new situation for a lot of guys and it kind of showed. Xavier's experience showed on the court. They didn't really get rattled and we did. It's just a big learning experience for the guys coming back."

Junior Micah Brand (in white) was stellar for the Minutemen in their final game of 2002, but it was not enough as UMass fell to Xavier 65-59.

UMass Student Legal Services Office
CALL TODAY
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students
545-1995

PIZZA SUBS GYROS
Pizza
Calzones
Subs
and more...
Best! 2002 UMASS Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Best! 1999 UMASS Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Best! 2000 UMASS Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Voted #1 Three Years
Free Delivery
Hours: 11am - 2pm
548-5160
Memeber O.C.M.P.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

CLASSIFIED

113 CAMPUS CENTER UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS PHONE: (413)545-3500 FAX: (413)545-3699

ACTIVITIES | APARTMENT FOR RENT | APARTMENT FOR RENT | EMPLOYMENT | EMPLOYMENT | FOR SALE | ROOM FOR RENT | SUMMER SUBLET

YOUR CLASSIFIED AD COULD GO HERE!

THE BEST OF UMASS 2002

the results are in and here is what you voted...

BEST FOOD

Chinese Food
1. Panda East
2. Amherst Chinese
3. Teapot

Italian Food
1. Pasta e Basta
2. La Cucina di Pinocchio
3. Spaghetti Freddies

Pizza
1. Antonio's
2. Bertucci's
3. Delano's

Best Date Restaurant
1. Carmelina's
2. Judie's
3. Spoleto

Cheap Date Place
1. Burger King
2. Antonio's
3. Wendy's

Ice Cream Parlor
1. Bart's
2. Friendly's
3. Pete's Drive-In

When Parents Pay
1. Judie's
2. Monkey Bar
3. Carmelina's

Indian Restaurant
1. India Palace
2. India House
3. New India

Northampton Restaurant
1. Fitzwilly's
2. Teapot
3. Cha Cha Cha

Best Vegetarian
1. Earthfoods
2. Bueno y Sano
3. Fire and Water

Japanese Restaurant
1. Goten
2. House of Teriyaki
3. Ichiban

Bagel Shop
1. Brueggers
2. People's Market
3. Dunkin' Donuts

Breakfast Place
1. Newman Center
2. Nancy Jane's
3. Daisy's

Best Wings
1. Hangar
2. Rafters
3. Chili's

Sub Shop
1. The Sub
2. Subway
3. La Cucina di Pinocchio

Mexican Restaurant
1. Bueno y Sano
2. Cha Cha Cha
3. La Vera Cruzana

BEST SHOPS & SERVICES

Grocery Store
1. Big Y
2. Stop & Shop
3. Atkins Farm

Coffee Shop
1. Rao's
2. People's Market
3. Dunkin' Donuts

Tanning Salon
1. Oasis
2. Hair East
3. Tan Quick

Florist
1. Atkins Farm
2. Knowles Flower Shop
3. Always in Bloom

Gas Station
1. Mobil
2. Cumberland Farms
3. Exxon

Clothing Store
1. Old Navy
2. H & M
3. Zanna

Car Repair Place
1. North Amherst Motors
2. College Street Motors
3. Kevin's Auto Repair

Hair Salon
1. Regency
2. Amherst Barbers
3. Bucci

Bike Shop
1. Bike Co-op
2. Laughing Dog
3. Competitive Edge

Place to Work Out
1. Boyden Gym
2. Kids Sports/Kinetics
3. Hampshire Fitness

BEST ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Video Store
1. Video to Go
2. Blockbuster
3. DVDen

Music Store
1. Newbury Comics
2. Mystery Train
3. Media Play

Pool Hall
1. Mike's Billiards
2. Upstairs at ABC
3. The Hangar

Place to Hear Live Music
1. McMurphy's
2. Pearl Street
3. Mullins Center

Unique UMass Best

Classroom
1. Mahar
2. Thompson 102
3. Bartlett 65

D.C.
1. Worcester
2. Hampshire
3. Berkshire

D.C. Dish
1. Chicken Fingers
2. Breakfast Sandwiches
3. Potato Bar

Spring Break Place
1. Cancun
2. Jamaica
3. Hawaii

Magazine
1. Cosmopolitan
2. Sports Illustrated
3. Maxim

Way to Gain Freshman 15
1. Antonio's
2. D.C. Food
3. No Excercise

Reason to Miss Class
1. Nice Weather
2. Overslept
3. Missed the bus

Reason to Hand in a Paper Late
1. Illness
2. Didn't do it yet
3. Went out the night before

Place to Read Paper
1. Class
2. Bluewall
3. Cape Cod Lounge

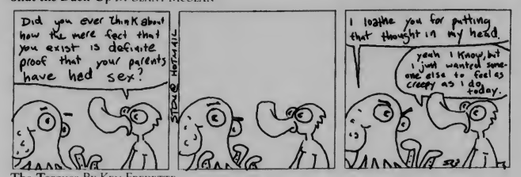
Place to Study
1. Library
2. Rao's
3. Bus

Internet Site
1. google.com
2. candystand.com
3. theonion.com

Apartment Complex
1. Puffton Village
2. Townhouses
3. Brandywine Apartments

Adam and Eric By Ross Burach

Adam and Eric By Ross Burach



Buttercup Festival By Elliot G. Garbauskas

Valley of the Squirrels By Comrad X

Shut the Duck Up By Seany McSean

Shut the Duck Up By Seany McSean

The Torques By Ken Fredette

The Torques By Ken Fredette

Quote of the Day

"Do or do not, there is no try."

-Yoda

Amherst Weather

Today	Tomorrow	The Next Day
HIGH: 100 LOW: 10	HIGH: 100 LOW: 10	HIGH: 100 LOW: 10

Horoscopes

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You are all around awesome. You will find the person of your dreams. And then live happily ever after. Watch out for shooting stars.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Avoid all professors that quote obscure references from random pieces of literature that no one knows about. Good luck to all you English majors.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Avoid sports. All sports. Even hacky sack and ultimate frisbee. Yes, those are sports, kind of.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – The elevators in the library are scary. Very scary. But then, so is DC food.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Beware of Pepsi. And Pepsi products as well. There are none on this campus. Beware.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 21) – In Saturn has rings. Jupiter has moons. I don't know your horoscope, sorry.
SCORPIO (Oct. 22-Nov. 21) – Southwest. Orchard Hill. Central. Sylvan. Northeast. So many choices, so little knowledge.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Your name is hard to spell. Your horoscope is hard to read. Check back at the beginning of the semester.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – There is a little man. He lives in the paper. He writes the horoscopes. He called in sick today.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Silly freshman, Trix are for upperclassmen.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Avoid confrontation today. Avoid compromise today. Infact, avoid everythign, except TV. TV is your friend.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) – You will graduate a year early with honors and double major. Venus is high in the tower of Mars.

Frosh By Megan Orosz

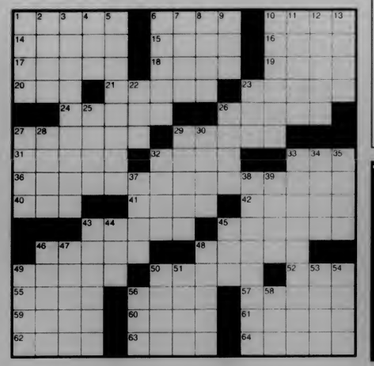
"Look! I went through the South West wind tunnel with wet hair ok ?!?"

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

D.C. FOOD IS GOOD. REALLY, IT IS REALLY.

www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com
www.dailycollegian.com



ACROSS
1 Coffee-chocolate drink
6 Face covering
10 Not odd
14 Ohio city
15 Klein of design
16 "Gladiator" setting
17 Downgrade
18 Raise
19 Popular side dish
20 Owns
21 Tenet
23 Meted out
24 Nobelist from Egypt
26 Blender button
27 Red Cross founder
29 Thinks ahead
31 Walking
32 Misfortunes
33 Small swallow
36 Breakfast drink
40 Cover with turf
41 Optical device
42 Passion
43 Drift
45 Conductor Ormandy
46 Pulled the oars
48 Star in Cygnus
49 Diminishes
50 Vigilant
52 Unseal, to Blake
55 Valhalla host
56 Egg-shaped
57 Violinist Stern
59 Barrel of laughs
60 Soup dish
61 Ground
62 Actor Perkins
63 Quaint hotels
64 Wild West show

DOWN
1 Crush
2 N. Mex. neighbor
3 Junction
4 Bounce
5 Story
6 Type of parking
7 Lady in King Arthur's court
8 Hard facts
9 Allow
10 Mistakes
11 Curtain fabric
12 Quiz show host
13 Prerequisite
22 Went jogging
23 Hound for payment
25 Surmounting
26 Over with 27 Suitcases
28 1960s hairdo
29 Unit of weight
30 Aloha go-withs
32 Birdhouse occupant
33 Buffet
34 Computer-screen graphic
35 Mademoiselle's father
37 Hurried away
38 Perlver
39 Strong desire
43 Score
44 Home, in the phone book
45 "Auction" end
46 Deejay's medium
47 Leek cousin
48 Vales
49 Beer starter
50 English river
51 Grassy area
53 Canape topper
54 Reverberate
56 Geisha's sash
58 — Paulo

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

L	O	B	S		A	L	A	R	M		M	U	C	H
E	M	I	T		R	O	M	E	O		E	L	L	E
A	N	N	A		S	W	A	B	S		A	N	O	N
F	I	S	T	S		H	E	A	R	S	A	Y
			I	O	N	S		L	I	E	U
R	A	C	C	O	O	N	S		C	A	R	A	T
U	S	A		T	R	A	I	L		M	E	D	A	L
S	H	U	N		M	I	D	A	S		S	O	L	E
H	E	L	E	N		L	E	M	O	N		R	O	N
	S	K	E	E	T		S	E	D	I	M	E	N	T
			D	R	O	P		R	A	G	E
	P	I	L	O	T	E	D		H	A	B	I	T
M	A	N	E		A	R	E	A	S		D	O	O	R
A	R	C	S		L	I	M	I	T		O	T	T	O
P	E	A	S		S	L	I	D	E		W	H	A	T

10-24-01 © 2001 United Feature Syndicate

Today's Staff

Matthew F. Sacco
James Schaffer
Scott Eldridge II
Matthew Despres
Shannon Farrington
Mike Kulak
Melissa Hammel

DAILY COLLEGIAN
SPORTS
COLLEGIAN_SPORTS@YAHOO.COM UMass SPORTS EDITOR: JIM PIGNATIELLO

Matt MacFarland and Tom Fallon anchored the defense for the men's lacrosse team that [illegible] the Minutemen to their 14th NCAA Tournament appearance

This is UMass Lax

By Eric Soderstrom
COLLEGIAN STAFF

These are the sights and sounds of UMass Lacrosse, and they begin inside the Minuteman locker room.

Justin Walker makes his march, tapping each of his teammates on the head. Tom Fallon has his fingers in war paint, set to apply the makeup that darkens his stare. Paul Hutchen is screaming, pacing back and forth to the rhythm of his chants. Don Little is silent, his thoughts fixated on the game. And Matt McFarland's stomach is riding the carousel from hell.

This is UMass Lacrosse.

"It usually seems to be different groups of people that like to do their own thing, hanging out with each other," says Dusty Smith, of the pregame gatherings. "But everybody understands that everybody's getting ready to the best of their ability in their own way. Then, when it's time to go, everyone is prepared to do it together."

Before taking the field every game, captains Little and McFarland bring the team together to offer what are supposed be classic words of inspiration. But that speech rarely takes full form.

"I always throw up," says McFarland, with a chuckle.

"When we bring it in, if [McFarland] steps aside and throws up then there's really nothing you have to say," Little says. "Because that says it all. He was my roommate for two years when I was a freshman and a sophomore. When we had our first game he came out and did that. I was kind of like, what is going on? But now it's become a tradition where if he doesn't do that then you know there's something wrong."

Sure, it's somewhat revolting. But it's now a Minuteman ritual. The second McFarland's guts give way, and the resulting hysteria. That is UMass Lacrosse.

"When everybody else sees McFarland throw up we all get a little more excited, because we know how excited he is at that point and it's usually a good tradition to see happen," Smith says. "It let's everyone know that we're ready to go."

And when the Minutemen hit the field, it's not unusual for their opponents to become riddled with shame. Navy felt it this season when Smith rocketed a lefty shot from the right side of the field with force strong enough to send the ball back out of the netting. Penn State felt it when Chris Fiore slung a last second shot through 11 players into the shelf from over 30 yards out. Hartford felt it when Kevin Leveille faked its goalie three times and made him fall down. Rutgers felt it when Marc Morley caught the ball with his back to the cage and slung the ball through his legs and between the pipes. Syracuse felt it when Bill Schell stoned national point-leader Mike Powell from point blank range. Georgetown felt it when McFarland stick-checked Player of the Year candidate Steve Dusseau, who was on his way to the easy fourth quarter goal. And Stony Brook felt it when Dan Paccione netted a one-handed game-winner through the legs of its goalie. That is UMass Lacrosse.

Knowing well that they're rarely given the respect they deserve, the Minutemen play each game daring to prove that Massachusetts is the newest sanctuary of the lacrosse world. UMass Lacrosse might not get the big money players, the big money sponsors or have the big money moniker. But it doesn't want it.

"We like to use that as a little motivation," Smith says. "We like to think that when we go out we don't get all the bells and whistles that everybody else get. And we think that in a lot of ways it makes us tougher and makes us more of a group. We like to keep that chip on our shoulder to keep us on edge when we play other teams."

Last year, the NCAA Men's Lacrosse Committee did not invite UMass to the tournament despite its 12-2 record. But this season, the Minutemen took the power out of the committee's hands by going undefeated (5-0) in the Eastern College Athletic Conference and earning the league's Automatic Qualifier. What followed was one of the program's greatest NCAA Tournament runs ever.

"In the beginning of the season [not making the tournament last year] was an issue," says McFarland, who joins the rest of the UMass seniors in their first and last tournament appearance. "We kind of used that in the beginning to say let's get back at everything that happened to us. But then, it was just about this year."

This year, the Minutemen came from behind three times in the final quarter and won. They scored 15-straight goals in the first round of the tournament. They never wavered from the run-and-gun style that deteriorates opponents' will and never shied away from their rough, physical nature. They never stopped to question their character.

After its game with Penn State on March 30, in which UMass came back from being down 12-11 with 49 seconds left to win 13-12, Hutchen scribed the definition of UMass Lacrosse.

"It's a test of character," he screamed. "When you're down four goals and look at every guy on the bench and everyone knows you're going to come back. That's just unbelievable."

"This is why I wouldn't have gone to any other school but UMass."

Hardy becomes go-to receiver

By Matthew F. Sacco

HUNTINGTON, W. Va. – It's fourth down, the living [illegible] the clutch. The scoreboard reads romp, 28-17. Marshall. Twenty three yards from the end zone and 18 seconds from embarrassment, UMass needs a miracle. Matt [illegible] answers the call, drops back and hurls a 22-yard [illegible] high over the middle and into coverage. Right [illegible] wideout DeShon Hardy rises toward the spiral, [illegible] comes down as the number one receiver – not to [illegible] the ball.

Hardy has been making believers out of people his entire [illegible]

"I've always felt like I had something to prove," he says. [illegible] the entire year of high school at Neptune (N.J.) [illegible] to prove to coach John Amabile that he [illegible] for a defending state cham-

When he came to UMass in the fall of 1998, Hardy had [illegible] the NCAA that he could boost his grades enough to [illegible] the following year.

And even after persevering through his academic requirements, he was left with the challenge of breaking onto a [illegible] that won a Division I-AA championship the prior year.

The [illegible] in Hardy's resume. A Class 4 state title in [illegible] the helm of his Neptune squad says a lot. So [illegible] 3.0 cumulative grade point average in his first year in [illegible] 1,300 yards receiving and 261 punt return yards in his [illegible] are impressive.

[illegible] coming camp, Hardy felt he had something else [illegible] this time it was his own inner doubts that [illegible]

"I [illegible] able of being the number one receiver," [illegible] "I just had to prove it to myself that I could be the [illegible]

Hardy's 43 catches in 11 games this year tell a story that [illegible] Hampshire.

"When I made that catch it really boosted my confidence," he said. "That was the first time I really felt like the [illegible] guy."

Hardy had his doubters then, too.

When he beat the Marshall Stadium turf in full extension, the Herd defenders that wrecking balled him just millisecond [illegible] had their own doubts about the feat he just performed.

"The Marshall guys were like, 'You didn't catch that,'" he [illegible]

Hardy: Yeah I caught it, first down!'"

Hardy won a duel with common knowledge as he went [illegible] to snatch that ball from opposing clutches. The book on [illegible] read like a [illegible] on lethargy and lack of dedication.

"His work [illegible] is really where he has made a major improvement," says UMass head coach Mark Whipple. "He [illegible] more disciplined, more motivated and he is holding himself more accountable for his actions."

"Starting with the catch," Hardy has personally rewritten the [illegible] of perception.

"That catch was a starting point for him," Whipple [illegible] "He went up and got the ball and did things we've seen him do in practice."

Now, he's checked out a new book. A volume that includes an all-out effort in practice and sacrificing flesh to

Turn to HARDY, page 8

Softball ace realizes national dream

Holtz suits up for Canadian team

By Andy Vogt
COLLEGIAN STAFF

Kaila Holtz is focused. As she peers for the sign, she remains cool and under control.

Quite an accomplishment for someone just starting her collegiate career. With a fierce delivery, her opponent hits a weak grounder to the right side. Suddenly, Holtz becomes a fireball of emotion, erupting off the mound in unrelenting glee.

"I remember her as a freshman, against North Carolina," her coach Elaine Sortino recalls. "They had bases loaded with one out, and when we got out of the inning, she was jumping up and down on the mound."

"[It was] like, 'You can't do that, you're in college now.'"

Fast forward to April 21 against St. Bonaventure. Facing the Bonnies' wild and out-of-control Kristen Schelfold, Holtz was plunked for the second time in the contest. Taking her base, she gave Schelfold a look of disgust that spoke a thousand words. It's a good thing that Holtz wasn't pitching on this day, because she damn well could have struck out every last Bonnie hitter for the remainder of the game. Holtz's demeanor might have changed, but she still has that never-ending thirst for the game and success.

"The thing about her is that she's an incredible competitor on the mound," says Sortino about her junior hurler. "She will not tolerate anything but the best."

It was this drive for success that catapulted Holtz to reaching her childhood goal after last summer. While most UMass students were working odd jobs, Kaila Holtz was fulfilling her dream by playing softball for the Canadian National Team at the age of 19. Most people go a lifetime without seeing their dreams come true, but there she was fulfilling hers two years before her college graduation.

Invited to the national training camp at Simon Fraser University in Vancouver this past summer, Holtz impressed enough of the staff to earn a spot on the developmental team. And after a strong performance at the Canada Cup, including a dominant game against Australia, Holtz was selected to represent her homeland.

But Kaila's dream almost never came to fruition, which she says makes it all the more sweeter.

"The whole process [of making the team] was my proudest accomplishment, because I went from no confidence and really not feeling good about my shoulder, to making the national team and pitching well," Holtz says.

Sortino was also able to offer words of encouragement to her young pitcher, telling her in a phone conversation to continue working hard toward her ultimate goal.

The youngest member of the Canadian squad, she was now off with her new teammates to Caracas, Venezuela for the Pan-American Qualifying Championships. Unfortunately, Venezuela isn't exactly a softball utopia, so Holtz had a new challenge to undertake.

"Playing in a country that has unsafe food and unsafe water is really hard, because you have to drink bottled water, really can't brush your teeth, and you have to shower with your mouth closed," Holtz remembers. But on a diet of bread, bottled water and Burger King, she and her fellow Canadians tied for second place at the tournament.

It was a storybook tale for any athlete. But lest you think that her journey was an entirely smooth path, think again.

"I didn't start as a pitcher; I was really wild and I sucked, so it really bugged me that I couldn't pitch," Holtz says. "I think it was because I was really horrible at it. I'm such a perfectionist by nature that it really bugged me that I couldn't do it."

But following the advice of an astute coach at a softball camp while in fourth grade, she slowly grasped the knack of pitching mechanics. Drawing a square on the back of her parents' North Vancouver, B.C. home to act as a strike zone, she constantly worked on drills to perfect the location of her pitches. Not to mention that she caused a ruckus at the house.

"My parents had a business at the time, so you can imagine how annoying it was for

Turn to CANADA, page 8

GERALD INGO/COLLEGIAN

A 10 Pitcher of the Year and Canadian National Team member Kaila Holtz boasted a 23-6 record following UMass' victorious run to the conference title